fiante, you talke of Horfe and Armour?

Orlance. You are as well prowded of both, as any Prince in the World.

Dolf. What a long Night is this? I will not change my Horfe with any that treades but on foure poultries:
ch'a: he bounds from the Earth, as if his entrayles were hayres : le Cœnial volatilis, the Pegasus, chez les marines de
feu. When I befrede him, I foare, I am a Hawket: he trots the ayre: the Earth sings, when he touches it: the bafett home of his hooffe, is more Muscail then the Pipe of Hermes.

Orlance. Hee's of the colour of the Nutmeg.

Dolf. And of the heat of the Ginger. It is a Beast for Perfeus: hee is pure Ayre and Fire; and the dull Elements of Earth and Water never appeare in Him; but only in patient fillinffe while his Rider mounts him: hee is indeede a Horfe, and all other Latas you may call Beats.

Conf. In-

vp with new-tuned Oathes: and what a Beard of the Generalla Cut, and a horride Sate of the Camp, will doe among fuming Bottles, and Ale-wafth Vits, is wonder-full to be thought on: but you muft learn to know fuch fandnes of the age, or elfe you may be maruellously mi-bookes.

Flu. I tell you what, Captaine Generall: I doe perceive hee is not the man that hee would gladly make shew to the World hee is: if I finde a hole in his Coate, I will tell him my minde: heare you, the King is coming; and I muft fpeak with him from the Pridge.

Drum and Coloure. Enter the King and his poore Soldiers.

Flu. God pleffe your Maaffe.

King. How now Fluellen, cam'th thou from the Bridge?

Flu. I, fo pleffe your Maaffe: The Duke of Exeter ha's very gallantly maintayned the Pridge; the French is gone off, looke you, and there is gallant and moft proue paffeages: marry, th'athuerarie was hauing pooffion of the Pridge, but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is Master of the Pridge: I can tell your Maaffe, the Duke is a proue man.

King. What men haue you loft, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdution of th'athuerarie hath beene very great, reafonable great: marry for my part, I thinkke
the Duke hath loft a newe man, but one that is like to be excuted for robbinge a Church, one Bardolph, if your Maaffe know the man: his face is all bubblkes and wheekes, and knobs, and flames a fire, and his lippes blowes at his nofe, and it is like a coole of fire, sometimes plewe, and sometimes red , but his nofe is executed, and his fire's out.

King. Wee would have all fuch offendours fo cut off:
and we gue expreff charge, that in our Marches through the Countrie, there be nothing compell'd from the Vil-Iages; nothing taken, but pay'd for: none of the French upprayed or abuffed in diffelanfull Languages; for when Leuitie and Crueltie play for a Kingdome, the gentler
Gamerell is the sounest winner.

Tucket. Enter Mounbay.

Mounbay. You know me by my habdit.

King. Well then, I know thee: what fhall I know of thee?

Mounbay. My Masters mind.

King. Unfold it.

Mounbay. Thus fayes my King: Say thou to Harry of England, Though we feem'd dead, we did but fleepe:
Advantage is a better Soulther than ranfheffe, Tell him, wee could haue rebuk'd him at Harfwee, but that wee thought not good to bruite an injurie, till it were full ripe. Now wee fpeeke vpon our Q, and our voyce is imperiau: England fhall repent his folly, fee his weakeneffe, and admire our fufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ranfome, which muft proportion the loifts we have borne, the fubftece we have loft, the difgrace we have digeted; which in weight to re-anwer, his petit-niffe would bow vnder. For our loifts, his Exchequer is too poore; for the effuation of our blood, the Muder of his Kingdome too fain a number; and for our difgrace, our owne peron kneeling at our feet, but a weake and worthleffe fatisfa&ion. To this addedefance: and tell him for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc't: So farre my King and Mafter;
so much my Office.

King.
The Life of Henry the Fifth.

Conf. Indeed my Lord, it is a most absolute and excellent Horfe.

Dolph. It is the Prince of Palfrayes, his Neigh is like the bidding of a Monarch, and his countenance enforces Hommage.

Orleance. No more Cousin.

Dolph. Nay, the man hath no wits, that cannot from the rifting of the Larke to the lodging of the Lambe, varie detered praye on my Palfray: it is a Theame as fluent as the Sea. Turne the Sands into eloquent tongues, and my Horfe is argument for them all: 'tis a subiect for a Soueraigne to reason on, and for a Soueraigne Soueraigne to ride on: And for the World, familiar to vs, and vnknowne, to lay apart their particular Functions, and wonder at him, I once wirt a Sonnet in his praye, and began thus, Wonder of Nature.

Orleance. I have heard a Sonnet begin so to one Miftreffe.

Dolph. Then did they imitate that which I compord to my Couer, for my Horfe is my Miftreffe.

Conf. My Lord, Your Miftreffe Y. Shall.

Dolph. Me well, which is the presepr hall and perfection of a good and particular Miftreffe.

Conf. Nay, for me thought yesternight your Miftreffe shrewdy shooke your back.

Dolph. So perhaps did yours.

Conf. Mine was not bristled.

Dolph. O then belike she was old and gentle, and you rode like a Kene of Ireland, your French Hose off, and in your frail Stroffers.

Conf. You have good judgement in Horfemanship.

Dolph. Be warn'd by me then: they that ride fast and ride not wary, fall into foule Boggs: I had rather have my Horfe to my Miftreffe.

Conf. I had as hue haue my Miftreffe a Jade.

Dolph. I tell thee Contable, my Miftreffe weares his owne hayre.

Conf. I could make as true a boaft as that, if I had a Sow to my Miftreffe.

Dolph. Le chien oft retourne a fon propre vomissement cft la myge lame as bourbercethou mak't vie of any thing.

Conf. Yet doe I not vie my Horfe for my Miftreffe, or any fuch Proverbe, so little kin to the purpole.

Ramb. My Lord Contable, the Armour that I faw in your Tent to night, are thoie Starres or Sunnes vpon it?

Conf. Starres my Lord.

Dolph. Some of them will fall to Morrow, I hope.

Conf. And yet my Sky fhall not want.

Dolph. That may be, for you bear a most superfluously, and 'twere more honor fome were away.

Conf. Eu'n as your Horfe bears your prayes, who would trot as well, were fome of your bragges diloummed.

Dolph. Would I were able to loade him with his deffert. Will it never be day? I will trot to Morrow a mile, and my way shall be paued with English Faces.

Conf. I will not lay fo, for feare I fhould be fac't out of my way: but I would it were morning, for I would faine be about the cares of the Englifh.

Ramb. Who will goe to Hazard with me for twentie Prisoners?

Conf. You must firit goe your felfe to hazard, ere you have them.

Dolph. 'Tis Mid-night, I lie goe arme my felfe. Exit. Orleance. The Dolphin longs for morning.

Ramb. He longs to eate the Englifh.

Conf. I thinke he will eate all he kills.

Orleance. By the white Hand of my Lady, hee's a gallant Prince.

Conf. Swear by her Foot, that she may tread out the Oath.

Orleance. He is simly the moft actue Gentleman of France.

Conf. Doing is actuating, and he will still be doing.

Orleance. He never did harme, that I heard of.

Conf. Nor will doe none to morrow: hee will keepe that good name still.

Orleance. I know him to be valiant.

Conf. I was told that, by one that knows him better than you.

Orleance. What's he?

Conf. Marry hee told me fo himselfe, and hee fayd hee car'd not who knew it.

Orleance. Hee needs not, it is no hidden vertue in him.

Conf. By my faith Sir, but it is: newer any body saw it, but his Lacqueu: 'tis a hooded valour, and when it appeares, it will bate.

Orleance. Ill will never fayd well.

Conf. I will cap that Proverbe with, There is flatterie in friendship.

Orleance. And I will take vp that with, Give the Deuill his due.

Conf. Well plac't: there stands your friend for the Deuill: haue at the very eye of that Proverbe with, A Fox of the Deuill.

Orleance. You are the better at Proverbies, by how much a Fooles Bait is foone fhot.

Conf. You have hit ouer.

Orleance. 'Tis not the first time you were ouer-shot.

Enter a Miffenger.

Miff. My Lord high Contable, the English lye within fiftene hundred paces of your Tents.

Conf. Who hath mesur'd the ground?

Miff. The Lord Grandpree.

Conf. A valiant and moft expert Gentleman. Would it were day? Alas poore Harry of England: hee longs not for the Dawning, as wee doe.

Orleance. What a wretched and peeuih fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers fo farre out of his knowledge.

Conf. If the English had any apprehension, they would runne away.

Orleance. That they lacke: for if their heads had any inte- tellufiall Armour, they could never weare fuch haule Head-pieces.

Ramb. That Iland of England breeds very valiant Creatures; their Maffifues are of unmatchable courage.

Orleance. Foolifh Cures, that runne winking into the mouth of a Ruffian Bearre, and hawe their heads cruft like rotten Apples: you may as well say, that's a valiant Flea, that dare eate his breakfast on the Lippe of a Lyon.

Conf. Iuft, iuft: and the men doe sympathize with the Maffifues, in roboufous and rough comming on, leauing their Wits with their Wines: and then give them great Miracles of Beefs, and Iron and Steeles they will cate like Wolves, and fight like Deuils.

Orleance. I, 418
The Life of Henry the Fifth.

Orleans. I, but these English are thoroughly out of Beefe.
Conf. Then shall we finde to morrow, they have only thomasacks to eate, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm come, shall we about it? Orleans. It is now two a Clock: but let me fee, by ten Wee shall have each a hundred English men. Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Chorus.
Now entertaine comodieure of a time,
When creeping Murmure, and the poring Darke,
Fills the wide Veifell of the Valuerfe.
From Camp to Camp, through the foule Womb of Night
The Humme of eyther Army fily founds;
That the flyt Cents, beneath their fecret paws,
The secret Whispers of each others Watch,
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each Batalla sees the others vmb'red face.
Steed threatens Steed, in high and boiftful Neighs
Piercing the Nights dull Ear: and from the Tents,
The Armourers accomplifhing the Knights,
With bufe Hammers clofung Blueus vp,
Glue dreadfull note of preparation,
The Country Cocks doe crow, the Cocks doe towle:
And the third howre of drowfie Morning nam'd,
Proud of their Numbers, and fecure in Soul,
The confident and ouer-hilfe French,
Doe the low-rated English play at Dice;
And chide the creeple-tardy-gated Night,
Who like a foule and ougly Witch doth limpe
So tediously away. The poore condemned English,
Like Sacrifices,by their watchfull Fires
Sit patiently, and inly ruminante
The Mornings danger: and their gefure fad,
Infeeting lanke-leane Checkers, and Warre-worne Coats,
Prefented them vnto the gazing Moone
So many horrible Ghosts. O now, who will behold
The Royall Captaine of this ruin'd Band
Walking from Watch to Watch, from Tent to Tent;
Let him cry, Prayfe and Glory on his head:
For forth he goes, and vifits all his Hoaft,
Bids them good morrow with a modest Smyle,
And calls them Brothers, Friends, and Countrymen.
Vpon his Royall Face there is no note,
How dread an Army hath enrounded him;
Nor doth he dedicate one lot of Colour
Vato the waree and all-watchted Night:
But freedly lookes, and ouer-beare Attaint,
With chearefullsemblance, and sweet Mafife:
That evry Wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his Lookes.
A Largeffe vnairfull, like the Sunne,
His liberal Eye doth glue to euerie one,
Thawing cold fear, that meane and gentle all
Behold, as may unworthinesse define.
A little touch of Harry in the Night,
And loo our Scene mutt to the Batalla fye:
Where, O for pity, we fhall much disgrace,
With foure or fufe moft vile and ragged Soyles,
(Right ill difpo'd, in brawle ridiculous)

The Name of Agincourt: Yet fit and fee,
Minding true things, by what their Mock'ries bee.

Enter the King, Bedford, and Gloucefter.

King. Giffer, 'tis true that we are in great danger,
The greater therefore should our Courage be,
God mowrrow Brother Bedford: God Almighty,
There is some foule of goodneffe in things euiil,
Would men obftruingly diñifie it out.
For our bad Neighbour makes vs early fifters,
Which is both healthfull, and good husbandry.
Befides, they are our outward Confidences,
And Preachers to vs all; admonifhing,
That we should direfte vs fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather Honey from the Weed,
And make a Morall of the Duell himfelfe.

Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good foff Pilot or that good White Head,
Were better then a charful turfe of France.
Erping. Not fo my Liege, this Lodging likes me better,
Since I may fay, now lye I like a King.
King. 'Tis good for men to loue their prefent paines,
Vpon example,fo the Spirit is eafe'd:
And when the Mind is quickened, out of doubt
The Organs, though defudef and dead before,
Broke vp their drowfie Graue, and newly moue
With call'd floufh, and freiff legiferife.
Lend me thy Cloake Sir Thomas: Brothers both,
Commend me to the Princes in our Camp;
Doe my good morrow to them, and anon
Defire them all to my Paullion.

Giffer. We fhall, my Liege.
Erping. Shall I attend your Grace?
King. No, my good Knight:
Goe with my Brothers to my Lords of England:
I and my Bofome muft debate a while,
And then I would no other company.
Erping. The Lord in Heauen bleffe thee, Noble Harry.

King. God a mercy old Heart, thou speakeft chearefully.

Enter Piuffall.

Piuff. Que vouz la?
King. A friend.
Piuff. Difcuife vnto me, art thou Officer, or art thou barke, common, and popular?
King. I am a Genteman of a Company.
Piuff. Trayl'ft thou the puiffant Pyke?
King. Euen fo: what are you?
Piuff. As good a Gentleman as the Emperor.
King. Then you are a better then the King.
Piuff. The King's a Bawcock, and a Heart of Gold, a Lad of Life, an Impe of Fame, of Parents good, of fift moft valiant: I kiffe his durtie fhooe, and from heart-firing I love the louely Buliy. What is thy Name?
King. Harry le Roy.
Piuff. Le Roy, this Name: art thou of Cornith Crew?
King. No, I am a Welchman.
Piuff. Know'ft thou Fluellen?
King. Yes.
Piuff. Tell him Ile knock his Lecke about his Pate vpon S. Daines day.
King. Doe not you weare your Dagger in your Cappe that day, leaff he knock that about yours.

2 Piuff. Art
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Pifi. Art thou his friend?
King. And his Kinman too.
Pifi. The Pipe for thee then.
King. I thank you; God be with you.
Pifi. My name is Pifiel call'd.

Exit. Pifiel.

King. It forts well with your fiercenece.

Mans King.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gower. Captain Fluellen.

Flu. 'So, in the Name of Jefu Chrift, I fpeak fwerer: it is the greateft admiration in the vniverfal World, when the true and auncient Preqeguidy and Lawes of the Warres is not kept: if you take the palnes but to examine the Warres of Pompey the Great, you fhall find, I warrant you, that there is no fiddle tale nor pible bable in Pompeys Campe: I warrant you, you fhall finde the Ceremonies of the Warres, and the Cares of it, and the Formes of it, and the Subcie of it, and the Modelie of it, to be otherwife.

Gower. Why the Enemie is lowe, you hear him all Night.

Flu. If the Enemie is an Affe and a Foole, and a praeting Coxcombe; if it meet, think you, that wee fhould all, looke you, be an Affe and a Foole, and a praeting Coxcombe, in your owne confidence now?

Gow. I will fpeak lower.

Flu. I pray you, and befefch you, that you will. Exit. King. Though it appeare a little out of fashion, There is much care and valore in this Welchman.

Exit thee three Souldiers, John Bates, Alexander Court, and Michael Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the Morning which breakes yonder?

Bates. I thinke it be: but wee have no great caufe to desire the approach of day.

Williams. Wee fee yonder the beginning of the day, but I thinke wee fhall never fee the end of it. Who goes there?

King. A Friend.

Williams. Vnder what Captaine ferve you?

King. Vnder Sir John Erpingbam.

Williams. A good old Commander, and a moist kinde Gentleman: I pray you, what thinke he of our eftate?

King. Even as men wracth upon a Snd, that looke to be wall't off the next Ifde.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King?

King. No: nor it is not meet he shoul'd: for though I fpeak it to you, I thinke the King is but a man, as I am: the Violet fnells to him, as it doth to me; the Element fhewers to him, as it doth to me; all his heres haue but humane Conditions: his Ceremonies lyed by, in his Nakenneffe he appears but a man; and though his affietions are higher mounted then ours, yet when they fluape, they fluape with the like wing: therefore, when he fees reaion of feares, as we doe; his feares, out of doubt, be of the fame relifh as ours are: yet in reafon, no man should poffeffe him with any appearance of feare; leaff hee, by fhewing it, fhould disater his Army.

Bates. He may fhow what outward courages he will: but I beleue, as cold a Night as this, hee could with himfelfe in Thames vp to the Neck; and fo I would he were, and I by him, at all aduentures, fo we were quit here.

King. By my troth, I will fpeak my confience of the King: I thinke hee would not with himfelfe any where, but where hee is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone:fo should he be sure to be ranfomed, and a many poor mens lives faue.

King. I dare fay, you loose him not fo till, to with him here alone: howfower you fpeak this to feelther other mens minds, me thinks I could not dye any where fo contented, as in the Kings company; his Caufe being iuift, and his Quarrell honorable.

Williams. That's more then we know.

Bates. I, or more then wee fhould feeke after; for wee know enough, if wee know wee are the Kings Subjects: if his Caufe be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the Crime of it out of vs.

Williams. But if the Caufe be not good, the King himfelfe hath a heauel Reckoning to make, when all those Legges, and Armes, and Heads, chipt off in a Battale, fhall floyne together at the latter day, and cry all, Wee dyed at each a place, fome fwearinge, fome fying for a Sur-gean; fome upon their Wives, left poor behind them; fome upon the Deba they owe, fome upon their Children: alone.

I am afar'd, there are few dye well, that dye in a Battale: for how can they charitably difpofe of any thing, when Blood is their argument? Now, if thefe mens doe not dye well, it will be a black matter for the King, that led them to it; who to difobeie, were againd all proportion of subjeftion.

King. So, if a Sonne that is by his Father sent about Merchandize, doe finfully micarrey upon the Seas; the imputation of his wickedneffe, by your rule, fhould be impofed upon his Father that fent him: or if a Servant, under his Masters command, tranporting a fumme of Money, be affayled by Robbers, and dye in many irreconcill'd Iniquities; you may call the buiffefe of the Mafter the author of the Servants damnation; but this is not fo: The King is not bound to anfwer the particular endings of his Souldiers, the Father of his Sonne, nor the Mafter of his Servant; for they purpofe not their death, when they purpofe their Seruices. Besides, there is no King, be his Caufe neuer fo footleffe, if it come to the arbitrement of Swords, can trye it out with all vnpofterd Souldiers; some (peraduenture) have on them the guilt of premeditated and concluded Murther; some, of beguil-ling Virgins with the broken Seales of Periurie; some, making the Warres their Bulwark, that have before goerd the gentle Bofome of Peace with Pillage and Robbe-rie. Now, if thefe mens have defeated the Law, and out-runne Natiue Connection; though they can out-bripl men, they have no wings to flye from God. Warre is his Beadle, Warre is his Vengeance: fo that here men are punifhed, for before breach of the Kings Lawes, in now the Kings Quarrell: where they feared the death, they have borne life away; and where they would bee fafe, they perih. Then if they dye vnproved, no more is the King guillite of their damnation, then hee was before guillite of thofe Impieties, for the which they are now vifited. Every Subjects Dutie is the Kings; but every Subjects Soule is his owne. Therefore fhould every Souldier in the Warres doe as every ficks man in his Bed, with every Moth out of his Confience: and dying fo, Death is to him advantaige; or not dying, the time was blifledly loft, wherein fuch preparation was gayned: and in him that elapes, it were not faine to thinke, that making God fo free an offer, he let him outlive that day, to fee his Greatneffe, and to teach others how they fhould prepare.

Will. 'Tis
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Will. 'Tis certaine, every man that dyes ill, the ill upon his owne head, the King is not to answr it.

Baret. I do not defire hee shoulde answr for me, and yet I determine to fight huffily for him.

King. If my felte heard the King say he would not be ranom'd.

Will. I, hee saide so, to make vs fight charesuely: but when our throats are cut, hee may be ranom'd, and wee ne'e the wier.

King. If I like to see it, I will never tru't his word after.

Will. You pay him then: that's a perillous shot out of an Elder Gunne, that a poore and private displeasure can doe aginst a Monarch: you may as well goe about to turne the Sunne to yee, with fanning in his face with a Peacock's feather: You're never tru't his word after; come, 'tis a foolish saying.

King. Your reproofs is something too round, I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it bee a Quarrel betweene vs, if you like.

King. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee againe?

King. Give me any Gage of thine, and I will weare it in my Bonnet: Then if euer thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my Quarrell.

Will. Here's my Gloue: Give mee another of thine.

King. There, Will. This will I alfo weare in my Cap: if euer thou come to me, and say, after to morrow, This is my Gloue, by this Hand I will take thee a box on the ear.

King. If euer I like to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hang'd.

King. Well, I will doe it, though I take thee in the Kings company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Baret. Be friends you English fools, be friends, we have French Quarrels enough, if you could tell how to reckon.

Exit Soldiers.

King. Indeede the French may lay twentie French Crownes to one, they will beat vs, for they bare them on their shoulders; but it is no English Trefon to our French Crownes, and to morrow the King himselfe will be a Clipper.

Upon the King, let vs our Lues, our Soules, our Debt, our carefull Woes, our Children and our Sinnes, lay on the King: We must bare all.

O hard Condition, Twin-borne with Greatneffe, Subiect to the breath of every foule, whose fence No more can feele, but his owne wringing, What infinite hearts-eafe must Kings neglect, That private men enjoy:

And what have Kings, that Princes have not too, Saue Ceremonie, saue generall Ceremonie?
And what art thou, thou Idol Ceremonie?
What kind of God art thou: that satisfieth more
Of morrnall griefes: then doth thy worshippers.
What are thy Rents? what are thy Comminges in?
O Ceremonie, shew me but thy worth.

What is thy Soule of Odoration?
Art thou ought elfe but Place, Degree, and Forme, Concerning awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art leffe happy, being fear'd, Then they in fearing.

Thinks thou the fierie Feuer will goe out
With Titles blowne from Adulation?
Will it glace to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggers knee, Command the health of it? No, thou prov'd Drame, That play'st so furiblly with a Kings Repofe.

I am a King that find thee: and I know,
'Tis not the Balme, the Scepter, and the Ball, The Sword, the Mafs, the Crowne Imperial, The enter-tiffled Robe of Gold and Pearle, The faried Title running 'fore the King, The Throne he fixt on nor the Tyde of Pompe, That beastes upon the high floor of this World:
No, not all thefe, thrice-gorgeous Ceremonie; Not all thefe, 'lay'd in Bed Malefical, Can fleece fo fouldry, as the wretched Slaue:
Who with a body full'd, and vacant mind,
Gets him to read, cram'd with disreallfull bread,
Never sees horrie Night, the Child of Hell:
But like a Lacquey, from the Rife to Set,
Sweates in the eye of Plead; and all Night
Sleepes in Elenium: next day after dawne,
Both rife and helpe Hiperio to his Horfe,
And follows fo the even-running yeere
With profitable labour to his Gruae:
And but for Ceremonie, such a Wretch,
Winding vp Dayses with toyle, and Nights with sleepes,
Had the fore-hand and vantage of a King.
The Slaue, a Member of the Countriyes peace,
Enioys it; but in groffe braine little wot,
What watch the King keeps, to maintaine the peace;
Whoare howres, the Peант out advantaiges.

Enter Ensigne.

Erip. My Lord, your Nobles jealousy of your abstinence, Seeke through your Campe to find you.

King. Good old Knight, conceal them all together
At my Tent: Ibe before thee.

Erip. I shall doe, my Lord. Exit.

King. O God of Battles, feele my Soul's hearts, Poffeffe them not with feare: Take from them now The fence of reckoning of th'opposed numbers: Pluck their hearts from them. Not to day, O Lord, O not to day, thinke not upon the fault.

My Father made, in compelling the Crowne.
I Richards body have interred new,
And on it have bestowed more contrite teares, Then from it issued forced drops of blood.
Flue hundred poore I haue in yeerely pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold vp
Toward Heauen, to pardon blood:
And I have built two Chauntiers,
Where the sad and Solemn Priests sing fdl
For Richards Soule. More will I doe:
Though all that I can doe, is nothing worth;
Since that my Penance comes after all,
Impling pardon.

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. My Liege.

King. My Brother Gloucesters voice? I:
I know thee errand, I will goe with thee:
The day, my friend, and all things say for me.

Exeunt.
Enter the Dolphin, Orleans, Rambur, and Beaumont.

Orleans. The Sunne doth gild our Armour vp, my Lords.

Orleans. Oh braue Spirit.

Dolph. Vlas ens eare & terre.

Orleans. Rien peut le aire & sau.

Dolph. Cin, Cousin Orleans. Enter Confable.

Now my Lord Confable?

Conf. Hearke how our Steedes, for pretent Service neigh.

Dolph. Mount them, and make incision in their Hides, And their hot blood may spin in English eyes, And doubt them with superfluous courage: ha. Ram. What, will you have them weep our Horfes blood? How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter Melfinger.

Melfing. The English are embattall'd, you French Peers.

Conf. To Horfe you galliant Princes, draf'tin to Horfe. Doe but behold yond poore and farrued Band, And your faire fhew full fack away their Soules, Leaving them but the thales and hakes of men. There is not worke enough for all our hands, Scarce blood enough in all their sickly Veines, To guke each naked Curtleax a thayne, That our French Gallants fhall to day draw out, And yeath for lack of sport. Let vs but blow on them, The vapour of our Valour will o're-turne them.

'Tis poftife againft all exceptions, Lords, That our superfluous Lacquies, and our Pefants, Who in vnceffarie action fhware About our Squares of Battale, were enow To purge this field of fuch a hidling Foe; Though we upon this Mountain Baits by, Took fand for idle fpeculation: But that our Honour muft not. What's to fay? A very little little let vs doe, And all is done: then let the Trumpets found The Tucket Sourance, and the Note to mount: For our approach fhall fo much dare the field, That England fhall cowch downe in feare, and yeeld. Enter Grandprie.

Grandprie. Why do you flay to long, my Lords of France? Yond Band Carriers, defperate of their bones, Ill-faourably become the Morning field: Their ragged Curtaine poorely are let loofe, And our Ayre fhares them paffing fconefully. Bigge Mars femea banq'rount in their begger'd حواف, And faintly through a ruffie Beuer peepes. The Horfemen fit like fixed Candellicks, With Torch-flaues in their hands: and their poore Lades Lob downe their heads, dropping the hides and hips: The gummie downe roping from their pale-dead eyes, And in their pale dull mouths the lymoid Bitt Lynes foule with chaw'd-graffe, flill and motionliffe, And their excutors, the knaufh Crowes, Flye o're them all, impatient for their howre. Description cannot fute it felle in words, To demonstrate the Life of fuch a Battale, In life fo liocelife, as it fhewed it felle.

Conf. They have faid their prayers, And they flay for death.

Dolph. Shall we goe fend them Dinners, and iref Sutes,

And gue their falling Horfes Prouender, And after fight with them?

Conf. I lay but for my Guard: on To the field, I will the Banner from a Trumpet take, And vs it for my haffe. Come, come away, The Sunne is high, and we out-ware the day. Exeunt.

Enter Glouceffer, Bedford, Exeter, Engleham with all his Hooft: Salisbury, and Wijmerland.

Glo. Where is the King?

Belf. The King himfelfe is rode to view their Battale.

Wif. Of fighting men they haue full threefour thousand.

Exe. There's due to one, besides they all are freth.

Salle. Gods Arme strike with vs'tis a fearfull odds.

God buy' you Princes all; Ile to my Charge: If we no more meet, till we meet in Heauen; Then joyful will my Noble Lord: fight valiantly to day.

My dear Lord Glouceffer, and my good Lord Exeter, And my kind Kinman, Warriors all, adieu.

Belf. Farwell good Salisbury, & good luck go with thee: And yet I doe thee wrong, to mind thee of, For thou art fram'd of the firme truth of valour, Forwell kind Lord: fight valiantly to day.

Belf. He is as full of Valour as of Kindnifles, Princeely in both. Enter the King.

Wif. O that we now had here But one ten thousand of thofe men in England, That doe no worke to day.

King. What's he that wishes fo?

My Cousin Wijmerland. No, my faire Cousin: If we are market to dye, we are now To doe our Countrey loffe: and if to live, The fewer men, the greater share of honour. Gods will, I play thee with not one man more.

By love, I am not couetous for Gold, Nor care I who doth feed vp my coff: It yernes me not, if men my Oarments weare; Such outward things dwell not in my defires. But if it be a firne to count Honor, I am the moft offending Soule aliue. No faith, my Couze; with not a man from England: Gods peace, I would not loofe fo great an Honor, As one man more my fummons would square from me, For the hell hope I have. O, doe not with one more: Rather proclaime it (Wijmerland) through my Hoaff, That he which hath no fomack to this ffight, Let him depart, his Pasport shall be made, And Crownes for Conouy put into his Purfe: We would not dye in that mans company, That fears his fellowship, to dye with vs. This day is call'd the Feall of Criftian: He that out-lues this day, and comes safe home, Will fland a tip-toc when this day is named, And rowfe him at the Name of Criftian, He that shall fee this day, and live old age, Will yeerely on the Vivl feast his neighbours, And fy, to morrow is Saint Criftian. Then will he ftrip his fleece, and fhew his skarres: Old men forget; yet all fhall be forgot: But here're remember, with advantages, What feats he did that day. Then shall our Names, Familiar in his mouth as household words,
The Life of Henry the Fifth.

Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,
Be in their flowing Cups freely remembered.
This story shall the good man teach hisNONE:
And Crichton Crichton shall we go by,
From this day to the ending of the World,
But we in it shall be remembered;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers:
For he to day that sheds his blood with me,
Shall be my brother: be he ne're so vile,
This day hall gentle his Condition,
And Gentlemen in England, now a bed,
Shall thinke themselves accurr: they were not here;
And hold their Manhoods cheape, whilst any speakes,
That fought with vs upon Saint Crichtons day.

Sal. My Soveraign Lord, before your felfe with speed:
The French are bruely in their battailes set,
And will with all expedience charge on vs.
King. All things are ready, if our minds be so.
Warwick. And the man, whose mind is backward now.
King. Thou do'tt not with more helpe from England, Courte?
Wulf. Gods will, my Liege, would you and I alone,
Without more helpe, could fight this Royall battaile.
King. Why now thou haft wynnde five thousand men:
Which likes me better, then to with vs one.
You know your places; God be with you all.

Tuck. Enter Money.
Mont. Once more I come to know of thee King Harry,
If for thy Ranfome thou wilt now compound,
Before thy most asfurd Overthrow;
For certainly, thou art fo neere the Gulfe,
Thou needs must be englutted. Befides, in mercy
The Conftable defires thee, thou wilt mind
Thy follower of Repentance; that their Soules
May make a peaceful and a fweet retire
From off these fields: where wretches their poor bodies
Mute lye and feeter.
King. Who hath fent thee now?
Mont. The Conftable of France.
King. I pray thee hearne my former Anfwer back
Bid them attchieue me, and then fell my bones.
Good God, why should they mock povere fellowes thus?
The man that once did fell the Lyons skin
While the beaft liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.
A many of our bodyes shall no doubt
Find Natue Granes: upon the which, I truft
Shall Witnessfe leafe in Braffe of this days worke.
And thofe that leave their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, thou bored in thy Dunghills,
They shall be fam'd: for there the Sun shall greet them,
And draw their honors recking vp to Heauen,
Leaving their earthly parts to choake your Cyme,
The smell whereof shall breed a Plague in France.
Marke then abounding valour in our English:
That being dead, like to the bullets cradg,
Breake out into a second course of Mitchiefe,
Killing in relapse of Mortalitie.
Let me speake proudy: Tell the Conftable,
We are but Warriors for the working day:
Our Gaynffe and our Glit are all bemyrcht
With rayne Marching in the painefull field.
There's not a piece of feather in our Hoil:
Good argument(I hope) we will not flye:

And tyme hath worne vs into flourne,
But by the Maffe, our hearts are in the trim:
And my povere Souldiers tell me, yet ere Night,
They'll be in frether Robes, or they will pluck
The gay new Coats o' the French Souldiers heads,
And turne them out of feruice. If they do this,
As if God plesse, they shall; my Ranfome then
Will fome be leyed.
Herald, fay thou thy labour:
Come thou no more for Ranfome, gentle Herald,
They shall have none, I sware, but thence my Ioynets:
Which if they haue, as I will leave vm them,
Shall yeild them little, tell the Conftable.
Mont. I shall, King Harry. And fo fare thee well:
Thou never fhalt hearne Herald any more.
King. I feare thou wilt once more come againe for a Ranfome.

Enter York.
York. My Lord, moft humbly on my knee I begge
The leading of the Vaward.
King. Take it, brave York.
Now Souldiers march away,
And how thou pleafeth God, difpaye the day.

Exeunt.

Alarum, Excursions.
Enter Pijhell, French Souldier, Boy.
Pijf. Yeeld Curte.
French. Je pends que vous efiez le Gentilhomme de bon qualitez.
Pijf. Qualitie calmie culture me. Art thou a Gentleman? What is thy Name? difcuife.
French. O Signeur Dieu.
Pijf. O Signieur Dewe should be a Gentleman: per-pend my words O Signeur Dewe, and marke: O Signeur Dewe, thou dyest on point of Fox, except O Signeur thou doe glue to me egregious Ranfome.
French. O prenez miferere aps pinen de moy.
Pijf. May shal not leque, I will have forte Moyes: for
I will fetch thy rymme out at thy Throat, in droppes of Crimon blood.
French. Est il imposible d'efbopper le force de ton bras.
Pijf. Braife, Curret thou dammed and luxurious Moun-taine Goate, affir thee: Braife, French.
French. O perdonne moy.
Pijf. Say'th thou me fo? is that a Tomme of Moyes?
Come hither boy, aske me this flawe in French what is his Name.
Boy. Exeute commant effas宝贵的 apelle?
French. Maunfeur et Fer.
Boy. He fayes his Name is M. Fer.
Pijf. M. Fer: Ile fer him, and firke him, and ferret him:
discuife the fame in French into him.
Boy. I doe not know the French for fer, ferret, and firke.
Pijf. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.
French. Que dit il Maunfeur?
Boy. Il me commande a vous dire que vous faiete vos pref, car ce faillat ley et difpofe tout afeure de coupes voler gories.
Pijf. Owy, cupple gorge pernayso pesant, vnalle thou give me Crownes, braue Crownes: or mangled fhalt thou be by this my Sword.
French. O le vous juppelle pour l'ame de Dieu: ma par-
donner, le fait le Genfable en bon raifon, garde de ma vie, &
O vous donneray deux cent glos.
Pijf. What are his words?
Boy. He.
Boy. He prays you to faze his life, he is a Gentleman of a good house, and for his ranome he will give you two hundred Crownes.

Psi. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I the Crownes will take.

Fray. Exit Monfieur qui dit il?

Boy. Encore qu'il et contra son Iurrement, de pardonner aucune prisonniers: neunt-mons pour les ejus que vous lay a pronten, est content a vous donner la libertee et le franchement.

Pro. Sur mes genoux se vous donnez mille remercieux, et Je me elfime heureux que Iistambbe, entre les main, d'un Chesallier Il pese le plus braue valant et tres disfisne signeur d'Angletere.

Psi. Expound vnto me boy.

Boy. He giues you vpon his knees a thousand thanks, and he efternes himself happy, that he hath faine into the hands of one (as he thinkes) the most braue, valorous and thrice-worthy signeur of England.

Psi. As I fuke blood, I will some mercy fhave. Follow mee.

Boy. Oh would you le great Captains?

I did neuer know so full a voyage liue from so emptie a heart: but the sayying is true, The emptie vefell makes the greatest found, Bardolfe and Nym had tenne times more value, then this roasting diuell I the old play, that euerie one may payre his naples with a woodden daggere, and they are both hang'd, and so would this be, if here durt fleake any thing aduenturously. I must fay with the Lackles with the luggage of our camp, the French might haue a good pray of vs, if he knew of it, for there is none to guard it but boyes.

Enter Caftable, Orientce, Burbon, Delphe, and Ramburs.

Con. O Diable.

Orl. O faveur le iour et perdie, toute et perdie.

Dol. Amen Dieu ma vne, all is confounded all, Reproach, and ouerlafting flame.

Sits mocking in our Plumes.

O mefchante Fortune, do not runne away.

Con. Why all our rankes are broke.

Dol. O perdurable flame, let's rub our falves:

Be thefe the wretches that we plaid at dice for?

Orl. Is this the King we fent too, for his ranome?

Bar. Shame, and eternal flame, nothing but shame,

Let vs dye in once more backe againe,

And he that will not follow Burbon now,

Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand

Like a bafe Pander hold the Chamber doore,

Whilft a bafe flauce, no gentier then my dogge,

His faireft daughter is contaminated.

Con. Diorder, that hath fpoil'd vs, friend vs now,

Let vs on hampes go offer vs our lives.

Orl. We are enow yet liviing in the Field,

To fmother vp the English in our thronges,

If any order might be thought vpon.

Bar. The diuell take Order now, Ite to the throng;

Let life be flauce, elfe flame will be too long.

Exit.

Enter the King and his trayne, with Prifoners.

King. Well haue we done, three-valiant Countrimes, But all is not done, yet kepe the French the ffield.

Exe. The D. of York commends him to your Maiesty.

King. Lymes he good Vnkle: thrice within this houre I fawe him downe; thrice vp againe, and fighting,

From Helmet to the squired, all blood he was.

Exe. In which array (braue Soldier) doth he lyse,

Larding the plaine: and by his bloody fide,

(Youke-fellow to his honour-owing-wounds)

The Noble Earle of Suffolkse also lyes.

Suffolke fift dyed, and Yorke all hagled over

Comes to him, where in gore he lay infeeped,

And takes him by the Beard, kifles the gashes

That bloodyly did ywane upon his face.

He cryes aloud; Tarry my Cofon Suffolkse,

My foule fhall thine keepe company to heauen:

Tarry (sweet foule) for mine, then fye a-brett:

As in this glorious and well-foughten field

We kept together in our Chiarifre.

Vpon these words I came, and heard him vp,

He fmi'd me in the face, raughed me his hand,

And with a feeble gripe, fayes: Deere my Lord,

Commend my seruice to my Soueraigne,

So did he turn, and ouer Suffolkses fnecke

He threw his wounded arme, and fliff his lippes,

And fo efpound to death, with blood he feald

A Testament of Noble-ending-loue:

The prettie and fweet manner of it for'd

Those waters from me, which I would have fdrop'd,

But I had not fo much of man in me,

And all my mother came into mine eyes,

And gave me vp to tears.

King. I blame you not,

For hearing this, I must perfere compound

With mixtufle eyes, or they will lifte to.

Alarum.

The French haue re-enforc'd their fatter'd men:

Then every foldiour kill his Prifoners,

Gife the word through.

Exit.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Flu. Kill the poyes and the luggage, 'Tis expreffely against the Law of Armes, tis as arrant a piece of knaueery marke you now, as can bee offerd in your Confcience

now, is it not?

Gow. Tis certaine, there's not a boy left aliose, and the Cowardly Raeffals that ranne from the battaile ha'd done

this slaughter: besides they have burned and carried away all that was in the Kings Tent, wherefore the King

moft worthily hath cauf'd every foldiour to cut his prifoners throate. O'tis a gallant King.

Flu. I, hee was borne at Monmouth Captaine Gower:

What call you the Townes name where Alexander the pig was borne?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flu. Why I pray you, is not pig great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, faue the phrafe is a little variations.

Gower. I thinkke Alexander the Great was borne in Macedon, his Father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I thinke it is in Macedon where Alexander is borne.

The Life of Henry the Fifth.

pore: I tell thee Captain, if you looke in the Maps of the Orld, I warrant you fall finde in the comparisons betweene Maseden & Mammouth, that the situations looke you, is both alike. There is a River in Maseden, & there is also moreover a River at Mammouth, it is call'd Wye at Mammouth: but it is out of my praines, what is the name of the other River: but 'tis all one, tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is Salmons in both. If you marke Alexanders life well, Harry of Momenautes life is come after it indifferent well, for there is figures in all things. Alexander God knowes, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wrathes, and his chollers, and his moodes, and his diiplesures, and his indignations, and also be being a little intoxicates in his praines, did in his Ales and his angeres (looke you) kill his best friend Clytus.

Gew. Our King is not like him in that, he never kill'd any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done (marke you now) to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figure for the apprehensions of it: as Alexander kild his friend Clytus, being in his Ales and his Cusses; so also Harry Momenaught being in his right wittes, and his good judgements, turn'd away the fat Knight with the great belly doublet: he was full of jefts, and ypes, and knaueries, and mockery, I have forgot his name.

Gew. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he: I le tell you,there is good men porne at eMomenaught.

Gew. Heere comes his Maiesty.

Alarum. Enter King Harry and Burton with pris Ont. Frieur.

King. I was not angry since I came to France, Vntill this instant. Take a Trumpet Herald, Ride thou vnto the Horfemen on yond hill: If they will fight with vs, bid them come downe, Or voyde the field: they do offend our fight. If they do neither, we will come to them, And make them sker away, as swift as fowes Enforced from the old Affrian fings: Besides, we cut the throats of those we have, And not a man of them that we shall take, Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter Montoy.

Ext. Here comes the Herald of the French, my Liege Glou. His eye are humbler then they va'd to be.

King. How now, what means this Herald? Knowst thou not, That I have fin'd these bones of mine for rancomb? Com'st thou againe for rancomb? Her. No great King: I come to thee for charitable Licence, That we may wander ore this bloody field, To booke our dead, and then to bury them, To fort our Nobles from our common men. For many of our Princes (wote the while) Lye drownd'd and fook'd in mercury blood: So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs In blood of Princes, and with wounded feets Fret fet-locke deeepe in gore, and with wide rage Yenke out their armed feeles at their dead matters, Kiling them twice. O give vs leue great King, To view the field in safety, and dispoe Of their dead bodies.

Kin. I tell thee truly Herald, I know not if the day be ours or no, For yet a many of your horsemen peere, And gallop ore the field.

Her. The day is yours.

Kin. Praised be God, and not our strength for it: What is this Castle call'd that stands hard by.

Her. They call it Agincourt.

King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt, Fought on the day of Cristies. Cristianus.

Flu. Your Grandfather of famous memory (an't please your Maiesty) and your great Uncle Edward the Blaceke Prince of Wales, as I have read in the Chronicles, fought a moat pruittt battle here in France.

Kin. They did Fluellen.

Flu. Your Maiesty fayes very true: If your Maiesties is remembred of it, the Welchmen did good seruice in a Garden where Leckes did grow, wearing Leckes in their Momenaugh caps, which your Maiesty know to this houre is an honourable badge of the seruice: And I do beleue your Maiesty takes no leuone to weare the Lecke vpon S. Taules day.

King. I weare it for a memorable honor:
For I am Welch you know good Countriman.

Flu. All the water in Wye, cannot with your Maie thys Welch plond out of your body, I can tell you that: God pleffe it, and prefufe it, as long as it pleffe his Grace, and his Maiesty too.

Kin. Thankes good my Countrymen,

Flu. By leffu, I am your Maiesties Countrymen, I care not who know it: I will confefte it to all the Orld, I need not to be abashed of your Maiesty, praied be God so long as your Maiesty is an honett man.

King. Good keep me so.

Enter Williams.

Our Heralds go with him, Bring me iuft notice of the numbers dead On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

Ext. Souldier, you must come to the King.

Kin. Souldier, why wear'st thou that Gloue in thy Cappe?

Will. And't please your Maiesty, tis the gage of one that I should fight withall, if he be alue.

Kin. An Englishman?

Will. And't please your Maiesty, a Raffall that ftagger'd with me laft night: who if alue, and euer dare to challenge this Gloue, I have sworn to take him a box th'ordere: or if I can care my Gloue in his cappe, which he swore as he was a Souldier he would weare (if alue) will strike it out foundly.

Kin. What thinke you Captain Fluellen, is it fit this souldier kepe his oath.

Flu. Hee is a Craven and a Villaine else, and't please your Maiesty in my confidence.

King. It may bee, his enemy is a Gentleman of great fort quite from the anwer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a Gentleman as the diuel is, as Lucifers and Belzebub himselfe, it is necessery (looke your Grace) that he keepes his vow and his oath: If hee be persuaid (see you now) his reputation is as arrant a villaine and a Jacke fawce, as euer his blacke foo toodl vpon Gods ground, and his earth, in my confidence law.

King. Then keepe thy vow firlah, when thou meet'th the fellow.

Will. So, I wil my Liege, as I lue.

King. Who feru'th thou vnder?

Will.
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Will. Vnder Captaine Gower, my Liege.
Fru. Gower is a good Captaine: and is good knowledge and literatured in the Warres.
King. Call him hither to me, Soullier.
Will. I will my Liege. Exit.
King. Here Fluellen, were thou this favoure for me, and fickle it in thy Cappe: when Alasfan and my selfe were downe together, I pluckt this Gloue from his Helme: If any man challenge this, hee is a friend to Alasfan:and an enemy to our Perfon; if thou encounter any fuch, apprehend him,and thou do't me none.
Flu. Your Grace doo's me as great Honors as can be defir'd in the hearts of his Subiects: I would faine see the man, that he's but two legges, that shall find himselfe agreefull at this Gloue; that is all: but I would faine fee it once, and pleafe God of his grace that I might fee.
King. Know'lt thou Gower?
Flu. He is my deare friend, and pleafe you.
King. Pray thee goe feke him, and bring him to my Tent.
Flu. I will fetch him. Exit.
King. My Lord of Warwick, and my Brother Gloster, Follow Fluellen closely at the heele.
The Gloue which I have giuen him for a favour, May haply purchase him a box a'th'ear.
It is the Soulliers: I by bargainne shoul'd Wear it my felle. Follow good Cousin Warwick: If that the Soullier strike him, as I ludge By his blunt bearing, he will keepe his word; Some fouldaine mifchiefe may arife of it: For I doe know Fluellen valiant, And toucht with Choler, hot as Gunpowder, And quickly will returne an injurie.
Follow, and fee there be no harme betweenne them.
Goe you with me, Vnckle of Exeter.

Enter Gower and Williams.
Will. I warrant it is my Knight you, Captaine.
Enter Fluellen.
Fru. Gods will, and his pleasaure, Captaine, I befeech you now, come apace to the King: there is more good toward you peraduenture, then is in your knowledge to dreame of.
Will. Sir, know you this Gloue?
Fru. Know the Gloue! I know the Gloue is a Gloue.
Will. I know this, and thus I challenge it.
Strike him.
Fru. 'Sbiod, an arrant Traytor as anyes in the Vniouser full World, or in France, or in England.
Will. Doe you thinke Ile be forsworne?
Fru. Stand away Captaine Gower, I will giue Treson his payment into ploues, I warrant you.
Will. I am no Traytor.

Enter Warwick and Gloucester.
Warw. How now, how now, what's the matter?
Fru. My Lord of Warwick, heere is, praved be God for it, a most contagious Treson come to light, looke you, as you shall desire in a Summers day. Heere is his Maietie.
Enter King and Exeter.
King. How now, what's the matter?
Fru. My Liege, heere is a Villaine, and a Traytor, that looke your Grace, he's froke the Gloue which your Maietie is take out of the Helmet of Alasfan.
Will. My Liege, this was my Gloue, here is the fellow of it and he that I gave it to in change, promised to wear it in his Cappe: I promis'd to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my Gloue in his Cappe, and I have been as good as my word.
Fru. Your Maietie heare now, fauling your Maieties Manhood, what an arrant rake, beggerly, lowlie Knave it is: I hope your Maietie is passe me testimonie and winde, and will answearment, that this is the Gloue of Alasfan, that your Maietie is give me, in your Conscience now.
King. Give me thy Gloue Souldier;
Looke, heere is the fellow of it: "Twas I indeed thou promis'st to strike, And thou haft giuen me most bitter termes.
And please your Maietie, let his Neck anfwere for it, if there is any Marshall Law in the World.
King. How canst thou make me satisfaction?
Will. All offences, my Lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine, that might offend your Maietie.
King. It was our felle thou didst abuse.
Will. Your Maietie came not like your selfe: you appear'd to me but as a common man: winde the Night, your Garments, your Lowliness: and what your Highnesse suffer'd vnder that shape, I befeech you take it for your owne fault, and not mine: for had you beseen as I tooke you for, I made no offence; therefore I befeech your Highnesse pardon me.
King. Here Vnckle Exeter, fill this Gloue with Crownes, And giue it to this fellow. Keepe it fellow, And wear it for an Honor in thy Cappe, Till I doe challenge it. Glue him the Crownes:
And Captaine, you must needs be friends with him.
Fru. By this Day and this Light, the fellow he's mett in his belly: Hold, there is twelve-pence for you, and I pray you to ferue God, and keepe you out of pawsles and prables, and quarrels and dillusions, and I warrant you it is the better for you.
Will. I will none of your Money.
Fru. It is with a good will: I can tell you it will ferue you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so faifull, your shoes is not so good: 'tis a good filling I warrant you, or I will change it.
Enter Herald.
King. Now Herauld, are the dead numbered?
Herald. Here is the number of the faught'red French.
King. What Prisoners of good sort are taken, Vnckle?
Exe. Charles Duke of Orleans, Neffe of the King, John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Beauchizald:
Of other Lords and Barons, Knights and Squires, Full fifeteene hundred, besides common men.
King. This Note doth tell me of ten thousand French That in the field lyfe flaine: of Princes in this number, And Nobles bearing Banners, there lye dead One hundred twenty fix: added to thes, Of Knights, Esquires, and gallant Gentlemen, Eight thousand and foure hundred: of the which, Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd Knights.
So that in thefe ten thousand they have lost;
There are but foure hundred Mancenaries:
The reft are Princes, Barons, Lords, Knights,Squires, And

Where is the number of our English dead?
Edward the Duke of Yorke, the Earle of Suffolke,
Sir Richard Ketly, Dassy Garm Eifquer;
None else of name: and of all other men,
But flue and twentie.
O God, thy Arme was heere:
And not to vs, but to thy Arme alone,
Acriebe we all: when, without frarage,
But in plainhe shock, and even play of Battaille,
Was ever knowne to great and little lost?
On one part and on th'other, take it God,
For it is none but thine.

Exeunt. 'Tis wonderfull.
King. Come, goe me in procession to the Village:
And be it death proclaym'd through our Head,
To boast of this, or take that pratyse from God,
Which is his onlye.
Flu. Is it not lawfull and please your Mayefte, to tell how many is kill'd?
King. Yes Captaine: but with this acknowledgement,
That God fought for vs.
Flu. Yes, my confiance, he did vs great good.
King. Doe we all holy Rights:
Let there be fung Non nobis, and Te Deum,
The dead with charitee enclo'd in Clay:
And then to Callice, and to England then,
Where ne're from France arriu'd more happy men.
Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Gustavus.
Vouchsafe to thosse that have not read the Story,
That I may prompt them: and of such as have,
I humbly pray them to admit th'excuse.
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life,
Be here presant. Now we beare the King
Toward Callice: Graunt him there; there teene,
Hence he away vpon your winged thoughts,
Athsward the Sea: Behold the English beach
Pales in the flood: with Men, Wises, and Boyes,
Whole shouts & claps out-voyce the deep-mouth'd Sea,
Which like a mightie Whiffier vore the King,
Seemes to prepare his way: So let him land,
And solemnlye prepare him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath Thought, that even now
You may imagine him vpon Black-Heath:
Where, that his Lords deffe him, to haue borne
His bruied Helmet, and his bended Sword.
Before him, through the Citie: he forbids it,

Being free from vain-neffe, and selfe-glories pride;
Gluing full Trophe, Signall, and Oftent.
Quite from himselfe, to God. But now behold,
In the quick Forge and working-houfe of Thought,
How London doth powre out her Citizens,
The Maior and all his Brethren in beft for,
Like to the Senatour of th'antine Rome,
With the Plebeians swarming at their heelees,
Goe forth and fetch their Conqu'ring Caesar in:
As by a lower, but by loving likelihood,
Were now the Generall of our gracious Empreffe,
As in good time he may, from Ireland comming,
Bringing Rebellion broached on his Sword:
How many would the peacefull Citie quit,
To welcome him? much more, and much more cause,
Did they this Harry. Now in London place him.
As yet the lament of the French;
Inuies the King of Englands stay at home:
The Emporer's comming in behalf of France,
To order peace betweene them: and omit
All the occurrences, what ester chanct;
Till Harryes backe returne againe to France:
There must we bring him; and my selfe haue play'd
The interim, by remembering you 'tis paft.
Then brooke abridgement, and your eyes aduance,
After your thoughts, plaintiff backe againe to France.

Exit.

Enter Fluellin and Gower.

Gower. Nay, that's right: but why weare you your Leeke to day? S. Danes day is past.
Flu. There is occasions and caufes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you affe my friend, Captaine
Gower: the rafally, fcauld, beggerly, lowfe, praging
Knaue Pijfoll, which you and your felfe, and all the World, know to be no petter then a fellow, looke you now, of no merits: hee is come to me, and prings me pread and fault yesterday, looke you, and bid me eate my Leeke:
it was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him; but I will be so bold as to weare it in my Cap
Till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my deferons.

Enter Pijfoll.

Gower. Why heere hee comes,swelling like a Turky-cock.
Flu. 'Tis no matter for his felwells, nor his Turky-cocks. God plefe you auncient Pifboll you fourie lowfe Knaue, God plefe you.
Pijf. Ha, art thou bedlam? doest thou thirt, base
Troian, to haue me fold vp Pares fistall Web? Hence;
I am qualmish at the finell of Leece.
Flu. I pefeech you heartily, fourie lowfe Knaue, at my defires, and my requiefs, and my petitions, to eate, looke you this Leece; because, looke you, you deo not loue it, nor your affections, and your appetites and your difflications doe's not agree with it, I would defire you to eate it.
Pijf. Not for Cadwallader and all his Goats.
Flu. There is one Goat for you. Strips him.
Will you be so good, fould Knaue, as eate it?
Pijf. Base Troian, thou shalt dye.
Flu. You fay very true, fould Knaue, when Gods will is: I will defire you to live in the meane time, and take your Victuals: come, there is fawce for it. You call'd me yesterday Mountains-Squier, but I will make

447
you to day a squire of low degree. I pray you fall too, if you can mocke a Leekke, you can eate a Leekke.

Ger. Enough Captaine, you have affonishit him.

Plu. I say, I will make him eate some part of my lecke, or I will peate his pate fourye dayes: bite I pray you, it is good for your greene wound, and your ploode Coxcombe.

Pij. Muff I bite.

Plu. Yes certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too, and ambiguities.

Pij. By this Leekke, I will most horribly reuenge I eate and eate I sware.

Plu. Eate I pray you, will you have some moreauce to your Leekke: there is not enough Leekke to sware by.

Pij. Quiet thy Cudgel, thou dost fee I eate.

Plu. Much good do you scald knaue, heartily. Nay, pray you throw none away, the skinne is good for your broken Coxcombe; when you take occasiions to see Leekes heereafter, I pray you mocke at 'em, that is all.

Pij. Good.

Plu. 1. Leekes is good: hold you, there is a grate to heale your pate.

Pij. Me a grate?

Plu. Yes verily, and in truth you shall take it, or I have another Leekke in my pocket, which you shall eate.

Pij. I take thy grate in earnest of reuenge.

Plu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in Cudgels, you shall be a Woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels: God bu' ye, and keepe you, & heale your pate.

Pij. All hell shall fire for this.

Gen. Go, go, you are a counterfeit cowardly knaue, will you mocke at an ancient Tradition begun vpon an honourable respect, and worne as a memorable Trophie of predecated valor, and dare not aussuch in your deeds any of your words. I have feene you geyeking & galling at this Gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speake English in the naure garbe, he could not therefore handle an English Cudgel: you finde it otherwife, and henceforth let a Welsh correction, teach you a good English condition, fare ye well.

Exit Pij.

Pij. Doethe fortunate play the hufwife with me now? Newes haue I that my Doll is dead 'th Spittle of a malady of France, and there my rendesous is quite cut off: Old I do waxe, and from my weary limbs honour is Cudgel. Well, Baud Ie turne, and something leane to Cut-purse of quicke hand: To England will I steale, and there Ie steale:

And patches will I get vnto thefd cudgel forres,
And fmore I got them in the Gallia warres.

Exit.

Enter at one doore, King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Warwick, and other Lords. At another, Queene Isabel, the King, the Duke of Burgugs, and other French.

King. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met; Vnto our brother France, and to our Siffer Health and faire daye of time: Joy and good wishes To our moist faire and Princely Cofine Katherine: And as a branch and member of this Royalty, By whom this great assembly is contrud, We do salute you Duke of Burgug, And Princes French and Peeres health to you all.

Fra. Right joyous are we to behold your face, Most worthy brother England, fairely met, So are you Princes (English) every one.

Que. So happy be the Issue brother Ireland Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting, As we are now glad to behold your eyes, Your eyes which hitherto have borne In them against the French that met them in their bent, The fatall Balls of murthering Battelikes: The venom of such Lookes we fairely hope Have loft their qualitie, and that this day Shall change all griefes and quarrels into loute.

Eng. To cry Amen to that, thus we appeare.

Que. You English Princes all, I doe salute you.

Burg. My dutie to you both, on equal loute.

Great Kings of France and England that I have labour'd With all my wits, my paines, and strong endeavors, To bring your moft Imperial Maiesties Vnto this Barre, and Royall interview; Your Mightinnesse on both parts best can witness. Since then my Office hath fo farre preuy'd, That Face to Face, and Royall Eye to Eye, You have congreget: let it not disgrace me, If I demand before this Royall view,

What Rub, or what Impediment there is,
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace, Deare Nourse of Arts, Plenties, and joyfull Births, Should not in this bietf Garden of the World, Our fertile France, put vp her lonely Vifage? Also she hath from France too long been chas'd, And all her Husbandry doth lye on heapes, Corrupting in it owne furtillite.

Her Vine, the merry cheerer of the heart, Vnpruned, dyes: her Hedges even pleach'd,
Like Prisoners wildly over-growne with hayre,
Put forth disorder'd Twigs: her fellow Leses,
The Darnell, Hemlock, and ranke Fementary,
Doth root vpon; while that the Culter ruffs,
That should dersacinate such Sausery:
The even Meate, that erit brought sweety forth
The freckled Cowlip, Burnet, and greene Clover,
Wanting the Sythe, withall uncorrected, ranke;
Conceiues by idlenesse, and nothing teemes,
But hatefull Docks, rough Thistles, Kefeyes, Burres,
Looking both beautie and villite;
And all our Vineyards, Fallowes, Meades, and Hedges,
DefecEue in their natures, grow to wildniffe.
Euen so our Housees, and our felues, and Children,
Have loft, or do not leaerne, for want of time,
The Sciences that should become our Country;
But grow like Sauages, as Souldeiers will,
That nothing doe, but meditate on Blood,
To Swearing, and terme Lookes, defunt' Attyre,
And every thing that teemes unvaluatle.
Which to reduce into our former favour,
You are assembled: and my speech entreats,
That I may know the Let, why gentle Peace
Should not expell these incounsencies,
And blewe vs with her former qualities.

Eng. If Duke of Burgonie, you would the Peace,
Whose want gues growth to themperfections
Which you have caited, you must buy that Peace
With full accord to all our liet demands,
Whose Tenures and particular effects
You have enhanced briefly in your hands.

Burg. The King hath heard them to the which, as yet
There is no Anwer made.

Eng. Well then: the Peace which you before so vrg'd, Lyes in his Anwer.
France. I hauw but with a curflearie eye
O're-glance't the Articles: Pleaseth your Grace
To appoint some of your Councell prently
To fit with vs once more, with better heed
To re-furyse them, we will fuddenny
Paife our accept, and peremptorie Anfwer.

England. Brother we shall. Go Vnckle Exeter,
And Brother Clarence, and you Brother Gloafter,
Warmick, and Huntington, goe with the King,
And take with you free power, to ratifie,
Augment, or alter, as your Wildomes beth
Shall fee aduantageable for our Dignities,
Any thing in or out of our Demandes,
And we'll configne thereto. Will you faire Sifter,
Goe with the Princes: or day here with vs?

Que. Our gracious Brother, I will goe with them:
Haply a Womans Voyce may doe for good,
When Articles too nicely vertul'd be flood on.

England. Yet leaue our Coufin Katherine here with vs,
She is our capital Demand, compris'd
Within the fore-ranke of our Articles.

Que. She hath good leave. Exeunt omnes.

Mans King and Katherine.

Kath. Your Maiestie shall mock at me, I cannot speake your England.

King. O faire Katherine, if you will love me fondly
With your French heart, I will be glad to heare you confife
It brokenly with your English Tongue. Doe you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardon me, I cannot tell was is like me.

King. An Angell is like you Kate, and you are like an Angell.

Kath. Que dit il que l'est semblable a les Anges?

Lady. Ouy euyoyuent (sauf voy your Grace), affi dit il.

Kath. I faid fo, deare Katherine, and I must not blufh to affirme it.

Kath. O bon Dieu, les langues des hommes font plein de tromperies.

Kath. What fayes the, faire onent that the tongues of men are full of deceit?

Lady. Ouy, dat de tongues of de mens is be full of deceits: dat is de Princefe.

King. The Princefe is the better English-woman: yfaith Kate, my wooll is fit for thy vnderlanding, I am glad thou canst speake no better English, for if thou could'th, thou woul'dt finde me suche a plaine King, that thou woul'dt think, I had fold my Farne to buy my Crownes. I know no wayes to mince it in loue, but direcly to fay, I loue you; then if you wrde me farther, then to fay, Doe you in faith? I weare out my faite: Glue me your anfwer, yfaith doe, and so clap hands, and a bar- gaine: how fay you, Lady?

Kath. Sauf voyfere honur, me vnderstand well.

King. Marry, if you would put me to Verfe, or to Dance for your face, Kate, why you would me: for the one I hauw neither words nor meafeure; and for the other, I hauw no strength in meafeure, yet a reafonable meafeure in strength. If I could winne a Lady at Leape-frugge, or by vawing into my Saddle, with my Armour on my backe; vnder the correcion of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leapo into a Wife: Or if I might bullet for my Louve, or bound my Horfe for her favours, I could lay on like a Butcher, and fit like a Jack an Apes, neuer off. But before God Kate, I cannot looke greenerly, nor gafe out my eloquens, nor I haue no cunning in protellation; onely downe-right Oathes, which I neuer vie till vert'd, nor neuer broke for verting. If thou canst loue a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth Sunne-burning? that neuer lookes in his Glaffe, for loue of any thing he fees there? let thine Eye be thy Cooke. I speake to thee plaine Souldier: If thou canst loue me for this, take me? if not? to fly to thee that I shall dye, is true but for thy loue, by the L. No: yet I loue thee too. And while thou liue'ft, deare Kate, take a fellow of plaine and vncoyned Contanfable, for he perfome muft doe thee right, becaufe he hath not the gift to woe in other places: for those fellows of infinit tongue, that can ryme themselves into Ladies favours, they doe always reason themselves out again. What? a speaker is but a prater, a Ryme is but a Ballad; a good Legge will fall, a fruite Backe will stoope, a backe Beard will turne white, a curl'd Pate will grow bald, a faire Face will wither, a full Eye will wax hollow: but a good Heart, Kate, is the Sunne and the Moone, or rather the Sunne, and not the Moone; for it shineth bright, and neuer changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would haue such a one, take me? and take me; take a Souldier: take a Souldier; take a King. And what fay'ft thou then to my Loue? I speake my faires, and fainely, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it poiffible dat I foule loue de emmene of France?

King. No, it is not poiffible you should loue the Em- mie of France, Kate; but in louing me, you should loue the Friend of France: for I loue France fo well, that I will not part with a Village of it: I will haue it all mines: and Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours; then yons is France, and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell was is dat.

King. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon your tongue, like a new-married Wife about her Husbands Necke, hardly to be fooke off; If jeund fur le pafffion de France, & quand vous aues le pafffion de moy. (Let mee see, what then? Saint Dennis bee my fpeede) Done voyfere eff France, & vous aves efines. It is as eafe for me, Kate, to conquer the French, as to speake fo much more French: I shall neuer moue thee in French, vnleffe it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf voyfere honeur, le Francois que vos parles, il et meilleur que l'Anglais le qui le parle.

King. No faith ef't not, Kate: but thy speaking of my Tongue, and I thinke, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But Kate, don't thou vnderstand thus much English? Can't thou loue me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

King. Can any of your Neighbour tell, Kate? Ile ake them. Come, I know thou louef me: and at night, when you come into your Clofet, you'le quession this Gentiewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her difplaye those parts in me, that you loue with your heart: but good Kate, mocke me mercifully, the rather gentle Princefe, because I loue thee crudely. If euer thou beeft mine, Kate, as I have a fuing Faith within me tells me thou shalt; I get thee with skambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good Soullier-breeder: Shall not thou and I, between Saint Dennis and Saint George, compound a Boy, halfe French halfe English, k that shall goe to Conflantinople, and take the Turk by the Beard. Shall wee not? what lye'll thou, my faire Flower-de-Luce.

Kate. I doe not know dat.

King. No, it is hereafter to know, but now to promife : doe but now promife Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a Boy; and for my English moyte, take the Word of a King, and a Batcheler. How anfwer you, La plus belle Katherine du monde mon trêfcher C devin deffe.

Kate. Your Maleflee aue faue Frenche enough to deceuie de moft fage Damofell dat is in France.

King. Now fre upon your faile French; by mine Honor in true Englifh, I loue thee Kate; by which Honor, I dare not fweare thou loueff me, yet my blood begins to flatter me, that thou doouf; notwithstanding the poore and ventempering effet of my Vifage. Now behawr my Fathers Ambition, hee was thinking of Cuill Warrres when hee got me, therefore was I created with a fhubborne out-fide, with an affect of Iron, that when I come to wooe Ladies, I fright them: but in faith Kate, the el-cerer I wax, the better I shall appeare. My comfort is, that Old Age, that ill layer vp of Beautie, can doe no more fploye upon my Face. Thou haft me, if thou haft me, at the worft; and thou haft weare me, if thou weare me, better and better: and therefore tell me, molt faire Kathoria, will you have me? Pat off your Maiden Blufhes, auouch the Thoughts of your Heart with the Lookes of an Emprefse, take me by the Hand, and fay, Harry of England, I am thine: which Word thou haft no fnoorer bleffe mine Eare withall, but I will tell thee adow, England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantaginet is thine who, though I fpeak it before his Face, if he be not Fellow with the beft King, thou fhal fine the beft King of Good-fellowes. Come your Answer in broken Muftick; for thy Voyce is Muftick, and thy Englifh broken: Therefore Queene of all, Katherine, break thy minde to me in broken Englifh; wilt thou
haue me?

Kate. Dat is as it shall pleafe de Roy mon pere.

King. Nay, it will pleafe him well, Kate; it shall pleafe him, Kate.

Kate. Den it fall alfo content me.

King. Vpon that I kiffe your Hand, and I call you my Queene.

Kate. Laife mon Seigneur, laffe, laffe, may fay? Il en veu point que vou abaffie voyte grandez, en baifiant le main d'une noftre Seigneur indignant jureur excepe moy. Il court laffifie mon tre-seul lai Souigneur.

King. Then I will kiffe your Lippes, Kate.

Kate. Let Dames & Damofejfes pour eftriere baife dent leur nopege il en pas le cofume de France.

King. Madame, my Interpreter, what fayes fhee?

Kate. Dat he is not be de fathan pour les Ladies of France; I cannot tell wat is buife in Englih.

King. To kiffe.

Lady. Your Maleflee entendre bettre que moy.

King. It is not a fashion for the Maids in France to kiffe before they are married, would thy fay?

Lady. By no meanes.

King. O Kate, nice Cufromes curfe to great Kings.
Deare Kate, you and I cannot bee confin'd within the weake Lyft o a Countries fashion: wee are the makens of Manners, Kate; and the library that follows our Plafs, opprifes the mouth of all Mufickians, as I will doe your, for vpholding the nice f Fashion of your Country, in denying me a Kiffe; therefore patiently, and yelding. You haue Witch-craft in your Lippes, Kate; there is more eloquence in a Sugar touch of them, then in the Tongues of the French Counfell; and they shold foeer perfuade Harry of England, then a general Petition of Monarches. Heree comes your Father.

Enter the French Power, and the English Lords.

Burg. God fave your Maleflee, my Royall Cousin
, teach you our Princeffe Englifh?

King. I would have her leerne, my faire Cousin, how perfectly I loue her, and that is good Englifh.

Burg. Is thee not ape?

King. Our Tongue is rough, Coze, and my Condition is not smooth: fo haue neither the Voyce nor the Heart of Flatterie about me, I cannot fo coniure vp the Spirit of Loue in her, that hee will appeare in his true likeffe.

Burg. Pardon the frankneffe of my mirth, if I anfwer you for that. If you would coniure in her, you must make a Circle: if coniure vp Loue in her in his true likeffe, hee must appeare naked, and blindle. Can you blame her then, being a Maid, yet read over with the Virgin Crimfon of Modifte, if thee deny the appearence of a naked blindle Boy in her naked feeling felfe? It were (my Lord) a hard Condition for a Maid to confume to.

King. Yet they doe winke and yeld, as Loue is blind and enforces.

Burg. They are then excu'd, my Lord, when they fee not what they doe.

King. Then good my Lord, teach your Cousin to content winking.

Burg. I will winke on her to content, my Lord; if you will teach her to know my meaning: for Maides well
Summer'd, and warme kept, are like Flyes at Bartholom-wye-tyde, blindle, though they have their eyes, and then they will endure handling, which before would not abufe looking on.

King. This Morall efies me ouer to Time, and a hot Summer; and fo I fhall catch the Flye, your Cousin, in the latter end, and thee must be blinde to.

Burg. As Loue is my Lord, before it loues.

King. It is fo: and you may, fome of you, thanke
Loue for my blindsneffe, who cannot fee many a faire French Cittie for one faire French Maid that fhands in my way.

French King. Yes my Lord, you fee them perfectively: the Cities turn'd into a Maid: for they are all gyrdled with Maiden Wallts, that Warre hath entered.

England. Shall Kate be my Wife?

France. So pleafe you.

England. I am content, fo the Maid Cittes you take of, may wait on her: fo the Maid that ftood in the way for my Wife, fhall fhow me the way to my
Will.

France. Wee have confented to all teares of reafon.

England. Is't fo, my Lords of England?

Wyll. The King hath granted every Article:
His Daughter first; and in quefle all,
According to their firme propofed natures.

Exeunt. One ly
The Life of Henry the Fifth.

Exeunt. Onely he hath not yet subscibed this:
Where your Maiestie demands, That the King of France
hauing any occasion to write for matter of Grant, shal name your Highness in this forme, and with this addition, in French: Nostre trescher fillo Henry Roy d’Angleterre
Herediter de France: and thus in Latine: Præclarissimus
Filius oritur Hereditæ Rex Angliae & Heres Franciae.
France. Nor this I haue not Brother so deny’d,
But your request shal make me let it passe.
England. I pray you then, in loue and deare allyance,
Let that one Article ranke with the rei,
And thereupon glue me your Daughter.
France. Take her faire Sonne, and from her blood rayse vp
Iffue to me, that the contending Kingdomes
Of France and England, whose very shoares looke pale,
With enuy of each others happinesse,
May cease their hatred; and this deare Conjunction Plant Neighbour-hood and Christian-like accord
In their sweet Bofomes: that neuer Warre advance
His bleeding Sword ‘twixt England and faire France.
Lords. Amen.
King. Now welcome Kate: and bear me witneffe all,
That here I kisse her at my Soueraigne Queene.
Flourib.
Quee. God, the bext maker of all Marriages,
Combine your hearts in one, your Realmes in one:
As Man and Wife being two, are one in loue,
So be there ‘twixt your Kingdomes such a Spoufall,
That neuer may ill Office, or fell Jealousie,
Which troubles oft the Bed of blesed Marriage,
Thrust in betweene the Patie of these Kingdomes,
To make divorce of their incorporate League:
That English may as French, French Englishmen,
Receive each other. God speake this Amen.
All. Amen.
King. Prepare we for our Marriage: on which day,
My Lord of Burgundy wee’le take your Oath
And all the Peeres, for suretie of our Leagues,
Then shall I fwear to Kate, and you to me,
And may our Oathes well kept and prosp’rous be.
Sens.
Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

Thus farre with rough, and all- vnable Pen,
Our bendeing Author hath purfo’d the Story,
In little roome confining mightie men,
Mangling by starts the full courfe of their glory.
Small time: but in that small, most greatly liued
This Starre of England. Fortune made his Sword;
By which, the Worlds best Garden he atchieued:
And of it left his Sonne Imperiall Lord.
Henry the Sixt, in Infant Bands crown’d King
Of France and England, did this King succeed:
Whole State so many had the managing,
That they loft France, and made his England bleed:
Which oft our Stage hath showne; and for their false,
In your faire minds let this acceptance take.

FINIS.
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Dead March.

Enter the Funerall of King Henry the Fift, attended on by the Duke of Bedford, Regent of France; the Duke of Gloucester, representing the Duke of Exeter Warwick, the Bishop of Winchester, and the Duke of Somerset.

Bedford.

Vnto England That His King We Had More Winch. For hee ne're spark'd the Armes brandish'd thred not look'd: And our Church-men have plotted ddazled the fhould doe of hee's Church-men had ne're Winchefier a thred. For hee ne're spark'd the Armes brandish'd thred not look'd:

Gloft.

England ne're had a King vntill his time: Vertue he had, deferving to command, His brandish'd Sword did blinde men with his beams, His Armes spred wider then a Dragons Wings: His sparkling Eyes, replent with wrathfull fire, More dazled and droue back his Enemies, Then mid-day Sunne, fierce bent against their faces. What should I say? his Deeds exceed all speech: He ne're lift vp his Hand, but conquer'd. Exe. We mourne in black, why mourn we not in blood? Henry is dead, and never hall resume: Upon a Woodden Coffin we attend, And Deaths dishonourable Victorie, We with our flately presence glorifie, Like Captuies bound to a Triumphant Carre. What shall we curse the Planets of Milhap, That plotted thus our Glories overthrow? Or hall we thinke the subtle-witted French, Coniurers and Sorcerers, that afraid of him, By Magick Verles have contriv'd his end. Wink. He was a King, blest of the King of Kings. Vnto the French, the dreadfull Judgement-Day So dreadfull will not be, as was his fight, The Battles of the Lord of Hofts he fought: The Churches Prayers made him fo prosperous. Gloft. The Church? where is it? Had not Church-men pray'd, His thred of Life had not fo loone decay'd. None doe you like, but an effeminate Prince, Whom like a Schoole-boy you may over-awe. Winch. Glofter, what are we like, thou art Protecor, And lookeft to command the Prince and Realme. Thy Wile is prove, the holdeth thee in awe, More then God or Religious Church-men may.

Gloft. Name not Religion, for thou lou'st the Fleth, And ne're throughout the yeere to Church thou go'ft, Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease the thee Arres, & reft your minds in peace: Let's to the Altar: Heralds want on us.

Winch. In head of Gold, we'll offer vp our Armes, Since Armes auyle not, now that Henry's dead, Posterity await for wretched yeeres, When at their Mothers molified eyes, Babes shall suck, Our Ile be made a Nourish of tall Trees, And none but Women left to wayle the dead. Henry the Fift, thy Ghost I invocate: Proper this Realme, keep it from Cuilll Broyles, Combat with aferue Planets in the Heauens; A farre more glorious Starre thy Soule will make, Then Salute Caesar, or bright——

Enter a Messinger.

Miff. My honourable Lords, health to you all:

Sad tidings bring I to you out of France, Of loifs, of slaughter, and discomfitture: Quyen, Champagne, Rheimes, Orleans, Paris, Guyors, Poictiers, are all quite loft. Bedf. What say'ft thou man, before dead Henry's Coare? Speake softly, or the loffe of those great Townes Will make him burnt his Lead, and rife from death. Gloft. In Paris loft? is Roan yeelded vp? If Henry were recall'd to life againe, Those news would caufe him once more yeeld the Ghost. Exe. How were they loft? what treacherie was vs'd? Miff. No treacherie, but want of Men and Money. Amongst the Souldiers this is muttered, That here you maintaine severall Factions:

And whilst a Field should be dispatich and fought, You are dissapating of your Generals, One would have lingring Warres, with little coft; Another would dye swift, but wanteth Wings: A third thinkes, without expense at all, By gullefull faire words, Peace may be obtaynd. Awake, awake, English Nobilitie, Let not flouthe damme your Honors, new begot; Cropt are the Flower-de-Luces in your Armes Of England Cost, one halfe is cut away. Exe. Were our Taxes wanting to this Funerall, These Tidings would call forth her flowing Tides. Bedf. Me they concerne, Regent I am of France: Give me my fleeced Coat, Ie fight for France. Away with these disgracefull wayling Robes; Wounds I lye in the French, in head of Eyes, To weep their intermitting Mileries.
Enter to them another Messinger.

Mess. Lords view these Letters, full of bad mischief.

France is resolved from the English quite.

Except some petty Townes, of no import.

The Dolphin Charles is crowned King in Rheims:

The Bastard of Orleans with him is joynd:

Reynold, Duke of Anio, doth take his part,

The Duke of Alanfon flyeth to his side. Exit.

Exit. The Dolphin crown'd King! all flye to him!

O whither shall we flye from this reproach?

Glyf. We will not flye, but to our enemies threats.

Bed. If thou be false, Ile fight it out.

Bed. Glycer, why doubtst thou of my forwardnesse?

An Army have I mustered in my thoughts,

Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter another Messinger.

Mess. My gracious Lords, to add to your lament;

Wherewith you now bedew King Henries heare,

I must informe you of a dismal fight,

Bewray the Earl Lord Talbot, and the French.

Whence the Englishmen overcame, let's see?

Mess. O no wherein Lord Talbot was o'rethrown:

The circumsiance Ile tell you more at large.

The tenth of August last, this dreadfullLord,

Retrying from the Siege of Orleans,

Hauling full fast for thousand in his troupe,

By three and twenty thousand of the French

Was round incompaßed, and fet upon:

No leyture had he to enrank his men.

He wanted Piks to fet before his Archers:

In stead whereof, sharpe Stakes pluckt out of Hedges

They pitched in the ground confudly,

To keep the Horfemen off, from breaking in.

More then three hours the fight continued:

Where valiant Talbot, above humane thought,

Enfihed wonders with his Sword and Lance.

Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durft stand him:

Here, there, and every where enrag'd, he flew.

The French exclam'd, The Deuill was in Armes,

All the whole Army fled agaz'd on him.

His Soulards flying his undaunted Spirit,

A Talbot, a Talbot, cry'd out amain.

And rush'd into the Bowells of the Battale.

Here had the Conquest fully beene feald vp,

If Sir John Falstaffe had not play'd the coward.

He being in the Vauvour, plac'd behind,

With purpose to relieve a few his men,

Cowardly fled, not hauing struck one stroke.

Hence grew the greaterr wrack and massacre.

Enclored were they with their Enemies.

A safe Wallace, to win the Dolphins grace,

Thrust Talbot with a Speare into the Rock,

Whom all France, with their chiefe assembled strength,

Durft not preumme to looke once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slaine then? I will fly my selfe,

For living lidy here, in pompse and eafe,

Wilt thou a worthy Leader, wanting ayd,

Vnto his daftard foe-men is betray'd.

Mess. O no, he lives, but is tooke Prisoner,

And Lord Scalz with him, and Lord Hungerford:

Most of the rest slaine or, tooke likewise.

Bed. His Ransome there is none but I shall pay.

Ile hale the Dolphin headlong from his Throne,

His Crowne shall be the Ransome of my friend:

Foure of their Lords He change for one of ours.

Farwell my Masters, to my Taske will I,

Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,

To keepe our great Saint George F dealt withall.

Ten thousand Soulers with me I will take,

Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.

Mess. So you had need, for Orleans is besiegd,

The English Army is groome weake and faint:

The Earl of Salisbury craueth supply,

And hardly keeps his men from mutiny,

Since they do few, watch such a multitude.

Exe. Remember Lords your Oaths to Henry sworne:

Eyther to quell the Dolphin vitterly,

Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I doe remember it, and here take my leave,

To goe about my preparation.

Exit Bedf. Glyf. Ile to the Tower with all the halft I can,

To view th'Artillerie and Munition,

And then I will proclaim ye young Henry King,

Exit Glyf.

Exe. To Eturn will I, where the young King is,

Being ordyn'd his speciall Governor,

And for his safetie there Ile beft deuide.

Exit. Winch. Each hath his Place and Function to attend:

I am left out; for me nothing remains:

But long I will not be lack out of Office.

The King from Elstam I intend to send,

And fit at chiefest Sterne of publique Weale.

Exit.

Sound a flourish.

Enter Charles, Alanfon, and Reignier, marching with Drum and Souldiers.

Charles. Mars his true moving, even as in the Heauens,

So in the Earth, to this day is not knowne.

Late did he shine upon the English side:

Now we are Victors, vpon vs he smiles,

What Townes of any moment, but we haue?

At pleasure here we lye, neere Orleans:

Otherwheres, the familiar English, like pale Ghosts,

Fainting befege vs one houre in a moneth.

All. They want their Porridge, & their fat Bul Becues:

Eyther they must be dyetd like Mules,

And have their Prownder ty'd to their mouths,

Or pitious they will looke, like drowned Mice.

Reignier. Let raye the Siegeworks lie we idle here?

Talbot is taken, whom we ought to loose.

Remains not one but mad-brayn'd Salisbury,

And he may well in fretting spend his galls,

Nor men nor Money hath he to make Warre.

Charles. Sound, sound Aularum, we will riuell on them.

Now for the honour of the forlorn French:

Him I forgive my death, that killett me,

When he fees me goe back one foot, or flye.

Exeunt.

Here Aularum, they are beaten back by the English, with great loss.

Enter Charles, Alanfon, and Reignier.

Charles. Who euer saw the like? what men have I?

Doggis, Cowards, Daftards: I would ne're have fled,

But that they left me midst my Enemies.

Reignier. Salisbury is a desparate Homicide,

He fighteth as one weary of his life.

The other Lords, like Lyons wanting foode,

Doe riuell vs as their hungry prey.

k 3

Alanf. Froy.
Ask me what question thou canst possibly,
And I will answer unpremeditated;
My Courage try by Combat, if thou dar'ft,
And thou shalt find that I exceed my Sea.
Reliue on this, thou shalt be fortunate,
If thou receiuie me for thy Warlike Mate.

Dolph. Thou haft affoimentd me with thy high terms:
Onely this proofe Ie of thy Valour make,
In angle Combat thou shalt buckle with me;
And if thou vanquish't, thy words are true,
Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Panel. I am prepar'd: here is my keene-edg'd Sword,
Deckt with fine Flower-de-Luces on each side,
The which at Touraine, in S. Katherine Church-yard,
Out of a great deal of old Iron, I choie forth.

Dolph. Then come a Gods name, I feare no woman.

Panel. And while I live, Ile ne'ere flye from a man.
Here they fight, and Ioane de Twael overcome.

Dolph. Stay, stay thy hands, thou art an Amazon,
And fightest with the Sword of Deborah.

Panel. Chrifs Mother helps me, else I were too weake.

Dolph. Who e're helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me:
Impatiently I burne with thy desire,
My heart and hands thou halfe at once fubdude'.
Excellent Panel, if thy name be Io.
Let me thy feruant, and not Soueraigne be,
'Tis the French Dolphin futh to thee thus.

Panel. I must not yeald to any rights of Louise,
For my Profession's Sacred from above:
When I have chafted all thy Foes from hence,
Then will I think you upon a recompence.

Dolph. Meane time looke graciously on thy throratne Thrall.

Reignier. My Lord me thinkes is very long in talke.

Dolph. Doubtlesse he shruies this woman to her finock,
Elfe ne'ere could he fo long protract his speech.

Reignier. Shall wee disburfe him, since hee keepes no meane?

Alan. He may meane more then we poor men do know,
These women are fhwed tumulters with their tongues.

Reignier. My Lord, where are you? what doth degrade you on?
Shall we giue o're Orleance, or no?

Panel. Why no, I say: disfratfull Recomings,
Fight till the laft gaspe: Iie be your guard.

Dolph. What thee fayes, Ile confirm: we'll fight it out.

Panel. Affign'd am I to be the English Scourge.
This night the Siege assuredly Ie rayfe:
Expect Saint Marins Summer, Helycyns dayes,
Since I have entre'd into those Warres.
Glory is like a Circle in the Water,
Which never ceaseth to enlarge it selfe,
Till by broad spreading, it difperfe to naught.
With Henries death, the English Circle ends,
Difperfed are the glories it included:
Now am I like that proud Infulting Ship,
Which Cæsar and his fortune burne at once.

Dolph. Was Mahoma inspired with a Duke?
Thou with an Eagle art inspiered then.

Helen, the Mother of Great Conquaters,
Nor yet S. Philip daughters were like thee.

Bright Starre of Penn, faile downe on the Earth,
How may I renoumtly worship thee enough?

Alanfor. Leave off delays, and let vs rayfe the Siege.

Reignier. Wo-
Reignier. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honors, Drive them from Orleancz, and be immortal'd.

Dol. Preteintly wee'll try: come, let's away about it, No Propriet will I trust; it's false prove fail.

Exit.

Enter Gloucester, with his Servant-men.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day, Since Henrie death, I feare there is Conveyance: Where be thee Warders, that they wait not here? Open the Gates, tis Gloucester that calls.
2. Ward. Who er he be, you may not be let in. 1. Man. Villaines, answer you so the Lord Protecor?
1. Ward. The Lord protecor, so we answer him, We doe no otherwise then wee are will'd.

Woodule. What noise is this? what Traytors have wee here?
Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voyce I heare? Open the Gates, here's Gloucester that would enter. Woodule. Haue patience Noble Duke, I may not open, The Cardinal of Winchester forbids:
From him I have expresse commandement, That thou nor none of thine shall be let in. Gloucester. False-hearted Woodule, prissest him more then me? Arrogant Winchelsey, that haughty Prelate, Whom Henrie our late Sovraigne ne'er could brooke? Thou art no friend to God, or to the King: Open the Gates, or Ile flite thee out shortly. Servant-men. Open the Gates unto the Lord Protecor, Or we'll' be flit thee open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protecor at the Tower Gates, Winchester and his men in Tawney Coates.

Winchelsey. How now ambitious Visphair, what means this?
Glo. PieI'd Priest, don't thou command me to be shut out?
Winch. I doe, thou most unprising Preditor, And not Protecor of the King or Realme.
Glo. Stand back thou manifast Conspirator, Thou that contrived it to murther our dead Lord, Thou that guil't Whores Indulgences to finne, Ile cannu thee in thy broad Cardinal Hat, If thou proceed in this thy infortune. Winch. Nay, and thou back, I will not budge a foot: This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain, To Flay thy Brother Abel, if thou wilt.
Glo. I will not flay thee, but Ile drive thee back:
Thy Scarce: robes, as a Childs bearing Cloath, Ile vse, to carry thee out of this place. Winch. Doe what thou darst, I heard thee to thy face.
Glo. What? am I dar'd, and bearded to my face? Draw mon, for all this privileged place, Blew Coats to Tawney Coats. Priest, beware your Beard, I mean to tage it, and to cough you soundly, Vnder my feet I flampe thy Cardinall Hats:

In s'pight of Pope, or dignities of Church, Here by the Cheekes Ile drag thee vp and downe. Winch. Gloster, thou wilt answere this before the Pope.

Glo. Winchester Goose, if a Rope, a Rope, Now beat them hence, why do you let them stay? Then Ile chafe hence, thou Wolfe in Sheepes array. Out Tawney Coates, out Scarlet Hypocrize.

Here Glosters men beat out the Cardinalls men, and enter in the hurly-burly the Mayor of London, and his Officers.

Mayor. Fye Lords, that you bring supreme Magistrates, Thus contumeliously should break the Peace.
Glo. Peace Mayor, thou know'st little of my wrongs: Here's Beacons, that regards nor God nor King, Hath here dislray'd the Tower to his vfe.
Winch. Here's Gloster's, a Foe to Citizens, One that all motions Warre, and never Peace, O're-charging your fine Purse with large Fines; That seeks to overthrow Religion, Because he is Protecor of the Realme; And would have Armour here out of the Tower, To Crown himselfe King, and suppreffe the Prince.
Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows.
Mayor. Here they shew me againe.

Mayor. Naught refts for me, in this tumultuous stife,
But to make open Proclamation.

Come Officer, as lowd as e're thou canst cry: All manner of men, assembled here in Armes this day, against God's Peace and the King, we charge and command you, in his Highness Name, to remove to your several dwelling places, and not to meet, handle, or vse any Sword, Weapon, or Dagger hence-forward, upon paine of death.
Glo. Cardinal, be no breaker of the Law: But we shall meet, and breake our minds at large.
Winch. Gloster, we'll meet to thy conf, be sure: Thy heart-blood I will have for this dayes worke.

Mayor. Ile call for Clubs, if you will not away:
This Cardinal's more haughtie then the Deuill.
Glo. Mayor farewell: thou doo't but what thou may'st.

Winch. ABBOMINABLE Gloster, guard thy Head,
For I intend to haue it ere long.

Mayor. See the Coatt clear'd, and then we will depart.
Good God, these Nobles should such Rameacks bear, I my selfe fight not once in fforty yeeres.

Enter in the Mayster Gunner of Orleancz, and his Boy.

M. Gunner. Sirs, thou know'st how Orleancz is beleag'd, And how the English have the Suburbs wonne.
Boy. Father I know, and oft haue shut at them, How e're unfortunate, I mist'd my ayme.
M. Gunner. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me:
Chiefest Master Gunner am I of this Towne, Something I must doe to procure me graces: The Princes eyfials have inform'd me, How the English in the Suburbs clofe entrench, Went through a secret Gate of Iron Barres, In yonder Tower, to ouer-peere the Citie, And thence discover, how with most advantage They may vex vs with Shot or with Assault, To intercept this inconveniencce, A Peace of Ordinance 'gainst it I haue plac'd,

And
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

And even these three days have I watch'd,
If I could fee them. Now doe thou watch,
For I can stay no longer.
If thou art any, runne and bring me word,
And thou shalt finde me at the Governors. Exit.

Boy. Father, I warrant you, take you no care,
Ile neuer trouble you, if I may fyee them.

Enter Salisbury and Talbot on the Turret.

Salib. Talbot, my life, my joye, againe return'd?
How wert thou handlest, and Prifoner?
Or by what meanes got'st thou to be releas'd?
Difcourse I prechee on this Turrets top.

Talbot. The Earle of Bedford had a Prifoner,
Call'd the braue Lord Pontes de Sartreelaye,
For him was I exchang'd, and ranfon'd.

But with a bafer man of Armes by farre,
Once in contempt they would haue barret't me:
Which I dislauming, kom'd, and cruad death,
Rether then I would be fo pild e'en'md:

In fine, redeem'd I was as I defir'd.

But O, the trecherous Falstaff wounds my heart,
Whom with my bare fiffs I would execute,
If I now had him brought into my power.

Salib. Yet tell'ru thou not, how thou wert enter-taun.

Tal. With scoffes and scornes, and contumelious taunts,
In open Market-place produc't they me,
To be a publique speactacle to all:
Here, say'd they, is the Terror of the French,
The Sear-Crow that affrights our Children fo.
Then broke I from the Officers that led me,
And with my nayles digg'd ftones out of the ground,
To hurle at the beholders of my shame.

My grify conuenance made others flye,
None durft come neere, for feare of fuddaine death.

In Iron Walls they deem'd me not secure:
So great fear of my Name'mongt them were spread,
That they fuppof'd I could rend Barres of Steele,
And fparne in pieces Posts of Aadamant.

Wherefore a guard of choon Shot I had,
That walkt about me every Minute while:
And if I did but firre out of my Bed,
Ready they were to fhoet me to the heart.

Enter the Boy with a Linflock.

Salib. I grieue to heare what tormentes you endur'd,
But we will be reueng'd fullfeyntly.
Now it is Supper time in Orecane:
Here, through this Grate, I count each one,
And view the Frenchmen how they fortifie:
Let vs looke in, the fight will much delight thee:
Sir Thom. Gargraue, and Sir William Glanfaie,
Let me haue your exprefse opinion,
Where is best place to make our Batt'ry next?
Gargraue. I think in the North Gate, for there flands

Lord's.

Glanfaie. And I heare, at the Bulwarke of the Bridge.

Talb. For ought I fee, this Citie must be famifh,
Or with light Skirmifhes eneefled. Here they foot, and Salibury falls downe.

Salib. O Lord have mercy on vs, wretched finners.

Gargraue. O Lord have mercy on me, wofull man.

Talb. What chance is this, that suddeely hath croft vs?
Speake Salibury; at leaff, if thou canft, speake:

How far' appliance, Mirror of all Maritall men?
One of thy Eyes, and thy Cheekes fide struck off?
Accurred Tower, accurred fadall Hand,
That hath contr'd this wofull Tragedie.

In thirtene Battleies, Salibury orecame:

Henry the Fift he first traynd to the Warres.
Whil't any Trumpet did found, or Drum ftruck vp,
His Sword did ne'r leaue tokeing in the field.
Yet liv'd he Salibury; though thy speech doth fayle,
One Eye thou haft to looke to Heauens for grace.
The Sunne with one Eye vieweth all the World.

Heauen be thou gracious to none allue,
If Salibury wants mercy at thy hands.

Beare hence his Body, I wil helpe to bury it.

Sir Thomas Gargraue, haft thou any life?

Speake vnto Talbot, nay, looke vp to him.
Salibury cheere thy Spirit with this comfort,
Thou haft not dye whyles——

He beckens with his hand, and smiles on me:
As who should fay, When I am dead and gone,

Remember to auenge me on the French.

Plantagenet I will, and like thee,
Phy on the Lute, beholding the Townes burne:
Wretchen fall France be onely in my Name.

Here an Alarum, and it Thunders and Lightnes.

What firre is this? what tumult's in the Heauens?

Whence commeth this Alarum, and the noyfe?

Enter a Minifter.

Meff. My Lord, my Lord, the French haue gather'd head.
The Dolphin, with one Ioane de Paneel loynd,
A holy Prophetaeff, new riven vp,
Is come with a great Power, to raife the Siege.

Here Salibury lifteth himfelf vp, and groanes.

Talb. Hear, hear, how dying Salibury doth groane,

It liketh his heart he cannot be reueng'd.

Frenchmen, Ile be a Salibury to you.
Paneel or Puffel, Dolphin or Dog-fish,
Your hearts lie flame out with my Horfes heales,
And make a Quagmire of your mingled brains.

Convey me Salibury into his Tent,
And then we'll try what thefe daffard Frenchmen dare.

Alarum. Exeunt.

Here an Alarum againe, and Talbot parjuft the Dolphin, and driue him: Then enter Ioane de Paneel, driving Englishmen before her.

Then enter Talbot.

Talb. Where is my strength, my honour, and my force?
Our English Troupes retire, I cannot fay them,

A Woman clad in Armour chaffeth them.

Enter Paneel.

Here, here thee comes. Ile haue a bowt with thee:

Dolphin, or Deulis Dam, Ile confire thee:

Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a Witch,

And fraughtway give thy Soule to him thou feru'l.

Talb. Come, come, 'tis onely I that muft difgreace thee.

Here they fight.

Talb. Heauens, can you fuffer Hell fo to proueape?

My breth Ie burnt with burning of my courage,
And from my fhoulders crack my Armes afunder,

But I will chaffe this high-minded Strumpet.

They fight againe.

Paneel. Talbot farwell, thy houre is not yet come,
I must goo Vethall, fhaueance forthe with:

A short Alarum: then enter the Towne with Saudiers.

O're—

436
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

O're-take me if thou canst, I scorn thy strength.
Go se, goe, chere ye thy hungry-starved men,
Helpes Salisbury to make his Testament,
This Day is ours, as many more shall be.

Tali. My thoughts are whirld like a Potten Wheel.
I know not where I am, nor what I doe:
A Witch by fear, or force, like Honestall,
Driues back our troups, and conquer as the lift:
So Bees with smokes, and Doves with noyseful stench,
Are from their Hynes and Houfes driven away.
They call'd vs, for our fircneffe, English Dogges,
Now like to Whelpes, we cryng runne away.

A short Alarum.

Hearke Countremen, yeher now the fight,
Or teare the Lyons out of Englands Coat;
Renounce your Soyle, guie Sheepe in Lyons head:
Sheepe run halfe totrecherous from the Wolfe,
Or Horfe or Oxen from the Leopard,
As you flye from your oft-fuddled flames.

Alarum. Here another Sigrief.
It will not be, reyre into your Trenches?
You all confend into Salisbury death,
For none would strike a Stroke in reuenge.
Panel is entred into Orlanec,
In fitpgh of vs, or ought that we could doe.
O would I were to eye with Salisbury,
The shame hereof, will make me hide my head.

Exit Tali.

Panel. Advance our waing Colours on the Walls,
Refu'd is Orlanec from the English.
Thus Ivne de Panel hath perform'd her word.

Dolp. Disin'd Creature, Alfred's Daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this fuccesse?
Thy promis are like Atonys Garden,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitfull were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious Propheteffe,
Recour'd is the Towne of Orlanec,
More bleffed than we're befal our State.

Reignier. Why ring not out the Bells aloud,
Throughout the Towne?

Dolph. 'Tis Ivne, not we, by whom the day is wonne:
For which, I will diuide my Cowne with her,
And all the Priests and Fryens in my Realme,
Shall in procession ring her Endeffe Laye.
A fateljer Pyramis to her Ile reare,
Then Rhodopie's or Memphis euer was.
In memorie of her, when she is dead,
Her Ahes, in an Vrne more precious
Then the rich-iwel'd Colfer of Darius,
Transported, shall be at high Feltuials
Before the Kings and Queenses of France.
No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
But Ivne de Panel shall be France's Saint.
Come in, and let vs Banquet Royalty,
After this Golden Day of Victoria.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Sergeant of a Band, with two Sentinels.

Ser. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant:
If any noyse or Soldier you perceive
Nee to the walles, by some apparant signe
Let vs haue knowledge at the Court of Guard.

Sert. Sergeant you shall. Thus are spoore Seruitors
(When others sleepe upon their quiet beds)
Contrafin'd to watch in darkneffe, rains, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, and Burgundy, with faling
Ladders: Their Drummes beating a
Dead March.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubtled Burgundy,
By whose approache the Regions of Arrois,
Wallon, and Picardy, are friends to vs:
This happy night, the Frenchmen are secure,
Hauing all day carous'd and banqueteard,
Embrace we then this opportunity,
As fitting left to quittance their decrete,
Contriu'd by Art, and balefull Sorcerie.

Bed. Coward of France, how much he wrongs his fame,
Dispairing of his owne armes fortitude,
To ioyne with Witches, and the helpe of Hell.

Bar. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that Panel whom they terme to pure?

Tal. A Maid, they say.

Bed. A Maid? And be so martall?

Bar. Pray God the frowne not malecullre ere long:
If underneath the Standard of the French
She carry Armour, as the hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them prachle and conderfe with sprits.
God is our Fortreffes, in whofe conquering name
Let vs refolute to scale their flinty bulwarkes.

Bed. Attend brasse Talbot, we will follow thee.

Tal. Not altogether: Better farre I guffe,
That we do make our entrance feueral ways:
That if it chance the one of vs do faile,
The other yet may rife against their force.

Bed. Agreed; Ie to yond corner.

Bar. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his graue.
Now Salisbury, for thee and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appeare
How much in duty, I am bound to both.

Ser. Armes, armes, the enemy doth make affault,

Cry. S. George, A Talbot.

The French leape ore the walles in their sprits. Enter feueral ways, Balfard, Atonys, Reignier, halfes ready, and halfes vready.

Atonys. How now my Lords? what all vreaddie so?

Balf. Vready! I and glad we kapp'd to well.

Reg. 'Twas time (I tow) to wake and leave our beds,
Hearing Alarums at our Chamber doores.

Atonys. Of all exploit since first I follow'd Armes,
Nere heard I of a warlike enterprize

More
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

More venturous, or desperate then this.

Baf. I think this Talbot be a Fiend of Hell.

Reg. If not of Hell, the Heavens fore favour him.

Alien. Here commeth Charles, I maruell how he sped.

Enter Charles and Ioane.

Baf. Tut, holy Ioane was his defencefull Guard.

Charl. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitfull Dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter vs withall,

Make vs partakers of a little gayne,

That now our loffe might be ten times so much?

Ioane. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my Power alike?

Steping or waking, must I still preuayle,

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?

Imprudent Souldiers, had your Watch been good,

This fudden Mischiefne could have faile.

Charl. Duke of Alanslon, this was your default.

That being Captaine of the Watch to Night,

Did looke no better to that weightie Charge.

Alons. Had all your Quarrell beene safely kept,

As that whereof I had the government,

We had not beene thus shamefully surpriz'd.

Baf. Mine was secure.

Reg. And so was mine, my Lord.

Charl. And for my feafe, most part of all this Night

Within her Quarter, and mine owne Precincts,

I was imploied in palling to and fro,

About relieving of the Centinels.

Then how, or which way, should they first breake in?

Ioane. Question (my Lord's) no further of the cafe,

How or which way; 'tis sure they found some place,

But weakeely guarded, where the breach was made:

And now there refts no other shifft but this,

To gather our Souldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd,

And lay new Plat-formes to endameage them.

Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter a Souldier, crying, a Talbot, a Talbot: they flye, leaving their Clothes behind.

Sold. He be fo bold to take what they have left:

The Cry of Talbot vertues me for a Sword,

For I have louden me with many Spoyles,

Ving no other Weapon but his Name.

Exit Talbot.

Enter Alston, Bedford, Burgundie.

Baff. The Day begins to break, and Night is fled,

Whole pitchy Mantine ouer-vay'd the Earth.

Here found Retreat, and ceaze our hot pursuit. Retreat.

Talb. Bring forth the Body of old Salisburgh;

And here advance it in the Market-Place,

The middle Centurie of this curfed Towne.

Now have I pay'd my Vow vnto his Soule;

For every drop of blood was drawnne from him,

There hath at least five Frenchmen dyed to night.

And that hereafter Ages may behold

What ruine happened in revenge of him,

With all their chiefest Pomp and Ceremounie

A Tombe, wherein his Corps shall be interr'd:

Vpon the which, that every one may reade,

Shall be engrav'd the face of Orleancie,

The trecherous manner of his mournfull death,

And what a terror he had beene to France.

But Lords, in all our bloody Misfortunse,

I mule we met not with the Dolphins Grace,

His new-comme Champion, vertuous Ioane of Acre,

Nor any of his false Confederates.

Baff. 'Twere thought Lord Talbot, when the fight began,

Row'd on the fudden from their drowzy Beds,

They did amongst the troupes of armed men,

Leape o're the Walls for refuge in the field.

Burg. My selfe, as farre as I could well dicerne,

For smoake, and dusky vapours of the night,

Am sure I fear'd the Dolphin and his Trull,

When Arme in Arme they both came twifly running,

Like to a payre of lousing Torto-Doues,

That could not live aunder day or night.

After that things are set in order here,

Wee'le follow them with all the power we haue.

Enter a Messinger.

Mes. All hayle, my Lord:

Which of this Princely trayne

Call ye the Warlike Talbot, for his Acts

So much applaued through the Realmes of France?

Talb. Here is the Talbot, who would speake with him?

Mes. The vertuous Lady, Countesse of Orguere,

With modestie admiring thy Renowne,

By me entreats (great Lord) thou wouldest vouchsafe

To visit her poore Cattle where she lies,

That the May boot hath the beheld the man,

Whose glory fills the World with lowd report.

Baff. Is it even so? Nay, then I bee our Warres

Will turne vnto a peacefull Comick sport,

When Ladies craue to be encountered with,

You may not (my Lord) despise her gentle fuit.

Talb. We're trute man then for when a World of men

Could not preuayle with all their Grattories,

Yet hath a Womans kindneffe ouer-rul'd:

And therefore tell her, I returne great thanks,

And in submiuion will attend on her.

Will not your Honours bear me company?

Baff. No, truly, 'tis more then manners will:

And I have heard it fayd, Vnkinden Queues

Are often welcomme when they are gone.

Talb. Well then, alone (since there's no remeide)

I meane to proue this Ladies courtezie.

Come hither Captain, you perceiue my minde.

Exeunt Messengers.

Copr. I doe my Lord, and meane accordingly.

Exit Countesse.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge,

And when you have done so, bring the Reports to me.

Port. Madame, I will.

Exit.

Count. The Plot is layd, if all things fall out right,

I shall as famous be by this exploit,

As Scythian Tanypur by Cyrus death.

Great is the rumour of this dreadful Knight,

And his achivements of no leffe account;

Faine would mine eyes be witnesse with mine cares,

To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messinger and Talbot.

Mes. Madame, agreeing as your Ladyship desir'd,

By Mesage cruell, so is Lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome: what is this the man?

Mes. Madame, it is.

Count. Is this the Scourage of France?

Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad?

That with his Name the Mother fill their Babes?

I fee Report is fabulous and false.
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong knit Limbs.
Alas, this is Child, a silly Dwarfe:
It cannot be, this weake and wretched shrimp
Should strike such terror to his Enemies.

Talb. Madame, I have beene bold to trouble you:
But since your Ladyship is not at leasure,
I hope some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now?
Goe aike him, whither he goes.

Meff. Stay my Lord Talbot, for my Lady craves,
To know the cause of your abrupt departure?

Talb. Marry, for that she's in a wrong beleefe,
I goe to certificate her Talbot's here.

Enter Parter with Keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou Prisoner.

Talb. Prisoner? to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirffe Lord:
And for that cause I trau'd thee to my Houfe.
To thinke, that you have ought but Talbot's shadow,
Whereon to preface thy fovereignty.

Count. Why? art not thou the man?

Talb. I am indeede.

Count. Then haue I fubfiance too.

Talb. No, no, I am but shadow of my felfe:
You are decei'd, my fubfance is not here;
For what you fee, is but the fmalleft part,
And leaff proportion ofHumanitie:
I tell you Madame, were the whole Frame here,
It is of fuch a fpacious loftie pitch,
Your boiler were not fufficient to contain't.

Count. This is a Riddling Merchant for the nonce,
He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can they contrarieties agree?

Winds the Horns, Drammes brife up,a Peale
Of Ordinances: Enter Soldiours.

How say you Madame? are you now perfwaded,
That Talbot is but shadow of himfelfe? Threfe is his fubfance,finefews,armes,and ftrength,
With which he yoakeft your rebellious Neckes,
Razeth your Cities, and subdues your Townes,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot, pardon my abufe,
I finde thou art no leffe then Fame hath bruited,
And more then may be gathered by thy fhape.
Let my prefumption not prouoke thy wrath,
For I am forry, that with reverence
I did not entertaine thee as thou art.

Talb. Be not difmay'd, faire Lady, nor milconfier
The minde of Talbot, as you did mistake
The outward compofition of his body,
What you have done, hath confounded me:
Nor other fatisfaction doe I crave,

But onely with your patience,that we may
Taffe of your Wine, and fee what Cates you haue,
For Soulers fomackes alwais ferue them well.

Count. With all my heart, and think me honored,
To feaft so great a Warrior in my Houfe.

Exeunt.

Enter Richard Plantagenet, Warwick, Somerfet,
Pools, and others.

York. Great Lords and Gentlemen,
What means this silence?
Dare no man anfwer in a Cafe of Truth?

Suff. Within the Temple Hill we were too low,
The Garden here is more convenient.

York. Then fay at once, if I maintaine'th the Truth:
Or eile was wrangling Somerfet in th'error?

Suff. Faith I have beene a Tranuit in the Law,
And never yet could frame my will to it,
And therefore frame the Law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwicke, then between the War. Between two Hawks, which flies the higher pitch,
Between two Dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,
Between two Blades, which bears the better temper,
Between two Horfes, which doth beare him beft,
Between two Girles, which hath the merrieft eye,
I have perhaps some fomble spirit of Judgment:
But in thefe nice harpe Quiletts of the Law,
Good faith I am no wifer then a Daw.

York. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:
The truth appears fo naked on my fide,
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my fide it is fo well apparell'd,
So clear, fo shining, and fo euident,
That it will gimmer through a blind-man's eye.

York. Since you are tongue-ty'd, and fo loth to speake,
In dumbe significants proclayme your thoughts:
Let him that is a true-borne Gentleman,
And fands upon the honor of his birth,
If he fuppofe that I have pleaded truth,
From off this Breyer pluck a white Rofe with me.

Som. Let him that is no Coward, nor no Flatterer,
But dare maintaine the parte of the truth,
Pluck a red Rofe from off this Thorne with me.

War. I love no Colours: and without all colour
Of base infaining flatterie,
I pluck this white Rofe with Plantagenet.

Suff. I pluck this red Rofe, with young Somerfet,
And fay withall, I thinke he held the right.

Vernon. Stay Lords and Gentlemen, and pluck no more
Till you conclude, that he vpon whole fide
The fewell Rofes are cropt from the Tree,
Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good Mafter Vernon, it is well objected:
If I have fewell, I fubcribe in silence.

York. And I.

Vernon. Then for the truth, and plainneffe of the Cafe,
I pluck this pale and Malden Blosfome here,
Guing my Verdiick on the white Rofe side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,
Leaf bleeding, you doe paint the white Rofe red,
And fall on my fide so against your will,

Vernon. If I, my Lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be Surgeon to my hart,
And keepe me on the fide where till I am.

Som. Well, well, come on, who elfe?

Lawyer. Vn-
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

Lawyer. Vnleffe my Studie and my Booke be falle,
The argument you held, was wrong in you: In figne whereof, I pluck a white Rofe too.
Yorke. Now Somerfet, where is your argument? Som. Here in my Scabard, meditating, that Shall dye your white Rofe in a bloody red. York. Meane time your cheekes do counterfeit our Roses: For pale they look to feare, as witnesing The truth on our fide. Som. No Plantagenet: 'Tis not for feare, but anger, that thy cheekes Blush for pure fhame, to counterfeit our Roses, And yet thy tongue will not confesse thy error. Yorke. Hath not thy Rofe a Canker? Somerfet? Som. Hath not thy Rofe a Thorne, Plantagenet? Yorke. I, harpe and piercing to maintaine his truth, Whiles thy confumming Canker eates his falfehood. Som. Well, Ile find friends to weare my bleeding Roses, That shall maintaine what I have faid is true, Whereof the Purpofes are not to be fene. York. Now by this Maiden Bionflone in my hand, I fcorne thee and thy fiffion, peuffu Boy. Suff. Turne not thy fcornes this way, Plantagenet. York. Proud Poole, I will, and fcorne both him and thee. Som. Ile fcorne my part thereof into thy throat. Som. Away, away, good William de la Poole, We grace the Yeoman, by converfing with him. Warw. Now by Gods will thou wrong him, Somerfet: His Grandfather was Lyuell Duke of Clarence, Third Sonne to the third Edward King of England: Spring Creaflefe Yeomen from fo deep a Root? Yorke. He beares him on the place’s Priviledge, Or durft not for his crauen heart fay thus.

Som. By him that made me, Ile maintaine my words On any Plot of Ground in Chriftenome. Was not thy Father, Richard, Earle of Cambridge, For Trefaon executed in our late Kings dayes? And by his Trefaon, band’t not thou attainted, Corrupted, and exempt from ancient Gentry? His Trefaon yet lives guiltie in thy blood, And till thou be refor’d, thou art a Yeoman. Yorke. My Father was attainted, not attainted, Condemned to dye for Trefaon, but no Traitor: And that I proue on better men then Somerfet, Were growing time once ripened to my will. For your partake Poole, and you your felle, Ile note you in my Book of Memorie, To scourge you for this apprehension: Looke to it well, and fay you are well warnd.

Som. Ah, thou shalt finde vs ready for thee fill: And know vs by thofe Colours for thy Foes, For thefes, my friends in flight of thee hall ware. Yorke. And by my Soul, this pale and angry Rofe, As Cognizance of my blood-drinking hate, Will I for ever, and my Fifeong ware, Vanfill it wither with me to my Graue, Or flourifh to the height of my Degree. Suff. Goe forward, and be choof’d with thy ambition: And to forfalf, vanfill I meet thee next. Exit. Som. Hauce with thee Poole: Farwell ambitious Rich. " Exeitu Yorke. How I am brau’d, and muft perforce endure it. Warm. This blot that they obfet against your Houfe, Shall be whipt out in the next Parliament, Call’d for the Truce of Winchester and Gloucester: And if thou be not then created York, I will not live to be accounted Warrice. Meane time, in signal of my love to thee, Against proud Somerfet, and William Poole, Will I vpon thy partie weare this Rofe. And here I propheticke: this brawle to day, Growne to this faction in the Temple Garden, Shall fent betwene the Red-Rofe and the White, A thousand Soules to Death and deadly Night. Yorke. Good Mafter Vernon, I am bound to you, That you on my behalfe would pluck a Flower. Ver. In your behalfe fill will I weare the fame, Lawyer. And fo will I. Yorke. Thankes gentle. Come, let vs foure to Dinner: I dare fay, This Quarrell will drinke Blood another day. Exeitu

Enter Mortimer, brought in a Choyre, and Laylors.

Mort. Kind Keepers of my weake decaying Age, Let dying Mortimer here reft himfelfe. Even like a man new hiled from the Wrack, So fare my Limbes with long Imprifonment: And that’s great Locks, the Purpulfants of death, Neftor-like aged, in an Age of Care, Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer. Thofe Eyes, like Lampes, whose waiting Oyle is fpent, Wax dimme, as drawing to their Extinct. Weake Shoulders, over-borne with burthening Griefe, And pyth-leffe Armes, like to a withered Vine, That drope his fappe-leffe Branches to the ground. Yet are thofe Feet, whose strength-leffe flay is numm, (Vnable to support this Lumpe of Clay) Swift-winged with defire to get a Graue, As witting I no other comfort haue. But tell me, Keeper, will my Nephew come? Keeper. Richard Plantagenet, my Lord, will come: We fent unto the Temple, unto his Chamber, And anfwer was return’d, that he will come. Mort. Enough, my Soul fhall then be fatisfied. Poore Gentleman, his wrong doth equal mine. Since Henry Monmouth firft began to reigne, Before whose Glory I was great in Armes, This loathfome fefucation haue I had: And even since then, hath Richard of the obfcur’d, Depriva’d of Honor and Inheritance. But now, the Arbitrator of Defpaires, luft Death, kinde Vmpire of mens milieires, With fweet enlargment doth diflimile me hence: I would his troubles likewife were expir’d, That to he might recouer what was loft. Exit. Enter Richard.

Keeper. My Lord, your louing Nephew now is come. Mort. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come? Rich. I, Noble Yackle, thus ignobly vnd’r, Your Nephew, late defpif’d Richard, cometh. Mort. Direct mine Armes, I may embrace his Neck, And in his Bofome spend my latter gafe. Oh tell me when my Lippes doe touch his Cheekes, That I may kindly give one fainting Kifke. And now declare sweet Stem from Yorke great Stock, Why didft thou fay of late thou wert defpis’d?

Rich. First
Rich. First, leave thine aged Back against mine Arme, And in that eafe, Ile tell thee my Difeafe.
This day in argument upon a Cafe,
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me: Among which tearme, he vn'd his fudifie tongue, And did upbray me with my Fathers death; Which oblique fte bars before my tongue, Elfe with the like I had requit him.
Therefore good Vnkle, for my Fathers fake, In honor of a true Plantagenet, And for Alliance fake, declare the caufe My Father, Earle of Cambridge, loft his Head.

Mort. That caufe (fairo Nephew) that imprifon'd me, And hath detayn'd me all my flowring Youth, Within a loathfome Dungeon, there to pyne, Was curfed Infrument of his deceafe.

Rich. Difcourcer more at large what caufe that was, For I am ignorant, and cannot gueffe.

Mort. I will, if that my fading breath permit, And Death approach not, ere my Tale be done. Henry the Fourth, Grandfather to this King, Depoyd his Nephew Richard, Edwards Sonne, The first begotten, and the lawfull Heire Of Edward King, the Third of that Defcent. During whose Reigne, the Percys of the North, Finding his Viparition moit vnift, Endeavor'd his advancement to the Throne. The reason mou'd thefe Warlike Lords to this, Was, for that (young Richard thus remou'd, Leaving no Heire begotten of his Body) I was the next by Birth and Parentage: For by my Mother, I derived am From Lionel Duke of Clarence, third Sonne To King Edward the Third; where hee, From Iohn of Gaunt doth bring his Pedigree, Being yet fourth of that Heroick Lyne.
But marke: as in this Hughtie great attempt, They laboured, to plant the rightfull Heire, I loft my Libertie, and they their Lues.
Long after this, when Henry the Fift (Succeeding his Father Bullingbrookes) did reigne; Thy Father, Earle of Cambridge, then deri'd From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of Yorke, Marrying my Sifer, that thy Mother was; Again, in pitty of my hard diffreffe, Leueld an Army, weening to redeeme, And haue infall'd me in the Diadem: But as the reft, fo fell that Noble Earle, And was behead'd. Thus the Meritours, In whom the Title refett, were forfpref.

Rich. Of which, my Lord, your Honor is the laft.

Mort. True; and thou feel's, that I no liffe haue, And that my fainting words doe warrant death: Thou art my Heire; the reft, I wish thee gather: But yet be wary in thy fudifie care.

Rich. Thy grave admonifhments preuyale with me: But yet me thinks, my Fathers execution Was nothing leffe then bloody Tyranny.

Mort. With silence, Nephew, be thou pollidick, Strong fixed is the Houfe of Lancaster, And like a Mountain, not to be remou'd. But now thy Vnkle is removing hence, As Princes doe their Courts, when they are cloy'd With long continuance in a fetted place. Rich. O Vnkle, would fome part of my young yeeres Might but redeeme the paffage of your Age.

Mort. Thou don't then wrong me, as I flaughterer doth, Which gluesth many Wounds, when one will kill. Mourne not, except thou forrow for my good, Onely glue order for my Funerall. And fo farewell, and fare be all thy hopes, And propenour be thy Life in Peace and Warre. Dyes. Rich. And Peace, no Warre, befall thy parting Soule.
In Prifon haft thou spent a Pilgrimage, And like a Hermite ouer-paft thy daies. Well, I will locke his Counsell in my Bref, And what I doe imagine, let that refult. Keepers conuey him hence, and I my felfe Will fee his Buryall better then his Life. Here dyes the ducike Torch of Mortimer, Choak't with Ambition of the meaner fort, And for thofe Wrongs, thofe bitter Injuries, Which Somerset hath offer'd to his Houfe, I doubt not, but with Honor to reoffre. And therefore hafe I to the Parliament, Eyther to be reoffred to my Blood, Or make my will th'advantage of my good.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Flourish. Enter King, Execter, Glosfer, Winchefter, Warwick, Somerset, Suffolk, Richard Plantagenet. Glosfer offers to put up a Bill, Winchefter fatches it, tears it.

Winch. Can't thoe with deede premeditated Lines? With written Pamphlets, fteadilu deuis'd? Humfrey of Glosfer, if thoe can't accufe, Or ought intend't to lay vnto my charge, Doe it without invention, suddenly, As I with fudden, and extemporall speech, Purpofe to anwer what thoe can't obiec.
Glos. Premptuous Prieft, this place comands my patience, Or thou fhould't finde thou haft dis-honor'd me. Thinke not, although in Writing I prefer'd The manner of thy vile outrageous Crymes, That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able Urbariom to rehearse the Methode of my Penne. No Prelate, fuch is thy audacius wickedneffe, Thy lewd, perfiferous, and diftantious pranks, As very Infants prattlie of thy pride. Thou art a moft pretigious Viceroy. Froward by nature, Enemy to Peace, Lafficious, wanton, more then well becomes A man of thy Profellion, and Degree.
And for thy Treacherie, what's more manifeft? In that thou lay'd'st a Trap to take my Life, As well at London Bridge, as at the Tower. Beside, I feare me, if thy thoughts were sifted, The King, thy Soueraigne, is not quite exempt From enulious mallice of thy dwelling heart.

Winch. Glosfer, I doe dete thee. Lords vouchsafe To giue me hearing what I hall reply. If I were couetous, ambitious, or peruerse, As he will haue me: how am I to poore? Or how hap's it, I feake not to advance Or raye my felle? but kepe my wonted Calling, And for Differtation, who prefereth Peace More then I doe? except I be prou'd? No, my good Lords, it is not that offends, It is not that, that hath incendi'd the Duke: It is because no one should lye but hee, No one, but hee, should be about the King; And that engenders Thunder in his breath;
And makes him rore thefe Accufations forth.
But he fhall know I am as good.
Gloft. As good?
Thou Baffard of my Grandfather.
Winch. 1, Lordy Sir: for what are you, I pray,
But one imperious in another fhone?
Gloft. Am I not Protecor, favvie Priet?
Winch. And am not I a Prelate of the Church?
Gloft. Yes, as an Out-law in a Captile keepes,
And vieth it, to patronage his Theft.
Winch. Vnveuent Glofter.
Gloft. Thou art reverent,
Touchy thy Spiritual Function, not thy Life.
Winch. Rome halle remedie this.
Warw. Roame thither then.
My Lord, it were your duty to forbeare.
Som. I, fee the Bishop be not ouer-horne.
Me thinkes my Lord fhould be Religious,
And know the Office that belongs to fuch.
Warw. Me thinkes his Hoodship fhould be humbler,
It finteth not a Prelate fo to plead.
Som. Yes, when his holy State is toucht fo neere.
Warw. State holy, or vnknownd, what of that?
Is not his Grace Protecor to the King?
Rich. Plantagenet I fee muft hold his tongue,
Leaff it be fihind, Speake Sirrha when you fhould:
Mulf your hold Verfift enter talke with Lords?
Elfe would I haue a fling at Winchefter.
King. Vnckles of Glofter, and of Winchefter,
The speecial Watch-men of our English Wesle,
I would preuale, if Prayers might preuale,
To ioyne your hearts in love and smile.
Oh, what a Scandal is it to our Crowne,
That two fuch Noble Peeres as ye fhould iarre?
Beleeue me,Lords, my tender yeares can tell,
Ciull difffenion is a vipersome Worme,
That gnawes the Bowels of the Common-wealth.
A myfe within, Downe with the Tender-Cotts.
King. What tumult this?
Warw. An Vprore, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the Bishops men.
A myfe againe, Stones, Stones.

Enter Major.
Maior. Oh my good Lords, and vertuous Henry,
Pitty the Citie of London, pitty vs:
The Bishop, and the Duke of Glofters men,
Forbidden late to carry any Weapon,
Have fill'd their Pocket full of poible fones:
And banding themelues in contrary parts,
Doe pelt fo faft at one anothers Pate,
That many have their giddy braynes knocpt out:
Our Windows are broke downe in every Street,
And we, for feare, compell'd to shut our Shops.

Enter in skirmife with bloody Pates.
King. We charge you, on allegiance to our felfe,
To hold your flaughtring hands, and keepe the Peace:
Pray Vnckle Glofter mitigate this strife.
1. Seruing. Nay, if we be forbidden Stones, wee'll fall to it with our Teeth,
2. Seruing. Doe what ye dare, we are as resolute.
Skirmife againe.

Gloft. You of my household, leave this pecuill broyle,
And let this vnaccustom'd ftight alide.

3. Seru. My Lord, we know your Grace to be a man
Hulate, and vpright; and for your Royal Birth,
Inferior to none, but to his Maiefte:
And ere that we will fuffer fuch a Prince,
So knide a Father of the Common-wealths,
To be driuffed by an Inke-horne Mates,
Wee and our Wives and Children all will fight,
And have our bodies flaughtred by thy foes.
1. Seru. I, and the very parings of our Nayles
Shall pitch a Field when we are dead.

Gloft. Stay, Ray, I fay:
And if you loue me, as you fay you doe,
Let me perfuade you to forbeare a while.
King. Oh, how this difcord doth affift my Soule.
Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My fighes and tears, and will not once reflent
Who fhould be pitifull, if you be not?
Or who fhould inudy to prefere a Peace,
If holy Church-men take delight in broyles?
Warw. Yield my Lord Protecor,yeeld Winchefter,
Except you meane with outfide Repule.
To fay your Soueraigne, and deftroy the Realme.
You see what Milchife, and what Murther too,
Hath beene enacted through your enmitie:
Then be at peace, except ye fhirt for blood.
Winch. He fhall submit, or I will never yield.
Gloft. Compaffion on the King commands me flope,
Or I would fee his heart out, ere the Priet
Shoue euer get that priuilege of me.
Warw. Behold my Lord of Winchefter, the Duke
Hath banifhit moode discontented fury,
As by his smoothed Browes it doth appear:
Why looke you still fo ferne, and tragical?
Gloft. Here Winchefter, I offer thee my Hand.
King. Fie Vnckle Baeftord, I have heard you preach,
That Mallice was a great and grievous finne:
And will not you maintaine the thing you teach?
But proue a chief offender in the fame.
Warw. Sweet King: the Bishop hath a kindly gyrd:
For fame my Lord of Winchefter reftent;
What, fhall a Child infruct you what to doe?
Winch. Well, Duke of Glofter, I will yeeld to thee
Looe for thy Love, and hand for hand I giue.
Gloft. I, but I feare with a hollow Heart.
See here my Friends and loving Countreymen,
This token ferueth for a Flagg of Truce,
Bewiit our felues, and all our followers:
So helpe me God, as I difemble not,
Winch. So helpe me God, as I intend it not.
King. Oh louing Vnckle, kinde Duke of Glofter,
How iouyfull am I made by this Contradft,
Away my Malters, trouble vs no more,
But ioyne in friendship, as your Lords have done.
1. Seru. Content, Lie to the Surgeons.
2. Seru. And fo will I.
3. Seru. And I will see what Phyfick the Tauerne af forde.

Warw. Accept this Scrowle, moft gracious Soueraigne,
Which in the Right of Richard Plantagenet,
We do exhbit to your Maiefte.
Gloft. Well vrg'd, my Lord of Warwick: for sweet Prince,
And if your Grace marke every circumftance,
You have great reafon to doe Richard right,
Efppecially for those occafions
At Eltom Place I told your Maiefte,

King. And
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Knocks. Our Sacks shall be a mesne to sack the City,
And we be Lords and Rulers over Roan,
Therefore wee'll knock.

Watch. Och la.
Pucell. Psalms au pourre gens de France,
Poor Market folks that come to sell their Corne,
Watch. Enter, goe in, the Market Bell is rung.
Pucell. Now Roan, Ile shake thy Bulwarkes to the ground.

Enter Charles, Basfard, Athern.

Charles. Saint Dennis bleffe this happy Stratageme,
And once againe wee'll sleepe secure in Roan.

Basfard. Here entred Pucell, and her Fratillants:
Now she is there, how will she speke?
Here is the bell and fafel passage in,
Reig. By througout a Torch from yonder Tower,
Which once difcern'd, fhwes that her meaning is,
No way to that for weaknesse which she entred.

Enter PucellOn the top, througout a Torch burning.
Pucell. Behold, this is the happy Wedding Torch,
That loyneth Roan into her Countreymen,
But burning fallall to the Talbonites.

Basfard. See Noble Charles the Beacon of our friend,
The burning Torch in yonder Turret flands.

Charles. Now shune it like a Commet of Reuenge,
A Prophet to the fall of all our Foes.

Reig. Deferre no time, delays have dangerous ends,
Enter and cry, the Dolphin, presently,
And then doe execution on the Watch.

Alarum.

An Alarum. Talbot in an Excursion.

Talb. France, thou shalt rue this Treason with thy teares,
If Talbot but furuiue thy Trecherie.
Pucell that Witch, that damned Sorceresse,
Hath wrought this Hellish Michiefe vnawares,
That hardly we expat the Pride of France.

Enter Talbot and Burgonie without : within, Pucell,
Charles, Basfard, and Reignier on the Wells.
Pucell. God morrow Gallants, want ye Corn for Bread?
I thinke the Duke of Burgonie will fall,
Before hee be againe at such a rate.

Twas full of Damell; do you like the tale?
Burg. Scoffe on vile Fiend, and chameleffe Curtizan,
I trufc ere long to chace thee with thine owne,
And make thee curse the Harueft of that Corne.

Charles. Your Grace may flarue (perhaps) before that time.

Bedf. Oh let no words, but deedes, renuege this Treason.
Pucell. What will you doe, good gray-beird?
Broke a Launce, and runne a-Tilt at Death,
Within a Chayre.

Talb. Foure Fiend of France, and Hug of all depight, Incompa'id with thy luffful Paramour,
Becomes it thee to tunt his villain Age,
And twit with Cowardife a man halfe dead?
Damfell, Ile have a bowe with you againe,
Or elle let Talbot perih with this flame.
Pucell. Are ye in hot, Sir; but yet Pucell hold thy peace,
If Talbot doe but Thunder, Raine will follow.

They whisper together in council.

God speed the Parliament: who shall be the Speaker ?

Scena Secunda.

Enter Pucell dignify'd, with faire Souldiers with Sacks upon their backs.
Pucell. These are the Cite Gates, the Gates of Roan,
Through which our Pollicy muu make a breach.
Take heed, be wary how you place your words,
Talk like the vulgar fort of Market men,
That come to gather Money for their Corne.
If we haue entrance, as I hope we shaue,
And that we finde the thriftfull Watch but weak,
Ile by a signe giue notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dolphin may encounter them.

12 Talb. Dare
Tailb. Dare ye come forth, and meet vs in the field?

Pucell. Believe your Lordship takes vs then for fools,

To try if that our owne be ours, or no.

Tailb. I spake not to that rauyling Hecate,

But vnto thee Allanfon, and the rest.

Will ye, like Souldiers, come and fight it out?

Allanfon, Seginior no.

Tailb. Seignior hang: bafe Muletern of France,

Like Peant foot-Boyes doe they kepe the Walls,

And dare not take vp Armes, like Gentlemen.

Pucell. Away Captaines, let's get vs from the Walls,

For Talbot means no goodniffe by his Lookes.

God buy my Lord, we came but to tell you

That wee are here.

Tailb. And there will we be too, ere it be long,

Or else reproach be Talbots greatest fame.

Vow Burgonie, by honor of thy Housie,

Pricket on by publike Wrongs sustain'd in France,

Either to get the Towne againe, or dye,

And I, as faire as Englifh Henry lives,

As his father here was Conqueror;

As faire as in this late betrayal Towne,

Great Cordelions Heart was buryed;

So fure I wars, to get the Towne, or dye.

Burgonie. My Vows are equal partners with thy Vowes.

Tailb. But ere we goe, regard this dying Prince,

The valiant Duke of Bedford: Come my Lord,

We will betowML you in some better place,

Fitter for fixkene, and for craife age.

Bedford. Lord Talbot, doe not fo disdionate me:

Here will I fit, before the Walls of Roan,

And will be parteier of your woe or woe.

Burgonie.Couragious Bedford, let vs now permude you:

Bedford. Not to be gone from hence: for once I read,

That rout Pedragus, in his Letter fick,

Came to the field, and vanquifhed his foes.

Me thinkes I should reuicte the Souldiers hearts,

Because I euer found them as my selfe.

Tailb. Vinduanted spirit in a dying breath,

Then be it so: Heaven's keepes old Bedford safe,

And now no more adoe, braue Burgonie,

But gather we our Forces out of hand,

And set vpon our boating Enemy.

Tailb. Enter Sir John Falstaff, and a Captaine.

Cape. Whither away Sir John Falstaff, in such haste?

Falstaff. Whither away? to faue my felfe by flight,

That rout Pedragus, in his Leter fick,

Came to the field, and vanquifhed his foes.

Me thinkes I should reuicte the Souldiers hearts,

Because I euer found them as my selfe.

Cape. What? will you flye, and leafe Lord Talbot?

Falstaff. I, all the Talbots in the World, to faue my life.

Cape. Cowardly Knight, ill fortune follow thee.

Retreat.

Falstaff. Sir John Falstaff, depart when Hauen pleafe,

For I haue feene our Enemies overthrow.

What is the truf or strength of foolifh man?

They that of late were daring with their loofer,

Are glad and faine by flight to faue themselves.

Bedford dye, and is carryed in by two in his Chaire.

An Alarum. Enter Talbot, Burgonie, and the reft.

Tailb. Loof, and recovered in a day againe,

This is a double Honor, Burgonie:

Yet Heavenes haue glory for this Victorie.

Burgonie. Warlike and Marchall Talbot, Burgonie

Indhines thee in his heart, and there eereets

Thy noble Deeds, as Valors Monuments.

Tailb. Thanks gentle Duke: but where is Pucell now?

I thinke her old Familiar is asleep.

Now where's the Baftards braves, and Charles his glikes?

What all amr? Roan hangs her head for griefe,

That such a valiant Company are fled.

Now will we take some order in the Towne,

Placing therein some expert Officers,

And then depart to Paris, to the Kings,

For there young Henry with his Nobles lye.

Burgonie. What wills Lord Talbot, pleaseth Burgonie.

Tailb. But yet before we goe, let's not forget

The Noble Duke of Bedford, late decess'd,

But fee his Exequies fulfill'd in Roan.

A brauer Souldier never couched Launce,

A gentler Heart did never sway in Court.

But Kings and mightieft Potentates muft die,

For that's the end of humane misfort.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Charles, Baftard, Allanfon, Pucell.

Pucell. Dismay not (Princes) at this accident,

Nor grieve that Roan is fo recovered:

Care is no cure, but rather corrouifue,

For things that are not to be remedy'd.

Let frantike Talbot triumph for a while,

And like a Peacock sweep his tylie,

Wee'le pull his Plumes, and take away his Trayne,

If Dolphin and the reft will be rule'd.

Charles. We have beene guided by thee hitherto,

And of thy Cunning had no diffidence,

One Golden Foyle shall never breed disfract.

Baftard. Search out thy wit for secret pollicies,

And we will make thee famous through the World.

Alarum. Wee'le fet thy Statue in some holy place,

And haue thee reuerence't like a bleffed Saint,

Employ thee then, sweet Virgin, for our good.

Pucell. Then thus it must be, this doth Iane deuise:

By faire perfwafions, mixt with fogered words,

We will entice the Duke of Burgonie

To leaue the Talbot, and to follow vs.

Charles. I marrie Sweeting, if we could doe that,

France were no place to our Armyes Warriors,

Nor should that Nation boaft it so with vs,

But be extirped from our Provinces.

Alarum. For ever should they be expuls'd from France,

And not haue Title of an Earleome here.

Pucell. Your Honours shall percieve how I will work,

To bring this matter to the wilhed end.

Drumme sounds a faire off.

Hearke, by the sound of Drumme you may perceve

Their Powers are marching vnto Paris-ward.

Here found an English March.

There goes the Talbot, with his Colours fprad,

And all the Troupes of English after him.

French
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

French March.
Now in the Reneward comes the Duke and his;
Fortune in favour makes him lagge behinde.
Summon a Parley, we will talk with him.

Trumpets sound a Parley.

Charles. A Parley with the Duke of Burgonie.

Burg. Who cries a Parley with the Burgonie?

Pucell. The Prince of Charles of France, thy Countryman.

Charles. Spake Pucell, and enchaunt him with thy words.

Pucell. Braue Burgonie, undoubted hope of France,
Stay, let thy humble Hand-maid speak to thee.

Burg. Speake on, but be not ouer-rudisco.

Pucell. Look on thy Country, look on fertile France,
And see the Cities and the Townes deface:
By wafting Ruine of the cruel Foe,
As lookes the Mother on her lowly Babe.
When Death doth clofe his tender-dying Eyes,
See, for the pining Malady of France,
Bend the Wounds, the morr vitall Wounds,
Which thou ty felfe haft gien her wofull Breit.
Oh turne thy edged Sword another way,
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that helpe:
One drop of Blood drawn out from thy Countries Bolome,
Should grace thee more then fireneames of foraine gore.
Returne thee therefore with a fwole of Tears,
And walk away thy Countries layned Spots.

Burg. Either she hath bewitcht me with her words,
Or Nature makes me suddienely relent.

Pucell. Behooves, all French and France exclames on thee,
Doubling thy Birth and lawfull Progenie,
Who loyn't thou with, but with a Lordly Nation,
That will not tru thoe, but for profits sake?
When Talbot hath set footing once in France,
And fahion'd thee that Instrumen of Ill,
Who then, but English Henry, will be Lord,
And thou be tru out, like a Fugitive?
Call we to mind, and mark: but this for profe:
Was not the Duke of Orleans thy Foe?
And was he not in England Prizoner?
But when they heard he was thine Enemy,
They fet him free, without his Ransome pay'd,
In fipht of Burgonie and all his friends.

See then, thou fyght at against thy Counryme-men,
And loyn't with them will be thy flaughter-men.
Come, come, returne; returne thou wandering Lord,
Charles and the refte will take thee in their armes.

Burg. I am vanquished:
These haughty worthes of hers
Hau'e battred me like roaring Cannon-shot,
And made me almoft yeild upon my knees.
Forguest mee Counryme-men, and swee Counryme-men:
And Lords accept this heartie kind embraice.
My Forces and my Power of Men are yours.
So firwell Talbot, Ile no longer tru thee.

Pucell. Done like a Frenchman: turne and turne againe.

Charles. Welcome braue Duke, thy friendship makes vs freth.

Ballard. And doth beget new Courage in our Breasts.

Mans. Pucell hath brauely play'd her part in this,
And doth deferve a Coronet of Gold,

Charles. Now let vs on, my Lords,
And joyn our Powers,
And seeke how we may prejudice the Foe.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the King, Gloucester, Winchester, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Warwick, Exeter: To them, with his Soldiors, Talbot.

Talb. My gracious Prince, and honorable Peeres,
Hearing of your arrivaill in this Realm,
I have a while gien Truce vnto my Warres,
To doe my dutie to my Soueraigne.
In signe whereof, this Arme, that hath reclaimer'd
To your obedience, fiftte Fortresses,
Twelve Cities, and fefen walled Townes of strength,
Before five hundred Prizoners of estate;
Lets fall his Sword before your Highnesse feet:
And with submisfile loyalty of heart
Acribites the Glory of his Conquet got,
First to my God, and next vnto your Grace.

King. Is this the Lord Talbot, Vnkle Gloucester,
That hath so long beene resident in France?

Glou. Yes, if it please your Maiestie, my Liege.

King. Welcome braue Captaine, and victorious Lord:
When I was young (as yet I am not old)
I doe remember how my Father feld,
A f龙头 Champion never handled Sword.
Long since we were refolved of your truth,
Your faithfull feruice, and your toyle in Warre:
Yet never haue you tafted our Reward,
Or beeene reguerdon'd with fo much as Thanks,
Becaufe till now, we never faw your face.
Therefore fand vp, and for these good deferts,
We here create you Earle of Shrewsbury,
And in our Coronation take your place.

Maner Vernon and Baffet.

Vern. Now Sir, to you that were fo hot at Sea,
Dilgracing of thee Colours that I weare,
In honor of my Noble Lord of York.
Dar't thou maintaine the former words thou fpak'st it?

Baff. Yes Sir, as well as you dare patronage
The ensious barking of your fawcie Tongue,
Against my Lord the Duke of Somerset.

Vern. Sirrahs, thy Lord I honour as he is.

Baff. Why, what is he? as good a man as York.

Vern. Hearkye ye: not fo in winnetae take ye that.

Streke him.

Baff. Villaine, thou knowest
The Law of Armes is fuch,
That who do drawes a Sword, 'tis prefent death,
Or else this Blow should broach thy deareft Bloud.
But Ile vnto his Maiestie, and craue,
I may haue libertie to venge this Wrong,
When thou shalt fee, Ile meet thee to thy cift.

Vern. Well milcroment, Ile be there as loone as you,
And after meete you, faoner then you would.

Exeunt.
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter King, Gloster, Winchester, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Warwick, Talbot, and Governor Exeter.

Glo. Lord Bishop set the Crown upon your head.

Win. God save King Henry of that name the first.

Glo. Now Governor of Paris take your oath, That you elect no other King but him;

Exe. Esteeme none Friends, but such as are his Friends, And none your Foes, but such as shall pretend Malicious praetifles against his State:

This shall ye do, to help you righteous God.

Enter Exegeta.

Exe. My gracious Soueraigne, as I rode from Calice, To haste into your Coronation:

A Letter was delivery'd to my hands,

Writ to your Grace, from the Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy, and thee:

I vow'd (base Knight) when I did meete the next,

To teare the Garter from thy Crounes legs,

Which I have done, becaufe (unworthyly)

Thou wast install'd in that High Degree.

Pardon me Princely Henry, and the rest:

This Daffurd, at the battell of Paffiers,

When (but in all) I was fire thouand strong,

And that the French were almost ten to one,

Before we met, or that a stroke was given,

Like to a truithe Squire, did run away.

In which affault, we loft twelve hundred men.

My selfe, and divers Gentlemen besides,

Were thet surpris'd, and taken prisoners.

Then judge (great Lords) if I have done amisse:

Or whether such Cowards ought to weare

This Ornament of Knighthood, yea or no?

Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous,

And ill befoming any common man;

Much more a Knight, a Captaine, and a Leader.

Tal. When first this Order was ordain'd my Lords,

Knights of the Garter were of Noble birth;

Valiant, and Vertuous, full of haughty Courage,

Such as were capable to credit the wares;

Not fearing Death, nor shrinking for Diffraffe,

But always resolute, in most extremes.

He then, that is not furnish'd in this fort,

Doth but vnder the Sacred name of Knight,

Prophaning this most Honourable Order,

And should (if I were worthy to be judge) Be quite degrad'd, like a Hedge-horne Swaine,

That doth profume to boast of Gentle blood.

K. Staine to thy Counrymen, thou hast't thy doom:

Be packing therefore, thou that was't a Knight:

Henceforth we banish thee on paine of death.

And now Lord Protector, view the Letter Sent from our Vnckle Duke of Burgundy.

Glo. What means his Grace, that he hath charg'd his Sile?

No more our planes and bluntsly? (To the King.)

Hath he forget he is his Soueraigne?

Or doth this charglul Superfription Pretend some alteration in good will?

What's here? I have upon especiall taufe,

How'd with compassion of my Countres wroack,

Together with the pittifull compassion Of such as your oppression feele upon,
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

Bajf. Confirm me fo, mine honourable Lord.

Glo. Confirm me fo? Confounded be your trifles,
And perish ye with your audacious pride,
Professorous vassals, are you not ashamed?
With this immodest clamorous outrage,
To trouble and disturb the King, and Vs?
And you my Lords, me thinkes you do not well
To bare with their perjured Objections:
Much jeffe to take occasion from their mouths,
To raise a mutiny between your Clues.
Let me persuade you take a better course.

Exeunt. It greeues his Highness,
Good my Lords, be Friends.

King. Come hither you that would be Combatants:
Henceforth I charge you, as you love your favour,
Quite to forget this Quarrell, and the cause.
And you my Lords: Remember where we are,
In France, amongst a fickle wasering Nation:
If they perceive diffention in our looks,
And that we were the Author of it:
How will their grudging Romackes be provoked
To wilful Disobedience, and Rebellion?
Bride, What infamy will there arise,
When Forraigne Princes shal be certified,
That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henrys Princes, and cheefe Nobility,
Defroyd themselues, and loft the Realme of France?
Oh thinke upon the Conquest of my Father,
My tender yeares, and let vs not forgoe
That for a trifle, that was bought with blood.
Let me be Vmper in this doubtfull strife:
I see no reason if I wear this Roofe,
That any one should therefore be sullipitous
I more incline to Somerset, than Yorke:
Both are my kindmen, and I love them both.
As well they may vponlee me with my Crownes,
Because (forfooth) the King of Scots is Crowned.
But your difcretions better can persuade,
Then I am able to instruct or teach:
And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let vs still continue peace, and love.
Godd of Yorke, we inflate your Grace
To be our Regent in these parts of France:
And good my Lord of Somerset, vnite
Your Troopes of horfemen, with his Bands of foote,
And like true Subjects, fones of your Progenitors,
Go cheerfully together, and dignifie
Your angry Cheller on your Enemies.
Our Selfe, my Lord Protector, and the rest,
After some repit, will returne to Calice;
From thence to England, where I hope ere long
To be prefented by your Victories,
With Charles, Alanion, and that Traiitour rout.

War. My Lord of Yorke, I promise you the King
Prettily (me thought) did play the Orator.

Yorke. And so he did, but yet I like it not,
In that he weare the badge of Somerset.

War. Truth, that was but his fancie, blame him not,
I dare prefume (sweet Prince) he thought no harme.

Yorke. And if I with he did. But let it reft,
Other affayres must now be managed.

Exe. Well daft thou Richard to suppress thy voice:
For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I feare we shal have scene decipherd there
More rancorous flight, more furious raging broyles,
Then yet can be imagin'd or supposed:
But howsoever, no fimple man that fees
This larring difcord of Nabilities,
This shoulderine of each other in the Court,
This fadious bandying of their Favourites,
But that it doth prefage some ill euent.
'Tis much, when Specters are in Childrens hands:
But more, when Enuy breeds vnkinde deuilion,
There comes the mine, there begins confusion.

Exit.

Enter Talbot with Trumpes and Drummes, before Burdeaux.

Talh. Go to the Gats of Burdeaux Trumpeter,
Summon their Generall into the Wall.

Sounds. Enter Generall afift.

Englifh John Talbot (Captaines) call you forth,
Servant in Armes to Harry King of England,
And thus he would open ye Citie Gates,
Be humble to vs, call my Soueraigne yours,
And do him homage as obedient Subiects,
And Ile withdraw me, and my bloody power.
But if you frowne upon this profferd Peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Leane Famine, quarelling Steele, and climbing Fire,
Who in a moment, euhen with the earth,
Shall lay your fately, and ayre-brauing Towers,
If you forfake the offer of their looe.

Cap. Thou ominous and fearfull Owle of death,
Our Nations terror, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy Tyranny approacheth,
On vs thou canst not enter but by death:
For I proteste we are well fortified,
And strong enough toifie out and fight.
If thou retire, the Dolphin well appointed,
Stands with the fnares of Warre to tangle thee.
On either hand thee, there are squadrons pitcht,
To wall thee from the liberty of Flight;
And no way canst thou turne thee for redresse,
But death doth front thee with apparant fpoyle,
And pale deftruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French haue tane the Sacrament,
To ruye their dangerous Artillerie
Upon no Christian foule but Englifh Talbot:
Loo, there thou fhand a breathing valiant man
Of an invincible vnconquer'd spirit:
This is the lateft Glorie of thy prafes,
That I thy enemy dew thee withall:
For ere the Glaffe that now begins to runne,
Finiff the proceffe of his fandy houre,
Thefe eyes that fee thee now well coloured,
Shall fee thee withered, bloody, pale, and dead.

Turne. Drum a farre off.

Harke, harke, the Dolphins drumme, a warning bell,
Sings heayy Mufick to thy timorous foule,
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

Exit Tal. He Fables not. I hear the Fowle:
Out some light Horfemen, and perufe their Wings.
O negligent and heedleffe Discipline,
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale?
A little Heard of Englifh timorous Deere,
Ma'd with a yelping kennell of French Curres.
If we be Englifh Deere, be then in blood,
Not Raflallike to fall downe with a pinch,
But rather moodie mad: And desperate Stagges,
Enter the bloody Hounds with heads of Steele,
And make the Cawards stand aloofe at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall finde deere Deere of vs my Friends.
God, and S. George, Talbot and Englands right,
Iprosper our Colours in this dangerous fight.

Enter a Merriinger that meets Yorke. Enter Yorke with Trumpet, and many Soldiers.

Yorke. Are not the speedy scouts return'd agane,
That dog'd the mighty Army of the Dolphin?
Merri. They are return'd my Lord, and glue it out,
That he is march'd to Burdeaux with his power.
To fight with Talbot as he march'd along.
By your epyphals were discouered.
Two mightier Troopes then that the Dolphin led,
Which loynd' with him, and made their march for

Yorke. A plague upon that Villaine Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply.
Of Horsemen, that were leud for this fleg.
Renowned Talbot doth expect my ayde,
And I am bowed by a Traitor Villaine,
And cannot hope the noble Chevalier:
God comfort him in this necessitie:
If he miscarry, farewell Warres in France.

Enter another Merriinger.

Merri. Thon Prince ley'd Leader of our English strength,
Nacer so needful on the earth of France,
Sperre to the refuge of the Noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a weafe of Iron.
And hem'd about with grim defraction:
To Burdeaux warlike Dulce, to Burdeaux Yorke,
Elle farwel Talbot, France, and Englands honor.
Yorke. O God, that Somerset who in proud heart
Doth flop my Cornets, were in Talbott places.
So should we wee faue a valiant Gentleman,
By forfyting a Traitor, and a Coward:
Mad more, and wrathfull fury makes me weepes,
That thus we dye, while remisse Traitors fleape.
Merri. O send some fuccour to the differt Lord.
Yorke. He dies, we lofe: I break my warlike word: We mourne, France smyles: We loype, they dayly get,
All long of this vile Traitor Somerset.
Merri. Then God take mercy on brave Talbots soule,
And on his Sonne yong Iohn, who two houres since,
I met in trauaille toward his warlike Father;
This feuen yeeres did not Talbot fee his fonne,
And now they meete where both their lives are done.
Yorke. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot have,
To bid his yong fonne welcome to his Graue:
Away, vexation almost floppes my breath,
That fundred friends grette in the houre of death.
Lucie farewell, no more my fortune can,
But cause the caufe I cannot ayde the man.
Maine, Bloys, Tourtiers, and Toares, are wounde away,
Long all of Somerset, and his delay.

Merri. Thus while the Vulture of fedition,
Feebles in the bosome of fuch great Commanders,
Sleeping neglecion doth betray to loffe:
The Conquest of our fearf-cold Conqueror,
That euer-living man of Memorie,
Henrie the fift: Whiles they each other croffe,
Liues, Honours, Lands, and all, hurrrie to loffe.

Enter Somerfet with his Armit.

Som. It is too late, I cannot fend them now:
This expedition was by Yorke and Talbot,
Too rafhly plotted. All our generall force,
Might with a fally of the very Towne
Be buckled with: the ouer-daring Talbot
Hath fullid all his gloffe of former Honor
By this vnheedfull, defperate, wilde aduenture:
Yorke fet him on to fight, and dye in thame,
That Talbot dead, great Yorke might beare the name.
Caph. Here is Sir William Lucie, who with me
Set from our ore-matcht forces forth for ayde.
Som. How now Sir William, whether were you fent?
Lu. Whether my Lord, from bought & fold L.Talbot,
Who rind' about with bold aduerfities,
Cries out for noble Yorke and Somerfet,
To beate affrayling death from his weake Regions,
And whiles the honourable Captain there
Drops bloody fweet from his warre-wesried limbes,
And in advantage lingring lookes for rescue,
You his falie hopes, the truft of Englands honor,
Keep off alofe with worthiffle emulation
Let them your proute difcord kepe away
The leuid fuccour that should lend him ayde,
While he renowned Noble Gentleman
Yeeld vp his life vnto a world of oddes.
Orleance the Baffard, Charles, Burpundie,
Alaunus, Reigndar, compalie him about,
And Talbot periheth by your default.
Som. Yorke fet him on, Yorke shoue haue sent him ayde.
Lu. And Yorke as faft upon your Grace exclamnes,
Swearing that you with-hold his leued hoath,
Collected for this expedition.
Som. Yorke lyes: He might haue fent, & had the Horfe:
I owe him little Dutie, and Jeffe Loue,
And take foule fcarne to fawe him on by fending.
Lu. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now intrapt the Noble-mindid Talbot:
Neuer to England shall he beare his life,
But dies betrodied to fortune by your frite.

Som. Come go, I will dispatch the Horfemen ftrait:
Withen fift houres, they will be at his ayde.
Lu. Too late come refuce, he is dead or faine,
For five he could not, if he would haue feld:
And fye would Talbot neuer though he might.
Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot then adieu.
Lu. His Fame flues in the world. His Shame in you.
Exit.

Enter Talbot and his Sonne.

Tal. O yong Iohn Talbot, I did fend for thee
To tutoe thee in stratagems of Warre,
That Talbots name might be in the world's acland,
When fapiffe Age, and weakle vnabile limbes
Should bring thy Father to his drooping Chaire.
But O malignant and ill-loading Starres,
Now thou art come vnto a Feafe of death,
A terrible and vnauoyded danger:
Therefore deere Boy, mount on my fubfett horfe,
And lle direft thee how thou fhalt escape
By foudaine flight. Come, daily not, be gone.
Iohn. Is my name Talbot? and am I your Sonne?

Shill
And shall I fly? O, if you love my Mother,
Dishonor not her Honorable Name,
To make a Baffard, and a Slaue of me:
The World will say, he is not Talbot's blood,
That basely fled, when Noble Talbot stood.

Talb. Flye, to revenge my death, I'll be blaine.
John. He that flies so, will ne're return again.
Talb. If we both fly, we both are sure to dye.

John. Then let me fly, and Father doe you flye:
Your losse is great, fo your regard should be;
My worth vnknowne, no losse is knowne in me.
Upon my death, the French can little boast;
In yours they will, in all you hopes are lost.
Flight cannot staye the Honor you have wonne,
But mine it will, that no Exploit have done.
You fled for Vantage, every one will swear:
But if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will stay,
If the first howre I shrinke and run away:
Here on my knee I begge Mortallitie,
Rather then Life, prefer'd with Infamie.

Talb. Shall all thy Mothers hopes lye in one Tombe?
John. Rather then lie there my Mothers Wombe.
Talb. Upon my Bluffing I command thee goe.
John. To fight I will, but not to flye the Poe.
Talb. Part of thy Father may be fau'd in thee.
John. No part of him, but will be shame in mee.
Talb. Thou neuer hadst Renowne, nor canst not love it.
John. Yes, your renowned Name shall flight abuse it?
Talb. Thy Fathers charge shal cleare thee from thy blame.
John. You cannot witnesse for me, being blaine.
If Death be so apparant, then both flye.

Talb. And leave my followers here to fight and dye?
My Age was never tainted with such blame.
John. And shall my Youth be guiltie of such blame?
No more can I be feuered from thy side,
Then can your felse, your felse in twaine diuide:
Stay, goe, doe what you will, the like doe I;
For I will not, if my Father dye.

Talb. Then here I take my lease of thee, faire Sonne,
Borne to eclipse thy Life this afternoone:
Come, flye by flye, together flye and dye,
And Soule with Soule from France to Heauen fly.

Alarum. Excursants. Enters old Talbot led.

"Talb. Where is my other Life? mine owne is gone.
O, where's thy young Talbot? where is valiant John?
Triumphant Death, I was not with Captiuities.
Young Talbots Valour makes me like at thee.
When he perceiued me shrinke, and on my Knee,
His bloodie Sword he brandishd over mee,
And like a hungry Lyon did commence
Rough deeds of Rage, and terme Impatience:
But when my angry Guardiant flood alone,
Tending my ruine, and affayld of none,
Dizzie-ey'd Furte, and great rage of Heart,
Suddenly made him from my fide to dart
Into the clashing Battale of the French:
And in that Sea of Blood, my Boy did drench
His ouer-mounting Spirit; and there di'de
My Icarus, my Blossome, in his pride.

Enter with John Talbot, borne.

Sora. O my deare Lord, o where your Sonne is borne.
Talb. Thou antique Death, which laught'st vs here to scorn,
Anon from thy infulting Tyrannie,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuitie,
Two Talbots winged through the lither Skie,
In thy delight shall scape Mortallitie.

Some of his Baffard blood, and in disgrace
Belpoake him thus: Contaminated, base,
And mis-begotten blood, I spille of thine,
Meane and right poore, for that pure blood of mine,
Which thou dist force from Talbot, my braue Boy.
Here purposing the Baffard to destroy,
Came in frming refuge. Speake thy Fathers care:
Art thou not weare, John? How do'st thou fare?
Wilt thou yet leave the Battale, Boy, and flye,
Now thou art seal'd the Sonne of Chiuairie?
Flye, to revenge my death when I am dead,
The helpe of one bands me in little dead.
Oh, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small Boat.
If I to day dye not with Frenchmens Rage,
To morrow I shall dye with mickle Age.
By me they nothing gaine, and if I stay,
'Tis but the shorning of my Life one day.
In thee thy Mother dye, our Householde Name,
My Deaths Reuenge, thy Youth, and Englands Fame:
All thife, and more, we hazard by thy stay.

John. The Sword of Orleance hath not made me smart,
These words of yours draw Life-blood from my Heart.
On that advantage, bought with such a flame,
To saue a paltry Life, and slay bright Fame,
Before young Talbot from old Talbot flies,
The Coward Horde that beares me, fall and dye:
And like me to the peasant Boyes of France,
To be Shames forrne, and subject of Milanchne.
Surely, by all the Glory you have wonne,
And if I flye, I am not Talbots Sonne.
Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot,
If Sonne to Talbot, dye at Talbots foot.

Talb. Then follow thou thy depl't rate Syre of Creest,
Thou Icarus, thy Life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy Fathers side,
And commendable proue'd, let's dye in pride.
Exeunt.
O thou whose wounds become hard favoured death,
Speake to thy father, ere thou yield thy breath,
Braue death by speaking, whether he will or no:
Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe.
Poore Boy, he, like you, thinkes, as who should say,
Had Death bene French, then Death had dyed to day.
Come, come, and lay him in his Fathers arms,
My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
Souldiers adieu: I haue what I would haue,
Now my old armes are yong John Talbots grave.

Enter Charles, Alarfon, Bourgundis, Baffard, and Pucil.

Char. Had Yorke and Somerset brought refuge in,
We should haue found a bloody day of this.
Baff. How the yong wheele of Talbots raging wood,
Did rife his punie-wood in Frenchmens blood.
Puc. Once I encounterd him, and thus I said:
Thou Maieden youth, be vanquished by a Maid.
But with a proud Maleficiall high corne
He anno'd thus: Yong Talbot was not borne
To be the pillaige of a Gigot Wench:
So rushing in the bowels of the French,
His spirit proudly, as unworthy fly.
Bur. Doubtlesse he would haue made a noble Knight:
See where he lies inherced in the armes
Of the most bloody Nurfier of his harms.
Baff. Heau them to peeces, hack their bones affunder,
Wholes life was Englands glory, Gallia's wonder.
Char. Oh no forbeare: For that which we haue fied
During the life, let vs not wrong it dead.
Enter Lucius.

Lu. Herald, conduct me to the Dolphins Tent,
To know who hath obtaine'd the glory of the day.
Char. On what submiſſion message art thou lent?
Lucy. Submiſſion Dolphin? Tis a mere French word:
We English Warriours not what it meane,
I come to know what Priſoners thou haue taft,
And to fuey the bodies of the dead.

Enter for Prisoners askst thou? Heau our prisoners is.
Bur. But tell me whom thou feekst?
Luc. But where's the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant Lord Talbot Earle of Shrewsbury?
Created for his rare successe in Armes,
Great Earle of Walsford, Waverſford, and Valence,
Lord Talbot, and Goldy & Windfield,
Lord Strange of Blackmore, Lord Verdon of Alton,
Lord Cromwell of Wingenfield, Lord Farniwill of Skeffeld,
The thricke victorous Lord of Falchenbridge,
The Knight of the Noble Order of S. George,
Worthy S. Michael, and the Golden Fleet,
Great Marthall to Henry the first,
Of all his Warres within the Realme of France.

Puc. Here's a filly fatlye fille indeede:
The Turke that two and five Kingdomes hath,
Write not so tedious a Stile as this.
Him that thou magnifie with all these Tities,
Stinking and flye,blowne eyes here at our feete.
Lucy. Talbot shaine, the Frenchmens alone Scourge,
Your Kingdomes terror, and blacke Nemifit!
Oh we were mine eye-balles into Bullets turn'd,
That I in rage might shoo them at your faces.
Oh that I could but call thes dead to life,
It were enough to fright the Realme of France.
Were but his Picture left among you here,
It would amaze the proudefit of you all.
Glue me their Bodyes, that I may beare them hence,
And glue them Buriall, as beemes their worth.
Pucil. I thinke this yonge is old Talbots Ghod,
He speakes with such a proud commanding spirit:
For Gods fake let him haue him, to keep them here,
They would but flinke, and putrifie the syre.
Char. Go take their bodies hence.
Lucy. I beare them hencrobut from their ashes shall be read
A Phenix that shall make all France affar'd.
Char. So we be rid of them, do with him what you wilt.
And now to Paris in this conquering vaine,
All will be ours, now bloody Talbots shaine.

Exit.

Scena secunda.

SENNET.

Enter King, Gloceſſer, and Exeter.

King. Have you persu'd the Letters from the Pope,
The Emperor, and the Earle of Arminack?
Glo. I have my Lord, and their intent is this,
They humbly fue vnto your Excellency,
To have a godly peace concluded of,
Betweene the Realmes of England, and of France.
King. How doth your Grace affect their motion?
Glo. Well (my good Lord) and as the only meane
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And stablifh quietneffe on every side.
King. I marry Vnckle, for I always thought
It was both impious and vnnatural,
That fuch Immanity and bloody strife
Should reigne among Professors of one Faith.
Glo. Beside my Lord, the sooner to effect,
And furer binde this knot of amitt,
The Earle of Arminacke neere knit to Charles,
A man of great Authoritie in France,
Profers his onely daughter to your Grace,
In marriage, with a large and fumptuous Dowrie.
King. Marriage Vnckle! Alas my yeares are yong:
And after is my fudden flate, and my Bookes,
Than wanton dalliance with a Paramour.
Yet call th'enamisfadors, and as you please,
So let them haue their anwers every one:
I shall be well content with any choyce
Tends to Gods glory, and my Countries weale.

Enter Winccefuer, and three Ambaffadors.

Exet. What, is my Lord of Winccefuer infall'd,
And call'd vnto a Cardinall degree?
Then I perceive, that will be verified
Henry the Fift did sometime prophete.
If once he come to be a Cardinall,
He'll make his cap coequall with the Crowne.
King. My Lords Ambaffadors, your feuerall faites
Have bin confider'd and debated on,
Your purpose is both good and reasonable:
And therefore we certainly refould'd,
To draw conditions of a friendly peace.
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean're
Shall be transported presently to France.

Glo. And for the proffer of my Lord your Master,
I have inform'd his Highness so at large,
As likening of the Ladies vertuous gifts,
Her Beauty, and the vales of her Dower,
He doth intend the shall be Englands Queen.

King. In argument and prooe's of which contract,
Beare this Jewell, pledge of my affection.
And to my Lord Protector see them guarded,
And safely brought to Dover, wherein shipp'd
Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

Win. Stay my Lord Legate, you shall first receive
The summe of money which I promised
Should be delier'd to his Holiness,
For clothinge me in these grave Orniments.

Legat. I will attend upon your Lordships pleasure.

Win. Now Winchester will not submitt, I trow,
Or be inferior to the proou'd Peers;

Henfrey of Gloster, thou hast well receiv'd,
That neither in birth, or for authotity
The Bishop shal be ouer-borne by thee:
Ile either make thee floppe, and bend thy knee,
Or facke this Country with a mutiny.

Exeunt.

Scene Tertia.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alanion, Bafard, Regner, and Jess.

Char. These newses (my Lords) may cheere our drooping spirits:
'Tis saide, the forst Parliams do resolv'd,
And turne againe vnto the warlike French.

Alan. Then march to Paris Royall Charles of France,
And keepe not backe your powers in dalliance.

Paece. Peace be amongst them if they turne to vs,
Elle raine combathe with their Palleces.

Enter Sould. Scou. Successe vnto our valiant Generell,
And happinife to his accomplies.

Scou. The English Army that diuided was Into two parties, is now conioyn'd in one,
And meanes to giue you battell prefently.

Char. Somewhate too sodaine Sirs, the warping is,
But we will presently procide for them.

Bar. I trau't the Ghost of Talbot is not there:
Now he is gone my Lord, you neede not feare.

Pecul. Of all base passions, Fears is most afferrd.
Command the Conquest Charles, it shal be thine:
Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.

Char. Then on my Lords, and France be fortunate.

Enter loye de Pucell.

Puc. The Regent conqueres, and the Frenchmen flye.
Now helpe ye charming Spelles and Periaps,
And ye choife spirites that admonish me,
And giue me signes of future accidents.

Thunder. Vnder the Lordly Monarch of the North,
Appare, and ayde me in this enterprise.

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quickke appearance argues prooe
Of your accour's diligence to me.
Now ye Familiar Spirits, that are cull'd
Out of the powerfull Regions vnder earth,
Help me this once, that France may get the field.

They walk, and speake not.

Oh hold me not with fiense ouer-long:
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
Ie lop a member off, and giue it you,
In earneft of a further benefit:
So you do conditend to helpe me now.

They hange their heads.

No hope to have redresse? My body shall Pay recemponse, if you will graunt my soule.

They fluke their heads.

Cannot my body, nor blood-sacrifice,
Intreate you to your wonted furtherance?
Then take my soule, my body, face, and all,
Before that England giue the French the foyle.

They depart.

See, they forfacke me. Now the time is come,
That France must vall her lofty plum'd Creffe,
And let her head fall into Englands lappe.
My ancient Incantations are too weake,
And hell too strong for me to buckle with:
Now France, thy glory droopeth to the duft.

Exeunt.

York. Damfell of France, I think I have you fast,
Vnchaine your spirits now with spelling Charmes,
And try if they can giue your libertie.

A goodly prize, fit for the duteous grace.
See how the ugly Witch doth bend her browes,
As if with Circe, she would change my fhape.

Puc. Chang'd to a worfe fhape thou canst not be:

York. Oh Charles the Dolphin is a proper man,
No fhape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing milcheefe light on Charles, and thee,
And may ye both be sodainely surpriz'd
By bloody hands, in fleecing upon your beds.

York. Fell banning Hags, Incantaffes hold thy tongue.

Puc. I prethee giue me leave to curse awhile.

York. Curse Miserable, when thou comest to the flake

Exeunt. Alarum. Enter Suffolk with Margaret in his hand.

Suff. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.

Goes on her.

Oh fairest Beautie, do not feare, nor flye:
For I will touch thee but with reuerend hands,
I kiffe thef[e fingers for eternall peace,
And lay them gently on thy tender tide.
Who art thou, say? that I may honor thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a King,
The King of Naples, who fo ere thou art.

Suff. An Earle I am, and Suffolke am I call'd.
Be not offended Nature mycrale,
Thou art allotted to be tame by me:
So doth the Swan her downie Signets foure,

Oh flye:
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Keeping them prisioner vnderneath his wings:
Yet if this feruile vflage once offend,
Go, and be free againe, as Suffolke friends.
She is going
Oh stay! I have no power to let her paffe,
My hand would free her, but my heart faies no.
As playes the Sunne vpon the glaffie streames,
Twinkling another counterfettred boarne,
So feemes this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.
Faine would I woe her, yet I dare not speake:
He call for Pen and Inke, and write my minde:
Fye De la Pape, difable not thy felie:
Haft not a Tongue? Is the not heere?
Wilt thou be daunted at a Womans figh?
I: Beauties Princely Mablety is fuch,
'Confounds the tonge, and makes the fenses rough.
Suf. Say Earle of Suffolke, if thy name be fo,
What ranfome muft I pay before I paffe?
For I perceiue I am thy prisioner.
Suf. How canft thou tell she will deny thy fuite,
Before thou make a trial of her loue?
M. Why speakeft thou not? What ranfome muft I pay?
Suf. She is beautifull; and therefore to be Wooded:
She is a Woman; therefore to be Wonne.
Suf. Will thou accept of ranfome,yea or no?
Suf. Fond man, remember that thou haft a wife,
Then how can Margaret be thy Paramour?
Mar. I were beft to leave him, for he will not heare.
Suf. There all is marr'd: there lies a cooling card.
Mar. He talkes at rando: fure the man is mad.
Suf. And yet a dilpaffenent may bee had.
Mar. And yet I would that you would anfwer me: Suf. Ile win this Lady Margaret. For whom?
Why for my King: Thu, that's a woodden thing.
Mar. He talkes of wood: It is some Carpenter.
Suf. Yet fo my fancy may be fatified,
And peace eafabillised betweene thefe Realimes.
But there remains a fcruple in that too: For though her Father be the King of Naples,
Duke of Aniou and Mayne, yet is he poore,
And our Nobility will fcorne the match,
Mar. Heare ye Captaine? Are you not at leyfure?
Suf. It fhall be fo, if downe they ne're fo much:
Here is your full才华, and will quickly yield.
Madam, I have a fecret to reseale.
Mar. What though I be imbradh'd, he feems a knight
And will not any way difhonor me.
Suf. Lady, vouchefafe to liken what I fay.
Mar. Ile tell you, I fay, what I will to the French,
And then I need not craze his cartefie.
Suf. Sweet Madam, give me hearing in a caufe.
Mar. Thu, women have bene capituate ere now.
Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you fo?
Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but Quod for Quo.
Suf. Say gentle Princes, would you not oppofe
Your bondage happy, to be made a Queene?
Mar. To be a Queene in bondage, is more vile,
Than is a flave, in base feruility:
For Princes fhould be free.
Suf. And fo fhall you,
If happy Englands Royall King be free.
Mar. What why concerning his freedom vnto me?
Suf. Ile vntake to make thee Henries Queene,
To put a Golden Scepter in thy hand,
And let a precious Crowne vpon thy head,
If you were confident to be my:
Mar. What?
Suf. His loue.
Mar. I am vnworthy to be Henries wife.
Suf. No gentle Madam, I vnworthy am
To vve to faire a Dame to be his wife.
And have no portion in the choice my felie.
How fay you Madam, are ye fo content?
Mar. And if my Father pleache, I am content.
Suf. Then call our Captaines and our Colours forth,
And Madam, at your Fridays Caffie wailes,
We'll craze a parley, to conferre with him.
Sound. Enter Reignier on the Walle.
See Reignier fes, thy daughter prisioner.
Reig. To whom?
Suf. To me.
Reig. Where, tonge, what remedy?
I am a Souldier, and vnap to weep,
Or to exclaime on Fortunes ficklenesse.
Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough my Lord,
Content, and for thy Honor guie confent,
Thy daughter fhall be welded to my King,
Whom I with paine have wooed at Wonne thereto:
And this her eafe held imprifonment,
Hath gain'd thy daughter Princely libertie.
Reig. Speakes Suffolke as he thinks?
Suf. Faire Margaret knowes,
That Suffolke doth not flatter, face, or faine.
Reig. Upon thy Princely warrant, I defend,
To guie thee anfwer of thy interfemand.
Suf. And here I will expect thy comming.

Trumpets sound. Enter Reignier.

Reig. Welcome braue Earle into our Territories,
Command in Aniou what your Honor pleafeas.
Suf. Thankes Reignier, happy for Io fweet a Childs,
Fit to be made companion with a King:
What anfwer makes your Grace vnto my fuite?
Reig. Since you doft daigne to woe her little worth,
To be the Princely Bride of fuch a Lord:
Upon condition I may quietely
Enioy mine owne, the Country Main and Aniou,
Free from oppofition, or the stroke of Warre,
My daughter fhall be Henries, if he please.
Suf. That is her ranfome, I deliver her,
And thos two Counties I will vntake
Your Grace fhall well and quietely enjoy.
Reig. And I againe in Henries Royall name,
As Deputy I will that gracious King
Gice thee her hand for figne of plighted faith.
Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee Kingly thanks,
Because this is in Trafficke of a King.
And yet me thinkes I could be well content
To be mine owne Atnnese in this cafe.
Ile ouer then to England with this newes:
And make this marriage to be folenniz'd:
So farewell Reignier, let this Diamond fafe
In Golden Pallaces as it becomes.
Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian Prince King Henrie were he here.
Mar. Farewell my Lord, good wishes, praiue, & prayers,
Shall Suffolke ever hauue of Margaret. Shes de going.
Suf. Farewell sweet Madam: but hearke you Margaret,
No Princely commendations to my King?
Mar. Such commendations as becomes a Maide,
A Virgin and his Seruant, fay to him.
Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modellie directed,

But
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

But Madame, I must trouble you againe,
No louing Token to his Maiestie?

Yes, my good Lord, a pure vnspotted heart,
Neuer yet taint with love, I fend the King.
Suf. And this withall.

Mar. That for thy felfe, I will not fo preume,
To fend fuch peeculli tokens to a King.
Suf. Oh wert thou for my felfe: but Suffolke fay,
Thou mayft not wander in that Labyrinth,
There Minotaurs and vgy Treftons lurke,
Sollicite Henry with her wonderous praffe.
Bethinke thee on her Verues that furmount,
Mad naturall Graces that extinguih Art,
Repeate their femblance often on the Seas,
That when thou com'lt to kneele at Henryes feete,
Thou mayft bereave him of his wits with eror. Exit

Enter York. Warwicke, Shephard, Pucell.

York. Bring forth that Sorcerrie condemnd to Byrne.
Step. Ahe, I fent this Killinge to the King's ear-out-right,
Hawe I fought every Country farre and neere,
And now it is my chance to finde thee out,
Muff I behold thy timeiffe cruell death:
Ah Ifone, sweet daughter Ifone, lye die with thee.
Pucell. Decrepit Milner, fafe ignoble Wretch,
I am defcended of a gentler blood.
Thou art no Father, nor no Friend of mine.
Step. Out, out: My Lords, and pleafe you, 'tis not fo
I did beget her, all the Parifh knowes:
Her Mother Bueth yet, can telbife
She was the fift fruites of my Bachler-ship.
War. Graceleffe, wilt thou deny thy Parentage?
York. This argues what her kinde of life hath beene,
Wicked and vile, and fo her death concludes.
Step. Eye Ifone, that thou wilt be fo obstinate:
God knowes, thou art a collop of my flesh,
And for thy laky hauke I dyed many a teare:
Deny me not, I prythee, gentle Ifone.
Pucell. Peasant aunnt. You have fuborn'd this man
Of purpose, to obscure my Noble birth.
Step. 'Tis true, I gave a Noble to the Prieft,
The morne that I was weded to her mother.
Kneele downe and take my bleffing, good my Gyrie.
Wilt thou not floope? Now courfe be the time
Of thy natuirt, I would the Milke
Thy mother gave thee when thou lock'ft her bref,
She had a little Rats-bane for thy face.
Or elfe, when thou didft keep my Lambes a-field,
I with fome rauenous Wolfe had eaten thee.
Doef thou deny thy Father, cured Drab?
O Byrne her, burner her, hanging is too good.
York. Take her away, for the hath liu'd too long,
To fill the world with viciou qualities.
Pucell. First let me tell you whom you haue condemn'd;
Not me, begotten of a Shepheard Swaine,
But illufed from the Progeny of Kings.
Perluous and Holy, chofen from above,
By infpiration of Celestial Grace,
To worke exceeding myracles on earth.
I neuer had to do with wicked Spirits.
But you that are polluted with your lutes,
Stain'd with the guiltleffe blood of Innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand Vices:
Because you want the grace that others haue,
You judg it fraught a thing imposible
To compaffe Wonders, but by helpe of diuels.

No milconceyued, Ifone of Ifone hath beene
A Virgin from her tender Infancie,
Chaffe, and immaculate in very thought,
Whose Maiden-blood thus rigorously efflu'd,
Will cry for Vengeance, at the Gates of Heauen.
York. I: away with her to execution.
War. And hearke ye first: because she is a Maide,
Spare for no Faggots, let there be enow:
Place barrells of pitch upon the flail flake,
That fo heer torture may be fhortned.
Pucell. Will nothing turne your vrelenting hearts?
Then Ifone difcouer thine infirmity,
That warrantethe by Law, to be thy priviledge.
I am with childe ye bloody Homelikes:
Murther not then the Fruite within my Wombe,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.

York. Now heauen forfend, the holy Maid with child?
War. The greateft miracle that ere ye wrought.
Is all your shift preficenesse come to this?
York. She and that I haue haued bin hauing,
I did imagine what would be her refuge.
War. Well go too, we'll hauue no Buffards blue,
Especiallie since Charles muft Father it.
Pucell. You are decey'd, my childe is none of his,
It was Malfoil that inioy'd my love.
York. Malfoy that notorious Macheuell?
It dyes, and if it had a thoufand blues.

Pucell. Oh glue me leave, I haue deluded you,
'Twas neyther Charles, nor yet the Duke I nam'd,
But Regnier King of Naples that prevoy'd.
War. A married man, that's most intollerable.
York. Why here's a Gyrie: I think the knowes not wel
(There were fo many) whom she may accuse.
War. It's figne the hath beene liberall and free.
York. And yet forfooth she is a Virgin pure.
Smurpet, thy words condemne thy Brat, and thee.
Vfe no intreyt, for it is in vaine.

Pucell. Then lead me hence: with whom I leave my curfe.
May never glorious Sunne reflex his beams
Upon the Country where you make abode:
But darkenf, and the gloomy flade of death
Insuiron you, till Milcheeffe and Dispare,
Drue you to break your necks, or hang your selves.Exit

Enter Cardinall.

York. Breake thou in peeces, and confume to ashes,
Thou fowlle accurted minifrer of Hell.

Card. Lord Regent, I do greate your Excellence
With Letters of Commiffion from the King.
For know my Lords, the States of Cheriftendome,
Mou'd with remore of thee out-ragious broyles,
Haue earneffly impolor'd a genreal peace,
Betwixt our Nation, and the affying French;
And heere at hand, the Dolphin and his Traine
Approcheth, to conferre about some matter.
York. Is all our trauell turn'd to this effeit,
After the flaughter of fo many Peeres,
So many Captaines, Gentlemen, and Soldiers,
That in this quarrell have beene ouerthrowne,
And fold their bodies for their Countries benefit,
Shall we at laft conclude effeminat peace?
Haue we not loft moft part of all the Townes,
By Trefon, Faihhood, and by Treacherie,
Our great progenitors had conquered:
Oh Warwick, Warwickke, I force thee with greefe
The vitter loffe of all the Realme of France.

War. Be patient Yorkes, if we conclude a Peace
It shall be with such fierce and seueré Covenantes,
As little shall the Frenchmen gaine thereby.

Enter Charles, Alanis, Baffard, Reignier.

Char. Since Lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peacefull truce shall be proclai'med in France,
We come to be informed by your felues,
What the conditions of that league must be.

Torke. Speake Wincheffer, for boyling choller chokes
The hollow passage of my pow'rones voyce,
By fight of these our balefull enemies.
Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:
That in regard King Henry gives content,
Of meere compassion, and of lenity,
To eafe your Countrie of diffirefelle Warre,
And luffer you to breath in fruitful peace,
You shall become true Liegemen to his Crowne.
And Charles, upon condition thou wilteware
To pay him tribute, and submit thy selfe,
Thou shalt be plac'd as Vicery vnder him,
And still enjoy thy Regall dignity.

Alan. Must he be then as shadow of himselfe?
Adorne his Temples with a Coronet,
And yet in fabulance and authority,
Retaine but privilage of a private man?
This proffer is aburd, and reasonlesse.

Char. 'Tis knowne already that I am poiffed
With more then halfe the Gallian Territories,
And therein reuerenc'd for their lawfull King.
Shall I for luce of the rest van-vanquith,
Detra't so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but Vicery of the whole?
No Lord Ambaffador, Ie rather keep
That which I have, than courting for more
Be cast from possibili'ty of all.

Torke. Insulting Charles, haft thou by secret meanes
Vs'd intercation to obtaine a league,
And now the matter growes to compromize,
Stand't thou aloofe vspon Comparion.
Either accept the 'Title thou vrpurp',
Of benefit proceeding from our King,
And not of any challenge of Defert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant Warres.

Reig. My Lord, you do not well in obtinacy,
To caull in the course of this Contract:
If once it be negledted, ten to one.
We shall not finde like opportunity.

Alan. To say the truth, it is your policie,
To faue your Subjectes from such machace
And ruthlesse haughters as are dayly seen,
By our proceeding in Hollantity,
And therefore take this compact of a Truce,
Although you breake it, when your pleasure feres.
War. How fauyt thou Charles?
Shall our Condition rand?

Char. It Shall not
Oney referred'd, you claime no intered
In any of our Townes of Garriffon.
Tor. Then fware Allegance to his Majestie,
As thou art Knight, never to disobey,
Nor be Rebellious to the Crowne of England,
Thou nor thy Noble, to the Crowne of England.
So, now dismaiifie your Army when ye please:
Hang vp your Emgin's, let your Drummes be still,
For heere we entertaine a solemne peace.

Enter Suffolke in conference with the King,
Glauceffer and Exeter.

King. Your wondrous rare description (noble Earle)
Of beauteous Margaret hath astoni'ed me:
Her vertues graced with externall gifts,
Do breed Loues fetled passions in my heart,
And like as rigour of tempestuous gutes
Provoke the mighti'test Hulke against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her Remounse,
Either to suffer Shipw racke, or arriue
Where I may haue frution of her Loue.

Suf. Th'ush my good Lord, this superfic'call tale,
Is but a preface of her worthy praife:
The chere perfedions of that lowly Dame,
(Had I suicient skill to ytter them)
Would make a volume of inticing lines,
Able to raui'h any dull conceit.
And which is more, she is not fo Divine,
So full repicate with choise of all delights,
But with as humble lowline'sse of minde,
She is content to be at your command:
Command I meanes, of Vertuous chaste intents,
To Loue, and Honor Henry as her Lord.

King. And otherwise, will Henry ne're preu'me:
Therefore my Lord Protector, glie content,
That Marg'ret may be Englands Royall Queene.

Glo. So should I glie content to flatter finne,
You know (my Lord) your Highness is betroath'd
Vnto another Lady of eftume,
How shall we then dispence with that contract,
And not deface your Honor with reproach?

Suf. As doth a Ruler with vnlawfull Oathes,
Or one that at a Triumph, haung vow'd
To try his strengths, forsketh yet the Lites
By reafon of his Adversaries odds.
A poor Earles daughter is vnequall odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.
Glauceffer. Why what (I pray) is Margaret more then that?

Her Father is no better than an Earle,
Although in glorious Titles he excell.
Suf. Yes my Lord, her Father is a King,
The King of Naples, and Jerufalem,
And of such great Authoritie in France,
As his alliance will confirme our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in Allegiance.

Glo. And so the Earle of Arminacke may doe,
Becauze he is neere Kinman vnto Charles.
Exeter. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dow'er,
Where Reigntier sooner will receyue, than gue.

Suf. A Dowre my Lords? Disgrace not to your King,
That he should be so abased, hate, and poor,
To choo'se for wealth, and not for perfect Loue.
Henry is able to enrich his Queene,
And not to feeke a Queene to make him rich,
So worthlesse Peazants bargain for their Wives,
As Market men for Oxen, Sheper, or Horle.
Marriage is a matter of more worth,
Then to be dealt in by Attorney-ship:
Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affeets,
The firft Part of Henry the Sixt. 119

Muft be companion of his Nuptiall bed,
And therefore Lords, since he affects her moft,
Most of all thefe reafons bindeth vs,
In our opinions she should be preferr'd.
For what is wedloeke foreft but a Hell,
An Age of difcord and continual strife,
Whereas the contrarie bringeth bliffes,
And is a patterne of Celeftiall peace.
Whom should we match with Henry being a King,
But Margaret, that is daughter to a King:
Her peerleffe feature, joyned with her birth,
Approves her fit for none, but for a King.
Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit,
(More then in women commonly is feene)
Will anfwer our hope in ifue of a King.
For Henry's fonne vnto a Conqueror,
Is likely to beget more Conquerors,
If with a Lady of fo high reoule,
(As is faire Margaret) he be link'd in love.
Then yeeld my Lords, and heere conclude with mee,
That Margaret shall be Queene, and none but shee,
My Noble Lord of Suffolke: Or for that
My tender youth was never yet attaint
With any paffion of inflaming love,
I cannot tell: but this I am affur'd,
I feele such sharp diftenion in my breast,
Such fierce alarums both of Hope and Feare,
As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
Take therefore shipping, poole my Lord to France,
Agree to any covenants, and procure
That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To croffe the Seas to England, and be crown'd
King Henries faithfull and annointed Queene.
For your expences and fufficient charge,
Among the people gather vp a tenth.
Be gone I fay, for till you do returne,
I reft perplexed with a thoufand Cares.
And you (good Vnckle) banifh all offence:
If you do cenfure me, by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excufe
This fodain execution of my will.
And fo command me, where from company,
I may revoule and ruminante my greefe.

FINIS.

The second Part of Henry the Sixt, with the death of the Good Duke

ACTUS PRIMUS. SCENA PRIMA.

Flourish of Trumpets: Then Hobegy.

Enter King, Duke Humphrey, Salisbury, Warwick, and Beaumond on the one side. The Queen, Suffolk, York, Somerset, and Buckingham, on the other.

Suffolke.

S by your high Imperiall Majesty, I had in charge at my depart for France, As Procurator to your Excellence, To marry Princes Margaret for your Grace; So in the Famous Ancient City, Tours, In presence of the Kings of France, and Sicill, The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Britaigne, and Alarcon, Seuen Earles, twelve Barons, & twenty reverend Bishops I have perform'd my Taskes, and was exsouled, And humbly now upon my bended knee, In fight of England, and her Lordly Peeres, Deliever vp my Title in the Queen To your most gracious hands, that are the Substance Of that great Shadow I did represent: The happiest Gift, that euer Marqueeffe gave, The fairest Queene, that euer King receiued.

King. Suffolk of Suffolke. Welcome Queene Margaret, I can express no kinder figure of Loue Then this kind kisse: O Lord, that lends me life, Lend me a heart replique with thankfullnesse: For thou hast given me in this beautefull Face A world of earthly blessings to my soule, If Sympathy of Loue vnite our thoughts.

Queen. Great King of England, & my gracious Lord, The mutuell conference that my minde hath had, By day, by night; waking, and in my dreames, In Courtly company, or at my Beades, With you mine Alder loue Soueraigne, Makes me the bolder to insatiate my King, With ruder termes, such as my wit affords, And ever loy of heart doth minifier.

King. Her fight did rauish, but her grace in Speech, Her words yclad with widsomes Maieriess, Makes me from Wondring, fall to Weeping loyes, Such is the Fulneffe of my hearts content.

Lord. with one cheerfull voice, Welcome my Loue.

All kneel. Long live Qu. Margaret, Englands happines, Queene. We thank you all.

Flourish

Suf. My Lord Protector, so it please your Grace, Here are the Articles of contrasted peace, Between our Soueraigne, and the French King Charles, For eighteene moneths conclued by consent.

Glo. Reu'r Inprimis, It is agreed betwene the French K. Charles, and William de la Pole Marquess of Suffolke, Ambassadour for Henry King of England, That the said Henry shal eftacue the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reguier King of Naples, Sicillia, and Jerusalem, and owne her Queene of England, ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing.

Item, That the Duxtie of Annu, and the Countie of Main, shal be releas'd and deliv'red to the King her father.

King. Vntie, how now?

Glo. Pardon me gracious Lord, Some fouldane qualme hath strucke me at the heart, And dim'd mine eyes, that I can read no further.

King. Vnckle of Wincheller, I pray read on. Win. Item, It is further agreed betwene them, That the Duxtie of Annu, and Mains, shall be releas'd and deliv'red over to the King her father, and free from euery of the King of Englands wone proper gift and Charges, without baying any Demery.

King. They please vs well. Lord Marques kneel down, We here create thee the fift Duke of Suffolk, And girt thee with the Sword. Cofin of Yorke, We here discharge your Grace from being Regent P'th parts of France, till termes of eighteen moneths Be full expir'd. Thankes Vnckle Wincheller, Glofier, Yorke, Buckingham, Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick.

We thank you all for this great favour done, In entertainment to my Princely Queene.

Come, let vs in, and with all speche proud To fee her Coronation be perform'd.

Exit King, Queene, and Suffolk.

MANET THE REST.

Glo. Brute Peeres of England, Pillars of the State, To you Duke Humphrey must unfold his greefe: Your greefe, the common greefe of all the Land. What! did my brother Henry spend his youth, His valour, coin, and people in the warres? Did he so often lodge in open field? In Winters cold, and Summers parching heats, To conquer France, his true inheritance? And did my brother Bedford toyle his wits,
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

To keepe by policy what Henry got:
Haue you your feues, Somerfet, Buckingham,
Braue Yorke, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receive deepse fears in France and Normandy:
Or hath my Vnckle Beauford, and my felfe,
With all the Learned Counsell of the Realme,
Studied to fo long, fat in the Counsell houfe,
Early and late, debating too and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe,
And hath his Highness in his infancie,
Crowned in Paris in delighte of fongs,
And shall thefe Labours, and thefe Honours dye?
Shall Henrys Conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your Deeds of Warre, and all our Counsell dye?
O Peers of England, shamefull is this League,
Fattall this Marriage, cancelling your Fame,
Blotting your names from Bookes of memory,
Racing the Characters of your Renowne,
Defacing Monuments of Conquer'd France,
Vndoing all as all had never bin.

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discoure?
This prororation with fuch circumfance:
For France, 'tis ours, and we will keep it still.
Glb. I Vnckle, we will keep it, if we can:
But now it is impofible we should.
Suffolke, the new made Duke that rules the rood,
Hath giv'n the Dutche of Anjou and Mayne,
Vnto the poore King Reineger, whole large ftyle
Agree not with the leannes of his purfe.
Sal. Now by the death of him that dyed for all,
These Countes were the Keys of Normandie:
But wherefore weepes Warwick, my valiant fonne?
War. For griefe, that they are paff recoverie.
For were there hope to conquer them againe,
My fword shoud hewd hot blood, mine eyes no tears.
Anjou and Maine? My felfe did win them both:
These Prounces, thofe Armes of mine did conquer,
And are the Cities that I got with wounds,
Delivered vp againe with peacefull words?
Mort Dieu.

Yorke. For Suffolkes Duke, my felfe be fuffocate,
That dimis the Honor of this Warlike Isle:
France shoud have teane and rent my very hart,
Before I would have yeelded to this League.
I never read but Englands Kings haue had
Large fummes of Gold, and Dowries with their wives,
And our King Henry guies away his owne,
To match with her that brings no vantages.
Ham. A prover left, and never heard before,
That Suffolke shoud demand a whole Fifteenth,
For Cofts and Charges in tranporting her:
She should haue flaid in France, and fea'd in France
Before.

War. My Lord of Glofter, now ye grow too hot,
It was the pleafure of my Lord the King.
Ham. My Lord of Winchefter I know your minde.
'Tis not my fpeeches that you do miilike:
But 'tis my prefence that doth trouble ye,
Rancour will out, proud Prelate, in thy face
I fee thy furies? If I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings:
Lostlings farewell, and fay when I am gone,
I prophefied, France will be loft ere long. Exit Humphrey.

Car. So, there goes our Protecor in a rage:
'Tis his ftronge leade to you he is mine enemy:
Nay more, an enemy vnto you all,
And no great friend, I fear me to the King;
Consider Lords, is he the next of blood,
And heyre apparrant to the English Crowne:
Had Henry got an Empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy Kingdomes of the Welt,
There's reafon he should be difplea'd at it:
Looke to it Lords, let not his smoothing words
Bewith your hearts, be wife and circumfected.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him, Humphrey the good Duke of Glofter,
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voyce,
Isu maintain your Royall Excellence,
With God preerne the good Duke Humfrey:
I fear me Lords, for this flattering gloffe,
He will be found a dangerous Protecor.

Buc. Why should he then protect our Soueraigne?
He being of age to gouerne of himfelfe.
Cofin of Somerfet, joyne you with me,
And altogether with the Duke of Suffolke,
We'll quickly howfe Duke Humfrey from his feat.
Car. This weighty businesse will not brooke delay,
Ile to the Duke of Suffolke presently.
Exit cardinall.
Som. Cofin of Buckingham, though Humphries pride
And greatneffe of his place be greefe to vs,
Yet let vs take the haughty cardinall,
His infolence is more intollerable
Then all the Princes in the Land befide,
If Glofter be difplea'd, he'll be Protecor.
Buc. Or thou, or I Somerfet will be Protecors,
Defpite Duke Humfrey, or the cardinall.

Exit Buckingham, and Somerfet.
Sal. Pride went before, Ambition follows him.
While thefe do labour for their owne preferment,
Behooues it vs to labor for the Realme.
I never faw but Humfrey Duke of Glofter,
Dide beare him like a Noble Gentleman:
Oft have I feene the haughty cardinall.
More like a Souladier then a man o'th'Church,
As fliut and proud as he were Lord of all,
Sware like a Ruffian, and demeane himfelfe
Unlike the Ruler of a common-weale.
Warwicke my fonne, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainneffe, and thy honef-keeping,
Hath wonne the greates habour of the Commons,
Excepting none but good Duke Humfrey,
And Brother Yorke, thy A's in Ireland,
In bringing them to clift Difcipline:
Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou went Regent for our Soueraigne,
Haue made thee fear'd and honor'd of the people,
Joyne we together for the publicke good,
In what we can, to bride and fupprefs
The pride of Suffolke, and the cardinall,
With Somerfets and Buckinham's Ambition,
And as we may, cherih Duke Humphries deeds,
While they do tend the profit of the Land.
War. So God helpe Warwicke, as he loues the Land,
And common profit of his Country.

Yor. And fo faies Prinke,
For he hath greatest caufe.
Salisbury. Then let make haft away,
And looke vnto the maine.
Warwicke. Vnto the maine?

Oh Father, Mine is loft,
That Maine, which by my maine force Warwicke did winne,
And would haue kept, fo long as breath did lafte:

Main
Main-chance father you meant, but I meant Maine,
Which I will win from France, or else be flaine.

Exit Warrick, and Salisbury.
Maeet Yorks.
York. Amor and Maine are given to the French,
Paris is lost, the state of Normandy
Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone;
Suffolke concluded on the Articles,
The Peeres agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd,
To change two Dukedomes for a Dukes faire daughter.
I cannot blame them all, what is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their owne.
Pirates may make cheap penyworths of their pilage,
And purchase Friends, and give to Curtezans,
Still recoulding like Lords till all be gone,
While as the silly Owner of the goods
Wespe over them, and wrings his hapiffe hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloofe,
While all is har'd, and all is borne away,
Ready totere, and dare not touch his owne.
So Yorke mutt fit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
While his own Lands are being fold for, and fold;
Me thinks the Realmes of England, France, & Ireland,
Bear that to proportion to his life and blood,
As did the fatal brand Althea burnt,
Vnto the Princes heart of Cadlon:
Maine and Maine both given vnto the French?
Cold newsed for me: for I had hope of France,
Euen as I haue of fertile Englands soile.
A day will come, when Yorke shall claim his owne,
And therefore I will take the Neath parts,
And make a fewe of love to proud Duke Humfray,
And when I trye advantage, jade the Crowne,
For that's the Golden marke I seeke to hit:
Nor shall proud Lancaster yfparke my right,
Nor haue the Scepter in his childish Fis,
Nor weare the Diadem vpon his head,
Whole Church-like humoris fits not for a Crowne.
Then Yorke be fill a while, till time do ferue;
Watch thou, and wake when others be asleep,
To prie into the secrets of the State,
Till Henry furfetting in joyes of love,
With his new Bride, & Englands deere bought Queen,
And Humfray with the Peers be fold at larse.
Then will I rase aloft the Milke-white-Rofe,
With whose sweet smell the Ayre shall be perfum'd,
And in my Standard bear the Armes of Yorke,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster,
And force perforce Ile make him yield the Crowne,
Whole bookish Rule, hath pull'd England downe.

Exit York.

Enter Duke Humfrey and his wife Elliamor.
Elia. Why droopes my Lord like over-risen'd Corn,
Hanging the head at Ceres plenteous load?
Why doth the Great Duke Humfrey knit his browes,
As frowning at the Favours of the world?
Why are thine eyes fixt to the fullen earth,
Gazing on that which feremes to dimme thy fight?
What Left thou there? King Henries Diadem,
Inche'd with all the Honors of the world?
If so, Gaze on, and growel on thy face,
Vnitll thy head be circled with the fame.
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious Gold.
What, is't too short? I le lengthen it with mine,
And hang it both together head'd it vp,
With both together lift our heads to heaven,
And nearer more abase our fight to low,
As to vouchsafe one glance vnto the ground.

Hum. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy Lord,
Banish the Canker of ambitious thoughts:
And may thy thoughts, when I imagine ill
Against my King and Nephew, vertuous Henry,
Be my left breathing in this mortal world.
My troubous dreams this night, doth make me sad.
Ell. What dream'd my Lord, tell me, and Ile requite it
With sweet rehearfall of my mornings dreame?

Hum. I thought this flasse mine Office-badge in Court
Was broke in twaine by whom, I haue forgot,
But as I thinke, it was by'th Cardinal,
And on the pieces of the broken Wande
Were plaide the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerfet,
And William de la Pole first Duke of Suffolke.
This was my dreame, what it doth bode God knowes.

Ell. Tut, this was nothing but an argument,
That he that breaks a flasse of Glovers gmeer,
Shall lose his head for his prefumption.
But li'th me my Humfrey, my Sweete Duke:
Me thought I late in Seate of Maledy,
In the Cathedrell Church of Weitminister,
And in that Chaire where Kings & Queers wer crownd,
Where Henrie and Dame Margaret k Lindsey to me,
And on my head did let the Diadem,
And I thought my Dukedomes
Presumptuous Dame, ill-nurter'd Elliamor,
Art thou not secon Woman in the Realme?
And the Protecours wife befor'd of him?
Haft thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or comparte of thy thought?
And wilt thou still be hammering Treaschiery,
To tumble downe thy husband, and thy felfe,
From top of Honor, to Discountes fecte?
Away from me, and let me haere no more.

Elia. What,what, my Lord? Are you so challerick
With Elliamor, for telling but her dreame?
Next time Ile keep my dreames vnto my felfe,
And not be check'd.

Hum. Nay be not angry, I am pleased again.

Enter Maffiong.
Maff. My Lord, the Protecor, in his Highnes pleasure,
You do prepare to ride vnto S. Alhons,
Where as the King and Queene do meane to Hawke.

Ell. Yes my good Lord, Ile follow presently.
Follow I must, I cannot go before,
While Glofer bears this safe and humble minde.
Were I a Man, a Duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious tumbling blockes,
And smooth my way vpon their headlefe neckes.
And being a woman, I will not be facke
To play my part in Fortunes Pageant.
Are we there you? Sir John may feare not man,
We are alone, here's none but thee, & I.

Enter Hume.
Hume. Iesus preferue your Royall Malefey.

Hume. But by the grace of God, and Humes advice,
Your Grace's Title shall be multiplied.

Ell. What saith thou man? Haft thou as yet confer'd
With Margarit Jordane the cunning Witch,
With Roger Bullingbrook the Conjuror?
And will you vnderake to do me good?

Hume. This they haue promised to shew your Highnes
A Spirit rain'd from depth of vnder ground,
That shall make answere to such Questions,
As by your Grace shall be propelled him.
Elianor. It is enough, Ile thinkin vpou the Questions:
When from Saint Albans we doe make returne,
We'll for these things effectcd to the full.
Here Hume, take this reward, make merry man
With thy Confederates in this weightle cause.
Exit Elianor.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the Ducheffe Gold:
Marry and shal; but how now, Sir Iohn Hume?
Seale vp your Lips, and glue no words but Mum,
The buffenelle asketh silent secrecie.
Dame Elianor giues Gold, to bring the Witch:
Gold cannot come amiss, were she a Deuil.
Yet haue I Gold flies from another Coist:
I dare not say, from the rich Cardinal,
And from your great and newe Duke of Suffolke,
Yet do I finde it so; for to be plaine,
They (knowing Dame Eliamers aspiring humor)
Have hyred me to vnder-mine the Ducheffe,
And buzzse these Confurations in her brayne.
They do, A craftie Knaue do's need no Broker,
Yet am I Sufficiently and the Cardinalis Broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall goe neere
to call them both a payre of craftie Knaues.
Well, so it stands: and thus I fear at lat,
Hume Knauerie will be the Ducheffe Wrackes,
And her Artifacture, will be Hampbreyes fall:
Sort how it will, I shal haue Gold for all. Exit

Enter three or four Petitioners, the Armorers
Man being one.

1. Pet. My Maffers, let's stand cloe, my Lord Pro

techor will come this way by and by, and then we may defer our Supplications in the Quill.
2. Pet. Marry the Lord protec hit, for hee a good man,
Iefu bleffe him.

Enter Suffolke, and Queene.

Peter. Here a comes me thinkes, and the Queene with him Ile be the first fure.

2. Pet. Come hacke foolie, this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my Lord Protector.

Suff. How now fellow would't any thing with me?

1. Pet. I pray my Lord pardon me, I tooke ye for my Lord Protector.

Queene. To my Lord Protector? Are your Supplica tions to his Lordship? Let me fee them what is thine?

1. Pet. Mine is, and pleace your Grace, against Iohn
Goodman, my Lord Cardinalls Man, for keeping my Houfe, and Lands, and Wife and all, from me.

Suff. Thy Wife too? that's some Wrong indeed.
What's yours? What's here? Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the Commons of Melforde. How now,
Sir Knaue?

2. Pet. Alas Sir, I am but a poore Petitioner of our whole Township.

Peter. Against my Mafter Thomas Horner, for faying,
That the Duke of Yorke was rightfull Heire to the Crowne.

Queene. What fay't thou? Did the Duke of Yorke fay, hee was rightfull Heire to the Crowne?

Peter. That my Miftris was, No fortho; my Mafter sald, That he was, and that the King was an Vfurer.

Suff. Who is there?

Enter Servant.

Take this fellow in, and fend for his Mafter with a Pur leuant prefently: wee'll hear more of your matter before the King.

Exit.

Queene. And as for you that loure to be protected
Vnder the Wings of our Protechors Grace,
Begin your Suits anew, and fue to him,

Teare the Suppllication.

Away, bafe Calions: Suffolke let them goe.

All. Come, let's be gone.

Exit.

Queene. My Lord of Suffolke, say, is this the guile?
Is this the Fashions in the Court of England?
Is this the Government of Britaines Ile?
And this the Royaltie of Albins King?
What, shall King Henry be a Pupill fyll,
Vnder the faire Guide of the Gouernor;
Am I a Queene in Title and in Stile,
And must be made a Subject to a Duke?
I tell thee Poole, when in the Cite Yours
Thou ran't A tilt in honor of my Loue,
And flott' away the Ladies heart of France;
I thought King Henry had refemblen them,
In Courage, Courthip, and Proportion:
But all his mine is bent to Holineffe,
To number Ave-Maris on his Beades:
His Champions, are the Prophets and Apostles,
His Weapons, holy Saws of sacred Writ,
His Stude is his Tilt-yard, and his Loues
Are brazen Images of Canonical Saints.
I would the Colledge of the Cardinalls
Would chafe him Pope, and carry him to Rome,
And for the Triple Crowne upon his Head;
That were a State fit for his Holineffe.

Suff. Madeame be patient: as I was caufe
Your Highneffe came to England, fo will I
In England worke your Graves full content.

Queene. Bevide the haughtie Protector, have we Beauford
The imperious Churchman, Somerfer, Buckingham,
And grumbling York: and not the leaff of thew,
But can doe more in England then the King.

Suff. And he of thefethat can doe more of all,
Cannot doe more in England then the Nails:
Saliency and Warrick are no fimple Proces.

Queene. Not all thefet Lords do vexe me halfe fo much,
As that prov'd Dame, the Lord Protechor Wives:
She sweeps it through the Court with troops of Ladies,
More like an Emprefle, then Duke Hampburyes Wife:
Strangers in Court, doe take her for the Queene:
She beares a Dukes Reuenues on her backe,
And in her heart the Gromes our Pouterie:
Shall I not lice to be sueg'd on her
Contempusous bafe-borne Callot as he is,
She vaunted mong't her Minions t'other day,
The very trayne of her word wearing Crowne,
Was better worth then all my Fathers Lands,
Till Suffolke gave two Dukedomes for his Daughter.

Suff. Madeame, my felshe have lym'd a Burth for her,
And plaet a Queer of fuch enticing Birds,
That she will light to litten to the Lyes,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So let her ref: and Madeame lif to me,
For I am bold to confaile you in this;
Although we fancie not the Cardinall,
Yet mutt we love him and with the Lords,
Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in difgrace.

As
As for the Duke of Yorke, this late Complaint
Will make but little for his benefit:
So one by one we'll weed them all at last,
And you your fete shall see the happy Helme. Exit.

Sound a Sammy.

Enter the King, Duke Humphrey, Cardinal, Buckingham, Yorke, Salisbury, Warwick, and the Duke of York.

King. For my part, Noble Lords, I care not which,
Or Somerset, or Yorke, all's one to me.

Yorke. If Yorke have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be deny'd the Regentship.

Som. If Yorke be unworthy of the Place,
Let Yorke be Regent, I will yield to him.

Warw. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea or no,
Dispute not that Yorke is the worthy.

Card. All in this presence are thy better, Warwicke.

Warw. Warwicke may lie to be the best of all.

Sahh. Peace, Peace, and shew some reason Buckingham.

Why Somerset should be prefered in this?

Queen. Because the King forthwith will have it so.

Humph. Madame, the King is old enough himself.
To give his Censure: These are no Women's matters.

Queen. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace
To be Protector of his Excellence?

Humph. Madame, I am Protector of the Realme,
And at his pleasure will reign my Place.

Suff. Reign it then, and leave thine Infolence.

Since thou wert King, as who is King, but thou?
The Common-wealth hath daily run to wrack,
The Dolphin hath prey'd beyond the Seas,
And all the Peers and Nobles of the realme
Have beene as Bond-men to thy Souveraignetie.

Card. The Commons haue too much of the Clergys Bags
Are laine and leave with thy Extortions.

Som. Thy tumultuous Buildings, and thy Wines Attyre
Have cost a maffe of publique Treafure.

Buck. Thy Crueltie in execution

Vpon Offenders, hath exceed Law,
And left thee to the mercy of the Law.

Queen. Thy gale of Offices and Townes in France,
If they were knowne, as the fuppech is great,
Would make thee quickly hop without thy Head.

Exit Humphrey.

Glue me my��ser, what, Mynion, can ye not?

She gives the Duke a box on the ear.

I cry you mercy, Madame: was it you?

Duch. Was't I? yea, I it waggon'd French-woman:
Could I come neere your Beautie with my Nayles,
I could fet my ten Commandements in your face.

King. Sweet Aunt be quiet, twas against her will.

Duch. Against her will, good King! Duche to't in time,
Shee vnderstandes, and daileth thee like a baby:
Though in this place most Mafter wear no Breeches,
She shall not strike Dame Elianor vncruent.'d.

Exit Elianor.

Buck. Lord Cardinal, I will follow Elianor,
And listen after Humphrey, how he proceedes:
Shes tickled now, her) Fume needs no (purrers,
Shee'le gallop farre enough to her deferuption.

Exit Buckingham.

---

Enter Humphrey.

Humph. Now Lord, my Choller being over-blowne,
With walking alone about the Quadrangle,
I come to talke of Common-wealth Affayres.
As for your frightful false Obiecteds,
Prove them, and I yee open to the Law:
But God in mercie doe deal with my Soule,
As I in dutie loue my King and Country.
But to the matter that we haue in hand:
I say, my Soueraigne, Yorke is meett man,
To be your Regent in the Realme of France.

Suff. Before we make election, give me leave
To shew some reason of no little force,
That Yorke is most vnmeet of any man.

Yorke. He tell thee, Suffolke, why I am vnmeet.
Firt, for I cannot flatter thee in Pride:
Next, if I be appointed for the Place,
My Lord of Somerset will keepe me here,
Without Discharge, Money, or Furniture,
Till France be wonne into the Dolphins hands:
Last time I danc't attendance on his will,
Till Paris be beleaguer'd, famish't, and loft.

Warw. That can I witnesse, and a fouler fact
Did neuer Traytor in the Land commit.

Suff. Peace head-strong Warwicke.

Warw. Image of Pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Armorer and his Man.

Suff. Because here is a man accused of Treafon,

Pray God the Duke of Yorke excuse himselfe.

Yorke. Dost any one accuse Yorke for a Traytor?

King. What mean't thou, Suffolke? tell me, what are these?

Suff. Please it your Maiestie, this is the man

That dath accuse his Mafter of High Treafon:
His words were these: That Richard, Duke of Yorke,
Was rightfull Heire unto the English Crowne,
And that your Maiestie was an Vfurer.

King. Say man, were thoy thy words?

Armorer. And shall please thy Maiestie, I never sayd nor thought any such matter: God is my witnesse, I am falsely accus't by the Villaine.

Peter. By these tenne bones, my Lord, hee did speake them to me in the Garret one Night, as we were crowning my Lord of Yorkes Armorer.

Yorke. Bafe Dunghill Villaine, and Mechanical,
Ille haue thy Head for this thy Traytors speach:
I doe beleech your Royall Maiestie,
Let him haue all the rigor of the Law.

Armorer. Alas, my Lord, hang me if ever I speake the words: my accuer is my Prentice, and when I did correc't him for his fault the other day, he did v volte upon his knees he would be eu'n with me: I have good witnesse of this: therefore I beleech your Maiestie, doe not cast away an honest man for a Villaines accacion.

King. Vnkle, what shall we fay to this in law?

Humph. This doome, my Lord, if I may judge I:

Let Somerset be Regent o're the French,

Because in Yorke this breeds fufpicion;
And let thee have a day appointed them

For fingeal Combat, in consequent place,
For he hath witnesse of his servants malice:

This is the Law, and this Duke Humphrey's doome.

Som. I
Enter the Duke of York and the Duke of Buckingham with their Guard, and break in.

York. Lay hands upon these Traysors, and their train.
Bolde I think we watchet you at an ync.
What Madame, are you there? the King & Commonwesle
Are deeply indebted for this piece of pautes;
My Lord Protecor will, I doubt it not,
See you well guardeon't for these good defaters.
Elisener. Not halfe fo bad as thine Englands King,
Injurous Duke, that threatens where's no caufe.

Buck. True Madame, none at allwhat call you this?
Away with them, let them be clapt vp clofe,
And kept asunder; you Madame shall with vs
Stafford take her to thee,
We'll see your Trinkets here all forth-comming.
All away.

York. Lord Buckingham, me thinks you watcht her well:
A pretty Plot, well chofen to build upon,
Now pray my Lord, let's see the Deuils Writ.
What hate we here?
Readie.

The Duke yet liues, that Henry shall depose;
But he out-flies, and dye a violent death.
Why this is luf, Aio Æsidae Romanes vincere poffi,
Well, to the rest:
Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolke?
By Water shall be dyse, and take his end.
What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?
Let him hymne Cattles,
Safer shall be upon the fandie Plaines,
Then where Cattles mounted stand.
Come, come, my Lords,
Thefe Oracles are hardly attain'd,
And hardly vnderstood.
The King is now in progreffe towards Saint Albones,
With him, the Husband of this loyly Lady:
Thither goes these News,
As faft as Horfe can carry them:
A forry Breakfast for my Lord Protecor.
Buck. Your Grace that glue me leave, my Lord of York,
To be the Poste, in hope of his reward.
Thank York. At your pleasure, my good Lord.
Who's within there, howe?

Enter a Servinger.
Inuite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick
To suppe with me to morrow Night. Away.

Enter the King, Queens, Protecor, Cardinal, and Suffolke, with Fairlyners hallowing.

Queene. Beleeue me Lords, for flying at the Brooke,
I saw not better spring these feuen yeeres day:
Yet by your leave, the Winde was very high,
And ten to one, old Joane had not gone out.

King. But what a point, my Lord, your Faulcon made,
And what a pthich the fiew about the rest:
To see how God in all his Creatures workes,
Ye Man and Birds areayne of climbing high.

Suff. No manuall, and it like your Maleftie,
My Lord Protecor Hawkes doe towre so well,
They know their Matter loues to be aloft,
And beares his thoughts above his Faulcont Pitch.

Giff. My Lord, it is a base ignoble minde,
That mounts no higher then a Bird can fore:

The second Part of Henry the Sixt.
Card. I thought as much, hee would be aboute the Clouds.

Glafs. I my Lord Cardinall, how thinke you by that? Were it not good your Grace could flye to Heaven?

King. The Treasure of erectaing Ioe.

Card. Thy Heauen is on Earth, thine Eyes & Thoughts Beat on a Crowne, the Treasure of thy Heart, Pernicious Protecor, dangerous Peere, That smootht it fo with King and Common-eweale.

Glafs. What, Cardinall?

Is your Priest-hood growne peremortorie?

Tantane animis Castellibus irae, Church-men so hot?

Good Vnckle hide such malleice:

With such Holyneffe can you doe it?

Suff. No malleice Sir, no more then well becomes So good a Quarrell, and to bad a Peere.

Glafs. At who, my Lord?

Suff. Why, as you, my Lord,

An't like your Lordly Lords Protectorship.

Queene. And thy Ambition, Glafs.

King. I prythee peace, good Queene,

And what not on these furious Peeres,

For blesse who are the Peace-makers on Earth.

Card. Let me be blesse for the Peace I make Against this proud Protecor with my Sword.

Glafs. Faith holy Vnckle, would're come to that.

Card. Marry, when thou darst.

Glafs. Make vp no factious numbers for the matter,

In thine owne perfon anwre thy abuse.

Card. I, where thou darst not pepe:

And if thou dar'st, this Evening,

On the East side of the Groue.

King. How now, my Lords?

Card. Beleeue me, Cousin Glafs.

Had not your man put vp the Fowle so suddenly, We had had more sport.

Come with thy two-hand Sword.

Glafs. True Vnckle, are ye adu'd?

The East side of the Groue:

Cardinall, I am with you.

King. Why how now, Vnckle Glafs?

Glafs. Talking of Hawking; nothing else, my Lord.

Now by Gods Mother, Priest,

Ile haue your Crowne for this,

Or all my Fence hall faile,

Card. Meditate teipsum, Protecor fec to't well, protec your felic.

King. The Wines grow high,

So doe your Stomackes, Lords;

How irkefome is this Muffick to my heart?

When such Stings iare, what hope of Harmony?

I pray my Lords let me compound this thirfe.

Enter one crying a Miracle.

Glafs. What means this noyse?

Forsoe, what Miracle do'th thou proclayme?

One. A Miracle, a Miracle.

Suffkly. Come to the King, and tell him what Miracle.

One. Forsoe, a blinde man at Saint Albones Shrine, Within this halfe hour hath receu'd his fight,

A man that ne'er was in his life before.

King. Now God be prays'd, that to beleuing Soules

Gues Light in Darkneffe, Comfort in Despaire.

Enter the Major of Saint Albones, and his Brethren, bearing the man between two in a Choyse.

Card. Here comes the Towne-men, on Procellion, To preent your Highnesse with the man.

King. Great is his comfort in this Earthly Vale,

Although by his fight his fame be multiplied.

Glafs. Stand by, my Maiters, bring him neere the King, His Highnesse pleasure is to talke with him.

King. Good-fellow, tell vs here the circumstance, That we for thee may glorifie the Lord.

What, haft thou beene long blinde, and now refor'd?

Simpe. Borne blinde, and't please your Grace.

Wife. I interede was he.

Suff. What Woman is this?

Wife. His Wife, and't like your Worship.

Glafs. Hadst thou been his Mother, thou coul'dst have better tolde.

King. Where went thou borne?

Simpe. At Barwick in the North, and't like your Grace.

King. Poore Soule,

Gods goodnesse hath beene great to thee:

Let Societie nor Night unhallowed paffe,

But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Queene. Tell me, good-fellow,

Cam't thou here by Chance, or of Deuotion,

To this holy Shrines?

Simpe. God knowes of pure Deuotion,

Being call'd a hundred times, and after,

In my sleepe, by good Saint Albon:

Who faid, Symon, come; some offer at my Shrine,

And I will helpe thee.

Wife. Molt true, forsoe,

And many time and oft my selfe have heard a Voyce,

To call him to.

Card. What, art thou lame?

Simpe. I, God Almightye helpe me.

Suff. How can't thou so?

Simpe. A fall off of a Tree.

Wife. A Plum-tree, Maiter.

Glafs. How long hast thou beene blinde?

Simpe. O borne so, Maiter.

Glafs. What, and would'ft climb a Tree?

Simpe. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true, and bought his climbing very deare.

Glafs. Maiter, thou lost thy Plumes well, that would'ft venture so.

Simpe. Alas, good Maiter, my Wife defired some Damfons, and made me climb, with danger of my Life.

Glafs. A subtille Knaue, but yet it shall not serve:

Let me see thine Eyes; wink now, now open them,

In my opinion, yet thou feest not well.

Simpe. Yes Maiter, cleare as day, I thanke God and Saint Albon.

Glafs. Say'th thou me so; what Colour is this Cloake of?

Simpe. Red Maiter,Red as Blood.

Glafs. Why that's well faid; What Colour is my Gowne of?

Simpe. Black forsoe,Coule-Black, as Jet.

King. Why then, thou know'st what Colour Jet is of?

Suff. And yet I thanke,Jet did he never see.

Glafs. But
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

Gloft. But Cloakes and Gownes, before this day, a many.
Wife: Neuer before this day, in all his life.
Gloft. Tell me Sirrha, what's my Name?
Simp. Alas Mafter, I know not.
Gloft. What's his Name?
Simp. I know not.
Gloft. Not his?
Simp. No Indeede, Mafter.
Gloft. What's thine owne Name?
Simp. Sauder Sinpex, and if it please you, Mafter.
Gloft. Then Sauder, fit there,
The lyng in't Knaue in Chriftendome.
If thou hadst beene borne blinde,
Thou might't as well have knoune all our Names,
As thus to name th' feuerall Colours we doe weare.
Sight may diftinguifh of Colours:
But suddenly to nominat them all,
It is impoffible.
My Lords, Saint Albane here hath a Miracle:
And would ye not thinke it, Couning to be great,
That could refore this Cripple to his Legges again.
Simp. Of Mafter, that you could?
Gloft. My Masters of Saint Albane,
Have you not Beales in your Towne,
And Things call'd Whippes?
Mater. Yes, my Lord, if it pleafe your Grace,
Gloft. Then fend for one prefently.
Mater. Sirrha, goe fetch the Beadle hithe right.
Exit.
Gloft. Now fetch me a Stoole hithe by and by,
Now Sirrha, if you meane to fave your felfe from Whipping, leape me ouer this Stoole, and runne away.
Simp. Alas Mafter, I am not able to stand alone:
You goe about to torture me in vaine.

Enter a Beadle with Whippes.

Gloft. Well Sir, we muft have you find your Legges.
Sirrha Beadle, whippe him till he leape ouer that fame Stoole.
Beadle. I will, my Lord.
Come on Sirrha, off with your Doubtles,quickly.
Simp. Alas Mafter, what shall I do?
I am not able to stand.

After the Beadle bath hit him once, be leapes over the Stoole, and runnes away: and they fell downe, and cry of a Miracle.
King. O God, feele thou this, and beare it fo long?
Queen. It made me laugh, to fee the Villaine runne.
Gloft. Follow the Knaue, and take this Drab away.
Wife. Alas Sir, we did it for pure need.
Gloft. Let th' be whippe through every Market Towne,
Till they come to Barwick, from whence they came.

Exit.
Card. Duke Hamfray ha's done a Miracle to day.
Suff. True: made the Lane to leape and flye away.
Gloft. But you have done more Miracles then I:
You made in a day, my Lord, whole Townes to flye.

Enter Buckingham.

King. What Tidings with our Cousin Buckingham?
Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold:
A fort of naughty perfons, lewdly bent,
Vnder the Countenance and Confederacies
Of Lady Elianor, the Protectes Wife,
The Ring-leader and Head of all this Rout,
Haue prafti'd dangeroufly againft your State,
Dealing with Witches and with Coniurers,
Whom we have apprehended in the Faft,
Raying vp wicked Spirits from vnder ground,
Demanding of King, Henrys Life and Death,
And other of your Highnesse Priuie Counciell,
As more at large your Grace shal understand.
Card. And to my Lord Protector, by this means
Your Lady is forth-coming, yet at London.
This News I think hath turn'd your Weapons edge;
'Tis like, my Lord, you will not keepe your houre.
Gloft. Ambitious Church-man, lease to afflift my heart:
Sorrow and griefe haue vanquifh'd all my powers;
And vanquifh'd as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the meanest Groome.
King. O God, what mischieves work the wicked ones?
Heaping confusion on their owne heads thereby.
Queen. Gloft, fee here the Tainture of thy Neck,
And looke thy felfe be maltreated in a worth belt.
Gloft. Madame, for my felfe, to Haueen I doe appeal,
How I haue lou'd my King, and Common-weale:
And for my Wife, I know not how it stands,
Sorry I am to heare what I have hear'd,
Noble thee is: but if thee haue forgot
Honor and Vertue, and couer'st with fuch,
As like to Pythch, defile Nobilitie;
I banish her my Bed, and Companie,
And glue her as a Prey to Law and Shame,
That hath dis-honored Glofters honeft Name,
King. Well, for this Night we will repofe vs here:
To monrow toward London, back againe,
To looke into this Buffnesse therowly,
And call thes foule Offenders to their Anfweres;
And povyf the Caulfe in Juftice equall Scales,
Whole Beame stands firm, whole rightful caufe prevails.
Flerifh, Excite.

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now my good Lords of Salisbury & Warwick,
Our fample Supper ended, give me leaue,
In this clofe Walke, to satisfe my felfe,
In cranving your opinion of my Title,
Which is infallible, to Englands Crown.
Sallib. My Lord, I long to heare it at full.
Horn. Sweet York do begin and if thy clambe be good,
The Neuells are thy Subiects to command,
York. Then thus:
Edward the third, my Lords, had feuen Sonnes:
The first, Edward the Black-Prince, Prince of Wales;
The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,
Langet, Duke of Clarence; next to whom,
Was Iohn of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster;
The fift, was Edward Langley, Duke of Yorke;
The fext, was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Glofters;
William of Windsor was the feuenteenth, and laft.
Edward the Black-Prince dyed before his Father,
And left behind him Richard, his only Sonne,
Who after Edward the third's death, reign'd as King,
Till Henry Bullingbrook, Duke of Lancaster,
The eldeft Sonne and Heire of Iohn of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the Name of Henry the fourth,
Seize'd on the Reall Crown, depos'd the rightfull King,
Sent his poor Queen to France, from whence she came,
And
And him to Pumfret; where, as all you know,
Harmeleffe Richard was murthered traitorously.

Warm. Father, the Duke hath told the truth;
Thus got the House of Lancaster the Crown.

York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right:
For Richard, the first Sonnes Heire, being dead,
The Iffue of the next Sonne should have reign'd.

Salib. But William of Hatfield dyed without an Heire.

York. The third Sonne, Duke of Clarence,
From whose Line I clayme the Crowne,
Had Iffue Philip, a Daughter,
Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March;
Edmund had Iffue, Roger, Earl of March;
Roger had Iffue, Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Salib. This Edmund, in the Reigne of Bullingbrooke,
As I haue read, layd clayme vnto the Crowne,
And but for Owen Glendore, had beene King;
Who kept him in Captitie, till he dyed.

But, to the rest.

York. His eldest Sifter, Anne,
My Mother, being Heire vnto the Crowne,
Marryed Richard, Earl of Cambridge,
Who was to Edmund Langley,
Edward the thirds fift Sonnes Sonne;
By her I clayme the Kingdome:
She was Heire to Roger, Earl of March,
Who was the Sonne of Edmund Mortimer,
Who marryed Phillip, sole Daughter
Vnto Lionel, Duke of Clarence.

So, if the Iffue of the elder Sonne
Succeed before the younger, I am King.

Warm. What plaine proceedings is more plain then this?
Henry doth clayme the Crowne from John of Gaunt,
The fourth Sonne, York claymes it from the third:
Till Lionel Iffue layes, his should not reigne.
It fayles not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy Sonnes, false flippes of such a Stock,
Then Father Salisbury, kneele we together,
And in this priuate Plot be we the first,
That shall falute our rightfull Soueraigne
With honor of his Birth-right to the Crowne.

Dob. Long live our Soueraigne Richard, Englands King.

York. We thank you Lords:
But I am not your King, till I be Crown'd,
And that my Sword be thay'd;
With heart-blood of the House of Lancaster:
And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with advisit and silent cerelee.
Doe you as I doe in these dangerous dayes,
Winke at the Duke of Suffolkes infolence,
As Beaufords Pride, at Somerets Ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the Crew of them,
Till they haue fear'd the Shepheard of the Flock,
That vertuous Prince, the good Duke Humfrey:
'Tis that they seeke; and they, in seeking that,
Shall finde their deathe, if York can prophesie.

Salib. My Lord, breake we off; we know your minde at full.

Warm. My heart affurres me, that the Earle of Warwick
Shall one day make the Duke of Yorke a King.

York. And Neilis, this I doe affure my felle,
Richard shall lye to make the Earle of Warwick
The greatest man in England, but the King.

Exeunt.

Sound Trumpets. Enter the King and State, with Guard, to benifh the Duke.

King. Stand forth Dame Eleanor Cobham,
Gistles Wife:
In fight of God, and vs,your guilt is great,
Receive the Sentence of the Law for finne,
Such as by Gods Bookes are aduiz'd to death,
You foure from hence to Prifon, back againe;
From thence, vnto the place of Execution:
The Witch in Smithfield shall be burnt to ashes,
And you three shall be trangled on the Gallowes.
You Madame, for you are more Nobly borne,
Despoiled of your Honor in your Life,
Shall, after three dayes open Penance done,
Live in your Country here, in Banishment,
With Sir Iohn Stanly, in the Isle of Man.

Eleanor. Welcome is Banishment, welcome were my Death.

Glys. Eleanor, the Law thou feest hath judg'd thee,
I cannot iustifie whom the Law condemnes:
Mine eyes are full of teares, my heart of griefe.
Ah Humfrey, this diuision in thine age,
Will bring thy head with forrow to the ground.
I beforch your Maiestie glise me leaue to goe;
Sorrow would foliaze, and mine Age would waste.

King. Stay Humfrey, Duke of Glitter,
Ere thou goe, glue vp thy Staffe,
Henry will to himselfe Protector be,
And God shall be my hope, my fay, my guide,
And Lanthorne to my feetes:
And goe in peace, Humfrey, no leaff belowd,
Then when thou wert Protector to thy King.

Queen. I see no reason, why a King of yeere
Should be to be protected like a Child,
God and King Henry gouerne Englands Realme:
Glue vp thy Staffe, Sir, and the King his Realme.

Glys. My Staffe? Here, Noble Henry, is my Staffe:
As willingly doe I the same refigne,
As ere thy Father Henry made it mine;
And euen as willingly at thy fete I leaue it,
As others would ambitiosly receive it.
Farewell good King: when I am dead, and gone,
May honorable Peace attend thy Throne.

Exit Glister.

Queen. Why now is Henry King, and Margaret Queen,
And Humfrey, Duke of Glitter, scarce himselfe,
That beares fo throwed a mayme: two Pulls at once;
His Lady banifht, and a Limbe lopt off,
This Staffe of Honor raught, there let it stand,
Where it beft fits to be, in Henries hand.

Soft. Thus droupes this litle Pyne, & hangs his sprays,
Thus Eliamers Pride dies in her yongest dayes.

York. Lords, let him goe. Please it your Maiestie,
This is the day appointed for the Combat,
And ready are the Appellant and Defendant,
The Armorour and his Man, to enter the Lists,
So please your Hightnesse to behold the fight.

Queen. I good my Lords: for purposely therefore Left 1 the Court, to fee this Quarrell try'de.

King. A Gods Name fee the Lyfts and all things fit,
Here let them end it, and God defend the right.

York. I never saw a fellow worfe behinde,
Or more afraid to fight, then is the Appellant,
The servant of this Armorour, my Lords.
Enter at one Dooe the Armorer and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much, that he is drunk; and he enters with a Drumme before him, and his Staffe, with a Sand-bagge followed to it: and at the other Dooe his Man, with a Drumme and Sand-bagge, and Prentices drinking to him.

1. Neighbour. Here Neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a Cup of Sack; and fear not Neighbour, you shall doe well enough.

2. Neighbour. And here Neighbour, here's a Cup of Charmecco.

3. Neighbour. And here's a Pot of good Double-Beere Neighbour drinkke, and fear not your Man.

Armorer. Let it come y'faith, and I'll pledge you all, and a figge for Peter.

1. Prent. Here Peter, I drink to thee, and be not afraid.

2. Prent. Be merry Peter, and fear not thy Master, Fight for credit of the Prentices.

Peter. I thank you all; drinkke, and pray for me, I pray you, for I think I have taken my last Draught in this World. Here Robin, and if I dye, I give thee my Apore; and Wild, thou shalt have my Hammer: and here Tom, take all the Money that I have. O Lord bleffe me, I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my Master, hee hath learnt so much fame already.

Salib. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows. Sirtha, what's thy Name?

Peter. Peter, Peter fortooth.

Salib. Peter? what more?

Peter. Thumpe.

Salib. Thumpe? Then fee thou thumpe thy Master well.

Armorer. Masters, I am come hither as it were upon my Mans Injigation, to proue him a Knave, and my selfe an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queene: and therefore Peter have at thee with a downe-right blow.

York. Dispatch, this Knave tongue begins to double. Sound Trumpets, Alarum to the Combatants.

They fight, and Peter frays him down.

Armorer. Hold Peter, hold, I confesse, I confesse Trea-tor.

York. Take away his Weapon: Fellow thank God, and the good Wine in thy Masters way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine Enemies in this presence? O Peter, thou hast praught't in right.

King. Goe, take hence that Traitor from our sight, For by his death we doe perceiue his guilt, And God in Justice hath reveng'd to us The truth and innocence of this poor fellow, Which he had thought to have murther'd wrongfullie. Come fellow, follow us for thy Reward.

Sound a flourite. Exeunt.

Enter Duke Humphrey and his Man in Mourning Cloaths.

Gl oft. Thus sometime hath the brightest day a Cloud:
And after Summer, clouded with care;
Barren Winter, with its wrathfull nipping Cold;
So Carres and loves abound, as Sevens fleet.
Sirrs, what's a Clocke?

Srs. Tenne, my Lord.

Gl oft. Tenne is the hour that was appointed me,
To watch the coming of my punish'd Dukeesse:
Vnehath may thee endure the Fairie Streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, all can thy Noble Minde abrooke
The abject People, gazing on thy face,
With envious Lookes laughing at thy flame,
That earl did follow thy proud Charlot-Wheels,
When thou di'dst ride in triumph through the streets.
But soft, I think she comes, and I'll prepare
My team-foynd eyes, to see her Miferies.

Enter the Duchs on a white Sheet, and a Taper burning in her hand, with the Sherife and Officers.

Srs. So please your Grace, we'll take her from the Sherife.

Gl o f t. No, firre not for your blues, let her passe by.

El i a n e r. Come, you, my Lord, to see my open flame?
Now thou dost Penance too. Lookke how they gaze,
See how the giddy multitude doe point,
And nodde their heads, and throw their eyes on thee.
Ah Gl o f t, hide thee from their hateful lookes,
And in thy Clofe pent vp, rue my flame,
And banne thine Enemies, both mine and thine.

Gl o f t. Be patient, gentle Nell, forget this grieve.

El i a n e r. Ah Gl o f t, teach me to forget my felfe:
For whileft I think I am thy married Wife,
And thou a Prince, Protecor of this Land;
Me thinkes I should not thus be led along,
May't vp in flame, with Papers on my back,
And follow'd with a Rabble, that reclouye
To see my tears, and heare my deep-fet groanes.
The ruthless Flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I fang, the envious people laugh,
And bid me be aduised how I tredse.

Ah Humphrey, can I bear this shamefull yoke?
Trowest thou, that ere Ie looke upon the World,
Or count them happy, that enjoyes the Sunne?
Nor Darke shall be my Light, and Night my Day.
To thinke upon my Pompe, shall be my Hell.
Sometimes Ite say, I am Duke Humphrey's Wife,
And he a Prince, and Ruler of the Land:
Yet so he ful'd, and such a Prince he was,
As he stood by, whileft I his forlome Dukeesse,
Was made a wonder, and a poynting stock
To every Idle Raffall follower.

But be thou milde, and buft not at my flame,
Nor firre at nothing, till the Axe of Death
Hang ouer thee, as fure it shortly will.
For Suflices, he that can doe all in all
With her, that hateth thee and hates vs all,
And Yorkes, and impious Beaunard, that faile Priest,
Haue all lyn'd Buffes to betray thys Wings,
And flye thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee.
But fear not thou, until thy foot be flat'd,
Nor never feckle prevention of thy foes.

Gl o f t. Ah Nell, forbearethou aymett all awry.
I must offend, before I be attainted:
And had I twentie times fo many foes,
And each of them had twentie times their power,
All these could not procure me any fcafe,
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimelefe.
Would't haue me restore thee from this reproach?:

n  Why
Why yet thy scandall were not wipt away,
But I in danger for the breach of Law.
Thy greater helpe is quiet, gentle Nell: I pray thee for thy heart to patience,
Thes fewe days wonder will be quickly wonne:

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his Maiesties Parliament,
Holden at Bury, the first of this next Moneth.

Glo. And my content ne're ask'd herein before?
This is clofe dealing. Well, I will be there.

My Nell, I take my lease: and Marter Sheriff,
Let not her Penance exceede the Kings Commision.
Sb. And't pleafe your Grace, here my Commision fayes:
And Sir Iohn Staunton is appointed now,
To take her with him to the Ile of Man.

Glo. Muft you, Sir Iohn, moste my Lady here?
Staunton. So am I guien in charge, may't pleafe your Grace.

Glo. Entretain her not the worfe, in that I pray
You vfe her well: the World may laugh againe,
And I may liue it, and kinderly, if you doe it her.
And fo Sir Iohn, farewell.

Ellenor. What, gone my Lord, and bid me not farewell?
Glo. Witneffe my teares, I cannot stay to speake.

Ellenor. Art thou gone too? all comfort goe with thee,
For none abides with me: my Ioy, is Death,
Death, at whole Name I oft have beene afar'd,
Because I wish'd this Worlds eternite.
Staunton, I prethee goe, and take me hence,
I care not whither, for I begge no favour;
Onely consey me where thou art commanded.
Stanley. Why, Madame, that is to the Ile of Man,
There to be v'd according to your State.

Ellenor. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:
And shall I then be v'd reproachfully?
Stanley. Like to a Ducheffe, and Duke Humfryes Lady,
According to that State you shall be v'd.

Ellenor. Sherife farewell, and better then I fare,
Although thou haft beene Conduct of my flame.
Sheriff. It is my Office, and Madame pardon me.
Ellenor. I, I, farewell, thy Office is dicharg'd:
Come Stanely, farewell we goe?
Stanley. Madame, your Penance done,
Throw off this Sheet,
And goe we to atuye you for our journey.

My Name will not be shrutted with my Sheet:
No, it will hang upon my richet Robes,
And shew it faire, atuye me how I can.
Goe, leade the way, I long to see my Prinon.

Sound a Seruet. Enter King, Queens, Cardinall, Suffolke,
York, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick, to the Parliament.

King. I mufe my Lord of Glofuer is not come:
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
What e're occasion keeps him from vs now.
Queene. Can you not find, or will you not obferue
The strangenesse of his alterd Counfancen?
With what a Malefie he bears himfelfe,
How infolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptorie, and unlike himfelfe.
We know the time since he was milde and affable,
And if we did chance a farre-off Looke,
Immediately he was vpon his Knees,
That all the Court admir'd him for submiffion.
But meet him now, and be in the Morne,
When every one willowe the time of day,
He knits his Brow, and shearues an angry Eye,
And paffeth by with fille wheeved Knees,
Disdaining dute that to vs belongs.
Small Curres are not regarded when they gyinne,
But great men tremble when the Lyon rores,
And Humfrye is no little Man in Engaine.
Firft note, that he is more you in difcrete,
And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
Me feemeth then, it is no Pollicie,
Refpecting what a rancorous minde he beares,
And his advantage following your deceafe,
That he should come about your Royall Perfon,
Or be admitted to your Highneffe Counsell.
By ilatterie hath he wonn the Commons hearts:
And when he pleafe to make Commodity,
'Tis to be feared they all will follow.
Now's the Spring, and Weeds are hallow-rooted,
Suffer them now, and they're o'grow the Garden,
And choyce the Herbes for want of Husbandry.
The reuerent care I beare vnto my Lord,
Made me collect thefe dangers in the Duke,
If it be fond, call it a Womans feare:
Which feare, if better Realions can frupplant,
I will subfcribe, and say I wrong'd the Duke,
My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and Yorke,
Reprofe my allegation, if you can,
Or elle conclude my words effectual.
Suff. Well hath your Highneffe feene into this Duke:
And had I fere beene put to speake my minde,
I think I should haue told your Graves Tale.
The Ducheffe, by his fubornation,
Vpon my Life began her dwelliing prafilies:
Or if he were not prude to thole Faults,
Yet by reputing of his high difcrete,
As next the King, he was fucceffe Neire,
And fuch high vaunts of his Nobilitie,
Did ingrate the Bedlam braine-fick Ducheffe,
By wicked meanes to frame our Soueraigne fall,
Smooth runnes the Water, where the Brooke is deep,
And in his Mountes he worshipes,
The Fox barkes not, when he will feace the Lambe.
No, no, my Soueraigne, Glofuer is a man
Vnfauned yet, and full of deep deceit.
Card. Did he not, contrary to forme of Law,
Desire for his deaths, for small offend done?
Yorke. And did he not, in his Protectorfhip,
Leue great fummes of Money through the Realme,
For Soudrers pay in France, and neuer fent it?
By meanes whereof, the Townes each day revolted.
But, yet, there are petty faults to faults unknowne,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humfrye.
King. My Lords at once: the care you have of vs,
To move downe Thones that would annoy our Foot,
Is worthy prayse: but holl I speake my confience,
Our Kinman Glofuer is as innocent,
From meaning Trefon to our Royall Perfon,
As is the fucking Lambe, or harmelfe Dowe:
The Duke is vertuous, milde, and too well guien,
To dreame on eull, or to worke my downefall.
Qu. Ah what's more dangerous, then this fond affiance?
Seemes he a Dowe? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's difpoof'd as the hatefull Rauen,
Is he a Lambe? his Skinner is surely lent him,
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

For hee's enclinn'd as is the raenous Wolves.
Who cannot steale a shape, that meane's deceit.
Take heed, my Lord, the welfare of vs all,
Hangs on the cutting short that draulfull man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health vnto your gracious Soueraigne.

King. Welcame Lord Somerset: What Newes from France?

Som. That all your Intrest in those Territories, is ytterly bereft you: all is lost.

King. Cold Newes, Lord Somerset: but Gods will be done.

Fare. Cold Newes for me I had hope of France,
As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thas are my Blossomes blustred in the Bud,
And Caterpillers eate my Leaues away:
But I will remedy this greate ere long,
Or fell my Title for a glorious Grace.

Enter Glosters.

Gloft. All happinese vnto your Lord the King:
Pardon, my Liege, that I haue flay'd so long.

Suff. Nay Gloster, know that thou art come too soone,
Vnleffe thou wert more loyall then thou art:
I doe arreft thee of High Treason here.

Gloft. Well Suffelie, thou shalt not see me bluss,
Nor change my Countenance for this Arreft:
A Heart vnflipp'd, is not eaily daunted.
The purest Spring is not soe free from mudde,
As I am cleare from Treafon to your Soueraigne.
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guiltie?

Turke. 'Tis thought, my Lord,
That you tooke Bribes of France,
And being Protecor, lay'd the Souldiers pay,
By meane whereof, his Highnesse hath lost France.

Gloft. Is it but thought so?
What are thay that thinke it?
I never rob'd the Souldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny Bribe from France.
So helpe me God, as I haue watcht the Night,
I, Night by Night, in studyng good for England.
That Dayt that ere I werte from the King,
Or any Groat I hoor'd to my vse,
Be brought against me at my Trayll day.
No, many a Pound of mine owne proper flore,
Because I would not taxe the needle Commons,
Haue it all-purued to the Caretours,
And never ask'd for restitution.

Card. It fetues you well, my Lord, to fay soe much.

Gloft. I fay no more then truth,fo helpe me God.

Turke. In your Protecorship, you did deuife Strange Tortures for Offenders,never heard of,
That England was defam'd by Tyrannie.

Gloft. Why 'tis well known, that whiles I was Protecor,
Pittie was all the fault that was in me:
For I should melt at an Offenders teares,
And lowly words were Rantome for their fault:
Vnleffe it were a bloody Murderer,
Or foule felonious Thieves, that flee'd soe poore passengers,
I never gauue them condigne punishment.

Murther indee, that bloodie finnes, I tortur'd
About the Felon,or what Trepas eile.

Suff. My Lord, these faults are raue,quickly answer'd:
But mightier Crimes are lay'd vnto your charge,
Whereof you cannot eaily purge your selfe.

I doe arreft you in his Highnesse Name,
And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal
To keepe, untill your further time of Tryall.

King. My Lord of Gloster, 'tis my speciall hope,
That you will cleare your selfe from all furpence,
My Conscience tells me you are innocent.

Gloft. Ah gracious Lord, these daies are dangerous:
Vertue is chokt with foule Ambition,
And Charlie chas'd hence by Rancours hand;
Foule Subornation is predominant.
And Equitie cail'd your Highnesse Land,
I know, their Complot to have my Life,
And if my death might make this Illand happy,
And proue the Period of their Tyrannie,
I would expend it with all Willingsnesse.
But mine is made the Prologue to their Play:
For thousandes more, that yet suspeect no peril,
Will not conclude their plotted Tragedie.

Beaufords red sparkling eyes blieb his hearts mallice,
And Suffelie cloudie Brow his torment;
Sharpe Buckinghams withurthens with his tongue,
The enious Load that lies upon his heart:
And dogged Turke, that reaches at the Moone,
Whose ouer-weening Arme I have pluckt back,
By faffe acoue doth louell at my Life.

And you, my Soueraigne Lady, with the reft,
Cauffieke hase lay'd diferages on my head,
And with your biff endeuour have fhir'd vp
My liefeft Liege to be mine Enerie:
I,all of you lay'd your heads together,
My felle had notice of your Consenticles,
And all to make away my quittiffe Life.
I shall not want faufe Witnesse, to condemn me,
Nor flore of Trefons, to augment my guilt:
The ancient Prouerbe will be well effect,
A Staffe is quickly found to beat a Dogg.

Card. My Liege, his raying is intolerable.
If thoes that care to keepe your Royall Perfons
From Trefons secret Kniffe, and Trators Rages,
Be thus vpbrayed, chid, and rated at,
And the Offender grunted spoce of speech,
'Twill make them comple in zale vnto your Grace.

Suff. Habi he not trowt our Soueraigne Lady here
With ignominious words, though Clarkely couth?
As if he had fubborned fome to fare
Falle allegations, to o'rethrow his state.

Qne. But I can give the lofer lease to chide.

Gloft. Farre truer (fike then my fay'd):
I lofe indeede,
Behrow the winners, for they play'd me falle,
And well fuch losers may haue lease to speake.

Buck. Hee'll wret the fonce, and hold vs here all day.

Lord Cardinall, he is your Prisoner.

Card. Sirs, take away the Duke, and guard him sure.

Gloft. Ah,thus King Henry throwes away his Crutch,
Before his Legges be firme to beare his Body.
Thus is the Shepherbe beaten from thy side,
And Wolves are gnauling, who shall gnow thee firft.
Ah that my fere were falle, ah that it were;
For good King Henry, thy decay I feare.

Exit Gloft.

King. My Lords, what to your wildeome feemeth beft,
Doe, or vndoe, as if our fere were here.

Quen. What, will your Highnesse leave the Parliament?

King. I Margaret is my heart is drown'd with griefe,
Whose fould begins to flowe within mine eyes;
My Body round enyght with miferie:
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

For what's more miserable than Discontent?
Ah Wrickle Humfrey, in thy face I see
The Map of Honor, Truth, and Loyalty:
And yet, good Humfrey, is the hour to come,
That ere I prou'd thee faile, or fear'd thy faith.

What lowring Starre now enuies thy estate?
That thee great Lords, and Margaret our Queene, Doe feake subversion of thy harmelesse Life.
Thou neuer didst them wrong, nor no man wrong:
And as the Butcher takes away the Calfe,
And binds the Wretch, and beats it when it straues,
Bearing it to the bloody Slaughter-houle;
Euen so remorselesse hau'e they borne him hence:
And as the Dummie runnes lowing vp and downe,
Looking the way her harmelesse young one vp,
And can doe naught but waile her Darlings losse;
Euen so my selfe bewayles good Glofiers cafe
With fad vnhelpful trares, and with dim'd eyes;
Looke after him, and cannot doe him good:
So which are his vowed Enemies.

His fortunes I will wepe, and twixt each groane,
Say, who's a Traitor? Glofier is he none. Exit.

Queene. Free Lords:
Cold Snow melts with the Sunnes hot Beames:
Henry, my Lord, is cold in great Affairs.
Too full of foolish pittie: and Glofiers thew
Beguiles him, as the mornenfull Crocodile
With fawre fnares relenting passengers;
Or as the Snake, roll'd in a flowering Banke,
With fihing chroncker'd should doth fling a Child,
That for the beate he thinkes it excellent.
Beleeue me Lords, were none more wife then I,
And yet herein I judge mine owne Wit good;
This Glofier should be quickly rid the World,
To rid vs from the feare we haue of him.

Card. That he should dye, is worthlie pollicie,
But yet we want a Colour for his death:
'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of Law.
Suff. But in my minde, that were no pollicie:
The King will labour to faile his Life,
The Common haply rife, to faue his Life;
And yet we haue but trivsall argument,
More then mistrust, that theves him worthy death.

Turke. So that by this, you would not have him dye.
Suff. Ah Turke, no man alio, fo faine as I.

Turke. 'Tis Turke that hath more reafon for his death.
But my Lord Cardinal, and you my Lord of Suffolk,
Say as you thinke, and speake it from your Soules:
Wet't not all one, an empirle Eagle were set,
To guard the Chicken from a hungry Kyte,
As place Duke Humfrey for the Kings Protectors.

Queene. So the poor Chicken should be sure of death.
Suff. Madame 'tis true i and wen't not madneffe then,
To make the Fox Surueroy of the Fold?
Who being accou'd a crafifie Murtherer,
His guilt shou'd be but idly pouted ouer,
Because his purpofe is not executed.
No let him dye, in that he is a Fox,
By nature prou'd an Enemy to the Flock,
Before his Chaps be flay'n with Crimon blood,
As Humfrey prou'd by Reafons to my Queene.
And doe not stand on Quiflers how to flay him:
Be it by Gynnes, by Snare, by Subtlete,
Sleeping, or Waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deciet,
Which mates him ftrike, that ftrike inten'd deceit.

Queene. Thrice Noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke,
Suff. Not resolute, except so much were done,
For things are often speaked, and feldome meant;
But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preferre my Suveraigne from his Poe,
Say but the word, and I will be his Prieff.

Card. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,
Em you can take due Orders for a Prieff:
Say you confent, and cenfure well the deed,
And Ie provide his Executioner,
I tend to the fafttie of my Liege.
Suff. Here is my Hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Queene. And fo say I.

Turke. And I: and now we three hau'e spoke it,
It skills not greatly who impugnes our doome.

Enter a Poste.

Post. Great Lords, from Ireland am I come amaine,
To signifie, that Rebels there are vp,
And put the Englishmen vnto the Sword.
Send Succours(Lords)and stop the Rage betime,
Before the Wound doe grow vcurable;
For being greene, there is great hope of helpe.

Card. A Breach that caues a quick expedient flope.
What counfaile you in this weightie cause?

Turke. That Somerfit be fent as Regent thither:
'Tis meeet that luckie Ruler be employ'd,
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Sum. If Turke, with all his farre-fet pollicie,
Had beene the Regent there, in stead of me,
He neuer would have fayd in France fo long.

Turke. No, not to lose it all, as thou haft done.
I rather would have loft my Life betimes,
Then bring a burthen of dis-honour home,
By flaying there fo long, till all were loft.
Shew me one scarre, charafter'd on thy Skinne,
Mens flesh prefer'd to whole, doe feldome winne.
Oh. Nay then, this sparkle will prove a raging fire,
If Wind and Fuel be brought, to feed it with:
No more, good Turke, this Somerfit be fll.
Thy fortune, Turke, hadst thou beene Regent there,
Might haply have prou'd farre worfe then his.

Turke. What, worfe then naught? nay, then a flame take all.

Somerfit. And in the number, thee, that without flame.

Card. My Lord of Yorke, trie what your fortune is:
Th'vncluil Keernes of Ireland are in Armes,
And temper Clay with blood of Engliſhmen.
To Ireland will you leade a Band of men,
Collected choycely, from each Contie fome,
And trie your hap againft the Iriſhmen?

Turke. I will, my Lord; fo pleaſe his Maieſtie.
Suff. Why, our Authoritie is his content,
And what we doe eſtablifh, he confirmes:
Then, Noble Turke, take thou this ſtate in hand.

Turke. I am content: Prudeine me Soulidrs, Lords,
While I take order for mine Owne affaires.
Suff. A charge, Lord Turke, that I will fee perform'd.
But now returne we to the faile Duke Humfrey.

Card. No more of him: for I will deale with him,
That henceforth he shall trouble vs no more:
And fo brake off, the day is almost spent,
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talke of that event.

Turke, My
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

York. My Lord of Suffolke, within fourteen and three dayes At Bristow I expect my Souldiers, For there Ile ship them all for Ireland. Exit. Enter York.

York. Now York, or yeare, thee thy fearful thoughts, And change misfortune to resolution; Be that thou hop'st it be, or what thou art; Refuse to death, it is not worth thy enjoying: Let pale-fac'te fear keepes with the mean-estate man, And finde no harbor in a Royall heart. Faster the Spring-time flowres, comes thought on thought, And not a thought, but thinkes on Dignitate. My Bayney, more bufe then the laboring Spider, Woues tedious Snares to trap mine Enemies. Well Nobles, well 'tis politickly done, To send me packing with an Host of men: I feare me, you but warme the starred Snake, Who cherisht in your breaths, will sting your hearts. Two men I lack't, and you will giue them me; I take it kindly; yet be well affur'd, You put sharpe Weapons in a mad-mans hands. Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty Band, I wil three vp in England some black Storme, Shall blowe ten thousand Soules to Heaven, or Hell: And this fell Tempest shall not cease to rage, Untill the Golden Circuit on my Head, Like to the glorious Sunnes transparent Beames, Doe calme the furie of this mad-bred Flawe. And for a minister of my intent, I have found'd a head-Strong Kentishman, John Cad of Ashford, To make Commination, as well full he can, Vnder the Title of John Mortimer. In Ireland haue I seene this rubborne Cad, Oppose himselfe against a Troupe of Kentes, And fought so long, till that his thighs with Darts Were almoast like a sharpe-quill'd Porpentine: And in the end being refuced, I haue seene Him capre vright, like a wilde Morico, Shackling the bloody Darts, as he his Bees. Full of teen, like a dag-hay'ld craftye Korne, Hath he counteued with the Enemy, And vindicuer'd, come to me again, And giuen me notice of their Villanies. This Deuill here shall be my subsitute: For that John Mortimer, which now is dead, In face, in gate, in speech he doth resembel. By this, I shall percieve the Commons minde, How they affeft the Houfe and Clayme of York. Say he be taken, ract, and tortured; I know, no paine they can inflict upon him, Will make him say, I moutd him to these Armes. Say that he throug, as 'tis great like he will, Why then from Ireland come I with my strength, And reape the Harrett which that Rackall fow'd. For Humphrey; being dead, as he shall be, And Henry put apart: the next for me. Exit. Enter two or three running over the Stage, from the Murther of Duke Humphrey.

Suff. Now Sirs, have you dispatcht this thing? 1. I, my good Lord, he's dead. Suff. Why that's well said. Go, get you to my House, I will reward you for this venoustous deed: The King and all the Peeres are here at hand, Have you laid faire the Bed? Is all things well, According as I gave directions? 1. 'Tis, my good Lord. Suff. Away, be gone. Exit.

Sound Trumpets. Enter the King, the Queen, Cardinali, Suffolke, Someret, with Attendants.

King. Go, call our Vnckle to our preffence straight: Say, we intend to try his Grace to day, If he be guiltie, as 'tis published. Suff. Ile call him presently, my Noble Lord. Exit. King. Lords take your places; and I pray you all Proceed no further joiniff our Vnckle Glister, Then from true evidence, of good edeme, He be approu'd in proufible culpable. Queen. God forbid any Malice shou'd preuyle, That faultlesse may condemne a Noble man: Pray God he may acquitt him of fution. King. I thanke thee Neil, these words content mee much.

Enter Suffolke.

King. What, doth my Lord of Suffolke comfort me? Came he right now to sing a Rauens Note, Whose dimmell tune bereft my Vtill powres: And chinkes he, that the chirping of a Wren, By crying comfort from a hollow breast, Can chafe away the first-concied found? Hide not thy poyson with such fuged words, Lay not thy hands on me: for beare I say, Theirch affright me as a Serpents fling. Thou halfefull Meffinger, out of my fight, Vpon thy eye-balls, murtherous Tyranie Sits in grim Maiestie, to fright the World. Lookes not vpon me, for thine eyes are wounding; Yet doe not goe away: come Balsike, And kill the innocent gazers with thy fight: For in the shade of death, I shall finde joy; In life, but double death, now Glister's dead. Queen. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolke thus? Although the Duke was enemy to him, Yet he moit Christen-like laments his death: And for my selfe, For as he was to me, Might liquid teares, or heart-offending groanes, Or blood-consuming fighes recall his Life;
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

I would be blinde with weeping, sicke with groines, Looke pale as Prim-rose with blood-drinking sighes, And all to have the Noble Duke alive. What know I how the world may deeme of me? For it is knowne we were but hollow Friends: It may be judg'd I made the Duke away, So fhal my name with Slanders tongue be wounded, And Princes Courts be fill'd with my reproach! This get I by his death! Aye me vnhappy, To be a Queene, and Crown'd with infamie.

King. Ah woe is me for Goflter, wretched man. Queen. Be woe for me, more wretched then he is. What, Doff thou turne away, and hide thy face? I am no loathsome Leaper, looke on me. What? Art thou like the Adder waxen deafe? Be poysonous too, and kill thy forlorne Queene. Is all thy comfort shut in Glottern Tombe? Why then Dame Elianor was neere thy love. Erst fadly and mournfully, And make my Image but an Ale-house signe. Was this for your wrack'd upon the Sea, And twice by awkward winde from Englands banke Drowne backe againe vnto my Native Clime. What boyled this? but well fore-warning winde Did fume to lay, feke not a Scorpions Neiz, Nor set no footing on this vnkinde Shore. What did I then? But curst the gentle guts, And he that loo'd them forth their Brazen Caus, And bid them blow towards Englands bleffed shore, Or turne our Steare vpon a dreadfull Rocke: Yet Aelous would not be a murtherer, But left that hateful office vnto thee.

The pretty vaulting Sea refus'd to drowne me, Knowing that thou would haue me drown'd on shore With teares as fall as Sea, through thy vntimelie. The splitting Rockes cowrd in the finking lands, And would not dash me with their ragged fides, Because thy flinte heart more hard then they, Might in th' Pallace, perif Elianor.

As faire as I could ken thy Chalky Cliffeis,
When from thy Shore, the Tempett beate vs backe, I ftood vpon the Hatches in the fhorne:
And when the duskie sky, began to rob
My earnest-gaping-light of thy Lands view,
I tooke a cottle Lewell from my necke,
A Hart it was bound in with Diamonds,
And the Lion, then I receiv'd it,
And fo I wish'd thy body might my Heart:
And even with this, I loft faire Englands view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my Heart,
And call'd them blinde and duske Specktlees,
For looking ken of Lillions withidh Coak.
How often have I tempted Suffolkes tongue (The agent of thy foul incontenance)
To fit and watch me as Ascanius did,
When he to madding Dido would unfold
His false Heart, and wonder'd it,
Am I not wish't like her? Or thou not falle like him?
Aye me, I can no more: Dye Elianor,
For Henry weeps, that thou doft liue so long.

Noys within. Enter Warwickes, and many Commons.

A Ass to hate ye Noble Leaper
That good Duke Humfrey Traitiously is murdred

By Suffolke, and the Cardinal Beauford means:
The Commons like an angry Hue of Bees That want their Leader, flatter vp and downe,
And care not who they fling in his renuage.
My selfe haue calm'd their spleenfull mutinie,
Vntill they heare the order of his death.

King. That he is dead good Warwick, 'ts too true,
But how he dyed, God knowes, not Henry: Enter his Chamber, view his breathlesse Corps,
And comment then vpon his fodiesne death.

War. That shal I do my Liege; Stay Salsburie With the rude multitude, till I returne.

King.O thou that judggest all things, stay my thoughts:
My thoughts, that labour to perwade my soul,
Some violent hands were laid on Humfries life:
If my suspic pe be false, forgive me God,
For judgement onely doth belong to thee:
Faint would I go to chafe his pale lips,
With twenty thousand liftes, and to drain
Upon his face an Ocean of falt teares,
To tell my loue vnto his dunme deafe truncke,
And with my fingers feel his hand, vanfeeling:
But all in vaine are thefe meane Obsequies,

Bed foc forth.

And to furvey his dead and earthly Image:
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

War. Come hither gracious Soueraigne, view this body.

King. That is to see how deepe my graze is made,
For with his foule fled all my worldly falace:
For seeing him, I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my foule intends to live
With that dread King that tooke our flate vpon him,
To free vs from his Fathers wrathfull corfe,
I do beleue that violent hands were laid
Vpon the life of this thrice-famed Duke.

Suf. A dreadfull Oath, fware with a solemn tongue:
What infance gives Lord Warwick for his vow.

War. See how the blood is feted in his face.

Oh haue I fene a timely-parted Ghost,
Of shfy femeance, meager, pale, and bloodlefe,
Being all defendd to the labouring heart,
Who in the Confift that it holds with death,
Attraft the fame for ayance gaind the enemy,
Which with the heart there cooles, and ne're returneth,
To bluife and beautifie the Cheefe apaine.

But fce, his fides are blacke, and fce especially.

His eye-balles furuey'd,
His blacke, and fce especially.

With the heart there cooles, and ne're returneth,
To bluife and beautifie the Cheefe apaine.
With the heart there cooles, and ne're returneth,
To bluife and beautifie the Cheefe apaine.
With the heart there cooles, and ne're returneth,
To bluife and beautifie the Cheefe apaine.
The Second Part of Henry the Sixth.

Warm. Who finds the Hefter dead, and bleeding fresh, And feaft-bys, a Butcher with an Axe, But will fufepe't, twas he that made the slaughter? Who finds the Partridge in the Puttovx Neft, But may imagine how the Bird was dead, Although the Kyte foare with vbadooded Beake? Euen fo fupilious is this Tragedie.

Qu. Are you the Butcher, Saffolk? where is your Knife? Is Blanfard team'd to a Kyte? where are his Yalloys? Saff. I ware no Knife, to slaughter sleeping men, But here's a vengeful Sword, ratted with cafe, That shall be fowred in his rancorous heart, That flanders me with Murther's Crimfon Badge. Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire, That I am faultle in Duke Humfrey's death,

Warm. What dares not Warwicks, if falle Saffolk dare him? Qu. He dares not calme his contumelious Spirit, Nor ceafe to be an arrogat Controller, Though Saffolk dare him twente thousand times. Warm. Madame be still! who reverence may I fay, For every word you fpake in his behalf, Is flander to your Royall Dignite.

Suff. Blunt-witted Lord, ignoble in demeanor, If ever Lady wrong'd her Lord fo much, Thy Mother tooke into her hand this blade, That thou thy felfe want borne in Battardie; And after all this fearfull Homage done, Give thee thy hyre, and fend thy Soule to Hell, Pernicious blood-fucker of fleeping men.

Suff. Thou shalt be waking, while I fhed thy blood, If from this prefence thou dar'st goe with me. Warm. Away eu'en now, or I will drag thee hence: Vnworthy though thou art, lie cope with thee, And doe some fervice to Duke Humfrey's Ghof. "Exeunt."

King. What stronger Breath-plate then a heart vntaintled? Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his Quarrell luft; And he but naked, though lockt vp in Steele, Whole Conience with Injuftice is corrupted. A noyfe within.

Queen. What noyfe is this?

Enter Saffolk and Warwicks, with their Weapons drawn.

King. Why how now Lords? Your wrathfull Weapons drawne, Here in our prefence? Dare you be fo bold? Why what tumultuous clamor have we here? Saff. The tray'trous Warwicks, with the men of Bury, Set all vpon me, myghtie Soueraigne.

Enter Salibury.

Salib. Sirs fstand apart, the King shall know your minde.

Dread Lord, the Commons fend you word by me, Vnleeffe Lord Saffolk fraught is to be done to death, Or banifhed faire Englands Territories, They will by violence teare him from your Palace, And torture him with grievous lingering death. They fay, by him the good Duke Humfrey dy'd: They fay, in him they feare your Highneffe death; And moree infinct of Loue and Loyallie, Free from a fubborne oppofite Intent, As being thought to contradict your liking, Makes them thus forward in his Banifhment. They fay, in care of your moft Royall Person, That if your Highneffe fhould intend to fleepe, And charge, that no man fhould disturbe your reft, In paine of your diflikes, or paine of death; Yet notwithstanding fuch a strait Edict, Were there a Serpent fene, with forked Tongue, That flily gyled towards your Maieffie, It were but neceffarie you were wake't: Leafe being fuffer'd in that harrefull fomber, The mortal Worme might make the deep eternal. And therefore doe they cry, though you forbide, That they will guard you, where you will, or no, From fuch fell Serpents as falle Saffolk is; With whole fummoned and falfal trilling, Your loungfull Vackle, twente times his worth, They fay is fumefull benef of life.

Commons within. An anfwre from the King, my Lord of Salibury.

Suff. 'Tis like the Commons, rude vnpolift Hinde, Could fend fuch Melfage to their Soueraigne: But you, my Lord, were glad to be imploy'd, To fhew how quieft an Orator you are. But all the Honor Salibury hath wonne, Is, that he was the Lord Embaffador, Sent from a fort of Tinkers to the King. Within. An anfwre from the King, or we will all brake in.

King. Goe Salibury, and tell them all from me, I thanke them for their tender louing care; And had I not beene cled fo by them, Yet did I pursufe as they do entreat. For fie, my thoughts doe hourly prophets, Mischance vnto my State by Saffolk's meanes. And therefore by his Maieffe I flawe, Whole farre-vnworthie Depute I am, He fhall not breathe infection in this syre, But three days longer, on the paine of death.

Qu. Oh Henry, let me pleade for gentle Saffolk.

King. Vngentle Queene, to call him gentle Saffolk. No more I fay: if thou do't please for him, Thou wilt but adde encreafe unto my Wrath, Had I but fayd, I would have kept my Word; But when I fware, it is irreucable: If after three days fpace thou here be't found, On any ground that I am Ruler of, The World fhall not be Ranfome for thy Life. Come Warwicks, come gentle Warwicks, goe with mee, I have great matters to impart to thee. Exit.

Qu. Mischance and Sorrow goe along with you, Hearts Discontent, and fowre Affiliation, Be play-fellowes to keepe you companie: There's two of you, the Deuill make a third, And three-fold Vengeance tend vpon your fresh. Suff. Ceafe, gentle Queene, thefe Execrations, And let thy Saffolk take his heneul leave.

Queene. Fye.
Queen. Fye Coward woman, and soft hearted wretch, Haft thou not spirit to curfe thine enemy,
Suf. A plague vpon them wherefore should I curfie them? Would curfes kill, as doth the Mandrakes groane, I would invent as bitter fearching termes, As curf, as harf, and horrible to heare, Deliuer'd strongly through my ffixed teeth, With full as many fignes of deadly hate, As Jeane-fa'd enuy in her loathfome cue. My tongue fhould fhumble in mine earneft words, Mine eyes fhould sparkle like the beaten Flint, Mine haire be fixt an end, as one driatraf; I, every loynt fhould feeme to curfe and ban, And even now my burch'en heart would breake Should I not curf them. Pay fon be their drinke. Gall, worfe then Gall, the dainfiet that they tale: Their sweetefl fhaie, a groue of Cyprife Trees: Their cheefeplef soft, mured ring Baffiilkes: Their foffet Touch, as fmart as Lyzards ftings: Their Muficke, brighten from the fonets hiffe, And hoading Screech-Owles, make the Confort full. All the foule teffors in darke feated hall——
Q. Enough sweet Suffolk, thou torment't thy felfe, And thofe dread curfes like the Sunne 'gainf glaffe, Or like an ouer-charg'd Gun, recoile, And turns the force of them vpon thy felif.
Suf. You bad me ban, and will you bid me leaue? Now by the ground that I am bani'd from, Well could I curfe away a Winters night, Though fanding naked on a Mountaine top, Where byting cold would never let graffe grow, And think it but a minute spent in fport. Qu. Oh, let me intreat thee ceafe, give me thy hand, That I may diew it with my mountfull teares: Nor let the raine of heaven wet this place, To wafh away my wofull Monuments. Oh, could this knief be printed in thy hand, That thou might'f think vpon thee thefe by the Seale, Through whom a thousand fighes are breath'd for thee. So get thee gone, that I may know my griefe, "Thou art munifl'd, while thou art fanding by, As one that furtiffs, thinking on a want: I will repeale thee, or be well affur'd, Adventure to be banifhed my felfe: And banifhed I am, if but from thee. Go, Speake not to me; even now be gone. Oh go not yet. Euen thus, two Friends condemn'd, Embrace, and kiffe, and take ten thoufand leaves, Loath'er a hundred times to part then dye; Yet now farewell, and farewell Life with thee.
Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banifhed, Once by the King, and three times thrice by thee. "Thou not the Land I care for, were't thou thence, A Wilderneffe is populous enough, So Suffolk had thy heavenly company: For where thou art, there is the World it felfe, With every fearefull pleafure in the World: And where thou art not, Deaf't Son. I can no more: Lie thou to loy thy life; My felfe no loy in noth, but that thou liu't. Enter Vaux.

Queen. Whether goes Vaux fo faft? What newes I prethee?

Vaux. To figuerie vnto his Maiefty, That Cardinall Beauford is at point of death: For הודantly a greoue ficknelfe tooke him, That makes him gape, and flare, and catch the arie, Blafpheming God, and curfing men on earth. Sometime he talkes, as if Duke Humphrie Ghost Were by his fide: Sometime, he calleth the King, And whispers to his pillow, as to him, The fecrets of his ouer-charg'd foule, And I am fent to tell his Maieftie, That even now he cries aloud for him.

Qu. Go tell this heay Meffige to the King. Exit Aye me! What is this World? What newes are there? But wherefore greeue I at an houres poore Ioffe, Omitting Suffolkes exile, my foules Treafure? Why ouely Suffolke mourne I not for thee? And with the Southerne clouds, contend in teares? Theirs for the earths encreafe, mine for my forrowes. Now get thee hence, the King thou know'ft it comings, If thou be found by me, thou art but dead. Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot fee, And in thy fight to dye, what were it elfe, But like a peefant flumber in thy lap? Here could I breath my soule into the ayre, As milde and gentle as the Cradle-babe, Dying with mothers dudge betweene it's lips. Where from thy fights, I fhould be raging mad, And cry out for thee to clofe vp mine eyes: To have thee with thy lippe to flop my mouth: So fhould't thou cyther turne my flying foule, Or I fhould breathe it fo into thy body, And then it liu'd in swete Elizium. To dye by thee, were but to dye in left, From thee to dye, were torture more then death: Oh let me flay, befall what may befal. Queen. Away! Though parting be a fretfull coroife, It is applid to a deathfull wound. To France I sweet Suffolke: Let me heare from thee: For wherefore thou art in this worlds Globe, He have an Iris that shall finde thee out. Suf. I go. Qu. And take my heart with thee. Suf. A lewoll locket into the wofull Cask, That euer did containe a thing of worth, Euen as a splifted Barke, fo funder we: This way fall I to death. Qu. This way for me. Enter the King, Salisbury, and Warwickc, to the Cardinal in bed.

King. How fare's my Lord? Speake Beauford to thy Soueraigne.

Suff. If thou beeft death, lie glue thee Englands Treafure, Enough to purchase fuch another Island, So thou wilt let me liue, and feele no paine. King. Ah, what a figne it is of cuill life, Where death's approach is feene fo terrible. Warwick. Beauford, it is thy Soueraigne speakes to thee. Beauf. Bring me vnto my Trall when you will. Dy'de he not in his bed? Where should he dye? Can I make men liue where they will or no? Oh torture me no more, I will confefse. Allue again! Then flew me where he is, He glue a thousand pound to looke vpon thee. He hath no eyes, the duft hath blinded them.
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Combe downe his haire; looke, looke, it flands vpright,
Like Lime-twigis fet to catch my winged soule:
Glee me some drinke, and bid the Apothecarie
Bring the thronge poftion that I bought of him.
King. Oh thou eternall mauer of the heavens,
Looke with a gentle eye vpon this Wretch,
Oh beate away the buse medling Fiend,
That lays strong fege vnto this wretches soule,
And from his boforme purge this blacke dispaire,
War. See how the ganges of death do make him grin.
Suf. Disthurbe him not, let him passe peaceably.
King. Peace to his soule, if Gods good pleasure be.
Lord Card'nall, if thou think it on heauens bliffe,
Hold vp thy hand, make signall of thy hope.
He dies and makes no signe: Oh God forgive him.
War. So bad a death, argues a monstours life.
King. Forbeare to judge, for we are sinners all.
Clofe vp his eyes, and draw the Curtaine clofe,
And let vs all to Meditation.

Exeunt.

Alarum. Fight at Sea. Orduance gott off.

Enter Lieutenant, Suffolkes, and others.

Lieut. The gaudy blabbing and remorreful day,
Is crept into the bofore of the Sea:
And now loud howling Wolves arouse the Ladys
That drage the Tragicke melancholy night:
Who with their drowse, flow, andflagging wings
Cleape dead-men graces, and from their milly lawes,
Breath foule contagious darghe in the ayre:
Therefore bring forth the Soulinders of our prize,
For whilt our Pinnace Anchors in the Downes,
Heree shal they make their ranfome on the fand,
Or with their blood flaine this dicoloured shore.
Matter, this Prifoner frely gie I thee,
And thou that art his Mate, make boome of this:
The other Walter Whitmore is thare.
1. Gent. What is my ranfome Mater, let me know.
2. Mat. A thousand Crownes, or else lay down your head.
Matter. And fo much shall you gine, or off goes yours.
Lieut. What thinks you much to pay 1000.Crownes.
And bears the name and part of Gentlemen.
Cut both the Villaines throats, for dy you shall:
The lives of thohe which we have left in flight,
Be counter-poy'd with such a pettie summe.
2. Gent. He gie it ir, and therefore spare my life.
3. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.
Whitm. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,
And therefore to renowne it, shal be dye,
And fo shoulde thef, if I might have my will.
Lieut. Be not fo rash, take ranfom, let him live.
Suf. Lookc on my George, I am a Gentleman,
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be payed.
Whit. And so am I: my name is Walter Whitmore.
How now? why starts thou? What doth death affright?
Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose found is death:
A cunning man did calculate my birth,
And told me that by Warne I shoulde dye:
Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded,
Thy name is Gaultier, being rightly fowned.
Whit. Gaultier or Walter, which it is I care not,
Never yet did base dishonour blare our name,
But with our sword we wilt away the hot.
Therefore, when Merchant-like I fell renowne,
Broke be my sword, my Armes torne and defaced,
And I proclaim'd a Coward through the world.

Suf. Stay Whitmore, for thy Prifoner is a Prince,
The Duke of Suffolke, William de la Pole.
Whit. The Duke of Suffolke, mufled vp in ragges?
Suf. I, but thefe ragges are no part of the Duke.
Lieut. But Ioue was neuer flaine as thou hailest be,
Ofbicure and lowlif Swaine, King Henries blood.
Suf. The honourable blood of Lancater
Must not be shied by fuch a laided Grome:
Haft thou not kilt thy hand, and held my fhirrop?
Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth Mule,
And thought thee happy when I fchooke my head.
How often haft thou waitd at my cup,
Fed from my Trencher, kneeld downe at the board,
When I haue feated with Queene Margaret?
Remember it, and let it make thee Cret-calne,
I, and alay this abrupte Pride:
How in our vvoyding Labby haft thou ftood,
And duly wayted for my comming forth?
This hand of mine hath write in thy behalfe,
And therefore fhall all our rythous tongue.
Whit. Speak Captaine, fhall I flab the fottorn Swain.
Lieut. Firft let my words flab him, as he hath me.
Suf. Bafe blae, thy words are blunt, and do art thou.
Suf. Convey him hence, and on our long boats fide,
Strike off his head. Sus. Thou darst not for thy owne.
Lieut. Poole, Sir Poole? Lord, I kennell, puddle, finke, whole fith and dirt
Troubles the flower Spring, where England drinks:
Now will I dam vp this thy yawning mouth,
For fwallo wing the Trefoure of the Realme.
They lips that kift the Queene, fhall swepe the ground:
And thou that fmal'd at good Duke Hume's death,
Against the fefeleffe windes fall grain in vaine,
Who in contemp placiff heffe at thee againe.
And wedde be thou to the Haggles of hell,
For daring to affye a mighty Lord
Vnto the daughter of a worthifule King,
Hauing neyther Subject, Wealth, nor Diadem:
By dulceoif policy art thou groue great,
And like ambifous Sylla ouer-gord, its
With goblets of thy Mother-bleding heart.
By thee Antioch and Maine were fold to France,
The faile rrouting Normans thorough thee,
Difdaine to call vs Lord, and Piccardes
Hath flaine their Gouernours, surprif'd our Fords,
And fent the ragged Souldiers wounded home.
The Princely Warwickes, and the Nevils all,
Whole dreafull swords were never drawne in vaine,
as hating thee, and rifying vp in armes.
And now the Houfe of Yorke thruth from the Crowne,
By flamefull murther of a guiltleffe King,
And loftly proud Increasheing tyranny,
Burnes with reuenging fire, whose hopefull colours
Advance our halfe-fac'd Sunne, flauing to flaine;
Vnder the which is wrat, Justinus nubibus.
The Commons heere in Kent are vp in armes,
And to conclude, Reproach and Beggare,
Is crept into the Pallace of our King,
And all by thee: away, convey him hence.
Suf. O that I were a God, to fhoot forth Thunder
Vpon thee paltry, feule, abloft Drudges:
Small things make base men prou'd.
This Villaine heere, Being Captaine of a Pinnace, threatens more
Then Bargas the ftrong Hyfrian Praye,
Drones fucce not Eagles blood, but rob Bee-hiues:
It is impoffible that I shoulde dye

By
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

By such a lovely VaSall as thyself.
Thy words make Rage, and not remorse in me:
I go of Meflague from the Queene to France:
I charge thee waft me freely croffe the Channell.
Lies.  Water; W. Come Suffolke, I meet waft thee to thy death.
Suff.  Fine gellidius timor occupat arus, it is thee I fear.
Wals. Thou haft have caufe to fear before I leave thee.
What, are ye danted now? Now will ye flooipe.
T. Gent. My gracious Lord intreat him, speak him fair.
Suff.  Suffolke Imperial tongue is feme, and rough:
Va'd to command, vntaught to please for fauour.
Fare be it, we should honor such as thefe
With humble fulte: no, rather let my head
Stoope to the blocke, then thefe knives bow to any,
Sayne to the God of haueuen, and to my King:
And fooneer dance upon a bloody pole.
Then fland vancouer'd to the Vulgar Groome.
True Nobility, is exempt from fere:
More can I bearn, then you dare execute.
Lies.  Take him away, and let him talk no more:
Come Souldiers, shew what cruelty ye can.
Suff.  That this my death may neuer be forgot.
Great men oft dye by vilde Bezonions.
A Romane Sworder, and Bandetto flawe
Murder'd fweet Tally.  Brunn Baffard hand
Stab'd Bakin Caffar.  Sauge flanders
Pompey the Great, and Suffolke dye by Pyrats.
Exit Water with Suffolke.
Lies.  And as for thefe whole ranfome we haue fet,
It is our pleasure one of them depart:
Therefore come you with vs, and let him go.
Exit Lieutenant, and the refp.
Cllane the fefp Gent.  Enter Water with the body.
Wals.  There let his head, and bluefele bodie lye, Vnfill the Queene his Milfris bury it.  Exit Water.
1. Gent.  O barbarous and bloody fpectacle,
His body will I bearce vnto the King:
If he reuenge it not, yet will his Friends,
So will the Queene, that luing, held him deere.

Enter Beauly, and Iom Holland.
Beauly.  Come and get thee a sword, though made of a
Lath, they haue bene vp these two dayes.
Hol.  They haue the more neede to fleape now then.
Beauly.  I tell thee, Jacke Cade the Cloather, meanes to affe the Common wealth and tune it, and let a new nap vp it.
Hol.  So he had need, for 'tis thred-bare.  Well, I fay, it was neuer merrie world in England, since Gentleman came vp.
Beauly.  O miserable Age: Vertue is not regarded in Handy-crafts-men.
Hol.  The Nobilitie thinke forne to goe in Leather Aprons.
Beauly.  Nay more, the Kings Councell are no good Workemen.
Hol.  True: and yet it is faid. Labour in thy Vocation: which is as much to fay, as let the Magiftrates be labouring men, and therefore shou'd we be Magiftrates.
Beauly.  Thou haft hit it: for there's no better figne of a braue mindes, than a hard hand.
Hol.  I fee them, I fee them: There's Bay's Sonne, the Tanner of Wingham.
Beauly.  Hee fhall have the skines of our enemies, to make Dogges Leather of.

Hol.  And Dicke the Butcher.
Beauly.  Then is flin fruicke downe like an Oxe, and ini-quities throte cut like a Calfe.

Hol.  And Smith the Weaver.
Beauly.  Argo, their thred of life is fpun.
Hol.  Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drumm.  Enter Cade, Dicke Butcher, Smith the Weaver, and a Sawyer, with infinate numbers.
Cade.  Wee Iohn Cade, fo tearm'd of our fuppofed Father.

But.  Or rather of stealing a Cade of Herrings.
Cade.  For our enemies fhall falle before vs, inspired with the spirit of putting down Kings and Princes. Command flence.

But.  Silence.
Cade.  My Father was a Mortimer.
But.  He was an honneft man, and a good Bricklayer.
Cade.  My mother a Plantagenet.
Beauly.  I knew her well, she was a Midwife.
Cade.  My wife defcended of the Lacies.
But.  She was indeed a Pediers daughter, & fold many Laces.
Weauer.  But now of late, not able to trauell with her but't Packe, the wishes buckes here at home.
Exit.  Therefore am I of an honorable houfe.
But.  I by my faith, the field is honourable, and there was he borne, vnder a hedge: for his Father had neuer a houfe but the Cage.
Cade.  Valiant am I.
Weauer.  A muft needs, for beggary is valiant.
Cade.  I am able to endure much.
But.  No queftion of that: for I have feene him whipt three Market dayes together.
Cade.  I feare neither sword, nor fire.
Weauer.  He neede not fear the sword, for his Coate is of proofe.
But.  But me thinks he should fland in feare of fire, being burn't 'tis hand for fealing of Sheep.

Cade.  Be braue then, for your Captaine is Braue, and Vows Reformation.  There fhall be in England, fuen hafe prey Louaces fold for a peny: the three hoop'd pot, shall haue ten hoopes, and I wil make it Fellony to drink small Beer, All the Realme fhall be in Common, and in Cheapfide fhall my Palfrey goe to graffe: and when I am
King, as King I will be.
All.  God lave your Malefty.
Cade.  I thanke you good people. There fhall bee no mony, all fhall eate and drinke on my fcorce, and I wil apparel them all in one Liture, that they may agree like Brothers, and worship me their Lord.
But.  The firft thing we do, let's kill all the Lawyers.
Cade.  Nay, that I mean'te to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent Lambe should be made Parchment; that Parchment being fcrib'd over, shou'd vnde a man. Some fay the Bee flings, but I fay,

'tis the Bees waxe: for I did but feale once to a thing, and I was neuer mine owne man fince. How now? Who's there?

Enter a Clerke.
Weauer.  The Clerke of Chartam: hee can write and reade, and call accompt.
Cade.  O monftrous.
Wea.  We took him fetteing of boyes Copies.

Cade.
Cade. Here's a Villaine.

Exeunt and They forfake

Cade. Nay then he is a Conjurier.

But. Nay, he can make Obligations, and write Court hand.

Cade. I am forry for't: The man is a proper man of mine Honour: vnleffe I finde him guilty, he shal not die. Come hither sirrah, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Cleark. Emanuell.

But. They vfe to writy it on the top of Letters: 'Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone: Doft thou vfe to writy thy name? Or haft thou a marke to thy selfe, like a honet plain dealing man?

Cleark. Sir I thanke God, I have bin so well brought vp, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confett; away with him: he's a Villaine and a Traitor.

Cade. Away with him I say: Hang him with his Pen and Ink-horne about his necke. Exit one with the Clearky

Enter Sir Michael.

Mcb. Where's our General?

Cade. Heere I am thou particular fellow.

Mcb. Fly, by, by, Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the Kings Forces.

Cade. Stand villaine, stand, or I'll fell thee downe: he shall be encountered with a man as good as himselfe. He is but a Knight, is a?

Mcb. No.

Cade. To equall him I will make my selfe a knight presently: Rife vp Sir John Mortimer. Now haue at him.

Enter Sir Humphrey Stafford, and his Brother, with Drum and Soldiers.

Seaf. Relishus Hindes, the fith and foum of Kent, Mark'd for the Gallowes: Lay your Weapons downe, Home to your Cottages: forfake this Groome. The King is mercifull, if you requite.

Bro. But angry, wrathfull, and inclin'd to blood, If you go forward: therefore yeelds, or dye.

Cade. As for these filken-coated flaues I passe not, It is to you good people, that I speake, Ouer whom (in time to come) I hope to raigne: For I am rightfull heyre vnto the Crowne.

Seaf. Villaine, thy Father was a Playfer, And thou thy felfe a Sheareman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a Gardiner.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this Edmund Mortimer Earle of March, married the Duke of Clarence daughter, did he not?

Seaf. I thinke.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

Bro. That's falce.

Cade. I, there's the question; But I say, 'tis true: The elder of them being put to surfe, Was by a begger-woman founde away, And ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a Bricklayer, when he came to age. His fonne am I, deny it if you can.

But. Nay, 'tis too true, therefore he shall be King. Why, Sir, he made a Chimney in my Fathers house, & the brickes are alive at this day to testifie it: therefore deny it not.

Seaf. And will you credit this base Druges Wores, that speakes he knowes not what.

All. I marry will we: therefore get ye gone.

Bro. I dy Cade, the D. of York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lyes, for I incendied it my selfe: Go too Sirrah, tell the King from me, that for his Fathers like Henr'y the fift, (in whole time, boys went to Span-counter for French Crownes) I am content he shall raigne, but Ile be Protector ouer him.

Butcher. And furthermore, wee'll have the Lord Sayes head, for falling the Duke drome of Maist.

Cade And good reason: for thereby is England main'd And faigne to go with a flaffe, but that my puissance holds it vp. Fellow-Kings, I tell you, that that Lord Say hath gelled the Commonwealth, and made it an Eunuch: & more then that, he can speake French, and therefore hee is a Traitor.

Seaf. O groffe and miferable ignorance.

Cade. Nay anwer if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: go too then, I ask but this: Can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy, be a good Councellour, or no?

All. No, no, and therefore wee'll have his head.

Bro. Well, seeing gentle words will not prestyle, Affiale them with the Army of the King.

Seaf. Herald away, and throughout every Towne, Proclaime them Traitors that are vp with Cade., That those which byre before the battell ends, May euin in their Wifes and Childrens fight, Be hang'd vp for example at their doores:

And you that be the Kings Friends follow me. Exit.

Cade. And you that love the Commons, follow me: Now flye your felth es men, 'tis for Liberty, We will not leave one Lord, one Gentleman: Spare none, but such as go in clouted hooen, For they are thrifty honet men, and such As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

But. They are all in order, and march toward vs.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are moft out of order. Come, march forward.

Allarums to the fight, wherein both the Staffords are slaine.

Enter Cade and the raft.

Cade. Where's Dicke, the Butcher of Aftford?

But. Heere sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like Sheepe and Oxen, & thou behaued thy selfe, as if thou hadst bene in thine owne Slaughter-house: Therfore thus will I reward thee, the Lent shal bee as long againe as it is, and thou shalt have a License to kill for a hundred lacking one.

But. I defire no more.

Cade. And to speake truth, thou defers't no leffe. This Monument of the victorie will I beare, and the bodies shal be dragg'd at my hors heeles, till I do come to London, where we will have the Maiors sword born before vs.

But. If we meane to thrive, and do good, breake open the Gates, and let out the Prieners.

Enter the King with a Supplication, and the Queen with Saft-folke head, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Say.

Queen. Oft hace I heard that greefe softens the mind, And
And makes it fearfull and degenerate,
Thynke therefore on reuenge, and ceafe to weep.
But who can ceafe to weep, and looke on this.
Here be his head lye on my throbbing brest:
But where's the body that I should embrasse?

The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

Enter Lord Scales upon the Tower walking. Then enters two or three Citizens below.

_Scales._ How now? Is Jacky Cade slaine?

_Enter Jacky Cade and the rest, and strikes his staff on London stone._

_Cade._ Now is Mortimer Lord of this City,
And here he sitting upon London Stone,
I charge and command, that of the Cities cott
The pilling Conduit run nothing but Claret Wine
This first yeare of our raigne.
And now henceforward it shall be Treson for any,
That calleth me other then Lord Mortimer.

_Enter a Soldier running._

_Soul._ Jacky Cade, Jacky Cade.

_Cade._ Knocks him downe there. _They kill him._

_But._ If this Fellow be wife, hee'le neuer call ye Jacky
Cade more, I thinke he hath a very faire warning.

_Die._ My Lord, there's an Army gathered together
In Smithfield.

_Cade._ Come, then let's goe fight with them:
But first, go and set London Bridge on fire,
And if you can, burne downe the Tower too.
Come, let's away.

_Alarums. _

_mathew Goffe is slain, and all the rest._

_Then enter Jacky Cade, with his Company._

_Cade._ So first: now goe some and pull down the Saucy:
Others to'th Innes of Court, downe with them all.

_Her._ I have a suite vnto your Lordship.

_Cade._ Bee it a Lordshippe, thou shalt have it for that word.

_But._ Onely that the Lawes of England may come out of your mouth.

_John._ Maffe twill be fore Law then, for he was thrift in the mouth with a Sperre, and his not whole yet.

_Smith._ Nay John, it will be stinking Law, for his breath
flinkes with eating toasted cheese.

_Cade._ I have thought upon it, it shall bee fo. Away, burne all the Records of the Realme, my mouth shall be

_Then._ We are like to have bitting Statutes
Vuliffe his teeth he pull'd out.

_Cade._ And hence-forward all things shall be in Comon.

_Enter a Messenger._

_Meff._ My Lord, a prize, a prize, heeres the Lord Say, which hold the Townes in France. He that made vs pay one and twenty Fifteenes, and one flailing to the pound, the laft Subsidue.
Enter George, with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, hee shall be beheaded for it ten times: Ah thou Say, thou Surge, may thou Buckram Lord, now art thou within point-blanke of our Jurisdiction Regall. What canst thou answer to my Maitsey, for givng vp of Normandie unto Mounfieur Bajnoeu, the Dolphine of France? Be it knowne vnto thee by these preffence, even the prefence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the Bedfome that muft sweepe the Court clene of such filth as thou art: Thou haft most traierously corrupted the youth of the Realme, in erecting a Grammar Schoole: and whereas before, our Fore-fathers had no other Bookes but the Score and the Tally, thou haft caufed prining to be w'd, and contrary to the King, his Crowne, and Dignity, thou haft built a Paper-Mill. It will be prooued to thy Face, that thou haft men about thee, that visuallely take of a Nowne and a Verbe, and such abominable wordes, as no Chriftian ear can endure to heare. Thou haft appoyned Lucifers of Peace, to call porre men before them, a-bout matters they were not able to anfwer. Moreover, thou haft put them in prifon, and because they could not reade, thou haft hang'd them, when (indeede) onely for that caufe they have beene most worthy to live. Thou doft ride in a foot-cloth, doft thou not? Say. What of that? Cade. Marry, thou outh'rt not to let thy horfe weare a Cloake, when honefter men then thou goe in them Hone and Doubles. Dick. And works in their shir to, as myfelfe for example, that am a butcher. Say. You men of Kent. Dick. What say you of Kent. Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis bona terra, mala gens. Cade. Away with him, away with him, he speakes Latin. Say. Heare me but speake, and heare mee where you will: Kent, in the Commentaries Caesar writ, Is terni' the chief'lt place of all this life: Sweet is the Countrie, because full of Riches, The People Liberal, Valiant, Adlue, Wealthy, Which makes me hope you are not void of pitty. I fold not Maine, I lofot not Normandie, Yet to recover them would looze my life: Lucifte with favour haue I always done, Prayse and Teares haue mould me, Gifts could never. When haue I ought excited at your hands? Kent to maintaine, the King, the Realme and you, Large gifts haue I belowe'd on learned Clearkes, Because my Booke prefer'd me to the King. And being Ignorance is the curfe of God, Knowledge the Wing wherewith we flye to heauen. Vnleffe you be poiffed with diuellish spirites, You cannot but forbeare to murther me: This Tongue hath parlied vnto Forraigne Kings. For your behoove. Cade. Tut, when fruck't thou one blow in the field? Say. Great men haue reaching handsoff haue I fruck Thofe that I never saw, and frucke them dead. Geo. O moniftrous Coward! What to come behinde FOLKES? Say. These checkes are pale for watching for your good Cade. Gie him a box o'th' ears, and that will make 'em red againe.

Say. Long fitting to determine poore mens caufes, Hath made me full of fickneffe and diffeafe. Cade. Ye shall haue a hemen Candle then, & the help of hatchet. Dick. Why doft thou quier man? Say. The Palfie, and not faire prouokes me. Cade. Nay, he nodded at vs, as who should fay, Ile be even with you. Ile fee if his head will fland fudder on a pole, or no: Take him away, and behead him. Say. Tell me: wherein haue I offended moft? Have I affected wealth, or honor? Speake. Are my Chefts full'd vp with extorted Gold? Is my Apparel fumptuous to behold? Whom haue I injur'd, that ye feek my death? These hands are free from guiltleffe bloodheding, This break from harbouring foule deceitfull thoughts. O let me live. Cade. I feele remorfe in my felfe with his words: but Ile bridle it: he shall dye, and it bee but for pleading fo well for his life. Away with him, he ha's a Familiar vn- der his Tongue, he speakes not a Gods name. Goe, take him away I fay, and strike off his head prefently, and then breake into his Sonne in Lawes house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both vpon two pales hither. All. It shall be done. Say. Ah Countrimen: If when you make your prair's, God should be fo obdurate as your felves: How would it fare with your departed foules, And therefore yet relent, and faue my life. Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye: the proueft Peere in the Realme, haue not weare a head on his shoulders, vnleffe he pay me tribute: there shall not a maid be married, but the shall pay to me her Mayden- head ere they haue it: Men shall hold mee of Capte. And we charge and command, that their wifes be as free as heart can wil, or tongue can tell. Dick. My Lord, When shall we go to Cheapside, and take vp commodi- ties vpon our billes? Cade. Marry prefently. All. O braue.

Enter one with the heads.

Cade. But is not this braue: Let them kiffe one another: For they lou'd well When they were alue. Now put them againe, Least they confront about the givng vp Of some more Townes in France. Soldiers, Defere the spoile of the Gite vntil night: For with thel borne before vs, in need of Maces, Will we ride through the streets, & at every Corner Huae them kiffe. Away. Exit Alarum, and Retreat. Enter againe Cade, and all his rablement.

Cade. Vp Fift-streetes, downe Saint Magnes corner, kill and knocke downe, throw them into Thames:

Sound a parley.

What noise is this I heare? Dare any be so bold to found Retreat or Parley When I command them kill?
Enter Buckingham, and old Clifford.

Bow. I hear they be, that dare and will disturb thee:
Know Cade, we come Ambassadors from the King
Vnto the Commons, whom thou haft milled,
And hear pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will forskate thee, and goe home in peace.

Cliff. What say ye Countrimen, will ye relent
And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offered you,
Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths.
Who loues the King, and will imbrace his pardon,
Fling vp his cap, and say, God faue his Maiesty.

Those that hate him, and honors not his Father,
Henry the fift, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at vs, and paffe by.

All. God faue the King, God faue the King.

Cade. What Buckingham and Clifford are ye so brave?
And you base Pezants, do ye beleue him, will you needs be hang'd with your Pardons about your neckes? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White-heart in Southwarke,
I thought ye would never have given out thefe Armes till you had recovered your ancient Freedom. But you are all Recrants and Daftards, and delight to live in blazier
To the Nobility. Let them brake your backes with hurthen, take your houses ouer your heads, raiseth your Wives and Daughters before your faces. For me, I will make shift for one, and so Gods Curfe light vpon you all.

All. We'll follow Cade,
We'll follow Cade.

Cliff. Is Cade the fonne of Henry the fift,
That thus you do exclaime you'll go with him.
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanes of you Earles and Dukes?
Alas, he hath no home, no place to fte too;
Nor knowes he how to live, but by the spoile,
Vnifie by robbing of your Friends, and vs.

Wer't not a shame, that whilft you live at iarre,
The fearfull French, whom you late vanquifhed
Should make a fhort one-fas, and vanquifh you?
Me thinkes you are in this chirche broyle,
I fee them Lording it in London streets,
Crying Village vnto all they meete.
Better ten thoufand base-borne Cade's mifcarry,
Then you should roope vnto a Frenchmans mercy.

To France, to France, and get what you haue loft:
Spare England, for it is your Natifie Coats.

Henry hath mony, you are strong and manly:
God on our fide, doubt not of Victorie.

All. A Clifford, a Clifford,
We'll follow the King, and Clifford.

Cade. Was euer Feather fo lightly blowne too & fro, as this multitude? The name of Henry the fift, hailes them to an hundred michiefs, and makes them leave mee defolate. I fee them lay their heads together to surprize me. My fword make way for me, for here is no flyings; in dight of the diuels and hell, have through the very mifdeft of you, and heauens and honor be witness, that no want of revolution in mee, but onely my Followers base and ignominious trefafions, makes me betake mee to my heele.

Bow. What, is he flid? Go fome and follow him,
And he that brings his head vnto the King,
Shall have a thoufand Crownes for his reward.

Follow me fouldiers, we'll deuife a meane,
To reconcile you all vnto the King.

Sound Trumpets. Enter King, Queene, and
Somerjft on the Terras.

King. Was euer King that joy'd an earthly Throne,
And could command no more content then it?
No founer was I crept out of my Cradle,
But I was made a King, at nine moneths olde.
Was neuer SubieCt long'd to be a King,
As I do long and wil to be a SubieCt.

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Bow. Health and glad tydings to your Maiesty.

Kin. Why Buckingham, is the Traitor Cade surpris'd?
Or is he but refir'd to make him ftrong?

Enter Multitudes with Halters about their Neckes.

Cliff. He is flid my Lord, and all his powers do yeed,
And humbly thus with halters on their neckes,
Expect your Highneffe doome of life, or death.

King. Then heauen fet ope thy everlafting gates,
To entertaine my voyes of thankes and praise.

Souldiers, this day have you redeem'd your liues,
And I fay how well you love your Prince & Countrrey:
Continue fill in this fo good a minde,
And Henry though he be infortunate,
Affire your felues will never be vnkinde :
And fo with thankes, and pardon to you all,
I do defignifie to your feuerrorall Countrys.

All. God faue the King, God faue the King.

Enter a Mifinger.

Mifs. Pleafe it your Grace to be advertized,
The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland,
And with a puiflant and a mighty power
Of Gallon-glaife and stout Kernes,
Is marching httward in proud array.
And still proclameth as he comes along,
His Armes are oneiy to remove from thee
The Duke of Somerfet, whom he termeas a Traitor.

King. Thus stands my flate, twixt Cade and Yorke
Like to a Ship, that haueing fap'd a Tempeft,
Is straight way calme, and boorded with a Pyrate.

But now is Cade driven backe, his men difpier'd,
And now is Yorke in Armes, to fecond him.
I pray thee Buckingham go and meete him,
And make him what's the reafon of thefe Armes:
Tell him, Ile fende Duke Edmund to the Tower,
And Somerfet we will commit thee thether,
Vntill his Army be difmiffed from him.

Somerfet. My Lord,
He yeelds my felle to prison willingly,
Or vnto death, to do my Countrrey good.

King. In any cafe, be not to rough in terme,
For he is fierce, and cannot brooke hard Language.
Bow. I will my Lord, and doubt not fo to deale,
As all things hall redound vnto your good.

King. Come wife, let's in, and learne to gouern better,
For yet may England cure my wretched raigne.

Flourifh. Exeunt.
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Enter Cade.

Cade. Fye on Ambitions: fie on my sole, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish. These five daies have I hid me in these Woods, and durst not peep out, for all the Country is laid for me: but now am I so hungry, that if I might have a Leaf of my life for a thousand yeares,
I could stay no longer. Wherefore on a Brisk walk have I climbed into this Garden, to see if I can exte Graffe, or pike a Sallet another while, which is not amiss to coole
a mans fromake this hot weather: and I think this word Sallet was borne to do me good: for many a time but for a Sallet, my braine-paine had beene cleft with a brown Bill, and many a time when I haue beene dry, & bravely marching, it hath ferue'd me indede of a quart pot to drinke in and now the word Sallet must ferue me to feed on.

Enter Iden.

Iden. Lord, who would live tyrannoyed in the Court,
And may enjoy such quiet walkes as these?
This small inheritance my Father left me,
Contenteth me, and worth a Monarchy.
I feeke not to waxe great by others warning,
Or gather wealth I care not with what envy:
Sufficeth, that I have maintaines my fame,
And finds the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the Lord of the folle come to feixe me for a tray, for entering his Fee-simpyle without leave. A Villaine, thou wilt betray me, and get a 1000. Crownes of the King by carrying my head to him, but he make thee exte Iron like an Ofbridge, and swallow my Sword like a great pin er thou and I part.

Iden. Why rude Companion, whatsoever thou be,
I know thee not, why then should I betray thee?
It's not enough to breake into my Garden,
And like a Theefe to come to robb my gronds:
Climbing my walles infight of me the Owner,
But thou wilt braue me with thefe sawcie terrmes?

Cade. Braue thee I by the bett blood that euer was broach'd, and beare thee to. Looke on mee well, I have eate no meate these five daies, yet come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a doore naile, I pray God I may never eate graffe more.

Iden. Nay, it shall nere be said, while England stands,
That Alexander Iden an Esquire of Kent,
Tooke oddes to comote a poore famish man.
Oppose thy steedshat gazing eyes to mine,
See if thou cant out-face me with thy lookes:
Set limbe to limbe, and thou art fair the leffer:
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist,
Thy legge a stike compared with this Truncheon,
My body shall fight with all the strength thou holp,
And if mine arme be heaut in the Ayre,
Thy graue is digg'd already in the earth:
As for words, whose greatnesse anfwer's words,
Let this my fword report what speech forbeares.

Cade. By my Valour: the moft complicate Champion that euer I heard. Steele, if thou turne the edge, or cut not out the burly bon'd Clowne in chines of Beefe, erou sleepe in thy Sheathe, I befech Toue on my knees
thou mayt be turn'd to Hobnails.

Here they Fight.

O I am flaine, Famine and no other hath flaine me, let ten thousand diuelles come against me, and give me but the ten meales I have loof, and I'de defie them all. Wither Garden, and be henceforth a burying place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered foule of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I haue flain, that monstrous traitor?
Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deede,
And hang thee o're my Tombe, when I am dead.
Ne're shal this blood be wiped from thy point,
But thou shalt wear it as a Herald coat,
To emblaze the Honor that thy Master got.

Cade. Iden farewell, and be proud of thy victory: Tell Kent from me, the hath loft her beft man, and exhort all the World to be Cowards: For I that neuer feared any, am vanquished by Famine, not by Valour.

Dyes.

Id. How much thou wrong'th me, heauen be my fudge;
Die damned Wretch, the curfe of her that bare thee:
As I thruft thy body in with my fword,
So with I, I might thruft thy foule to hell.
Hence will I dragge thee headlong by the helles
Vnto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy moft vngracious head,
Which I will beare in triumph to the King,
Leaving thy trunke for Crowes to feed upon.

Exit.

Enter York, and his Army of Iribe, with Drum and Colours.

Tor. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,
And plucke the Crowne from feeble Henrie head.
Ring Belles allowed, burne Bonfires cleare and bright
To entertaine great Englands lawful King.
Ah Sane Maifeilas! who would not buy thee deere?
Let them obey, that knowes not how to Rule.
This hand was made to handle sough but Gold.
I cannot glue due aition to my words,
Except a Sword or Scepter balance it.
A Scepter shall it haue, haue I a foule,
On which Ie toffe the Fleur-de-Luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.

Whom haue we heere? Buckingham to disturb me?
The king hath sent him fure: I must difmelfe.

Buc. Tor,you, if thou meanest weel, I greet thee well.

Tor. Hamfry of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.

Buc. A Meffenger from Henry, our dread Liege,
To know the reafon of thefe Armes in peace.
Or why, thou being a Subie, as I am,
Against thy Oath, and true Aileance sworne,
Should raife fo great a power without his leaua?
Or dare to bring thy Force to neere the Court?

Tor. Scarfe can I speake, my Choller is fo great.
Oh I could hew vp Rockes, and fight with Flint,
I am fo angry at these abieft tearmes.

And now like Aias Telamonus,
On Sheepe or Oxen could I spend my furie,
I am farre better borne then is the king:
More like a King, more Kingly in my thoughts.
But I must make faire weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weake, and I more strong.
Buckingham, I prethee pardon me,
That I have gien no anfwer all this while:
My minde was troubled with deep melancholy.
The caufe why I haue brought this Armie hither,
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Is to remove proud Somerfet from the King,
Seditious to his Grace, and to the State.

Bac. That is too much presumption on thy part:
But if thy Armes be to no other end,
The King hath yielded vnto thy demand:
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

Yorke. Vpon thine Honor is he Priitioner?
Buck. Vpon mine Honor he is Priitioner.

Yorke. Then Buckingham I do dismiss my Powres,
Soulers, I thank you all; deliver your stages:
Meet me to morrow in S. George Field,
You shall have pay, and euerthing you will.

Enter King and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, dought Yorke intend no harme to vs
That thus he marcheth with thee arme in arme?

Yorke. In all submiffion and humility.

Yorke doth present himselfe vnto your Highnesse.
K. Then what intends these Forces thou dost bring?

Tor. To heave the Traitor Somerset from hence,
And fight against that monstrous Rebell Cade,
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter Iden with Cades head.

Iden. If one so rude, and of so meane condition
May passe into the presence of a King;
Loe, I present your Grace a Traitor head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat flew.
King. The head of Cade?Great God, how inuft arthou?
Oh let me view his Vifage being dead,
That liuing wrought me such excelling trouble.
Tell me my Friend, arthou the man that flew him?

Iden. I was, an't like your Majestie.

King. How arthou call'd? And what is thy degree?
Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name,
A poore Esquire of Kent, that loves his King.

Bac. So pleafe it you my Lord, twere not amisse
He were created Knight for his good service.

King. Iden, kneel downe, rise vp a Knight:
Wold'ft thou be rewarded for thine service?
And will, that thou henceforth attend on vs.

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a boonne,
And never live but true vnto his Liege.

Enter Quene and Somerset.

K. See Buckingham, Somerfet comes with th'Quene,
Go bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.

Qu. For thousand Yorkes he shall not hide his head,
But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

Tor. How now? Is Somerset at libertie?
Then Yorkes whoold thy long imprisioned thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equall with thy heart,
Shall I endure the fight of Somerset?
Falfe King, why haft thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brooke abuse?
King did I call thee? Not thou art not King:
Not fit to gouerne and rule multitudes,
Which dar'nt not, no nor can't not rule a Traitor.

That Head of thine doth not become a Crowne:
Thy Hand is made to grasp a Palmers staffe,
And not to grace an awfeull Princeley Scepter.
That Gold, must round engirt these browes of mine,
Whole Smile and Frowne, like to Achilles Speare
Is able with the change, to kill and cure.
Here's a hand to hold a Scepter vp,
And with the fame to stde controlling Lawes:
Glue place by heaven thou shalt rule no more
O'ri him, whom heaven created for thy Ruler.

Som. O monstrovs Traitor! I arrest thee Yorkes
Of Capitol Treason, gainst the King and Crowne:
Obey audacious Traitor, kneele for Grace.

Yorke. Wold'ft have me kneele?First let me ask of thee,
If they can brooke I bow a knee to man:
Sirrah, call in my fonne to be my bale:
I know ere they will have me goe to Ward,
They'll paven their swords of my infranchifement.

Qu. Call thereto Clifford, bid him come amanely,
To say, if that the Buffard boyes of Yorke,
Shall be the Surity for their Traitor Father.

Yorke. O blood-befpotted Neapolitan,
Out-catt of Naples, Englands bloody Scourge,
The fones of Yorke, thy better's in their birth,
Shall be their Fathers bale, and bare to those
That for my Sivery will refuse the Boyes.

Enter Edward and Richmond.

See where they come, ile warrant they'll make it good.

Enter Clifford.

Qu. And here comes Clifford to deny their bale.
Cliff. Health, and all happinesse to my Lord the King.
Qu. I thank thee Clifford, Say, what news with thee?
Nay, do not fрай vs with an angry looke:
We are thy Soveraigne Clifford, kneele againe;
For thy misfaking fo, We pardon thee.

Cliff. This is my King Yorke, I do not mislake,
But thou misfakes me much to thinke I do,
To Bedlem with him, is the man groome mad.

King. I Clifford, a Bedlem and ambitious humor
Makes him oppose himselfe against his King.
Cliff. He is a Traitor, let him to the Tower,
And chop away that felonious pate of his.

Qu. He is atrefled, but will not obey:
His fones (his fayre)shall glue their words to his.
Yor. Will you not Sones?

Edw. I Noble Father, if our words will ferue.
Rich. And if words will not, then our Weapons shall.
Cliff. Why! why shall we waste our time in vacuity?
Yorke. Lookie in a Glashe, and call thy Image fo.

I am thy King, and thou a full-heart Traitor:
Call hither to the flake my two brave Beares,
That with the very flaking of their Chains,
They may annihil these full-luking Curres,
Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Enter the Earles of Warwick, and Salisbury.

Cliff. Are these thy Beares? We'll bate thy Beares to death,
And manacle the Berard in their Chains,
If thou dar'ft bring them to the baying place.

Rich. Oft hau e I feene a hot ore-weening Curre,
Run backe and bite, because he was with-held,
Who being falter'd with the Beares fell paw,
Hath clapt his tale, between his legges and cride,
And such a piece of feruice will you do,
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

If you oppose your sides to match Lord Warwick.

Cif. Hence heape of wrath, foule indigited lump, As crooked in thy manners, as thy shape.

Tor. Nay we shall heaste you thorowly anon.

Cif. Take heedle leaf by your head ye burne your selves.

King. Why Warwicke, hath thy knee forgot to bow? Old Salisbury, shame to thy siluer hair, Thou mad misleader of thy braine-fcke sonne, What wilt thou on thy death-bed play the Ruffian? And fekke for forrow with thy Spectacles? Oh where is Faith? Oh, where is Loyality? If it be banish't from the froutie head, Where shall it finde a harbour in the eart? Wilt thou go digge a grave to finde out Warre, And shame thine honourable Age with blood? Why art thou old, and want'rf experience? Or wherefore does abuse it, if thou haft it? For shame in pulit bend thy knee to me, That bowes vnto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My Lord, I have confidered with my selfe The Title of this most renowned Duke, And in my confidence, do repite his grace The rightfull heere to Englands Royall seate.

Ks. Canft thou dispence with heauen for such an oath? Sal. It is great sinne, to swearne vnto a sinne: But greater sinne to keepe a fullin oath: Who can be bound by any solemn Vow To do a mur'dous deedle, to rob a man, To force a spotliffe Virgins Charity, To rease the Orphan of his Patrimoine, To wring the Widdow from her custome right, And haue no other reason for this wrong, But that he was bound by a solemn Oath? By. A subtle Traitor needs no Soffister.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himselfe.

Yorke. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou haft, I am resolu'd for death and dignite.

Old Cliff. The first I warrant thee, if dreams proue true War. You were belte to go to bed, and dreame againe, To keepe thee from the Temperl of the field.

Old Cliff. I am resolu'd to beare a greater florme, Then any thou canst confine vp to day: And that I write vpon thy Burgonet, Might I but know thee by thy houled Badge. War. Now by my Fathers badge, old Neville Creft, The rampant Bearie chaine'd to the ragged stiffe, This day ile weare sloft my Burgonet, As on a Mountaine top, the Cedar fhewes, That keeps his leues Infight of any florme, Euen to aftight thee with the view thereof.

Old Cliff. And from thy Burgonet ile rend thy Bearie, And treat it vnder foot with all contempt, Deflight the Bearard, that protects the Bearie.

To Cif. And fo to Armes victorious Father, To quell the Rebels, and their Complices. Rich. Ple, Chatrillie for thame, speake not in spight, For you shall sup with lefu Chrift to night. To Cif. Foule flygmatiche that's more then thou canst tell.

Ric. If not in heauen, you'll sorely sup in hell. Exeunt

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwicke calles: And if thou dost not hide thee from the Beare, Now when the angrie Trumpet sounds alarum, And dead mens cries do fill the emptie aye, Clifford I say, come forth and fight with me, Proud Northerne Lord, Clifford of Cumberland, Warwicke is haerte with calling thee to armes. Enter Warwicke. War. How now my Noble Lord? What all a-foot? Tor. The deadly handed Clifford flew my Steed: But match to match I have encountered him, And made a prey for Carrion Kytes and Crowes Euen of the bonne beast he loued fo well, Enter Torke. War. Of one or both of vs the time is come. Tor. Hold Warwicke:seek thee out some other chace For I my selfe must hunt this Deere to death. War. Then nobly Yorke, 'tis for a Crown thou fightst: As I intend Clifford to thrise to day, It greeues me foule to leave thee vnsall'd. Exit Warwicke. Cif. What feeth thou in me Yorke? Why doft thou paufe? Torke. With thy brave hearing should I be in love, But that thou art to suit mine enimie. Cif. Nor should thy provewe want praiSE & efteme, But that 'tis shewne ignobly, and in Treafon. Torke. So let it helpe me now against thy sword, As I in justice, and true right express ite.

Cif. My soule and body on the altion both. Tor. A dreasfully lay, addresse thee infantilly.

Cif. La fa Corsou les cumeines. Tor. Thus Warre hath gien thee peace, for y art still, Peace with his foule, heauen if it be thy will. Enter York. Cif. Shame and Confusion all is on the rout. Fears frames disorder, and disorder wounds Where It should guard. O Warre, thou soleme of hell, Whom angry heauens do make their minifer, Throw in the frozen doomes of our part, Hot Coales of Vengeance. Let no Souldier flye. He that is truly dedicate to Warre, Hath no soleme-love: nor he that loses himselfe, Hath not eftentially, but by circumstance The name of Valour. O let the vile world end, And the premied Flumes of the Laff day, Knit earth and heauen together.

Now let the general Trumpet blow his blast, Particularities, and pettie sounds To cessa. Was't thou ordain'd (deere Father) To load thy youth in peace, and to achieve The Silver Lissey of adulfted Age, And in thy Restere, and thy Chaire-dayes, thus To die in Ruffian battell? Euen at this fight, My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine, It shall be storie. Yorke, not our old men faire: No more will I their Babes, Tears Virginall, Shall be to me, euen as the Dew to Fire, And Beattie, that the Tyrant oft claimes, Shall to my flaming wrath, be Oyle and Flax: Henceforth, I will not hae to do with pitty. Meet I an infant of the House of Yorke, Into as many gobbles will I cut it As wyde Medea yong Aphiris did. In cruelly, will I feeke out my Fame. Come thou new raine of olde Cliffsords house: Extra did ene His old Atte had beare.

So beare I thee vpon my manly shoulder: But then, Exeunt bare a living loade;
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.

Enter Richard, and Somerset to fight.

Rich. So lye thou there:
For vnderneath an Ale-house paltry signe,
The Castle in S. Albons, Somerset
Hath made the Wizard famous in his death:
Sword, hold thy temper; Heart, be wrathfull still:
Priests pray for enemies, but Princes kill.
Fights. Excursions.

Enter King, Queen, and others.

Qd. Away my Lord, you are slow, for shame away.

King. Can we outrun the Heauens? Good Margaret stay.

Qd. What are you made of? You'II not fight nor fly:
Now is it manhood, wifedom, and defence,
To gue the enemy way, and to secure vs
By what we can, which can no more but flye.

If you be tame, we then should see the bottome
Of all our Fortunes: but if we haply scape,
(As well we may, if not through your negligence)
We shal to London get, where you are lou'd,
And where this breach now in our Fortunes made
May readily be flopt.

Enter Clifford.

Cliff. But that my hearts on future mischief set,
I would speake blasphemy ere bid you flye:
But flye you must: Vncurable difcomitfe
Reignes in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away for your releefe, and we will liue
To see their day, and them our Fortune glu
Away my Lord, away.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Yorks, Richard, Warwicke, and Soldiers, with Drum & Colours.

Yorkes. Of Salsbury, who can report of him,
That Winter Lyon, who in rage forgets
Aged contumous, and all bruit of Time:
And like a Gallant, in the brow of youth,
Repaires him with Occasion. This happy day
Is not it felicitous, nor have we wonne one foot,
If Salsbury be loft.

Rich. My Noble Father:
Three times to day I holpe him to his horfe,
Three times befired him: Thrice I led him off,
Perfwaded him from any further act:
But all where danger was, fill there I met him,
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his Will, in his old feele body,
But Noble as he is, looke where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now by my Sword, well haft thou fought to day:
By th' Maiile I do we all. I thanke you Richard.
God knows how long it is I have to liue:
And it hath pleas'd him that three times to day
You have defended me from imminent death.
Well Lords, we have not got that which we have,
Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being oppoitures of such repaying Nature.

Yorkes. I know our facety is to follow them,
For (as I heare) the King is fled to London,
To call a present Court of Parliament:
Let vs pursuie him ere the Writ go forth,
What faies Lord Warwicke, shall we after them?
War. After them: say before them if we can:
Now by my hand (Lords) 'twas a gloriou day.
Saint Albons battell wonne by famous Yorkes,
Shall be eterniz'd in all Age to come.
Sound Drumme and Trumpets, and to London all,
And more such dayes as these, to vs befall.

FINIS.
The third Part of Henry the Sixt, with the death of the Duke of Yorke.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Alarum.
Enter Plantagenets, Edward, Richard, Northumberland, Mountague, Warwick, and Souliers.

Warwick.

Wondre how the King escap'd our hands?

P./While we purs'd the Horfmen of North,

He fly'd broke away, and left his men:

Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,

Whoe Warlike eares could never broke retreat,

Cheat'd vp the drooping Army, and himselfe,

Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford all a-brist,

Charg'd our maine Battales Front: and breaking in,

Were by the Swords of common Souliers flaine.

Edw. Lord Stafords Father, Duke of Buckingham,

Is either flaine or wounded dangerous.

I clef my Beauer with a down-right blow:

That this is true (Father) behold his blood.

Mount. And Brother, here's the Earle of Wiltsfires

Whom I encountered as the Battels ioyn'd. (blood,

Rich. Speake thou for me, and tell them what I did.

Plan. Richard hath left defatre'd of all my fownes:

But is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Nor. Such hope have all the line of Idon of Count.

Rich. Thus do I hope to haue King Henrys head.

Warw. And fo doe I, victorous Prince of York.

Before I fee thee fated in that Throne,

Which now the Houfe of Lancaster vlupes,

I vow by Heauen, thefe eyes fhall never clofe.

This is the Pallace of the fearefull King,

And this the Regall Seat: poiffeile it York.

For this is thine, and not King Henrys Heires.

Plant. Affhit me then, sweet Warwick, and I will,

For hither we haue broke in by force.

Nor. Wee'l all affhit you he that flyes, hell dye:

Plant. Thanks gentle Norfolk, fay by me my Lords,

And Souliers fay and lodge by me this Night.

They go vp.

Warw. And when the King comes, offer him no violence,

Vnleffe he fecke to thruff you out perfore.

Plant. The Queene this day here holds her Parliament,

But little thinkes we shall be of her confide,

By words or blows here let vs winne our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's fay within this House.

Warm. The bloody Parliament shall this be call'd,

Vnleffe Plantagenet, Duke of Yorke, be King,

And bathfull Henry depo't, whose Cowardize

Hath made vs by-words to our enemies.

Plant. Then leave me not, my Lords be refolute,

I meane to take poiffeilion of my Right.

Warm. Neither the King, nor he that loyes him beft,

The prowdefte he that holds vp Lancaster,

Dares flire a Wing, if Warwick flake his Bells.

Ie plant Plantagenet, root him vp who dares:

Refolute thee Richard, clayme the English Crowne.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmorland, Exeter, and the rest.

Henry. My Lords, looke where the fturdie Rebell fits,

Even in the Chayre of State: befaile he meanes,

Bac't by the power of Warwick, that fatlfe Peere,

To affirve vnto the Crowne, and reigne as King.

Earle of Northumberland, he faw thy Father,

And thine, Lord Clifford, & you both haue vow'd reuenge

On him, his fownes, his faurites, and his friends.

Northumb. If I be not, Heauens be reueng'd on me.

Clifford. The hope thereof, makes Clifford moune in Steele.

Westm. What, fhall we fuffer this? lets pluck him down,

My heart for anger burnes, I cannot broke it.

Henry. Be patient, gentle Earle of Westmorland.

Clifford. Patience is for Poultrones, fuch as he:

He dare not fit there, had your Father li'd.

My gracious Lord, here in the Parliament

Let vs affyle the Family of York.

North. Well haft thou spoken, Cousin be it fo.

Henry. Ah, know you not the Cite fauvres them,

And they have troupe of Souliers at their beck?

Westm. But when the Duke is thine, they'll quickly flye.

Henry. Farre be the thought of this from Henrys heart,

To make a Shambles of the Parliament Houfe.

Cousin of Exeter, frownes, words, and threats,

Shall be the Warre that Henry meanes to vfe.

Thou fadious Duke of Yorke defend my Throne,

And kneele for grace and mercie at my feet,

I am thy Soueraigne.

York. I am thine.

Exct. For shame come downe, he made this Duke of Yorke.

York. It was my Inheritance, as the Earledome was.
Exe. Thy Father was a Traitor to the Crowne.

Warr. Exe. There thou art a Traitor to the Crowne,
In following this vifipring Henry.

Cliff. What need he see follow, but his natural King?

Warr. True Cliff, that's Richard Duke of York,
Henry. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my Throne?
York. It must and shall be so, content thy felfe.
Warr. Be Duke of Lancaster, let him be King.
Wife. He is both King, and Duke of Lancaster,
And that the Lord of Welfmerland fhall maintaine.

Warr. And Warrick fhall difprove it. You forget,
That we are thofe which chat'sd you from the field,
And fiew your Fathers, and with Colours spread
March through the City to the Palace Gates.

Northb. Yes Warrick, I remember it to my griefe,
And by his Soule, thou and thy Houfe fhall rue it.

Wife. Plantagenets, of thee and thee thy Sonnes,
Thy Kinmen, and thy Friends. He hath more lyes
The Wife and Blood were in my Father Wenef.
Cliff. Vrge it no more, left that in stead of words,
I fend thee, Warrick, fuch a Meffenger,
As fhall revenge his death, before I firre.

Warr. Poor Warrick, how I forne his worthlefe Threats.

Plant. Will you we fiew our Title to the Crowne?
If not, our Swords fhall prove it in the field.

Henry. What Title haft thou Traitor to the Crowne?

My Father was as thou art, Duke of York,
Thy Grandfather Roger Mortimer, Earle of March.
I am the Sonne of Henry the Fifth,
Who made the Dolphin and the French to floupe,
And feiz'd upon their Townes and Prouinces.

Warr. Taleke nor of France, fith thou haft loft it all.
Henry. The Lord Protector loft it, and not I:
When I was crown'd, I was but nine moneths old.

Rich. You are old enough now,
And yet me thinkes you lofe:
Father treare the Crowne from the Vfurerps Head.

Edward. Sweet Father doe fo, fet it on your Head.

Mount. Good Brother,
As thou lookeft and honord Armes,
Let's fight it out, and not fland caufing thus.

Richard. Sound Drummes and Trumpers, and the King will fte.
Plant. Sonnes peace.

Henry. Peace thou, and gue King Henry leave to speake.

Warr. Plantagenet thal speake fift: Hear him Lords,
And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him, shall not live.

Henry. Think't thou, that I will leave my Kingly Throne, to my Grandire and my Father fit?

Noftir fhall Warre vpeople this my Realme:
I, and their Colours ofien borne in France,
And now in England, to our hearts great forrow,
Shall be my Winding-sheet. Why finit you Lords?

My Title's good, and better farre then his.

Warr. Prone it Henry, and thou shalt be King.

Henry. The Fourth by Conquet got the Crowne.

Plant. Twas by Rebellion againft his King.
Henry. I know not what to lay, my Titles weake:
Tell me, may not a King adopt an Heire?
Plant. What then?
Henry. And if he may, then am I lawfull King:
For Richard, in the view of many Lords,
To honor me as thy King, and souveraigne:
And neithyr be Treson nor Hoolitlie,
To seeke to put me downe, and regne thy selfe.
Plant. This Oath I willingly take, and wilt performe.
Warw. Long live King Henry! Plantagenet embrace him.

Henry. And long liue thou, and thee thy forward Sonses.

Plant. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exe. Accurst be he that seeke to make them foes.

Sonn. Here they come downe.

Plant. Farewell my gracious Lord, Ile to my Caffle.

Warw. And Ile keepe London with my Souldiers.

Norf. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mount. And I vnto the Sea, from whence I came.

Henry. And with gifte and forrow to the Court.

Enter the Queen.

Exe. Heere comes the Queene, Whose Lookes bewray her anger:
Ile flie away.

Henry. Exeunt so will I.

Queene. Nay, goe not from me, I will follow thee.

Henry. Be patient gentle Queene, and I will stay.

Queene. Who can be patient in such extremes?
Ah! wretched man, would I had dy'd a Maid? And never seen thee, never borne thee Sonne, Seeing thou haft proud'd fo vnaturall a Father.

Hath he derer'd to loose his Birth-right thus?
Hadst thou but loul'd him halfe so well as I,
Or felt that paine which I did for him once,
Or nourrith him, as I did with my blood;
Thou woul'd hast haue left thy deard heart-blood there,
Rather then haue made that sause Duke thine Heire,
And dis-inherited thine onely Sonne.

Prince. Father, you cannot dis-inherit me:
If you be King, why should not I succession?

Henry. Pardon me Margaret, pardon me sweet Sonne,
The Earle of Warwick and the Duke enforce me.

Queene. Enforce thee! Art thou King, and wilt be for't?
I shewe to heare thee speake: at timedous Wretch,
Thou hast vndone thy selfe, thy Sonne, and me,
And giv'n vnto the Houfe of Torly such head,
As thou haft raigne but by their Sufferance.
To entayle him and his Heires vnto the Crowne,
What is it, but to make thy Sequelcher,
And creepes into it farre before thy time?
Warwick. I charge, and the Lord Guiffards,
Sterne Falconsbridge commands the Narrow Seas,
The Duke is made Protecor of the Realme, And yet thall thou be fale? Such fasttie finds
The trembling Lambe, imprison'd with Wolves.
Had I beene there, which am a filly Woman, The Souldiers shoule haue told'd me on their Pikes,
Before I would haue granted to that Aft.
But thou preferf' thy Life, before thine Honor.
And licing thou do'th, I here diuorce my felfe,
Both from thy Table Henry, and thy Bed,
Vntill that Aft of Parliament be replac'd,
Whereby my Sonne is dis-inherited.
The Northerne Lords, that have forsworne thy Colours,
Will follow mine, if once they fee them spread:
And spread they shall be, to thy foule disgrace,
And vnter rume of the Houfe of Torly.
Thus doe I leaue thee; Come Sonne, let's away,
Our Army is ready; come, wee're after them.

Henry. Stay gentle Margaret, and heare me speake.

Queene. Thou haft spooke too much already, get thee gone.

Henry. Gentle Sonne Edward, thou wilt stay me?

Queene. I, to be murther'd by his Enemies.

Prince. When I returne with victorie to the field, Ile see your Grace: till then, Ile follow her.

Queene. Come Sonne away, we may not linger thus.

Henry. Poore Queene, How love me, and to her Sonne,
Hath made her brake out into termes of Rage.
Reueng'd may she be on that hatefull Duke,
Whose haughtie spirit, winged with defire,
Will ciff my Crowne, and like an empte Eagle,
Tyre on the flesh of me, and of my Sonne,
The loffe of thofe three Lords torments my heart:
Ile write vnto them, and entreat them faire;
Come Cousin, you shall be the Meffenger.

Exe. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.

Flourish. Enter Richard, Edward, and Montague.

Richard. Brother, though I bee younge, glue mee leave.

Edward. No, I can better play the Orator.

Mount. But I have reasons strong and forceable.

Enter the Duke of York.

York. Why how now Sonnes, and Brother, at a strife?
What is your Quarrell? how began it first?

Edward. No Quarrell, but a flight Contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your Grace and vs,
The Crowne of England, Father, which is yours.

York. Mine Boy? not till King Henry be dead.

Richard. Your Right depends not on his life, or death.

Edward. Now you are Heire, therefore enjoy it now:
By givng the Houfe of Lancaster leave to breathe,
It will out-runne you, Father, in the end.

York. I tooke an Oath, that hee should quitely reigne.

Edward. But for a Kingdome any Oath may be broken:
I would breake a thoufand Oathes, to reigne one yeere.

Richard. No; God forbid your Grace should be forsworne.

York. I shall be, if I clayme by open Warre.

Richard. He prome the contrary, if you're heare mee speake.

York. Thou canst not, Sonne; it is imposible.

Richard. An Oath is of no moment, being not tooke Before a true and lawfull Magistrate,
That hath authoritie over him that sweares.

Henry. I had none, but did purifie the place.
Then feeling t'was he that made you to depofe,
Your Oath, my Lord, is vaine and fruitleous.
Therefore to Armes: and Father doe but think,
How sweet a thing it is to weare a Crowne,
Within whose Circuit is Elenium,
And all that Poets faine of Bliffe and Loy.

York. Why doe we linger thus? I cannot ref.

Edward. Vntill the White Rose that I weare, be dy'de Even in the luke-warme blood of Henrys heart.

York. Richard, Richard young; I will be King, or dye.

Edward. Brother, thou shalt to London presently.

Whet on Warwick to this Enterprisie.
Thou Richard shalt to the Duke of Norfolke,
And tell him priuily of our intent.
You Edward shall unto my Lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise.
In them I trust: for they are Souldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.
While you are thus imploy'd, what refretch more?
But that I fecke occasion how to rife,
And yet the King not priuie to my Drift,
Nor any of the House of Lancaster.

Enter Gabriel.

But fly, what Newes? Why comm'th thou in such poeste?
Gabriel. The Queene,
With all the Northern Earles and Lords,
Intend here to besiege you in your Caste.
She is hard by, with twentie thousand men:
And therefore forfiche you your Hold, my Lord.
York. I, with my Sword.
What? think'st thou, that we fear them?
Edward and Richard, you shall flay with me,
My Brother Montague shall poeste to London.
Let Noble Warwicke Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left Proctor's of the King,
With powerfull Policie strengthen themselves,
And trust not impule Henry, nor his Oathes.
Mount. Brother, I goe: Ile winne them, fare it not.
And thus much humbly I doe take my leave.
Exit Montague.

Enter Mortimer, and his Brother.

York. Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine Vnckles,
You are come to Sandall in a happie houre.
The Armie of the Queene meanes to besiege vs.
John. Shee shall not neede, we'll meete her in the field.
York. What, with fiewe thousand men?
Richard. I, with fiewe hundred, Father, for a neede.
A Woman's generall! what should we fare?
Edward. I heare their Drummes:
Let's fet our men in order,
And ilue forth, and bid them Battaile straight.
York. Five men to twentie: though the oddes be great,
I doubt not, Vnckle, of our Victorie.
Many a Battaile haue I wonne in France,
When as the Enemy hath bene tenne to one;
Why should I not now haue the like successe?
Alarum. Exit.

Enter Rutland, and his Tutor.

Rutland. Ah, whither shall I fye, to scape their hands?
Ah Tutor, looke where bloody Clifford comes.

Enter Clifford.

Clifford. Chaplaine away, the Priuiehood frame thys life.
As for the Breach of this accursed Duke,
Whose Father flew my Father, he shall dye.
Tutor. And I, my Lord, will bear him company.
Clifford. Souldiers, away with him.
Tutor. Ah Clifford, mother not this innocent Child,
Least thou be hated both of God and Man.

Rutland. What now is he dead alreadie?
Or is it faire, that makes him close his eyes?
Ile open them.

Rutland. So looks the pent-vp Lyon o're the Wretch,
That trembles under his deouering Vp:"
And so he walks, infallt o're his Prey;
And fo he comes, to rend his Limbes sunder.
Ah gentle Clifford, kill me with thy Sword,
And not with such a cruell threatening Looke.
Sweet Clifford heare me speake, before I dye:
I am too meanes a Subject for thy Wreath,
Be thou requeng'd on men, and let me liue.
Clifford. In vaine thou speake'st, poor Boy:
My Fathers blood hath hopt the passege
Where thy words should enter.

Rutland. Then let my Fathers blood open it againe,
He is a man that Clifford can not have.
Clifford. Had I thy Brethren here, their liues and thine
Were not requengue sufficient for me:
No, if I digg'd vp thy fore-fathers Graves,
And hung their rotten Coffins vp in Chaynes,
It could not make mine ire, nor exalte my heart.
The fight of any of the House of York,
Is as a furie to torment my Soule:
And till I root out their accrufed Line,
And leave not one alue, I live in Hell.

Therefore—

Rutland. Oh let me praye, before I take my death:
To thee I pray, sweet Clifford pitty me.
Clifford. Such pitty as my Rapiers point affords.
Rutland. I never did thee harme: why wilt thou flay me?
Clifford. Thy Father hath.
Rutland. But 'twas ere I was borne.
Thou haue one Sonne, for his fake pitty me,
Leaft in reuenge thereof, fith God is luff,
He be as miserably flame as I.
Ah, let me liue in Prision all my dayes,
And when I giue occasion of offence,
Then let me dye, for now thou haue no caufe.
Clifford. No caufe? thy Father flew my Father:therefore dye.
Rutland. Di familiand lande summa fit iha tuo.
Clifford. Plantagenet, I come Plantagenet:
And this thy Sonnes blood bleeding euery day,
Shall ruft vpon my Weapon, till thy blood
Conges'ld with this, doe make me wipe off both.
Exit.

York. The Army of the Queene hath got the field:
My Vnckles both are flame, in refcuing me;
And all my followers, to the eager foe
Turne back, and fye, like Ships before the Winde,
Or in a manuport'd by hunger-drawn Wolves.
My Sonnes, God knowes what hath beeachanted them:
But this I know, they haue demaned themselues
Like men borne to Renonne, by Life or Death.
Three times did Richard make a Lane to me,
And thrice cry'd, Courage Father, fight it out:
And all as oft came Edward to my side,
With Purple Faulchion, painted to the Hilt,
In blood of thofe that had encounter'd him:
And when the hardye Warriors did retvre,
Richard cry'd, Charge, and giue no foot of ground,
And cry'd, A Crowne, or elle a glorious Tombe,
The third Part of Henry the Sixth.

A Sceptre, or an Earthly Sepulchre.
With this we charg'd againe: but out alas,
We bodg'd againe, as I haue feene a Swan
With bootlesse labour swimme against the Tyde,
And spend her strength with ower-matching Waves.

A Short Alarum within.
Ah heare, the fatal followers doe pursue,
And I am fain, and cannot flye their furie:
And were I strong, I would not shunne their furie.
The Sands are numberd, that makes vp my Life,
Here must I flay, and here my Life must end.

Enter the Queens, Clifford, Northumberland, the young Prince, and Souldiers.

Come bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchless furie to more rage:
I am your Butt, and I abide your Shot.

Northumb. Yeeld to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.
Clifford. 1, to such mercy, as his ruthleffe Arme
With downe-right payment, the God, vnto my Father.
Now Pharon hath tumbled from his Carre,
And made an Evening at the Noone-side Prick.

Torke. My ahes, as the Phoenix, may bring forth
A Bird, that will reuenge upon you all:
And in that hope, I throw mine eyes to Heauen,
Scouring what ere you can afflct me with.
Why come you not? what, multitudes, and feare?
Cliff. So Cowards fight, when they can flye no further,
So Doues doe peck the Faulcons piercing Talons,
So desperat Theues, all hopefull of their Llues,
Breath out Inexhous'd gainst the Officers.

Torke. Oh Clifford, but bethink thee once again,
And in thy thought ore-run my former time:
And if thou canst, for bluffling, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that flanders him with Cowardice,
Whose frowne hath made thee faint and flye ere this.

Clifford. I will not bandie with thee word for word,
But buckler with thee blows twice two for one.

Queene. Hold valiant Clifford, for a thousand caues
I would prolong a while the Tryators Life:
Wretch makes him deafe: speake thou Northumberland.

Northumb. Hold Clifford, doe not honor him fo much,
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart.
What valour was it, when a Curre doth grinne,
For one to thrull his Hand betwixte his Teeth,
When he might spurren him with his Foot away?
It is a Woman, that weare his Vantage.
And tenne to offe, is no impeach of Valour.

Clifford. I, I, go striues the Woodcocke, with the Gynne.

Northumb. So doth the Connie Struggle in the Net.
Torke. So triumph Theues upon their conquer'd Booty,
So True men yeeld with Robbers, so o're-matcht.

Northumb. What would your Grace have done vnto him now?

Queene. Braue Warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,
Come make him stand vpon this Mole-hill here,
That rauht at Mountaines with out-stretched Armes,
Yet past but the shadow with his Hand.
What, was it that you would be Englands King?
Was't you that recall'd in our Parliament,
And made a Preachment of your high Dectent?
Where are your Meffe of Sones, to back you now?
The wanton Edward, and the luffie George?

And where's that valiant Crook-back Prodigie,
Dickie, your Boy, that with his grumbling voyce
Was wont to cheare his Dad in Mutines?
Or with the red, where is your Darling, Rutland?
Looke Torke, I say'd this Napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his Raplers point,
Made issue from the Bofome of the Boy:
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I glue thee this to drie thy Cheeckes withall.
Alas poore Torke, but that I hate thee deadly,
I should lament thy miserable fate.
I prythee grieue, to make me merry, Torke.
What, hath thy fierce heart so parcht thine entryales,
That not a Teare can fall, for Rutlands death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou shoul'dst be mad:
And I, to make thee mad, doe mock thee thus.
Stampe, rauce, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
Thou wouldst be see'd, I see, to make me sport:
Torke cannot speake, vnlesse he weare a Crowne.
A Crowne for Torke: and Lords, how lowe to him:
Hold you his hands, while I doe set it on.
I marry Sir, now lookes he like a King:
I, this he that tooke King Henries Chaire,
And this is he was his adopted Heire.
But how is it, that great Plantagenet
Is crownd fo foome, and broke his folemnne Oath?
As I bethinke me, you shoul'd not be King,
Till our King Henry had tooke hands with Death.
And will you pale your head in Henries Glory,
And rob his Temples of the Diademe,
Now in his Life, against your holy Oath?
Oh 'tis a fault too too unparagonable.
Off with the Crowne; and with the Crowne, his Head,
And whileft we breathe, take time to doe him dead.

Clifford. That is my Office, for my Fathers sake.

Queene. Nay stay, let's heart the Orozins hee makes.

Torke. Shee-Wolfe of France,
But worfe then Wolues of France,
Whole Tongue more poylons then the Addens Tooth:
How ill-befeeeming is it in thy Sex,
To triumph like an Amazonian Trull,
Vpon their Woes, whom Fortune captivates?
But that thy Face is Vizard-like, unchanging,
Made impudent with vfe of eull deedes.
I would affay, proud Queene, to make thee blushe.
To tell thee whence thou canst, of whom deri'd,
Were fame enough, to shame thee,
Wert thou not shamelesse.
Thy Father beares the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerufalem,
Yet not fo wealtie as an English Yeoman.
Hath that poore Monarch taugh thee to inuflit?
It needes not, nor it bootes thee not, proud Queene,
Vnlesse the Adage must be verifie'd.
That Beggars mounted,runne their Horle to death.
'Tis Beautie that doth off make Women proude,
But God he knowes, thy share thereof is small.
'Tis Vertue, that doth make them moft admir'd
The contrary,doth make thee wondered at.
'Tis Governement that makes them feeme Diuine,
The want thereof,makes thee abominable.
Thou art as opposite to every good,
As the Antipodes are to us,
Or as the South to the Septentrion.
Oh Tygres Heart,wrapt in a Womans Hide,

How
The third Part of Henry the Sixt.

How couldst thou dry the Life-blood of the Child, To bid the Father wipe his eyes withall, And yet be seene to beare a Womans face? Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible; Thou, &c., obdurate, fierce, rough, remorseless. Bidst thou me rage? why now thou haft thy wish. Wouldst haue me wheepe? why now thou haft thy will. For raging Wind blowes vp insectful flowers, And when the Rage alayn, the Raine begins, These Teares are my sweet Rutlands Obsequies, And every drop cryes vengeance for his death, 'Gainft thee fell Clifford, and thee false French-woman, Northumb. Behew me, but his passion mounes me to, That hardly can I check my eyes from Teares, York. That Face of his, The hungry Caniballs would not haue touched, Would not haue Staynd with blood: But you are more inhumane, more inexorable, Oh, tenne times more then Tygers of Hycraus. Scothistlequeene, Queenes, This Cloth thou dippst in blood of my sweet Boy, And I with Teares doe wash the blood away. Keepst thou the Napkin, and goe boatt of this, And if thou tellst the haue the florie right, Vpon my Soule, the hearers will bid Teares: Yes, even my Foes will shed fall-falling Teares, And say, Alas, it was a pittious deed. There, take the Crown, and with the Crowne, my curse, And in thy need, such comfort come to thee, As now I reape at thy too cruel hand. Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the World, My Soule to Heauen, my Blood vpon your Heads. Northumb. Had he been slaughter-man to all my Kinne, I should not for my Life but wepe with him, To see how inly Sorrow grieues his Soule. Queene. What, weeping ripe, my Lord Northumberland? Thinkst but vpon the wrong he did vs all, And that will quickly dri he melting Teares. Clifford. Here's for my Oath, here's for my Fathers Death. Queene. And here's to right our gentle-hearted Kings. York. Open thy Gate of Mercy, gracious God, My Soule flyes through these wounds, to feeke out thee. Queene. Off with his Head, and set it on Yorke Gates, So York may ouer-look the Towne of Yorke. flourishes. Ext. A March. Enter Edward, Richard, and their power.

Edward. I wonder how our Princely Father scap't: Or whether he be scap't away, or no, From Clifford and Northumberlands pursuit? Had he been ta'n, we should haue heard the newes; Had he beene slaine, we should haue heard the newes: Or had he scap't, me thinks we should haue heard: The happy thing of a hapless fathers Teares: How fares my Brother? why is he so sad? Richard. I cannot joy, vntill I be releau'd Where our right valiant Father is become, I saw him in the Battale range about, And watcht him how he fangled Clifford forth, Me thought he bore him in the thicket troopse, As doth a Lyon in a Heard of Neac, Or as a Beare encompass'd round with Dogges:

Who hauing pincht a few, and made them cry, The reft stand all aloofe, and batke at him. So far'd our Father with his Enemies, So fliold his Enemies my Warlike Father: Me thinks 'tis pride enough to be his Sonne. See how the Morning open her golden Gates, And takes her farwell of the glorious Sunne. How well reemblies it the prime of Youth, Trimm'd like a Yonger, prancing to his Loue? Ed. Dazle mine eyes, or doe I see three Sunnes? Rich. Three glorious Sunnes, each one a perfect Sunne, Not seperated with the racking Clouds, But feuer'd in a pale clear-shining Sky. See, see, they lowne, embrace, and seeme to kisse, As if they would some League intolable. Now are they but one Lampe, one Light, one Sunne: In this, the Heauen figures some event. Edward. 'Tis wondrous strange, The like yet never heard of. I think it cites vs (his Brother) to the field, That wee, the Sonnes of brave Plantagenet, Each one alreadie blaying by our meedcs, Should notwithstanding joynne our Lights together, And over-shine the Earth, as this the World. What ere it bodes, hence-forward will I barea Vpon my Tartaght three faire shining Sunnes. Richard. Nay, beare three Daughters: By your leaue, I speake it, You lose the Breeder better then the Male.

Enter one blowing.

But what art thou, whose heacie Lookes fore-tell Some dreadfull story hanging on thy Tongue? Meff. Ah, one that was a wofull looker on, When as the Noble Duke of Yorke was slaine, Your Princely Father, and my lousing Lord. Edward. Oh speake no more, for I have heard too much. Richard. Say how he dy'de, for I will hear it all. Meff. Environed he was with many foes, And fliold against them, at the hope of Troy Against the Greekes, that would haue entred Troy, But Hercules himselfe must yeeld to oddes: And many stroakes, though with a little Axe, Hewes downe and fells the hardt-tymberd Oake. By many hands your Father was fliold, But only fliold'd by the infall Arme Of vn-re relenting Clifford, and the Queene: Who crownd the gracious Duke in high defpight, Laugh'd in his face: and when with griefe he wept, The ruthleffe Queene gave him, to dry his Cheeokes, A Napkin, dippd in the hemerelle blood Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford Baine: And after many scornes, many foule taunts, They tooke his Head, and on the Gates of Yorke They fet the fame, and there it doth remaine, The fadde spectacle that ere I view'd.

Edward. Sweet Duke of Yorke, our Prop to leaue vpon, Now thou art gone, wee haue no Staffe, no Stay. Oh Clifford, boy'trous Clifford, thou haft slaine The floure of Europe, for his Cheaelrie, And trecherously haft thou vanquish'd him, For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee. Now my Soules Palace Is become a Prifon: Ah, would the breake from hence, that this my body Might

488
Might in the ground be clofed vp in reft:
For never henceforth shall I joy againe:
Neuer, oh neuer shall I fee more ioy.

RICH. I cannot wepe: for all my bodies moysture
Scarce ferues to quench my Furnace-burning hart:
Nor can my tongue vndole my hearts great burthen,
For selfe-free winde that I should speake withall,
Is kindling coales that fires all my beef,
And burns me vp with flames, that tears would quench.
To wepe, is to make lefte the depth of greefe;
Tears then for Babes, Blowses, and Reuenge for mee.
Richard, I hearbe thy name, Ie venge thy Death,
Or dye renouned by attempting it.

Ed. His name that valiant Duke hath left with thee:
His Duke-horne, and his Chaire with me is left.

RICH. Nay, if thou be that Princely Eagles Bird,
Shew thy defcent by gazing' gainst the Sunne
For Chaire and Duke-horne, Throne and Kingsdome say, Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter Warwick, Marygell Mountague, and their Army.

Warwick. How now faire Lords? What faire? What news abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recompt
Our latefull newes, and at each wounde deliverance
Stab Poniards in our flesh, till all were told,
The words would add more anguish then the wounds.
O valiant Lord, the Duke of Yorks be Iaffe.

Edw. O Warwick, Warwick, that Plantagenet
Which held thee deere, as his Soules Redemption, is by the terme Lord Clifford done to death.
War. Ten days agoe, I drown'd these newes in tears,
And now to add more mesure to your woes,
I come to tell you things firt then before.
After the bloody Frye at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave Father breath'd his latest gaspe,
Tydings, as swiftly as the Postes could runne,
Were brought me of your Loffe, and his Depart.
I then in London, keeper of the King,
Mutter'd my Soldiers, gathered flockes of Friends,
Marcht toward S. Albans, to intercept the Queene,
Bearing the King in my behalfe along:
For by my Scouts, I was aduertised
That she was comming with a full intent
To dash our late Decree in Parliament,
Touching King Henries Oath, and your Succession:
Shall we distract, or will we make one:
Our Batallies joyn'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But whether twas the coldnes of the King,
Who lookd full gently on his warlike Queene,
That rob'd my Soldiers of their hente Steele.
Or whether twas report of her successe,
Or more then common feare of Clifford's Rigour,
Who thunders to his Captuere, Blood and Death,
I cannot judge: but to conclude with truth,
Their Weapons like to Lightning, came and went:
Our Soldiers like the Night-Owle lazie flight,
Or like a lazie Threthore with a Flalle,
Fell gently downe, as if they drucke their Friends.
I chear'd them vp with iuflice of our Caufe,
With promife of high pay, and great Rewards:
But all in vaine, they had no heart to fight,
And we (in them) no hope to win the day,
So that we fled: the King vnto the Queene,
Lord George, your Brother, Norfolkke, and my Selfe,
In haue, poft haue, are come to ioyne with you:
For in the Marches heere we heard you were,
Making another Head, to fight againe.

Ed. Where is the Duke of Norfolkke, gentle Warwick?
And when came George from Burgundy to England?
War. Some six miles off the Duke is with the Soldiers,
And for your Brother he was lately sent
From your kinde Aunt Dutchesse of Burgundie,
With aye of Soulardis to this needfull Warre.
Rich. Twas odden beleke, when valiant Warwick fled;
Oft hafe I heard his prifons in Parfaufe,
But ne're till now, his Scandal of Retire.
War. Nor now my Scandal Richard, doth thou heare:
For thou hast know this strong right hand of mine,
Can plucke the Diadem from faint Henries head,
And wring the awefull Scepter from his Pity,
Were he as famous, and as bold in Warre,
As he is fam'd for Mileneffe, Peace, and Prayer.
Rich. I know it well Lord Warwick, blame me not,
'Tis love I bare thy glories make me speake:
But in this troublous time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our Coates of Steele,
And wrap our bodies in blacke mourning Gownes,
Numb'ring our Aue-Maries with our Beads?
Or shall we on the Helmets of our Foes
Tell our Deuotion with the valiant Armes.
If for the last, say I, and to it Lords.
War. Why therefore Warwick came to seek you out,
And therefore comes my Brother Mountague:
Attend me Lords, the proud intufing Queene,
With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland,
And of their Feather, many moe proud Birds,
Haue wrought the easie-melting King, like Wax.
He fwore confernt to your Succetion,
His Oath enrolled in the Parliament.
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his Oath, and what before
May make against the boufe of Lancateser.
Their power (I thinkes) is thirty thoufand strong:
Now, if the helpe of Norfolkke, and my felie,
With all the Friends that thou brase Earle of March,
Amongst the louing Welkmens can't procure,
Will but amount to fwe and twenty thoufand,
Why Via, to London will we march,
And once againe, befire our foaming Steeds,
And once againe cry Charge upon our Foes,
But neuer once againe turne backe and fye.

Rich. I now me faire Lords, the great Warwick speake,
Ne're he may be life to fee a Sun-shine day,
That cries Retire, if Warwick bids him fay.

Ed. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I leane,
And when thou liflet (as God forbid the houre)
Muft Edward fall, which perill heauen forefend,
War. No longer Earle of March; but Duke of Yorkes:
The next degree, is Englands Royall Throne:
For King of England shalt thou be proclam'd
In ebery Borough as we paffe along,
And he that throughs not vp his cap for ioy,
Shall for the Fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward, valiant Richard Mountague:
Stay we no longer, dreaming of Renounne,
But found the Trumpets, and about our Taskes.

RICH. Then Clifford, were they heart as hard as Steele,
As thou hast thron'd it little by thy deedes,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Ed. Then strike vp Drums, and God and S. George for vs.

War.
Enter a Messenger.

War. How now! what news there? Myl. The Duke of Norfolk fends you word by me, That the Queene is comming with a piffant Hoaft, And chauls your company, for speedy counsell. War. Why then it forts, braue Warriors, let's away.

Exit Omnes.

Flourish. Enter the King, the Queene, Clifford, Northum- and Tadg Prince, with Drumme and Trumpettes.

Qu. Welcome my Lord, to this braue town of Yorke, Yonders the head of that Arch-enemy, That fought to be incommpl with your Crowne. Doth not the oldest chare your heart, my Lord. K. I, as the rocks chere them that fear their wrack, To see this sight, it tires my very soule: With-hold reuenge [deere God] 'tis not my fault, Nor willingly have I infring'd my Vow. Cliff. My gracious liege, this too much lenity And harmfull pity must be laid aside: To whom do Lyons caft their gentle Lookes? Not to the Bealt, that would viupee their Den. Whole hand is that the Forrest Bearre doth lick? Nor his that spoylest her yong before her face. Who scapes the lurking Serpents mortal fling? Not he that fets his foot upon her backe. The smalllest Worme will turne, being troden on, And Doves will pecke in safeguard of their Brood. Ambitious Yorke, did leuell at thy Crowne, Thou smiling, while he knitts his angry browes. He but a Duke, would have his Sonne a King, And raife his iflue like a louing Sire. Thou being a King, bleft with a goodly fonne, Did't yeeld content to disinherit him: Which argued thee a moit valuing Father. Unreasonable Creatures feed their young, And though mans face be fearefull to their eyes, Yet in protection of their tender ones, Who hath not feene them even with those wings, Which sometime they haue vs'd with saucfull flight, Make warre with him that climb'd it through their nest, Offering their owne liues in their yongs defence? For thame, my Liege, make them your President: Were it not pitty that this goodly Boy Should looke his Birth--right by his Fathers failts, And long heereafter so into his childe, What my great Grandfather, and Grandifre got, My carelesse Father fondly gave away. Ah, what a shame were this! Looke on the Boy, And let his manly face, which promith Successeful Fortune feele thy melting heart, To hold thine owne, and leave thine owne with him. King. Full well hath Clifford plaid the Orator, Inferring arguments of mighty force: But Clifford tell me, did't thou neuer heare, That things ill got, had euer bad succeffe. And happy always was it for that Sonne, Whose Father for his hoarding went to hell: Ile leave my Sonne my Vertuous deeds behind, And would my Father had left me no more: For all the reft is held at fuch a Rate, As brings a thousand fold more to keep, The newe Preffure may haue no more pleure. Ah Cofin Yorke, would thy best Friends did know, How it doth greeue me that thy head is heere. Qu. My Lord cheere vp your spirits, our foes are nye, And this fruit courage makes your Followers faint: You promitt Knighthood to our forward fonne, Vnpethe your fword, and dub him prefently. Edward, kneele downe. King. Edward Plantagenet, arife a Knight, And learne this Leffon; Draw thy Sword in right. Prince. My gracious Father, by your Kingly leave, Ile draw it as Apparant to the Crowne, And in that quarrell, vfe it to the death. Cliff. Why that is spoken like a toward Prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Myl. Royall Commanders, be in readiness, For with a Band of thirty thousand men, Comes Warwicke backing of the Duke of Yorke, And in the Townes as they do march along, Prouctames him King, and many flye to him, Derraigne your battells, for they are at hand. Cliff. I would your Highmeffie would depart the field, The Queene hath been occuppe when you are abfent. Qu. I good my Lord, and leave vs to our Fortune. King. Why, that's my fortune too, therefore Ile fly. North. Be it with reolution then to fight. Prince. My Royall Father, cheere thes Noble Lords, And heerthen thofe that fight in your defence: Vnpeace your Sword, good Father: Cry S.George.

Edw. Now perish'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace? And fet thy Diadem vpon my head? Or hide the mortal Fortune of the field. Qu. Go rate thy Minions, proud infulting Boy, Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms, Before thou Soveraigne, and thy lawfull King? Ed. I am his King, and he shoule bow his kne: I was adopted Heire by his content. Clare. Since when, his Oath is broke: for as I heare, You that are King, though he doe the Crowne, Haue caus'd him by new Act of Parliament, To blot out me, and put his owne Sonne in. Cliff. And reafon too, Who shoule succeede the Father, but the Sonne. Rich. Are you there Butcher? O, I cannot speake. Cliff. I crooke-back, here I stand to anwser thee, Or he ye, the proudeft of thy fort. Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd yong Rutland, was it not? Cliff. I, and old Yorke, and yet not satisfeito. Rich. For Gods fake firs Lord guie fingall to the fight. War. What fay'st thou Henry, Wilt thou yeeld the Crowne? (you speake) Qu. Why how now long-tongued Warwicke, dare When you and I, met at S.Ahons laft, Your legges did better feruice then your hands. War. Then 'twas my turne to fly, and now 'tis thine: Cliff. You faid fo much before, and yet you fled. War. 'Twas not your valor Clifford drove me thence: Nor No, nor your manhood that durft make you flay. Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reuerently, Breakce off the parley for Scarfe I can reftraine The execution of my big-twinne heart. Vpon that Clifford, that crueell Child-killer. Cliff. I swel thy Father, cal'lt thou him a Child? Rich.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

Rich. I like a Daftard, and a treacherous Coward,
As thou didst kill our tender Brother Rutland,
But ere Sunlet, I lie make thee curse the deed.

King. Haue done with words (my Lords) and heare me speake.

Qu. Defie them then, or els hold close thy lips.

King. I prythee give me no limits to my Tongue,
I am a King, and prilugu'd to speake.

Cif. My Liege, the wound that bred this meeting here,
Cannot be cur'd by Words, therefore be still.

Rich. Then Executioner vnheath thy word:
By him that made us all, I am refolu'd,
That Clifford's Manhood, lies upon his tongue.

Ed. Say Henry, shall I have my right, or no?
A thousand men have broke their Pacts to day,
That ne'er shall dine, vnlesse thou yeild the Crowne.

War. If thou deny, their Blood upon thy head,
For Yorke in justice put's his Armour on.

Pr. Ed. If that be right, which Warwick faies is right,
There is no wrong, but every thing is right.
War. Who ever got then, there thy Mother stands,
For well I wot, thou haft thy Mothers tongue.

Qu. But thou art neyther like thy Sire nor Damme,
But like a foule miishapen Stigmatuce,
Mark'd by the Deformities to be auolud,
As venom Toades, or Lizards dreadfulst wings.

Rich. Iron of Naples, bid with English gilt,
Whose Father bears the Title of a King,
(As if a Channel should be call'd the Sea)
Shall thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,
To let thy tongue detest thy base-born heart.

Ed. A wiife of flour were worth a thousand Crowns,
To make this flameleffe Callet know her selfe:

Helen of Greece was fayer farre then thou,
Although thy Husband may be Menelaus;
And ne'er was Agamemnon Brother wrong'd
By that falle Woman, as this King by thee.
His Father renueld in the heart of France,
And tam'd the Kings, and made the Dolphin floue:

And had he match'd according to his State,
He might have kept that glory to this day.
But when he took a beggar to his bed,
And grac'd thy poore Sire with his Brildall day,
Euen then that Sun-shine brevd a fhower for him,
That waft his Fathers fortunes forth of France,
And hear'd felidion on his Crowne at home:
For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy Pride?
Had't thou bene meeker, as thou hadst kept,
And we in pitty of the Gentle King,
Had flipt our Claime, vntill another Age.

Cla. But when we saw, our Sunshine made thy Spring,
And that thy Summer brevd vs no increas,
We set the Axe to thy flowing Root:
And though the edge hath something hit our felues,
Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,
We'l neuer loose, till we haue wone thee downe,
Or batt'd thy growing, with our heated bloods.

Edm. And in this resolution, I define thee,
Not willing any longer Conference,
Since thou deni'dst the gentle King to speake.

Sound Trumpets, let our bloody Colours waeue,
And either Victories, or else a Graue.

Qu. Stay Edward.

Ed. No wrangling Woman, we'll no longer lay,
These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.

Exeunt ames.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Fore-spent with Toile, as Runners with a Race,
I lay me downe a little while to breath:
For Arokes receu'd, and many blowes repaid,
Haue robb'd my ftrong knit finewes of their strength,
And fpight of fpight, needs muft I reft a while.

Enter Edward running.

Ed. Smite gentle heauen, or ftrike vngentle death,
For this world frownes, and Edwars Sunne is clouded.

War. How now my Lord, what happes? what hope of good?

Enter Clarence.

Cla. Our hap is loffe, our hope but fad dispaire,
Our rankes are broke, and ruine followes vs,
What counfalle giue you? whether fhall we flye?

Ed. Bootlefyle is flight, they follow vs with Wings,
And weake we are, and cannot fhowe poffufe.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah Warwick, why haft thou withdrawn thy felfe?
Thy Brothers blood the thirty earth hath drunk,
Braoch'd with the Steele point of Clifford's Launces:
And in the very pangs of death, he cryes,
Like to a diffmall Clangor heard from farre,
Warwickie, reuenge; Brother, reuenge my death.
So vnderneath the belly of their Steeds,
That flain'd their Fetlockes in his fmoaking blood,
The Noble Gentleman gave vp the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:
Ile kill my Horse, because I will not flye:
Why fland we like foft-hearted women heere,
Wayling our loffes, whiles the foe doth Rage,
And looke vpon, as if the Tragedie
Were plaid in lefe, by counterfetting Actors.
Here on my knee, I vow to God above,
Ile neuer pawfe againe, neuer fland still,
Till either death hath clo'd thee eyes of mine,
Or Fortune giue me mesure of Reuenge.

Ed. Oh Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine,
And in this vow do chaine my foule to thine:
And ere my knee rife from the Earths cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou fetter vp, and plucker downe of Kings,
Befeeching thee (if with thy will it flands)
That to my Foes this body muft be prey,
Yet that thy brazen gates of heauen may ope,
And giue sweet paffage to my fìnfull foule,
Now Lords, take leave vntill we meete againe,
Where ere it be, in heauen,or in earth.

Rich. Brother,

Glue me thy hand, and gentle Warwickie,
Let me embrase thee in my weary armes:
I that did neuer wepe, now melt with wo,
That Winter should cut off our Spring-time to.

War. Away, away:
Once more sweet Lords farwell.

Cla. Yet let vs altogether to our Troopes,
And giue them leave to flye, that will not flay:
And call them Pillars that will fland to vs:
And if we thrive, promiue them fuch rewards
As Victors werae at the Olympian Games,
This may plant courage in their quailing breathes,
For yet is hope of Life and Victories:

p 2
Foreflow no longer, make we hence amaine. Exeunt.

Excusants. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now Clifford, I have fangled thee alone,
Savage this arms is for the Duke of Yorks,
And this for Rutland, both bound to revenge,
We're thou without a with a Brest wall.

Cliff. Now Richard, I am with thee here alone,
This is the hand that shud thy Father Yorke,
And this the hand, that flew thy Brother Rutland,
And here's the heart, that triumphs in their deitifs,
And cheers these hands, that flew thy Sire and Brother,
To execute the like upon thy felfe,
And so have at thee. They fight, Warwick kents, Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay Warwick, single out some other Chace,
For I my felfe will hunt this Wolfe to death. Exeunt.

Allarum. Enter King Henry alone.

Hen. This battell a farts like to the morning Warre,
When dying clouds contend, with growing light,
What time the Sheppheard blowing of his nipes,
Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.
Now fwytes it this way, like a Mighty Sea,
could by the Tide, to combat with the Winde:
Now fwytes it that way, like the fide-time Sea,
For'd to retreype by furie of the Winde.
Sometime, the Flood preuails, and than the Winde:
Now, one the better; then, another bell;
Both tugging to be Victors, brest to brest:
Yet neither Conqueror, nor Conquered.
So is the equal poife of this fell Warre.
Here on this Mole-hill will I fit me dowe,
To whom God will, there be the Victories:
For Margaret my Queene, and Clifford too
Hauf chid me from the Battell; Swareing both,
They proper belt of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead, if Gods good well were fo;
For what is in this world, but Griffe and Woe.
Oh God if me thinke it were a happy life,
To be no better then a homely Swaine.
So is the world; for to be a Fel卿.
To carue out Dialis quenity, point by point,
Thereby to fee the Minutes how they runne:
How many makes the hour full compleat,
How many Hours brings about the Day,
How many Days will make up the Year,
How many Yeares, a Mortall man may live.
When this is knowne, then to divide the Times:
So many Hours, must I tend my Flocke; So many Hours, must I take my Rest:
So many Hours, must I Contemplate;
So many Hours, must I sport my felfe:
So many Days, my Ewees have bene with yong:
So many weeke, ere the poore Fowles will Eate:
So many yeares, ere I shall shere the Fleece:
So Minutes, Hours, Days, Months, and Yeares,
Past over to the end they were created,
Would bring white haires, into a Quiet grave.
Ahl what a life were this? How sweet? how lovely?
Glues not the Hawthorne bush a Sweeter shade
To Shepherds, looking on their Silly Sheepe,
Then doth a rich Imbroider'd Canopic.
To Kings, that are the Subjects treacherie?
Oh ye, it doth, a thousand fold it doth.
And to conclude, the Shepherds homely Curdis,

His cold thince drinke out of his Leather Bottle,
His wontedLeepe, under a fresh trees shade
All which secure, and sweetly he enjoyes,
Is farre beyond a Princes Delicates:
His Vlans sparkling in a Golden Cup,
His bodie couched in a curious bed,
When Care, Miftruf, and Trefon waits on him.

Allarum. Enter a Sonne that hath Kill'd his Father, at one door: and a Father that hath kill'd his Sonne at another door.

Son. Ill blows the winde that profit no body,
This man whom hand to hand I flew in fight,
May be poffed with some feet of Crownes,
And I that (happly) take them from him now,
May yet (ere night) yeild both my Life and them.
To some man else, as this dead man doth me.
Who's this? Oh God! It is my Fathers face,
Whom in this Conflict (I vowes) have kill'd;
Oh heavy times! begettimg such Events.
From London, by the King was I prif forth,
My Father being the Earle of Warwickes man,
Came on the part of Yorkes, prefet by his Matter:
And I, who at his hands receiued my life,
Haued by my hands, of Life bereaved him.
Pardon me God, I knew not what I did:
And pardon Father, for I knew not thee.
My Tearres shall wipe away these bloody marke:
And no more words, till they have fowld their fill.
King. O piteous spectacle! O bloody Times!
Whiles Lyons Warre, and battle for their Dennes,
Poore harmallie Lambes abide their enmity.
Weepe wretched man: Ile aye thoe Teare for Teare,
And let our hearts and eyes, like Cuill Warre,
Be blinde with teares, and break ore-charg'd with griefe.
Enter Father, hearing of his Sonne.

Fa. Thou that so floutly hath refiued me,
Gie me thy Gold, if thou haft any Gold:
For I have bought it with an hundred blowes.
But let me see: Is this our Foe-mans face?
Ah, no, no, it is mine onely Sonne.
Ah Boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw vpon thine eye: see,fee,what thowres arife,
Blowne with the windie Tempest of my heart.
Vpon thy wounds, that kills mine Eye, and Heart.
O pitty God, this miferable Age!
What Stragems? how fell?how Butchery?
Erroneous, mutinous, and unnaturall,
This deadly quarell daily doth beget?
O Boy! thy Father gueue thee life too foone,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.

King. Wo abo waygreen, more then common greefe
O that my death would flye these ruthless deeds:
O pitty, pitty, gentle houen pitty:
The Red Rofe and the White are on his face,
The fallat Colours of our friuling Haues:
The one, his purple Blood right well reflectes,
The other his palte Checkers (me thinkes) pretenth:
Wither one Rose, and let the other flourih:
If you contend, a thousand lines mutt wither.

Son. How will my Mother, for a Fathers death
Take on with me, and we're to be faifid?

Fa. How will my Wife, for Daughter of my Sonne,
Shed seas of Teares, and ne're to be faifid?

King. How will the Country, for thefe woful chances,
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

Mil-thinke the King, and not be satisfied?

Son. Was ever sone, so row'd a Fathers death?

Fath. Was ever Father so bemoana his Sonne?

Men. Was ever King so green for Subject's woe?

Much is your sorrow; Mine, ten times so much.

Son. Ile bare thee hence, where I may wepe my fill.

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy wending sheet:
My heart (sweet Boy) shall be thy Sepulcher,
For from my heart, thine Image ne' shall go.
My fighting breath, shall be thy Funerall bell;
And so obsequious will thy Father be,
Men for the loss of thee, having no more,
As Pria was for all his Vantall Sonnes,
Ile bare thee hence, and let them fight that will,
For I hawe murdered where I should not kill.

Exit

Men. Sad-hearted-men, much overgone with Care;
Heere sits a King, more wofull then you are.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter the Queen, the Prince, and Exeter.

Prim. Fly Father, flye: for all your Friends are fled.

And Warwicke rages like a chafed Bull:
Away, for death doth hold vs in pursuit.

Gus. Mount you my Lord, towards Warwicke poit a-name me.

Edward and Richard like a brace of Grey-hounds,
Hauing the fearfull flying Hare in fiught,
With fiery eyes, sparkling for very wrath,
And bloody fle′de graft in their eyrfull hands.
Are at our backes, and therefore hence amaine.
Exe. Away for vengeance comes along with them.
Nay, stay not to expollute, make speed,
Or else come after, Ile awe before.

Hen. Nay take with thee, good sweet Exeter:
Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
Whether the Queene intends. Forward, away.

Exeunt

A loud alarum. Enter Clifford Wounded.

Cliff. Heere burns my Canse out: I, heere it dies,
Which whilst it lasted, gave King Henry light.
O Lancaster, I fear thy overthrow,
More then my Bodies parting with my Soule:
My Loue and Fear, glew'd many Friends to thee,
And now I fall. Thy tough Commixtures melo,
Impairing Henry, strengthning milproud Yorke;
And then ther flye the Greats, to the Sunne?
And who shines now, but Henrys Enemies?
O Phaeton! had't thou neuer gien content,
That Phaeton should check thy fiery Steeds,
Thy burning Carre never had struck the earth.
And Henry, had'ft thou way'd as Kings should do,
Or as thy Father, and his Father did,
Guing no ground vnto the house of Yorke,
They never then had sprung like Sommer Flies:
I, and ten thousand in this lackliffe Realme,
Fled left no mourning Widowes for our death,
And thou this day, had'ft kept thy Chaire in peace.
For what doth cherish Weeds, but gentle ayre?
And what makes Robbers bold, but too much lenity?
Bootleffe are Plaints, and Cureleffe are my Wounds:
No way to flye, nor strength to hold out flight:
The Foe is mercifull, and will not pitty:
For at their hands I have defera'd no pitty.
The ayre hath got into my deadly Wounds,

And much effuse of blood, doth make me faint:
Come York, and Richard, Warwicke, and the rest,
I flas'd your Fathers bolemes, Split my brest.

Ed. Now breath we Lords, good fortune bids vs pause,
And smooth the frownes of War, with peaceful lookes:
Some Troopes purre the bloody-minded Queene,
That led calme Henry, though he were a King,
As doth a Sall, fill'd with a fretting Grief
Command an Argosie to stemme the Waues.
But thinkes you(Lords)that Clifford fled with them?
War. No, 'tis Impossibale he should escappe:
(For though before his face I speake the words)
Your Brother Richard markt him for the Graue,
And wherefore he is, hee's furry dead. Clifford groans.
Rich. Whose soule is that which takes his heavy leave?
A deadly groane, like life and deaths departing.
See who it is.

Ed. And now the Battales ended,
If Friend or Foe, let him be gently vid.
Rich. Resouke that doome of mercy, for 'tis Clifford,
Who not contented that he lopp'd the Branch
In hewing Rutland, when his leaves put forth,
But set his murthering knife vnto the Roots,
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,
I meane our Princely Father, Duke of Yorke.
War. From off the gates of Yorke, fetch down y head,
Your Fathers head, which Clifford placed there:
In stead whereof, let this supply the roome,
Menefor for menefare, must be anwered.

Ed. Bring forth that fatall Schreecheelowe to our house,
That nothing fang but death, to vs and qur:
Now death shall flipp his didmall threatening found,
And his ill-boading tongue, no more shall speake.

War. I thinke is understandning is bereft:
Speake Clifford, doth thou know who speakes to thee?
Darke cloudy death over-shades his bames of life,
And he nor fees, nor heares vs, what we say.
Rich. O would he did, and so (perhaps) he doth,
'Tis but his policy to counterfeet,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our Father.

Cla. If so thou thinke'st,
Vex him with eager Words.

Rich. Clifford, aske mercy, and obtaine no grace.
Ed. Clifford, repere to he, and not bootleffe penitence.
War. Clifford, defile excuses for thy faults.

War. While we defile fell Tortures for thy faults.
Rich. Thou didst loove Yorke, and I am fon to Yorke.
Edw. Thou pidd't Rutland, I will pitty thee.
Cla. Where's Captaine Margaret the words?
War. They mocke thee Clifford?

Swears as thou was't wont.

Rich. What, not an Oath? Nay then the world go's hard
When Clifford cannot spare his Friends an oath:
I know by that he's dead, and by my Soule,
If this right hand would buy two horeses life,
That I(in all despit'g) might royale at him,
This hand should chop it off: & with the issue Blood
Stiffe the Villaine, whose unmanched shirt
Yorke, and yong Rutland could not fastifie
War. I, but he's dead. Of what with the Traitors head,
And reare it in the place your Fathers stands.
And now to London with Triumphant march,
There to be crowned Englands Royall King.
From whence, shall Warwicke cut the Sea to France,
And aske the Ladle Bone for thy Queene:
So shalt thou finde both thee Lands together,
And hauing France thy Friend, thou shalt not dread
The fattred Foe, that hopes to rise againe:
For though they cannot greatly flie to hurt,
Yet looke to have them baze to offend thine eares:
First, will I see the Coronation,
And then to Britain Ile croffe the Sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my Lord.

Ed. Even as thou wilt sweate Warwicke, let it bee:
For in thy shouder do I bulde my Sceat;
And never will I undertake the thing
Wherein thy couraffe and commoditie is wanting:
Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucefter,
And George of Clarence; Warwicke as our Selve,
Shall do, and vnde as he pleaseth best.
Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Goffier,
For Goffiers Duke-dome is too onerous.
War. Tut, that’s a foolish obsturcation:
Richard, be Duke of Goffier; Now to Lodon,
To see thefe Honors in posfession.

Enter Sinklo, and Humphrey, with Croffe-bones in their hands.

Sink. Vnder this thicke growe brake, we’ll throw
For through this Land anon the Deere will come,
And in this courset we will make our Stand,
Calling the principal of all the Deere.
Hum. Ile flay about the hill, for both may flout.
Sink. That cannot be, the noife of thy Croffe-bow
Will scare the Haed, and fo my flout is loft:
Heere fland we both, and syme we at the belft:
And for the tyme shall not feeme tedious,
He shall tell what befell me on a day,
In this felfe-place, where now we meane to fland.
Sink. Heere comes a man, let’s flay till he be paft:
Enter the King with a Prayer bode.

Hen. From Scotland am I holne euene of pure loure,
To greet mine owne Land with my willfull flight:
No Harry, Harry, ‘ts no Land of thine,
Thy place is fill’d, thy Scepter wrung from thee,
Thy Bame waht off, wherewith thou was Annotated:
No bending knee will call thee Caesar now,
No humble fitters presie to speake for right:
No, not a man comes for redresse of thee:
For how can I helpe them, and not my felfe?
Sink. I, here’s a Deere, whose skin’s a Keepers Fee:
This is the quondam King; Let’s feize vpon him.
Hen. Let me embrace the fower Adercaries,
For Wife men fay, it is the wiffeft curfe.
Hum. Why linger we? Let vs lay hands vpon him.
Sink. Forbearce a-while, we’ll hear a little more.
Hen. My Queene and Son are gone to France for aid:
And (as I hear) the great Commanding Warwicke
It thither gone, to craue the French Kings Sifter
To wide for Edward. If this news be true,
Poore Queene, and Sonne, your labour is but loft:
For Warwicke is a subtile Orator:
And Lewis a Prince foone wonne with mowing words:
By this account then, Margaret may winne him,
For she’s a woman to be pierted much:
Herfighes will make a batt’ry in his brest,
Her teares will pierce into a Marble heart:

The Tyger will be milde, whiles the doth mourne;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse.
To heare and for her plaintis, her Britisch Teares.
I, but here’s come to begge, Warwicke to give:
Shoe on his left fide, causinge aye for Henrie;
He on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
Shee Weetes, and fayes, his Henrie is depo’d:
He Smiles, and fayes, his Edward is intaile’d:
That the (poore Wretch) for greefe can speake no more:
Whiles Warwicke tellis his Title, smooths the Wrong,
Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion winnes the King from her,
With promise of his Sifter, and what else,
To strenthen and support King Edward’s place.
O Margaret, thus ’twill be, and thou (poore foule)
Art then forsaken, as thou wen’t forlorn.
Hum. Say, what art thou talk’t of Kings & Queens?
King. More then I teeme, and leffe then I was born to:
A man at leaft, for leffe I should not be:
And men may tale of Kings, and why not I?
Hum. I, but thou talk’st, as if thou wert a King,
King. Why I lo I am (in Minde) and that’s enough.
Hum. But if thou be a King, where is thy Crowne?
King. My Crowne is in my heart, not on my head:
Not deck’d with Diamonds, and Indian fione:
Nor to be feme: my Crowne, is call’d Content,
A Crowne it is, that fildeone Kings enjoy.
Hum. Well, if you be a King crown’d with Content,
Your Crowne Content, and you, must be contented
To go along with vs. For (as we thinke)
You are the King King Edward hath depo’d:
And we his subiects, wrone in all Allegiance,
Will apprehend you, as his Enemie.
King. But did you neuer swear, and breake an Oath.
Hum. No, neuer fuch an Oath, nor will not now.
King. Where did you dwell when I was K. of England?
Hum. Here in this Country, where we now remaine.
King. I was annointed King at nine moneths old,
My Father, and my Grandfather were Kings:
And you were fwayne true Subiects unto me:
And tell me then, have you not broke your Oathes?
Sir, No, for we were Subiects, but while you wer king
King. Why? Am I dead? Do I not breath a Man?
Ah fimple men, you know not what you fware:
Looke, as I blow this Feather from my Face,
And as the Ayre blowes it to me againe,
Obeying with my winde when I do blow,
And yeelding to another, when it blowes,
Commanded always by the greater gift:
Such is the lightneffe of you, common men.
But do not breake your Oathes, for of that finne,
My milde intreatie shall not make you guiltie.
Go where you will, the King shall be commanded,
And be you kings, command, and Ile obey.
Sinklo. We are true Subiects to the king,
King Edward.
King. So would you be againe to Henries,
If he were stated as king Edward is.
Sinklo. We charge you in Gods name & the Kings,
To go with vs vnto the Officers.
King. In Gods name lead, your Kings name be obeyed,
And what God will, that let your King perfome,
And what he will, I humbly yield vnto.

Enters K.Edward, Glofter, Clarence, Lady Gray.
King. Brother of Glofter, at S. Albons field.

Exeunt.
Rich. Your Highness shall do well to grant her suit:
It were dinnor to deny it her.
King. It were no lefe, but yet Ile make a pawne.
Rich. Yes, is it so:
I see the Lady hath a thing to graunt, Before the King will graunt her humble suit.
Clarence. Hee knowes the Game, how true hee keeps the winde.
King. Widow, we will consider of your suit, And come some other time to know our minde.
Wid. Right gracious Lord, I cannot brooke delay: May it please your Highness to refuse me now, And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.
Rich. I Widow? then Ile warrant you all your Lands, And if what pleases him, shall please you:
Fight clofer, or good faith youll catch a Blow.
Clarence. I feare not him, vnlesse hee the chance to fall.
Rich. God forbid that, for hee'll take vantages.
King. How many Children haile thou, Widow? tell me.
Clarence. I thinke he meannes to begge a Child of her.
Rich. Nay then whip me: hee'll rather glue her two.
Wid. Three, my most gracious Lord.
Rich. You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.
King. Twere pitie they should lose their Fathers Lands.
Wid. Be plittfull, dread Lord, and graunt it then.
King. Lords give vs leave, Ile trye this Widowes wit.
Rich. I, good leaue haue you, for you shall haue leave, Till Youth take leaue, and leave you to the Crutch.
King. Now tell me, Madame, doe you lose your Children?
Wid. I, full as dearly as I love my felie.
Rich. And would you not doe much to doe them good?
Wid. To doe them good, I would sufwayne some harme.
King. Then get your Husbands Lands, to doe them good.
Wid. Therefore I came vnto your Maiestie.
King. Ile tell you how these Lands are to be got.
Wid. So shall you bind me to your Highness feruice.
King. What feruice wilt thou doe me, if I give them?
Wid. What you command, that refus in me to doe.
King. But you will take exceptions to my Boone.
Wid. No, gracious Lord, except I cannot doe it.
King. I, but thou canst doe what I meane to ask.
Wid. Why then I will doe what your Grace commands.
Rich. Hee plyes her hard, and much Raine weares the Marble.
Clar. As red as fire? nay then, her Wax mucf melt.
Wid. Why stopples my Lord? shal I not heare my Tasker?
Rich. An eafe Tasker, 'tis but to lose a King.
Wid. That's foonie perform'd, because I am a Subjects.
King. Why then, thy Husbands Lands I freely give thee.

Rich. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.
Rich. The Match is made, thee seales it with a Cure.
King. But say thee, 'ts the fruits of loue I meane.
Rich. The fruits of Loue, I meane, my louing Liege.
King. I, but I feare me in another fence.
What Loue, think't thou, I fse so much to get?
Wid. My lone till death, my humble thanks, my prayers,
That loue which Vertue besses, and Vertue graunt.
King. No, by my troth, I did not meane such loue.
Wid. Why then you meane not, as I thought you did,
King. But now you partly may perceive my minde.
Wid. My minde will never graunt what I percieue
Your Highness aymes at, if I yeong aright.
King. To tell thee plainly, I syne to lyce with thee.
Wid. To tell you plainly, I had rather lye in Prifon.
King. Why then thou shalt not hauie thy Husbands Lands.
Wid. Why then mine Honestie shall be my Dower,
For by that lofe, I will not purchase them.
King. Those thy wrong, 's thy Children mightly.
Wid. Herein your Highness wrongs both them & me:
But mightie Lord, this merry inclination
Accords not with the fadness of my fuit:
Please you dismisse me, eyther with Yor no.
King. If thou wilt say I to my requit:
No, if thou do't say No to my demand.
Wid. Then No, my Lord: my fuit is at an end.
Rich. The Widow likes him not, thee knits her Browes,
Clarence. Hee is the blunterd Woer in Chriftendome,
King. Her Looks doth argue her replete with Modesty,
Her Words doth fweer her Wit incomparable,
All her perfections challenge Soueraignty,
One way, or other, thee is for a King,
And thee shall be my Loue, or else my Queene.
Say, that King Edward take thee for his Queene?
Wid. 'Tis better faid then done, my gracious Lord:
I am a subiect fit to leaff withall,
But faire vnft to be a Soueraigne.
King. Sweet Widow, by my State I swear to thee,
I speake no more then what my Soule intris,
And that is, to enjoy thee for my Loue.
Wid. And that is more then I will yeeld vnto:
I know, I am too meane to be your Queene,
And yet too good to be your Concubine.
King. You caull, Widow, I did meane my Queene.
Wid. 'Twill grieve your Grace, my Sonnes shoule call you Father.
King. No more, then when my Daughters
Call thee Mother.
Thou art a Widow, and thou haft some Children,
And by Gods Mother, I being but a Batchelor,
Haue other-some, why, til a happy thing,
To be the Father vnto many Sonnes:
Anfwer no more, for thou shalt be my Queene.
Rich. The Ghastly Father now hath done his Shrift.
Clarence. When hee was made a Shriner, 'twas for shift.
King. Brothers, you mufe what Chatt wee two hauie had.
Rich. The Widow likes it not, for thee lookest very sad.
King. You'd think it strange, if I should marrie her,
Clarence. To who, my Lord?
King. Why Clarence, to my felie.

Rich. That
Rich. That would be tenne days wonder at the least.
Clarence. That's a day longer then a Wonder Lifts.
Rich. By so much is the Wonder in extremes.
King. Well,leaf on Brothers I can tell you both,
Her suit is granted for her Husbands Lands.

Enter a Noble man.

Neb. My gracious Lord, Henry your Foe is taken,
And brought your Prisoner to your Palace Gate.
King. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower:
And goe wee Brothers to the man that took him,
To question of his apprehension.
Widow goe you along: Lords vfe her honourable.

Mamet Richard.

Rich. I, Edward will vfe Women honourably:
Would he were wait'd,Marrow, Bonces, and all,
That from his Loynes no hopefull Branch may spring,
To croffe me from the Golden time I looke for:
And yet, betweene my Soules desire, and me,
The luflfull Edwards Title buried,
Is Clarence, Henry, and his Sonne young Edward,
And all the vnook'd-for Iffue of their Bodies,
To take their Roomes, ere I can place my felf:
A cold premeditation for my purpose.
Why then do I but dreame on Souerraigne,
Like one that flands upon a Promontorie,
And fyres a farre-off thore, where hee would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye,
And chides the Sea, that fenders him from thence,
Saying, hee'll lace it dry, to have his way:
So doe I with the Crowne, being so farre off,
And fo I chide the means that keeps me from it,
And fo (I fay) I lie cut the Caufes off,
Flattering me with Impossibilities:
My Eyes too quicke, my Heart o're-weenes too much,
Valeffe my Hand and Strength could equal them.
Well, fay there is no Kingdome then for Richard:
What other Pleasure can the World afford?
Ile make my Heauen in a Ladies Lappe,
And decke my Body in gay Ornaments,
And which sweet Ladies with my Words and Lookes.
Oh miserable Thought! and more vnlikely,
Then to accomplifh twentie Golden Crownes.
Why Loue forfower me in my Mothers Wombe:
And doe with my Body in gay Ornaments,
And which sweet Ladies with my Words and Lookes.
Oh miserable Thought! and more vnlikely,
Then to accomplifh twentie Golden Crownes.

Flourish.
Enter Loue the French King, bés Sitter Bona, bés
Admirall, call'd Bourbon : Prince Edward,
Queene Margaret, and the Earle of Oxford.

Leue, Faire Queene of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit downe with vs : it ill befit thy State,
And Birth, that thou shouldst stand, while Loue doth fit.
Marg. No, mightie King of France: now Margaret
Mufte frikke her fayle, and learne a while to ferue,
Where Kings command. I was (I must confesse)
Great Albions Queene, in former Golden days:
But now mischance hath trode my Title downe,
And with dif-honor layd me on the ground,
Where I must take like Seat vnto my fortune,
And to my humble Seat conform me felfe.
Leue. Why fay, faire Queene, whence springs this deepe defpair?
Marg. From such a caufe, as fills mine eyes with tears,
And drops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.
Leue. What ere it be, be thou fliell like thy felfe,
And fit thee by our fide.
Queens. See her by him.
Leue. Yeal not thy necke to Fortune's yoke;
But let thy dauntleffe mind till ride in triumph,
Ouer all mischance.
Be plaine, Queene Margaret, and tell thy griefe,
It fhall be ear'd, if France can yeeld reliefe.
Marg. Thofe gracious words
Resuie my drooping thoughts,
And glue my tongue-tv'd forrowes leave to speake,
Now therefore be it knowe to Noble Leue,
That Henry, fole poiffeer of my Loue,
Is, of a King, become a banilift man,
And for'd to live in Scotland a forlorn:
While proud ambitious Edward,Duke of Yorke,
Vfures the Regall Title, and the Seat
Of Englands true anoynted lawfull King.
This is the caufe that I, poore Margaret,
With this my Sonne, Prince Edward,Henries Heire,
Am come to craye thy laft and lawfull ayde:
And if thou faile vs, all our hope is done.
Scotland hath will to helpe, but cannot helpe:

Our
Our People, and our Peers, are both mis-led,
Our Treasure flewe, our Souldiers put to flight,
And (as thou seest) our felues in huele plight.
Lewis. Renowned Queen,
With patience calme the Storme,
While we bethink us a meanes to breake it off.

Marg. The more wee stay, the stronger grows our Foot.

Lewis. The more I stay, the more Ile succour thee.

Marg. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow.
And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter Warwick.

Lewis. What's hee approacheth boldly to our presence?

Lewis. Welcome brave Warwick, what brings thee to France?

Warwick. From worthy Edward, King of Allion,
My Lord and Soveraigne, and thy vowed friend.
I come (in Kindness, and unwary Love)
First, to doe greetings to thy Royall Person,
And then to craue a League of Amity:
And lastly, to confirme that Amity
With Nuptiall Knot, if thou wouldest grant
That vれtuous Lady, thy faire Sifer,
To Englands King, in lawfull Marriage.

Marg. If that goe forward, Henries hope is done.

Warwick. And gracious Madame, Speaking to Bona.
In our Kings behalfs,
I am commandred, with your laue and favor,
Humbly to kisse your hand, and with my Tongue
To tell the passion of my Soveraigne Heart;
Where Fate, late entering at his headfull Eares,
Hath plac'd thy Beauties Image, and thy Vertue.

Marg. King Lewis, and Lady Bona, hear me speake,
Before you anwser Warwick. His demand
Springs not from Edwards well-meanient honor Lour,
But from Decceit, bred by Necessiti:
For how can Tyrants safely governe home,
Valefie abroad they purchace great alliance?
To prose him Tyrant, this reason may suffice,
That Henry I Ethan Bill: but were hee dead,
Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henries Sonne.
Looke therefore Lewis, that by this League and Marriage
Thou draw not on thy Danger, and Dis-honor;
For though Vifarers Iwaye the rule a while,
Yet Heau'n are iuud, and Time supplieth Wrongs.
Warwick. Inurious eMargaret.
Edw. And why not Queene?

Warwick. Because thy Father Henry did visuper,
And thou no more art Prince, then fere is Queene.

Oxf. Then Warwick dilliculles great John of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greaste part of Spaine;
And after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose Wildsome was a Mirror to the wifte:
And after that wise Prince, Henry the Fift,
Who by his Proweffe conquered all France:
From thence, our Henry liuely defends.

Warwick. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth discourse,
You told not, how Henry the Sixt hath lost
All that, which Henry the Fift had gotten:

Me thinks thes Peeres of France should smile at that.
But for the rest: you tell a Pedigree
Of threee and two yeares, a fillie time
To make preffcription for a Kingdome worth.

Oxf. Why Warwick, canst thou speak against thy Liege,
Whom thou obeyed thirtie and six yeere,
And not bewray thy Treatien with a Blush?

Warwick. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,
Now buckler Fallswold with a Pedigree?
For shame leave Henry, and call Edward King.

Oxf. Call him my King, by whose inuurious doome
My elder Brother, the Lord Aubrey Pere
Was done to death? and more then fo, my Father,
Euen in the downe-fall of his mellow'd yeeres,
When Nature brought him to the doore of Death?
No Warwick, no: while Life upholdeth this Arme,
This Arme upholdeth the House of Lancaster.

Warwick. And I the House of York.

Lewis. Queene Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford,
Vouchsafe at our requit, to fland atide.
While I vie further conference with Warwick.

They fland atide.

Marg. Heauens grant, that Wallackes wordes be
With him not.

Lewis. Now Warwick, tell me even upon thy confidence
Is Edward your true King? for I were loth
To linke with him, that were not lawfull choane.

Warwick. Thereon I payne my Credit, and mine Honor.

Lewis. But is hee gracius in the Peoples eye?

Warwick. The more, that Henry was unfortunate.

Lewis. Then further: all diffembling let aside,
Tell me for truth, the measure of his Lose
Vnto our Sifer Bona.

Warwick. Such it seemes,
As may becom a Monarch like himselfe.
My felte haue oftentimes heard him say, and sweare,
That this his Loue was an external Plant,
Wereof the Root was first in Vertues ground,
The Leanes and Fruit maintai'n'd with Beauties Sunne,
Exempt from Envy, but not from Difdaime,
Valefie the Lady Bona quit his paine.

Lewis. Now Sifer, let vs hear your firme resolute.

Bona. Your grant, or your denyall, shall be mine.
Yet I confesse, that often ere this day,
Speak to War.
When I have heard your Kings defect recounted,
Mine care hath tempered judgment to defere.

Lewis. Then Warwick, thus:
Our Sifer shall be Edwards.
And now forthwith shall Articles be drawne,
Touching the joynture that your King mutt make,
Which with her Dowrie shall be counter-poy'd:
Draw neere, Queen Margaret, and be a witnesse,
That Bona shall be Wife to the English King.

Pr. Edw. To Edwards, but not to the English King.

Marg. Deceitful Wallacke, it was thy deuice,
By this alliance to make void my futt:
Before thy comming, Lewis was Henries friend.

Lewis. And still is friend to him, and Margaret.
But if your Title to the Crowne be weake,
As may appeare by Edwards good fucceffe:
Then let the reason, that I be releas'd:
From giuing aye, which late I promis'd.
Yet shall you have all kindnesse at my hand,
That your Efteate requires, and mine can yeeld.

Warwick. Henry now liues in Scotland, at his ease:

Where
Where hauing nothing, nothing can he lofe.

And as for you your life (our quondam Queene)
You have a Father able to maintaine you,
And better where, you troubled him, then France.

Mar. Peace impudent, and shamefullle Warwick,

Proud fetter vp, and puller downe of Kings,
I will not hence, till with my Talke and Teares
(Both full of Truth) I make King Lewis behold
Thy belye,conveynance, and thy Lords late loue,

Poh blowing a horne Within.

For both of you are Birds of selfe-same Feather.

Lewe. Warwick, this is some pote to vs, or thee.

Enter the Poft.

Poft. My Lord Ambaffador,
Thefe Letters are for you.

Speakes to Warwick,

Sent from your Brother Marqueffe Montague,
Thefe from our King, vnto your Malefle.

To Lewis.

And Madam, thele for you:

To Margaret.

From whom, I know not.

Oxf. I like it well, that our faire Queene and Miftris
Smiles at her neues, while Warrick proveth to his.

Prince Ed. Nay marke how Lew's lampes as he were netted.

I hope, all's for the beft.

Lew. Warwick, what are thy Newes?

And yours, faire Queene.

Mar. Mine such, as fill my heart with vnshop'd lustes.

War. Mine full of sorow, and hearts discontent.

Lew. What! has your King married the Lady Gry?

And now to ftooth your Foyrgerie, and his,

Sends me a Paper to perfwade me Patience?

Is thi th'Alliance that he feakes with France?

Dare he preufe to forne vs in this manner?

Mar. I told your Malefle as much before:

This proue Edwards Lose, and Warrickes honesty.

War. King Lewis, I heare protief in light of heauen,

And by the hope I hau of heavenly bliss,

That I am cleere from this middefel of Edwards;

No more my King, for he dothonor me.

But mort biffeffle, if he could fee his flame.

Did I forget, that by the Houfe of Yorke

My Father came vntimely to his death?

Did I let paffe th'abufe done to my Neece?

Did I impale him with the Regall Crowne?

Did I put Henry from his Natufe Right?

And am I guerdon'd at the left, with Shame?

Shame on himfelle, for my Defert is Honor.

And to reparaue my Honor loft for him,

I heare renounce him, and returne to Henry.

My Noble Queene, let former grudges paffe,

And henceforth, I am thy true Servitour:

I will reuenge his wrong to Lady Bona,

And replant Henry in his former rate.

War. Warwick,

Thefe words hau turn'd my Hate, to Looe,

And I forgive, and quite forget old faults,

And joy that thou becom'ft King Henry's Friend.

So much this Friend, his unfamed Friend,

That if King Lew's vouchsafe to furnih vs

With some few Bands of choften Solidours,

Ile undertake to Land them on our Coaft,

And force the Tyrant from his feat by Warre.

'Tis not his new-made Bride shall succour him.

And as for Clarence, as my Letters tell me,

He's very likely now to fall from him,

For matching more for wanton Luft,then Honor,

Or then for strength and safety of our Country.

Bona. Deere Brother, how shall Bona be return'd,

But by thy helpe to this diffireed Queene?

Mar. Renowned Prince, how shall Poor Henry live,

Vallfe thou refcute him from foule difpair?

Bona. My queare, and this Englifh Queens are one.

War. And mine faire Lady Bona, lynes with yours.

Lew. And mine, with hers, and thine, and Margaretts.

Therefore, at left, I firmed am refolu'd

You shall have ayde.

Mar. Let me giue humble thanks for all, at once.

Lew. Then Englands Meffenger, returne in Pofte,

And tell falle Edward, thy fuppofed King,

That Lew's of France, is fending ouer Maskers

To renoufle it with him, and his new Bride.

Thou feft what's paft, go feare thy King withall.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I weare the Willow Garland for his fake.

Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are layde afide,

And I am ready to put Armor on.

War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,

And therefore Ie vn-Crowne him, eu't be long.

There's thy reward, be gone.

Exit Poft.

Lew. But Warwick,

Thou and Oxford, with five thoufand men

Shall e reaff the Seas, and bid falle Edward battell:

And as occasion feres, this Noble Queen

And Prince, shall fowll with a freff Supply.

Yet ere thou go, but anfwer me one doubt:

What Pledge have we of thy firme Loyalty?

War. This fhall affure my confant Loyalty,

That if our Queene, and this young Prince agree,

Ile loyne mine eldeft daughter, and my Ioy,

To him forthwith, in holy Wedlocke bands.

Mar. Yes, I agree, and thanke you for your Motion.

Sonne Edward, the is Faire and Vertuous,

Thereforedelay not, give thy hand to Warricke,

And with thy hand, thy faith irreucable,

That onely Warrickes defance fhall be thine.

Prix.Ed. Yes, I accept her, for the well deferves it,

And heere to pledge my Vow, I give my hand.

Mar. Solemnly to my doth, He gies his hand to Warw.

Lew. Why stay we now? Thesefoldiers fhalbe leue'd,

And thou Lord Bourbon, our High Admiral!

Shall waft them over with our Royall Fleece.

I long till Edward fall by Warres mishance,

For mocking Marriage with a Fame of France.

Exit.

Manet Warwick.

War. I came from Edward as Ambaffador,

But I returne his swarene and mortall Foe:

Matter of Marriage was the charge he gaue me,

But dreadfull Warre falle anfwere his demand.

Had he none elle to make a fale but me?

Then none but I, fall turne his left to Sorrow.

I was the Cheefe that rais'd him to the Crowne,

And Ile be Cheefe to bring him downe againe:

Not that I pitty Henries misery,

But feke Reuenge on Edwards mockery.

Exit.

Enter Richard, Clarence, Somerjef, and Montague.

Rick. Now tell me Brother Clarence, what thinke you

Of this new Marriage with the Lady Gray?

Hath not our Brother made a worthy choice?

Cla. Alas, you know, its farre from hence to France,

How
How could he stay till Warwick made returne?
Som. My Lord, forbear this talk: here comes the King.

Flourish.
Enter King Edward, Lady Grey, Penbrooke, Stafford, Hastings: four stand on one side, and four on the other.

Rich. And his well-chozen Bride.
Clarence. I minde to tell him plainly what I thinke.
King. Now Brother of Clarence, How like you our Choyce,
That you stand peniuous, as halfe malecontent?
Clarence. As well as Lewis of France,
Or the Earle of Warwick,
Which are so weake of courage, and in judgement,
That they take no offence at our abode.
King. Suppose they take offence without a cause:
They are but Lewis and Warwick, I am Edward,
Your King and Warwickes, and must have my will.
Rich. And shall have your will, because our King:
Yet hattle Marriage feldome proueth well.
King. Yea, Brother Richard, are you offended too?
Rich. Not I: no:
God forbid, that I should with them feuer'd,
Whom God hath ioyned together:
I land twere pittie, to funder them,
That yoke fo well together.
King. Setting your skornes, and your mislike aside,
Tell me some reafon, why the Lady Grey
Should not become my Wife, and Englands Queene?
And you too, Somerset, and Mountague,
Speak freely what you thinke.
Clarence. Thien this is mine opinion:
That King Lewis becomes your Enemy,
For mocking him about the Marriage
Of the Lady Bona.
Rich. And Warwick, doing what you gue in charge,
Is now dis-honored by this new Marriage.
King. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd,
By fuch iunction as I can defire?
Mount. Yet, to have ioyned with France in fuch alliance,
Would more haue strenthned this our Commonwealth
'Gainft foreigne formers, then any home-bred Marriage.
Half. Why, knowne not Mountague, that of it felle,
England is safe, if true within it felle?
Mount. But the fafere, when 'tis back'd with France.
Half. 'Tis better ving France, then trufting France: Let vs be back'd with God, and with the Sest,
Which he hath giv'n for France Impregnable,
And with their helpe, onely defend our fueles:
In them, and in our fueles, our fafete eyes.
Clar. For this one speech, Lord Hastings: well deferves
To have the Heire of the Lord Hungerford.
King. I, what of that? it was my will, and graunt,
And for this once, my Will fhall fand for Law.
Rich. And yet me thinkes, your Grace hath not done well,
To give the Heire and Daughter of Lord Scales
Vnto the Brother of your loving Bride;
Shee better would have fittted mee, as Clarence:
But in your Bride you burtie Brotherhood.
Clar. Or elle you would not have bellow'd the Heire
Of the Lord Besswift on your new Wives Sonne,
And leave your Brothers to goe ipeede elsewhere.
King. Alas, poor Clarence: is it for a Wife
That thou art malecontent? I will prouide thee.

Clarence. In chufing for your felfe,
You shew'd your judgement:
Which being shallow, you fhall give me leave
To play the Broker in mine owne behalfe;
And to that end, I shortly minde to leaque you.
King. Leaue me, or tarry, Edward will be King,
And not be ty'd vnto his Brothers will.
Lady Grey. My Lords, before it pleas'd his Malefie
To rayfe my State to Title of a Queene,
Doe me but right, and you must all confefs,
That I was not ignoble of Delcenc,
And meaner then my felle have had like fortune.
But as this Title honors me and mine,
So your diflikes, to whom I would be pleafing,
Doth cloud my loydes with danger, and with forrow.
King. My Love, forbear to fawne vpon their f ownes: What danger, or what forrow can befal thee,
So long as Edward is thy confant friend,
And their true Soueraigne, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and loue thee too,
Valeffe they feek for hatred at my hands:
Which if they doe, yet will I keep thee fafe,
And they shall fee the vengeance of my wrath.
Rich. I heare, yet fay not much, but thinke the more.

Enter a Psalme.

King. Now Meffenger, what Letters, or what Newes from France?
Psalme. My Soueraigne Liege, no Letters, & few words,
But fuch, as I (without your speciall pardon)
Dare not relate.
King. Goe too, wee pardon thee:
Therefore, in briefes, tell me their words,
As neere as thou canst gueffe them.
What answer makes King Lewis unto our Letters?
Psalme. At my depart, thefe were his very words:
Goe tell falle Edward, the fuppofed King,
That Lewis of France is fending ouer Maskers,
To reell it with him, and his new Bride.
King. Is Lewis fo brave? belike he thinke me Henry.
But what faid Lady Bona to my Marriage?
Psalme. Thife were her words, v't red with mild diflaine:
Tell him, in hope hee'll proue a Widower shortly,
Ie weare the Widgeon Garland for his fake.
King. I blame not her; she could fay little leffe:
She had the wrong. But what faid Henries Queene?
For I have heard, that she was there in place.
Psalme. Tell him (withoath the)
My mourning Wedes are done,
And I am ready to put Armour on.
King. Belike he minds to play the Amazon.
But what faid Warwick to thefe injuries?
Psalme. He, more incens'd against your Malefie,
Then all the robb, dicharg'd me with thefe words:
Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore Ie vncrownme him, er't be long.
King. Ha? durft the Traytor breath out fo proud words?
Well, I will arme me, being thus fore-warn'd:
They fhall have Warres, and pay for their preufumption.
But fay, is Warwick friends with Margaret?
Psalme. Gracious Soueraigne,
They are so join'd in friendship,
That yong Prince Edward marryes Warwick's Daughter.
Clarence. Belike, the elder;
Clarence will have the younger.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth

Now Brother King farewell, and fit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other Daughter,
That though I want a Kingdom, yet in Marriage
I may not prove inferior to your felles.
You that love me, and Warwick, follow me.
Exit Clarence, and Somerset followes.

Rich. Not I:
My thoughts ayme at a further matter:
I stay not for the love of Edward, but the Crowne.
King. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick?
Yet am I arm'd against the world can happen:
And haste is needfull in this desip rate cafe.
Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalfs
Goe leue men, and make prepare for Warre;
They are already, or quickly will be landed:
My felles in personal will straight follow you.
Exit Pembroke and Stafford.

But ere I goe, Haffings and Montague
Refoul my doubt: you twaine, of all the rest,
Are neere to Warwick, by bloud, and by allianse:
Tell me, if you loue Warwick, then me then;
If it be so, then both depart to him;
I rather with you foes, then hollow friends:
But if you minde to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly Vow,
That I may never have you in suspeckt.

Enter Warwick, and Oxford in England, with French Souldiers.

Warw. Trust me, my Lord, all hitherto goes well,
The common people by numbers swarme to vs.
Enter Clarence and Somerset.

But see where Somerset and Clarence comes:
Speake suddeynly, my Lords, are wee all friends?
Clar. Fear not that, my Lord.
Warw. Then gentle Clarence, welcome vnto Warwick,
And welcome Somerset: I hold it cowardize,
To rest mistruthfull, where a Noble Heart
Hath pawn'd an open Hand, in signe of Loue;
Else might I thinke, that Clarence, Edwards Brother,
Were but a fained friend to our proceedings:
But welcome sweet Clarence, my Daughter shall be thine.
And now, what refts? but in Nights Coverture,
Thy Brother being carelesely following you:
His Soulard lurking in the Towne about,
And but attended by a simple Guard,
Wee may furprize and take him at our pleasure,
Our Scouts have found the adventure very eafe:
That as a Fyft, and stout Dissembler,
With height and manhood flote to Riches Tents,
And brought from thence the Thracian fatal Steeds;
So wee, weil cour'd with the Nightes black Mantle,
At vnsawes may beate downe Edwards Guard,
And selue himselle: I say not, slaughter him,
For I intend but tolye to furprize him.
You that will follow me to this attempt,
Applaud the Name of Edward, with your Leader.
The yl cry, Henry,
Why then, let's on our way in silent fort,
For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George.

Enter three Watchmen to guard the Kings Tent.

1. Watch. Come on my Masters, each man take his stand,
The King by this, is let him downe to sleepe.
2. Watch. What, will he not to Bed?
1. Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a Solemn Vow,
Neuer to lye and take his natural Rest,
Till Warwick, or himselfe, be quite suppreft.
2. Watch. To Morrow then, beke shall be the day,
If Warwick be so neere as men report.
3. Watch. But say, I pray, what Noble man is that,
That with the King here resteth in his Tent?
1. Watch. 'Tis the Lord Haffings, the Kings chiefest friend.
3. Watch. O, is it so? but why commands the King,
That his chiefe followers lodge in Townes about him,
While he himselfe keepes in the cold field?
2. Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangereous.
3. Watch. I, but give me worship, and quietneffe,
I like it better then a dangerous honor.
If Warwick knew in what estate he standes,
'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.
1. Watch. Vnlese our Halberds did flut vp his palfage.
2. Watch. I wherefore else guard we his Royall Tent,
But to defend his Person from Night-foes?

Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset,
and French Souldiers, flent all.

Warw. This is his Tent, and see where stand his Guard:
Courage my Masters; Honor now, or neuer:
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.
1. Watch. Who goes there?
2. Watch. Stay, or thou diest.
Warwicke and the rest cry all, Warwick, Warwick,
and set open the Guard, who flye, crying, Arme, Arme,
Warwick and the rest following them.

The Drumme playing, and Trumpet sounding.

Enter Warwick, Somerset, and the rest, bringing the King out in his Gowne, sitting in a Chaire: Richard and Haffings flyes over the Stage.

Som. What are they that flye there?
Warw. Richard and Haffings: let them goe, here is the Duke.

K. Edw. The Duke?
Why Warwick, when we parted,
Thou call'd me King.
Warw. I, but the cafe is alter'd.
When you diigrac'd me in my Embaflade,
Then I degraced you from being King,
And come now to create you Duke of Yorke.
Also, how should you govern any Kingdome,
That know not how to vse Embaffadors,
Nor how to be contented with one Wife,
Nor how to vse your Brothers Brotherly,
Nor how to studye for the Peoples Welfare,
Nor how to throw your Felle from Enemies?

K: Edw. Yes,
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt. 167

K. Edw. Yea, Brother of Clarence, Art thou here too? Nay then I see, that Edward needs must downe. Yet Warwick, in despite of all mishance, Of thee thy selfe, and all thy Complices, Edward will always bear him selfe as King: Though Fortunes mallice ouerthrow my State, My minde excedes the compass of her Wheel. Warm. Then for his minde, be Edward Englands King, Takes off his Crowne.

But Henry now shall ware the English Crowne, And be true King indeede: thou but the shadow. My Lord of Somerset, at my request, See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey’d Unto my Brother Arch-Bishop of Yorke: When I have fought with Pembroke, and his fellows, Ille follow you, and tell what answer Lewis and the Lady Bona tend to him. Now for a while farewell good Duke of Yorke, They lead him out forlornly.

K. Ed. What Fates impofe, that men must needs abide; It boots not to refit both wind and tide, Execut. Of what now remains your Lords for to do, But march to London with our Soldiers.

War. I, that’s the first thing that we have to do, To free King Henry from imprisonment, And see him feated in the Regall Throne. exit.

Enter Riuers, and Lady Gray.

Riu. Madam, what makes you in this foddain change? Gray. Why Brother Riuers, are you yet to learn What late misfortune is befalne King Edward? Riu. What loffe of some pichet battall Against Warwick? Gray. No, but the loffe of his owne Royall perfon. Riu. Then is my Soueraine faine? Gray. I almoft faine, for he is taken prisoner, Either betrayed by falfhood of his Guard, Or by his Foe fuiprized at vntaure: And as I further haue to vnderfand, Is now committed to the Bishop of Yorke, Fell Warwickes Brother, and by that our Foe. Riu. Thafe Newes I muft confede are full of greefe, Yet gracious Madam, beare it as you may, Warwick may looke, that now hath wonne the day. Gray. Till then, faire hope muft hinder biles, decay: And I the rather waine me from difpare For looke of Edwards Off-springs in my wombe: This is that which makes me bridle paffion, And beare with Mildenfe my misfortunes crosse: I, I, for this I draw in many a tearre, And stop the rifting of blood-fucking fighes, Leafe with my fighes or tearres, I lafte or drowne King Edwards Fruite, true heyre to th’Englifh Crowne. Riu. But Madam, Where is Warwick then become? Gray. I am inform’d that he comes towards London, To fet the Crowne once more on Henrys head, Gueffe thou the reft, King Edwards Friends melt downe, But to prevent the Tyrants violence, (For truitf nor him that hath once broken Faith) He hence forthwith vnto the Sanctuary, To faue (at leaft) the heire of Edwards right: There shall I rest fecure from force and fraud: Come therefore let vs flye, while we may flye, If Warwick take vs, we are fure to dye, execut. Enter Richard, Lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley.

Rich. Now my Lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither, Into this cheefeft Thicket of the Parke. Thus fland the cafe: you know our King, my Brother, Is prifoner to the Bishop here, at whose hands He hath good vifique, and great liberty, And often but attended with weake guard, Come hunting this way to difport himselfe. I have advertis’d him by secret meanes, That if about this houre he make this way, Under the colour of his vifual game, He shall here finde his Friends with Horfe and Men, To fet him free from his Captivity.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman with him.

Huntsman. This way my Lord, For this way lies the Game.

Flourish. Enter King Henry the fext, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, yorke, Henry, Oxford, Mountague, and Lieutenant.

K. Hen. M. Lieutenant, now that God and Friends Have taken Edward from the Regall feate, And turn’d my captaine flate to libertie, My fear to hope, my forrowes vnto loyces, At our enlargement what are thy due Fees? Lieut. Subjects may challenge nothing of their Sou’rains But, if an humble prayer may preuail, I then crave pardon of your Maietie. K. Hen. For what, Lieutenant? For well vning me? Nay, be thou sure, Ile well require thy kindneffe. For that it made my imprisonment, a pleufe: I, fuch a pleufe, as incaged Birds Conceal when after many moody Thoughts, At laft, by Notes of Houfhold harmonic, They quite forget their loffe of Libertie.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt.

But Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
And chiefly therefore, I thank God, and thee,
He was the Author, thou the Instrument.
Therefore that I may conquer Fortunes flight,
By lying low, where Fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed Land
May not be punit with my thwarting starrs,
Warwick, although my Head still wear the Crowne,
I here renounce my Government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.
War. Your Grace hath still beene fam'd for vertuous,
And now may seeme as wife as vertuous,
By fying and avoiding Fortunes mallice,
For few men rightly temper with the Starres:
Yet in this one thing let me blame your Grace,
For chusing me, when Clarence is in place.
Clar. No Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,
To whom the Heau'ns in thy Natu'life,
Aduide's an Oliue Branch, and Lawrell Crowne,
As like to be blest in Peace and Warre :
And therefore I chuse thine, my free content.
War. And I chuse Clarence only for Protecor.
King.Warwick and Clarence, give me both your Hands:
Now Joyce your Hands, & with your Hands your Hearts,
That no difference hinder Government:
I make you both Protectors of this Land,
While I my selfe will lead a private Life,
And in deviation spend my latter days,
To finnes rebuke, and my Creators praye.
War. What answeres Clarence to his Souveraignes will?
Clar. That he conents, if Warwickly consent,
For on thy fortune I repose my selfe.
War. Why then, though loth, yet must I be content:
We'll yeake together, like a double shadow
To Henries Body, and supply his place;
I meane, in bearing weight of Government,
While he enjoyes the Honor, and his safe.
And Clarence, now then it is more then needful,
Forwith that Edward be pronounce'd a Traytor,
And all his Lands and Goods confiscate.
War. What else? and that Succession be determined.
War. In thein Clarence shall not want his part.
King. But with the first, of all your chiefe affaires,
Let me entreat (for I command no more)
That Margaret your Queene, and my Sonne Edward,
Be sent for, to returne from France with speed :
For till I see them here, by doubtfull fear,
My joy of libertie is half eclips'd.
Clar. It shall bee done, my Souveraigne, with all speede.
King. My Lord of Somerfet, what Youth is that,
Of whose my selfe, or tending care is?
Somer. My Liege, it is young Henry, Earl of Rich-

War. Come hither, Englands Hope:

Layes his Hand on his Head.

If secret Powers suggest but truth
To my dialing thoughts,
This prettie Lad will prowe our Countries bliss.
His Lookes are full of peacefull Malefice,
His Head by nature fram'd to weare a Crowne,
His Hand to wield a Sceptre, and himselfe
Likely in time to bliefe a Regall Throne :
Make much of him, my Lords; for this is hee
Must helpe you more, then you are hurt by mee.

Enter a Poete.

War. What news, my friend?
Poete. That Edward is escaped from your Brother,
And fled (as hee fairely fince) to Burgundie.
War. Vnfaucior newes: but how made he escape?
Poete. He was consuyc'd by Richard, Duke of Gloster,
And the Lord Haflings who attended him
In secret ambush, on the Forrest side,
And from the Bishops Huntmen refuc'd him:
For Hunting was his daly Exercife.
War. My Brother was too carelesse of his charge.
But let vs hence, my Souveraigne, to prouide
A false for any fore, that may betide.

Enter Somerset, Richmond, and Oxford.

Somon. My Lord, I like not of this flight of Edwards:
For doubletice, Burgundie will yeeld him helpe,
And we shall have more Warres before long.
As Henrie late prefiging Prophecie
Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Richmond:
So doth my heart mil-give me, in these Conflicts,
What may befall him, to his harms and ours,
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Forwith we'll send him hence to Brittanie,
Till formeys be past of Cluill Enmitie.
Oxsf. Is it for Edward re-pollifie the Crowne,
'Tis like that Richmond, with the rest, shall downe.
Somon. It shall be so; he shall to Brittanie,
Come therefore, let's about it speedily.

Edow. Now Brother Richard, Lord Haflings, and the rest,
Yet thus farre Fortune makest vs amends,
And fayes, that once more I shall enterchange
My wained fate, for Henries Regall Crowne.
Well haue we past, and now re-past the Seas,
And brought defined helpe from Burgundie.
What then remains, we being thus arriv'd
From Rauenpurre Hauen, before the Gates of Yorke,
But that we enter, as into our Dukedome?
Rich. The Gates made fall?
Brother, I like not this.
For many men that flummble at the Threshold,
Are well fore-told, that danger lurkes within.
Edow. Tuft man, abodements must not now affright vs:
By faire or foule means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair vs.
Haff. My Liege, Ie knocke once more, to summon them.

Enter on the Walls, the Mayor of Yorke, and his Brethren.

Mayor. My Lord,
We were fore-warned of your comming,
And that the Gates, for faile of our forces;
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.
Edow. But, Mayor Maior, if Henry be your King,
Yet Edward, at the leaft, is Duke of Yorke.
Mayor. True, my good Lord, I know you for no less.
Edow. Why, and I challenge nothing but my Dukedome,
As being well content with that alone.

Rich. But
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

Rich. But when the Fox hath once got in his Noze, He'll foone finde means to make the Body follow.

Haf. Why, Master Mayor, why stand you in a doubt?

Open the Gates, we are King Henry's friends.

Mayor. I, say you fo? the Gates shall then be opened.

He defends.

Rich. A wife flout Captaine, and foone perfwaded.

Haf. The good old man would faine that all were wel,
So 'twere not long of him: but being entred,
I doubt not 1, but we shall foone perfwade
Both him, and all his Brothers, vnto reafon.

Enter the Mayor, and two Aldermen.

Edw. So, Master Mayor: thefe Gates muft not be shut,
But in the Night, or in the time of Warre.

What, fear not man, but yeeld me vp the Keyes,
Taketh bi Keyes.

For Edward will defend the Towne, and thee,
And all those friends, that deene to follow mee.

March. Enter Montegomerie, with Drumme and Sedde.

Rich. Brother, this is Sir John Montegomerie,
Our truflie friend, vnleffe I be decea'd.

Edw. Welcome Sir John: but why come you in Armes?

Mount. To helpe King Edward in his time of florme,
As every loyall Subject ought to doe.

Edw. Thankes good Montegomerie:
But we now forget our Title to the Crowne,
And onely clayme our Dukedome,
Till God pleafe to fend the ref.

Mount. Then fare you well, for I will hence againe,
I came to fervue a King, and not a Duke:
Drummer strike vp, and let vs march away.

The Drumme begins to march.

Edw. Nay stay, Sir John; a whyle, and we'll debate
By what foneynes the Crowne may be recover'd.

Mount. What talke you of debating? in few words,
If you're not here proclaime your felfe our King,
Ile leaue you to your fortune, and be gone,
To keppe them back, that come to fuccour you.

Why shal we ftracte, if you pretend no Title?
Rich. Why Brother, wherefore fland you on nice points?

Edw. When wee grow stronger,
Then we'll make our Clayme:
Till then, be wise to conceale our meaning.

Haf. Away with scrupulous Wit, now Armes muft rule.

Rich. And fearlesse minds clayme foone vnto Crowns.
Brother, we will proclaime you out of hand,
The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

Edw. Then be it as you will: for 'tis my right,
And Henry but vfurpe the Diadem.

Mount. I, now my Soueraigne speakeh like himfelfe,
And now will I be Edwards Champion.

Haf. Sound Trumpet, Edward thal be here proclaimed:
Come, fellow Souldier, make thon proclamation.

Flourish. Sound.

Soul. Edward the Fourth, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c.

Mount. And whomoe're gainsayes King Edwards right,
By this I challenge him to hingle ftrike.

Then downe bi Gauntlets.

All. Long live Edward the Fourth.

Edw. Thankes brave Montgomery,
And thankes vnto you all:
If fortune ferue me, Ile requite this kindness.
Now for this Night, let's harbor here in Yorke:
And when the Morning Sunne shall rayfe his Carre
Aboue the Border of this Horizon,
We'll forward towards Warwick, and his Mate;
For well I wot, that Henry is no Souldier.
Ah froward Clarence, how euill it befometh thee,
To flatter Henry, and forfake thy Brother?
Yet as wee may, wee're meet both thee and Warwick.
Come on brave Soulerion: doubt not of the Day,
And that once gotten, doubt not of large Pay.

Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter the King, Warwick, Mountague, Clarence, Oxford, and Somerset.

War. What counfaile, Lords? Edward from Belgia,
With haffe Germanes, and blunt Hollanders,
Hath pafs'd in fafetie through the Narrow Seas,
And with his troupez doth march amaine to London,
And many goodlie people flock towards him.

King. Let's leafe men, and beat him backe againe.

Clare. A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which being suftter'd, Riuers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,
Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in Warre,
Thofe will I murther vp: and thou Sonne Clarence
Shalt firle vp in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent,
The Knights and Gentlemen, to come with thee.

Thou Brother Montague, in Buckingham,
Northampton, and in Leicetfhire, hault find
Men well enclin'd to heare what thou command'ft.
And thou, brave Oxford, wondroues well belou'd,
In Oxfordshire hault murther vp thy friends.

My Soueraigne, with the louing Citizens,
Lke to his hand, gyrt in with the Ocean,
Or modest Dyane, circled with her Nymphs,
Shall reft in London, till we come to him:
Faire Lords take leaue, and fland not to reply.

Farewell my Soueraigne.

Kings. Farewell my Helte, and my Troyes true hope.

Clare. In figne of truth, I kiffe your HighnefTe Hand.

King. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.

Mount. Comfort, my Lord, and fo I take my leaue.

Oxf. And thus I fale my truth, and bid adieu.

King. Sweet Oxford, and my louing Mountague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell. sweet Lords, let's meet at Counetry.

Exeunt.

King. Here at the Pallace will I reft a while.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinke you your Lordship?
Me thinke, the Power that Edward hath in field,
Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exe. The doubt it, that he will reduce the ref.

King. That's not my feare, my meed hath got me fame:
I have not flipt mine ears to their demands,
Nor pofted off their fuites with flow delayes,
My pitte hath beene balme to heare their wounds,
My myndfeffe hath aljoyd their fulwilling griefes,
My mercle dryd their water-flowing tears.
I have not beene defuous of their wealth,
Nor much oppreft them with great Subsidies,
Nor forward of reuenue, though they much err'd.

Then why should they love Edward more then me?

No Exeuter, thefe Grace's challenge Graze:
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth

And when the Lyon fawne upon the Lambe,
The Lambe will neuer cease to follow him.
Shout within, A Lancaster, A Lancaster.

Exit. Hearke, hearke, my Lord; what Shouts are thefe?
Enter Edward and his Souldiers.

Edw. Seize on the flamefac’d Henry, beare him hence,
And once againe proclaime vs King of England.
You are the Foure, that makes small Brookes to flow,
Now flops thy Spring, my Sea shall fwell them dry,
And swell fo much the higher, by their ebe,
Hence with him to the Tower, let him not speake.

Exit with King Henry.

And Lords, towards Countray bend we our course,
Where peremptorie Warwick now remains;
The Sunne shines hot, and if we vfe delay,
Cold bittong Winter marres our hop’d-for Hay.
Rich. Away betimes, before his forces lone,
And take the great-growne Traitor vnware:
Braue Warriors, марc’h amaine towards Countray.

Exeunt.

Enter Warwick, the Maior of Countray, two
Majfters, and others upon the Walls.

War. Where is the Post that came from valiant Oxford?
How farre hence is thy Lord, mine honest fellow?
Mess’r By this at Dunmore, marching hitherward.
War. How farre off is our Brother Montague?
Where is the Post that came from Montague?
Mess’r By this at Dartney, with a plentiful troope.
Enter Somerulce.
War. Say Somerulce, what fayes my louing Sunne?
And by thy gueffe, how nigh is Clarence now?
Someru. At Southam I did leaue him with his forces,
And doe expect him here fome two howres hence.
War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his Drumme.
Someru. It is not his, my Lord, here Southam lyes:
The Drum your Honor heares, marcheth from Warwick.
War. Who shoulde that be belike vnlook’d for friends.
Someru. They are at hand, and you shall knowe quickly.

March. Flearife. Enter Edward, Richard, and Souldiers.

Edw. Goe, Trumpet, to the Walls, and found a Parle.
Rich. See how the furly Warwick mazs the Wall.
War. Oh vnbid light, is sportfull Edward come?
Where leapt our Scout, or how are they fpeduc’d,
That we could heare no noyes of his repareye.
Edw. Now Warwick, wilt thou ope the Cite Gates,
Speake gentle words, and humbly bend thy Knee,
Call Edward King, and at his hands begge Mercy,
And he shall pardon thee thes Outrages.
War. Nay rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,
Confefe who fet thee vp, and pluckt thee downe,
Call Warwick Patron, and be penitent,
And thou shalt full remaine the Duke of York.
Rich. I thought at leaft he would have fald the King,
Or did he make the leaft again[t his will?
War. Is not a Duke,dom, Sir, a goodly gift?
Rich. I, by my faith, for a poore Earle to give,
Ile doe thee fervice for fo good a gift.
War. Twas I that gaue the Kingdome to thy Brother.
Edw. Why then’tis mine, if but by Warwick’s gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for fo great a weight:
And Weakling, Warwick takes his gift agaie,
And Henry is my King, Warwick his Subiect.

Edw. But Warwicks King is Edward Prifoner:
And gallant Warwick, doe but answer this,
What is the Body, when the Head is off?
Rich. Alas, that Warwick had no more fore-caff,
But whiles he thought to stale the fingle Ten.
The King was flyly finger’d from the Deck:
You left poot Henry at the Bishops Palace,
And trewe to one you’ll meet him in the Tower.
Edw. ’Tis enuio, yet you are Warwick’s fll.

Rich. Come Warwick,
Take the time, kneele downe, kneele downe:
Nay when? I flrike now, or elze the Iron cooles.
War. I had rather chof this Hand off at a blow,
And with the other, fling it at thy face,
Then beare fo low a fayle, to flrike to thee.
Edw. Sayle how thou canft,
Houfe Wincle and Tyde thy friend,
This Hand, full wound about thy coile-black hayre,
Shall, whiles thy Head is warme, and new cut off,
Write in the duft this Sentence with thy blood,
Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with Drumme and Colours.

War. Oh chearefull Colours, see where Oxford comes.
Rich. The Gates are open, let vs enter too.
Edw. So other foes may fet upon our backs.
Stand we in good array; for they no doubt
Williffe out againe, and bid vs battle;
If not, the Cite being but of small defence,
We’ll quickly rowze the Traitors in the fame.
War. Oh welcome Oxford, for we want thy helpe.

Enter Montague, with Drumme and Colours.

Mount. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster.
Rich. Thou and thy Brother both shall buy this Treafon.
Even with the dearft blood your bodies borre.
Edw. The harder match, the greater Victorie,
My minde prefageth happy gains, and Conquest.

Enter Somerulce, with Drumme and Colours.

Som. Somerulce, Somerulce, for Lancaster.
Rich. Two of thy Name, both Duke of Somerulce,
Haue fold their Lives into the House of York,
And thou shalt be the third, if this Sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with Drumme and Colours.

War. And loe, where George of Clarence sweepe along,
Of force enough to bid his Brother Battaine:
With whom, in vpright zeale to right, preuails
More then the nature of a Brothers Loue.
Come Clarence, come: thou wilt, if Warwick call,
Clor. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?
Looke here, I throw my infamie at thee:
I will not ruine my Fathers Houfe,
Who gaue his blood to lyme the Bones together,
And let vp Lancaster. Why, trouweth thou, Warwick,
That Clarence is fo hard, fo blunt, unnaturall,
To bend the fatal Infruments of Warre.
Against his Brother, and his lawfull King.
Perhaps thou wilt objecft my holy Oath:
To keep that Oath, were more impietie,
Then Iphakel, when he sacrific'd his Daughter.
I am so sorry for my Treafus made,
That to deferve well at my Brothers hands,
I here proclayme my felfe thy mortal foe:
With refolution, wherefo're I meet thee,
(As I will meet thee, if thou firft abroad.)
To plague thee, for thy foule mis-leading me.
And fo, proud-hearted Warwick, I defe thee,
And to my Brother turning my blushing Cheeks.
Pardon me Edward, I will make amends:
And Richard, do not fhrowne vpon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more vncovant.
Edward, now welcome more, and ten times more belou'd,
Then if thou never hadft defir'd our hate.
Rich. Welcome good Clarence, this is Brother-like.
Warw. Oh paffing Traytor, perjur'd and vnfaithful.
Edward. What Warwick?
Who thou, to meet the Towne, and fight?
Or fhall we beat the Stones about thine Eares?
Warw. Alas, I am not coo'd here for defence:
I will away towards Barnet prefently,
And bid thee Battale, Edward, if thou darft.
Edward. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way:
Lords to the field: Saint George, and Victor.
Edward. Warwick and his company followes.
Alarum, and Excucfions. Enter Edward bringing forth Warwick wounded.
Edward. So lyce thou there: dye thou, and dye our feares,
For Warwick was a Bugge that fear'd vs all.
Now Montague is fiift, I fecke for thee,
That Warwick's Bones may keep thine company.
Warw. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend, or foe,
And tell me who is Vicfor, York, or Warwick?
Why ask I that? my mangled body fwees,
My blood, my want of strength, my fickle heart fwees,
That I might yield my body to the Earth,
And by my fall, the conquett to my foe.
Thus yealds the Cedar to the Axes edge,
Whofe Armes gave defter to the Princes Eagle,
Vnder whole flame the rading Lyon fept,
Whofe top-branch ouer-pearl'd Jove spreading Tree,
And kept low Shrubs from Winters nowfull Winde.
These Eyes, that now are dim'd with Deaths black Veyle,
Hau beene as piercing as the Mid-day Sunne,
To fearch the fecret Trefions of the World:
The Wrinkles in my Browe, now fill'd with blood,
Were lik'd oft to Kingly Sepulchers:
For who lin'd King, but I could digge his Graue?
And who durft fmile, when Warwick bent his Brow?
Loe, now my Glory smear'd in dust and blood.
My Parkes, my Walkes, my Mannors that I had,
Even now forfake me; and of all my Lands,
Is nothing left me, but my bodies length.
Why, what is Pompe, Rule, Reigne, but Earth and Death?
And lyce we how we can, yet dye we mutt.

Enter Oxford and Somerset.
Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick, wert thou as we are,
We might recouer all our Loffe againe:
The Queene from France hath brought a puiffant power.
Even now we heard the newes: ah, cou'd it thou fay.
Warw. Why then I would not fay. Ah Montague,
If thou be there, fweet Brother, take my Hand,
And with thy Lippes keep in my Soule a while.
Thou lou'ft me not: for, Brother, if thou didft,
Thy teares would wash this cold conceale blood,
That gleues my Lippes, and will not lea me fpeak.
Come quickly Montague, or I am dea'd.
Som. Ah, Warwick, Montague hath breath'd his laft,
And to the latest grofe, cry'd out for Warwick:
And fayd, Commend me to my valiant Brother.
And more he would have faid, and more he fpoke,
Which founded like a Cannon in a Vault,
That mought not be diftinguifh'd: but at laft,
I well might heare, delivered with a groan,
Oh farewell Warwick.
Warw. Sweet reft his Soule:
Flye Lords, and faue your felues,
For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in Heaven.
Off. Away, away, to all the Queens great power.
Here they hearre away his Body.

Flourifb. Enter King Edward in triumph, with Richard, Clarence, and the refi.
King. Thus fure our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are grac'd with wreathes of Victoria:
But in the midft of this bright-Shining Day,
I fpy a black fucipious threatening Cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious Sunne,
Ere he attaine his cafefull Wetherne Bed:
I meanes, my Lords, thefe powers that the Queene
Hath ray'd in Gallia, haue arriued our Coast,
And, as we hearre, march on to fight with vs.
Clar. A little gale will foon eiperfe that Cloud,
And blow it to the Source from whence it came,
Thy very Beames will drye those Vapours vp,
For every Cloud engenders not a Storme.
Rich. The Queene is valued thirte thound strong,
And Somerset, with Oxford, flied to her:
If he have time to breathe, be well affurd
Her fation will be as strong as ours.
King. We are aduerfit'd by our losing frends,
That they doe hold their coures toward Tewksbury.
We haung now the beft at Barnet field,
Will thither fraught, for willingneffe rides way,
And as we march, our strength will be augmented:
In every Countrie we goe along, we will Strike vp the Drumme, cry courage, and away.

Qu. Great Lords, wise men ne're fit and waile their loffe,
But cheareouly feek to how to redrefs their harms.
What though the Maift be now blowne ouer-board,
The Cable broke, the holding-Anchore loft,
And halfe our Sayers swallow'd in the flood?
Yet lilies our Pilot fill. It's meet, that hee
Should leaue the Helme, and like a fearefull Lad,
With tearefull Eyes add Water to the Sea,
And glue more strength to that which hath too much,
While in his moone, the Ship flp'ets on the Rock,
Which Induftrie and Courage might have faid?
Ah what a shame, ah what a fault were this.
Say Warwick was our Anchore: what of that?

q 3

And
And Montague our Top-Mast what of him?
Our fraught'red friends, the Tackles: what of these?
Why is not Oxford here, another Anchor?
And Somerset, another goodly Main?
The friends of France our Showrods and Tacklings?
And though vnskillful, why not Ned and I,
For once allow'd the skilful Pilots Charge?
We will not from the Helme, to fit and weeps,
But keepe our Course (though the rough Windes say no)
From Shelles and Rocks, that threaten vs with Wrack.
As good to chide the Waues, as speake them faire.
And what is Edward, but a ruthlef Sea?
What Clarence, but a Quick-fand of Deceit?
And Richard, but a raged fatall Rocke
All thefe, the Enemies to our poore Barke.
Say you can swim, alas 'tis but a while:
Tread on the Sand, why there you quickly fanke,
Belrifice the Rock, the Tyde will wash you off,
Or else you famifie, that's a three-fold Death.
This speake I (Lords) to you Werryherd,
If cafe some one of you would flye from vs,
That there's no hop'd-for Mercy with the Brothe'n,
More then with ruthlefse Waues, with Sands and Rocks.
Why courage then, what cannot be auido'd,
'Twere childifh weakenesse to lament, or feare.
Prince. Me thinks a Woman of this valiant Spirit,
Should, if a Coward heard her speake these wordes,
Infuile his Breast with Magnanimity,
And make him, naked, foyle a man at Armes.
I speake not this, as doub'in any here:
For did I but suspect a fearfull man,
He should haue leave to goe away be'then,
Leaft in our need he might infect another,
And make him of like spirit to himselfe.
If any such be here, as God forbid,
Let him depart, before we neede his helpe.
Oxf. Women and Children of fo highe a courage,
And Warriors faint, why 'tware perpetuall flame.
Oh brave young Prince: thy famous Grandfather
Doth line againe in thee; long may't thou live,
To bear his Image, and renew his Glories.
Son. And he that will not fight for such a hope,
Goe home to Bed, and like the Owle by day,
If he arife, he mock'd and wonder'd at.
Qo. Thankes gentle Somerset, sweet Oxford thankes.
Prince. And take his thankes, that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Maffinger.

Maff. Prepare you Lords, for Edward is at hand,
Readie to fight: therefore be refolute.
Oxf. I thought no lefte: it is his Policie,
To hide thus falt, to finde vs vnproou'd.
SOM. But he's deceu'd, we are in readinesse.
Qo. This cheares my heart, to fee your forwardnesse.
Oxf. Here pitch our Battale, hence we will not budge.

Flourish, and march. Enter Edward, Richard, Clarence, and Soultiers.

Edw. Braue followers, yonder stands the thornie Wood,
Which by the Heauens affifiance, and your strength,
May the Root be hewne vp yet ere Night.
I need not add more fuel to your fire,
For well I wot, ye blaze, to burne them out:
Give fignall to the fight, and to it Lords,

Qu.Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen, what I should say,
My teares gainse-fay: for every word I speake,
Ye fe I drink the water of my eye.
Therefore no more but this: Henry your Souersigne
Is Prifoner to the Foe, his State vntow'd,
His Realme a slaughter-house, his Subiects flaine,
His Statutes candel'd, and his Treasure spent:
And yonder is the Wolves, that makes this toyple.
You fight in Justice then in Gods Name, Lords,
Be valiant, and give fignall to the fight.

Alarum, Retreat, Exeunt.

Edw. Now here a period of tumultuous Broyles.
Away with Oxford to Hames Caftle straight:
For Somerset, off with his guill'ne Head.
Goe beare them hence, I will not hear them speake.
Oxf. For my part, I lefs not trouble thee with words,
So'm. Nor I, but sloope with patience to my fortune.

Exeunt.

Qo. So part we sadly in this troublous World,
To meete with joy in sweete Jerusalem.

Edw. Is Proclamation made, That who finds Edward,
Shall haue a high Reward, and be his Life?
Rich. It is, and howe youthfull Edward comes.

Enter the Prince.

Edw. Bring forth the Gallant, let vs hear him speake.
What? can so young a Thorne begin to pricks?
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,
For bearing Armes, for flouring vp my Subiects,
And all the trouble thou haft turn'd me to?
Prince. Speake like a Subiect, proud ambitious York.
Suppose that I am now my Fathers Mouth,
Reignif thy Chayre, and where I fland, kneеле thou,
Whill'ft I propoole the false-fame words to thee,
Which (Traytor) thou wouldst haue me anow to.
Qo. Ah, that thy Father had bene fo refolv'd.
Rich. That you might flill have wore the Petticoat,
And ne're have rolne the Breech from Lancaifter.

Prince. Let a Ep'le fable in a Winters Night,
His Currifl Riddles forts not with this place.
Rich. By Hemen, Brat, ille plague ye for that word.
Qo. I, thou waft boone to be a plague to men.
Rich. For Gods fake, take away this Captive Scold.
Prince. Nay, take away this fcoolding Crooke-backe, rather.

Edw. Peace willfull Boy, or I will charge your tongue.
Clar. Vnturon'd Lad, thou art too malapert.
Prince. I know my dutie, you are all vn dutifull:
Lafculious Edward, and thou periur'd George,
And thou mis-flapen Dicty, I tell ye all,
I am your better, Traytors as ye are,
And thou usurp't my Father right and mine.
Edw. Take that, the likeoffe of this Rayler here.
Stabs him.

Rich. Sprawl'ft thou? take that, to end thy agone.
Rich. fhab's him.
Clar. And ther's for twittinge me with periurie.
Clar. fhab's him.

Qo. Oh, kill me too.
Rich. Marry, and shall.

Offers to kill her.
Edw. Hold, Richard, hold, for we have done too much.

Rich. Why
Rich. Why should thee live, to fill the World with words.
Edw. What? doth thee sowe? vse means for her recoverie.
Rich. Clarence excuse me to the King my Brother:
Ie hence to London on a serious matter,
Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some newes.
Cla. What? what?
Rich. Tower, the Tower. Exit.
Qu. Oh Ned, sweet Ned, speak to thy Mother Boy.
Canst thou not speake? O Traitsors, Murthers?
They that Rabbs Cafer, flied no blood at all:
Did not offend, nor were not worthy Blame,
If this foule deed were by, to equall it.
He was a Man; this (in respect) a Childre.
And Men, are euer their fury on a Childre.
What's worfe then Murthers, that I may name it?
No, no, my heart will lorde, and if I speake,
And I will speake, that fo my heart may burnt.
Butchers and Viliaines, bloody Caniballes,
How sweet a Plant have you vertuely croot:
You have no children (Butchers) if you had,
The thought of them would have stirr'd vp remorke,
But if you euer chance to have a Childre,
Looke in his youth to have him cut off.
As deathsmen you have riot this sweet young Prince.
King. Away with her, go bear her hence perfecce.
Qu. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me heere:
Here sheath thy Sword, Ie pardon thee my death:
What wilt thou now? Then Clarence do it thou.
Cla. By heauen, I will not do thee so much eafe.
Qu. Good Clarence do! sweet Clarence do thou do it.
Cla. Didst thou not heare me sweare I would not do it?
Qu. I, but thou wouldest to forswear thy selfe.
"I was Sin before, but now tis Charity.
What wilt y no? Where is that disdes butcher Richard?
Hard favor'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?
Thou art not heere; Mother is thy Almeft-dead:
Petitioners for Blood, thou ne're put't backe.
Ed. Away I say, I chuse ye bear heere hence.
Qu. So come to you, and yours, as to this Prince.
Exit Rorene.
Ed. Where's Richard gone.
Cla. To London all in poft, and as I guesse,
To make a bloody Supper in the Tower.
Ed. He's fodaine if a thing comes in his head.
Now march we hence, difcharge the common fort
With Pay and Thankes, and let's away to London,
And fee our gentle Rorene how well he fares,
By this (I hope) she hath a Sonne for me. Exit.

Enter Henry the first, and Richard,with the Lieutenant on the Wallis.

Rich. Good day, my Lord, what at your Booke so hard?
Hen. I my good Lord: my Lord I shoule lay rather,
Tis faire to flatter, Good was little better:
'Good Olofer, and good Deuil,' were alike.
And both propositous: therefore, not Good Lord.
Rich. Sirra, leave vs to our felues, we must conforme.
Hen. So flies the wreakleshe shepher'd from y Wolfe:
So first the harmlesse Sheepe doth yield his Fleece,
And next his Throats, vnto the Butchers Kniffe.
What Scene of death hath Robert now to Acte?
Rich. Sufficion always haunts the guilty minde,
The Theefe doth feare each buth an Officer,
Hen. The Bird that hath bin limed in a buft,
With trembling wings mildsoutchey every buft;
And I the haplesse Male to one sweet Bird,
Hauie now the fatal Obiect in my eyes,
Where my poor yong was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.
Rich. Why what a peenith Fools was that of Greet,
That taught his Sonne the office of a Fowle,
And yet for all his wings, the Foolc was drown'd.
Hen. I Dedalus, my poore Boy knowes,
Thy Father Minos, that doni'de our coure.
The Sunne that bear'd the wings of my sweet Boy.
Thy Brother Edward, and thy Selfes, the Sea
Whose enious Guife did swallow vp his life:
Ah, kill me with thy Weapon, not with words,
My brest can better brooke thy Daggers point,
Then can my cares that Fragile life.
But wherefore doft thou come? It's for my Life?
Rich. Think'it thou I am an Executioner?
Hen. A Perforcutor I am sure thou art,
If murthering Innocens be Executing,
Why then thou art an Executioner.

Rich. Thy Son I know'd for his gufsumption.
Hen. Hadst thou bin kill'd, when first y didst proume,
Thou hadst not liu'd to kill a Sonne of mine:
And thus I profeffe, that many a thousand,
Which now misfratt no parcell of my feare,
And many an old mans figure, and many a Widdowe,
And many an Orphans water-bending-eye,
Men for their Sonnes, Wives for their Husbands,
Orphans, for their Parents timesless death,
Shall rie the houre that euer thou was't borne.
The Owle shriek'd at thry birth, an euill signe,
The Night-Crow cry'ye, aboding luckclese time,
Dogs howl'd, and hideous Tempst fhook down Trees:
The Rauen rook'd her on the Chimnies top,
And chatter'ing Pies in dimmall Difcordes fong:
Thy Mother felt more then a Mothers paine,
And yet brought forth leffe then a Mothers hopes,
To wit, an Indiggeted and deformed lump,
Not like the fruit of fuch a goodly Tree.
Teeth had.thou in thy head, when thou was't borne,
To fignifie, thou cam't to bite the world:
And if the reft be tru, which I have heard,
Thou cam't—
Rich. Ie hear no more.

Dye Prophet in thy speach,
Stbab the him.
For this (among the reft) was I ordain'd.
Hen. I, and for much more slaughter after this,
O God forgive my finnes, and pardon thee.
Dye. Rich. What will the aspiring blood of Lancaster
Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.
See how my fword weepes for the poore Kings death.
O may fuch purple teares be alway shed
From thofe that with the downfall of our houfe.
If any sparkes of Life be yet remaining,
Downe, downe to hell, and fay I fent thee thither.
Sals him again.

I that have neyther pitty, love, nor feare,
Indeed 'tis true that Henry told me of:
For I have ofteen heard my Mother fay,
I came into the world with my Legges forward.
Had I not reafe (think ye) to make haft,
And feake their Ruines, that furpr'd our Right?
The Midwife wonder'd, and the Women crie'd
O Irius bleffe vs, he is borne with teeth,
And
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth

And so I was, which plainly signified,
That I should snare, and bite, and play the dogges:
Then since the Heauens haue stopp'd my Body so,
Let Hell make crook'd my Minde to answer it.
I have no Brother, I am like no Brother:
And this word [Love] which Gray-beards call Divine,
Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me: I am my selfe alone.

Clarence beware, thou keep'st me from the Light,
But I will fort a pitchy day for thee:
For I will buzz abroad such Prophecies,
That Edward shall be fearfull of his life,
And then to purge his fear, Ie be thy death.

King Henry, and the Prince his Son are gone,
Clarence thy turne is next, and then the rest,
Counting my selfe but bad, till I be best.
He throw thy body in another roome,
And Triumph Henry, in thy day of Doome.

Flourish. Enter King, Queen, Clarence, Richard, Hastings, Nurse, and Attendants.

King. Once more we ft in Englands Royall Throne,
Re-purchac'd with the Blood of Enemies:
What valorous Foe-men, like to Autumnnes Come,
Hauke we mow'd downe in tops of all their pride?
Three Dukes of Somerfield, threefold Renowne,
For hardy and undoubted Champions:
Two Cliffords, as the Father and the Sonne,
And two Northumberlands: two braue men,
Ne're fpar'd their Couriers at the Trumpets found.
With them, the two braue Beares, Warwick & Montague,
That in their Chains fetter'd the Kingly Lyon,
And made the Forrest tremble when they roar'd.

Thus haue we swept Suspiion from our Seate,
And made our Footboole of Security.
Come hither Biffe, and let me kisse my Boy:
Yong Ned, for thee, thine Vnuckles, and my selfe,
Hauie in our Armors watcht the Winters night,
Went all afoote in Summers scalding heate,
That thou might't repoffe the Crowne in peace,
And of our Labours thou shalt reape the gaine.

Rich. Ile blis his Hanef, if your head were laid,
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd fo thicke, to heave,
And heave it fmall some weight, or breake my backe,
Worke thou the way, and that shalt execute.

King. Clarence and Gloffer, loue my losely Queene,
And kis your Princely Nephew Brothers both.
Cla. The duty that I owe unto your Maiesty,
I Seale upon the lips of this sweet Babe.

Cla. Thanke Noble Clarence, worthy brother thanks.
Rich. And that I loue the tree fr6 whence y sprang't:
Witness the louing kiffe I glue the Fruite,
To lay the truth, fo Judas kift his matter,
And cried all hale, when at he meant all harme.

King. Now am I feated as my soule delights,
Hauing my Countries peace, and Brothers loues.
Cla. What will your Grace have done with Margaret,
Reynard her Father, to the King of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.

King. Away with her, and waft her hence to France:
And now what refts, but that we spend the time
With flately Triumphs, mirthfull Comicke fheves,
Such as beftis the pleasure of the Court.
Sound Drums and, Trumpets, farewell fowre annoy,
For heere I hope begins our lafiting joy.

FINIS.
The Tragedy of Richard the Third: with the Landing of Earle Richmond, and the Battell at Bosworth Field.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Richard Duke of Gloucester.

Ow is the Winter of our Discontent,
Made glorious Summer by this Son of Yorkes: And all the clouds that lower'd upon our house
In the deepes boosome of the Ocean buried. Now are our brows bound with Vicious Wreathes, Our bruised armes hung vp for Monuments; Our serne Alarums chang'd to merry Meetings; Our dreadfull Marches, to delightfull Measures. Grim-visag'd Warre, hath smooth'd his wrinkled Front: And now, in stead of mounting Barbed Steeds, To fright the Soules of fearfull Adversaries, He capers nimblly in a Ladies Chamber, To the lafciuous pleasong of a Lute. But I, that am not flap'd for sportive tricke, Nor made to court an amorous Looking-glafe: I, that am Rudely lamp't, and want loose Mainely, To frout before a wonton ambling Nymph: I, that am curtill'd of this faire Proportion, Cheared of Feature by dillambling Nature, Deform'd, vn-fit'll'd, bent before my time Into this breathing World,earfe halfe made vp, And that so lamely and un-fashionalbe, That dogges barke at me, as I halte by them. Why I (in this weake piping time of Peace) Have no delight to sifle away the time, Vnleafe tofee my Shadow in the Sunne, And decent on mine owne Deformity. And therefore, since I cannot prove a Luer, To entertaine these faire well spoken dayes, I am determined to prove a Villaine, And hate the idle pleasures of these dayes. Plots hue I laide, Indiglous dangerous, By drunken Prophefies, Libels, and Dreames, To fet my Brother Clarence and the King In deadly hate, the one againft the other: And if King Edward be as true and fuff, As I am Subtle, Falfe, and Treacherous, This day should Clarence closely be mew'd vp: About a Prophefie, which fayes that G, Of Edwards heyres the murtherer shall be, Dye thoughts downe to my foule, here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, and Brother guard'd.

Brother, good day: What means this armed guard That waites upon your Grace?

Cla. His Maietey tendering his perfons safety,
Hath appointed this Conduelt, to convey me to th'Tower
Rich. Vpon what caufe?

Cla. Because my name is George.

Rich. Alacke my Lord, that fault is none of yours: He should for that commit your Godfathers, O belike, his Maiete hath some intent, That you should be new Chriftned in the Tower, But what's the matter Clarence, may I know?

Cla. Yea Richard, when I know: but I protest As yet I do not: But as I can learne, He heatkens after Prophefies and Dreames, And from the Cross-rowe plackes the letter G: And fayes, a Wizard told him, that by G, His liffe diſhinerled should be,

And for my name of George begins with G, It follows in his thought, that I am he. Thefe (as I learne) and such like toys as thefts, Hath moou'd his Highneffe to commit me now.

Rich. Why this it is, when men are rul'd by Women:

'Tis not the King that lends you to the Tower,
My Lady Grey his Wife, Clarence 'tis fure. That tempes him to this harsh Extremity. Was it not fhee, and that good man of Worship,

Anthony Woodville her Brother there,
That made him fend Lord Haftings to the Tower? From whence this pretent day he is delivered? We are not safe Clarence, we are not safe.

Cla. By heaven, I thinke there is no man secure But the Queenes Kindred, and night-walking Heralds, That trudge betwixt the King, and Miftres Shore. Heard you not what an humble Suppliant

Lord Haftings was, for her delivery?

Rich. Humbly complaining to her Deltie, Got my Lord Chamberlaine his libertie. Ile tell you what, I thinke it is our way, If we will keep in fauour with the King, To be her men, and wear her Livery. The leaful ore-worne Widdow, and her fcel, Since that our Brother dub'd them Gentlemen, Are mighty Godfips in our Monarchy.

Bra. I beseech your Grace both to pardon me, His Maiete hath Straightly given in charge, That no man shall have private Conference (Of what degree soever) with your Brother.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Rich. Even so, and please your Worship Brakenbury,
You may partake of any thing we say:
We speak no Treason man; We say the King
Is wise and vertuous, and his Noble Queen
Well strooke in years, faire, and not jeallous.
We say, that Shoes Wife hath a pretty Foot,
A cherry Lip, a bonny Eye, a pasing pleasing tongue:
And that the Queens Kindred are made gentle Folkes.
How say you first? can you deny all this?
Bra. With this (my Lord) my selfe have nought to do.
Rich. Naught to do with Mittris Shoe?
I tell thee Fellow, he that doth naught with her
(Excepting one) were best to do it secretly alone.
Bra. What one, my Lord?
Rich. Her Husband Kraus, would’st thou betray me?
Bra. I do befeech your Grace
To pardon me, and withall forbear
Your Conference with the Noble Duke.
Cia. We know thy charge Brakenbury, and will obey.
Rich. We are the Queens aibechs, and must obey.
Brother farewell, I will vnto the King,
And whatsoe’re you will impoy me in,
Were it to call King Edwards Widdow,Sister,
I will performe it to infranchize you,
Meane time, this deepie dfigrace in Brotherhood,
Touches me deeper then you can imagine.
Cia. I know it pleaseth neither of vs well.
Rich. Well, your imprisonment shall not long,
I will deliver you, or else lye for you:
Meane time, have patience.
Cia. I must perfore: Farewell.
Rich. Go treade the path that thou shalt ne’re return:
Simple plaine Clarence, I do loute thee fo,
That I will shortly send thy Soule to Heauen,
If Heauen will take the present at our hands.
But who comes here? the new delivered Haflings?

Enter Lord Haflings.

Haf. Good time of day vnfo my gracious Lord.
Rich. As much vnto my good Lord Charneller.
Well are you welcome to this open Ayre,
How hath your Lordship brooke’d imprisonment?
Haf. With patience (Noble Lord) as prisoners must:
But I shall luye (my Lord) to give them thankes
That were the cause of my imprisonment.
Rich. No doubt, no doubt, and so shall Clarence too,
For they that were your Enemies, are his,
And have preuail’d as much on him, as you.
Haf. More pitty, that the Eagles shoulde be mew’d,
Whiles Kites and Buzzards play at liberty.
Rich. What new abroad?
Haf. No news fo bad abroad, as this at home:
The King is sickly, weake, and melancholish,
And his Phyfition fear him mightily.
Rich. Now by S.John, that Newes is bad indeed.
O he hath kept an euyll Diet long,
And ouer-much confum’d his Royall Person:
'Tis very greenous to be thought upon.
Where is he, in his bed?
Haf. He is.
Rich. Go you before, and I will follow you.

He cannot live I hope, and must not dye,
Till George be pack’d with poft-horfe vp to Heauen.

Ile in to vrg his hatred more to Clarence,
With Lyes well felt’d with weighty Argumentes,
And if I fale not in my deepe intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live:
Which done, God take King Edward to his mercie,
And leave the world for me to buflie in.
For then, Ie marry Warwickes yongeft daughter.
What though I kill’d her Husband, and her Father,
The readieft way to make the Wench amends,
Is to become her Husband, and her Father:
The which will I, not all fo much for love,
As for another secret clofe intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach vnto.
But yet I run before my horfe to Market:
Clarence fill breathes, Edward fill lies andaignes,
When they are gone, then must I count my gaines. Exit

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Cours of Henrie the fiet with Hallerds to guard it,
Lady Anne being the Mournar.

Anne. Set downe, set downe your honourable load,
If Honor may be throwed in a Herfe;
Whilft I a while obsequiously lament
Th’untimely fall of Vertuous Lancaster.
Poore key-cold Figure of a holy King,
Pale Athes of the House of Lancater;
Thou bloodlesse Remnant of that Royall Blood,
Be it lawfull that I innocate thy Ghoff,
To heare the Lamentations of poore Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughtred Sonne,
Stab’d by the falsefame hand that made these wounds.
Lose, in these windows that let forth thy life,
I powre the helpless Balme of my poore eyes.
O curfed be the hand that made these holes:
Curfed the Heart, that had the heart to do it: Curfed the Blood, that let this blood from hence:
More dirfull hap betide that hated Wretch
That makes vs wretched by the death of thee,
Then I can with vs to Wolves, to Spiders,Toades,
Or any creeping venom’d thing that liues.
If euer he haue Childes, Abortive be he,
Prodigious, and vntriumph’d brought to light,
Whole vgy and vanstural Aspeet
May frite the hopeful Mother at the view,
And that be Heyre to his vnhapniffe.
If euer he haue Wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him,
Then I am made by my young Lord, and thee.
Come now towards Chertfey with your holy Lode,
Taken from Paules, to be interred there.
And till as you are weary of this weight,
Reft you, whiles I lament King Henries Coarfe.

Enter Richard Duke of Glofier.

Rich. Stay you that beare the Coarfe, & set it down.
As. What blackes Magitian coniures vp this Fiend,
To stop denoted charitable deeds?
Rich. Villaines set downe the Coarfe, or by S. Paul,
Ile make a Coarfe of him that disobeys.

Gen.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Gen. My Lord stand backs, and let the Coffin passe.

Rick. Vansmann'd Dogge, Stand'st thou when I command'd:

Advanche thy Halbert higher then my breit,

Or by S. Paul Ile strike thee to my Foote,

And I'purne vpon thee Begger for thy boldnesse.

Anon. What do you tremble? are you all afraid?

Alas, I blame you not, for you are Mortall,

And Mortall eyes cannot endure the Diuell.

Anunt thou dreadfulfull minifer of Hell;

Thou hadst but power over his Mortall body,

His Soule thou canst not haue: Therefore be gone.

Rick. Sweet Saint, for Charity, be not so curst.

An. Foule Diuell,

For Gods fake hence, and trouble vs not,

For thou hast made the happy earth thy Hell:

Fill'd it with cursing cries, and deep exclaims:

If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,

Behold this pattern of thy Butcheries.

O Gentlemen, see, see dead Henry wounds,

Open their congeald mouthes, and bleed arie.

Blith, blith, thou lumpe of foule Deformite:

For thy prefence that exhales this blood

From cold and empty Veines where no blood dwells.

Thy Deeds inhumane and vnnaturall,

Provokes this Deluge most vnnaturall.

O God! which this Blood mad'st, revenge his death:

O Earth! which this Blood drink'st, revenge his death.

Either Heau'n with Lightning strike the murtherer dead:

Or Earth gape open wide, and eate him quicke.

As thou dost swallow vp this good Kings blood,

Which his Hell-gourn'd armes hath butchered.

Rick. Lady, you know no Rules of Charity,

Which renders good for bad, Bleffings for Curfes.

An. Villaines, thou know'rt no law of God nor Man,

No Beast do flourish, but knowes some touch of pity.

Rick. But I know none, and therefore am no Beast.

An. O wonderfull, when diuels tell the truth!

Rick. More wonderfull, when Angels are so angry:

Vouchsafe (divine perfection of a Woman)

Of these suppo'd Crimes, to give me leue

By circumstance, but to acquire my felie.

An. Vouchsafe (defauld' infection of man)

Of these knowne rules, but to give me leue

By circumstance, to curfe thy curfed Selfe.

Rick. Failer then tongue can name thee, let me have

Some patient leyfure to excuse my felie.

An. Fouler then heart can think thee,

Thou canst not make no excuse currant,

But to hang thy felie.

Rick. By such difaire, I should accuse my felie.

An. And by disparing that thou stand excused,

For doing worthy Vengeance on thy felie,

That didst vnworthy slaughter vpon others.

Rick. Say that I flew them not.

An. Then say they were not slaine:

But dead they are, and diuellish flawe by thee.

Rick. I did not kill your Husband.

An. Why then he is alive.

Rick. Nay, he is dead, and slaine by Edwards hands.

An. In thy foule throat thou ly'st,

Queene Margaret saw

Thy mur'drous Faulchion smocking in his blood:

The which, thou once didst bend against her breft,

But that thy Brothers beate afide the point.

Rick. I was prowseck by her Iand'rous tongue,
Sham'd their Aspects with store of childish drops: These eyes, which never shed remorcellfull teare, No, when my Father Yorke, and Edward wept, To heare the pittious moane that Rutland made When black-fac'd Clifford broke his sword at him. Nor when thy wrakke Father like a Child, Told the sad storie of my Fathers death, And twenty times, made pause to sob and weep That all the flanders by had wet their cheeks Like Trees bedeck'd with raine. In that sad time, My manly eyes did foorne an humble tearre: And what these forrowes could not thence exhale, Thy Beauty hath, and made them blinde with weeping. I neuer feed to Friend, nor Enemy: My Tongue could never leare sweete smoothing word. But now thy Beauty is propound my Fee, My proud heart fues, and promp't my tongue to speake. She looks forsonfully at him. Teach not thy lip such Scorne; for it was made For kissting Lady, not for such contempt, If thy reuengefull heart cannot forgive, Look here I lend thee this sparce-pointed Sword, Which if thou please to hide in this true brest, And let the Soule forth that adore thee, I lay it naked to the deadly stroke, And humbly begge the death vpon my knee. Nay do not paue: For I did kill King Henrie, But 'twas thy Beauty that prouoked me. Nay now dispatch: 'Twas I that thabb'd yong Edward, But 'twas thy Heavenly face that fet me on. She falls the Sword. Take vp the Sword againe, or take vp me. Arise Diffemblers, though I with thy death, I will not be thy Executioner. Rich. Then bid me kill my felfe, and I will do it. Arise. I have already. Rich. That was in thy rage: Speake it againe, and even with the word, This hand, which for thy love, did kill thy Loue, Shall for thy love, kill a faire truer Loue, To both their deaths shall thou be accesseary. Arise. I would I knew thy heart. Rich. 'Tis figure'd in my tongue. Arise. I feare me, both are falle. Rich. Then never Man was true. Arise. Well, well, put vp your Sword. Rich. Say then my Peace be made. Arise. That shalt thou know hereafter. Rich. But shall I live in hope. Arise. All men I hope live fo. Vouchsafe to weare this Ring. Rich. Looke how my Ring incompaßeth thy Finger, Even fo thy Breit incloseth my poore heart: Wear both of them, for both of them are thine: And if thy poore deuoted Seruant may But beg one favoure at thy gracieus hand, Thou dost conforme his happinesse for ever. Arise. What is it? Rich. That it may pleaseth you leve these fide defignes, To him that hath mostcause to be a Mournar, And prefently repayre to Crobbie Houfe: Where (after I have solemnly inter'd At Chertsey Monalfy this Noble King, And set his Graue with my Repentant Teares) I will with all expedient duty fee you,
Enter Buckingham and Derby.

Gray. Here comes the Lord of Buckingham & Derby.

Buck. Good time of day unto your Royal Grace.

Der. God make your Maleity joyful, as you have bin.

Qu. The Countefle Richmond, good my Lof Derby.

To your good prayer, will fearfully say, Amen.

Yet Derby, notwithstanding, thee's your wife,
And loues not me, be you good Lord affir'd,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Der. I do believe you, either not beleue
The enuious flanders of her false Accusers:
Or if she be accus'd on true report,
Bears with her weakknee, which I thinke proceeds
From wayward fickneffe, and no grounded malice.

Qu. Saw you the King to day my Lord of Derby.

Der. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I,
Are come from visiting his Maleity.

Qua. What likelyhood of his amendment Lords.

Buck. Madam good hope, his Grace speaks cheerfully.

Qu. God grant him health, did you confer with him?

Buck. I Madam, he defires to make attonement
Betweene the Duke of Glosuter, and your Brothers,
And betweene them, and my Lord Chamberlaine,
And sent to warne them to his Royall preence.

Qu. Would all were well, but that will never be,
I feare our happinesse is at the height.

Enter Richard.

Rich. They do me wrong, and I will not induce it,
Who is it that complains unto the King,
That I (forsooth) am sterne, and loue them not?
By holy Paul, they lose his Grace but lightly,
That fill his ears with such diffentous Rumors.
Because I cannot flatter, and looke faire,
Smile in mens faces, smooth, deceiue, and coge,
Ducke with French nod, and Apifi curtfee,
I must be held a rancorous Enemy.
Cannot a plaine man live, and thinke no harme,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd,
With filken, fye, infamating Lackes?

Gray. To who in all this preence speaks your Grace?

Rich. To thee, that hast nor Honesty, nor Grace:
When haue I inured thee? When done thee wrong?
Or thee? or thee? or any of your Faction?
A plague vpon you all. His Royall Grace
(Whom God preferre better then you would with)
Cannot be quiet stare a breathing while,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Qu. Brother of Glosuter, you mistake the matter:
The King on his owne Royall disposition,
(And not proue'd by any Sutor else)
Ayiming (belike) at your interiour hatred,

That in your outward action shewes is selle
Against my Children, Brothers, and my Selfe,
Makes him to fend, that he may learne the ground.

Rich. I cannot tell, the world is growne so bad,
That Wrens make prey, where Eagles dare not pearch.
Since euerie Lacke became a Gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Lacke.

Qu. Come, come, we know your meaning Brother
You enu'e my aduancement, and my friends:
(Glosuter)
God grant we never may have neede of you.
Rich. Meane time, God grants that I have need of you.
Our Brother is imprision'd by your meane,
My selle disgrac'd, and the Nobilitie
Held in contempt, while great Promotions
Are daily gien to ennable those
That Earle some days since were worth a Noble.

Qu. By him that rais'd me to this carefull height,
From that contented hap which I inloy'd,
I never did incence his Maleifie
Against the Duke of Clarence, but haue bin
An earene advocate to plead for him,
My Lord you do me shameful injustice,
Falsely to draw me in thefe vile suspechts.

Rich! You may deny that you were not the meane
Of my Lord Haffings late imprisionment.

Riu. She may my Lord, for--

Rich. She may Lord Rivers, why who knowes not so?
She may do more frin then denying that:
She may helpe you to many faire preferments,
And then deny her ayling hand therein,
And lay those Honors on your high defert.
What may the not, the may, I marrie may the.

Riu. What marrie may the?

Rich. What marrie may she? Marrie with a King,
A Batcheller, and a handlime stripling too,
I wis your Grandam had a worfer match.

Qu. My Lord of Glosuter, I have too long borne
Your blunt vpbuildings, and your bitter Scoffes:
By haue, I will acquit his Maleifie
Of those groffe taunts that of haue endur'd,
I had rather be a Courtie feruant maide
Then a great Queene, with this condition,
To be so baited, scorn'd, and flamed at,
Small joy haue I in being Englands Queene.

Enter old Queene Margaret.

Mar. And leafe he that small, God I befeech him,
Thy honor, state, and state, is due to me.

Rich. What threat you me with telling of the King?
I will awaunc't in preence of the King:
I dare aduenture to be fent to th'Towre.
'Tis time to speake,
My paines are quite forgot.

Margaret. Out Diuell,
I do remember them too well:
Thou kill'dt my Husband Horfes in the Tower,
And Edward my poore Son, at Tewkesburie.

Rich. Ere you were Queene,
I, or your Husband King:
I was a packe-horse in his great afferiares:
A weeder out of his proud Adveneries,
A liberall rewarder of his Friends,
To royalis his blood, I spent mine owne.

Margaret. I and much better blood
Then his, or thine.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Rich. In all which time, you and your Husband Grey Were fictions, for the House of Lancaster;
And Rivers, to were you: Was not your Husband,
In Margaret's Battle, at Saint Alkmene?
Let me put in your mindes, if you forget
What you have beene ere this, and what you are:
Withall, what I have beene, and what I am.
Q. M. A marthrous Villaine, and so still thou art, Ric. Poore Clarence did forfake his Father Warwick,
I, and forswore himselfe (which I efeu pardon.)
Q. M. Which God reuenge.
Ric. To fight on Edwards partie, for the Crowne,
And for his meede, poore Lord, he is mewed vp:
I would to God my heart were Flint, like Edwards,
Or Edwards soft and pittifull, like mine;
I am too childifh foolish for this World.
Q. M. High thee to Hell for shame, & lease this World
Thou Cademoner, there thy Kingdome is.
Ric. My Lord of Oloffor: in those bure days,
Which were my wayes, to do vs Enemies,
We follow'd then our Lord, our Soueraigne King,
So should we you, if you should be our King.
Rich. If I should be? I had rather be a Pedler:
Farre be it from my heart, the thought thereof.
Q. M. As little joy (my Lord) as you supposse
You should enjoy, were you this Countries King,
As little joy you may supposse in me,
That I enjoy, being the Queene thereof.
Q. M. A little joy enjoyes the Queene thereof,
For I am thee, and altogether loyellfe:
I can no longer hold me patient.
Hear me, you wrangling Pyrates, that fall out,
In sharring that which you have pill'd from me:
Which off you trembles not, that looks on me?
If not, that I am Queene, you bow like Subjects;
Yet that by you depor'd, you quake like Rebels.
A gentle Villaine, doe not turne away.
(fight) Rich. Foulre wrinkleth Witch, what make'th thou in my
Q. M. But repetition of what thou haft marr'd,
That will I make, before I let thee goe.
Ric. Wert thou not banished, on paine of death?
Q. M. I was; but I doe find more paine in banishment,
Then death can yeild me here, by my abode.
A Husband and a Souene thou ow'tto me,
And thou a Kingdome; all of you, allegiance:
This Sorrow that I have, by right is yours,
And all the Pleaunts, that thou canst take mine.
Rich. The Curfe my Noble Father layd on thee,
When thou diest Crown his Warlike Brows with Paper,
And with thy fornes drewt Riviers from his eyes,
And then to dry them, gau't the Duke a Cloath,
Slew'd in the battlefle blood of prettie Rutland:
He Curfeles then, from bittellere of Soule,
Denouc'd against thee, are all faine vpone thee:
And God, not we, hath plag'd thy bloody deed.
Q. M. So iust is God, to right the innocent.
Hoff. O, twas the foullc deed to flay that Babe,
And the most merell, that ere was heard of.
Ric. Tyrans themselues wept when it was reported.
Dorf. No man but profecious reuenge for it.
Back. Northumberland, then prefent, wept to fee it.
Q. M. What? were you flattering all before I came,
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turne you all your hatred now on me?
Did Yorkes dread Curfe preaule so much with Heauen,
That Henries death, my louely Edwards death,
Their Kingdomes loffe, my wofull Banishment,
Should all but anfwer for that penuell Bruet?
Can Curses pierce the Clouds, and enter Heauen?
Why then give way dull Clouds to my quick Curses.
Though not by Warre, by Surfet dye your King,
As ours by Murther, to make him a King.
Edward thy Sonne, that now in Prince of Wales,
For Edward our Sonne, that was Prince of Wales,
Dye in his youth, by like untimely violence.
Thy felle a Queene, for me that was a Queene,
Out-lie thy glory, like my wretched felle:
Long may't thou live, to waye thy Children death,
And fee another, as I fee thee now,
Deck'd in thy Righteous, as thou art tall'd in mine.
Long dye thy happy days, before thy death,
And after many length'ned hours of griefe,
Dye neyther Mother, Wife, nor Englands Queene.
Rivers and Dorset, you were flanders by,
And fo waft thou, Lord Hastings, when my Sonne
Was fau'd in the Clouds, by God, I prays him,
That none of you may live his natural age,
But by some vanlook'd accident cut off.
Rich. Have done thy Charmes, ye bafeful wither'd Hagge.
Q. M. And leave out thee! thy Doge for thy haft hear me.
If Heauen have any gracious plague in store,
Exceeding thoe that I can with vs, and thee,
O let them keepe it, till thy finnes be repes,
And then hurle downe their indignation
On thee, the troubler of the poore Worlds peace.
The Worme of Conscience still begnaws thy Soule,
Thy Friends lufped for Trayers while thou liv'st,
And take deeps Trayers for thy dearest Friends?
No sleepe clofe vp that deadly Eye of thine,
Vnleefe it be while some tormenting Drame
Affrights thee, with a Hell of ougly Deuils.
Thou cluth mark'd, abortue rooting Hogge,
Thou that wait feald in thy Nadidade,
The flave of Nature, and the Sonne of Hell:
Thou flander of thy honeste Mothers Wombes,
Thou loathed Iffue of thy Fathers Loynes,
Thou Kagge of Honor, thou deteled--
Q. M. I call thee not.
Rich. I cry thee mercie then; for I did thinke,
That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names,
Q. M. Why so I did, but look'd I for no reply.
Oh let me make the Period to thy Curfe.
Rich. 'Tis done by me, and ends in Margaret.
Q. M. Thus have you breath'd thy Curfe against your self.
Q. M. Pooro painted Queene, vain flourifh of my fortune,
Why draw'd thou Sugar on that Bottel'd Spider,
Whose deadly Web enflav'reth thee about?
Fool, fools, thou wheet'st a Knife to kill thy felle:
The day will come, that thou shalt with for me,
To helpe thee curfe this poynous Bunch-backt Toade.
Hoff. False bounding Woman, end thy frantick Curfe,
Leadst to thy shame, thou moue our patience.
Q. M. Foulre flame upon you, you have all moued mine.
Ric. Were you well seru'd, you would be taught your duty.
Q. M. To ferue me well, you all shou'd do me duty,
Teach me to be thy Queene, and you my Subiects;
O ferue me well, and teach your felves that duty.
Dorf. Diligent not with her, thee is lunaticke.
Q. M. Pesce Marther Marquelle, you are malapert,
Your fire-new flambe of Honor is fcarce currant.

514
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Madam, his Majesty doth call for you,
And for your Grace, and yours my gracious Lord.
Ry. Catesby I come, Lords will you go with mee.
Ry. We wait upon your Grace.

Enter Catesby.

Rich. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawle.
The secret Mischeefes that I fett abroad,
I lay vnto the greuous charge of others.

Clarence. Who I IDEHIDE have caft in darkneffe,
I do bewepe to many simple Guiles,
And to Derby, Hafings, Buckingham,
And tell them 'tis the Queen, and her Allies,
That firit the King againft the Duke my Brother.
Now they beleue it, and withall whet me
To bee reneg'd on by you, Dorian, and I.
But then I figh, and with a piece of Scripture,
Tell them that God bids vs do good for cuill: And thus I cloath my naked Villanie
With oode old ends, flone forth of holy Writ,
And feme a Saint, when mort play the deuill.

Enter two murderers.

But soft, heere come my Executioners,
How now my hardy flout refolved Mates,
Are you now going to dispatch this thing?

U1. We are your Lord, and come to have the Warrant,
That we may be admitted where he is.

Ric. Well thought vpon, I have it heare about me:
When you have done, repaire to Crosby place;
But firs be fodaime in the execution,
Withall obfcurate, do not heare him pleade;
For Clarence is well fpoken, and perhaps
May move your hearts to pitty, if you marke him.

U1. Tut, tut, my Lord, we will not fland to prate,
Talkers are no good doers, be affurd:
We go to vfe our hands, and not our tongues.

Rich. Your eyes drop Mill-dones, when Fooles eyes fall Teares:
I like you Lads, about your businesse straightly.
Go, go, dilpatch.

U1. We will my Noble Lord.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Clarence and Kesper.

Kesp. Why looks your Grace fo heauily to day.

Cl. O, I have paft a miserable night,
So full of fearfull Dreams, of ugly fights,
That as I am a Christian faithfull man,
I would not spend another foule a night
Though twere to buy a world of happy daies:
So full of daffmall terror was the time.

Kesp. What was your dream my Lord, I pray you tel me
Cl. Me thoughts that I had broken from the Tower,
And was embark'd to croffe to Burgundy,
And in my company my Brother Gloucefier,
Who from my Cabin tempted me to walke,
Vpon the Hatches: There we lookd toward England,
And cited vp a thousand heavy times,

Enter Catesby.

Rich. Good counfaile marry, learne it, learne it Marqueffe.

Dor. It touches you my Lord, as much as me.

Rich. I, and much more: but I was borne fo high:
Our ayerie bulideth in the Cedars top,
And dallies with the winde, and formes the Sunne.

Mar. And turns the Sun to flade; alas, alas,
Witneffe my Sonne, now in the flade of death,
Whole bright out-flining beams, thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternall darkneffe folded vp.
Your ayer buildeth in our ayeries Neft:
O God that feelt it, do not fuffer it,
As it is wonne with blood, loft be it fo.

Buc. Peace, peace for thame of God for Charity.

Mar. Vrge neither charity, nor fhame to me:
Vncharitably with me haue you dealt,
And shamefullly my hopes (by you) are buther'd.

My Charity is outrage, Life my fhame,
And in that fhame, full live my forrowes rage.

Buc. Have done, have done.

Mar. O Princely Buckingham, Iheiffe thy hand,
In signe of League and amity with thee:
Now faire befall thee, and thy Noble houfe:
Thy Garments are not spotted with our blood:
Nor thou within the compaff of my curfe.

Buc. Nor no one heere: for Curfes never paife.
The lips of those that breath them in the ayre.

Mar. I will not thinkte but theye ascend the sky,
And there awake Gods gentle fleeping peace.
O Buckingham, take heed of yonder dogge:
Looke when he fawnes, he bites; and when he bites,
His venom tooth will ranke to the death,
Haue not to do with him, beware of him,
Sinne, death, and hell haue fett their markes on him,
And all their Minifters attend on him.

Rich. What doth the fay, my Lord of Buckingham.

Buc. Nothing that I refpect my gracious Lord.

Mar. What doft thou fume me
For my gentle counfell?

And thoth the dillel that I warne thee from.
O but remember this another day:
When he fhall fplitt thy very heart with forrow:
And fay (poore Margaret) was a Profeffesse:
Lye euery of you the subiects to his hate,
And he to yours, and all of you to Gods.

Rich. I cannot blame her, by Gods holy mother,
She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
My part thereof, that I have done to her.

Mar. I never did her any to my knowledge.
Rich. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong.
I was too hot, to do somebody good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now:
Marry as for Clarence, he is well repayd:
He is frank'd vp to fatting for his paines,
God pardon them, that are the caufe thereof.

Ri1. A vertuous, and a Chrifian-like conclusion
To pray for them that haue done death to vs.

Rich. So do I euer, being well aduerd.

Speakes to himfelfe.

For had I curft now, I had curft my felfe.
During the wars of Yorke and Lancaster
That had befalne us. As we pac'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the Hatchets,
Me thought that Gloafter fumbled, and in falling
 Strokeo me (that thought to slay him) out of bound,
Into the tumbling billows of the maine.
O Lord, me thought what paine it was to drowne,
What dreadfull noife of water in mine ears,
What fights of vgy death within mine eyes.
Me thoughts, I saw a thousand feerfull wrackes:
A thousand men that Fifthes gnan'd upon:
Wedges of Gold, great Anchors, heapes of Pearle,
Ineflimable Stones, vnvalued Jewels,
All scatred in the bottome of the Sea,
Some lay in dead-mens Sculles, and in the holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
(As the dimm'd eyes of refringent Gemmes,
That wou'd the slimy bottome of the deepe,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatred by.
Kep. Had you such ye脑海 in the time of death?
To gaze upon these secrets of the deepe?
Cla. Me thought I had, and often did I truie
To yeeld the Ghost: but still the enuisful Flood
Stop'd in my soule, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vaft, and wand'reing ayre:
But smoother'd it within my panting bulke,
Who almoft burn'd, to betch it in the Sea.
Kep. Awak'd you not in this fore Agony?
Clar. No, no, my Dreme was lengthen'd after life.
O then, began the Tempue to my Soule.
I paft (me thought) the Melancolly Flood,
With that fowre Ferry-man which Poets write of,
Vnto the Kingdom of perpetuall Night.
The firft that there did greet my Stranger-soule,
Was my great Father-in-Law, renowned Warwicke,
Who flake alowed: What fcourge for Perierie,
Can this darke Monarchy affoord faille Clarence?
And fo he vanifh'd. Then came wand'ring by,
A Shadow like an Angel, with bright hayre
Dabbel'd in blood, and he shirk'd out alowe
Clarence is come, falfe, fleeting, perfur'd Clarence,
That flabb'd me in the field by Tewkesbury:
Seize on him Furies, take him vnto Torment.
With that (me thought) a Legion of fiends
Inuiron'd me, and howled in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that with the very Noife,
I (trembling) wak'd, and for a feacon after,
Could not beleue, but that I was in Hell,
Such terrible Imprefion made my Dreme.
Kep. No maruell Lord, though it affrighted you,
I am affraid (me thinks) to heare you tell it.
Cla. Ah Keeper, Keeper, I have done these things
(That now give euidence against my Soule)
For Edwards fake, and see how he requits mee.
O God! if my deepely prayes cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aueng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath in me alone:
O Ipare my guiltleffe Wife, and my poore children.
Keeper, I prythee fit by me a while,
My soule is heavy, if I tyme would sleepe.
Kep. I will my Lord, God gue your Grace good reft.

Enter Brakenbury the Lieutenant.

Bra. Sorrow breaks Seafoons, and repofing houres,
Makes the Night morning, and the Noon-tide night
Princes have but their Titles for their Glories,
An outward Honor, for an inward Toyle,
And for vnfelt Imaginations
They often feele a world of reflicifie Cares:
So that betweene their Titles, and low Name,
There's nothing differs, but the outward fame.

Enter two Murtherers.

1. Mur. Ho, who's heere?
Bra. What wouldst thou Fellow? And how committ'st thou hither.
2. Mur. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my Legges.
Bra. What do breede?
1. 'Tis better (Sir) then to be told then.
Let him fee our Commination, and take no more. Reads
Bra. I am in this, commanded to deliver
The Noble Duke of Clarence to your hands.
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltie from the meaning.
There lies the Duke aleepee, and there the Keyes.
Ine to the King, and signifie to him,
That thus I have refign'd to you my charge.
Exit.
1. You may fie, 'tis a point of wifedome:
Far you well.
2. What, shall we stab him as he sleepe.
No: he'll fay was done cowardly, when he wakes
2. Why he shall never wake, vntill the great judgement day.
1. Why then hee'll fay, we stab'd him fleeing.
2. The vripping of that word Judgement, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.
1. What? art thou afraid?
2. Not to kill him, hauing a Warrant,
But to be damned for killing him, from the which
No Warrant can defend me.
1. I thought thou had'ft bin resolve.
2. So I am, to let him live.
1. I cle backe to the Duke of Gloafter, and tell him fo.
2. Nay, I prythee flay a little:
I hope this passionate humor of mine, will change,
I was wont to hold me but while one tels twenty.
1. How doth thou feele thy felfe now?
2. Some certaine dregges of confidence are yet within mee.
1. Remember our Reward, when the deed's done.
2. Come, he dies: I had forgot the Reward.
1. Where's thy confidence now.
1. When hee opens his purfe to guie vs our Reward, thy Confidence flies out.
2. 'Tis no matter, let it goe: There's few or none will entertaine it.
1. What if it come to thee again?
2. Ile not meddle with it, it makes a man a Coward:
A man cannot feale, but it accufeth him: A man cannot Swaree, but it Checkes him:
A man cannot lyie with his Neighbours Wife, but it detectes him. 'Tis a blushing shamefull spirit, that mutinies in a mans bodome: It fills a man full of Obstacles. It made me once refore a Purifie of Gold that (by chance) I found: It beggars any man that keeps it: It is turn'd out of Townes and Cities for a dangerous thing, and every man that means to live well, endeavours to truft to himselfe, and live with out it.

'Tis
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

1 'Tis even now at my elbow, perfwading me not to kill the Duke.
2 Take the dissel in thy minde,and belceue him not:
He would inmutate with thee but to make thee figh:
3 I am strong fram'd,he cannot preualie with me.
4 Spoke like a tall man,that refpeets thy reputation.

Come,shall we fall to worke?
1 Take him on the Cofhard, with the hiltes of thy Sword, and then throw him into the Malmeufey-Butte in the next roome.
2 O excellent deuice; and make a hop of him.
3 Soft, he wakes.
4 Strike.
5 No, we'll reafon with him.

Cla. Where art thou Keeper? Glue me a cup of wine.
2 You shall haue Wine enough my Lord alon.
Cla. In Gods name,what art thou?
1 A man, as you are.
Cla. But not as I am Royall.
1 Nor you as we are, Loyall.
Cla. Thy voice is Thunder, but thy looks are humble.
1 My voice is loud as the Kings, my looks mine owne.
Cla. How darkely,and how deadly doth thou speake?
Your eyes do menace me: why looke you pale?
Who fent you hither? Wherefore do you come?
2 To, to, to--
Cla. To murther me?
"Bath, I.
Cla. You scarely haue the hearts to tell me so,
And therefore cannot haue the hearts to do it.
Wherein my Friends haue I offended you?
1 Offended vs you haue not, but the King.
Cla. I shall be reconcil'd to him againe.
2 Never my Lord, therefore prepare to dye.
Cla. Are you drawnne forth among a world of men
To play the innocens? What is my offence?
Where is the Evidence that doth accuse me?
What lawful Quoet haue gien their Verdict vp
Vnto the frowning Judge? Or who pronounc'd
The bitter fentence of poore Clarence death,
Before I be conuict'd by course of Law?
To threaten me with death, is moft vnlawfull.
I charge you, as you hope for any goodneffe,
That you depart, and lay no hands on this,
The deed you undertake is damnable.
1 What will we do, we do vpon command.
2 And he that hath commanded, is our King.
Cla. Erroneous Vafals, the great King of Kings
Hath in the Table of his Law commanded
That thou that do no murther. Will you then
Spurne at his Edict, and fuffill a Mans?
Take heed: for he holds Vengeance in his hand,
To hurle vpnon their heads that breake his Law.
And that fame Vengeance doth he hurle on thee,
For falfe Forfwearing, and for murther too:
Thou didst receive the Sacrament, to fght
In quarrel of the Houfe of Lancater,
1 And like a Traitor to the name of God,
Didst breake that Vow, and with thy treacherous blade,
Vnfold the Bowels of thy Sou'reign Sonne.
2 Whom thou was't fwearne to cherish and defend.
How canst thou vrgge Gods dreadful Law to vs,
When thou haft brake it in fuch deere degree?
Cla. Alas! for whafe fake did I that ill deede?
For Edward, for my Brother, for his fake.
He fends you not to murther me for this:
For in that finne, he is as depe as I.
If God will be auenged for the deed,
O know you yet, he doth it publiquely,
Take not the quarrel from his powrefull armes:
He needs no indirect, or lawflefe courfe,
To cut of those that have offended him.
1 Who made thee then a bloody minifter,
When gallant ftringing brave Plantagenets,
That王子ly Nourice was strucke dead by thee?
Cla. My Brothers loue, the Diuell, and my Rage.
1 Thy Brothers loue, our Duty, and thy Faults,
Prrouke vs hither now, to flaughter thee.
Cla. If you do loue my Brother, hate not me:
I am his Brother, and I loue him well.
If you are hyrd for meed, go backe againe,
And I will lend you to my Brother Gloufter:
Who shall reward you better for my life,
Then Edward will for trydings of my death.
2 You are decreau'd,
Your Brother Gloufter hates you.
Cla. Oh no, he loues me, and he holds me deere:
Go you to him from me.
1 I fo we will.
Cla. Tell him, when that our Princey Father Yorke,
Bliet his three Sonnes with his victorious Arme,
He little thought of this duided Friendfhip:
Bid Gloufter think on this, and he will weep.
1 I Milhones, as he leffoned vs to weep.
Cla. O do not fandler him, for he is kinde.
1 Right, as Snow in Harceft:
Come, you deceuie your felfe,
'Tis he that fends vs to defroy you here.
Cla. It cannot be, for he bewept my Fortune,
And hugg'd me in his arms, and fware with fobs,
That he would labour my deliuerie.
1 Why fo he doth, when he delivers you
From this earths thralldome, to the loyes of heauen,
2 Make peace with God, for you must die my Lord.
Cla. Have you that holy feeling in your soules,
To conuail thee to make my peace with God,
And are you yet to your owne foules fo blinde,
That you will warne with God,by murfing me.
O fir's confider, they that let you on
To do this deede, they hate you for the deede.
2 What shall we do?
Clæ. Relent, and faue your foules:
Which of you, if you were a Princes Sonne,
Being pent from Liberty, as I am now,
If two fuch murtherers as your felues came to you,
Would not intreate for life, as you would begge
Were you in my diftreffe.
1 Relent; not: 'Tis cowardly and womanish.
Cla. Not to relent, is beaffeely, fauage,diuellish:
My Friend, I fyfe some pity in thy lookes:
O, if thine eye be not a Flatterer,
Come thou on my fide, and intrete for me,
A begging Prince, what begger pitties not.
2 Looke behinde you, my Lord.
1 Take that, and that, if all this will not do, Stab him.
Ile drowne you in the Malmeufey-But within.
Cla. A bloody deed, and desperatly dispach't:
How faire (like Pilate) would I wash my hands
Of this most greevous murther.
Enter 1.Murtherer.
1 How now? what mean't it thou that thou help'd it me not?
By Hauen the Duke shall know how flacke you have borne.

| 2.3. Mar. I would he knew that I had faw'd his brother, Take thou the Fee, and tell him what I say, For I repent me that the Duke is slaine. Exit. | Enter Rutcliffes, and Gloyler.

Rich. Good morrow to my Soueraigne King & Queen And Princeely Peere, a happy time of day.

King. Happy indeed; as we have spent the day: Glofter, we have done deeds of Charity, Make peace of enmity, false love of hate, Between thee dwelling wrong incensed Peere.

Rich. A blest labour my most Soueraigne Lord: Among this Princeely heape, if any here By fals intelligence, or wrong furmise Hold me a Foe: If I knothing willingly, Have ought committed that is hardly borne, To any in this prescence, I defire To reconcile me to his Friendly peace:
'Tis death to me to be at enmity: I hate it, and defire all good mens love, First Madam, I intreate true peace of you, Which I will purchase with my dutifull service. Of you my Noble Cofin Buckingham, If ever any grudge were lodg’d betwixt vs. Of you and you, Lord Rivers and of Dorset, That all without defer have frown’d on me: Of you Lord Woudall, and Lord Scales of you, Dukes, Earles, Lords, Gentlemen, indeed of all. I do not know that Englishman alive, With whom my foile is any jot at oddes, More then the Infant that is borne to night: I thanke my God for my Humility.

Qu. A holy day shal this be kept hereafter: I would to God all errors were well compounded. My Soueraigne Lord, I do beeche your Highnedfe To take our Brother Clarence to your Grace. Rich. Why Madam, have I offered love for this, To be fo flowerd in this Royall prescence? Who knowes not that the gentle Duke is dead? They You do him injurie to force his Coarfe. all start.

King. Who knowes not he is dead? Who knowes he is?

Qu. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this?

Bur. Lookke I to pale Lord Dorset, as the rest?

Der. I my good Lord, and no man in the preffence, But his red colour hath forsooke his cheekes.

King. Is Clarence dead? The Order was receiv’d.

Rich. But he (poore man) by your first order dyed, And that a winged Mercurie did beeare: Some tardie Cipple bare the Countermand, That came noe taffe to see him buried.

God grant, that some leffe Noble, and leffe Loyall, Neerer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood, Deforme not worse then wretched Clarence did, And yet go currant from Suffititon.

Enter Earle of Derby.

Der. A boonie my Soueraigne for my servite done.

King. I prethee peace, my foile is full of forrow.

Der. I will not rife, uncliffe your Highnes hear me.

King. Then fay at once, what is it thou requestis.

Der. The forfeit (Soueraigne) of my feruants life, Who flew to day a Rioutous Gentleman, Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfoke.

King. Have I a tongue to doome my Brothers death? And shal that tongue glue pardon to a flaine?

My Brother kill’d no man, his fault was Thought, And yet his punishement was bitter death.

Who
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Who said to me for him? Who (in my wrath)
Kneel’d and my feet, and bid me be aduis’d?
Who spoke of Brother-hood? who spoke of loulie?
Who told me how the poor soule did forake
The mighty Warwicke, did and fight for me?
Who told me in the field at Tewkebury,
When Oxford had me downe, he relieved me:
And said deare Brother Luc, and be a King?
Who told me, when we both lay in the Field,
Frozen(ailmoit)to death, how he did lap me
Even in his Garments, and did give himselfe
(All thin and naked) to the numbe cold night?
All this from my Remembrance, brutish wrath
Sinfully pluckt, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my minde.
But when your Carters, or your walking Vassalls
Have done a drunken Slaughter, and deafe’d
The precious Image of our deere Redeemer,
You rightfull are on your knees for Pardon, pardon,
And I (vniustly too) must grant it you.
But for my brother, not a man would speake
Nor I (vngracious) speake vnto my fede
For him poore Soule. The proudest of you all,
Haue bin beholding to him in his life:
Yet none of you, would oone begge for his life.
O God! I feare thy Juflice will take hold
On me, and you; and mine, and yours for this.
Come Hapings helpes me to my Cloffe.
Ah poore Clarence. Exeunt some with K. & Queen.
Rich. This is the fruits of rashnes Markt you not,
How that the guilty Kindred of the Queene
Look’d pale, when they did hear of Clarence death.
O they did wepe it fill unto the King,
God will reuenge it. Come Lords will you go,
To comfort Edward with our company.
Be it. We wait vpon your Grace.*

Scena Secunda.

Enter the old Dutchefl of York, with the two children of Clarence.

Edw. Good Grandam tell vs, is our Father dead?
Dutch. No Boy,
Daugh. Why do wepe so oof? And heate your Brech?
And cry, O Clarence, my vnhappy Sonne.
Boy. Why do you looke on vs, and thake your head,
And call vs Orphans, Wretches, Calwawayes,
If that our Noble Father were alue?
*Daught. My pretty Cofna, you mistake me both,
I do lament the sickenefle of the King,
As loath to looke him, not your Fathers death:
It were loft forrow to walle one that’s loft.
Boy. Then you conclude, (my Grandam) he is dead:
The King mine Vnkle is too blame for it.
God will reuenge it, whom I will imporne
With earneft prayers, all to that effect,
Daugh. And so will I.
Daught. Peace children peace, the King doth loue you wel.
Incapable, and shallow Innocents,
You cannot guesse who curd your Fathers death.
Boy. Grandam we can: for my good Vnkle Glofier
Told me, the King provok’d to it by the Queene,
Deuis’d impeachments to imprinon him;
And when my Vnkle told me fo, he wept,
And pittied me, and kindly kff my cheeke:
Bad me rely on him, as on my Father,
And he would loue me deere as a child.
Daught. Ah! that Deceit should stalle fuch gentle shape,
And with a vertuous Vizor hide deepe vice.
He is my fonne, I, and therein my thame,
Yet from my dugges, he drew not this deceit.
Boy. Thinke you my Vnkle did difsemble Grandam?
Dutch. I Boy.
Boy. I cannot thinke it. Hearke, what noble is this?
Enter the Queene with her haire about her ears,
Rivera & Dorset after her.

Say! Ah! who shall hinder me to walle and wepe?
To childe my Fortune, and torment my Selfe.
Ile loyne with blacke difpare against my Soule,
And to my felle, become an enemy.
Daught. What means this Scene they rude impietie?
Boy. To make an act of Tragicke violence.
Edward my Lord, thy Sonne, our King is dead.
Boy. How grow the Branches, when the Roote is gone?
Boy. Why wither not the leaues that want their sap?
If you will live, Lament if dye, be breefe,
That our (twift-winged Soules may catch the King,
Or like obedient Subjectes follow him,
To his new Kingsome of nere-changing night.
Daught. Ah fo much interef haue in thy forrow,
As I had Title in thy Noble Husband:
I haue beept a worthy Husbandes death,
And liued with looking on his Images
But now two Mirrors of his Princely semblance,
Are crack’d in pieces, by malignant death,
And I for comfort, haue but one falle Glaffe,
That greues me, when I fee my shame in him.
Thou art a Widdow yet thou art a Mother,
And haft the comfort of thy Children left,
But death hath finch’d my Husband from mine Armes,
And pluckt two Cruches from my feeble hands,
Clarence, and Edward. O what caufe haue I,
(Thine being but a moity of my moane)
To ouer-go thy woes, and drowne thy cryes.
Boy. Ah Aunt! you wept not for our Fathers death:
Daught. How can we ayde you with our Kindred teares?
Daugh. Our fatherlesse differefe was left vnmoan’d,
Your widdow-dolour, likewise he vnwept.
Qu. Glue me no helpe in Lamentation,
I am not barre to bring forth complaints:
All Springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I being gouern’d by the waterie Moone,
May fend forth plenteous teares to drowne the World.
Ah, for my Husband, for my deere Lord Edward.
Clare. Ah for our Father, for our deere Lord Clarence.
Daught. Alas for both, both mine Edward and Clarence.
Qu. What lay had I but Edward, and hee’s gone?
Clare. What lay had we but Clarence? and he’s gone.
Daught. What layes had I, but they’re gone.
Qu. Was never widdow had fo deere a loffe.
Clare. Were neuer Orphans had fo deere a loffe.
Daught. Was never Mother had fo deere a loffe.
*Alas! I am the Mother of these Greefes,
Their woes are parcull’d, mine is general.
She for an Edward weepes, and fo do I.*
I for a Clarence weepes, so doth not thee:
That Babes for Clarence weepes, so doe not they.
Ais! you three, on me theeifold distribut:
Power all your teares, I am your sorrowes Nurfe,
And I will pamper it with Lamentation.
For comfort deere Mother, God is much displeas'd,
That you take with vnthankfulnesse his doing.
In common worldly things, 'tis call'd vngrateful,
With dull vnwillingsence to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent:
More much to be thus opposite with heauen,
For it requires the Royall debt it lent you.
Rivers. Madam, bethinke you like a carefull Mother
Of the young Prince your fons fend special for him,
Let him be Crown'd, in him your comfort lies.
Drowne desperat sorrow in dead Edwards graue,
And plant your joys in living Edwards Throne.

Enter Richard, Buckingham, Derby, Haflings, and Rutcliffe.

Rich. Siter haue comfort, all of vs haue caufe
To wail the dimmig of our shining Starre :
But none can helpe our hartes by wayling them.
Madam, my Mother, I do cry you mercie,
I did not fee your Grace. Humbly on my knee,
I crave your Blessing.

Dor. God blesse thee, and put meeknes in thy breaf,
Loue Charity, Obedience, and true Dutie.

Rich. Amen, and make me die a good old man,
That is the butt-end of a Mothers blissing
I maruell that her Grace did leave it out.

Buc. You clowdy-Princes, & hart-forrowing-Peeres,
That beare this heauie mutuall loade of Moane,
Now cheere each other, in each others Loue:
Though we have spent our Harneft of this King,
We are to reape the Harneft of his Sonne.
The broken rancour of your high,swolne hates,
But lately splinter'd, knaft, and lown'd together,
May gently be prefer'd,cherifht, and kept :
Me feemeth good, that with some little Traine,
Forthwith from Ludlow, the young Prince be fet
Hither to London, to be crown'd our King.

Rivers. Why with some little Traine,
My Lord of Buckingham?

Buc. Marrie my Lord, leave by a multitude,
The new-heald wound of Malice should brake out,
Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the effect is greene, and yet vaguern'd.
Where every Horfe bears his commanding Reine,
And may direct his course as pleafe himselfe,
As well the faire of harme, as harme apperant,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Rich. I hope the King made peace with all of vs,
And the compact is firm, and true in me.

Ris. And so in me, and so (I thinke) in all.
Yet since it is but greene, it should be put
To no apparant likely-hood of break,
Which haply by much company might be vrg'd:
Therefore I say with Noble Buckingham,
That it is mete so few should fetch the Prince.

Hoft. And so say I.

Rich. Then be it so, and go we to determine
Who shall be that braine shall passe to London.
Madam, and you my Siter, will you go
To glue your censures in this businesse.

Exeunt.

Manet Buckingham, and Richard.

Buc. My Lord, who euer journeyes to the Prince,
For God fake let not vs two flay at home:
For by the way, Ie fort occasion,
As Index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the Queenes proud Kindred from the Prince.

Rich. My other felle, my Counfailes Confistory,
My Oracle, My Prophet, my deere Cohn,
As a child, will go by thy diirection,
Toward London then, for we'll not flay behind.

Scena Tertia.

fast?

2.Cit. I promitt you, I scarlely know my felle :
Hearre you the newes abroad?

1. Yes, that the King is dead.
2. Ill newes bylady, felome comes the better:
Ifere, I feare, 'twill prove a giadly world.

Enter another Citizen.

3. Neighbours, God speed.

1. Give you good morrow sir.
2. Doth the newes hold of good king Edwards death?

1. I fay, it is too true, God helpe the white.
3. Then Mafter lookes to fee a troublous world.

1. No, no, by Gods good grace, his Son shall reigne.
2. Woe to that Land that goes Govern'd by a Child.
3. In him there is a hope of Gouernment,
Which in his monage, crounfe under him,
And in his full and ripened years, himselfe
No doubt shall then, and till then govern well.

1. So flood the State, when Henry the fixt
Was crown'd in Paris, but at nine months old.
2. Stood the State so? No, no, good friends, God wot
For then this Land was famously enrich'd:
With politike graue Counfelf, then the King
Had vertuous Vnklies to proftect his Grace.

1. Why so hath this, both by his Father and Mother.
2. Better it were they all came by his Father :
Or by his Father there were none at all:
For emulation, who shall now be neere,
Will touch vs all too neere, if God preuent not.
O full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester,
And the Queenes Sons, and Brothers, haught and proud :
And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,
This fickly Land, might folace as before.

1. Come, come, we feare the worse; all will be well.
3. When Clouds are fteen, wifemen put on their cloackes:
When great leaves fall, then Winter is at hand ;
When the Sunnes heat, who doth not look for night?
Untimelie torments, makes men expect a Death:
All may be well, but if God fort it fo,
'Tis more then we defere, or I expeckt.

2. Truly, the hearts of men are full of feare:
You cannot reason (almost) with a man,
That looks not heauly, and full of dread.

Enter Arch-bishop, young York, the Queene, and the Dutchy.

Arch. Laft night I heard they lay at Stony Stratford, And at Northampton they do rett to night:
To morrow, or next day, they will be here.
Dut. I long with all my heart to fee the Prince:
I hope he is much gowne since laft I saw him.
Qu. But I hear no, they say my Sonne of York
He's almost overtane him in his growth.
York. I Mother, but I would not have it so.
Dut. Why my good Cofin, it is good to grow.
Ter. Grandam, one night as we did fit at Supper, My Ynkle Rivers talk'd how I did grow
More then my Brother. I quoth my Ynkle Gloffuer, Small Herbes haue grace, great Weeds do grow apace, And since, me thinke I would not grow fo fast, Because Sweet Flowers are frow, and Weeds make haft.
Dut. Good faith, good faith, the faying did not hold In him that did obflef the fame to thee.
He was the wretched thing when he was yong, So long a growinge, and fo leyfurely, That if his rule were true, he fhould be gracious.
Ter. And fo no doubt he is, my gracious Madam.
Dut. I hope he is, but yet I Mother doubts my son.
Ter. Now by my troth, if I had beene remembered, I could have gien my Ynkle Grace, a flout, To touch his growth, nearer then he toucht mine.
Dut. How your yong Yorke, I prythee let me hear it.
Ter. Marry (they fay) my Ynkle grew fo faft, That he could grue a cruff at two hours old,
'Twas full two yeares ere I could get a tooth.
Grandam, this would have beene a bying lef.
Dut. I prythee pretty Yorke, who told thee this?
Ter. Grandam, his Nurfie.
Dut. His Nurfie? why the was dead, ere I was born.
Ter. If'twere not fhe, I could not tell who told me.
Qu. A parious Boyrogo too,you are too shedd'w.
Dut. Good Madam, be not angry with the Childe.
Qu. Pitchers haue cares.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Heere comes a Messenger: What Newses?
Mef. Such newes my Lord, as greeues me to report.
Qu. How doth the Prince?
Mef. Well Madam, and in health.
Dut. What is thy Newses?
Mef. Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey,
Are fent to Pomfret, and with them,
Sir Thomas Usshagam, Prisoners.
Dut. Who hath committed them?
Mef. The mighty Dukes, Gloffuer and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence?
Mef. The sumne of all I can, I haue disclo'd:
Why, or for what, the Nobles were committed,
Is all unknowne to me, my gracious Lord.
Qu. Aye me! I fee the ruine of my Houfe:
The Tyger now hath fift'd the gentle Hinde,
Infulting Tiranny beginnes to Jatt
Upon the innocent and awfeleffe Throne:
Welcome Deftruftion,Blood, and Mafiacre,
I fee (as in a Map) the end of all.
Dut. Accursed, and vnquiet wrangling days,
How many of you haue mine eyes beheld?
My Husband loth his life, to get the Crowne, And often vp and downe my fones were tolt For me to ly, and weep, their gaine and loffe.
And being feate, and Domeffeke broyles
Cleanse over-blowne, themfelves the Conquerors,
Make warre vpon themfelves, Brother to Brother;
Blood to blood, felfe against felfe: O preffourous
And franticke outrage, end thy damned fpiele,
Or let me dye, to looke on earth no more.
Qu. Go, come, come my Boy, we will to Sanctuary.
Malam,farwell.
Dut. Stay, I will go with you.
Qu. You have no caufe.
Arch. My gracious Lady go,
And thether beare your Treasure and your Goodes,
For my part, I ile refigne vnto your Grace.
The Scale I keepe, and fo betide to me,
As well I tender you, and all of yours.
Go, Ile conduct you to the Sanctuary.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

The Trumpets sound.
Enter young Prince, the Dukes of Gloffuer, and Buckingham,
Lord Cardinall, with others.

Buc. Welcome sweete Prince to London,
To your Chamber.
Rich. Welcome deere Cofin, my thoughts Soueraign
The wearie way hath made you Melaucholly.

Prin. No Ynkle, but our croffes on the way,
Haue made it tedious, wearisome, and haueful.
I want more Ynkleles heere to welcome me.
Rich. Sweet Prince, the vntainted vertue of your yeares
Hath not yet di'd into the Worlds deciet:
No more can you diluinguifh of a man,
Then of his outward fhe, which God he knowes,
Seldome or never lumpeth with the heart.
Thofe Ynkleles which you want, were dangerous:
Your Grace attended to their Sagred words,
But look'd not on the poyon of their hearts:
God keepe you from them, and from such false Friends.

Prin. God keepe me from false Friends,
But they were none.
Rich. My Lord, the Maior of London comes to greet you.

Enter Lord Maior.

Lo. Maior. God bleffe your Grace, with health and happy daies.
Prin. I thanke you, good my Lord, and thank you all: I
I thought my Mother, and my Brother York,
Would long ere this, have met vs on the way.
For, what a Slug is Hafings, that he comes not
To tell vs, whether they will come, or no.

Enter Lord Hafings.

But. And in good time, here comes the Sweating Lord.
Prince. Welcome, my Lord: what, will our Mother come?
Haf. On what occasion God he knowes, not I;
The Queene your Mother, and your Brother York,
Have taken Sandtuarie: The tender Prince
Would faire have come with me, to meet your Grace,
But by his Mother was perfere with-held.
But. Fig, what an indirect and peevish course
Is this of hers? Lord Cardinall, will your Grace
Perforce the Queene, to send the Duke of Yorke
Vnto his Princely Brother prefently?
If the denie, Lord Hafings goe with him,
And from her lealous Armes pluck him perfere.
Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weake Oratorie
Can from his Mother winne the Duke of Yorke,
Ammon expect him here: but if she be obdurate
To milde entreaties, God forbid
We should infringe the holy Priuiledge
Of bleffed Sandtuarie: not for all this Land,
Would I be guiltie of so great a finne.
But. You are too fencelfe obtinate, my Lord,
Too ceremonious, and traditionall.
Weigh it but with the groffeneffe of this Age,
You breake not Sandtuarie, in feizing him:
The benefit thereof is always granted
To thofe, whose dealsings have deferu'd the place,
And thofe who have the wit to clayme the place:
This Prince hath neyther cloymist it, nor deferu'd it,
And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot haue it,
Then taking him from thence, that is not there,
You breake no Priuiledge, nor Charter there:
Off haue I heard of Sandtuarie men,
But Sandtuarie children, ne're till now.
Card. My Lord, you shall o're-rule my mind for once.
Come on, Lord Hafings, will you goe with me?
Haf. I goe, my Lord. Exit Cardinall and Hafings.
Prince. Good Lords, make all the speeche haft you may.
Say, Vnckle Glocefter, if our Brother come,
Where shall we worne, till our Coronation?
Glo. Where it think't beft vnto your Royall felle,
If I may confaule you, some day or two
Your Highnes all repose you at the Tower:
Then where you pleafet, and shall be thought moft fit
For your beft health, and recreation.
Prince. I doe not like the Tower, of any place:
Did Iulius Cesar build that place, my Lord?
But. He did, my gracious Lord, begin that place,
Which fince, succeeding Ages have re-edify'd.
Prince. Is it vpon record? or els reported
Succesfively from age to age, he built it?
But. Vpon record, my gracious Lord.
Prince. But say, my Lord, it were not regifterd,
Me thinkes the truth should live from age to age,
As 'twere retay'd to all posteritie,
Even to the generall ending day.
Glo. So wife, so young, they faie doe never liue long.
Prince. What faie you, Vnckle?
Glo. I say, without Charters, Fame liues long.
Thus, like the formal Vice, Iniquitie,
I moralize two meanings in one word.
Prince. That Iulius Cesar was a famous man,
With what his Valour did enrich his Wit,
His Wit fet downe, to make his Valour liue:
Death makes no Conquett of his Conqueror,
For now he liues in Fame, though not in Life.
Ittell you what, my Cousin Buckingham.
But. What, my gracious Lord?
Prince. And if I live untill I be a man,
Ile win our ancient Right in France againe,
Or dye a Soullier, as I liu'd a King.
Glo. Short Summers lightly have a forward Spring.

Enter young Yorks, Hafings, and Cardinall.
But. Now in good time, here comes the Duke of Yorke.
Prince. Richard of Yorke, how fares our Noble Brother?
Yorke. Well, my deare Lord, so mutt I call you now.
Prince. I, Brother, to our griefe, as it is yours:
Too late he dy'd, that might have kept that Title,
Which by his death hath loft much Maiestie.
Glo. How fares our Cousin, Noble Lord of Yorke?
Yorke. I thank you, gentle Vnckle. O my Lord,
You faid, that idle Weeds are faft in growth:
The Prince, my Brother, hath out-grownne me farre.
Glo. He hath, my Lord.
Yorke. And therefore is he idle?
Glo. Oh my faire Cousin, I mutt not say fo.
Yorke. Then he is more beholding to you, then I.
Glo. He may command me as my Sovereigne,
But you have power in me, as in a Kinfman.
Yorke. I pray you, Vnckle, give me this Dagger.
Glo. My Dagger, little Cousin, with all my heart.
Prince. A Beggar, Brother?
Yorke. Of my kind Vnckle, that I know will giue,
And being but a Toy, which is no grief to giue.
Glo. A greater gift then that, Ile giue my Cousin.
Yorke. A greater gift? O, that's the Sword to it.
Glo. I, gentle Cousin, were it light enough.
Yorke. O then I see, you will part but with light gifts,
In weightier things you'll say a Beggar nay.
Glo. It is too weightie for your Grace to weare.
Yorke. I weigh it lightly, were it beauteous.
Glo. What, would you have my Wespon, little Lord?
Yorke. I would that I might thanke you, as, as, you call me.
Glo. How?
Yorke. Little.
Prince. My Lord of Yorke will filf be croffe in talke:
Vnckle, your Grace knowes how to beare with him.
Yorke. You mean to beare me, not to beare with me:
Vnckle, my Brother mockes both you and me,
Because that I am little, like an Ape,
He thinkes that you shou'd bear me on your shoulders.
But. With what a sharpe prouided wit he reasons:
To mitigatte the scorn he giues his Vnckle,
He prettily and aptly taunts himselfe:
So cunning, and so young, is wonderfull.
Glo. My Lord, wilt please you pacifie along?
My selfe, and my good Cousin Buckingham,
Will to your Mother, to entreate of her
To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.
Yorke. What,
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

187

York. What, will you goe vnto the Tower, my Lord?
Prin. My Lord Protector will have it so.
York. I shall not sleepe in quiet at the Tower.
Glo. Why, what should you feare?
York. Marry, my Vackle Clarence angry Ghost:
My Grandam told me he was mother'd there.
Prin. I feare no Vackles dead.
Glo. Nor none that liue, I hope.
Prin. And if they liue, I hope I need not feare.
But come my Lord: and with a hauie heart,
Thinking on them, goe I vnto the Tower.
A Senet. Exeunt Prince, York, Haftings, and Dorset.

Manet Richard, Buckingham, and Catesby.

Buck. Thinke you, my Lord, this little prating York
Was not incensed by his fubbte Mother,
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?
Glo. No doubt, no doubt: Oh 'tis a perillous Boy,
Bold, quicke, ingenious, forward, capable:
Hes is all the Mothers, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them reth: Come hither Catesby,
Thou art sworn as deeplye to effect what we intend,
As clofeely to conceale what we impart:
Thou know'st our reasons vy'g'd upon the way.
What think'th thou? is it not an easie matter,
To make William Lord Haftings of our minde,
For the Infallimtal of this Noble Duke
In the Seat Royall of this famous Ile?

cates. He for his fathers fake fo loves the Prince,
That he will not be wonne to ought against him.

Buck. What think'th thou then of Stanley? Will not hee?
cates. Hee will doe all in all as Haftings doth.
Buck. Well then, no more but this:
Goe gentle Catesby, and as it were farre off,
Sound thou Lord Haftings,
How he doth stand affected to our purpofes,
And fummon him to morrow to the Tower,
To fit about the Coronation.
If thou do'st finde him tractable to vs,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reafons:
If he be leaden, yeie, cold, unwilling,
Be thou fo too, and fo breake of the talke,
And give vs notice of his inclination:
For we to morrow hold divident Counsels,
Wherein thy felle shalt highly be employ'd.
Rich. Commend me to Lord Williames tell him Catesby,
His ancient Knot of dangerous Adverfaries
To morrow are let blood at Pomfret Caftle,
And bid my Lord, for joy of this good newes,
Glue Miiftreffe Shore one gentle Kiffe the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, goe effect this buifiefe foundely.
cates. My good Lords both, with all the heed I can.
Rich. Shall we heare from you, Catesby, ere we sleepe?
cates. You shall, my Lord.
Rich. At Cresby Houfe, there shall you find vs both.
Exit Catesby.

Buck. Now my Lord,
What shall we doe, if wee perceue
Lord Haftings will not yeeld to our Complots?
Rich. Chop off his Head:
Something wee will determine:
And looke when I am King, clayme thou of me
The Barlome of Hereford, and all the movables
Whereof the King, my Brother, was poiffeft.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Enter a Priest.

Priest. Well met, my Lord, I am glad to see your Honor.

Haft. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.

I am in your debt, for your last Exercise:

Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Priest. Ile wait upon your Lordship.

Enter Buckingham.

Buc. What, talking with a Priest, Lord Chamberlaine?

Your friends at Pomfret, they doe need the Priest,

Your Honor hath no diminishing works in hand.

Haft. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,

The men you talk of, came into my mind.

What goe you toward the Tower?

Buc. I doe, my Lord, but long I cannot stay there:

I shall returne before your Lordship, thence.

Haft. Nay like enough, for I lay Dinner there.

Buc. And Supper too, although you know't it not.

Come, will you goe?

Haft. Ile wait upon your Lordship.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Richard Ratcliff, with Halberds, carrying the Nobles to death at Pomfret.

Rivers. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this,

To day that thou beheld a Subject die,

For Truth, for Dutie, and for Loyalitie.

Grey. God blesse the Prince from all the Pack of you.

A Knot you are, of damned Blood-fuckers.

Laugh. You liue, that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch, the limit of your Lives is out.

Rivers. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody Prison!

Fatal and ominous to Noble Peers:

Within the guilty Closture of thy Walls,

Richard the Second here was hatch'd to death:

And for more fander to thy dismall Seat,

Woe glue to thee our guillciffe blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's Curfe is fallne upon our Heads,

When thee exclaim'st on Hatlings,you, and I,

For standing by, when Richard ftab'd her Sonne.

Rivers. Then curs'd thee Richard,

Then curs'd thee Buckingham,

Then cursed thee this day:

Oh remember God,

To hear her prayer for them, as now for us:

And for my Sifer, and her Princely Sonnes,

Be satisfy'd, deare God, with our true blood,

Which, as thou know'st, vniustly must be spilt:

Rat. Make haste, the hours of death is expiate.

Rivers. Come Grey, come Vaughan, let vs here embrace,

Farewell, until we meet againe in Heauen.

Exeunt.

Scena
Scena Quarta.

Enter Buckingham, Darby, Hallings, Bishop of Ely, Norfolk, Ratcliffe, Louell, with others, at a Table.

Haft. Now Noble Peers, the caufe why we are met, is to determine of the Coronation:
In God Name speaks, when is the Royal day?
Buck. Is all things ready for the Royal time?
Darb. It is, and wants but nomination.
Ely. To morrow then I judge a happy day.
Buck. Who knows the Lord Protectors mind herein?
Haft. I do. He is most inoward with the Noble Duke.
Ely. Your Grace, we think, should sooneft know his mind.
Buck. We know each others Faces; for our Hearts, He knows no more of mine, than I of yours,
Or of his, my Lord, then you of mine:
Lord Hallings, you and he are nere in love.
Haft. I thank his Grace, I know he loves me well:
But for his purpose in the Coronation,
I have not founded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my Honorable Lords, may name the time,
And in the Dukes behalfe Ile give my Voice,
Which I presume hee'll take in gentle part.

Enter Gloucester.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the Duke himselfe.
Rich. My Noble Lords, and Cousins all, good morrow;
I have beene long a Sleeper: but I truft,
My absence doth neglect no great deffign,
Which by my presence might have beene concluded.
Buck. Had you not come vpon your Q my Lord,
William, Lord Hallings, had pronounc'd your part;
I meaned your Voice, for Crowning of the King.
Rich. Then my Lord Hallings, no man might be bolder,
His Lordship knows me well, and loves me well.
My Lord of Ely, when I was left in Holborne,
I faw good Strawberries in your Garden there,
I doe beseech you, fende for some of them.
Ely. Mary and will, my Lord, with all my heart.
Exit Bishop.

Rich. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.
Catechly hath sounded Hallings in our bulfinh,
And finds the teftle Gentleman fo hot,
That he will lofe his Head, ere glue confeit
His Masters Child, as worshipfully he teames it,
Shall lose the Royalty of Englands Throne.

Buck. Withdraw your felle a while, Ile goo with you.

Exeunt.

Darb. We have not yet fet downe this day of Triumph:
To morrow, in my judgemen, is too fudden,
For I my felle am not fo well prouded,
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Enter the Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my Lord, the Duke of Glofiter?
I have fent for these Strawberries.
Haft. His Grace looks cheerfully & smooth this morning,
There's fame conceit or other likes him well,
When that he bids good morrow with fuch spirit.
I think there's neuer a man in Christendome
Can leffer hide his love, or hate, then hee,
For by his Face ftraight shall you know his Heart.
Darb. What of his Heart perceive you in his Face,
By any liuelyhood he fhow'd to day?
Haft. Mary, that with no man here he is offended:
For were he, he had shewn it in his Lookes.

Enter Richard, and Buckingham.

Rich. I pray you all, tell me what they defend,
That doe confpire my death with diuellish Plots
Of damned Witchcraft, and that have preuail'd
Vpon my Body with their Heillih Charmes.
Haft. The tender Grief of my Lord, my Lord,
Makes me moft forward, in this Princely prefence,
To doome th'Offendors, whofe're they be:
I say, my Lord, they have deferved death.
Rich. Then be your eyes the witneffe of their euill,
Looke how I am bewitch'd I behold, mine Arme
Is like a blazed Sapling, wither'd'st:
And this is Edwards Wife, that monftrous Witch,
Conforted with that Harlot, Strumpet Store,
That by their Witchcraft thus have marked me.
Haft. If they have done this deed, my Noble Lord.
Rich. If thou know'st Protector of this damm'd Strumpet,
Talk'st thou to me of it; thou art a Traitor,
Off with his Head; now by Saint Paul I sweare,
I will not dine, until I fee the fame.
Louell and Ratcliffe, looke that it be done:

Exeunt.

Manet Louell and Ratcliffe, with the Lord Haftings.

Haft. Woe, woe for England, not a whit for me,
For I, too fond, might have presented this;
Stanley did dreame, the Bore did rowse our Helmes,
And I did scarce it, and daifaine to flye:
Three times to day my Foot-Cloth-Horfe did stumble,
And flarted, when he look'd vpon the Tower,
As loth to bear me to the daughter-house,
O now I need the Prieft, that speake to me:
I now repent I told the Purfuuant,
As too triumphing, how mine Enemies
To day at Pomfret bloodylie were butcher'd,
And I my felle secure, in grace and favour.
Oh Margaret, Margaret, now thy beaute Curfe
Is lighted on poore Hallings wretched Head.
Ra. Come, come, dispatch, the Duke would be at dinner:
Make a short Shrift, he longs to fee your Head.
Haft. O momentarie grace of mortall men,
Which we more hunt for then the grace of God!
Who builds his hope in ayre of your good Lookes,
Luies like a drunken Sayler on a Maff,
Readie with every Nod to tumble downe,
Into the fallil Bowels of the Depe.
Lou. Come, come, dispatch, 'tis too late to exclaine.
Haft. O bloody Richards, miserable England,
I prophecie the ferrefull it time to thee,
That euer wretched Age hath look'd vpon,
Come, lead me to the Block, bear me my Head,
They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead.

Exeunt.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Enter Richard, and Buckingham, in roven Armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Richard. Come Cousin, and change thy colour, and then again begin, and drop again, As if thou were distraught, and mad with terror.

Buck. So was I, but the deeps of Tragedian, Speake, and looke backe, and prit on every side, Tremble and flent at wagging of a Straw:

Intending deepes of sight, gallowe Lookes Are at my service, like enforced Smiles; And both are readie in their Offices, At any time to grace my Stratagems. But what, is Catesby gone?

Rich. He is, and see he brings the Maior along.

Enter the Maior, and Catesby.

Rich. Look to the Draw-Bridge there.

Buck. Heare, a Drumme.

Rich. Catesby, o're-look the Walls.

Buck. Lord Maior, the reason we haue fent.

Rich. Looke backe, defend thee, here are Enemies. God and our Innocency defend, and guard vs.

Enter Louell and Ratcliff, with Hastings' Head.

Rich. Be patient, they are friends, Ratcliffe, and Louell.

Louell. Here is the Head of that ignoble Traytor, The dangerous and vnuspected Hastings.

Rich. So deare I lov'd the man, that I must wepe:

That he is, for the plainest harmefull Creature,

That breath'd upon the Earth, a Christian.

Made him my Bookes, wherein my Soule recorded The History of all her secret thoughts.

So smooth he daw'd his Vice with new of Vertue,

That his apparent open Guilt omitted,

I meane, his Conversation with Shores Wife,

He liv'd from all attander of suspects.

Buck. Well, well, he was the coereft Sheltred Traytor That euer liv'd.

Would you imagine, or almost beleue,

That not, that great pretenfion

We live to tell it, that the subtil Traytor

This day had plotted, in the Counsell-House,

To murther me, and my good Lord of Glothor.

Maior. Had he done so?

Rich. What thinke you we are Turkes, or Infidels?

Or that we would, against the forme of Law,

Proceed thither in the Villaines death,

But that the extreme peril of the cafe,

The Peace of England, and our Persons safete,

Enable vs to this Execution.

Maior. Now faire befall you, he decler'd his death,

And your good Graces both have well proceeded,

To warne false Traytors from the like Attempes.

Buck. I neuer look'd for better at his hands,

After he once fell in with Miftriple Shores:

Yet had we not determin'd he should dye,

Vntill your Lordship came to see his end,

Which now the louing hafe of thee our friends,

Something against our meanings, haue presented;

Because, my Lord, I would have had you heard

The Traytor speake, and timorouslly confesse

The manner and the purpose of his Treasons:

That you might well haue signified the same

Vnto the Citizens, who haply may

Misdistrust vs in him, and wayte his death.

But, my good Lord, your Graces words that ferue,

As well as I had feene, and heard him speake:

And doe not doubt, right Noble Princes both,

But Ile acquaint our dutious Citizens

With all your last proceedings in this cafe.

Rich. And to that end we will'd your Lordship here,

To view the Cenctures of the carping World.

Buck. Which since you come too late of our intent,

Yet witness what you hear we did intend:

And fo, my good Lord Maior, we bid farwell.

Exit Maior.

The Maior towards Guild-Hall byes him in all poete:

There, at your meetest vantage of the time,

Inferre the Baltharie of Edwards Children:

Tell them, how Edward put to death a Citizen,

Onely for saying he would make his Sonne

Heire to the Crowne, meaning indeed his House,

Which, by the Signe thereof, was tarmed fo.

Moreover, vrg his hatefull Luxurie,

And beastfull appetite in change of Luft,

Which rectified vnto their Seruants, Daughters, Wifes.

Even where his raging eye, or favage heart,

Without controll, lusted to make a prey.

Nay, for a need, thus farre come neere my Perfon:

Tell them, when that my Mother went with Child

Of that infatiate Edward, Noble Torke.

My Princely Father, then had Warses in France,

And by true computation of the time,

Found, that the Iffue was not his begot:

Which well appeared in his Lineaments,

Being nothing like the Noble Duke, my Father:

Yet touch this sparingly, as were farre off,

Because, my Lord, you know my Mother bluses.

Buck. Doubt not, my Lord, Ile play the Orator,

As if the Golden Fee, for which I plead,

Were for my felie: and fo, my Lord, adue.

Rich. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynardes Castle,

Where you shall finde me well accompanied

With renowned Fathers, and well-learned Bishops.

Buck. I goe, and towards three or foure a Clocke

Looke for the Neuves that the Guild-Hall afforda.

Exit Buckingham.

Rich. Goe Louell with all speede to Doctor Shaw,

Goe thou to Fryer Peake, bid them prepare

Meet me within this hour at Baynardes Castle.

Exit. Now will I goe to take some priuie order,

To draw the Brats of Clarence out of fight,

And to glue order, that no manner person

Have any time recourse vnto the Princes.

Exit. Enter a Scriuener.

Sr. Here is the Indictment of the good Lord Hastings,

Which in a cert Hand fairely is engros'd,

That it may be to day red o're in Poules.

And marke how well theujet hang together:

Eleuen houre I have spent to write it ouer,

For yester-night by Catesby was it sent me,

The Precedent was full as long a doing,

And yet within these fewe hhoures Hastings liue'd,

Vntainted, vnexamin'd, free, at libertie.

Here's a good World the while.

Who is so gross, that cannot see this palpable deuice?

Yet
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Enter Catesby.

Catesby. Now Catesby, what fayes your Lord to my request?

Enter Buckingham and a fewe all.

Rich. How now, how now, what fay the Citizens?

Catesby. Now by the holy Mother of our Lord, the Citizens are mum, say not a word.

Rich. Touch you the Battarde of Edwards Children?

Catesby. I did, with his Contract with Lady Lucy, and his Contract by Depist in France, Th'enviats greedinesse of his desire, and his enforcement of the City Wises, His Tyrannie for Trifles, his owne Battarde, As being got, your Father then in France, and his resemblance, being not like the Duke. Whatall, I did inferre your Lineaments, Being the right Idea of your Father, Both in your forme, and Noblenesse of Minde: Layd open all your Victories in Scotland, Your Discipline in Warre, Wildome in Peace, Your Bountie, Vertue, faire Humilitie: Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose, Vntouch't, or fleightly handled in discourse. And when my Oratour drew toward end, I bai them that did lose their Countries good, Cry, God faue Richard, Englands Royall King. Rich. And did they so?

Catesby. No, fo God helpe me, they spake not a word, But like dumbe Statues, or breathing Stones, Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale: Which when I faw, I reprehended them, and ask'd the Malor, what meant this wilfull silence? His anfwer was, the people were not vfed To be spooke to, but by the Recorder. Then he was vrg'd to tell my Tale againe: Thus fyrth the Duke, thus hath the Duke infrer'd, But nothing spooke, in warrant from himselfe. When he had done, fome folowers of mine owne, At lower end of the Hall, hurld vp their Caps, And fome tenne voyces cry'd, God faue King Richard: And thus I take the vantage of thofe few. Thaknes gentle Citizens, and friends, quoth I, This generaall applaufe, and chearefull thowt, Argues your widome, and your loue to Richard: And even here brake off, and came away.

Rich. What tongue-leffe Blockes were they, Would they not speake? Will not the Malor then, and his Brethren, come?

Catesby. The Malor is here at hand: Intend fome fear, Be not you spooke with, but by mightie fuit: And looke you get a Prayer-Booke in your hand, And fand betweene two Church-men, good my Lord, For on that ground Ie make a holy Defcendant: And be not easie wonne to our requites, Play the Maids part, filli anfwer naye, and take it.

Rich. I goe: and if you plead as well for them, As I can fay nay to thee for my felle, No doubt we bring it to a happie issue.

Catesby. Go, go vp to the Leids, the Lord Malor knocks.

Enter the Malors, and Citizens.

Welcome, my Lord, I dance attendance here, I thinke the Duke will not be spooke withall.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Buck. You have, my Lord:
Would it might please your Grace,
On our entreaties, to amend your fault.

Buck. Know then, it is your fault, that you renigne
The Supreme Seat, the Throne Majestically,
The Sceptred Office of your Ancellors,
Your State of Fortune, and your Deaw of Birth,
The Lineall Glory of your Royall Hous,
To the corruption of a blestfull Stock ;
Whiles in the mildeffe of your sleepe thoughts,
Which here we waken to our Countries good,
The Noble Ie doth want his proper Limes :
His Face defc'd with skarres of Infamie,
His Royall Stock graffit with ignoble Plants,
And almost fouldred in the swallowing Gulfe
Of darke Forgetfulness, and deepe Oblition.
Which to recue, we heartly sollicitte
Your graciuos felle to take on you the charge
And Kingly Government of this your Land :
Not as Protec'ton, Steward, Substitute,
Or lowly Factor, for another's gaine ;
But as successufully, from Blood to Blood,
Your Right of Birth, your Empyre, your owne.
For this, comforted with the Citizens,
Your very Wurthifull and loving friends,
And by their vehement infligation,
In this iuft Caufe come I to moue your Grace.

Rich. I cannot tell, if to depart in flence,
Or bitterly to speake in your reproofs,
Beft fitteth my Degree, or your Condition.
If not to anwer you, you might haply thinke,
Tongue-ty'd Ambition, not replying, yeelded
To beare the Golden Yoke of Sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impoze on me.
If to reprooue you for this falt of yours,
So foun'd with your faithfull loue to me,
Then on the other fide I check'd my friends,
Therefore to speake, and to avoide the fift,
And then in speaking, not to incurre the laft,
Definitely thus I anwer you.
Your loue deferves my thankes, but my defert
Unmeritables, fhanneis your high request.
First, if all Obstacles were cut away,
And that my Path were even to the Crowne,
As the ripe Renueence, and due of Birth :
Yet so much is my pouretie of spirit,
So mightie, and so manie my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my Greatness,
Being a Barke to brooke no mightie Sea ;
Then in my Greatneffe couet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my Glory smother'd.
But God be thank'd, there is no need of me,
And much I need to helpe you, were there need :n
The Royall Tree hath left vs Royall Fruit,
Which mellow'd by the fealing howres of time,
Will well become the Seat of Malefie,
And make (no doubt) vs happy by his Reigne.
On him I lay that, you would lay on me,
The Right and Fortune of his happy Starres,
Which God defend that I should wring from him.

Buck. My Lord, this argues Confidence in your Grace,
But the regrets thereof are nice, and triall,
All circumstances well confrimed.
You say, that Edward is your Brothers Sonne,
So fay we too, but not by Edwards Wife :-
For first was he contract to Lady Lucie,
Your Mother lies a Witniffe to his Vow ;
And afterward by Subtitutte betroth'd
To Bosia, Siffer to the King of France.
These both put off, a poore Petitioner,
A Care-crod Mother to a many Sonnes,
A Beautie-waining, and diftref'de Widow,
Euen in the after-noone of her belt days,
Made prize and purchafe of his wanton Eye,
Seduced the pitch, and height of his degree,
To base declenfion, and loath'd Bigamie.
By her, in her unlawful Bed, he got
This Edward, whom our Manners call the Prince.
More bitterly could I expofulate,
Save that for reverence to some alius,
I give a sparing limit to my Tongue.
Then good, my Lord, take to your Royall mife
This proffer'd benefit of Dignitie :
If not to blesse vs and the Land withall,
Yet to draw forth your Noble Ancefrrie
From the corruption of abusive times,
Vnto a Lineall true derived course.

Mater. Do good my Lord, your Citizens entreat you.

Buck. Refute not, mightie Lord, this proffer'd loue.

Cater. O make them joyfull, grant their lawful fuit.

Rich. Alas, why would you heape this Care on me ?
I am viftt for State, and Malefie :
I doe beseech you take it not amiffe,
I cannot, nor I will not yeeld to you.

Buck. If you refuse it, as in loue and zeale,
Loth to depoie the Child, your Brothers Sonne,
As weel we know your tenderneffe of heart,
And gentle, kinde, effeminate remarke,
Which we have noted in you to your Kindred,
And ealley indecide to all Estates :
Yet know, where you accept our fuit, or no,
Your Brothers Sonne shall never reigne our King,
But we will plant some other in the Throne,
To the disgrace and downe-fall of your Housе :
And in this resolution here we leave you.

Come Citizens, we will entreat no more.

Exeunt.

Cater. Call him againe, sweet Prince, accept their fuit :
If you deny them, all the Land will rue it.

Rich. Will you enforce me to a world of Care.
Call them againe, I am not made of Stones,
But penetrable to your kinde entreaties,
Albeit against my Confcience and my Soule.

Enter Buckingham, and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham, and fage graue men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To beare her burthen, where I will or no.
I must have patience to endure the Lord :
But if buck Scandal, or foule-fac'd Reproach,
Attend the fequell of your Imposition,
Your meere enforcement shall acquittance me
From all the impure blots and flaynes thereof ;
For God doth know, and you may partly fee,
How farre I am from the defire of this.

Mater. God blesse your Grace, wee fee it, and will say it.

Rich. In faying fo, you shall but fay the truth.

Buck. Then I falute you with this Royall Title,
Long live King Richard, Englands worthy King.

All. Amen.

Buck. To morrow may it please you to be Crown'd.

Rich. Even when you please, for you will have it fo.

Buck. To
Enter the Queen. Anne Duchoffe of Gloucester, the Duchess of York, and Marquess Dorset.

Duch. York. Who meetest vs here? My Neice Plantagenet, Led in the hand of her kind Aunt of Gloucester? Now, for my Life, she's wandering to the Tower, On pure hearts love, to greet the tender Prince. Daughter, well met. Anne. God give your Graces both, a happy And a joyful time of day. Qu. As much as you, good Sisters whither away? Anne. No farther then the Tower, and as I guess'd, Upon the like devour as your foes, To gratulate the gentle Princes there. Qu. Kind Sister thanke's, we'll enter all together.

Enter the Lieutenant.

And in good time, here the Lieutenant comes. Maister Lieutenant, pray you, by your leave, How doth the Prince, and my young Sonne of York? Lieu. Right well, deare Madame: by your patience, I may not suffer you to visit them, The King hath fridly charg'd the contrary. Qu. The King! who's that? Lieu. I mean, the Lord Protector. Qu. The Lord protect him from that Kingly Title. Hath he yet bounds between their love, and me? I am their Mother, who shall barre me from them? Duch. York. I am their Fathers Mother, I will see them. Anne. Their Aunt I am in law, in lose their Mother: Then bring me to their fights, Ie beare thy blame, And take thy Office from thee, on my peril. Lieu. No, Madame, no; I may not leave it so: I am bound by Oaths, and therefore pardon me.

Exit Lieutenant.

Enter Stanley.

Stanley. Let me but meet you Ladies one howre hence, And Ie salute your Grace of Yorke as Mother, And reuerend looker on of two faire Queennes. Come Madame, you must straight to Wemminster, There to be crowned Richards Royall Queene. Qu. Ah, cut my Lice alunder, That my pent heart may have some scope to beat, Or else I suffoe with this dead-killing nèwes. Anne. Despitfulst full tidings, O vnspleasing newes. Dorf. Be of good cheare; Mother, how fares your Grace? Qu. O Dorf, speake not to me, get thee gone, Death and Desolation doggeth thee at thy heele, Thy MOTHER Name is ominous to Children.

If thou wilt out-stript Death, goe croffe the Seas, And live with Richmond, from the reach of Hell. Goe hye thee, hye thee from this slaughter-houfe, Left thou encreafe the number of the dead, And make me dye the thill of Margarets Curfe, Nor Mother, Wife, nor Englands counte Queene. Stanley. Full of wise care, is this your counteiane, Madame: Take all the wisd advantage of the howres: You shall have Letters from me to my Sonne, In your behalfe, to meet you on the way: Be not to tane tardle by your wife delay.

Duch. York. O ill dispersing Winde of Miferie, O my accursed Wombe, the Bed of Death: A Cockatrice haft thou hatcht to the World, Whole vnauodied Eye is murtherous. Stanley. Come, Madame, come, I in all hafe was fent. Anne. And I with all vnwillingneffe wil goe. O would to God, that the inclufue Verge Of Golden Metall, that must round my Brow, Were red hot Steele, to fearre me to the Brains, Anonyted let me be with deadly Venome, And dyes ere men can fay, God loose the Queene. Qu. Goe, goe, poor foule, I enui not thy glory, To feed thy humor, with thy felfe no harme.

Anne. No why? When he that is my Husband now, Came to me, I follow'd Harrer Curfe, When scarce the blood was well waft from his hands, Which liift from my other Angell Husband, And that deare Saint, which then I weeping follow'd: O, when I fay I look'd on Richards Face, This was my Wifhe: Be thon (quoth I) ancurt, For making me, fo young, fo old a Widow: And when thou wed'ft, let forrow haunt thy Bed; And be thy Wife, if any be fo mad, More miserable, by the Life of thee, Then thou halfe made me, by my deare Lords death. Lo, ere I can repeat this Curfe againe, Within fo fmall a time, my Womans heart Groftely grew captue to his honey words, And prou'd the subjece of mine owne Soules Curfe, Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from reit: For never yet one howre in his Bed Did I enjoy the golden dewe of sleep, But with his timorous Dreams was flll awak'd. Besides, he hates me for my Father Warricks, And will (no doubt) shortly be rid of me. Qu. Poor heart adieu, I pittie thy complaining. Anne. No more, then with my foule I mourn for your. Dorf. Farewell, thou wofull welcommer of glory. Anne. Adieu, poor foule, that tak't thy leave of it. Dorst. Go thon to Richmond, good fortune guide thee, Go thou to Richards, and good Angels tend thee, Go thou to Sancharia, and good thoughts posiffe thee, I to my Graue, where peace and reit lye with me. Eighte odd yeares of forrow have I seene, And each howres joy wrackt with a weeke of teene. Qu. Stay, yet looke hauke with me vnto the Tower. Pitty, you ancient Stoones,those tender Babes, Whom Enui hath immur'd within your Walls, Rough Cradle for such little prettie ones, Rude ragged Nurfe, old fallen Play-fellow, For tender Princes: vfe my Babes well; So foolish Sorrowes bids your Stoones farewell.
Scena Secunda.

Enter Buckingham and Catesby.

Catesby. The life and death of Richard the Third.

Buck. My gracious Sovereigne.

Buck. Say on my louing Lord.

Rich. Why Buckingham, I say I would be King.

Buck. Why do you are, my thrice-renowned Lord.

Rich. Ha! am I King! 'tis so; but Edward lives.

Buck. True, Noble Prince.

Rich. O bitter conference!

That Edward still should live true Noble Prince.

Cousin, thou want not to be so dull.

Shall I be plane? I wish the Baftards dead,

And I would have it suddenly perform'd.

What say'th thou now? speak freely, be briefe.

Buck. Your Grace may doe your pleasure.

Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all Ice, thy kindnesse freezes:

Say, haue I thy confent, that they shall dye?

Buck. Give me some little breath, some pawfe, dear Lord,

Before I poyntely speake in this:

I will refuse you herein presently.

Exit Buck. Catesby. The King is angry, fee he gnaues his Lippe.

Rich. I will converse with Iron-witted Fooloes,

And unrepealue Boyes: none are for me,

That looke into me with confiderate eyes,

High-reaching Buckingham growes circumfpeckt.

Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting Gold
Will tempt unto a clofe exploit of Death?

Page. I know a diligent Genteman,

Whose humbe manners match not his haughtie spirit:

Gold were as good as twentie Oratons,

And will (no doubt) tempt him to any thing.

Rich. What is his Name?

Page. His Name, my Lord, is Tyrrel.

Rich. I partly know the man: goe call him hither,

Enter Stanley.

How now, Lord Stanley, what's the newes?

Stanley. Know my louing Lord, the Marquess Dorjet

As I heare, is fled to Richmond,

In the parts where he abides.

Rich. Come hither Catesby, rumor it abroad,

That Anne my Wife is very grievous sicknes,
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

That ever yet this Land was guilty of:
Dighton and Forreft, who I did suborne
To do this piece of ruthless Butchery,
Albeit they were fleit Villaines, bloody Dogges,
Melted with tendernesse, and milde compassion,
Went like to Children, in their deaths (id Story).
O thus (quoth Dighton) lay the gentle Babes:
Thus, thus (quoth Forreft) girdling one another
Within their Alabaster innocent Armes:
Their lips were foure red Roses on a stalke,
And in their Summer Beauty kift each other.
A Booke of Prayers on their pillow lay,
Which one (quoth Forreft) almost chang'd my minde:
But oh the Dueil, there the Villaine foipt:
When Dighton thus told on, we smothered
The most replenished fruit worke of Nature,
That from the prime Creation ere the framed.

Hence both are gone with Conscience and Remorse,
They could not speake, and fo I left them both,
To beare this tyrings to the bloody King.

Enter Richard.

And here he comes. All health my Soueraigne Lord.
Ric. Kinde Tirisell, am I happy in thy Newes.
Tir. If to have done the thing you gau in charge,
Crest your Happinesse, be happy then,
For it is done.
Rich. But did'th thou fee them dead.
Tir. I did my Lord.
Rich. And buried gentle Tisrell.
Tir. The Chaplaine of the Tower hath buried them,
But where (to say the truth) I do not know.
Rich. Come to me Tisrell soone, and after Supper,
When thou shalt tell the proccese of their death.
Meane time, but thinke how I may do the good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.
Farewell till then.
Tir. I humbly take my leave.
Rich. The Sonne of Clarence hauie I sent vp clofe,
His daughter meanly hauie I matcht in marriage,
The Sonnes of Edward sleepe in Abrahames bolome,
And done my wife hath bid this world good night,
Now for I know the Britaine Richard syrnes
At yong Elisabeth my brothers daughter,
And by that knot looks proudly on the Crowne,
To her go I, a lolly thriuing woore.

Enter Ratchiff.

Rat. My Lord.
Rich. Good or bad newes, that thou com'lt in so blynde?
Rat. Bad news my Lord, o'Nourton is fled to Richmond,
And Buckingham backt with the hardy Welfmen
Is in the field, and still his power encreaseth.
Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more neere,
Then Buckingham and his rath Jeiled Strength.
Come, I haue learn'd, that fearfull commenting
Is leaden feruitor to dull delay.
Delay lets impotent and Snaille-pac'd Beggery:
Then fierie expedition be my wing,
Joues Mercury, and Herald for a King:
Go mother men: My counselle is my Sheeld,
We must be brefe, while Traitors brace the Field.
Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter old Queen Margaret.

Mar. So now prosperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mouth of death:
Here in these Confines Illiy have I lurkt,
To watch the waining of mine enemies.
A dire indufusion, am I witneffe to,
And will to France, hoping the confluence
Will prove as bitter, blacke, and Tragedcall.
Withdraw the wretched Margaret, who comes here?

Enter Ducheiff and Queen.

Qu. Ah my poore Prince! ah my tender Babes:
My vnblowed Flowers, new appeaing sweet:
If yet your gentle foules eye in the Ayre,
And be not flat in doome perpetually,
Houre about me with your ayery wings,
And hearre your mothers Lamentation.

Mar. Hower about her, lay that right for right
Hath dim'd your Infant mome, to Aged night.

Dus. So many militaries have cra'd my voyce,
That my wo-wareid tongue is still and mute.

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?

Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet,
Edward for Edwards, payes a dying debt.

Qu. Wilt thou, O God, fye from such gentle Lambs,
And throw them in the intrails of the Wolfe?!
When didst thou sleepe, when such a deed was done?

Mar. When holy Harry dyed, and my sweet Sonne.

Dus. Dead life, blind fight, poore mortal fying ghost,
Woes Scene, Worlds shame, Graues due, by life viurpt,
Brefe abstraf'd and record of tedious dayes,
Reft thy vnrefl on Englands lawfull earth,
Vnlawfully made drunkne with innocent blood.

Qu. Ah that thou wouldst sifone affoord a Graue,
As thou canst yeeld a melancholly feate:
Then would I hide my bone, yet not them here,
Ah who hath any cause to mourne but wee?

Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reuerent,
Gie me mine benefit of signeurie,
And let my greeues frowne on the vpper hand
If sorrow can admit societie.
I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:
I had a Husband, till a Richard kill'd him:
Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:
Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Dus. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him;
I had a Rutland too, thou hopst to kill him.

Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too,
And Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy wombe hath crept
A Hell-hound that doth hunt vs all to death:
That Dogge, that had his teeth before his eyes,
To worry Lambs, and lap their gentle blood:
That foule defacer of Gods sandy worke:
That reignes in gauled eyes of weeping foules:
That excellent grand Tyrant of the earth,
Thy wombe let loofe to chafe vs to our graues.
O virginit, thu, and true-defizing God,
How do I thanke thee, that this carnall Curre

Prayes
Prayes on the issue of his Mothers body,
And makes her Pue-fellow with others none.

Rich. Oh Harris wife, triumph not in my woes:
God witness with me, I have wept for thine.

Mar. Bear with me: I am hungry for revenge,
And now I cloy me with beholding it.

Thy Edward he is dead, that kill’d my Edward,
The other Edward dead, to quit my Edwards:
Yong Yorke, he is but boots, because both they Match not the high perfection of my love.
Thy Clarence he is dead, that fiab’d my Edward,
And the beholders of this franticke play,
Th’adulterate Hassings, Rivers, Vaughan, Gray,
Unnearly another’d in their dusky Graues.
Richard yet lives, Hels blacke Intelligence,
Onely refer’d their Factor, to buy foules,
And send them thither: But at hand, at hand
Infus his pitious and vnpitied end.
Earth gapes, Hell burns, Friends roar, Saints pray,
To haue his Goddesse, without a warning:
Canceall his bond of life, deere God I pray,
That I may live and say, The Dogge is dead.

Qu. O thou didst prophesie, the time would come,
That I should with thee to helpe me curfe
That botted’dd Spider, that foule bane’d Toad.
Mar. I call’d thee then, vaine flourish of my fortune:
I call’d thee then, poor Shadow, painted Quean,
The prestation of but what I was;
The flattering Index of a direfulle Pageant;
One head’d a high, to be hurl’d downe belowe:
A Mother onely mockt with two faire Babes;
A dreaome of what thou waft, a garish Flagge
To be the byme of every dangerous Shot:
A signe of Dignity, a Breath, a Bubble;
A Queene in leafs, onely to fill the Scene.
Where is thy Hueland now? Where be thy Brothers?
Where be thy two Sonnes? Wherein doth thou Joy?
Who sees, and kneelles, and fayes, God faue the Queene?
Where be the bending Peeres that flattered thee?
Where be the thronging Troopers that followed thee?
Decline all this, and see what now thou art.
For happy Wife, a molt disgraced Widow:
For joyful Mother, one that wailes the name:
For one being fus’d too, one that humbly fues:
For Queens, a very Caytiffe, crown’d with care:
For shee that iorn’d at me, now iorn’d of me:
For shee that feared of her, now fearing one:
For the commanding all, they’d of none.
Thus hath the course of Iustice whirl’d about,
And left thee but a very prey to time,
Hauing no more but Thought of what thou waft.
To torture thee the more, being what thou art,
Thou diidst wraye my heart, and dotl thou not
Vтурpe the last proportion of my Sorrow?
Now thy proud Nekke, beares halfe my hurchen’d yoke,
From which, euem heare I cry my wearied head,
And leasse the burthen of it all, on thee.
Farwell Yorke’s wife, and Queene of fad miscience,
These English woes, shall make me smile in France.

Qu. O thou well skill’d in Curfes, say a-while,
And teach me how to curfe mine enemies.

Mar. Forbear to speepe the night, and faft the day:
Compare dead hapinesse, with living woe:
Thank that thy Babes were (weep the time they were,
And that he flew them fowler then he is:
Bettring thy loffe, makes the bad cauer worfe,

Resolving this, will teach thee how to Curfe.
Qu. My words are dull, O quicken them with thine.
Mar. Thy woes will make them harpe,
And pierce like mine.

Exit Margaret.

Dut. Why should calamity be full of words?
Qu. Windy Attrioues to their Clients Woes,
Ayery succeeders of intifline lyes,
Poor breathing Graters of miseries,
Let them haue scope, though what they will impart,
Helpes nothing els, yet do they eathe the hart.

Dut. If so then, be not Tongue-ty’d: go with me,
And in the breath of bitter words, let’s (mother
My damson Son, that thy two sweet Sonnes (mother’d.
The Trumpet sounds, be copious in exclames.

Enter King Richard, and his Traine.
Rich. Who intercepts me in my Expedition?
Dut. O the, that might have intercept thee
By strangling thee in her accurst wombe,
From all the laughter (Wretch) that thou haft done.
Qu. Had’t thou that Forhead with a Golden Crowne
Where’t should be branded, if that right were right?
The laughter of the Prince that ow’d that Crowne,
And the dyre death of my poor Sonnes, and Brothers.
Tell me thou Villaine-flawe, where are my Children?
Dut. Thou Toad, thou Toade,
Where is thy Brother Clarence?

And little Ned Plantagenet his Sonne?
Qu. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Gray?
Dut. Where is kinge Hassings?
Rich. A foule Trumpets, strike Alarum Drummes:
Let not the Heauens heare these Tell-tale women
Raile on the Lords Annotated. Strike I say.

Flourish.

Alarums.

Either he patient, and intreat me fayre,
Or with the clamorous report of Warre,
Thus will I drowne your exclames.

Dut. Art thou my Sonne?
Rich. 1, I thanke God, my Father, and your selfe.
Dut. Then patiently heare my impatience.
Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,
That cannot brooke the accent of reprooke.

Dut. O let me speake.
Rich. Do then, but Ie not heare.
Dut. I will be milde, and gentle in my words.
Rich. And breese (good Mother) for I am in haft.
Dut. Be thou so halfe? I have said for thee
(God knowes) in torment and in agony.
Rich. And came I not at laft to comfort you?
Dut. No by the holy Rood, thou know’ft it well,
Thou can’t on earth, to make the earth my Hell.

A greecous burden was thy Birth to me,
Tetchy and wayward was thy Infance.
Thy School-daies frightfull, desp’rate, wilde, and furious,
Thy prime of Manhood, daring, bold, and venturous:
Thy Age confirm’d, proud, subtile, fye, and bloody,
More milde, but yet more harmfull; Kinde in hatred:
What comfortable hour canst thou name,
That euer grac’d me with thy company?
Rich. Faith none, but Humfrey Hawer,
That call’d your Grace
To Breakefast once, forth of my company.
If I be fo digracious in your eye,
Let me march with thee, and not offend you Madam.
Strike vp the Drumme.

Dut. I pythhee heare me speake.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Rich. You speak too bitterly.
Dut. Hear a word: For I shall never speak to thee again.
Rich. So.
Dut. Either thou wilt dye, by Gods just ordaince
Ere from this warre thou turne a Conqueror:
Or I with greese and exteme Age shall perish,
And never more behold thy face againe.
Therefore take with thee my moult greuous Curse,
Which in the day of Battell thyre thee more
Then all the compleat Armour that thou wear'st.
My Prayers on the audeace party fight,
And there the little foules of Edwards Children,
Whiper the Spirits of thine Enemies,
And prome they Suceceffe and Victory:
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end:
Shame ferues thy life, and doth thy death attend. Exit.
Qu. Though far more caufe, yet much less spirit to curfe
Abides in me, I say Amen to her.
Rich. Stay Madam, I must talke a word with you.
Qu. I have no more fonnes of the Royall Blood
For thee to slaughter. For my Daughters (Richard)
They shall be praying Nunn's, not weeping Queens:
And therefore leuell not to hit their lives.
Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elisabeth,
Vernous and Pale, Royall and Gracious? Qu.
And must she dye for this? O let her live,
And Ile corrupt her Manners, flaine her Beauty,
Slander my Selfe, as false to Edwards bed:
Throw ouer her the valie of Infamy,
So the may live with'rd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confesse she was not Edwards daughter.
Rich. Wrong not her Byrth, she is a Royall Princesse,
Qu. To fase her life, Ile say she is not so.
Rich. Her life is fett only in her byrth.
Qu. And onely in that fatisfeyd her Brothers.
Rich. Loce at their Birth, good farres were opposte.
Qu. No, to their ilues, ill friends were contrary.
Rich. All vnsoundedy is the doome of Definny,
Qu. True: when ouyed grace makes Definny.
My Babes were defin'd to a fatal death,
If grace had bled thee with a faire life.
Rich. You speake as if that I had slaine my Cofins?
Qu. Cofins indeed, and by their Vnckle couzend,
Of Comfort, Kingdome, Kindred, Freedom, Life,
Whole hand fouer lane'd th'ir tender hearts,
Thy head (all indirecly) gane direction.
Now was the murderous dazall and blunt,
Till it was whettet on thine hard-heart,
To recull in the Intrails of my Lambes,
But that still vfe of greese, makes wilde greese tame,
My tongue shold to th' ears not name my Boyes,
Till that my Nayles were anchor'd in thine eyes:
And I in such a deep' rate Bay of death,
Like a poor Barke, of failes and tackling reft,
Rufh all to peeces on th' Rocky bosome.
Rich. Madam, thro' thine in my enterprise
And dangerous fouctee of bloody warre,
As I intend more good to you and yours,
Then euer you and yours by me were harm'd.
Qu. What good is couer'd with the face of heavan,
To be dificovered, that can do me good.
Rich. T'h'advancement of your children, gentle Lady
Qu. Ye to some Scaffold was thy nurse, and lofte their heads.
Rich. Vnto the dignity and height of Fortune,
The high Imperiall Type of this earths glory.

Qu. Flatter my sorrow with report of it:
Tell me, what State, what Dignity, what Honor,
Canst thou demine to any childe of mine.
Rich. Euen all I have, and my selfe and all,
Will I withall inow a childe of thine:
So in the Lethe of thy angry soule,
Thou drowne the sad remembrance of those wrongs,
Which thou supposteft I haue done to thee.
Qu. Be breve, leaft that the proesse of thy kindness
Laff longer telling then thy kindnesse date.
Rich. Then know,
That from my Soule, I love thy Daughter.
Qu. My daughters Mother thinks it with her soule.
Rich. What do you thinke?
Qu. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soule
So from thy Soulues lode didst thou love her Brothers,
And from my hearts loue, I do thanke thee for it.
Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning:
I meane that with my Soule I love thy daughter,
And do intend to make her Queene of England.
Qu. Well then, who doest meane thallke her King.
Rich. Euen he that makes her Queene:
Who else should bee?
Qu. What, thou?
Rich. Euen for How thinke you of it?
Qu. How canst thou love her?
Rich. That I would learne of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour.
Qu. And wilt thou learne of me?
Rich. Madam, with all my heart.
Qu. Send to her by the man that new her Brothers,
A paire of bleeding hearts; thereon ingraue
Edward and York, then happily will the wepe:
Therefore preffent to her, as sometime Margaret
Did to thy Father, deep't in Rutlands blood,
A hand-kercheefe, which fry to her did dreyne
The purple fappe from her sweet Brothren body,
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withall.
If this inducement moue her not to loue,
Send her a Letter of thy Noble deeds:
Tell her, thou mad'st away her Vnckle Clarence,
Her Vnckle Rivers, I (and for her fake)
Mad'dt quicke consesyance with her good Aunt Anne.
Rich. You mocke me Madam, this is not the way
To win your daughter.
Qu. There is no other way,
Vnklese thou could'lt put on some other shape,
And not be RIchard, that hath done all this.
Rich. Say that I did all this for love of her.
Qu. Nay then indeed she cannot choosse but hate thee
Hauling bought love, with such a bloody spoyle.
Rich. Lookke what is done, cannot be now amended:
Men shall deale vnjudiciously sometimes,
Which after-hours glues levyre to repent.
If I did take the Kingdome from your Sonnes,
To make amends, Ile guee it to your daughter:
If I have kill'd th'life of your wimble,
To quicken your encreafe, I will begge
Mine yffe of your blood, upon your Daughters:
A Grandams name is little leffe in love,
Then is the doing Title of a Mother:
They are as Children but one fleppe below,
Euen of your metall, of your very blood:
Of all one paine, faue for a night of groanes
Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like forrow,
Your Children were vexation to your youth,
But mine shall be a comfort to your Age,
The lofe you have, is but a Sonne being King,
And by that lofe,your Daughter is made Queene.
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindneffe as I can.
Darf your Sonne, that with a fearfull foule
Leads discontented steps in Foraine foyle,
This faire Alliance, quickly shall call home
To high Promotions,and great Dignity.
The King that calles your beauteous Daughter Wife,
Familiarly shall call thy "Darfe, Brother :"
Againe shall you be Mother to a King :
And all the Ruines of diftressed Times,
Repar'd with double Riches of Content.
What? have we many good days to see :
The liquid drops of Yeares that you have shed,
Shall come againe, transform'd to Orient Pearle,
Advantaging their Loue, with interest
Oftentimes double gaine of happiness.
Go then (my Mother) to thy Daughter go,
Make bold her bathfull yeares, with your experience,
Prepare her cares to heare a Woens Tale.
Put in her tender heart, the spiring Flame
Of Golden Soueraignty: Acquaint the Princesse
With the sweet silent hours of Marriage joys:
And when this Arme of mine hath chastified
The petty Rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,
Bound with Triumphant Garlands will I come,
And lead thy daughter to a Conquerors bed :
To whom I will retaile my Conquest wonne,
And the shame feole Vindorese, Cejars Cejars.
Qu. What were I then to beat, her Fathers Brother
Would she her Lord? Or shall I say her Vnkle?
Or he that flew her Brothers, and her Vnkle?
Vnder what Title shall I woo for thee,
That God, the Law, my Honor, and her Loue,
Can make feeme pleasing to her tender yeares?
Rich. Inferre faire Englands peace by this Alliance.
Qu. Which the shall purchase with all lathing ware?
Rich. Tell her, the King that may command, intents.
Qu. That at her hands,which the kings King forbids.
Rich. Say she shall be a High and Mighty Queene.
Qu. To vail the Title, as her Mother doth.
Rich. Say I will love her everlastingly.
Qu. But how long shall her sweet life last?
Rich. As long as Heauen and Nature lengthens it.
Qu. As long as Hell and Richard likes of it.
Rich. Say. I her Soueraigne, am her Subiect low.
Qu. But she your Subiect,lothes fuch Soueraignty.
Rich. Be eloquent in my behalfe to her,
Qu. An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told.
Rich. Then plainly to her, tell my louing tale.
Qu. That againe I not honest, is too harsh a style.
Rich. Your Reafons are too hallow, and too quick.
Qu. O no, my Reafons are too deep and dead,
Too deep and dead (poore Infants) in their graves,
Harpe on it till shall I, till heart-brings brake.
Rich. Harpe not on that firing Madam, that is past.
Now by my George, my Garter, and my Crowne,
Qu. Prophan'd, dishonor'd, and the third vfurp.
Qu. By nothing, for this is no Oath :
Thy George prophan'd, hath loft his Lordly Honor;
Thy Garter blenmish'd, a pawn'd his Knightly Vertue ;

Thy Crowne vfurp'd, disgrac'd his Kingly Glory:
If something thou wouldest Iware to be beleu'd.
Rich. Then by my Sefie.
Qu. Thy Sefie, is fellese-mifv'd.
Qu. "Ia full of thy foule wrongs.
Qu. Thy life hath it disonor'd.
Rich. Why then by Heauen.
Qu. Heauens wrong is most of all ;
If thou didst not care to break a Oath with him,
The unly the King my husband made,
Thou hadst not broken, or my Brothers died.
If thou hadst not care to break an Oath by him,
The Imparrell mettall, circling now thy head,
Had grac'd the tender temples of my Child,
And both the Princes had bene breathing here,
Which now two tender Bed-fellows for duft,
Thy broken Faith hath made the prey for Wormes.
What can't thou fware by now.
Rich. The time to come.
Qu. That thou haft wronged in the time ere-past:
For I my felse have many teares to waff.
Hereafter time, for time past, wrong'd by thee.
The Children lie, whose Fathers thou haft slaughter'd,
Vnguerm't youth, to waile it with their age :-
The Parents line, whose Children thou haft butcher'd,
Old barren Plants, to waile it with their Age.
Sware not by time to come, for that thou haft
Mifv'd ere va'd, by times ill-va'd repaft.
Rich. As I intend to proffer, and repent :-
So thrice I in my dangerous Affayres
Of boﬂile Armes: My felse, my felse confound.
Heaven, and Fortune barre me happy hours.
Day,yeild me not thy light, nor Night, thy reft.
Be oppofite all Planes of good lucke
To my proceeding, if with deere hearts love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beautious Princely daughter.
In her, confuits my Happineffe, and thine:
Without her, follows to my felse, and thee ;
Her felse, the Land, and many a Christian foule,
Death, Defolation, Ruines, and Decay ;
It cannot be auuned, but by this:
It will not be auoved, but by this.
Therefore deare Mother (I must call you so) Be the Attorney of my love to her:
Please what I will be, not what I have bene ;
Not my defires, but what I will defire ;
Vrge the Necessity and fate of times,
And be not peocull found, in great Defignes.
Qu. Shall I be tempted of the Diuell thus?
Rich. If, the Diuell tempt you to do good.
Qu. Shall I forget my felse, to be my felse.
Rich. If, your felles rememberance wrong your felse.
Qu. Yet thou didst kill my Children.
Rich. But in your daughters wome I bury them.
Where in that Neft of Spicery they will bleed
Scheues of themfelues, to your reconfort.
Qu. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will ?
Rich. And be a happy Mother by the dead.
Qu. I go, write to me very shortly,
And you shall vnderland from me her mind.

Rich. Bear her my true loues kiffe, and so farewell.
Relenting Foele, and shallow-changing Woman.
How now, what newes?

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. Most mightie Soueraigne, on the Westerne Coast
Rideth a pestilent Nauie: to our Shores
Throng many doublfull hollow-hearted friends,
Vnarm'd, and warifolu'd to heat them backe.
'Tis thought, that Richmond is their Admiral:
And there they hull, expeccing but the aide
Of Buckingham, to welcome them afofe.
Rich. Some light-foot friend post to y Duke of Norfolk:
Ratcliffe thy felte, or Catesby, where is hee?
Cat. Here, my good Lord.
Cat. I will my Lord, with all convenient haste.
Rich. Catesby come hither, poorte to Salisbury:
What thou gavest thither: Doll vnnimidfull Villaine,
Why they trust here, and go't not to the Duke?
Cat. First, mighty Liege, tell me your Highnesse pleasure,
What from your Grace I shall deliver to him.
Rich. O true, good Catesby, bid him leale straight
The greatest strength and power that he can make,
And meet me suddenny at Salisbury.
Cat. I goe.

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I doe at Salisbury?
Rich. Why, what wouldst thou doe there, before I goe?
Rat. Your Highnesse told me I should poorte before.
Rich. My minde is chang'd:

Enter Lord Stanley.

Stanley, what newes with you?

S. None, my good Liege, to pleaze you with hearing,
Nor none so bad, but well may be reported.
Rich. Hoiday, a Riddle, neither good nor bad:
What need'st thou runne so many miles about,
When thou mayest tell thy Tale the neerest way?
Once more, what newes?

Stan. Richmond is on the Seas.
Rich. There let him finde, and be the Seas on him,
White-lier'd Runagate, what doth he there?
Stan. I know not, mightie Soueraigne, but by gueffe.
Rich. Well, as you gueffe.
Stan. Stir'd vp by Darfor, Buckingham, and Morten,
He makes for England, here to clayne the Crowne.
Rich. Is the Chayre empie? is the Sword vnfay'd?
Is the King dead? the Empire vpoffett?
What Heire of York is there alio, but wee?
And who is England King, but great Yorks Heire?
Then tell me, what makes he vpon the Seas?

Stan. Vnleefe for that, my Liege, I cannot gueffe.
Rich. Vnleefe for that he comes to be your Liege,
You cannot gueffe wherefore the Welchman comes.
Thou wilt resolute, and flye to him, I feare.
Stan. No, my good Lord, therefore mistrust me not.
Rich. Where is thy Power then, to beat him back?
Where be thy Tenants, and thy followers?
Are they not now vpon the Westerne Shore,
Safe-conducting the Rebels from their Ships?
Stan. No, my good Lord, my friends are in the North.
Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the North,
When they should serue their Soueraigne in the West?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty King:
Plaifie your Maiestie to give me leave,
Ie muffer vp my friends, and meet your Grace,
Where, and what time your Maiestie shall please.
Rich. I, thou wouldst be gone, to joyne with Richmond:
But Ie not trust thee.
Stan. Most mightie Soueraigne,
You have no caufe to hold my friendship doubtfull,
I never was, nor never will be false.
Rich. Goe then, and muffer menbut leave behind
Your Sonne George Stanley: looke your heart be firme,
Or else his Heads aflurance is but frail.
Stan. So deal with him, as I proue true to you.

Exit Stanley.

Enter a Messenger.

Meff. My gracious Soueraigne, now in Devonshire,
As I by friends am well assured,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughtie Prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder Brother,
With many mee Confederates, are in Armes.

Enter another Messenger.

Meff. In Kent, my Liege, the Guiiffords are in Armes,
And every houre more Competitors
Flocke to the Rebels, and their power growes strong.

Enter another Messenger.

Meff. My Lord, the Armie of great Buckingham.
Rich. Out of ye Owles, nothing but Songs of Death,
He provyght hem.
There, take thou that, till thou bring better newes.
Meff. The newes I have to tell your Maiestie,
Is, that by sudden Floods, and fall of Waters,
Buckingham Armie is diuerse'd and scatterd,
And he himself wanderd away alone,
No man knowes whither.
Rich. I cry thee mercy:
There is my Furye, to cure that Blowe of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaym'd
Reward to him that brings the Traitor in?
Meff. Such Proclamation hath been made, my Lord.

Enter another Messenger.

Meff. Sir Thomas Lucy, and Lord Marqueff Dorset,
'Tis saide, my Liege, in Yorkshire are in Armes:
But this good comfort bring I to your Highnesse,
The Britaine Naue is diuerse'd by Tempeft.
Richmond in Dorsetshire lent out a Boat
Vnto the shore, to ake thoe on the Banks,
If they were his Affiffants, yes, or no?
Who answ'rd him, they came from Buckingham,
Upon his partie he mistrustfull them,
Hoye's fayle, and made his course againe for Britaine.
Rich. March on, march on, since we are vp in Armes,
If not to fight with foraine Enemies,
Yet to beat downe the Rebels here at home.

Enter Catesby.

Cat. My Liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken,
That is the best newes: that the Earle of Richmond
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Is with a mighty power Landed at Milford,
Is colder Newes, but yet they must be told.

Rich. Away towards Salisbury, while we reason here,
A Royall battle might be wonne and lost:
Some one take order Buckingham be brought To Salisbury, the rest march on with me. Florib. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Derby, and Sir Christopher.

Der. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me,
That in the eye of the most deadly Bore,
My Sonne George Stanley is frankt vp in hold:
If I resolt, off goes young Gerger head,
The fear of that, holds off my present syde.
So get thee gone: commend me to thy Lord.
Withall say, that the Queene hath heartily confessed
He should espouse Elizabeth his daughter.
But tell me, where is Princeley Richmond now?
Cori. At Penbrooke, or at Hertford West in Wales.
Der. What men of Name refer to him.
Cori. Sir Walter Herbert, a renownd Souliver,
Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice up Thomas, with a valliant Crew,
And many other of great name and worth:
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withall.
Der. Well hye thee to thy Lord: I kisse his hand,
My Letter will relieve him of his minde.
Farewell. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Buckingham with Halberds, led to Execution.

Buc. Will not King Richard let me speake with him?
Sher. No my good Lord, therefore be patient.

Buc. Hastings, and Edwards children, Gray & Riguer,
Holy King Henry, and thy faire Sonne Edward,
Daughan, and all that have miscarried
By under-hand corrupted foule incivility,
If that your moody discontented foules,
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,
Even for reuenge mocke my destruction.
This is All-foules day (Fellow) is it not?
Sher. It is.

Buc. Whay then Al-foules day, is my bodies doomfay
This is the day, which in King Edwards time
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
Fathe to his Children, and his Wives Allies.
This is the day, wherein I wish'd to fall
By the falfe Faith of him whom most I trusted.
This, this All-foules day to my fearfull Soule,
Is the determined refpite of my fate.
That high All-fer, which I dallied with,

Hath turn'd my fained Prayer on my head,
And gien in earneft, what I begg'd in ief.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turne their tone points in their Masters boomes.
Thus Margarets curse felts heavy on my necke:
When he (quoth she) shall spilt thy heart with sorrow,
Remember Margaret was a Prophetsse:
Come leade me Officers to the blocke of flame,
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.
Exeunt Buckingham with Officers.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Richmond, Oxford, Blunt, Herbert, and others; with drum and colours.

Rich. Fellowes in Armes, and my most louing Friends
Brut'd vnderneath the yoke of Tyrants,
Thus farre into the bowels of the Land,
Haue we marcht on without impediment;
And heere receuie we from our Father Stanley
Lines of faire comfort and encouragement:
The wretched, bloody, and wruping Boars,
(That spoyld you Summer Fields, and fruitfull Vines)
Swilles your warm blood like waft, & makes his trough
In your embowel'd boomes: This foule Swine
Is now cune in the Centry of this life,
Ne're to the Towne of Leicester, as we leaue:
From Tamworth thither, is but one dayes march.
In Gods name chereely on, couragious Friends,
To reape the Harueet of perpetuall peace,
By this one bloody tryall of Harpe Warre.
Osef. Every mans Conscience is a thousand men,
To fight against this guilty Homicide.
Her. I doubt not but his Friends will turne to vs.
Blunt. He hath no friends, but what are friends for fear,
Which in his decrete neede will fflye from him.
Rich. All for our vantage, then in Gods name march,
True Hope is swift, and flies with Swallowes wings,
Kings it makes Gods, and meaner creatures Kings.
Exeunt Officers.

Enter King Richard in Armes, with Norfolk, Ratcliffe, and the Earle of Surrey.

Rich. Here pitch our Tent, even here in Bofworth field,
My Lord of Surrey, why looke you so sad?
Sur. My heart is ten times lighter then my lookes.
Rich. My Lord of Norfolk.
Nor. Here be most gracious Liege.
Rich. Norfolkes, we must haue knockes:
Ha, muet we not?
Nor. We must both giue and take my lousing Lord.
Rich. Vp with my Tent, heere will I lye to night,
But where to morrow? Well, all's one for that.
Who hath desir'd the number of the Tractes?
Nor. Six or euens thousand is their utmost power.
Rich. Why our Batalia troubles that account:
Besides, the Kings name is a Tower of strength,
Which they upon the audefe Fadion want.
Vp with the Tent: Come Noble Gentlemens,
Let us furinate the vantage of the ground,
Call for some men of sound direction:

Let's
Let's lacke no Discipline, make no delay,
For Lords, to morrow is a buie day.

Enter Richmond, Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and Dorset.

Rich. The weary Sunne, hath made a Golden set,
And by the bright Tract of his fiery Carre,
Gives token of a goody day to morrow.
Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my Standard:
Gue me some Inke and Paper in my Tent:
Ile draw the Forme and Modell of our Battale,
Limit each Leader to his feuernall Charge,
And part in iut proportion our small Power.
My Lord of Oxford, you Sir William Brandon,
And your Walter Herbert stay with me:
The Earl of Pembroke keeps his Regiment;
Good Captain, Blunt, his Sonny goodnight to him,
And by the second hour in the Morning,
Defire the Earl to see me in my Tent:
Yet one thing more (good Capitaine) do for me:
Where is Lord Stanely quarter'd, do you know?
My Vilde I have mislaine his Colours much,
(Which well I am affraid I have not done)
His Regiment lies half a Mile at least
South, from the mighty Power of the King.

Rich. If without perill it be possible,
Sweet Blunt, make some good meanes to speak with him
And guide him from me, this moft needfull Note.
Blunt. Upon my life, my Lord, Ie vndertake it,
And fo God gue you quiet reft to night.

Rich. Good night good Capitaine Blunt:
Come Gentlemen,
Let vs consult upon to morrowes Buonefle
Into my Tent, the Dew is rare and cold.

They withdraw into the Tent.

Enter Rich., Ratcliff, Norfolke, & Catenby.

Rich. What is't a Clocke?
Cat. It's Supper time my Lord, it's nine a clocke.

King. I will not fup to night,
Gue me some Inke and Paper:
What, is my Beauer easier then it was?
Rich. And all my Armour laid into my Tent?
Cat. It is my Lijge : and all things are in readinesse.

Rich. Good Norfolke,hy thee to thy charge,
Vfe carefull Watch, choose trusty Centinels,
Nor. I go my Lord.

Rich. Stir with the Larke to morrow,gentle Norfolk.
Nor. I warrant you my Lord.

Exit. Ratcliff.

Rich. Send out a Purfuiuant at Armes
To Stanely Regiment : bid him bring his power
Before Sun-rising, leafe his fubordination fall
Into the blinded Case of eternall night.
Fill me a Boule of Wine : Glue me a Watch,
Saddle white Surrey for the Field to morrow:
Look that my Staves be found, & not too heavy. Ratcliff.

Rat. My Lord.

Rich. Saw'th the melancholly Lord Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the Earle of Surrey, and him elfe,
Much about Cockflut time, from Troope to Troope
Went through the Army, cheering up the Souliders.

King. So, I am satisfied : Glue me a Boule of Wine,
I have not that Alcrity of Spirit,

Nor cheere of Minde that I was wont to haue.
Set it downe. Is Inke and Paper ready?

Rat. It is my Lord.

Rich. Bid my Guard watch. Leave me,
Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my Tent
And heipe to arme me. Leave me I fay. Exit Ratcliff.

Enter Derby to Richmond in his Tent.

Der. Fortune, and Victory fit on thy Helme.
Rich. All comfort that the darke night can afford,
Be to thy Perfon, Noble Father in Law.
Tell me, how fares our Noble Mother?

Der. 1 by Attournay, bleffe thee from thy Mother,
Who prays continually for Richmonds good:
So much for that. The silent hours steale on,
And Galcke darknes, & mortall falling Warre
In brecce, for so the foafon bids vs be,
Prepare thy Battell early in the Morning,
And put thy Fortune to th'Arbitrement
Of bloody stroakes, & mortall staring Warre
1, as I may, that which I would. I cannot,
With best advantage will deceife the time,
And syde thee in this doubfull hocke of Armes.
But on thy fide I may not be too forward,
Least being feenes, thy Brother, tender George
Be executed in his Fathers fght.
Farewell: the leyefire, and the fearfull time
Cuts off the ceremonious Vowes of Loue,
And ample enterchance of sweet Discourfe,
Which fo long fundred Friends should dwell upon:
God gue vs leyefire for their rites of Loue.
Once more Adieu, be valiant, and speed well.

Rich. Good Lords conduct him to his Regiment:
Ile frue with troubled noife, to take a Nap,
Left leade flumber peace me downe to morrow,
When I should mount with wings of Victory:
Once more, good night kinde Lords and Gentlemen.

Exeunt. M.ear Richmond.

O thou, whose Captaine I account my felfe,
Looke on my Forces with a gracious eye:
Put in their hands thy bruifing Irons of wrath,
That they may cruft downe with a heavy fall,
The worping Helmes of our Aderuaries:
Make vs thy minifters of Chaftement,
That we may praife thee in thy victoary:
To thee I do commend my watchfull foule,
Ere I let fall the windowes of mine eyes:
Sleeping, and waking, oh defend me fyll.

Enter the Ghost of Prince Edward, Sane to Henry the fast.

Gh. to Ri. Let me fit heavy on thy foule to morrow:
Think how thou flab'ft me in my prime of youth
At Yorkesbury: difpaire therefore, and dye.
Ghoft to Rich. Be earefull Rich mond,
For the wronged Souls
Of butcher'd Princes, fight in thy behalf:
King Henries idle Richmond comforts thee.

Enter the Ghost of Henry the fast.

Ghoft. When I was mortal, my Annointed body
By thee was puncted full of holes:
Think to the Tower, and me: difpaire, and dye,

Harry the fast, bids thee difpaire, and dye.

To Rich. -Vrrous and holy be thou Conqueror:
Harry that prophesied thou shouldst be King,
Dyes comfort thee in Depe: Lieve, and Bournth.
Enter the Ghost of Clarence.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy in thy soule to morrow. I that wass'd to death with Falshome Wine; Poor Clarence by thy guile betray'd to death; To morrow in the battell thinkes on me, And fall thy edgelesse Sword, dispaire and dye.

To Richm. Thou off-spring of the house of Lancastor The wronged heyes of Yorke do pray for thee, Good Angels guard thy battell, Luue and Flourish.

Enter the Ghosts of Rivers, Gray, and Vaughan.

Riu. Let me sit heavy in thy soule to morrow, Rivers, that dye'd at Pomfret; dispaine, and dye. Gray. Thinkes vpon Gray, and let thy soule dispaire. Vaughan. Thinkes vpon Vaughan, and with guilty fear Let fall thy Lance, dispaire and dye.

All to Richm. Awake, And thinke on our wrongs in Richards Bofome, Will conuer him. Awake, and win the day. Enter the Ghost of Lord Haftings.

Armes, fight, and conuer, for faire Englands sake. Enter the Ghosts of the two long Princes.

Ghofts. Dreame on thy Coouns.

Enter the Ghost of Anne, the Wife.

Ghoft to Rich. Richard, thy Wife, That wretched Anne thy Wife, That neuer slept a quiet houre with thee, Now fille thy sleepe with perturbations, To morrow in the Battell, thinke on me, And fall thy edgelesse Sword, dispaire and dye: Ghoft to Richm. Thou quiet soule, Sleepe thou a quiet sleepe: Dreame of Successe, and Happy Victory, Thy Adversaries Wife doth pray for thee.

Enter the Ghost of Buckingham.

Ghoft to Rich. The first was I That help'd thee to the Crowne: The last was I that felt thy Tyranny. O, in the Battell thinke on Buckingham, And dye in terror of thy gullinesse, Dreame on, dreame on, of bloody deeds and death, Fainting dispaire; dispairing yield thy breath. Ghoft to Richm. I dyed for hope Ere I could lend thee Ayle;

But cheere thy heart, and be thou not dismayd: God, and good Angels fight on Richmonds side, And Richard fall in height of all his pride.

Richard startts out of his dreame.

What? do I feare my Selfe? There's none eles eby, Richard loves Richard, that is, I am 1. Is there a Murtherer heere? No; Yes, I am: Then flye; What from my Selfe? Great reafon: why? Left I Runcenge. What? my Selfe vpon my Selfe? Alaske, I loue my Selfe. Wherefore? For any good That I my Selfe, hauue done vnto my Selfe? O no. Alas, I rather hate my Selfe, For hatefull Deeds committed by my Selfe. I am a villain: yet I lye, I am not. Foole, of thy Selfe speake well: Foole, do not flatter. My Confeience hath a thousand feuereall Tongues, And euery Tongue brings in a feauereall Tale, And euerie Tale condemnes me for a villain; Periuris, in the highes Degree, Murtherer, ferne murtherer, in the dyer degree, All feuereall finnes, all vs'd in each degree, Throng all to'th'Barre, crying all, Guilty, Guilty. I shal dispaire, there is no Creature loues me; And if I die, no soule shall pitte me. Nay, wherefore should they? Since that I my Selfe, Findes in my Selfe, no pitie to my Selfe. Me thought the Soules of all that I had murther'd Came to my Tent, and euery one did threat To morrowes vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliffes.

Rat. My Lord.

King. Who's there?

Rat. Ratcliffs my Lord, 'tis I: the early Village Cock Hath twice done falutation to the Morne, Your Friends are vp, and buckler on their Armour.

King. O Ratcliffs, I feare, I feare. Rat. Nay good my Lord, be not afraid of Shadows. King. By the Apoftle Paul, shadows to night Have stroke more terror to the soul of Richard, Then can the Subtance of ten thousand Souldiers Armed in profe, and led by shallow Richmond. 'Tis not yet necer day. Come go with me, Vnder our Tents lie play the Cafe-dropper, To heare if any means to shrine from me.

Exeunt Richard & Ratcliffs.

Enter the Lords to Richmond sitting in his Tent.

Richm. Good morrow Richmond.

Rich. Cry mercy Lords, and watchfull Gentlemen, That you have tane a tardie slaggard heere & Lords. How have you flept my Lord? Rich. The streaked sleepe, And faireit loading Dreames, That euers entred in a drowfie head, Haue I fince your departure had my Lords. Me thought their Soules, whole bodies Rich.murther'd, Came to my Tent, and cried on vs: I promife you my Heart is very locond, In the remembrance of to faire a dreame, How farre into the Morning is it Lords?

Lor. Vpon the stroke of foure.

Rich. Why then 'tis time to Arme, and give direccion. His Oration to his Souldiers.

More then I hauue faid, loving Countrmen, The leyfure and inforcement of the time Forbidden to dwell vpou: yet remember this,
The Life and death of Richard the Third.

God, and our good cause, fight upon our side,
The Prayers of holy Saints and wronged Soules,
Like high rear'd Bulwarke, stand before our Faces,
(Richard except) those whom we fight against,
Had rather have vs win, then him they follow.
For, what is he they follow? Truly Gentlemen,
A bloody Tyrant, and a Homicide:
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made meanes to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the meanes to help him:
A base foule Stone, made precious by the foyle.
Of En gland Chaires, where he is falsely set:
One that hath euer beene Gods Enemy.
Then if you fight against Gods Enemy,
God will in justice warde you as his Soldiers.
If you do fwear to put a Tyrant downe,
You sleepe in peace, the Tyrant being faire:
If you do fight against your Countries Foes,
Your Countries Far shall pay your paines the byre.
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the Conquerors.
If you do free your Children from the Sword,
Your Childrens Children quits it in your Age.
Then in the name of God and all these rights,
Advance your Standards, draw your willing Swords.
For me, the ranfome of my bold attempt,
Shall be this cold Corpes on the earth's cold face.
But if I thrive, the gaine of my attempt,
The leaf of you shall have his part thereof.
Sound Drummes and Trumpets boldely, and cheerfullly,
God, and Saint George, Richmond, and Victoria.

Enter King Richard, Ratcliffe, and Catesby.

K. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond? Rat. That he was never trained in Armes.
King. He faid the truth: and what said Surrey then?
Rat. He fmit'd and faid, the better for our purpose.
King. He was in the right, and so indeed it is.
Tell the clocke there. Clock strikes.
Give me a Kalender: Who faw the Sunne to day?
Rat. Not I my Lord.
King. Then he fignifies to shew: for by the Book
He fould have brau'd the Eft and unhore ago,
A blacke day will be to somebody. Ratcliffe.
Rat. My Lord.
King. The Sun will not be fene to day,
The sky doth frowne, and lowe vpon our Army.
I would thee dewy teares were from the ground.
Not fline to day? Why, what is that to me?
More then to Richmond? For the felfe-time Heauen
That frownes on me, lookes fadely vpon him.

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Arme, arme, my Lord: the foe vaunts in the field.
King. Come, battle, battle. Capitifon my horfe.
Call vp Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power,
I will leade forth my Soldiers to the plaine,
And thus my Battell shall be ordered.
My forward shall be drawn in length,
Consifting equally of Horfe and Foot:
Our Archers shall be placed in the mid'lt;
John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earle of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of the Foot and Horfe. They thus directed, we will flow

In the maine Battell, whole puifance on either side
Shall be well-winged with our cheereft Horfe:
This, and Saint George to boote.
What think't thou Norfolk.
Nor. A good direfion warlike Soueralgne,
This fould I on my Tent this morning.
Lucy of Norfolk, he not fo bold,
For Dickyn thy mater is bought and feld.
King. A thing defeul'd by the Enemy.
Go Gentlemen, euer man to his Charge,
Let not our babbling Dreams affright our Soules:
For Confeience is a word that Cowards vfe,
Deuil'd at firft to keep the strong in awe,
Our strong armes be our Confeience, Swords our Law.
March on, joyne bravely, let vs too'p bell mell,
If not to heauen, then hand in hand to Hell.
What fhall I fay more then I have Infer'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withall,
A fort of Vagabonds, Rascal's, and Run-awayes,
A fcaum of Britaines, and base Lackey Peants,
Whom their o're-cloyed Country vomits forth
To defperate Adventures, and affurd Deftruction.
You fleeping fable, they bring you to vntref.
You having Lands, and brib'd with beaureous wives,
They would reftraine the one, diftaince the other,
And who doth leade them, but a paify Fellow?
Long kept in Britaine at our Mothers cift,
A Milke-top, one that neuer in his life
Felt fo much cold, as over foakes in Snow;
Let's whipe thofe ftraglers o'the Seas againe,
Leath hence-theffe ouer-weening Raggis of France,
Thefe famb'ds Beggers, weary of their lies,
Who (but for dreaming on this fond exploit)
For want of meanes (poore Rats) had hang'd themfelves.
If we be conquered, let men conquer vs,
And not thefe barfard Britaines, whom our Fathers
Have in their owne Land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd,
And on Record, left them the heires of flame.
Shall thefe enjoy our Landes? Iye with our Wives?
Rath all our daughters? Drum affare off
Hearke, I hear thee Drummce,
Right Gentlemen of England, fight boldly yeomen,
Draw Archers draw your Arrows to the head,
Spurre your proud Horfes hard, and ride in blood,
Amaze the welkin with your broken fnaues.
Enter a Meflenger.
What fayes Lord Stanley, will he bring his power?
Mef. My Lord, he doth deny to come.
King. Off with his fonne George's head.
Nor. My Lord, the Enemy is fett the March:
After the batelle, let George Stanley dye.
King. A thoufand hearts are great within my bosom.
Advance our Standards, fet vpon our Foes,
Our Ancient word of Courage, faire S. George
Infpire vs with the fpine of fiery Dragons:
Vpon them, Victoria fits on our helps.

Alarum, precoursons. Enter Catesby.

Cat. Refcue my Lord of Norfolk,
Nor. Refuce, Refuce:
The King en/server'd more wonders then a man,
Daring in oppofite to every danger:
His horfe isflaine, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death:
Refuce faire Lord, or elfe the day is loft.

Alarums. t 2 Enter
Enter Richard.

Rich. A Horse, a Horse, my Kingdom for a Horse.

Cost. Withdraw my Lord, I cleave you to a Horse

Rich. Slay, I have let my life upon a cait,

And I will stand the hazard of the Dye:

I thinke there be fixe Richmondes in the field,

Flie haue I flaine to day, in stead of him.

A Horse, a Horse, my Kingdom for a Horse.

Retreat, Enter Richard and Richmond, they fight, Richard is slain.

Rich. God, and your Armes

Be prais'd Victorious Friends;

The day is ours, the bloody Dogge is dead.

Der. Courageous Richmond,

Well haft thou acquit thee: Loe,

Here stand long vifurped Royalties,

From the dead Temples of this bloody Wretch,

Hauie I pluck'd off, to grace thy Browes withall.

Weare it, and make much of it.

Rich. Great God of Heaven, say Amen to all.

But tell me, is yong George Stanley living?

Der. He is my Lord, and safe in Leicester Towne,

Whither (if you please) we may withdraw vs.

Rich. What men of name are slaine on either side?

Der. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord Ferris,

Rich. Interre their Bodies, as become their Births,

Proclame a pardon to the Soldiers fled,

That in submision will returne to us,

And then as we haue tane the Sacrament,

We will withe the White Rose, and the Red.

Smile Heaven vpon this faire Conivction,

That long haue from'd vpon their Enmity:

What Traitor heares me, and sayes not Amen?

England hath long beene mad, and scarred her felse;

The Brother blindly shied the Brothers blood;

The Father rashly slaughtered his owne Sonne;

The Sonne compot'd, beene Butcher to the Sire;

All this diuided Yorke and Lancyler;

Divided, in their dire Diision.

Onow, let Richmond and Elizabeth,

The true Succeeders of each Royall House,

By Gods faire ordinance, conyone together:

And let thy Heires (God if thy will be so)

Enrich the time to come, with Smooth-face'd Peace,

With smiling Plenty, and faire Prosperous dayes.

Abate the edge of Traitors, Gracious Lord,

That would reduce these bloody dayes againe,

And make poore England wepe in Streams of Blood;

Let them not live to talle this Lands increase,

That would with Trefason, wound this faire Landes peace.

Now Ciull wounds are flop'd, Peace liues azen;

That she may long liue heere, God say, Amen.

Exeunt
The Famous History of the Life of King HENRY the Eight.

THE PROLOGUE.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk at one door. At the other,
the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord
Aunguaynry.

Buckingham.

Ood morrow, and well met. How haue ye done
Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank ye Grace:
Since last I saw in France, I haue
Staid me a Prisoner in my Chamber, when Thofe Sunnes of Glory, thofe two Lights of Men
Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde,
I was then present, saw them face to face on Horsebacke,
Beheld them, when they lighted, how they charg'd
In their Embracemest, as they grew together,
Which had they,
What foure Thron'd ones could haue weigh'd
Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the while
I was my Chambers Prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory : Men might say
Till this time Pompe was singe, but now married
To one above it felle. Each following day
Became the next days matter, till the last
Made former Wonders, it's. To day the French,
All Cinquant all in Gold, like Heathen Gods
Shone downe the England ; and to morrow, they Made Britaine, India : Every man that side,
Shew'd like a Mine. Their Dwarfish Pages were
As Cherubins, all gillt : the Madams too,
Not vs'd to toyle, did almost sweat to bear
The Pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them, as a Painting. Now this Maske
Was cry'de incomparable : and then'nfing night
Made it a Poole, and Begger. The two Kings
Equal in lusire, were now beli, now worl.
As presence did presende them : Him in eye,
Still him in praine, and being pretendent both,
'Twas said they faw but one, and no Discerner
Durst wagge his Tongue in censure, when thefe Sunnes
(For so they phrase'em) by their Heralds challenge'd
The Noble Spirits to Arms, they did performe

Beyond
Beyond thoughts Compare, that former fabulous Storie
Being now seene, possible enough, got credit
That such was believed.

Buc. Oh you go farre.

Nor. As I belong to worship and affect
In Honor, Honesty, the tract of eu'ry thing,
Would by a good Discouer looke some life,
Which Actions felt, was tongue too,

Buc. All was Royall,
To the dispoping of it sought rebell'd,
Order gave each thing view. The Office did
Difinelly his full Function: who did guide,
I meant who set the Body, and the Limbs
Of this great Sport together?

Nor. As you guest!
One certe, that promises no Element
In such a businesse.

Buc. I pray you who, my Lord?

Nor. All this was ordered by the good Discretion
Of the right Reverend Cardinal of York.

Buc. The duell feed him: No mans Pye is freed
From his Ambitious figure. What had he
To do in those fierce Vanities? I wonder,
That such a Keene can with his very bulkle
Take vp the Rayes o'th'beneficial Sun,
And keepe it from the Earth.

Nor. Surely Sir,
There's in him stufle, that put's him to these ends:
For being not prop by Auncelly, whose grace
Chalkes Suceesion their way; nor call'd vppon
For high feats done to'th'Crowne: neither Allied
To eminent Affilnants; but Spider-like
Out of his Selfe-drawing Web. O glues vs note,
The force of his owne merit makes his way
A guilt that heauen glues for him, which buyes
A place next to the King.

Nor. I cannot tell
What Heaven hath given him: let some Grauer eye
Pierce into that, but I can see his Pride
Peepe through each part of him: whence ha's he that,
If not from Hell? The Diuell is a Niggard,
Or ha's given all before, and he begins
A new Hell in himselfe.

Buc. Why the Diuell,
Vpon this French going out, tooke he vp him
(Without the priuity o'th'King) t'appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes vp the File
Of all the Gentry; for the moSt part fuch
To whom as great a Charge, as little Honor
He meant to lay upon: and his owne Letter
The Honourable Board of Councell, out
Muff fetch him in; he Papers.

Nor. I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the leaf, that have
By this, fo ficken'd their Eftates, that neuer
They shall abound as formerly.

Buc. O many
Have broke their backes with laying Manners on'tem
For this great Journey. What did this vanity
But minifter communication of
A most poore issue.

Nor. Greeningly I thinkes,
The Peace betweene the French and vs, not valewes
The Coft that did conclude it.
Buc. Euerie man,
After the hideous storme that follow'd, was
A thing Infipr'd, and not confulting, broke
Into a generall Prophesie; That this Tempeft
Dashing the Garment of this Peace, abounded
The fadine breach on't.

Nor. Which is badded out,
For France hath flaw'd the League, and hath attach'd
Our Merchants goods at Burdeux.

Alor. Is it therefore Th'ambassador is flenc'd?

Nor. Marry it's.

Alor. A proper Title of a Peace, and purchas'd
At a superfious rate.

Buc. Why all this Businesse
Our Reverend Cardinal carried.

Nor. Like it your Grace,
The State takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you, and the Cardinal. I aduise you
(And take it from a heart, that wishes towards you Honor, and plentiful safety) that you readie
The Cardinals Malice, and his Potency
Together; To consider further, that
What his high Hatred would effect, wants not
A Minister in his Power. You know his Nature,
That he's Reuengefull; and I know, his Sword
Hath a sharpe edge: It's long, and 't is not to be
It reaches farre, and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bofome vp my counsell,
You'll finde it wholeforme. Loe, where comes that Rock
That I aduise your cunning.

Enter Cardinall Wolsey, the Purse borne before him, certaine of the Guard, and two Secretaries with Papers: The Cardinal in his passidge, fixed his eye on Buckingsham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdaire.

Car. The Duke of Buckingham Surveyor? Ha?
Where's his Examination?

Ser. Heere fo pleafe you.
Car. Is he in person, ready?
Ser. I, please your Grace.

Car. Well, we shall then know more, & Buckingham
Shall leffen this bigge looke.

Exeunt Cardinall, and his Train.

Buc. This Butchers Curre is venom'd-mouth'd, and I
Haue not the power to muzzle him, therefore belt
Not wake him in his fumer. A Beggers booke,
Out-worths a Nobles blood.

Nor. What are you chaff'd?
Aske God for Temperance, that's th'appliance only
Which your disease requires.

Buc. I read in's looks
Matter against me, and his eye requir'd
Me as his ables obiect, at this instant
He bores me with some tricke; He's gone to'th'King:
Ie follow, and out-fare him.

Nor. Stay my Lord,
And let your Reafon with your Choller question
What 'dis you go about: to climb steepè hills
Requires flow pace at first. Anger is like
A full hot Horfe, who being allow'd his way
Selfe-mettle tyres him: Not a man in England
Can aduise me like you: Be to your felloe,
As you would to your Friend.

Buc. Ile to the King,
And from a mouth of Honor, quite cry downe

This
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

This I suppose fellows intolerance; or proclaim, There's difference in no perfon.

Nor. Be adult'd; Heat not a Furnace for your foe so hot That it do finge your felfe. We may out-runne Ben by violent twirls that which we run at; And loco by outer-running: know you not, The fire that mounts the liquor till run ore, In feeming to augment it, wafis it: be adult'd; I lay againe there is no English Soul More stronger to direct you then your felfe; If with the tap of reafon you would quench, Or but allay the fire of paflion.

Back. Sir, I am thankfull to you, and Hee along By your precept: but this top-proud fellow, Whom I did from the fnows of France, you not, But from fincere motions, by Intelligence, And profees as exclam'd as Founts in July, when Wee fee each grainge of grauelle: I doe know To be corrupt and trefonous.

Mr. Let my Count trefonous.

Back. Too bold King: He fay'd, & make my vouch as strong As shore of Rockes attend, This holy Foxe, Or Wolf- or both (for he is equall rauous As he is subtle, and as prone to milchiefs, As c - to perform') his minde, and place Intelling one another, yea reciprocally, Only to fhew his pompe, as well in France, As here at home, fuggets the King our Mafter To this laft couftly Treaty: Th'enterview, That swallowing fo much treafeie, and like a glaffe Did break the f'rench-wrenching.

Nor. Faith, and fo it did. Buck. Pray giue me favour Sir: This cunning Cardinal.

The Articles o'th Combination drew As himfelf pleads'pand they were ratified As he cride thus let be, to much end, As give a Crutch to th'dead. But our Count-Cardinal Has done this, and tis well for worthy Wolsey (Who cannot erre) he did it. Now this follows, (Which as I take it, is a kind of Puppie To th'old dam Trefon) Charles the Emperor, Vnder pretence to fee the Queene his Aunt, (For twice indeed his colour, but he came To whiliper Wolsey)here makes visitation, His fears were that the Interview betwixt England and France, might through their amity Breed him fome prejudice; for from this League, Peep'd him that men'd him. Prifon Deale with our Cardinal, and as I troa Which I doe well; for I am furc the Emporeur Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his Suit was granted Ere it was ask'd. But when the way was made And pau'd with gold of the Emperor thus defir'd, Tha. he would pleafe to alter the Kings coure, And break the forefai'd peace. Let the King know (As foone he fhall by me) that thus the Cardinal Does buy and fell his Honour as he pleaeis, And for his owne advantage.

Nor. I am forry To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something miftaken in't.

Buck. No, not a fallable: I doe pronounce him in that very shape He shall appear in prose.

Enter Brandon, a Sergeant at Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Brandon. Your Office Sergeant: execute it.

Sergeant. Sir, My Lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earle Of Harford, Stafford and Northampton, I Arreft thee of High Treafon, in the name Of our most Soueraigne King.

Buck. Lo you my Lord, The net has alane upon me, I shall perife Vnder deute, and prathlon: Bran. I am forry, To fee you tane from liberty, to looke on The buifines prefent. Tis his Highnes pleasure You hall to th'Tower.

Buck. It will helpe me nothing To plead mine Innocence, for the dyes is on me Which makes my white part, black. The will of Heauen be done in this and all things: I obey. O my Lord Abargynge: Fare you well, Bran. Nay, he muft beare you company. The King is pleas'd you hall to th'Tower, till you know How he determines further.

Abur. As the Duke fai'd. The will of Heauen be done, and the Kings pleafure By me obey'd.

'Bran. Here is a warrant from The King, t'attach Lord Mountacute, and the Bodies Of the Dukes Confeffor, John de la Car, One Gilbert Pecky, his Counseller.

Buck. So, fo: Thefe are the limbs o'th Plot: no more I hope.

Bra. A Monke o'th Charterue.

Buck. My Surveyor is faffe: The ore-great Cardinal Hath fhew'd him gold; my life is fpand already: I am the shadow of poore Buckingham.

Whofe Figure even this Instant Clow'd was put on, By Darkning my clere Sunne,My Lords farewell. Exe.

Scena Secunda.

Cornets. Enter King Henry, leaning on the Cardinals fouldier, the Nobles, and Sir Thomas Leeve: the Cardinal places himfelfe under the Kings fete on bis right fide.

King. My life it felfe, and the beft heart of it, Thanks you for this great care: I flood 'tbe'tellent Of a full-charg'd confideratie, and glue thanks To you that show'd it. Let be cold before vs That Gentleman of Buckingham, in perfon, I heare him his confessions lufitife, And point by point the Trefons of his Mafter, He hall againe relate. A noife within crying roones for the Queene, refu'd by the Duke of Norfolke. Enter the Queene, Norfolke and Suffolk the kneale. King rifes from his Stand, takes her up, kifles and placetb her by him.

Queene. Nay, we muft longer kneale; I am a Suitor. King. Arise, and take place by vs; haife your Suit Neuer name to vs; you haue halfe our power :
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

The other moitly ere you aske is gluen,
Repeat your will, and take it.
Queen. Thanke your Maiesty,
That you would loose your lesse, and in that loue
Not unconsidered loose your Honour, nor
The dignity of your Office; is the poynct
Of my Petition.
King. Lady mine proceed.
Queen. I am solicited not by a few,
And tho' of true condition; That your Subiects
Are in great grievance: There have beene Commissions
Sent downe among 'em, which hath flaw'd the heart
Of all their Loyalties; wherein, although
My good Lord Cardinal, they vent reproches
Most bitterly on you, as pouter on
Of these exactions: yet the King, our Maister (not Whole Honor Heauen shield from folle; even he escapes
Language vnamannerly, such which breaks the Fides of loyalty, and almost appears
In lowd Rebellion.
Nef. Not almost appears,
It doth appears; for, vpon these Taxations,
The Clothiers all not able to maintaine
The many to them longing, have put off
The Spinners, Carders, Fullers, Weaver, who
Vnfit for other life, compelled by hunger
And lack of other meanes, in desperate manner
Daring th'euent too th'eeeth, are all in vprore,
And danger ferues among them.
King. Taxation?
Wherein? and what Taxation? My Lord Cardinal,
You that are blast'd for it alike with vs,
Know you of this Taxation?
Card. Plesse you Sir,
I know but of a single part in ought
Pertaines to th'State; and front but in that File
Where others tell steps with me.
Queen. No, my Lord?
You know no more then others? But you frame
Things that are knowne alike, which are not wholefome
To thofe which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions
(Whereof my Soueraine would have note) they are Most pelliment to th'hearing, and to beare 'em,
The Backe is Sacrifice to th'load; They say
They are deuid'd by you, or else you suffer
Too hard an explanation.
Nef. Still Excuses:
The nature of it, in what kinde let's know,
Is this Excusion?
Queen. I am much too venturous
In tempering of your patience, but am boldned
Vnder your promis'd pardon. The Subiects grope
Comes through Commissions, which compels from each
The fast part of his Subsistance, to be leuied
Without delay; and the pretence for this
Is nam'd, your warres in Franccethis makes bold mouthes,
Tongues spit their dutes out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegience in them; their curfes now
Lie where their prayers did; and it's come to paffes,
This tractable obedience is a Slave
To each incendi Will: I would your Highness
Would give it quicker consideration; for
There is no primer bafenefe.
King. By my life,
This is against our pleasuere.
Card. And for me,
I have no further gone in this, then by
A single voice, and that not paff me, but
By learned approbation of the Judges: If I am
Traduce'd by ignorant Tongues, which neither know
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The Chronicles of my doing: Let me say,
'Tis but the fate of Place, and the rough Drake
That Vertue must goe through: we muft not flint
Our necessary actions, in the feare
To cope malicious Cenfurers, which ever,
As ra'non Fishes doe a Veffell follow
That is new trim'd; but benefit no further
Then vaine longing. What we oft doe beft,
By ficke Interpreters (once weake ones) is
Not ours, nor not allow'd; what worth, as oft
Hitting a groffer quality, is cride vp
For our beft Act: if we shall stand still,
In feare our motion will be mock'd, or carp'd at,
We should take roote here, where we fit;
or fit State-Statues overly.
King. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themsefles from feare:
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be feard. Have you a Presidet
Of this Commissions? I believe, not any,
We must not read our Subiects from our Lawes,
And flicke them in our Will. Sixt part of each?
A trembling Contribution; why we take
From every Tree, lop, barke, and part o' th' timber:
And though we leave it with a roote thus hackt,
The Ayre will drink the Sap. To every County
Where this is question'd, send our Letters, with Free pardon to each man that has deny'd the
The force of this Commissions: pray looke too;
I put it to your care.
Card. A word with you.
Let there be Letters writ to every Shire,
Of the Kings peace and pardon: the greewed Commons
Hardly conceive of me. Let it be noist'd,
That through our Interceffion, this Resoueement
And pardon comes: I shall amon aduise you
Further in the proceeding.
Enter Secret.
Queen. In my forry, that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.
King. It grieues many:
The Gentleman is Learnde, and a moit rare Speaker,
To Nature none more bound; his traying fuch,
That he may furnish and instruct great Teachers,
And neuer fecke for ayd out of himselfe: yet fee,
When thefe so Noble benefices atall protes
Not well dilip'd, the mind growing once corrupt,
They turne to vicious formes, ten times more uygly
Then euer they were faire. This man fo compleat,
Who was enrold montefonders and when we
Almoft with raun'd lifting,could not finde
His hour of speech, a minute: He,(my Lady)
Hath into monfrous habits put the Graces
That once were his, and is become as blacke,
As if beem'd in hell. Sit by Vs,you shall heare
(This was his Gentleman in trufty) of him
Things to strike Honour fad. Bid him recount
The Forre-named prafifies, whereof
We cannot feele too little, heare too much.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Card. Stand forth, & with bold spirit relate what you
Must like a careful Subject have collect
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

Kin. Speake freely.

Sur. First, it was visuall with him; every day
It would infin'd his Speech: That if the King
Should without issue dye; he'd carr it fo
To make the Sceptrer his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his Sonne in Law,
Lord Aubergary, to whom by oath he menac'd
Reuenge upon the Cardinal.

Card. Please your Highness note
This dangerous conception in this point,
Not frended by his wish to your High perfon;
His will is most malignant, and it stretches
Beyond you to your friends.

Queen. My learn'd Lord Cardinal,
Dehier all with Charity.

Kin. Speake on;
How grounded hee his Title to the Crowne
Upon our faile; to this point halft thou heard him,
At any time speake ought.

Sur. He was brought to this,
By a vaine Prophesie of Nicholas Hentes.

Kin. What was that Hentes?

Sur. Sir, a Charetrav Fryer,
His Confeffion, who fed him every minute
With words of Souverainity,

Kin. How know'ft thou this?

Sur. Not long before your Hignesse sped to France,
The Duke being at the Rofe, within the Parifh
Saint Laurence Pouling, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners,
Concerning the French Journey. I replide,
Men feare the French would prove paffidious
To the Kings danger: presently, the Duke
Said, 'twas the fafe indeed; and that he doubted
I would prove the verity of certaine words
Spoke by a holy Monke, that oft, fayes he,
Hath fent to me, warning me to permit
Iohn de la Car, my Chaplaine, a choyce bowre
To heare from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after vnder the Commissions Seale,
He folemnly had sworn, that what he spoke
My Chaplaine to no Creatur living, but
To me, should vter, with demure Confidence,
This pausingly esfu'de; neither the King, nor's Heyres
(Tell you the Duke) shall prosper, bid him thrive
To the love of the Commonalty, the Duke
Shall governe England.

Queer. If I know you well,
You were the Dukes Surcuror, and loft your Office
On the complaint o'th' Tenants; take good heed
You charge not in your fpicene a Noble perfon,
And fpoke your nobler Soules, I fay, take heed;
Yes, heartily befecch you.

Kin. Let him on: Goe forward.

Sur. On my Soul, He speake but truth.
I told my Lord the Duke, by th'Diels illufions
The Monke might be deceu'd, and that twas dangerous
For this to ruminante on this fo faire, vainill
It forg'd him fome defect, which being beleeu'd
It was much like to doe: He anfw'er'd, Tuft,
It can doe me no damage; adding further,
That had the King in his haff Sicknefe fuld,
The Cardinals and Sir Thomas Lowell heads
Should have gone off.

Kin. Ha? What, fo rancke! Ah, ha,
There's mischiefe in this man; can't choy fay further?

Sur. I can my Lidge.

Kin. Proceed.

Sur. Being at Greenwich,
After your Highnesse had reprou'd the Duke
About Sir William Blumer. (unt,

Kin. I remember of cluch a time, being my swor fer-
The Duke retel'n'd him his. But on: what hence?

Sur. If (quoth he) I for this has beene committed,
As to the Tower, I thought; I would have plaids
The Part my Father meant to act upon
Th'Bwper Richard, who being at Salisbury,
Made fit to come in's prefence; which if granted,
(As he made feemance of his duty) would
Hawe put his knife into him.

Kin. A Great Tryal.

Card. Now Madam, may your Highnes lieue in freedome,
And this man out of Prifon.

Queem. God mend all. (fay't?)

Kin. Ther's somethings more would out of thee, what

Sur. After the Duke his Father, with the knife
He stretch'd him, and with one hand on his dagger,
Another spread on's breath, mounting his eye's,
He did discharge a horrible Oath, whose tenor
Was, were he euill y'd, he would oustge
His Father, by as much as a performance
Do's an irreproachable

Kin. There's his period,
To heath his knife in vs: he is attach'd,
Call him to prefent tryall: if he may
Finde mercy in the Law, 'tis his; if none
Let him not feek't of vs: By day and night
Hec's Trayer to th' height. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter L. Chamberlaine, and L. Sandys.

L. Ch. Is't poftible the speel of Francie should luggle
Men into fuch strange myriferyes?

L. Sand. New cuflome, line
Though they be neuer fo ridiculous,
(Nay let 'em be vnmanly) yet are follow'd.

L. Ch. As farre as I fee, all the good our English
Have got by the late Voyage, is but meerely
A fit or two o'th face, (but they are thewed ones)
For when they hold 'em, you would fware direclty
Their very notes had been Councillours
To Popin or Clotherius, they keepe State fo.

L. Sand. They haue all new legis,
And lame ones; one would take it
That never fee 'em pace before, the Spauen
A Spring-halt rain'd among 'em.

L. Ch. Death my Lord,
Their clothes are after fuch a Pagan cut too;
That sure th'hau'e worne out Ch. fendemehow now?
What newes, Sir Thomas Lowell?

Enter Sir Thomas Lowell.

Lowell. Faith my Lord,
I hear of none but the new Proclamation,
That's clapt upon the Court Gate.

L. Cham.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Scena Quarta.

Hobeys, A small Table under a State for the Cardinals, a longer Table for the Guests. Then Enter Anne Bullen, and divers other Ladies, & Gentlemen, as Guests at one Door, at another Door enter Sir Henry Guilford.

S. Hen. Gulif. Ladies, A general welcome from his Grace Salutes ye all: This Night he dedicates To faire content, and you: None heere he hopes In all this Noble Beay, he hath brought with her One care abroad: hee would have all as merry: As first, good Company, good wine, good welcome, Can make good people.

Enter L. Chamberlaines L. Sands, and Louell. O my Lord, y'are tardy; The very thought of this faire Company, Clap wings to me. Cham. You are young Sir Harry Guilford. Sir Thomas Lousell, had the Cardinal But halfe my Lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should finde a running Banket, ere they refert, I thinkke would better please 'em: by my life, They are a sweet society of faire ones. Lou. O that your Lordship were but now Confeffor, To one or two of them. San. I would I were, They should finde eafe penance. Lou. Faith how eafe? San. As eafe as a downe bed would affoord it. Cham. Sweet Ladies will it please you Sir Harry Place you that fide, Ie take the charge of this His Grace is entring. Nay, you must not freeze, Two women plac'd together, makes cold weather: My Lord Sands, you are one will keepe 'em waking: Pray fit betweene those Ladies. San. By my faith, And thanke your Lordship: by your leave sweet Ladies, If I chance to talke a little wide, forgive me: I had it from my Father. An. Balf. Was he mad Sir? San. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in loue too; But he would bite none, if I as I doe now, He would Kifle you Twenty with a breath. Cham. Well fald my Lord: So now y'are fairely feated: Gentlemen, The penance lyes on you; if these faire Ladies Paffe away Browning. San. For my little Care, Let me alone.

Hobeys. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, and take his State. Card. Y'are welome my faire Guest, that noble Lady Or Gentleman that is not freely merry Is not my Friend. This to conforme my welcome, And to you all good health. San. Your Grace is Noble, Let me have such a Bowle may hold my thankes, And once Ie to much talking. Card. My Lord Sands,
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbours:
Ladies you are not merry; Gentlemen,
Whoe fault is this?
Sun. The red wine first must rise
In their faire cheeks my Lord, then wee shall have 'em,
Talkie vs to silence.
An. B. You are a merry Camifer
My Lord Sainds.
Sun. Yes, if I make my play:
Heere's to your Ladiship, and pledge it Madam:
For vs to fuch a thing.
An. B. You cannot throw me.
Drum and Trumpet, Chambers disband'd.
Sun. I told your Grace, they would take anon.
Card. What's that?
Cham. Look out there, some of ye.
Card. What warlike voyce,
And to what end is this? Nay, Ladies, fear not;
By all the lawes of Warre y're prouided.

Enter a Servant.
Cham. How now, what's that?
Serv. A noble troupe of Strangers,
For so they seeme; th'haue left their Barge and landed,
And hither make, as great Embassadors
From foreigne Princes.
Card. Good Lord Chamberlaine,
Goe, give 'em welcome; you can speake the French tongue
And pray receiue 'em Nobly, and conduct 'em
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty
Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him.
All rise, and Tables remov'd.
You haue now a broken Banket, but wee ll mend it.
A good digestion to you all; and once more
I shoue a welcome on yee: welcome all.

Haynes. Enter King and others at Masters, habited like Sheepboards, efted by the Lord Chamberlaine. They paffe directly before the Cardinall, and graciefully falute him.
A noble Company: what are their pleasures?
Cham. Because they speake no English, thus they praid
To tell your Grace: That hauing heard by fame
Of this so Noble and so faire assembly,
This night to meet heere they could doe no lesse,
(Out of the great respect they heare to beauty)
But leaue their Flockes, and vnder your faire Conduct
Craue leaue to view thse Ladies, and entreat
An houre of Revels with 'em.
Card. Say, Lord Chamberlaine,
They have done my poore houfe grace:
For which I pay 'em a thousand thankes,
And pray 'em take their pleasures.
Cham. Lady's, King and An Bullen.
King. The fairest hand I ever touch'd: O Beauty,
Till now I never knew thee.

Mufick. Dance.

Card. My Lord.
Cham. Your Grace.
Card. Pray tell 'em thus much from me:
There should be one amongst 'em by his perfon
More worthy this place then my selfe, to whom
(If I but knew him) with my loue and duty
I would surrender it.

Cham. I will my Lord.
Card. What say they?
Of divers witnesses, which the Duke deift'd
To him brought what voice to his face;
At which appear'd against him, his Surveyor
Sir Gilbert Pech, his Chancellor, and John Care,
Confessor to him, with that Dieul Monke,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.
2. That was he
That fed him with his Prophedies.
1. The same,
All these accord'd him strongly, which he fain'd
Would have fhung from him but indeed he could not;
And so his Peers upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high Treffion. Much
He fpoke, and learnedly for life: But all
Was either pitted in, or forgotten.
2. After all this, how did he bear him felfe? 1. When he was brought apon to ch' Bar, to heare
His Knell rung out, his Judgement, he was flr'd
With fuch an Agony, he fweat extremely,
And fomthing fpoke in choller, ill, and hafty:
But he fell to his fafety, and was
In all the reftr frow'd a moft Noble patience.
2. I doe not thinke he fears death.
1. Sure he does not,
He never was fo womanish, the caufe
He may a little grieue at.
2. Certainly.
The Cardinall is the end of this,
1. Thus likely,
By all confecraters: First Kildares Attendance;
Then Deputy of Ireland, who remond'd
Earle Surrey, was fent thither, and in hait too,
Least he should helpe his Father.
2. That tricke of State
Was a deepe enonious one,
1. At his returne,
No doubt he will require it; this is noted
(And generally) who euer the King favours,
The Cardinall infantly will finde imployment,
And fare enough from Court too.
2. All the Commons
Hate him periconically, and o' my Confeience
With him ten foldom deep: This Duke as much
They loue and doute on: call him bounteous Buckingham,
The Mirror of all courtefe.

Enter Buckingham from his Arraignment, Tieflanes before him, in a Liver clothe and the edge towards him, Halberds on each side, accompanied with Sir Thomas Lovell, Sir Nicholas Vaux, Sir Walter Sants, and common people, C.f.
1. Stay there Sir,
And fee the noble ruin'd man you speake of.
2. Let's fland clote and behold him.
Buck. All good people,
You that thus farre have come to pitty me;
Heare what I fay, and then goe home and lofe me.
I have this day receiv'd a Traitors Judgement,
And by that name muft die; yet Heaven beare witnes,
And if I have a Confeience, let it finche me,
Even as the Axe falls, if I be not faithfull.
The Law I beare no mallice for my death,
This done upon the premises, but Jutice: But thofe that fought it, I could with more Christian
(For what they will) I heartly forgive them;
Yet let 'em looke they glory not in mischief;
Nor build their euils on the graves of great men;
For then, my guilitlefe blood muft cry again't'em.
For further life in this world I ne're hope,
Nor will I fie, although the King hauue mercies
More then I dare make faults.
You few that lou'd me,
And dare be bold to wepe for Buckingham,
His Noble Friends and Fellowes; whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying:
Goe with me like good Angels to my end,
And as the long disuerse of Steele fits on me,
Make of your Prayers one sweet Sacrifice,
And lift my Soule to Heaven.
Lead on a Gods name.
Lovell. I doe beforeth your Grace, for charity
If ever any malice in your heart
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.
Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you
As I would be forgien: I forgive all.
There cannot be thofe numberlefe offences
Gainft me, that I cannot take peace with:
No blacke Enuy shall make my Graue,
Commend mee to his Grace:
And if he speake of Buckingham, pray tell him,
You met him halfe in Heaven: my vows and prayers
Yet are the Kings; and till my Soule forfaile,
Shall cry for blifes on him. May he liue
Longer then I have time to tell his yeares;
Euer belou'd and louing, may his Rule be;
And when old Time shall lead him to his end,
Goodneffe and he, fill vp one Monument.
Leau. To th' water fide I must conduct your Grace;
Then give my Charge vp to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who vnderfakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there,
The Duke is comming: See the Barge be ready;
And fit it with fuch furniture as fuites
The Greatneffe of his Perfom.
Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas,
Let it alone; my State now will but mocke me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Conftable,
And Duke of Buckingham: now, poor Edward Bosom.
Yet I am richer then my late Accufers,
That neuer knew what Truth meant: I now feale it;
And with that blood will make 'em one day groane for't.
My noble Father Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against Viorping Richard,
Flying for his life to his Seuenthe Llanfer,
Being defir'd, was by that wretch betrail'd,
And without Tryall, fell; Gods peace be with him.
Henry the Seuenthe succeeding, truly pitying
My Father loffe, like a moft Royall Prince
Refor'd me to my Honours; and out of ruins
Made my Name once more Noble. Now his Sonne,
Henry the Eight, Life, Honour, Name and all
That made me happy; at one stroke ha's taken
For euer from the World. I had my Tryall,
And muff needs fay a Noble one; which makes me
A little happier then my wretched Father:
Yet thus farre we are one in Fortunes; both
Fell by our Servants, by thofe Men we lou'd moft:
A moft vnnatural and fadifie Service.
Heaven ha's an end in all: yet, you that heare me,
This from a dying man receive as certain:
Where you are left, be liberal of your loves and Counsels,
Be faire you be no loofe; for thofe you make friends,
And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found againe
But where they meane to finke ye: all good people
Pray for me, I must now forsake ye; the last hour
Of my long weary life is come upon me;
Farewell, and when you would say something that is sad,
Speak as how I fell.
I have done, and God forgive me.

Exeunt Duke and Traines.

1. O, this is full of pitty; Sir, it cal's
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the Authors.
2. If the Duke be guiltlesse,
'Tis full of woe; yet I can glue you inckling
Of an ensigning guilt, if it fall,
Greater then this.
1. Good Angels keep it from vs:
What may it be? you do not doubt my faith Sir?
2. This Secret is too weighty, 'twill require
A strong faith to conceal it.
1. Let me hate it:
I doe not talle much.
2. I am confident;
You shall Sir: Did you not of late dayes heare
A buzzing of a Separation
Between the King and Katherine?
1. Yes, but it held not;
For when the King once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the Lord Mayor straight
To stop the rumor; and allay thofe tongues
That durft interfe it.
2. But that flander Sir,
Is found a truth now: for it grows aen
Fretten then e're it was; and held for certaine
The King will venture at it. Either the Cardinal,
Or some about him neere, hauе out of malice
To the good Queene, poppet him with a fcape
That will yndoe her: To conforme this too,
Cardinal Campaine is arriu'd, and latelie,
As all think for this busines.
1. Tis the Cardinal;
And mercely to revenge him on the Emperor,
For not betowing on him his asking,
The Archibishopricke of Toledo, this is purpose'd.
2. I thinke
You have hit the marke; but is't not cruelly,
That the should feele the smar of this: the Cardinal
Will have his will, and the mutt fall.
1. 'Tis wofully.
Wee are too open here to argue this:
let thinke in private more. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lord Chamberlaine, reading this Letter.

My Lord, the Herfes your Lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I jaw well chooеn, riddien, and furnish'd.
They were young and handsone, and of the best breed in the North. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinall, by Companion, and maue power soke'em from me, with this reason; if a master but jaw'd before a Subject, if not before the King, which flop'd our mouthe Sir.
I feare he will indeede; well, let him hauе them; hee will have all I thinke.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlaine, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Norf. Well met my Lord Chamberlaine.
Cham. Good day to both your Grace.
Suff. How is the King imploied?
Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.
Norf. What's the caufe?
Cham. It seems the Marriage with his Brother Wife
Ha's crept too neere his Conscience.
Suff. No, his Conscience.
Ha's crept too neere another Lady.
Norf. Tis so;
This is the Cardinals doing: The King-Cardinall,
That blinde Priet, like the eldeft Sonne of Fortune,
Turs what he lift. The King will know him one day.
Suff. Pray God he doe.
Hae I never known himselfe else.
Norf. How holly he works in all his businesse,
And with what zeal? For now he has crackt the League
Between vs & the Emperor (the Queens great Nephew)
He diuies into the Kings Soule, and there flatters
Dangers, doubts, wringer of the Conscience,
Fears, and defpaires, and all these for his Marriage.
And out of all these, to reforfe the King,
He counsels a Diuorce, a loffe of her
That like a Jewell, ha's hung twenty yeares
About his necke, yet never left her life;
Of her that loues him with that excellency,
That Angels lose good men with: Euen of her,
That when the greatt stroake of Fortune falls
Will bleffe the King: and is not this course piuous ?
Cham. Heauen keep me from such counsel: tis most true
These newes are euery where, euery tongue speakes 'em,
And euery true heart weepes for't. All that dare
Look into these affaires, fee this maine end,
The French Kings Sifter. Heaven will one day open
The Kings eyes, that fo long hauе slept vp
This bold bad man.
Suff. And free vs from his flauery.
Norf. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliuers;
Or this impenious man will worke vs all
From Princes into Pages: all mens honour
Lie like one lump before him, to be fasion'd
Into what pitch he pleafe.
Suff. For me, my Lords,
I love him not, nor feare him, there's my Creede:
As I am made without him, so Ie stand,
If the Kings pleafe: his Curues and his blearings
Touch me alike; there breath I not beleue in.
I knew him, and I know him: so I leave him
To him that made him proud: the Pope.
Norf. Let's in;
And with some other busines, put the King
From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him:
My Lord, youle beare vs company?
Cham. Excufe me,
The King ha's sent me otherwhare: Besides
You'll finde a moat vfit time to disturbe him:
Health to your Lordships.
Enter Gardiner.

Wol. Glue me your hands: much joy & favour to you; You are the Kings now.
Gard. But to be commanded
For ever by your Grace, whose hand he's radd'me.
Kin. Come hither Gardiner.
Walkes and whisperers.
Camp. My Lord of Torke, was not one Doctor Pace
In this mans place before him?
Wol. Yes, he was.
Camp. Was he not held a learned man?
Wol. Yes, so freely.
Camp. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then,
Even of your self Lord Cardinal.
Wol. How? of me?
Camp. They will not flitke to say, you enuise him;
And fearing he would rite (he was so vertuous)
Kept him a forraging man ill, which he gree'd him,
That he ran the stage, and side.
Wol. Heau'n peace be with him:
That's Christian care enough: for lying Murmurers,
There's places of rebuke. He was a Fool;
For he would needs be vertuous. That good Fellow,
If I command him follows my appointment,
I will have none to enuer els. Learne this Brother,
We lue not to be grip'd by meaner persons.
Kin. Deliver this with modesty to th' Queene.
Exit Gardiner.
The most convenient place, that I can think of
For such receipt of Learning, is Black-Fryer's;
There ye shal meete about this weighty business.
My Wolfg, see it furnisht, O my Lord,
Would it not grieue an able man to leaue
So sweet a Bedfellow? But Confidence, Confidence;
O 's a tender place, and I muft leaue her. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Anne Bullein, and an old Lady.
An. Not for that neither; here's the pang that pinches.
His Highness, having liued so long with her, and the
So good a Lady, that no Tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her; by my life,
She never knew harme-doing: Oh, now after
So many courses of the Sun entrooneed,
Still growing in a Maiety and pompe, the which
To leaue, a thousand fold more bitter, then
'Tis sweet at first 'tacquire. After this Proceede.
To give her the auuait, it is a pitty
Would move a Monfer.
Old La. Hearts of moft hard temper
Melt and lament for her.
An. Oh God, God, will slide.
She'se we'd have knowne pompe; though't be temporall,
Yet if that quarrell, Fortune, do divert
It from the bearer, 'tis a suffarence, panging
As soule and bodies feuering.
Old L. Ails pover Lady,
She'se a stranguer now again.
An. So much the more
Muff pityy drop ys her; verily
I swere, 'tis better to be lowly borne,
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

And range with humble liers in Content, Then to be perk’d vp in a glifting griefe, And weare a golden fowrow.
Old L. Our content Is our bet hauing.
Anne. By my troth, and Maidenhead, I would not be a Queene.
Old L. Before me, I would, And venture Maidenhead for’t, and fo would you For all this fpice of your Hippocrifie: You that have fo faire parts of Woman on you, Haue (too) A Womans heart, which euer yet Affected Eminence, Wealth, Souerainty; Which, to fay troth, are Bluftings; and which guifts (Saining your mincing) the capacity Of your soft Chiorreell Conffience, would receiue, If you might pleafe to stretch it.
Anne. Nay, good troth.
Old L. Yes troth, & troth; you would not be a Queen.
Anne. No, not for all the riches vnder Heauen.
Old L. It is strange; a threepence bow’d would hire me Old as I am, to Queene it: but I pray you, What think you of a Dutchefse? Haue you limbs To bear that load of Title?
An. No in truth.
Old L. Then you are weakly made; plucke off a little, I would not be a young Count in your way; For more then blufhing comes to: If your backe Cannot vouchsaf’t this burden, its too weak Euer to get a Boy.
An. How you doe talk; I fwear againe, I would not be a Queene, For all the world:
Old L. In faith, for little England You’d venture an embailling: I my felfe Would for Carnarowshire, although there long’d No more to th’ Crowne but that: Lo, who comes here?

Enter Lord Chamberlaine.

L. Cham. Good morrow Ladies; what wret’t worthy The fecret of your conference?
An. My good Lord, Not your demand; it values not your ask: Our Mifris Sorrows we were pittying.
Cham. It was a gentle bafheffe, and becoming The action of good women, there is hope All will be well.
Cham. You bare a gentle minde, & heav’nly blessings Follow fuch Creatures. That you may, faire Lady Perceive I fpake fincerely, and high notes
Tane of your many vertues; the Kings Malefty Commends his good opinion of you, to you; and Doe’s purpofe honour to you no leffe bowing, Then Marchioniffe of Pembroke; to which Title, A Thoufand pound a yeare, Annually fupport, Out of his Grace, he addes.
An. I doe not know What kind of my obedience, I fhou’d tender; More then my All, is Nothing: Nor my Prayers Are not words ducly hallowed, nor my Wifhes More worth, then empty vanities; yet Prayers & Wifhes Are all I can returne. ’Befeech your Lordship, Vouchsafe to fpake my thankes, and my obedience, As from a blunt ng Handmaid, to his Highneffe; Whole health and Royalty I pray for.
Cham. Lady;
I fhall not faie fuppoure the faire conceit The King hath of you. I haue perdu’d her well, Beauty and Honour in her are fo mingled, That they have caught the King: and who knowes yet But from this Lady, may proceed a femme, To lighten all this Ile. ‘Tis to the King, And fay I fpoke with you.
An. My honour’d Lord.
Old L. Why this it is: See, fee, I haue beene begging fixteen yeares in Court (Am yet a Courtier beggerly) nor could Come pat betwixt too early, and too late For any fuit of poundes: and you, (oh fate) A very frefh fife heere; fye, fye upon This compell’d fortune: have your mouth fild vp, Before you open it.
An. This is strange to me.
Old L. How talks it? Is it bitter? Forty pence, no: There was a Lady once (in an old story) That would not be a Queene, that would be not For all the mud in Egypt; haue you heard it?
An. Come you are pefiant.
Old L. With your Theme, I could O’re-mount the Larke: The Marchioniffe of Pembroke? A thoufand pound a yeare, for pure refpect? No other obligation? by my Life, That promifes mo thoufands: Honour trained Is longer then his fore-skirt; by this time I know your backe will bare a Dutchefse. Say, Are you not stronger then you were?
An. Good Lady, Make your felfe mirth with your particular fancy, And leaue me out on’t. Would I had no being If this falute my blood a lot; it faints me To think what follows. The Queene is comfortleffe, and wee forgetfull In our long abfence: pray doe not deliver, What heere y’haue heard to her.
Old L. What doe you think me — Execut.

Scena Quarta.

Trumpets, Sirets, and Cornets.

Enter two Percors, with fhort filver wandes; next them two Scribes in the habites of Doctors; after them, the Bishops of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and S. Afphe: Next them, with some fmall diſante, followes a Gentleman bearing the Purfe, with the great Scare, and a Cardinals Hat: Then two Priests, bearing each a Silver Crofe: Then a Gentleman filver bare-footed, accompanied with a Sergeant at Arms, bearing a Silver Mace: Then two Gentlemen bearing two great Silver Pillers: After them, fide by fide, the two Cardinals, two Noblemen,with the Sword and Mace. The King takes place under the Cloth of State. The two Cardinals fit under him as Judges. The Queene takes place fome diſtance from the King. The Bishops place themfelves on each fide the Court in manner of a Confitory: Below them the Scribes. The Lords fit next the Bishops. The reft of the Attendants fand in convenient order about the Stage.
Car. Whil'st our Commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.
King. What's the need?
It hath publicly but been read,
And on all sides th'Authority allow'd,
You may then spare that time.
Car. Be't so, proceed.
Scri. Say, Henry K. of England, come into the Court.
King. Heere.
Scri. Say, Katherine Queene of England,
Come into the Court.
The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her Chaire, goes about the Court, comes to the King, and kneels at his Feet. Then speaks.
Sir, I desire you do me Right and Justice,
And to beflow your pity on me; for
I am a most poor Woman, and a Stranger,
Burne out of your Dominions: having here
No place indifferent, or equal assurance
Of equal Friendship and Proceeding. Als Sir:
In what have I offended you? What cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure.
That thus you should proceed to put me off,
And take your good Grace from me? Heaven witnisse,
I have bene to you, a true and humble Wife,
At all times to your will conformable:
Euer in fear to kindle your Dislike,
Yea, subjeckt to your Countenance: Glad, or sorrow,
As I faw it inclin'd? When was the hour
I ever contradicted your Desire?
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your Friends
Haue I not frowne to love, although I knew
He were mine Enemy? What Friend of mine,
That had to him devo'd your Anger, did I
Continue in my Liking? Nay, gave notice
He was from thence dicharg'd? Sir, call to minde,
That I have beene your Wife, in this Obedience,
Vpward of twenty yeares, and haue bene bleft
With many Children by you. If in the course
And procee of this time, you can report,
And prove it too, against mine Honor, aught;
My bond to Wedlocke, or my Love and Dutie
Against your Sacred Person; in Gods name
Turne me away: and let the fowl'f Contempt
Shut doore vpon me, and so give me vp
To the th' rude kinds of Justice. Please you, Sir,
The King your Father, was reputed for
A Prince most Prudent; of an excellent
And vnmatch'd Wit, and Judgement. Ferdinand
My Father, King of Spaine, was reckon'd one
The wiffe Prince, that there had reign'd, by many
A yeare before. It is not to be question'd,
That they had gather'd a wife Counsell to them
Of every Realme, that did debate this Buftineffe,
Who deem'd our Marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly
Befeech you Sir, to spare me, till I may
Be by my Friends in Spaine; and'd; whose Counsile
I will implore. If not, th' name of God
Your pleasure be fulfill'd.
Wol. You haue heere Lady,
(And of your choice) thefe Reverend Fathers, men
Of singular Intelligence, and Learning;
Yea, the elect o'the Land, who are assembled
To please your Caufe. It shall be therefore bootleffe,
That longer you deffe the Court, as well
For your owne quiet, as to reftifie
What is vndetlet in the King.
Camp. His Grace
Hath spoken well, and luftly: Therefore Madam,
It's this Royall Session do proceed,
And that (without delay) their Arguments
Be now produc'd, and heard.
Qs. Lord Cardinal, to you I speake.
Wol. Your pleasure, Madam.
Qs. Sir, I am about to weep; but thinking that
We are a Queene (or long haue dream'd so) certaine
The daughter of a King, my drops of teares,
Ile turne to spakces of fire.
Wol. Be patient yet.
Qs. I will, when you are humble; Nay before,
Or God will punish me. I do beleue
(Induce'd by potent Circumstances) that
You are mine Enemy, and make my Challenge,
You shall not be my Judge. For it is you,
Hauie blowne this Coale, between my Lord, and me;
(Which Gods dew quench) therefore I fay againe,
I utterly abhorre; yea, from my Soule
Refuse you for my Judge, whom yet once more
I hold my most malicious Foe, and thinke not
At all a Friend to truth.
Wol. I do proffe
You speake not like your selfe: who euer yet
Hauie flood to Charity, and display'd th'effects
Of diffipation gentle, and of wifedom,
Tre-topping woomans powre. Madam, you do me wrong.
I have no Spelle against you, nor Inuifue
For you, or any: how farre I haue proceeded,
Or how farre further (Shall) is warranted
By a Commission from the Consistorie,
Yes, the whole Consistorie of Rome. You charge me,
That I haue blowne this Coale: I do deny it,
The King is preservt: if it be knowne to him,
That I gainfay my Deed, how may he wound,
And worthilie my Falshood, ye, as much
As you haue done my Truth. If he know
That I am free of your Report, he knowes
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me, and the Cure is to Remove the Thoughtes from you. The which before
His Highnesse shall speake in, I do bee speake
You (gracius Madam) to vntinke your speaking,
And to speak no more.
Queen. My Lord, my Lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weake
Toppoze your cunning. Y'are meek, & humble-mouth'd
You signe your Place, and Calling, in full feeming,
With Meeknesse and Humilitie: but your Heart
Is cram'md with Arrogance, Spleene, and Pride.
You haue by Fortune, and his Highnesse favor,
Gone flightly o're lowe stepspe, and now are mounted
Where Powres are your Retainers, and your words
(Domeflcik to you) ferue your will, as pleafe.
Your felke pronounce their Office. I must tell you,
You tender more your perfons Honor, then
Your high profession Spirituall. That aget
I do refute you for my Judge, and heere
Before you all, Appelate vnto the Pope,
To bring my whole Caufe vnto his Holineffe,
And to be judg'd by him.
She Certifies to the King, and offers to depart.
Camp.

582
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

Comp. The Queene is obsolete,
Stubbborne to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdained to be tride by't; 'tis not well.
She's going away.

Kim. Call her again.
Cler. Katherine, Q. of England, come into the Court.
Gen. Wh. Madam, you are cold backe.
Que. What need you note it? pray you keep your way,
When you are call returne. Now the Lord helpe,
They were me past my patience, pray you passe on;
I will not tarry; no, nor ever more
Upon this businesse my appearance make,
In any of their Courts.

Exit Queene, and her Attendants.

Kim. Goe thy ways Kate,
That man I'th' world, who shall report he ha's
A better Wife; let him in naught be trusted,
For speaking false to certaine Speeches
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleman,
Thy meeknesse Saint-like, Wife-like Government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Soveraigne and Pious els, could speake thee out)
The Queene of earthly Queenes: Shee's Noble born;
And like her true Nobility, her's ha's
Carried her selfe towards me.

Wol. Most gracious Sir,
In humblest manner I require your Highnes,
That it shall please you to declare in hearing
Of all these carefull for where I am rob'd and bound,
There must I be valu'd, although not there
At once, and fully satisfie whether euer I
Did broach this busines to your Highnesse, or Laid any struple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on'tour ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A Royall Lady, speake one, the least word that might Be to the prejudice of her present State,
Or touch of her good Person?

Kim. My Lord Cardinal,
I doe excuse you; yes, upon mine Honour,
I free you from't; You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so; but like to Village Curses,
Barke when their fellows doe. By some of these
The Queene is put in anger; they are exced'd:
But will you be too iustifie? So you euer
Have with'd the sleeping of this businesse, never desir'd
It to be stir'd; but off have hindred,of't
The passages made toward it; on your Honour,
I speake my good Lord Cardinal, to this point;
And thus farre cleere him.

Now, what mo'd me too't,
I will be bold with time and your attention:
(too't)
Then marke this indicencement. Thus it came; glue heede
My Conscience first receiued a tanderess,
Scratch'd incredible to certaine Speeches utter'd
By th'Bishop of Baye, then French Embassador,
Who had beene bither fent on the debating
And Marriage twist the Duke of Orleans, and
Our Daughter Mary: I th'Progrese of this busines,
Ere a determinate resolution, her
(Imeaned the Bishop) did require a refpite,
Wherein he might the King his Lord adjure him,
Whether our Daughter were legitimate,
Keeping this our Marriage with the Dowager,
Sometimes our Brothers Wife. This refpite hooke

The bofore of my Conscience, enter'd me;
Yes, with a spitting power, and made me to tremble
The region of my Breast, which forc'd fuch way,
That many ma'd considerations, did throng
And preft in with this Caution. First, me thought
I flood not in the simile of Heauen, who had Commanded Nature, that my Ladies wonde
If it conceiv'd a male-child by me, should Doe no more Offices of life too't; then
The Graue does to th' dead: For her Male Iftue,
Or di'd where they were made, or shortly after
This world had ayr'd them. Hence I took a thought,
This was a Judgement on me, that my Kingdome
(Well worthy the eft Heyre o'th World) should not Be gladdin't in by me. Then followes, that I weigh'd the danger which my Realmes flood in
By this my Iftue fail'd, and that gave to me
Many a groaning that I would thinke in:
The wild Sea of my Conscience, I did there
Towards this remedie, whereupon we are
Now preftent heere togethers that's to say,
I meant to refolve my Conscience, which
I then did feel full ficks, and yet not well,
By all the Reuerend men here of the Land,
And Doctors learn'd. First I began in private,
With you my Lord of Lincoln; you remember
How vnder my oppreffion I did reke
When I first mo'd you.

B. Lin. Very well my Lidge.
Kim. I have spoke long, be pleas'd your selfe to say
How farre you satisfie me.

Lin. So please your Highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a State of mighty moment in's,
And conquence of dread, that I committed
The daring Courtfaye which I had to doubt,
And did entreate your Highnes to this course,
Which you are running here.

Kim. I then mo'd you,
My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave
To make this present Summons vainfolicited.
I left no Reuerend Perfon in this Court;
But by particular consent proceeded
Vnder your hands and Seales; therefore goe on,
For no dislike I'th' world, against the person
Of the good Queene; but the sharpe thorny points
Of my allcased reasons, drivres this forward:
Prove but our Marriage lawfull, by my Life
And Kingly Dignity, we are contented
To weare our mortal State to come with her,
(Katherine our Queene) before the primest Creature
That's Parragon'd o'th' World

Comp. So please your Highness,
The Queene being a blest, 'ts a needfull lineffe,
That we adonrue this Court till further day;
Meant while, must be an earnest hollering in
Made to the Queene to call backe her Appeal
She intends vnto his Hollienesse.

Kim. I may perceive
These Cardinals trifle with me: I abhorre
This dilatory foth, and tricks of Rome.
My learned and wellbeloved Servant Cranmer,
Prethee returne, with thy approche: I know,
My comfort comes along: breake vp the Court;
I say, fet on.

Excut, in manner as they enter'd.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Queen and her Women as at workes.

Queen. Take thy Lute wench, my Soule grows fad with troubles,
Sing, and dierfe 'em if thou canst: leave working:

SONG.

O Roebus with thy Lute made Trees,
And the Mountaines tops that freeze,
Bom themselues when he did fong,
To be Mufick, Plants and Flowers
Ever spring: as Sune and Showers,
There had made a lodging Spring,
Every thing that heard him play,
Euen the Billows of the Sea,
Hung their beads, and then lay by.
In storm Muficke in fuch Art,
Killing care, and griefes of heart,
Fall alfeipe, or hearing dyes.

Enter a Gentleman.

Queen. How now?

Gent. And pleafe thy Grace, the two great Cardinals
Wait in the prefence.

Queen. Would they fpeak with me?

Gent. They'll bid me fay to Madam.

Queen. Pray their Grace

To come here: what can be their bufines
With me, a poore weake woman, fake from favour?
I doe not like their comming; now I thinke on't,
They fhould bee good men, their affairs as righteous:
But all Hoods, make not Monkes.

Enter the two Cardinall, Wifhey & Campian.

Wif. Peace to your Highneffe.

Queen. Your Grace finds me heree part of a Hearffe
(I would be all) againft the worft may happen:
What are your pleasures with me, reverent Lords?

Wel. May it pleafe you Noble Madam, to withdraw
Into your private Chamber; we shall glue you
The full cufe of our comming.

Queen. Speake it heree.

There's nothing I have done yet o' my Conience
Deferves a Corner; would all other Women
Could fpeak this with as free a Soule as I doe.
My Lords, I care not (fo much I am happy Above a number) if my actions
Were tri'de by euery tongue, euery eye faw'em,
Envy and bafe opinion feat againit'em,
I know my life to beeu. If your bufines
Seke me out, and that way I am Wife in;
Out with it boldly: Truth loves open dealing.
Card. Tanta eft erga te mentis integritas Regina refulissima.

Queen. O good my Lord, no Latn;
I am forry my integrity shoul breed,
(And fervice to his Maiety and you)
So deepie fufpicion, where all faith was meant;
We come not by the way of Accufation,
To taint that honour every good Tongue bleffe
Nor to betray you any way to forrow;
You have too much good Lady: But to know
How you fand minded in the weighty difference
Betweene the King and you, and to deliuer
(Like free and honeft men) our luft opinions,
And comforts to your caufe.

Camp. Most honour'd Madam,
My Lord of Yorke, out of his Noble nature,
Zeale and obedience he still bore your Grace,
Forfeeting (like a good man) your late Cenfure
Both of his truth and him (which was too farre)
Offers, as I doe, in a figne of peace,
His Service, and his Counfell.

Queen. To betray me.

My Lords, I thank you both for your good wills,
Ye fpeak like honeft mens (pray God ye prove fo)
But how to make ye folidly an Answere
In fuch a point of weight, fo neere mine Honour,
(More neere my Life I feare) with my weake wit;
And to fuch men of grauity and learning;
In truth I know not. I was fet at worke,
Among my Maids, full little (God knowes) looking Either for fuch men, or fuch bufineses
For her fake that I have beene, for I feele
The left fit of my Greatneffe; good your Graces
Let me have time and Counsell for my Caufe:
Alas, I am a Woman friendlesse, hopelesse.
Wif. Madam,
You wrong the Kings love with these fears,
Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Queen. In England,
But little for my profit can you thinke Lords,
That any English man dare give me Counsell?
Or be a knowne friend gainst his Highnes pleasure,
(Though he be growne fo deliberate to be honeft)
And лиe a Subject? Nay forsooth, my Friends,
They that muft weigh out my affilictions,
They that my truth muft grow to, live not heree,
They are (as all my other comforts) far hence
In mine owne Countrey Lords.

Camp. I would your Grace

Would leave your greefs, and take my Counsell.

Queen. How Sir?

Camp. Put your maine caufe into the Kings protection,
He's longing and moft gracious. 'Twill be much,
Both for your Honour better, and your Caufe:
For if the tryall of the Law o'retakke ye,
You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wif. He tells you rightly.

Queen. Ye tell me what ye with for both, my ruine:
Is this your Christian Counsell? Out vpon ye.
Heauen is above all yet; there fits a Judge.
That no King can corrupt.

Camp. Your rage mistakes vs.

Queen. The more flame for ye, holy men I thought ye.
Vpon my Soule two reuerend Cardinall Vertues:
But Cardinall Sins, and hollow hearts I feere ye:
Mend 'em for fame my Lords: Is this your comfort?
The Cordiall that ye bring a wretched Lady?
A woman loth among ye, laugh't at, forgot?
I will not with ye halfe my mileties,
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

I have more Charity. But say I warn'd ye; Take heed, for heaven's fake take heed, lest at once The burthen of my forrowes, fall upon ye. Carr. Madam, this is a meere distraction, You turne the good we offer, into enuy. Que. Ye turne me into nothing. Woe vpon ye, And all fuch fals Profefiron. Would you have me (If you have any Juxtie, any Pitty, If ye be any thing but Churchmen's habits) Put my ficke case into his hands, that hates me? Alas, he's banish'd me his Bed already, His Loose, too long ago. I am old my Lords, And all the Fellowship I hold now with him Is onely my Obedience. What can happen To me, about this wretchedneffe? All your Studies Make me a Curfe, like this. Camp. Your fears are worfe. Que. Haue I liu'd thus long (let me speake my felfe, Since Vertue findes no friends) a Wife, a true one? A Woman (I dare fay without Vainglory) Ne yet branded with Sufferion? Haue I, with all my full Affections Still met the King? Lou'd him next Heau'n?Obey'd him? Bin (out of fondneffe) superfluous to him? Almoft forgot my Prayres to content him? And am I thus rewarded? 'Tis not well Lords. Bring me a confant woman to her Husband, One that ne're dream'd a joy, beyond his pleafure; And to that Woman (when she haue done moft) Yet will I add an Honor; a great Patience. Carr. Madam, you wander from the good We ayme at. Que. My Lord, I dare not make my felfe go guiltie, To glu vp willingly that Noble Title Your Mafter wed me to: nothing but death Shall e're diuorce my Dignities. Carr. Pray heare me. Que. Would I had never trod this English Earth, Or felt the Flatteries that grow vp on it: Ye haue Angles Faces, but Heauen knowes your hearts. What will become of me now, wretched Lady? I am the moft vnhappy Woman living, Alas (poore Wenches) where are now your Fortunes? Shipwrack'd vp on a Kingdome, where no Pitty, No Friends, no Hope, no Kindred weeps for me? Almoft no Grace allow'd me? Like the Lilly That once was Mistress of the Field, and flourish'd, Ie hang my head, and perfine. Carr. If your Grace Could but be brought to know, our Ends are honest, You'd feele more comfort. Why hold we(good Lady) Vpon what cause wrong you? Alas, our Places, The way of our Profeflion is against it; We are to Cure fuch forrowes, not to we're'em. For Goodneffe fake, confider what you do, How you may hurt your felfe: I vyterly Grow from the Kings Acquaintance, by this Carriage. The hearts of Princes lie in Obedience, So much they loue it. But to flaburse Spirits, They dwell' and grow, as terrible as flormes. I know you have a Gentle, Noble temper, A Soule as even as a Calme; Pray thinke vs, Those we profefle, Peace-makers, Friends, and Servants. Carr. Madam, you'll finde it fo: You wrong your Vertues With thefe weake Womens feares. A Noble Spirit As yours was, put into you, ever caufs Such doubts as falle Comne from it. The King loveus you, Beware you loose it not: For vs (if you please) To true vs in your bufineffe) we are ready To vfe our vtmoff Studies, in your fervice. Que. Do what ye will, my Lords: And pray forgive me; If I haue vs'd my felfe vnmannere, You know I am a Woman, lacking wit To make a feemely anwer to fuch persons, Pray do my fervice to his Maieftie, He ha's my heart yet, and shall have my Prayers While I shall haue my life. Come reuerend Fathers, Behoy your Counsellors on me. She now begges That little thought when the fet footed hear, She shold haue bought her Dignities fo dear. Exuen Scena Secunda.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, Duke of Suffolk, Lord Surrey, and Lord Chamberlainge.

Nor. If you will now vntie in your Complaints, And force them with a Confinacy, the Cardinal Cannot fland vnder them. If you omit The offer of this time, I cannot promise, But that you shall fillaine moe new disgraces, With these you base already.

Sur. I am joyfull To meete the leaft occasion, that may glue me Remembrance of my Father-in-Law, the Duke, To be resuing'd on him.

Suf. Which of the Peeres Haue vncontemned gone by him, or at leaft Strangely neigched? When did he regard The flame of Noblenesse in any person Out of himselfe? Chur. My Lords, you speake your pleasures: What he deferues of you and me, I know: What we can do to him (though now the time Gues way to vs) I much feare. If you cannot Barre his acces to th'King, neuer attempt Any thing on him: for he hath a Witchcraft Ouer the King in's Tongue.

Nor. O feare him not, His spill in that is out: the King hath found Matter against him, that for euer marres The Hony of his Language. No, he's fetled (Not to come off) in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir, I should be glad to heare fuch Newes as this Once every houre.

Nor. Believe it, this is true. In the Diuorce, his contrarie proceedings Are all vnfolded: wherein he appeares, As I would with mine Enemy.

Sur. How came His prattles to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O how? how?

Suf. The Cardinals Letters to the Pope miscarrier,
And came to th'eye o'th'King, wherein was read
How that the Cardinal did intreat his Holiness
To lay the judgement o'th'Diocese; for if
It did take place, I do (quoth he) perceive
My King is tangle in affliction.

A Creature of the Queens, Lady Anne Bullen,

Srf. Ha's the King this?

Suf. Believe it.

Srf. Will this worke

Cham. The King in this perceives him, how he coasts
And hedges his owne way. But in this point,
All his tricks founder, and he brings his Physick
After his Patients death; the King already Hath married the faire Lady.

Srf. Would he had.

Suf. May you be happy in your with my Lord,
For I profess ye have it.

Srf. Now all my joy
Trace the Conunfion.

Suf. My Amen too't.

Nor. All mens.

Suf. There's order gueen for her Coronation:
Marry this is yet but yong, and may be left
To fome eares unaccounted. But my Lords
She is a gallant Creature, and complete
In minde and feature. I persuade me, from her
Will fall fome bleffing to this Land, which shall
In it be memor'ed.

Srf. But will the King

Digeth this Letter of the Cardinals?

The Lord forbid.

Nor. Marry Amen.

Suf. No, no:

There be moe Wafpes that buzz about his Nofe,
Will make this fling the noone. Cardinal Campeis,
Is ftoone away to Rome, hath 'tane no leave,
Ha's left the caufe o'th'King unhandled, and
Is pofted as the Agent of our Cardinal,
To fecod all his plot. I do affure you,
The King cry'de Ha, at this.

Cham. Now God incence him,
And let him cry Ha,lawder.

Norf. But my Lord

When returnes Cammer?

Suf. He is return'd in his Opinions, which Have fatisified the King for his Diocese,
Together with all famous Colleges
And in Chriftendome: shortly (I beleue)
His second Marriage shall be publifhed, and
Her Coronation. Katherine no more
Shall be call'd Queene, but Princeffe Dowager,
And Widdow to Prince Arthur.

Nor. This fame Cammer's
A worthy Fellow, and hath tane much paine
In the Kings buenefife.

Suf. He ha's, and we dilfear him
For it, an Arch-bishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis fo.

Enter Wolfsy and Cromwell.

The Cardinal.

Nor. Obfereue, obfereue, hee's moody.

Car. The Packet Cromwell.

Gan't ye the King?

Crom. To his owne hand, in's Bed-chamber.

Car. Look'd he o'th'inside of the Paper?

Crom. Prefently.

He did viueale them, and the firft he view'd,
He did it with a Serius minde: a heede
Was in his countenance. You he bad
Attend him herehe this Morning.

Car. Is he ready to come abroad?

Crom. I thynke by this he is.

Car. Leave me a while.

Exit Cromwell.

It shall be to the Dutches of Alanfon,
The French Kings Sifter; He shall marry her.
Anne Bullen? No I le no Anne Bullen for him,
There's more in't then faire Vifage. Bullen?
No, wee'l no Bullen: Speedily I fith
To hear from Rome. The Marchionelle of Penbroke?

Nor. He's diſcontented.

Suf. May be he hears the King

Does whet his Anger to him.

Srf. Sharpe enough,
Lord for thy Juflice.

Car. The late Queenes Gentlemewom?

A Knights Daughter

To be her Moitria Moitria? The Queenes, Queene?
This Candle burnes not cleere, 'tis I muff thufhcf,
Then out it goes. What though I know her vertuous
And welldefering? yet I know her for
A fpieene Lutherane, and not whatfome to
Our caufe, that the fheould ly i' th'bosome of Our hard rul'd King. Again, ther's fpung vp
An Herelique, an Arch-one; Cammer, one
Hath chaw'd into the favoure of the King,
And is his Oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at fomething.

Enter King, reading of a Sefdiale.

Srf. I would twer fomthing y would frett the firinge,
The Mafter-cord on's heart.

Suf. The King, the King.

King. What pife of wealth hath he accumulated
To his owne portion? And what expence by'thoure
Seemes to flow from him? How, I'th'name of Thift
Does he rate this together? Now my Lords,
Saw you the Cardinal?

Nor. My Lord, we hauwe
Stood heere obferving him. Some strange Commotion
Is in his braine: He bites his lip, and flarfs,
Steps on a foflane, lookes vpon the ground,
Then laves his finger on his Temple: bright
Springs out into fait gate, then flops againe,
Strikes his brefh hard, and anon, he cafits
His eye againft the Moone: in moft ftrange Poitures
We have leene him fet himfelfe.

King. It may well be,
There is a mutiny in's minde. This morning,
Papers of State he fent me, to perufe
As I required: and wot you what I found
There (on my Confience put unwrittingly)
Forthofh an Invenrory, thus importing
The feuerall parcels of his Plate, his Treafure, Riche Stuffes and Ornaments of Houblon, which I finde at fuch proud Rate, that it out-speakes
Poffefion of a Subiekt.

Nor. It's Heauens will,
Some Spirit put this paper in the Packet,
To bleepe your eye withall, King.

If we did thynke

His
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

His Contemplation were about the earth,
And fixt on Spiritual obieQt, he should fill
Dwell in his Musings, but I am afraid
His Thinkings are below the Moone, not worth
His serious considering.

King takes his Seat, whistles Louell, who goes to the Cardinal.

Car. Heauen forgive me,
Euer God blefe your Highneffe.

King. Good my Lord,
You are full of Heavenly trufe, and bear the Invenutory
Of your belt Graces, in your minde; the which
You were now running o're; you have faile time
To fleale from Spiritual levyre, a breife fpnan
To keepe your earthly Audits, fire in that
I deeme you an ill Husband, and am gaed
To haue you therein my Companion.

Car. Sir,
For Holy Offices I haue a time; a time
To think that the buniffe, which
I bear the 1b State: and Nature does require
Her times of perufuation, which perfource
I her fraile fones, among'tl my Brethren mortall,
Muff give my tendance to.

King. You have faid well,
Car. And euer may your Highneffe yoake together,
(As I will lend you caufe) my doing well,
With my well faying.

King. 'Tis well faid agen,
And 'tis a kinde of good deede to fay well,
And yet words are no deeds. My Father lou'd you,
He faid he did, and with his deed did Crowne
His word vpon you. Since I had my Office,
I haue kept you next my Heart, haue not alone
Imploy'd you where high Profits might come home,
But par'd my present Haungs, to bellow
My Bounties vpon you.

Car. What should this meane?

Sur. The Lord increafe this buniffe.

King. Haue I not made you
The prime man of the State? I pray you tell me,
If what I now pronounce, you have found true: And
If you may confedere it, fay withall
If you are bound to vs, or no. What fay you?

Car. My Soueraigne, I confedere your Royall graces
Shower'd on me daily, haue bene more then could
My fliued purpoife requite, which went Beyond all mans endeavour. My endeavors,
Haue euer come too short of my Defires,
Yet ill'd with my Abilities: Mine owne ends
Haue beene mine fof, that euermore they pointed To' th good of your moff Sacred Perfon, and
The profit of the State. For your great Graces
Hap'd vpon me (poore Vnderfauer) I
Can nothing render but Allegiant thankes,
My Prayers to heauen for you; my Loyaltie
Which euer ha's, and euer fhall be growing,
Till death (that Winter) kill it.

King. Fairly anfwer'd: I
A Loyall, and obedient Subject is Therin illuftrated, the Honor of it
Does pay the Aft of it, as it's contrary
The fowleneffe is the punishment. I proune,
That as my hand ha's open'd Bounties to you,
My heart drop'd Lone, my powre rain'd Honor, more
On you, then any: So your Hand, and Heart,
Your Braine, and euery Function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As tw'er in Loues particular, be more
To me your Friend, then any.

Car. I do professe,
That for your Highneffe good, I euer labour'd
More then mine owne: that am, have, and will be (Though all the world should cracke their duty to you,
And throw it from their Souls, though perils did Abound, as thicke as thought could make'em, and Appeare in formes more horrid) yet my Duty,
As doth a Rocke againft the chiding Flood,
Should the approach of this wilde Rifeer breake,
And hand unfaaken yours.

King. "'Tis Nobly fpoken:
Take notice Lords, he ha's a Loyall breth,
For you haue feene him open't. Read o're this,
And after this, and then to Breakfast with
What appetite you have.

Exit King, showing upon the Cardinal, the Nobles strong after him jufling, and whispering.

Car. What should this mean?

What fadaine Anger's this? How have I reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if Ruine
Leap'd from his Eyes. So looks the fhauf Lyon
Upon the daring Huntman that has gaff'd him:
Then makes him nothing. I must reade this paper:
I fear the Story of his Anger. 'Tis fo:
This paper ha's vndone me: 'Tis' Accent
Of all that world of Wealth I haue drawnne together
For mine owne ends, (Indeed to gaine the Popedome,
And fee my Friends in Rome.) O Negligence!
Fit for a Foole to fall by; What croffe Dicell
Made me put this maene Secret in the Packet
I fent the King? Is there no way to cure this?
No new deece to beste this from his Braines?
I know'll flirre him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in fight of Fortune
Will bring me off againe. What's this? To th' Pope?
The Letter (as I faw) with all the Bowniffe
I witt too's Holineffe. Nay then, farewell:
I have touch'd the highest point of all my Greatneffe,
And from that full Meridian of my Glory,
I haile now to my Setting. I hall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the Euening,
And no man fee me more.

Enter to Wolsey, the Duke of Norfale and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlaine.

Nor. Hear ye the Kings pleafure Cardinal,
Who commands you
To render vp the Great Seale prefently
Into our hands, and to Confine your felues
To Ather-houfe, my Lord of Wincheltefs,
Till you heare further from his Highneffe.

Car. Stay:
Where's your Commiffion? Lords, words cannot carry Authority fo weighty.

Syl. Who dare croffe em,
Bearing the Kings will from his mouth expreffely?

Car. Till I finde more then will, or words to do it,
(I meane your malice) know, Oflidious Lords,
I dare, and must deny it. Now I feele
Of what course Mettle ye are molded, Envy,
How eagerly ye follow my Diffgraces.
As if it fed ye, and how sleeke and wanton
Ye appeare in every thing may bring my ruine?
Follow your enious courses; men of Malice;
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and no doubt
In time will finde their fit Rewards. That Seale
You sake with such a Violence, the King
(Mine, and your Master) with his owne hand, gave me:
Bad me enjoy it, with the Place, and Honors
During my life; and to confirme his Goodneffe,
T'de it by Letters Patents. Now, who'll take it?
Sur. The King that gave it.
Car. It must be himselfe then.
Sur. Thou art a proud Traitor, Priet.
Car. Proud Lord, thou lyest:
Within these fortie hours, Surrey durft better
Hauie burnt that Tongue, then faide fo.
Sur. Thy Ambition
(Thou Scarlet finne) robb'd this bewailing Land
Of Noble Buckingham, my Father-in-Law,
The heads of all thy Brother-Cardinals,
(With thee, and all thy bold parts bound together)
With'd not a halfe of his. Plague of your policie,
You feat me Deputie for Ireland,
Farre from his fuccour; from the King, from all
That might have merced on the fault, thou gavst him:
Whilest your great Goodneffe, out of holy pitty,
Abolish'd him with an Axe.
Wol. This, and all elfe
This talking Lord can lay upon my credit,
I anfwer, is moft falle. The Duke by Law Found his defects. How innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His Noble Juris, and foute Caufe can witneffe,
If I lou'd many words, Lord, I fhould tell you,
You have as little Honiffe, as Honor,
That in the way of Loyalty, and Truth,
Toward the King, my euer Rollall Mafter,
Dare make a founder man then Surrie can be,
And all that loue his follies.
Sur. By my Soule,
Your long Coat (Priet) protects you,
Thou should'ft feele
My Sword the life blood of thee elfe. My Lords,
Can you endure to hear this Arrogance?
And from this Fellow? If we liue thus tamely,
To be thus iade by a pedee of Scarlet,
Farewell Nobilitie: let his Grace go forward,
And dare vs with his Caft, like Larkes.
Car. All Goodneffe
Is poyson to thy Stomacke.
Sur. Yes, that goodneffe
Of gleazing all the Lands wealth into one,
Into your owne hands (Card'nal) by Extortion:
The goodneffe of your intercepted Packets
You write to the Pope, againft the King: your goodneffe
Since you proue me, shall be moft notorious.
My Lord of Norfolke,as you are truly Noble,
As you refpeet the common good, the State
Of our defpair Nobilitie, our Liffes,
(Whom if he liue, will feeare be Gentlemen)
Produce the grand fumme of his finnes, the Articles
Collected from his life. Ie fliarte you
Worke then the Sacrific Bell, when the browne Wench
Lay killing in your Armes, Lord Cardinal.
Car. How much me thinkes, I could defpife this man,
But that I am bound in Charite against it.
His Greatness is a ripening, nippes his rootes,
And then he falls as I do. I have ventur'd
Like little wanton Boyes that swim on bladders:
This many Summers in a Sea of Glory,
But fare beyond my depth: my high-blowne Pride
At length broke vnder me, and now ha's left me
Weary, and old with Servuce, to the mercy
Of a rude fireame, that muff for euer hide me.
Vaine pompes, and glory of this World, I hate ye,
I feel my heart new open'd. Oh how wretched
Is that poore man, that hangs on Princes favours?
There is betwixt that smile we would aferpe too,
That sweet Aspect of Princes, and their ruine,
More pangs, and fears then warres, or women haue;
And when he falleth, he falleth like Lucifer,
Neuer to hope againe. Enter Cromwell, standing amazed.
Why how now Cromwell?
Crom. I have no power to speake Sir.
Car. What, amazed at my misfortunes? Can thy Spirit wonder
A great man shoul decline. Nay, and you weep
I am faine indeed. Crom.
Crom. How does your Grace.
Card. Why well?
Never to truly happy, my good Cromwell,
I know my felle now, and I fleele within me,
A peace above all earthly Dignities,
A fill, and quiet Confidence. The King ha's cur'd me,
I humbly thanke his Grace; and from these shoulders
These ruin'd Pillars, out of pitty, taken
A losde, would finke a Navie, (too much Honor.)
O 'tis a burden Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man, that hopes for Heauen.
Crom. I am glad your Grace,
Ha's made that right vie of it.
Card. I hope I haue:
I am able now (me thinks)
(Out of a Fortitude of Soule, I feele)
To endure more Miseries, and greater fare
Then my Weake-hearted Enemies, dare offer.
What Newes abroad?
Crom. The beaueft, and the worft, is your displeasure with the King.
Card. God bleffe him.
Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord Chancellor, in your place.
Card. That's some what fadain.
But he's a Learned man. May he continue
Long in his Highneffe favour, and do Iuflice
For Truths-fake, and his Confidence; that his bones,
When he ha's run his courfe, and fleepes in Blessings,
May have a Tombe of Orphants tears wept on him.
What more?
Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome;
Intill'd Lord Arch-bishop of Canterbury.
Card. That's Newes indeed.
Crom. Lath, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the King hath in fecrete long married,
This day was view'd in open, at his Queene,
Going to Chappell: and the voyce is now
Onely about her Coronation.
Card. There was the weight that pull'd me done.
O Cromwell,
The King ha's gone beyond me: All my Glories
In that one woman, I have loif for euer.
No Sun, hall euer vher forth mine Honors,
Or glide againe the Noble Troopes that weighted
Upon my smiles. Go get thee from me Cromwell,
I am a poore faine man, unworthy now
To be thy Lord, and Master. Seeke the King
(That Sun, I pray may never set) I haue told him,
What, and how true thou art; he will advance thee:
Some little memory of me, will fillre him
(I know his Noble Nature) not to let Thy hopefull feruice perfiff too. Good Cromwell
Neglect him not; make vfe now, and prouide
For thine owne future safety.
Crom. O my Lord,
Muft I then leau? Muft I needses forgo
So good, so Noble, and so true a Master?
Bear witnesse, all that haue not hearts of Iron,
With what a forrow Cromwell leaves his Lord.
The King shall have my feruice; but my prayers
For euer, and for euer shall be yours.
Card. Cromwell, I did not thinke to shed a teare
In all my Miferies: But thou haft forc'd me
(Out of thy honett truth) to play the Woman.
Let's drye our eyes; And thus farre hearre me Cromwell,
And when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And fleep in dull cold Marble, where no mention
Of me, more must be heard of: Say I taught thee,
Say Wofly, that once trod the wavesc of Glory,
And found all the Depths, and Shoales of Honor,
Found thee a way (out of his wracke) to riie in:
A fure, and safe one, though thy Master mit it.
Marke but my Fall, and that that Ruin'd me:
Cromwell, I charge thee, ring away Ambition,
By that finne fel thee Angels: how can man then
(The Image of his Maker) hope to win by it?
Louve thy felfe laft, cherifh those hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more then Honesty,
Still in thy right hand, carry gentle Peace
To silence enuious Tongues. Be iuft, and feare not;
Let all the ends thou aymt at, be thy Countries,
Thy Gods, and Truths. Then if thou fail? (O Cromwell)
Thou fallit a bleffed Martyr.
Serve the King: And praythee leade me in:
There take an Inventory of all I haue,
To the laft peny, 'tis the Kings. My Robe,
And my Integrity to Heauen, is all,
I dare now call mine owne. O Cromwell, Cromwell,
Had I but fera'd my God, with halfe the Zeale
I fera'd my King: it would not in mine Age
Haue left me nacked to mine Enemies.
Crom. Good Sir, haue patience.
Card. So I haue. Farewell
The Hopes of Court, my Hopes in Heauen do dwell.
Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

1 'Tis well met once againe.

2 So are you.

1 You come to take your hand here, and behold
The Lady Anne, paffe from her Coronation.
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

2 'Tis all my businesse. At our last encounter, The Duke of Buckingham came from his Triall.
1 'Tis very true. But that time offer'd forrow, This generall joy.

2 'Tis well: The Citizens I am sure have thewne at full their Royall minds, As let 'em haue their rights, they are ever forward In Celebration of this day with Shewes, Pageants, and Sights of Honor.
1 Neuer greater, Nor I affure you better taken Sir,
2 May I be bold to take what that contains, That Paper in your hand.

1 Yes, 'tis the Lift Of those that claime their Offices this day, By Custom of the Coronation. This Duke of Suffolk is the first and claims To be high Steward; Next the Duke of Norfolk, He to be Earle Marcell: you may read the rest.

1 I thank you Sir: Had I not known those custums, I shou'd have beene beholding to your Paper: But I beseech you, what's become of Katherine The Princesse Dowager? How goes her businesse?
1 That I can tell you too. The Archbishop Of Canterbury, accompanied with other Learned, and Reuerend Fathers of his Order, Held a late Court at Dunstable: five miles off From Ampthill, where the Princesse lay, to which She was often cytied by them, but appear'd not: And to be short, for not Appearance, and The Kings late Scruple, by the maine affent Of all these Learned men, she was diuorced, And the late Marriage made of none effect: Since which, she was removed to Kymmalton, Where the remaines now sickle.

2 Alas good Lady, The Trumpets found: Stand clace, The Queene is comming.

The Order of the Coronation.

1 A lively Flourish of Trumpets.
2 Then, two Judges.
3 Lord Chancellor, with Purse and Mace before him.
4 Quhirriter finginge. Musick.
5 Maior of London, bearing the Mace. Then Garter, in his Coat of Arms, and on his head he wore a Gilt Copper Crowne.
6 Marquess Dorset, bearing a scepter of Gold, on his head, a Dancy Coronel of Gold. With him, the Earle of Surrey, bearing the Rod of Silver with the Duke, Crowned with an Earles Coronet. Collars of Effic.
7 Duke of Suffolk, in his Robe of Essex, his Coronet on his head, bearing a long white Wand, as High Steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the Rod of Marshallship, a Coronet on his head. Collars of Effic.
8 A Canopy, borne by four of the Cinque Ports, under it the Queene in her Robe, in her biree, richly adorned with Pearles, Crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London, and Winchett.
9 The Olde Dutcheffe of Norfolk, in a Coronell of Gold, wrought with Flowers, bearing the Queenes Train.
10 Certaine Ladies or Countesse, with plain Circlets of Gold, without Flowers.
Excute, first passing over the Stage in Order and State, and then, A great Flourish of Trumpets.

2 A Royall Traine beleevue me: These I know: Who's that that bears the Seeueter?
1 Marquess Dorset, And that the Earle of Surrey, with the Rod.
2 A bold brave Gentleman. That should bee The Duke of Suffolk.
1 'Tis the same: high Steward.
2 And that my Lord of Norfolk?
1 Yes.
2 Heaven blefe thee, Thou haft the sweetest face I ever look'd on. Sir, as I have a Soule, she is an Angell; Our King ha's all the Indies in his Armes, And more, and richer, when he steaines that Lady, I cannot blame his Conscienice.
1 They that bear the Cloath of Honour ouer her, are four Barons of the Cinque-Ports.
2 Thofe men are happy, And fo are all, are nere her. I take it, she that carries vp the Traine, Is that old Noble Lady, Dutcheffe of Norfolk.
1 It is, and all the rest are Countesse.
2 Their Coronets say fo. These are Starses indeed, And sometimes falling ones.
3 No more of that, Enter a third Gentleman.
1 God fave you Sir. Where have you bin brouling?
3 Among the crow'd I'th'Abbey, where a finger Could not be wedg'd in more: I am futilised With the meere rankness of their joy.
2 You faw the Ceremony?
3 That I did.
1 How was it?
3 Well worth the being.
2 Good Sir, speake it to vs?

3 As well as I am able. The rich freamne Of Lords, and Ladies, haung brought the Queene To a prepar'd place in the Quire, fell off A diatance from her, while her Grace fate downe To reft a while, some halfe an houre, or fo, In a rich Chaire of State, oppining freely The Beauty of her Perfon to the People.
Believe me Sir, she is the goodwill Woman That ever lay by man: which when the people Had the full view of, such a noyse arose, As the frowdes make at Sea, in a fiffle Tempeft, As low'd, and to as many Tunes. Hats, Cloakes, (Doubles, I thinke) fwer vp, and had their Faces Bin loofe, this day they had beene loft. Such joy I never faw before. Great belly'd women, That had not halfe a wekeke to go, like Rammes In the old time of Warre, would chake the preffe And make 'em reele before 'em. No man luing Could fay this is my wife there, all were wuen So strangly in one piece.
2 But what follow'd?
3 At length, her Grace rofe, and with modell paces Came to the Altar, where the kneel'd, and Saint-like Call her faire eyes to Heaven, and pray'd devoutly. Then rose againe, and bow'd her to the people: When by the Arch-bishop of Canterbury, She had all the Royall makings of a Queene; As holy Oyle, Edward Conclors Crowne, The Rod, and Bird of Peace, and all fuch Emblemes Laid Nobly on her: which perform'd, the Quire
The Life of King Henry the Eight. 225

With all the choysest Musick of the Kingdome, Together sung Te Deum. So he parted, And with the fame full State pac’d backe againe To Yorke-Place, where the Feast is held.

Sir, You must no more call it Yorke-place, that’s past: For since the Cardinal fell, that Titles loft, ‘Tis now the Kings, and call’d White-Hall.

3 I know it: But ‘tis so lately alter’d, that the old name Is fresh about me.

2 What two Reverend Byfhopes Were those that went on each side of the Queenes?

3 Stoneley and Gardiner, the one of Winchester, Newly prefer’d from the Kings Secretary: The other London.

2 He of Winchester Is hold no great good lover of the Archbishops, The vertuous Cranmer.

3 All the Land knowes that: How euer, yet there is no great breach, when it comes Cranmer will finde a Friend will not shrinke from him.

2 Who may that be, I pray you.

3 Thomas Cranmer, A man in much efteeme with th’King, and truly

A worthy Friend. The King ha’s made him Master o’th’Jewell House, And one already of the Privy Council.

2 He will defire more.

3 Yes without all doubt.

Come Gentemans, ye shall go my way, Which is to th’Court, and there ye shall be my Guefts: Anything I can command. As I walk thither, Ile tell ye more.

Both. You may command vs Sir. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Katherine Demager, sick, lead betweene Griffith, her Gentleman Viser, and Patience her Waman.

Grif. How do’s your Grace?

Kath. O Griffith, t’ckle to death: My Legges like loaden Branches bow’th’Earth, Willing to leave their burthen: Reach a Chaire, So now (me thinkes) I feel a little eafe.

Did’t thou not tell me Griffith, as thou lead’t mee, That the great Childe of Honor, Cardinal Wolsey Was dead?

Grif. Yes Madam: but I thanke your Grace Out of the paine you suffer’d, gave no care too’t.

Kath. Pre’thee good Griffith, tell me how he dy’d. If well, he depp before me happli

For my example.

Grif. Well, the voyage goes Madam, For after the floute Earle Northumberland Arrested him at Yorke, and brought him forward As a man fairely tainted, to his Anfwere, He fell tike sodainly, and grew so ill He could not fit his Mule.

Kath. Alas poor man.

Grif. At last, with easie Rodes, he came to Leiceseter,

Lodg’d in the Abbey; where the reverend Abbot With all his Coutent, honourably receiued him: To whom he gave theft words. O Father Abbot, An old man, broken with the storms of State, Is come to lay his weary bones among ye: Give him a little earth for Charity, So went to bed; where eagerly his sickneffe Purf’d him still, and three nights after this, About the houre of eight, which he himselfe Foretold should be his laft, full of Repentance, Continuall Meditations, Tears, and Sorrowes, He gave his Honors to the world agen, His blesst part to Heauen, and depp in peace.

Kath. So may he rest, His Faults yee gently on him: Yet thus farre Griffith, give me leave to speake him, And yet with Charite, he was a man.

Of an unbounded thomacke, euer ranking Himselfe with Princes. One that byiggeltion Ty’d all the Kingdome, Symonole, was faire pla,

His owne Opinion was his Law. I’th’prefence He would lay vartrh, and be ever double, Both in his words, and meaning. He was newer (But where he meant to Ruine jittfull.)

His Promis, were as he then was, Mighty: But his performance, as he is now, Nothing: Of his owne body he was ill, and gaue

The Clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble Madam:

Mens eull manners, live in Brasse, their Vertues

We write in Water. May it pleafe your Highneffe To heare me speake his good now?

Kath. Yes good Griffith, I were malicious elfe.

Grif. This Cardinal, Though from an humble Stocke, vndoubtedly

Was fashion’d to much Honor. From his Cradle He was a Scholler, and a Piepe, and good one: Excedding wife, Elte spoked, and perfwading: Lofty, and fowre to them that lou’d him not: But to those men that fought him, sweet as Summer.

And though he were unfatisfied in getting, (Which was a ftinne) yet in beftowing, Madam, He was most Princely: Esuer witnesse for him Those twinne of Learning, that he rais’d in you, Ipswich and Oxford: one of which, fell with him, Vnwillling to out-lie the good that did it. The other (though vnfin’d) yet so Famous, So excellent in Art, and fll fo rifting. That Christfridone shall ever speake his Vertue.

His Overthrow, heep’d Happineffe vpon him: For then, and not till then, he felchimfelle,

And found the Bleffedneffe of being little.

And to adde greater Honors to his Age:

Then man could give him; he dy’d meaing God.

Kath. After my death, I with no other Herald, No other speake of my living Actions, To kepe mine Honor, from Corruption, But such an honfeet Chronicler as Griffith.

Whom I moff hated Liuing, thou haft made mee

Patience, be neere me flill, and let me lower, I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,

Caufe the Musftans playe me that fae note I nam’d my Kneel; whilf I sit meditating
On that Caelifalll Harmony I go too.
    Sad and solemn Musest.
Grif. She is asleep: Good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her. Softly, gentle Patience.

The Uffion.
Enter solemnly tripping one after another, five Personages, clad in white Robes, wearing on their heads Garlands of Bayre, and golden Vizards on their faces, Branches of Bayre or Palme in their hands. They first prostrate unto her, then Dance and at certain Places, the first two hold a faire
Garland over her Head, at which the other four make reverent Curtsies. Then the two that held the Garland, deliver the same to the other next two, who obserue the same order in their Changes, and holding the Garland over her head.
Which done, they deliver the same Garland to the last two:
who likewise obserue the same Order. At which (as it were by inspiration) the male (in their face) signs of rejoicing, and boldeth up their hands to heaven. And so, in their Dancing warne, carrying the Garland with them.
The Musicke continues.

Katb. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone?
And leave me heere in wretchednesse, behind ye?
Grif. Madam, we are heere.
Katb. It is not you I call for,
Saw ye none enter since I slept?
Grif. None Madam.
Katb. No! Saw you not even now a blest Troope
Invite me to a Banquet, whose bright faces
Call thousand beames vpon me, like the Sun?
They promis'd me eternall Happiness,
And brought me Garlands (Griffis) which I feele
I am not worthy yet to weare: I shall assurely.
Grif. I am most joyfull Madam, such good dreames
Poffible your Fancy.
Katb. Bid the Madick leaue,
They are harsh and heavy to me. Musick ceaseth.
Pat. Do you note
How much her Grace is alter'd on the sodaine?
How long her face is drawne? How pale the lookes,
And of an earthly cold? Marke her eyes?
Grif. She is going Wench. Pray, pray.
Pat. Heauen comfort her.
    Enter a Meflanger.
Mef. And't like your Grace——
Katb. You are a fawcey Fellow,
Defence who more Reverence?
Grif. You are too blame.
Knowing she will not looke her wonted Greatnesse
To vfe so rude behauour. Go too, kneele.
Mef. I humbly do entreat your Highnesse pardon,
My hart made me vnnaturally. There is hyling
A Gentleman sent from the King, to see you.
Katb. Admit him entrance Griffis. But this Fellow
Let me ne're see agane.
    Enter Lord Capucius.
If my sight falle not,
You would be Lord Ambaffador from the Emperor,
My Royall Nephew, and your name Capucius.
Cap. Madam the fame. Your Servant.
Katb. O my Lord,
The Times and Titles now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you knew me.
But I pray you,
What is your pleazure with me?

Cap. Noble Lady,
First mine owne seruice to your Grace, the next
The Kings requell, that I would visit you,
Who graces much for your weakeflie, and by me
Sends you his Princeuely Commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort.
Katb. O my good Lord, that comfort comes too late,
"Tis like a Pardon after Execution;
That gentile Physick given in time, had cur'd me:
But now I am past all Comforts here, but Prayers.
How does his Highnesse?
Cap. Madam in good health.
Katb. So may he euer do, and euer flourisht,
When I shall dwell with Wormes, and my poore name
Banish'd the Kingdome. Patience, is that Letter
I cant' you write, yet sent away?
Pat. No Madam.
Katb. Sir, I must humbly pray you to deliver
This to my Lord the King.
Cap. Mott willing Madam.
Katb. In which I have commended to his highnesse
The Modell of our chafe louses: his yong daughter,
The dewes of Heauen fall thickke in Blessings on her,
Befeeching him to glue her vertuous breeding.
She is yong, and of a Noble modest Nature,
I hope she will deferve well; and a little
To love her for her Mothers sake, that lovd him,
Heauen knows how dearly.
My next poore Petition,
Is, that his Noble Grace would have some pittie
Vpon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my Fortunes, faithfully,
Of which there is not one, I dare asow.
(And now I should not lye) but will deferve
For Vertue, and true Beautie of the Soule,
For honnestie, and decent Carriage
A right good Husband (let him be a Noble)
And sure thofe men are happy that shall haue'em.
The lat is for my men, they are the poorest,
(But poorety could never draw 'em from me)
That they may haue their wages, duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by.
If Heauen had pleased to have givn me longer life
And able meanes, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole Contents, and good my Lord,
By that you loue the deereft in this world,
As you with Chriftian peace to foules departed,
Stand these poore peoples Friend, and vge the King
To do me this laft right.
Cap. By Heauen I will,
Or let me looke the fasion of a man.
Katb. I thank you honett Lord. Remember me
In all humilitie vnto his Highnesse:
Say his long trouble now is pifing
Out of this world. Tell him in death I blest him
(For so I will) mine eyes grow dimme. Farewell
My Lord. Griffis farewell. Nay Patience,
You must not leave me yet. I must to bed,
Call in more women. When I am dead,good Wench,
Let me be well with Honor; drew me over
With Maiden Flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste Wife, to my Graue: Embalm me,
Then lay me forth (although vnqueen'd) yet like
A Queene, and Daughter to a King enterre me.
I can no more.

Exeunt leading Katherine.

Scena 562.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovell.

Gard. It's one a clocke Boy, is't not.
Boy. It hath frappeke.
Gard. Thefe should be hours for necessadies,
Not for delights: Times to repayre our Nature.
With comforting repose, and not for vs
To waite these times. Good hour of night Sir Thomas:
Whether so late?
Lou. Came you from the King, my Lord?
Gar. I did Sir Thomas, and left him at Primero
With the Duke of Suffolk.
Lou. I must to him too
Before he go to bed. Ite me take my leave.
Sir (may not you Sir Thomas Lovell? what's the matter?
It seems you are in haft: and if there be
No great offence belongs too, give your Friend
Some touch of your late bufineffe: Affairs that walkes (As they say Spirits do) at midnight, have
In them a wilder Nature, then the bufineffe
That seekes dispatch by day.
Lou. My Lord, I love you,
And durst commend a secret to your care
Much weightier then this worke. The Queens In Labor
They say in great Extremity, and fear'd
She'll with the Labour, end.
Gard. The fruites she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may finde
Good time, and lufe: but for the Stocke Sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd vp now.
Lou. Me thinks I could
Cry the Amen, and yet my Confidence fayes
She's a good Creature, and sweet-Ladie do's
Defere our better wifhes.
Gard. But Sir, Sir,
Hear me Sir Thomas, y'are a Gentleman
Of mine owne waye. I know you Wife, Religious,
And let me tell you, it will ne're be well,
"Twill not Sir Thomas Lovell, tak't of me,
Till Cranmer, Cromwel, her two hands, and thee
Sleepe in their Graves.
Louel. Now Sir, you speake of two
The moft remark'd i'th'Kingtome: as for Cromwel,
Beside that of the Jewell-Houfe, is made Master
O'th' Rolles, and the Kings Secretarie. Further Sir,
Stands in the gap and Trade of mee Preferments,
With which the Lime will load him. Th'Archbyshop
Is the Kings hand, and tongue, and who dare speak
One fellable against him?
Gard. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that Dare, and I my selfe have ventur'd
To speake my minde of him: and indeed this day,
Sir (I may tell it you) I thinkke I have Incedt the Lords o'th'Council, that he is (For to I know he is, they know he is)
A moft Arch-Heretique, a Peffilence
That does infect the Land: with which, they mowed
Have broken with the King, who hath fo farre
Glenr care to our Complaints, of his great Grace,
And Princely Care, fore-seeing thofe fell Mischiefes,
Our Reasons layd before him, hath commanded
To morrow Morning to the Counsell Board
He be commendt. He's a ranke weed Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your Affairs
I hinder you too long: Good night, Sir Thomas.
Exit Gardiner and Page.
Lou. Many good nights, my Lord, I left your seruant.

Enter King and Suffolk.

King. Charles, I will play no more to night,
My minde not on, you are too hard for me.
Suff. Sir, I did never win of you before.

Suff. Sir, I did never win of you before.

King. But little Charles,
Nor shall not when my Fancies on my play.
Now Louell, from the Queene what is the Newes.
Lou. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman,
I sent your Message, who return'd her thanks
In the great't hemblenesse, and defir'd your Highnese
Molt heartily to pray for her.

King. What say't thou? Ha?
To pray for her? What is the crying out?
Lou. So faid her woman, and that her suffran ce made
Almoft each pang, a death.
King. Alas good Lady.
Suff. God safely quit her of her Burthen, and
With gentle Tranquility, to the Gladding of Your Highnese with an Heire.

King. "Tis midnight Charles,
Prythee to bed, and in thy Prayres remember
Th'extate of my poor Queene. Leue me alone,
For I muft thinkte of that, which company
Would not be friendly too.
Suff. I wish your Highnese
A quiet night, and my good Mistris will Remember in my Prayrs.

King. Charles good night.

Well Sir, what follows?

Enter Sir Anthony Denny.

Den. Sir, I haue brought my Lord the Arch-bishop,
As you commanded me.

King. Ha' Canterbury?
Den. I my good Lord.
King. "Tis true: where is he Denny?
Den. He attends your Highnese pleasure.
King. Bring him to vs.
Lou. This is about that, which the Byshop spake,
I am happily come hither.

Enter Cranmer and Denny.

King. Auoyd the Gallery.
Louel seems to fay.
Ha? I have faid. Be gone,
What?

Exeunt Louell and Denny.

Cran. I am fairefull: Wherefore frownes he thus?
"Tis his Aspecft of Terror. All's not well.

King. How now my Lord?
You do define to know wherefore
I sent for you.

Cran. It is my dutt
T'attend your Highnese pleasure.

King. Pray you attie
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury:
Come, you and I must walke a turne together,
I haue Newes to tell you.
Come, come, give me your hand.
Ah my good Lord, I grieve at what I speake,
And I right fortes to repeat what follows.
I haue, and most vnwillingly of late

Heard
Heard many greeneous. I do say my Lord
Greewsous complaints of you; which being consider'd,
Have moor'd V's, and our Councell, that you shall
This Morning come before us, where I know
You cannot with such freedome purge your fylfe,
But that till further Triall, in those Charges
Which will require your Answer, you must take
Your patience to, and be well contented
To make your house, our Toure: you, a Brother of vs
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witnesse
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank thee Highnessse,
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Mocht throughly to be winnowed, where my Chaffe
And Corne shal be seuer: for I know
There's none stands vnder more calamous tongues,
Then I my selfe, poore man.

King. Stand vp, good Canterbury,
Thy Truth, and thy Integrity is rooted
In vs thy Friend. Glue me thy hand, flame vp,
Pythee let's walke. Now by my Holyame,
What manner of man are you? My Lord, I look'd
You would have giv'n me your Petition, that
I shou'd have tane some paines, to bring together
Your fylfe, and your Accusers, and to have heard you
Without insurance further.

Cran. Moft dread Liãge,
The good I stand on, is my Truth and Honestie.
If they shall fail, I with mine Enemies
Will triumph o'ver my perfon, which I weigh not,
Being of thofe Virtues vacant. I feare nothing
What can be faid against me.

King. Knowe you not
How your estate stands th'world, with the whole world?
Your Enemies are many, and not small; their pratiles
Mocht beare the fame proportion, and not ever
The Iudice and the Truth o'th'question carries
The dew o'th'Versedict with it; at what eafe
Might corrupt mindes procure, Knowes as corrupt
To sweare against you: Such things haue bene done.
You are Potently oppo'd, and with a Malice
Of as great Sire. Witness you of better lucke,
I meane in perier'd Witnesse, then your Mafter,
Whose Minister you are, whiles heere he liu'd
Vpon this naughty Earth? Go too, go too,
You take a Precept for no leape of danger,
And woe your owne defection.

Cran. God, and your Majesty,
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me.

King. Be of good cheere,
They shall no more preassile, then we glue way too:
Keep comfort to you, and this Morning fee
You do appeare before them. If they shall chance
In charging you with matters, to commit you:
The belt perfections to the contrary
Faile not to vs, and with what vehemencie
Th'occafion shall inculfe you. If intentions
Will render you no remedy, this King
Deliver them, and your Appeal to vs
There make before them. Looke, the goodman weeps:
He's honest on mine Honor. Gods bleeft Mother,
I sweare he is true-heard, and a foule
None better in my Kingdome. Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you.

Exit Cranmer.
He ha's strangel his Language in his teares.

Enter Olde Lady.

Gent.within. Come backe: what meane you?
Lady. Ie come not backe, the ytynings that I bring
Will make my bolderize, manneres. Now good Angels
Fly o're thy Royall head, and glade thy person
Vnder their blessed wings.

King. Now by thy looks
I gife thy Messagge. Is the Queenes deliver'd?
Say I, and of a boy.

Lady. I, by my Liege,
And of a lovely Boy: the God of heaven
Both now, and euer bleffe her: 'Tis a Gyrl
Promises Boyes hereafter. Sir, your Queen
Defires your Visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger: 'tis as like you,
As Cherry, is to Cherry.

King. Louell.
Lou. Sir.

King. Gine her an hundred Markes.
Ie to the Queen.
Exit King.

Lady. An hundred Markes? By this light, Ie ha more.
An ordinary Groome is for such payment.
I will have more, or faile it out of him.
Said I for this, the Gyrl was like to him? Ie
Hauue more, or else uyfay't: and now, whiles it hot,
Ie put it to the issue. Exit Lady.

Scena Secunda.

Cran. I hope I am not too late, and yet the Gentleman
That was sent to me from the Councell, pray'd me
To make great haft. All fit? What means this? Hoa?
Who waits there? Sure you know me?

Enter Keeper.

Keep. Yes, my Lord:
But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

Keep. Your Grace must waft wight till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor Batts.

Cran. So.

Batts. This is a Peere of Malice: I am glad
I came this way so happily. The King
Shall vnderstand it presently.

Cran. 'Tis Batts.

The Kings Phyſitian, as he paff alon
How earnefly he ca∫ his eyes upon me:
Pray heaven he found not my disgrace for certaine
This is of purpofe laid by some that hate me,
(God turne their hearts, I never fought their malice)
To quench mine Honor; they would shame to make me
Wait eile at doore: a fellow Councellor
'Mong Boyes, Groomes, and Lackeyes,
But their pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the King and Batts, at a Windowe above.

Batts. He shew your Grace the strangest fight.

King. What's that Batts?

Batts.
Butts. I think your Highness saw this many a day.

Kim. Body a me: where is it?

Butts. There my Lord:
The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury,
Who holds his State at dores 'mongst Purveyors,
Pages, and Foot-boys.

Kim. Ha? 'Tis he indeed?
Is this the Honour they doe one another?
'Tis well there's one above 'em yet; I had thought
They had parted so much honestly among 'em,
At least good manners; as not thus to fuller
A man of his Place, and so neere our faour
To dance attendance on their Lordships pleasures,
And at the dores too, like a Pult with Packets:
By holy Mary (Butts) there's knavery,
Let 'em alone, and draw the Curtain close:
We shall hear more anon.

A Council Table brought in with Chayres and Stools, and placed under the State. Enter Lord Chancellor, places himself at the upper end of the Table, on the left hand: A
State being left void about him, as for Canterbury's State.
Duke of Suffolk, Duke of Norfolk, Surrey, Lord Chamerlaine, Gardiner, set themselves in Order on each side.
Cromwell at lower end, as Secretary.
Chan. Spake to the bufineffe, M. Secretary;
Why are we met in Council?

Cham. Please your Honours,
The chiefe caufe concerns his Grace of Canterbury.

Gard. Ha's he had knowledge of it?

Cham. Yes.

Nort. Who waits there?

Keyp. Without my Noble Lords?

Gard. Yes.

Keyp. My Lord Archbishop:
And he's done halfe an houre to know your pleasures.

Cham. Let him come in.

Keep. Your Grace may enter now.

Crom. Approaches the Council Table.

Cham. My good Lord Archbishop, I'm very sorry
To fit here at this present, and behold
That Chayre stand empty: But we all are men
In our owne natures frail and capable.
Of our fleth, few are Angelic out of which frailty
And want of wisdom, you that beft should teach vs,
Have midsmeand'd your selves, and not a little:
Towards the King frill, then his Laves, in filling
The whole Realme, by your teaching & your Chaplains
(For fo we are inform'd) with new opinions,
Divers and dangerous; which are Heretickes:
And not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gard. Which Reformation must be fodeine too
My Noble Lords; for thofe that tame wild Horfes,
Fare 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle;
But flop their mouths with stubborn Bits & fpirre 'em,
Till they obey the mannage. If we fuffer
Out of our cainiff and childifh pity
To one mans Honour, this contagious fickneffe;
Farewell all Phyfick: and what follows then?
Commotions, vrens, with a general Tant.
Of the whole State, as of late dayes our neighbours,
The vpper Germany can dearly winneffe:
Yet feffion pitted in our memories.

Cham. My good Lords; Hitherto, in all the Progreffe
Both of my Life and Office, I have laboured,
And with no little studie, that my teaching
And the strong courfe of my Authority,
Might goe one way, and safely; and the end
Was euer to doe well: nor is there living,
(I speake it with a fingle heart, my Lords)
A man that more detests, more flirees againft,
Both in his private Conience, and his place,
Defcarers of a publique peace then I doe:
Pray Heauen the King may neuer find a heart
With laffe Alleegance in it. Men that make
Enjoy, and crooked malice, nourishment:
Dare bite the belt. I doe benethe your Lordships,
That in this cafe of Iuflices, my Accufers,
Be what they will, may hand forth face to face,
And freely vrg against me.

Suff. Nay, my Lord,
That cannot be, you are a Counsellor,
And by that vntile no man dare accuse you.

Cham. My Lord, because we have busines of more mo-
We will be short with you. 'Tis his Highneffe pleasure
And our content, for better tryall of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower,
Where being but a private man againe,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More then (I fear) you are procured for.

Gard. Ah my good Lord of Winchesfier: I thank you,
You are always my good Friend, if your will paffe,
I shall both finde your Lordship, Judge and Juror,
You are fo mercifull. I fee your end,
'Tis my vndoing. Loue and meckenefse, Lord
Become a Churchman, better then Ambition:
Win straying Soules with modesty againe,
Caf none away: That I shall cleere my felfe,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt as you doe confidence,
In doing dayly wrongs. I could fay more,
But reuerence to your calling, makes me meafe."t.

Gard. My Lord, my Lord, you are a Sechary,
That's the plaite truth; your painted gloffe difcours
To men that vnderfand you, words and weakneffe.

Cham. My Lord of Winchesfier, 'tis fo little,
By your good faour, too sharp: Men fo Noble,
How euer fuccy, yet fhould finde refpect,
For what they have bene: 'tis a cruelty,
To load a falling man.

Gard. Good M. Secretary,
I cry your Honour mercie, you may worfe.
Of all this Table fay fo.

Gard. Why my Lord?
Gard. Doe not I know you for a Favourer
Of this new Sech? ye are not found.

Gard. Not found?

Gard. Not found I fay.

Cham. Would you were haile: fo hones:

Mens prayers then would feeke you, not their fears.

Gard. I shall remember this bold Language.

Cham. Doe.

Remember your bold life too.

Cham. This is too much;

Forwarme for shame my Lords.

Gard. I have done.

Cham. And I.

Gard. Then thus for you my Lord, it stands agreed
I take it, by all voyces: That forthwith,
You be confaiud to th' Tower a Prisoner;
There to remaine till the Kings further pleaffe
Be knowne vnto vs: are you all agreed Lords.
All. We are.

 Cran. Is there no other way of mercy, But I must needs to th' Tower-my Lords? Gard. What other, Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome. Let some o'th' Guard be ready there. Enter the Guard. Cran. For me? Muft I goe like a Traytor thither? Gard. Recede him, And see him safe i'th' Tower. Cran. Stay good my Lords, I have a little yet to say. Looke there my Lords, By vertue of that RIng, I take my caufe Out of the grises of cruel men, and glue it To a most Noble Judge, the King my Maifer. Cham. This is the Kings Ring. Surr. 'Tis no counterfeite. Suff. 'Tis the right Ring; by Heau'n: I told ye all, When we first put this dangerous hone a rowling, 'Twill fall vpon our felues. Norf. Doe you thinke my Lords The King will fuffer but the little finger Of this man to be vex'd? Cran. 'Tis now too certaine; How much more is his Life in value with him? Would I were fairly out on't. Cran. My mind gave me, In seeking tales and Informations Against this man, whole honestly the Diuell And his Disciples only enuy at, Ye blee the fire that burns ye; now have at ye. Enter King frowning on them, takes his Seate. Gard. Dread Soueraigne, How much are we bound to Heauen, In dayly thankes; that gave us fuch a Prince; Not onely good and wife, but moft religious; One that in all obedience, makes the Church The cheefe ayme of his Honour, and to strengthens That holy duty out of deare respect, His Royall felfe in judgement comes to hear The caufe betwixt her, and this great offender. Kin. You were euer good at fadaine Compendations, Bishop of Winchefter. But know I come not To heare fuch flattery now, and in my presence They are too thin, andafe to hide offences, To me you cannot reach. You play the Spaniell, And thinke with wagging of your tongue to win me. But whatfoere thou tak'ft me for; I'm fure Thou haft a cruel Nature and a bloody. Gard. Good man fit downe: Now let me fee the proudest Bee, that dares moft, but wag his finger at thee. By all that's holy, he had better flame, Then but once thinke his place becomes thee not. Surr. May it pleafe your Grace; ——— Kin. No Sir, it doe's not pleafe me, I had thought, I had had men of some understanding, And wifedom of my Counsell; but I finde none: Was it difcretion Lords, to let this man, This good man (few of you deferve that Title) This honeft man, wait like a lowfie Foot-boy At Chamber door? and one, as great as you are? Why, what a fame was this? Did my Commination Bid ye fo farre forget your felues? I gave ye Power, as he was a Counsellour to try him, Not as a Groome: There's some of ye, I fee, More out of Malice then Integrity, Would trye him to the vmoft, had ye meane, Which ye shall neuer have while I live. Cham. Thus farre My moft dread Soueraigne, may it like your Grace, To let my tongue excufe all. What was purpofd Concerning his Imprifonment, was rather (If there be faith in men) meant for his Tryall, And faire purgation to the world then malice, I'm fure in me. Kin. Well, well my Lords reufe him, Take him, and vite him well; he's worthy of it. I will say thus much for him, if a Prince May be heolding to a Subiect; I Am for his loue and fervice, so to him. Make me no more ado, but all embrace him; Be friends for shame my Lords: My Lord of Canterbury I have a Suite which you muft not deny me. That is, a faire young Maid that yet wants Baptifme, You muft be Godfather, and a Knofler for her. Cran. The greatest Monarch now alive may glory In fuch an honour: how may I defende it, That am a poore and humble Subiect to you? Kin. Come, come my Lord, you'd scape your spoones; You shall have two noble Partners with you: the old Duchsfeffe of Norfak, and Lady Margareffe Darfor? will thefe pleafe you? Once more my Lord of Winchefter, I charge you Embrace, and loue this man. Gard. With a true heart, And Brothers; loove I doe it. Cran. And let Heauen Witness how darre, I hold this Confirmation. (hearts, Kin. Good Man, thofe joyfull teares shew thy true The common voyce I fee is verified Of thee, which fayes thus: Doe my Lord of Canterbury A frownd tune, and hee's your friend for euer: Come Lords, we trifle time away: I long To have this yong one made a Chriftian, As I have made ye one Lords,one remaine: So I grow stronger, you more Honour gaine. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Novye and Tamuli within: Enter Porter and his man.

Port. You'll leave your novye anon ye Rascals: doe you take the Court for Parilh Garden: ye rude Slaues, leave your gaping to a Subiect: I

Within. Good M. Porter I belong to th' Larder. Port. Belong to th' Gallows, and be hang'd ye Rogue: Is this a place to roare in? Fetch me a dozen Crab-tree flaues, and strong ones; thefe are but folettes to 'em: He scratch your heads; you muft be feeling Chriftenings? Do you looke for Alis, and Cakes heere, you rude Rasckalla?

Man. Pray Sir be patient; 'tis as much imposible, Vnleffe we wee'pe 'em from the dore with Cannons, To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em fiepe

On May-day Morning, which will neuer be:

We may as well push against Powles as firre 'em.

Tor. How got they in, and he hang'd?

Man.
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

Man. Alas I know not, how gets the Tide in?
As much as one found Cudgel of four foot,
(You see the poore remainder) could distribute, I made no spare Sir.
Port. You did nothing Sir.
Man. I am not Sampson, nor Sir Guy, nor Cbrand,
To mow 'em downe before me: but if I spair'd any
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or she, Cuckold or Cuckold-maker:
Let me ne're hope to see a Chine againe,
And that I would not for a Cow, God save her.
Within. Do you hear M. Porter?
Port. I shall be with you presently, good M. Pappy,
Kepe the dore clofe Sirha.
Man. What would you have me doe?
Por. What should you doe,
But knock 'em downe by th' dozens? Is this More fields to muffer in?
Or haue wee some strange Indian with the great Tools, come to Court, the women to beafe vs? Bless me, what a fyry of Fornication is at dore? On my Chriftine, this one Chriftening will beget a thousand, here will bee Father, God-father, and all togethер.
Man. The Spoons will be the bigger Sir: There is a fellow somewhat neere the doore, he should be a Braffer by his face, for o'my confidence twenty of the Dogs dayes now reigne in't Nova; all that stand about him are under the Line, they need no other penance: that Fire-Drake did I hitt three times on the head, and three times was his Nole discharged against mee; hee stands there like a Morter-piece to blow vs. There is a Habberda-thers Wife of small wit, neere him, that rail'd vs, till her pinch'd porreger fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the State. I miff the Meteor once, and hit that Woman, who cryed out Clubbes, when I might see from farre, some forty Trunchoners draw to her succour, which were the hope o'th Strond where she was quartered; they fell on, I made good my place; at length they came to th'brooms staffe to mee, I defide 'em full, when sodainly a File of Boyes behind'em, loud shot, deluell'd such a flourre of Pibbles, that I was faie to draw mine Honour in, and let 'em win the Worke, the Duell was amongst 'em I think fully.
Por. These are the youths that thunder at a Playhoufe, and fight for bitter Apples, that no Audience but the tribulation of Tower Hill, or the Limbes of Limehoufe, their desire Brothers are able to endure. I haue some of 'em Army cannot rule, and there they are like to dance these three dayes besides the running Banquet of two Beadles, that is to come.

Enter Lord Chamberlaine.
Cham. Mercy o' me: what a Multitude are here?
They grow fill too; from all Parts they are comming,
As if we kept a Faire here? Where are thefe Porters?
These lazy knaves? Y'haue made a fine hand followers?
Therea trim rable let in: are all thefe
Your faithfull friends o'th Suburbs? We shall have Great flore of roome no doubt, left for the Ladies,
When they paffe backe from the Chriftening?
Por. And't please your Honour,
We are but menzag what so many may doe,
Not being tore a pieces, we haue done:
A Nation cannot rule 'em.
Cham. As I lye,
If the King blame me for't; Ile lay ye all
By th'heele, and foadilyhand on your heads
Clap round Fines for neglect: y'are lazy knaves,
And here ye lye bating of Bombards, when
Ye should doe Service. Harke the Trumpets found,
Th'are come already from the Chriftening,
Go breake among the præffe, and finde away out
To let the Troope pace fairly, or Ile finde
A Marchallay, shall hold ye play these two Monthes.
Por. Make way there, for the Princesse.
Man. You great fellow
Stand close vp, or Ile make your head ake.
Por. You 'tch'Chamblet, get vp o'th'raile,
Ile pecke you o're the pales elfe.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Trumpets sounding: Then two Aldermen, L. Mayor,
Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolk, with his Marshalls Staffs, Duke of Suffolk, two Noblemen, bearing great standing Bowsis for the Chriftening Gifftis: Then fure Noblemen bearing a Canopy, under which the Dutchiffs of Norfolk, Godmother, bearing the Child richly habited in a Mantle, &c. Traine borne by a Lady: Then follows the Marchioneffe Dorjet, the other Godmother, and Ladies. The Troope paffe once about the Stage, and Garter Speakes.

Garti. Heauen
From thy enendlefe goodnesse, send profertous life,
Long, and euer happie, to the high and Mighty
Princesse of England Elizabeb.

Flouribh. Enter King and Guard.
Cran. And to your Royall Grace, & the good Queen,
My Noble Partners, and my felte thus pray
All comfort, joy in this most gracious Lady,
Heauen euer laid vp to make Parents happy,
May hourely fall vp ye.
Kin. Thankye you good Lord Archifhop:
What is her Name?
Cran. Elizabeb.
Kin. Stand vp Lord,
With this Kifke, take my Bleffing: God protect thee,
Into whole hand, I glue thy Life.
Cran. Amen.
Kin. My Noble Gofips, y'haue bene too Prodigall;
I thanke ye heartily: So Shall this Lady,
When she ha's to much English.
Cran. Let me speake Sir,
For Heauen now bids me; and the words I ytter,
Let none thinke Flattery; for they'j finde 'em Truth.
This Royall Infant, Heauen still cute about her;
Though in her Cradle yet now promis
Upon this Land a thousand thousand Bleffings,
Which Time shall bring to ripeness: She shall be,
(But few now living can behold that goodnesse)
A Patterne to all Princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was neuer
More courous of Wifedom, and faire Vertue
Then this rare Soule shall be. All Princely Graces
That would vp fuch a mighty Piece as this is,
With all the Vertues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her. Truth shall Nurfe her,
Holy and Heauenly thoughts flill Counsell her:
She shall be lou'd and fear'd. Her owne shall bleffe her;
Her Foes shake like a Field of beaten Corne,
And hang their heads with sorrow:
Good growes with her.
In her dayes, Every Man shall eate in safety,
Vnder his owne Vine what he plants; and sing
The merry Songs of Peace to all his Neighbours.
God shall be truely knowne, and thole about her,
From her shall read the perfect way of Honour,
And by those claim their greatnesse;not by Blood.
Nor shal this peace fleepe with her: But as when
The Bird of wonder dies, the Mayden Phoenix,
Her Athes new create another Heyre,
As great in admiration as her felke.
So shal she leave her Blefledneffe to One,
(When Heauen thall call her from this clowd of darknes)
Who, from the sacred Athes of her Honour
Shall Star-like rife, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fix'd. Peace, Plenty, Loue, Truth, Terror,
That were the Servants to this choisen Infant,
Shall then be his, and like a Vine grow to him;
Where euer the bright Sunne of Heauen shall shine,
His Honour, and the greatnesse of his Name,
Shall be, and make new Nations. He shall flourishe,
And like a Mountaine Cedar, reach his branches,
To all the Planes about him: Our Childrens Children
Shall see this, and bleffe Heauen.

Kin. Thou speakeft wonders.
Can. She shall be to the happinesse of England,
An aged Princess; many dayes shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to Crowne it.
Would I had knowne no more: But the muft dye,
She muft, the Saints muft have her; yet a Virgin,
A moft vnprouched Lilly shall the paffe
To th' ground, and all the World shall mourn her.

Kin. O Lord Archbishop
Thou haff made me now a man, never before
This happy Child, did I get any thing.
This Oracle of comfort, ha's fo pleau'd me,
That when I am in Heauen, I shall desire
To see what this Child does, and praise my Maker.
I thanke ye all. To you my good Lord Major,
And you good Brethren, I am much beholding:
I have receiued much Honour by your presence.
And ye shall find me thankfull. Lead the way Lords,
Ye muft all see the Queene, and the muft thanke ye,
She will be ficke els. This day, no man thinke
'Has buynnele at his house; for all shall say:
This Little-One shall make it Holy-day,

THE EPILOGVE.

Is ten to one, this Play can never please
All that are here: Some come to take their ease,
And flape an Act or two; but those we fcare
W'd have frighted with our Tumpets: fo 'tis clear
They'll fay its naught. Others to hear the City
Mud'd extremly, and to cry that's witty,
Which we have not done neither; that I fcare

All the expreffed good we're like to heare.
For this Play at this time, is very fit
The mercifull congratulation of good women,
For such a one we shou'd'em: If they smile,
And fay twill do: I know within a while,
All the old men are ours, for 'tis ill bate,
If they bide, when their Ladies bid 'em clap.

FINIS.
The Prologue.

In Troy there lies the Scene: From Iles of Greece
The Princes Orgilous, their high blood chaf'd
Have to the Port of Athens sent their shippes
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel Warre: Sixty and nine that were
Their Crowns Regall, from th' Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia, and their vow is made
To ransacke Troy, within whose strong emures
The rauish'd Helen, Menelaus Queene,
With wanton Paris sleepe, and that's the Quarrell.
To Tenedos they come,
And the deepe-drawing Barke do there disgorge
Their warlike fraughtage: now on Dardan Plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greekes do pitch
Their braue Pauillions. Priams six-gated City,
Dardan and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
And Antenondus with maffie Staples
And corresponfiue and fulfilling bolts
Stirre up the Sonnes of Troy.
Now Expectation tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard. And hereby I come,
A Prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of Authors pen, or Actors voice; but suited
In like conditions, as our Argument;
To tell you (faire Beholders) that our Play
Leapes are the vaunt and firelings of those broyles,
Beginning in the middle: starting thence away,
To what may be digested in a Play:
Like, or finde fault, do as your pleasures are,
Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of Warre.
THE TRAGEDIE OF
Troylus and Crefsida.

Actus Primus.  Scena Prima.

Enter Pandarus and Troylus.

Troylus.

Pand. All here my Varlet, I'll unarmed againe.

Why should I warre without the walls of Troy
That finde such cruell battell here within ?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,
Let him to field, Troylus alse hath none.

Pan. Will this greeke, her be medled ?

Troy. The Greeks are strong, & skillful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fiercenesse Valiant :
But I am weaker then a woman's teare ;
Tamer then fiepe, fonder then ignorance ;
Leffe valiant then the Virgin in the night,
And skilfull as vnpractis'd Infamce.

Pan. Well, I haue told you enough of this: For my part,
Ie not meddle nor make no farther. Hee that will have a Cake out of the Wheat, must needs tarry the grinding.

Troy. Have I not tarried ?

Pan. I the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Troy. Have I not tarried ?

Pan. I the boulding; but you must tarry the leauing.

Troy. Still have I tarried.

Pan. I, to the leauening! but heeres yet in the word hereafter, the Kneading, the making of the Cake, the heating of the Oven, and the Baking; nay, you must lay the cooling too, or you may chance to burne your lips.

Troy. Patience her selfe, what Goddeffe ere she be,
Doth leffer blench at sufferance, then I doe:
At Primus Royal Table doe I sit ;
And when faire Cressid comes into my thoughts, So (Trator) then she comes, when she is thence.

Pan. Well:

She look'd yeernight fairer, then ever I saw her looke,
Or any woman eie.

Troy. I was about to tell thee, when my heart,
As wedged with a fish, would rise in twaine,
Leaff Helen, or my Father should perceiue me :
I haue (as when the Sunne doth light a-corne)
Buried this fish, in wrinkle of a smile :
But forrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladnesse,
is like that mirth, Fate turns to sudden fadenesse.

Pan. And her hair was not somewhat darker then Helen's, well go too, there were no more comparison betweene the Women. But for my part she is my Kinfwoman, I would not (as they terme it) praise it, but I would some-body had heard her talke yesterday as I did: I will not dispraise your Father Cressida's wit, but —

Troy. Oh Pandarus! I tell thee Pandarus;
When I doe tell thee, there my hopes lye drown'd ;
Reply not in how many Fame's deep.
They lye indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love. Thou answert's fhe is Faire,
Powe'r in the open Vicer of my heart,
Her Eyes, her Haire, her Cheeks, her Gate, her Voice,
Handlest in thy discourse. O that her Hand
(In whose comparison, all whites are Inke)
Writing their owne reproach; to whom selfe Faire,
The Cignets Downe is harth, and spirit of Senfe
Hard as the palmes of Plough-man. This thou tel'st me;
As true thou tel'st me, when I say I love her:

But saying thus, instead of Oyle and Balme,
Thou lai't in every galt that love hath gien me,
The Knife that made it.

Pan. I speake no more then truth.

Troy. Thou do'st not speake so much.

Pan. Faith, Ie not meddle in't: Let her be as she is,
if she be faire, 'tis the better for her: and she be not, the ha's the mends in her owne hands.

Troy. Good Pandarus: How now Pandarus?

Pan. I haue had my Labour for my travell, I'll thought on of her, and I'll thought on of you; Gone betweene and betweene, but small thanks for my labour.

Troy. What art thou angry Pandarus? what with me?

Pan. Because she's Kenne to me, therefore shee's not so faire as Helen, and she were not kin to me, she would be as faire on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not and she were a Black-a-Moor, 'tis all one to me.

Troy. Say I she is not faire?

Troy. I doe not care whether you doe or no. Shee's a Fool to flay behind her Father: Let her to the Greeks, and to Ile tell her the next time I see her: for my part, Ie meddle nor make no more l'th matter.

Troy. Pandarus?

Pan. Not I.

Troy. Sweet Pandarus.

Pan. Pray you speake no more to me, I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

Exit Pand.

Sound Alarum.

Tro. Peace you vngroossious Clamors, peace rude sounds,
Fooles on both sides, Helen must needs be faire,
When with your bloud you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight vpon this Argument:

570
The Tragedie of Troylus and Cressida.

It's too damn'd a fobbeft for my Sword,
But Pandarus: O Gods! How do you plague me?
I cannot come to Creiffid but by Pandar.
And he's as teachy to be woo'd to woe,
As she is stubborn, chaff, against all fault,
Tell me Apollo for the Dephnes Lawe
What Creffid is, what Pandar, and what we:
Her bed is Indis, there she lies a Peerle,
Between our Illum, and where thee recides
Let it be cald the wild and wandring flood;
Our fulfil the Merchant, and this faying Pandar,
Our doublfull hope, our conuoy and our Bark.
A Luram. Enter £Enas.
£Enas. How now Prince Troylus?
Wherefore not a field?
Troy. Because not there; this woman's answer forts.
For who is there, but a saucy Peaare?
What news £Enas from the field to day?
£Enas. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.
Troy. By whom £Enas?
£Enas. Troylus by Menelaus.
Paris is got with Menelaus home.
£Enas. Harke what good sport is out of Towne to day.
Troy. Better at home, if would I might were may:
But to the sport abroad, are you bound thither?
£Enas. In all Swift haste.
Troy. Come gos wee then together.
Excuse.

£Enas. Who were those went by?
Man. Queen Hecuba, and Hellen.
£Enas. And whether go they?
Man. Up to the Enteraine Tower,
Whose height commands as subiect all the vaile,
To see the battell: Heitor whose pacience,
Is as a Vertue fix't, to day was mou'd: he Chaltes Ambro, and frooke his Armeron,
And like as there were husbandry in Warre
Before the Sunne rose, he was harnette lyte,
And to the field goe's he; where every flower
Did as a Prophet wepe what it forsw,
In Heitor's wrath.
£Enas. What was his cause of anger?
Man. The note£s goe's this:
There is among the Grecies,
A Lord of Troian blood, Nephew to Heitor,
They call him A Sea.
£Enas. Good: and what of him?
Man. They say he is a very man per se and stands alone.
£Enas. So do all men, valente they are drunken, sike, or have no legges.
Man. This man Lady, hath rob'd many beaute of their particular additions, he is as valiant as the Lyon, curlih as the Bear, fwoe as the Elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humor's, that his valour is cruft into folly, his folly fouced with difcretion: there is no man hath a vertue, that he hath not a glimpe of; nor a ny man an attain, but he carries some flaine of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the haire, hath the loyntes of every thing, but every thing fo out of loynt, that he is a gostle Briarenus, many hands and no vie; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no light.
£Enas. But how should this man that makes me smile, make Heitor angry?
Man. They say he yester day cop'd, Heitor in the bat tell and strooke him downe, the disdain'd & flame whereof, hath euer once kept Heitor fazing and waking.
Enter Pandarus.
£Enas. Who comes here?
Man. Madam your Nephew Pandarus.
£Enas. Heitor a gallant man.
Man. As may he be in the world Lady,
£Enas. What's that? that's what?
£Enas. Good morrow Nephew Pandarus,
£Enas. Good morrow Cozen Creiffid what do you talke of? good morrow Alexandart how do you Cozen? when were you at Illium?
£Enas. This morning Nephew.
£Enas. What were you talkeing when I came? Was Heitor arm'd and gon ere yea came to Illium? Hellen was not vp? was she?
£Enas. Heitor was gone but Hellen was not vp?
£Enas. 'Ene wel Heitor was fliring early.
£Enas. That were we talkeing of, and of his anger.
£Enas. Was he angry?
£Enas. So he fales here.
£Enas. True he was for I know the caufe too, heele lay about him to day I can tell thee that, and there's Troylus will not come fare behind him, let them take heed of Troylus; I can tell them that too.
£Enas. What is he angry too?
£Enas. Who Troylus?
£Enas. Troylus is the better man of the two.
£Enas. Oh Lapin there's no comparision.
£Enas. What not betweene Troylus and Heitor? do you know a man if you see him?
£Enas. If I, if I euer saw him before and knew him?
£Enas. Well I say Troylus is Troylus.
£Enas. Then you say as I say,
For I am sure he is not Heitor.
£Enas. No not Heitor is not Troylus in some degrees.
£Enas. 'Tis iuft, to each of them he is himselfe.
£Enas. Himselfe alas poor Troylus I would he were.
£Enas. So he is.
£Enas. Condition I had gone bare-foote to India.
£Enas. He is not Heitor.
£Enas. Himselfe? no he's not himselfe: would a were himselfe: well, the Gods are about, time must friend or end: well Troylus well, I would my heart were in her body: no, Heitor is a better man then Troylus.
£Enas. Excuse me.
£Enas. He is elder.
£Enas. Pardon me, pardon me.
£Enas. Th'others not come too, you shall tell me another tale when th'others come too: Heitor shall not have his will this year.
£Enas. He shall not neede it if he have his owne.
£Enas. Nor his qualities.
£Enas. No matter.
£Enas. Nor his beautie.
£Enas. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.
£Enas. You have no judgement Neece; Hellen her selfe swore th'other day that Troylus for a browne favour (for so 'tis I must confesse) not browne neither.
£Enas. No, but browne.
£Enas. Faith to say truth, browne and not browne.
£Enas. To say the truth, true and not true.
£Enas. She prai'd his complexion aboue Paris.
£Enas. Why Paris hath colour enough.
£Enas. So, he has.
£Enas. Then Troylus should have too much, if the prai'd him aboue, his complexion is higher then his, he hauing
I told you a thing yesterday, think on't.

Pan. So I do.

Pan. He be sworne 'tis true, he will wepe you an'twere a man borne in April. Sound a retreat.

Cref. And I'llspring vp in his teares, an'twere a nettle against May.

Pan. Harke they are coming from the field, shal we stand vp here and see them, as they passe toward Illium, good Neece do, sweet Neece Cressida.

Cref. At your pleasure.

Pan. Hear, hear, here's an excellent place, here we may see most bravely, I'll tel you them all by their names, as they passe by, but marke Troylus about the rest.

Enter oEmus.

Cref. Speak not so low'd.

Pan. That's oEmus, is not that a brave man, he's one of the signers of Troy I can you, but marke Troylus, you shall see anon.

Cref. Who's that?

Pan. That's Antenor, he has a throw'd wit I can tell you, and he's a man good enow, he's one o' th' best judgment in Troy whofeouers and a proper man of person: when comes Troylus? I see new you Troylus anon, if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cref. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cref. If he do, the rich shall have, more.

Enter Hector.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, looke you, that's a fellow. Goe thy way Hector, there's a brave man Neece, O braue Hector! Looka how hee looke there's a countenance, it's not a brave man?

Cref. O braue man!

Pan. Is a not? It does a mans heart good, looke you what hacks are on his Helmet, looke you yonder, do you see? Looke you there? There's no leisfing, laying on, talk't off, who ill as they say, there be hacks.

Cref. Be those with Swords?

Enter Paris.

Pan. Swords, any thing he cares not, and the dissell come to him, it's all one, by Gods lid it does ones heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris; looke yee yonder Neece, it's not a gallant man to, it's not? Why this is braue now: who said he came hurt home to day? Here's not hurt, why this will do Hellens heart good now, ha? Would I could see Troylus now, you shal Troy-

Pan. Who's that?

Enter Hellens.

Pan. That's Hellens, I maruell where Troylus is, that's Hellens, I think he went not forth to day; that's Hel-

Pan. Can Hellens fight Uncle?

Pan. Hellens no: yet hee fight indifferent well, I maruell where Troylus is; harke, do you not haere the people cry Troylus? Hellens is a Prief.

Cref. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Enter Troylus.

Cref. Peace, for shame peace.

Pan. Marke him, not him: O braue Troylus: looke well vp on him Neece, looke you how his Sword is blouded, and his Helmet more hackt then Hector, and how he looks, lookes, and how he goes. O admirable youth! be ne're few three and twenty. Go thy way Troylus, go thy way, had I a father were a Graces, a daughter a Goddesse, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is durt to him, and I warrant, Helen to change, would give money to boot.
Troylus and Cresseida.

Enter common Soldiers.

Cref. Here come more.

Pan. After, Fools, doles, chaff and bran, chaff and bran; porridge after meat. I could live and dye 'theyes of Troylus. Ne're looke, ne're looke; the Eagles are gon, Crowes and Dawes, Crowes and Dawes: I had rather be such a man as Troylus, then Agammenon, and all Greece.

Cref. There is among the Greekes Achilles, a better man then Troylus.

Pan. Achilles? a Dray-man, a Porter, a very Camell.

Cref. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well. Why haue you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, born good shape, acquaintance, manhood, learning, gen., tennet, vertue, youth, liberality, and so forth? the Spices, and fait that seaons a man?

Cref. If a, man'd man, and then to be bak'd with no Date in the pye, then for the mans dates out.

Pan. You are such another woman, one knowes not what ward you lye.

Cref: Vpon my backe, to defend my belly; vpon my wit, to defend my wiles; vpon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my Maske, to defend my beauty, and you to defend all thee; and at all thee wardes I lye at, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cref. Nay IIE watch you for that, and that's one of the cheekest of them too: If I cannot ward what I would not haue, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, vnleffe it swall palt huding, and then it's past watch.

Enter Boy.

Pan. You are such another.

Boy. Sir, my Lord would instantly speake with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your owne house.

Pan. Good Boy tell him I come, I doubt he bee hurt. Fare ye well good Neece.

Cref. Adieu Vakle.

Pan. Ile be with you Neece by and by.

Cref. To bring Vakle.

Pan. I, a token from Troylus.

Cref. By the same token, you are a Bawd. Exit Pand. Words, vowes, gifts, tears, and loues full sacrifice, He offen in another enterprize:

But more in Troylus thousand fold I see,

Then in the glasse of Pandor's praire may be;

Yet hold I off. Women are Anges wooing,

Things won are done, loues soleue lyes in the doing:

That the belon'd, knowes nought, that knowes not this;

Men prize the thing vngain'd, more then it is.

That she was neuer yet, that euer knew

Lowe got fo sweet, as when desire did sue:

Therefore this maxime out of loue I teach;

"Archeiamentum, & command; vngain'd, beleeve."

That though my hearts Contentis firme lose doth bare,

Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. "Exit."
And thou most rueful for thy stretcht-out life,
I give to both your speeches: which were such:
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in Brasile: and such again
As venerable Myr (batch'd in Silver)
Should with a bond of ayre, strong as the Axletree
In which the Heavens ride, knit all Greeks eares
To his experienced tongue: yet let it please both (Thou Great, and Wife) to hearst Vlyfes speake.
Agamemnon. Speak Prince of Ithaca, and be't of free expext:
That matter needleffe of importunsel lurthen
Divide thy lips; then are we confident
When ranke Toriltes ope his Masckike laves,
We shall hear Masckke, Wit, and Oracle.
Ulyf. Troy yet upon his bafs had bene bottom,
And the great Heurs sword had lack'd a Matter
But for these instances.
The specialty of Rule hath beene neglected.
And looke how many Grecian Tents do stand
Hollow upon this Plaine, so many hollow Factions.
When that the Generall is not like the Iliote,
To whom the Forragers shall all repair,
What Hony is expected! Degree being zwarded,
Th'vnrworthie flues as fairely in the Maske.
The Heauens themselues, the Planets, and this Center,
Obferve degree, priority, and place,
Inffhure, courtes, proportion, feafon, forme,
Office, and cuftome, in all line of Order:
And therefore is the glorious Planet Sol
In noble eminence, enthron'd and fpheard
Amaid the other, whose med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill Aspects of Planets euffl,
And poates like the Command'ment of a King,
Sans checkke, to good and bad. But when the Planets
In euffl mixture to diforder wander,
What Plagues, and what portents, what mutiny?
What raging of the Sea? haking of Earth?
Commotion in the Windes! Frights, changes, horrors,
Divert, and cracke, rend and dercinate
The unity, and married calm of States
Quite from their fixture? O, when Degree is shak'd,
(Which is the Ladder to all high deignes)
The enterprize is fike. How could Communities,
Degrees in Schooles, and Brother-hoods in Cities,
Peacefull Commerce from diliudable shores,
The primogenius, and due of Byrth,
Prerogative of Age, Crownes, Scepters, Lawrels,
(But by Degree) stand in Authentique place?
Take but Degree away, en'tune that flirng,
And heare what Difcord followes: such thing meetes
In meerse oppugnance. The bounded Waters,
Should lift their bofomes higher then the Shores,
And make a foppe of all this foldi Globe:
Strength shoulde be Lord of imbecility,
And the rude Sonne shoulde flrike his Father dead:
Force shoulde be right, or rather, right and wrong,
(Betwenee whose endelefe iarre, Juflice recides)
Should boole her names, and fo Juflice too.
Then evry thing includes it felle in Power,
Power into Will, Will into Appetite,
And Appetite(an vnieuerfall Wolfe,
So doublly feconded with Will, and Power)
Muft make perforce an vnieuerfall prey,
And laft, eate vp himfelfe.
Great Agamemnon.
This Chaos, when Degree is sufficcate,
Followes the chasking:
And this negligence of Degree, is it
That by a pace goes backward in a purpose
It hath to climeble. The Generall's affain'd
By him one ftep below; he, by the next,
That next, by him benef: to every ftep
Exampted by the firft pace that is fickke
Of his Superior, growes to an emulous Feauer
Of pails, and bloodlefe Emulation.
And 'tis this Feauer that keeps Troy on foote,
Not her owne finewes. To end a tale of lengthy,
Troy in our无奈 leffe blus, not in her strength.
Neff. Most wifely hath Vlyfes heere difcouer'd
The Feauer, whereof all our power is fickke.
Vlyfes. The Nature of the lickneffe found (Vlyfes)
What is the remedie?
Vlyfes. The great Achilles, whom Opinion crownes,
The finew, and the fore-hand of our Hoft,
Hauing his earle full of his ayery Fame,
Growes dainty of his worth, and in his Tent
Lyes mocking our deignes. With him, Patroclus,
Upon a lazie Bed, the il-ong day
Breakes fourrill lefs,
And with ridiculous and awkward action,
(Which Slanderer, he imitation call'd?)
He Pageants vs. Sometime great Agamemnon,
This toplefed deputation he puts on;
And like a frutting Player, whose conceit
Lies in his Ham-ftring, and doth thinkke it rich
To heare the wooden Dialogue and found
Twift his stretcht footing, and the Scaffolage,
Such to be pitied, and ouer-refted feastynge
He acts thy Greatneffe in; and when he speakes,
'Tis like a Chime a mending. With tearmes vnfiguer'd,
Which from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropt,
Would feemes Hyperboles. At this fufly fuffe,
The large Achilles (on his pret-bed lolliing)
From his derpe Chefs, laughs out a loud applaufe,
Cries excellent, 'ts Agamemnon iuft.
Now play me Neff; hum, and stroke thy Beard
As he, being dref't to some Oration:
That's done, as more as the extreamefl ends
Of paralle: as like, as Vulcan and his wife,
Yet god Achilles fill cries excellent,
'Tis Neff right. Now play him (me) Patroclus,
Arming to answyr in a night-Alarme,
And then (forsooth) the faint dejects of Age
Must be the Scene of myrth, to cool, and fipit,
And with a pflege fumbling on his Goget,
Shake in and out the Ricet: and at this fport
Sir Valour dies; cries, O enough Patroclus,
Or, give me ribe of Steele, I shall fillit all
In puerus of my Speene. And in this fasion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generalls of grace exaft,
Atchauements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Successe or losse, what is, or is not, fernes
As fufle for these two, to make patience.
Neff. And in the imitation of thefe twaine,
Who (as Vlyfes faies) Opinion crownes
With an Imparalll voye, many are infect:
Aiax is growne (fhe'll will'd), and bearers his head
In such a reyne, in full as proud a place
As brothe Achilles, and keepes his Tent like him;
Makes fathiful Feafts, railes on ourflate of Warr
Troylus and Cressida.

Bold as an Oracle, and sets Thersites:
A laze, whose Gall coins flander like a Mint,
To match vs in comparisions with durt,
To weaken and dislike our exposure,
How ranke former round in with danger.

仿. They taxe our policy, and call it Cowardice,
Count Wifedom as no member of the Warre,
Fore-fall preidence, and eseeme no fte.
But that of hand: The Hill and manfull parts,
That do contrive how many hands shall strike
When finestfe call them on, and know by measure
Of their obferuant toyle, the Enemies weight,
Why this hath not a fingers dignify:
They call this Bed-worke, Mapp'y Cloflet-Warre:
So that the Ramme that batters downe the wall,
For the great fwing and trumfle of his poife,
They place before his hand that made the Engine,
Or thofe with that the finnefe of their foules,
By Reafon guide his execution.

仿. Let this be granted, and Achilles horfe
Makes many Troy fones.

仿. What Trumpet? Lookke Memelus,
Men. From Troy. Enter eEnas.

仿. What would you 'fore our Tent?
仿. Is this great Agamemnon Tent, I pray you?

仿. Even this.
仿. May one that is a Herald, and a Prince,
Do a faire meffage to his Kingly ears?

仿. With furety stronger then Achilles armes,
'Fore all the Greekifh heads, which with one voice
Call Agamemnon Head and General.
仿. Faire leues, and large fecurity. How may
A franger to them moft Imperial looke,
Know them from eyes of other Mortals?

仿. How?
仿. 1: I aske, that I might waken reuerence,
And on the cheeke be ready with a blufh
Model as morning, when the coldy eyes
The youthful: Phoebus:
Which is that God in office guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

仿. This Troyan fones vs, or the men of Troy
Are ceremonies Courtiers.

仿. Courtiers as free, as debonnaire; vnar'md,
As bending Angels: that's their Fame, in peace:
But when they would feeme Souldiers, they have galles,
Good armes, strong lyonts, true fwords; & loues accord,
Nothing fo full of heart. But peace eEnas,
Peace Troyan, lay thy finger on thy lips.
The worthineffe of praffe defaines his worth:
If that he prais'd himselfe, bring the praffe forth.
But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath Fame blowes, that praffe folc pure transcended.

仿. Sir, you of Troy, call you your fells eEnas?
仿. I Greekes, that is my name.

仿. What is your affayre I pray you?
仿. Sir pardon, 'ts for Agamemnon cares.

仿. He heares notht priuely
That comes from Troy.

仿. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him,
I bring a Trumpet to awake his ear,
To fet his fence on the attentue bent,
And then to speake.

仿. Speake frankly as the winde,
It is not Agamemnon sleeping hour;
That thou shalt know Troyan he is awake,
He tells thee so himselfe.

仿. Trumpet blow loud,
Send thy Brallfe voyce through all thee laze Tents,
And every Greek of mettle, let him know,
What Troy menes fairely, shall be spoke aloud.

仿. We have great Agamemnon heere in Troy,
A Prince callled Hecedy, Brim is his Father:
Who in this dell and long-continu'd Truce
Is ruly growne. He bad me take a Trumpet,
And to this purpofe speake: Kings,Princes, Lords,
If there be one among'th the fay'r't of Greece,
That holds his Honor higher then his eafe,
That feeks his pralfe, more then he feares his perill,
That knowes his Valour, and knowes not his feare.
That loues his Mifirs more then in confefion,
(With truant vowels to her owne lips he loues)
And dare avow her Beauty, and her Worth,
In other armes then hers: to him this Challenge.

仿. In view of Troyans, and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his belt to do it.
He hath a Lady, wifer, faireer, truer,
Then euery Greek did compaffe in his armes,
And will to morrow with his Trumpet call,
Midway betweene your Tents, and walles of Troy,
To rowse a Grecaian that is true in love.

仿. No, none, he'll say in Troy when he retires,
The Grecian Dames are fun-burnt, and not worth
The splinter of a Lance: Even fo much.

仿. This shall be told our Louers Lord eEnas,
If none of them have foule in fuch a kinde,
We left them all at home: But we are Souldiers,
And may that Souldier a meerce recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in loue:
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hecedy: If none else, I'll he he.

仿. Tell him of Nefor, one that was a man
When Hecedy Grandfire suct: he is old now,
But if there be not in our Grecaian mould,
One Noble man, that hath one spark of fire
To anfwer for his Loue; tell him from me,
I fende my Silver heald in a Gold Buyes,
And in my Vanbrace put this wither'd brawne,
And meeting him, will tell him, that my Lady
Was fayer then his Grandame, and as chafe
As may be in the world: his youth in flood,
Ie powne this truth with my three drops of blood.

仿. Now heuens forbid fuch fcarfede of youth.

仿. Amen.

仿. Faire Lord eEnas,
Let me touch your hand:
To our Paullion flall I leade you firft:
Achilles flall have word of this intenfe,
So flall each Lord of Greece from Tent to Tent:
Your felle flall Feift with vs before you goe,
And finde the welcome of a Noble Foe,
Exeunt.

仿. Nefor.

仿. What fayes Viffys?

仿. I have a young concepcion in my braine,
Be you my time to bring it to fome fhape.

仿. What is't?

仿. This is 'ts:
Blunt wedges rue hard knots: the feeded Pride
That hath to this maturity blowne vp
In ranke Achilus, must or now be cropt,
Or fledding breed a Nursey of like eul
To ouer-bulke vs all.

Neft. Well, and how?

Uffy. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
How euer it is sped in general name,
Relates in purpole onely to Achilus.

Neft. The purpole is perfipiscious even as substance,
Whole grovynetive little charactars summe vp,
And in the publication make no chaine,
But that Achilus, were his braine as barren
As bankes of Lyibia, though (Apollo knows)
'Tis dry enough, wil with great speede of judgement,
I, with celerity, finde Hector purpole
Painting on him.

Uffy. And wake him to the anwer, thinke you?

Neft. Yes, 'tis most meet; who may you elle oppoef
That can from Hector bring his Honor off,
If not Achilus; though't be a sportfull Combate,
Yet in this triall, much opinion dwels.
For here the Troyans take our due reput
With their finit Palleate: and truft to me Pityes,
Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd
In this wilde action. For the facceupe
(Although particular) shall give a fintandling
Of good or bad, unto the Generall:
And in such Indexes, although small prickes
To their subfquent Volumes, there is seece
The body figure of the Gyant-maffe
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He that meets Hector, iusses from our choye;
And choye being mutuaall ache of all our foules,
Makes Merit her election, and doth Boyle
As twere, from forth vs all: a man diffild
Out of our Vertues who mifcarrying,
What heart from hence receyves the conquing part
To steale a strong opinion to themselves,
Which entertain'd, Limbs are in his instruments,
In no leeff working, then are Swords and Bowes
Directlye by the Limbes.

Plyf. Gie pardon to my speach:
Therefore 'tis meet, Achilus meet not Hector:
Let vs (like Merchants) throw our foulid Wares,
And thinke perchance they'ell fell: If not,
The luber of the better yet to shew,
Shall shew the better. Do not contend,
That euer Hector and Achilus meete:
For both our Honour, and the Shame in this,
Are dogg'd with two flarage Followers.

Neft. I see them not with my old eies: what are they?

Plyf. What glory our Achilus shares from Hector,
(Were he not proud) we all should weare with him:
But he already is too infolent,
And we were better parch in Affricke Sunne,
Then in the pride and falt fcone of his eyes
Should he scape Hector faire. If he were foyld,
Why then we did our malne opinion crush
In taint of our beld man. No, make a Lottir,
And by druce let blockish Atlas draw,
The fort to fight with Hector: Among our foulces,
Gie him allowance as the worthier man,
For that will phyfick the great Myrmidon
Who broyles in lowd applaude, and make him fall
His Crefle, that pronder then blew Iris bends.
If the dull brained Achilus, now fall out,
We'll dreffe him vp in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion fill,
That we have better men. But hit or miss,
Our projecls life this shape of fence affomes,
Achil implo'd, pluckes downe Achilles Plumes.

Neft. Now Pityes, I begin to relish thy advice,
And I will giue a taife of it withforth
To Agamemnon, go we to him straight:
Two Curres shal tame each other, Pride alone
Mutter the Matches on, as 'twere their bone. Exeunt
Enter Alkes, and Therfeus.

Aia. Therfeus?

Thor. Agamemnon, how if he had Blies (ful) all over generally.

Aia. Therfeus?

Thor. And thofe Byles did runne, say fo; did not the General run, were not that a botchey core?

Aia. Dogge.

Thor. Then there would come some matter from him:
I see none now.

Aia. Thou pitch-Wolfe-Sonne, canst y' not heare?
Feele then.

Scrips hic. Ther. The plague of Greece vpone thee thou Mungrel bee-witted Lord.

Aia. Speake then you whining't leaue speake, I will beate thee into handomneete.

Thor. I shall sooner raiye thee into wit and holifnee:
but I thinke thy Horf wil soone con an Oration, then y' learn a prayer without booke: Thou canst not, canst thou? A red Murren o'th Iades trickes.

Aia. To adioofoles, leare me the Proclamation.

Thor. Doest thou thinke I have no fence thou artke? Aia. The Proclamation.

Thor. Thou art proclaim'd a foolo, I thinke.

Aia. Do not Porentine, do not; my fingers itch.

Thor. I would not itch from head to foot, and I had the firatcheing of thee, I would make thee the lothfom't faith in Greece.

Aia. I say the Proclamation.

Thor. Thou grumbleft & rail'd every hour on Achilus, and thou art as full of enuy at his greatness, as Ceres is at Proserpina's beauty. I, that thou barkit at him.

Aia. Midwifre Therfeus.

Thor. Therfeus should I rike him.

Aia. Cobolf.

Thor. He would pun thee into flauers with his fift, as a Sailor breaks a bisket.

Aia. Thou hollar Curre.

Thor. Do, do.

Aia. Thou foole for a Witch.

Thor. I, do, do, thou foddent-witted Lord: thou haft no more braine then I haue in mine elbowes: An Afinfo may tutor thee. Thou fcurvy valiant Aife, thou art heere but to threth Troyans, and thou art bought and folde a-among thoefe of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou wie to bowt me, I wil begin at thy heele, and tel what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels thou.

Aia. Thou dogge.

Thor. Thou fcurvy Lord.

Aia. Thou Curre.

Thor. Mars his Idiot; do rude, do Camell, do, do.

Enter Achilus, and Patroclus.

Achil. Why how now Alax? wherefore do you this?

How now Therfeus? what's the matter man?

Thor. You fee him there, do you?

Achil. I, what's the matter.

Thor. That looke upon him.

Achil. So I do: what's the matter?

Thor.
Troylus and Cressida.

Tber. Nay but regard him well.

Achil. Well, why I do so.

Tber. Nay but yet you looke not well upon him: for who some euer you take him to be, he is Achil.

Achil. I know that fool.

Tber. I, but that fool knowes not himself.

Achil. Therefor I beate thee.

Tber. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what medlum of wit he vters: his eusions haue rues thus long. I have bobb'd his Braine more then he has beate my bones: I will buy nine Sparrowes for a peny, and his Phiamater is not worth the ninth part of a Sparrow. This Lord (Achilles) Achil, who weares his wit in his belly, and his gutses in his head, Ie tell you what I lay of him.

Achil. What?

Tber. I lay this Achil

Achil. Nay good Achil.

Tber. Has not so much wit.

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Achil. Will you stop the ey of Helenes Needle, for whom becomes to fight.

Achil. Peace fool.

Tber. I would have peace and quietnes, but the fool will not: he there, that he, looke you there.

Achil. O thou damn'd Curie, I shall

Achil. Will you let your wit to a Foolies.

Tber. No I warrant you, for a foolies will flame it.

Paw. Good words Therfites.

Achil. What's the quarrell?

Achil. I bad thee vide Owle, goe learne me the tenure of the Proclamation, and he rayles upon me.

Achil. I ferue thee noth.

Achil. Well, goe too, goe too.

Achil. I ferue here voluntary.

Achil. Your last seruice was sufferrance, 'twas not voluntary, no man is beaten voluntary: Achil was here the voluntary, and you aunder an Impriple.

Tber. Enenoe, a great deale of your wit too lies in your finnes, or clef there be Liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knocke out either of your braines, he were as good cracke a foole not with no kernell.

Achil. What with me to Therfites?

Tber. There's Flusses, and old Neber, whole Wit was mouldy cre their Grandifires had nayls on their toes, yoke you like draft-Oxen, and make you pougly vp the warre.

Achil. What what?

Tber. You go good footh, to Achilles, to Achil, to Achil.

Achil. I shall cut out you tongue.

Tber. 'Tis no matter, I shall speake as much as thou afterwards.

Far. No more words Therfites.

Tber. I will hold my peace when Achilles Brooch bids me, shall I?

Achil. Ther's for you Patroclus.

Tber. I will fey you hang'd like Clotoples ere I come any more to your Tents: I will keepe where there is wit flirring, and leave the faction of foolies.

Exit. Patroclus.

Achil. Marry this Sir is proclaim'd through all our hoft,

That Hector by the fift houre of the Sunne,

Will with a Trumpet, 'twixt our Tents and Troy

To morrow morning call fome Knight to Armes,

That hath a thomanke, and fuch a one that dare

Maintaine I know not what: 'tis traff. Farewell.

Achil. Farewell? who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not, 'tis put to Lottery: otherwife

Hecknew his man.

Achil. O meaning you, I wil goe learnne more of it. Exit.

Enter Priss, Hector, Troylus, Parh and Helenus.

Pri. After fo many hours, wives, speeches spent,

Thou once againe fayes Neber from the Greekes,

Deliluer Helen, and all damage cle.

(As honour, love, of time, trauaille, expence,

Wounds, friends, and what els deere that is consum'd

In hot digellion of this comorant Warre)

Shall be brooke off. Hector, what say you too't.

Hec. Though no man letter feares the Greekes then I,

As farre as touches my particular: yet dread Priss,

There is no Lady of more forter bowels,

More pungie, to fucke in the fenfe of Ieare,

More ready to cry out, who known what follows

Then Hector is: the wound of peace is forety,

Surely feure: but modest Doubt is cal'd

The Beacon of the wife: the tent that searches

To th' bottome of the warre. Let Helen go,

Since the firft sword was digellig about this querron,

Every tythe foule 'mongst many thousand disnes,

Hath bin as deere as Helen: I meane of ours:

If we haue loft so many tenths of ours

To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to vs

(Has it our name) the valeu of one te;-

What meritt's in that reafon which denies

The yeeling of her vp.

Troy. Fle,fe, my Brother;

Welbe you the worth and honour of a King

(5o great as our dread Father) in a Scale

(5f common Ounces) Wil you with Counters summe

The pant proportion of his infinte,

And buckel in a waife moft fathomless,

With spannes and inches fo diminutive,

As feares and reafons? Fle for godly flame?

Hel. No maruel though you bite fo sharp at reafons,

You are fo empty of them, should not our Father

Bear the great iawy of his affayres with reafons,

Because your speech hath none that tells him fo.

Troy. You are for dreames & f punched brother Prieff

You furre your glouses with reafon here are your reafons

You know an enemy intends you harme,

You know, a sword imploy'd is perilous,

And reafon flyes the Objett of all harme.

Who maruels then when Helenus beholds

A Greclan and his fword, if he do fet

The very wings of reafon to his heels.

Or like a Stare disfob'd. Nay, if we talke of Reafon,

And flye like children Mercurie from Ioue,

Let's shut our gates and fleep: Manhood and Honor

Should have hard hearts, wold they but fat their thoughts

With this crom'd reafon: reafon and respect,

Makes Liers pale, and lady-hood diec.

Hec. Brother, she is not worth

What the deoth call the holding.

Troy. What's aught, but as 'tis valeu'd?

Hec. But value dwels not in particular will,

It holds his estimate in dignitie

As well, wherein 'tis precious of it selfe,

As in the prizer: 'Tis made Idolatry,

To make the ferenue greater then the God,

And the will dates that is inclinable

To what infediously it fells affects,

Without some image of th' affected merit.

Troy. I take to day a Wife, and my election

Is led on in the conduct of my Will;
Troylus and Crefiida.

My Will enkindled by mine eyes and eares,
Two traided Pylons 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of Will, and Judgement. How may I assyde
(Although my will dilate what it electeth).
The Wife I chose, there can be no euation
To blesch from this, and to stand firme by honour.
We turne not backe the Silkes vpon the Merchant
When we haue feyle'd them; nor the remainder Vniand
We do not throw in vnrepechine fame,
Because we now are full. It was thought meete
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks;
Your breath of full content belted his Sallies,
The Seas and Windes (old Wranglers) tooke a Truce,
And did him service; he touch'd the Ports defin'd,
And for an old Woman whom the Greeks held Captive,
He brought a Crecian Queen, whofe youth & frethnesse
Wrinkles Apolloes, and makes flate the morning.
Why keepe we her? the Crecians keepe our Aunt;
Is the worth keeping? Why she is a Pearle,
Whose price hath launch'd about a thousand Ships,
And turn'd a Crown'd Kings to Merchants,
If you'auouch, 'twas wifdomd Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cride, Go, go!)
If you confesse, he brought home Noble prize,
(As you must needs) for you all clape your hands,
And cride Ineludable; why do you now
The ilufe of your proper Wifesomes rate,
And do a deed that Fortune neuer did?
Beggare the effimation which you pried,
Richer then Sea and Land! O Tho'ght molt base!
That we have fHONE what we do feare to keepe.
But Theuues vnworthy of a thing fo fHONE,
That in their Country deed them that disgrace,
We feare to warrant in our Natique place.

Enter Caffandra with her baire about her ears.
Caft. CRY Troyans, cry.
Priam. What noyle? what shreecce is this?
Troy. Tis our mad fitter, I do know her voice.
Caft. CRY Troyans.
Hec. It is Caffanded.
Caft. CRY Troyans cry; lend me ten thousand eares,
And I will fill them with Prophetike teares.
Hec. Peace fitter, peace.
Caft. Virginis, and Boyes; mid-age & wrinkled old,
Seigneurs, that nothing can but cry,
Adde to my clamoure: let vs pay betimes
A moty of that maffe of moane to come.
Cry Troyans cry, prate your eyes with teares,
Troy muft not be, nor goodly Iliion find,
Our fire-brand Brother Paris burnes vs all.
Cry Troyans cry, a Helen and a woe.
Cry, cry, Troy burnes, or else let Helen goe.
Exit. Hec. Now youthfull Troylus, do not thee of fhreines
Of diuination in our Sitter worke
Some touches of remorfe? Or is your blood
So madly hot, that it confume the act?
Nor fear of bad fviceffe in a bad caufe,
Can qualifie the fame?
Troy. Why Brother Hec.,
We may not thinke the uilnesse of each acte
Such, and no other then event doth forme it,
Nor once defire the courage of our minde.
Because Caffanded's mad, her brainfike raptures
Cannot dilate the goodnesse of a quarrell,
Which hath our feuerall Honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my prirate part,
I am no more touch'd, then all Priams fonnes,
And loue forbid there should be done among't vs
Such things as might offend the weakeft fpleene,
To fight for, and maintaine.
Par. Elle might the world conuince of leuite,
As well my vnder-takings as your counsels:
But I attred the gods, your full contenent
Gave wings to my propofition, and cut off
All feares attending on fo dire a proiect.
For what (alas) can thefe my fingle armes?
What propugnation is in one mans valour
To ftand the path and enmity of tho'
This quarrell would excite? Yet I protest,
Were I alone to paffe the difficulties,
And had as ample power, as I haue will,
Paris should ne're retrafe what he hath done,
Nor faint in the purfuite.
Par. Paris, thou speake
Like one be-fotted on your sweete delights;
You haue the Hony still, and thefe the Gall,
So to be valiant, is no praffe at all.
Par. Sir, I propofe not meerely to my felfe,
The pleasures fuch a beauty brings with it:
But I would haue the foyle of her faire Rape
Wip'd off in honourable keeping her,
What Trefon were it to the ranfack'd Queene,
Difgrace to your great worths, and fame to me,
Now to delivere her paffion vp
On termes of base complicacion? Can it be,
That fo degenerate a ftraine as this,
Should once fet footing in your generous bosomes?
There's not the meaneft spirit on our partes,
Without a heart to dare, or fword to draw,
When Helen is defended: nor none fo Noble,
Whose life were ill behou'd, or death vnaft'm'd,
Where Helen is the fubjeft. Then (I fay)
Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
The worlds large fpaces cannot paralllel.
Hec. Paris and Troylus, you have both faid well:
Helen defend'd: nor none fo Noble,
Whose life were ill behou'd, or death vnaft'm'd,
Where Helen is the fubjeft. Then (I fay)
Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
The worlds large fpaces cannot paralllel.
Hec. Paris and Troylus, you have both faid well:
Helen defend'd: nor none fo Noble,
Whose life were ill behou'd, or death vnaft'm'd,
Where Helen is the fubjeft. Then (I fay)
Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
The worlds large fpaces cannot paralllel.
Hec. Paris and Troylus, you have both faid well:
Helen defend'd: nor none fo Noble,
Whose life were ill behou'd, or death vnaft'm'd,
Where Helen is the fubjeft. Then (I fay)
Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
The worlds large fpaces cannot paralllel.
Hec. Paris and Troylus, you have both faid well:
Helen defend'd: nor none fo Noble,
Whose life were ill behou'd, or death vnaft'm'd,
Where Helen is the fubjeft. Then (I fay)
Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
The worlds large fpaces cannot paralllel.
Enter Therfites foul.

How now Therfites? what loft in the Labyrinth of thy furie? shall the Elephant Ajax carry it thou? he beats me, and I raile at him: O worthy farfaclion, would it were otherwise: that I could beate him, whilst he raile at me: Sfoote, he learns to confume and raffe Fueus, but he fea some little of my pious full executions. Then ther's Achilles, a rare Enginer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the wall will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art true the King of gods; and Mercury, looke at all the Serpentine craft of thy Caduceus, if I take not that little little lefe then little wit from them that they have, which short-arm'd ignorance it selfe knowes, is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumstancion delier a Flye from a Spider, without drawing the maffe Irons and cutting the web: after this, the vengeance on the whole Camp, or rather Lonne-ach, for that mine thinkes is the curve dependant on those that ware for a packet. I have said my prayers and diuell, enue, say Amen: What ho? my Lord Achilles?

Enter Patroclus.

Ther. If I could have remembred a guilt counterfeit, thou wouldst have flipp out of my contemplation, but it is no manner, thy felpe vpon thy felpe. The common curse of mankinde, folly and Ignorance be thine in great reuenue; heauen bleffe thee from a Tutor, and Discipline come not neere thee. Let thy bloud be thy direction till thy death, then if thee that laies thee out fayes thou art a faine coach, Ie be fawme and fawme vpon't thee never throughed any but Luxars, Amen. What's Achilles?

Patr. What art thou douent? wait thou in a prayer?

Ther. I, the heavens heare me.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Therfites, my Lord.

Achil. Where, where, art thou come? why my cheefe, my digestion, why hast thou not sante's thy felle into my Table, so many meales? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Patr. Thy Commander Achilles, then tell me Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Achil. O tell, tell.

Ther. He declin the whole question.Agamemnon commands Achilles, Achilles is my Lord, I am Patroclus known, and Patroclus is a foole.

Patro. You rafcall.

Ther. Peace foole, I have not done.

Achil. He is a priviledg'd man, proceed Therfites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a foole, Achilles is a foole, Therfites is a foole, and as aforefaid, Patroclus is a foole.

Achil. Derive this? come?

Ther. Agamemnon is a foole to offer to command Achilles, Achilles is a foole to be commanded of Agamemnon, Therfites is a foole to servc such a foole: and Patroclus is a foole postife.

Patr. Why am I a foole?

Enter Agamemnon, Vliffes, Neftor, Diomedes, Ajax, and Chalcis.

Ther. Make that demand to the Creator, it fuffices me thou art. Looke you, who comes here?

Achil. Patroclus, he speake with no body: come in with me Therfites.

Ther. Here is such patercherie, such lugling, and such knauerie: all the argument is a Cuckold and a Whore, a good quarrel to draw emulations, factions, and bleede to death vpon: Now the dry Suppege on the Subiech, and Warre and Lecherie confound all.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his Tent, but I'll dispo'd my Lord.

Agam. Let it be knowne to him that we are here:

He sent our Messengers, and we lay by our apparentments, visiting of him:

Let him be told off, so perchance he thinke

We dare not more the question of our place,

Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall so far say to him.

Vliff. We law him at the opening of his Tent, He is not fickle.

Ala. Yes, Lyon fickle, fickle of proud heart; you may call it Melancholy if it favour the man, but by my head, it's pride; but why, why, let him show us the cause

A word my Lord.

Vliff. Who moves Ajax thus to buy at him?

Vliff. Achilles hath incogled his Foole from him.

Vliff. Who, Therfites?

Vliff. He.

Vliff. Then will Ajax lacke matter, if he haue loft his Argument.

Vliff. No, you see he is his argument that has his argument Achilles.

Vliff. All the better, their faction is more our with then their faction; but it was a strong counsell that a Foole could difunct.

Vliff. The amide that wisedome knits, not folly may easily vnte.

Enter Patroclus.

Here
Troylus and Cressida.

Here comes Patroclus.

Nef. No Achilles with him?

Vij. The Elephant hath hoynes, but none for curtefie:
His legge are legs for necesse, not for flight.
Patro. Achilles bids me say he is much forry:
If any thing more then your sport and pleafure,
Did move your greatneffe, and this noble State,
To call upon him; he hopes it is no other,
But for your health, and your digestion fake;
An after Dinners breath.

Agag. Hear ye Patroclus:
We are too well acquainted with these anfwers:
But his euanion winged thus fwift with fcorne,
Cannot outfye our apprehenions.
Much attribute he hath, and much the reason,
Why we afcribe it to him, yet all his vertues,
Not vertuously of his owne part beheld,
Doe in our eyes, begin to lique their glosfe;
Yea, and like faire Fruit in an vnholdome dith,
Are like to rot vnthalte: goe and tell him,
We came to fpeake with him; and you fhall not finne,
If you doe fay, we think him other prouyd,
And vnder honett; in felfe-affumption greater.
Then in the note of judgemen: & worthier then himfelfe.
Here tends the launge strangeffe he puts on,
Disguife the holy strength of their command:
And vnder write in an obfcuring kinde.
His humourous predominance, yea watch
His petit lines, his eea, his fowes, as if
The paffage and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tyde. Goe tell him this, and adde,
That if he ourhold his price fo much,
Weele none of him; but let him, like an Engin
Not portable, lyce vnnder this report.
Bring action hither, this cannot goe to warre:
A fhrillng Dwarfe, we doe allowance glue,
Before a feaping Gyant: tell him fo.

Put. I fay, and bring his anfwere prefently,
We come to fpeake with him, Vifulis enter you.

Exit Vifilis.

Alac. What is he more then another?

Agag. No more then what he thinkes he is.

Agag. If he be much, doe you not thinke, he thinkes himfelfe a better man then I am?

Agag. No quefion.

Alac. Will you fubfcribe his thought, and fay he is?

Agag. No, Noble Alac, you are as strong, as valiant, as wife, no leffe noble, much more gentle, and altogether more trauable.

Agag. Why fould a man be proud? How doe pride grow?
I know not what it is.

Agag. Your minde is the cleerer Alac, and your vertues the fairest; he that is proud, eates vp himfelfe, Pride is his owne Glaffe, his owne trumpet, his owne Chronicle, and what euer praieth it felle but in the deede, dooeours the deede in the praffe.

Enter Vifulis.

Alac. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the ingending of Toades.

Nef. Yet he loves himfelfe not strange?

Vifil. Achilles will not to the field to morrow.

Agag. What is his excufe?

Vifil. He doth relye on none,
But carres on the fame of his difpofe,
Without obedience or refpect of any,

In will peculiur, and in felle admifion.

Agag. Why, will he not vpon our faire requeft,
Vntent his perfon, and share the ayre with vs?

Vifil. Things small as nothing, for requefts fake onely
He makes impertant; pooffht he is with greatneffe,
And fpeakes not to himfelfe, but with a pride
That quarrels at felle-breath. Imagin'd wroth
Holds in his blood fuch frowne and hot difcouer.
That twixt his mentall and his afcute parts,
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages,
And batters gainft it felle; what fhould I fay?
He is fo plaguoy proud,that the death tokens of it,
Cry no recoverie.

Agag. Let Alac goe to him,

Sure Lord, goe you and greate him in his Tent;
'Tis fad he holds you well, and will be led
At your requeft a little from himfelfe.

Vifil. O Agammman, let it not be fo.

Weele confecrate the steps that Alac makes,
When they goe from Achilles shall the proud Lord,
That baffes his arrogancc with his owne feame,
And neuer fuffer matter of the world,
Enter his thoughts: faue fuch as doe revoule
And ruminate himfelfe. Shall he be worship'd,
Of that we hold an idoll, more then hee?
No, this thrive worthy and right valiant Lord,
Muff not fo flaue his Palme, nobly acquir'd,
Nor by my will affuliugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is: by going to Achilles,
That were to enlard his fat already, pride,
And able more Coles to Cancer, when he burns
With entertaining great Hiperion.
This L. goe to him? Jupiter forbid,
And fay in thunder, Achilles goe to him.

Nef. O this is well, he rube the veine of him.

Dif. And how his silence drinkers vp this applaufe.

Alac. If I goe to him, with my armed fuit, Ite pith him ore the face.

Agag. O no,you shall not goe.

Alac. And a be proud with me, Ite pith his pride: let me goe to him.

Vifil. Not for the worth that hangs vpon our quarrel.

Alac. A paity infortunat fellow.

Vifil. If he be not fobioule.

Vifil. The Rauen chides blackneffe.

Alac. Ile lie his humour volue.

Agag. He will be the Phyfitian that fould be the patient.

Alac. And all men were a my minde.

Vifil. Wilt would be out of fasion.

Alac. A fhould not bear it fo, a fhould cate Swords first: flall pride carry it?

Nef. And 'twould, you'd carry halfe.

Vifil. He would have ten shires.

Alac. I will kneade him, Ile make him supple, hee's not yet through warme.

Nef. Force him with praieth, pource in, pource in this ambition is dry.

Vifil. My L. you fee too much on this dilike.

Nef. Our noble General, doe not doe fo.

Dion. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Vifil. Why, 'ts this naming of him doth him harme.

Here is a man, but 'ts before his face,
I will be filent.

Nef. Wherefore fhould you fo?
Troylus and Cressida.

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.
VII. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.
Alc. A horion dog, that shall palter thus with vs, would he were a Troian.
Nef. What a vice were it in Alcix now--
VII. If he were proud.
Dis. Or courteous of praise.
VII. 1, or furtly borne.
Dis. Or strange, or false affected.
Pl. Thank the heavens L, thou art of sweet composure; Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee fucumber: Fame be thy Tutor, and thy parts of nature Thrice fam'd beyond, beyond all erudition; But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight, Let Mers deuide Eternity in twaine, And give him half, and for thy vigour, Ball-bearing Mics; his addition yeelds To finnowe Alcix: I will not praife thy wildorne, Which like a bourn, a pale, a thre times Thy spacial and dilated parts; here's Nyfor Infidred by the Antiquare times: He must, he is, he cannot but be wife. But pardon Father Nyfor, were your dayes As greene as Alcix, and your braine so temper'd, You should not have the emince of him, But be as Alcix.
Alc. Shall I call you Father?
VII. I my good Sonne.
Dis. Be rul'd by him Lord Alcix.
VII. There is no tarrying here, the Hart Achilles Keeper thickest; please it our Generall, To call together all his state of warres, Frest Kings are come to Troy; to morrow We must with all our maine of power stand fast: And here's a Lord, come Knights from East to West, And call their flower, Alcix shall cope the best.
Sig. Goe we to Counsellor, let Achilles sleepe.
Light Botes may falle swift, though greater bales take deepes. Exeunt. Muficke sounds within.

Enter Pandarus and a Servant.
Pan. Friend, you, pray you a word: Doe not you follow the yong Lord Paris?
Ser. I fir, when he goes before me.
Pan. You depend vpon him I meane?
Ser. Sir, I doe depend vpon the Lord.
Pan. You depend vpon a noble Gentleman: I must needs praise him.
Ser. The Lord be praife.
Pan. You know me, doe you not?
Ser. Faith fir, superciliously.
Pan. Friend know me better, I am the Lord Pandarus.
Ser. I hope I shall know your honour better.
Pan. I doe defire it.
Ser. You are in the flate of Grace?
Pan. Grace, not so friend, honor and Lordship are my title: What Masque is this?
Ser. I doe but partly know fir: It is Muficke in parts.
Pan. Know you the Mufitians.
Ser. Wholly fir.
Pan. Who play they to?
Ser. To the hearen fir.
Pan. At whose pleasure friend?
Ser. At mine fir, and theirs that love Muficke.
Ser. Who shall I command fir?

Pa. Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request doe these men play?
Ser. That's too indecent fir: marry fir, at the request of Paris my L, who's there in perfon; with him the mortall Venus, the heart blood of beauty, loves insuable soule.
Ser. No fir, Helen, could you not finde out that by her attributes?
Pa. It should seeme fellow, that thou haft not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speake with Paris from the Prince Troylus: I will make a complimental assault vpon him, for my busieffe feeth.
Ser. Sodden busieffe, there's a flawed phrase indeece.

Enter Paris and Helena.
Pan. Faire be to you my Lord, and to all this faire company: faire defires in all faire measure fairely guide them, especially to you faire Queene, faire thoughts be your faire pillow.
Hel. Deere L, you are full of faire words.
Pan. You speake your faire pleasure faire Queene: faire Prince, here is good broken Muficke.
Pan. You have brooke it cozen: and by my life you shall make it whole againe, you shall peace it out with a piece of your performance. Nei, he is full of harmony.
Pan. Truely Lady no.
Hel. O fir.
Pan. Rude in ftoth, in good ftoth very rude.
Par. Well fayd my Lord: well, you fay fo in fits.
Pan. I have busieffe to my Lord, deere Queene: my Lord will you vouchsafe me a word.
Hel. Nay, this shall not hodge vs out, weele hear ye sing certainly.
Pan. Well faire Queene you are pleafant with me, but, marry thus my Lord, my deere Lord, and moft effeemed friend your brother Troylus.
Hel. My Lord Pandarus, hony faire Queene.
Pan. Go too faire Queene, goe to,
Commends himselfe moft affectionately to you.
Hel. You shall not bob vs out of our melody:
If you doe, our melancholly vs your head.
Pan. Sweete Queene, faire Queene, that's a faire Queene I faith

Hel. And to make a faire Lady fad, is a fower offence.
Pan. Nay, that shall not serue your turns, that shall it not in truth la. Nay, I care not for such words, no, no. And my Lord he desires you, that if the King call for him at Supper, you will make his excufe.
Hel. My Lord Pandarus?
Pan. What fayes my faire Queene, my very, very sweet Queene?
Par. What exploit's in hand, where fups he to night?
Hel. Nay but my Lord?
Pan. What fayes my faire Queene? my cozen will fall out with you.
Hel. You must not know where he fups.
Par. With my dipofet Cressida.
Pan. No, no, no such matter, you are wide, come your dipofet is fecke.
Par. Well, lke make excufe.
Pan. I good my Lord: why should you say Cressida? no, your poor dipofet's fecke.
Par. I fpe.

Pan. You
Enter Pandarus and Troylus Man.
Pan. How now, where's thy Maifer, at my Couzen Crefida?
Man. No sir, he flays for you to conduif him thither. Enter Troylus.
Pan. O heere he comes: How now, how now?
Troy. Sirra walke off.
Pan. Have you feeene my Cousin?
Troy. No Pandarus: I fhalke about her doore Like a ftrange foule vpone the Segian banke.
Staying for wafrage.O be thou my Charon,
And gue me swift transportance to thofe fields,
Where I may wallow in the Lilly beds.
Propos'd for the defuerer. O gentile Pandarus,
From Cupid's shoulder plucked his painted wings,
And flye with me to Crefida.
Pan. Walke here ith his Orchard, Ile bring her ftraight.
Exit Pandarus.

Troy. I am giddy: expectation whirlies me round,
Th'imaginary reliis is so sweete.
That it inchantes my fence: what will it be
When that the watry pallats taffe indeede
Loves thrice reputed Neчеr? Death I feare me
Sounding diftruction, or fome loy too fince,
Too fubtile, potent, and too farhge in fweetneffe,
For the capatily of my ruder powres:
I feare it much, and I doe fear eftaines,
That I fhall looke diftinflion in my lyjes,
As doth a baftalle, when they charge on heapes
The enemy flying. Enter Pandarus.
Pan. Shee's making her ready, fheele come ftraight; you muft be witty now, fehe doo fo blu(h, & fetches her winde fo short, as if he were fraid with a fprit: Ile fetch her; it is the prettiell villainne, fhe fetches her breath fo short as a newtane Sparrow.
Exit Pandarus.

Troy. Even much a falion doth imbrrace my bodome:
My heart beates thicker then a feuerous pulfe,
And all my powres doe their beftowing loofe,
Like vaifalage at vnwares encountering
The eye of Maietie.

Enter Pandarus and Crefida.
Pan. Come, come, what neede you blu(h?
Shames a babie; here fhe is now, fware the oaths now to her,that you have fwworne to me. What are you gone a-gaine, you muft be watccht ere you be made tame, muft
you 'fy come your ways, come your ways, and you draw backward, fheele put you Ile fhalke: why doo you not fpeak to her? Come draw this curtainne, & let's fee your picture.
Alaffe the day, how looth you are to offend day light and
'twere darke you'd close sooner: So, fo, rub on, and kiffe
the milfteere; how now, a kiffe in fee-farne? builfd there Carpenter, the ayre is fweete. Nay, you fhall fgyour hearts out ere I part you. The Faulcon, as the Trecell, for all the Ducks ith Riuer: go to, go to too.

Troy. You have bereft me of all my words Lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts; glue her deedes: but fheele bereau you 'oth deeds too, if thee call your activity in question what killing againe? here's in witneffe whereof of the Parties interchangeably. Come in, come in, Ile go get a fire?
Cref. Will you walke in my Lord?
Troy. O Crefida, how often have I wifht me thus?
Cref. Wifht my Lord? the gods grant? O my Lord.
Troy. What fould they grant? what makes this pretyy abruption: what too curius dreg epiies my fweete Lady in the founatine of our love?
Cref. More

Troylus and Crefida.
Troylus and Cressida.

Cref. More dregs then water, if my tears have eyes.
Troy. Fearers make diuels of Cherubins, they never see truly.
Cref. Blinde fear, that seeing resoun leads, findest safe footing, then blinde resoun, stumbling without feare to feare the word, oft cures the worse.
Troy. Oh let my Lady apprehend no feare, in all Capitid Pageant there is prefented no moniter.
Cref. Not nothing monitrons neither.
Troy. Nothing but our undertakings, when we vowe to wepe fear, live in fire, eate rocks, tame Tygers, thinking it harder for our Mistriffes to deifie imposition enough, then for vs to vndergoe any difficultie imposed. This is the monitrousitie in loue Lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd that the desire is boundleffe, and the adt a flame to limit.
Cref. They say all Louers sweare more performance then they are able, and yet refuse an ability that they never perfome: vowing more then the perfection of man, and discharging leefe then the tenth part of one. They that have the voyce of Lyons, and the adt of Hayes: are they not Monitours?
Troy. Are there such? Such are not we: Praife vs as we are tafeid, allow vs as we prove: our head shal goe bare till merit crown it; no perfection in reseration shal have a praife in present: wee will not name defert before his birth, and being borne his addition shall be humble: few words to faire faith. Troylus shal be such to Crefida, as what enue can say worth, shall be a mocke for his truth; and what truth can speake trueth, not truer then Troylus.
Cref. Will you walke in my Lord? Enter Pandarous.
Pan. What blushing filʃ? have you not done taling yet?
Cref. Well Vnckles, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.
Pan. I thank you for that; if my Lord get a Boy of you, you'll give him me: be true to my Lord, if he flinch, chide me for it.
Troy. You know now your hoftages your Vnckles word and my firme faith.
Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too: our kindred though be long ere they are wood, they are constant being wonne: they are Burrens I can tell you, they'll flieke where they are thrownne.
Cref. Boldeneſſe comes to mee now, and brings mee heart: Prince Troylus, I haue lou'd you night and day, for many weary moneths.
Troy. Why was my Crefid then fo hard to win? Cref. Hard to feme won: but I was won my Lord With the firft glance; that euer pardon me, If I confesse much you will play the tyrant: I love you now, but not till now so much But I might mifer; in faith I lye: My thoughts were like unbridled children grow Too head-strong for their mother: fee we fooles, Why haue I blab'd who shall be true to vs When we are so vnfaire to our felues? But though I lou'd you well, I vowe you not, And yet good faith I wift my selfe a man: Or that we women had mens priviledge Of speaking firft, Sweet, bid me hold my tongue, For in this rapture I shal充分体现. The thing I fall repeat, fee, your silence Comming in dumbnesse, from my weakenesse draws my foule of counſel from me. Stop my mouth.
Cref. My Lord, I doe beseech you pardon me, "Twas not my purpoſe thus to beg a kiffe: I am abam'd; O Heuens, what have I done! For this time will I take my leave my Lord.
Cref. Pray you content you. Troy. What offends you Lady? Cref. Sir, mine owne company. Troy. You cannot thin your felue. Cref. Let me goe and try: I have a kinde of felle recides with you: But an vnkind felle, that is felle will leave, To be another foole. Where is my wit? I would be gone: I fpeake I know not what. Troy. Well know they what they speake, that speaks so wildly.
Cref. Perverce my Lord, I flew more craft then loue, And fell fo roundly to a large conſſion, To Angle for your thoughts but you are wife, Or eſfe you loue not: for to be wise and loue, Exceedes mans might, that dwells with gods above. Troy. O that I thought it could be in a woman: As if it can, I will prefume in you, To feeke for aye her lampe and flames of loue. To keepe her contancie in pliſt and youth, Out-luishing beauties outward, with a minde That doth renew wiſſer then blood deciſes: Or that perfuasion could but thus conuince me, That my integritie and truth to you, Might be afronded with the match and weight Of such a winnowed puritite in loue: How were I then vp-lifted but alas, I am as true, as truths simplicitie, And simpier then the infancie of truth. Cref. In that Ile warre with you.
Troy. O vertuous fight, When right with right wars who shall be molt right: True iwiſſe in loue, shall in the world to come Approve their truths by Troylus, when their times, Full of proſec, of oath and big comparę; Wants familie, truth tir'd with iteration, As true as fleete, as plantage to the Moone: As Sunne to day: as Turtle to her mate: As Iron to Adamant: as Earth to th'Center: Yet after all comparions of truth, (As truths authenticie author to be cited as true as Troylus, shall crown vp the Verſe, And fanche the numbers. I Cref. Prophet may you be: If I be false, or swerne a haire from truth, When time is old and hath forgot it felle: When water drops have wonne the Stones of Troy; And blinde obliuion (ollow'd Cities vp: And mightie States characterifie are gratę To duffle nothing; yet let memory, From falle to falle, among falle Maids in loue, Vpbrayd my falsedome, when they'ae faid as falle, As Aire, as Water, as Winde, as fandie earth: As Foxe to Lambe: as Wolfe to Heiſen Café: Part to the Hinde, or Sten Dame to her Sonne: Yea, let them fay, to flieke the heart of falsedome, Troylus and Crysilda.

As fall as Crysilda.

Pand. Go too, a bargain made: seal it, seal it, Ile be the witness here I hold your hand: here my Cunions, if ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goes between be call’d to the worlds end after my name: call them all Panders; let all constant men be Troylyffes, all fall women Crysilda, and all brokers betweene, Panders:

say, Amen.

Troy. Amen.

Crys. Amen.

Whereupon I will thow you a Chamber, which bed, be cause it shall not speake of your prettie encounters, preffe it to death: away.

And Crysild grant all long-tide Maidens here, Bed, Chamber, and Pander, to prooue this gear. Exeunt.

Enter Vlyffes, Diomedes, Nefor, Agamemnon, Meiheus and Chalces. Florib.

Cal. Now Princes for the seruice I have done you, Th’advantage of the time promps me aloud, To call for recompence: appeare it to your minde, That through the fight I beare in things to lose, I have abandon’d Troy, left my my defension, Incur’d a Traitors name, exp’d my false, From currense and poffeft conueniences, To doubtfull fortunes, fequartering from me all That time, acquaintance, cuftome and condition, Made tame, and molt familiar to my nature: And here to doe you seruice am become, As new into the world, strange, vnaquainted. I doe before you, as in way of taffe, To give me now a little benefice: Out of those many regiftred in profite, Which you fay, line to come in my behalfe.

Agam. What would’t thou of vs Troyan? make demand?

Cal. You have a Troyan prifoner, call’d Anthenor, Yesterday tooke: Troy holds him very deere. Oft have you (often have you, thankes therefore) Deird my Cruill in right great exchange. Whom Troy hath fill den’d: but this Anthenor, I know is such a weel in their affaires; That their negotiatiuns all must flake, Wanting his managge: and they will almoft, Give vs a Prince of blood, a Sonne of Priam, In change of him. Let him be fent great Princes, And he shall buy my Daughter: and her profite, Shall quite strike off all seruice I have done, In molt accepted paine.

Agam. Let Diomed beare him, And bring vs Cruill bither: Calcas shal have What he requells of vs: good Diomed Furnish you fairly for this enterchange; Withall bring word, if Hector will to morrow Be answer’d in his challenge. Aiax is ready. Dis. This shall I vndertake, and ’tis a barthen Which I am proud to beare.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus in their Tent.

Vlyff. Achilles stand i’th entrance of his Tent; Please it our Generall to paffe strangety by him, As if he were forgot: and Princes all, Lay negligence and loose upon him; I will come lat, ’tis like heele question me,

Why such vaplaufue eyes are bent? why turn’d on him? If so, I haue derision medicable, To vie betweene your estrangede and his pride, Which his owne will shall haue defire to shrinke; It may doe good, pride hath no other glasse To show it selfe, but pride: for supple knees, Fleece arrogance, and are the proud mans feen.

Agam. Weele execute your purpose, and put on A forme of estrangenee as we paffe along, So doe each Lord, and either greete him not, Or else difinfinally, which shall shake him more, Then if not look on. I will lead the way. AGBil. What comes the Generall to speake with me?

You know my minde, Ile figh fight no more gainst Troy. AGBil. What fies Achilles, would he ought with vs?

Nef. Would you my Lord ought with the Generall?

AGbil. No.

Nef. Nothing my Lord.

Agam. The better.

AGBil. Good day, good day.

Men. How doe you? how doe you?

Achill. What do, the Cuckold scorne me?

Aiax. How now Patroclus?

Achill. Good morrow Aiax?

Aiax. Ha.

Achill. Good morrow.

Aiax. I, and good next day too. Exeunt.

Achill. What meane thefe fellows? know they not Achilles?

Patr. They paffe by strangety: they were vld to bend To fend their smoers before them to Achill: To come as humbly as they vld to creepe to holy Altars. Achill. What am I poore of late?

’Tis certaine, greatneffe once false out with fortune, Muft fall out with men too: what the declin’d is, He shall as soone reade in the eyes of others, As feele in his owne fall: for men like butter-flies, Shew not their maile wings, but to the Summer: And not a man for being fimply man, Hath any honour; but honour’d for those honours That are without him; as place, riches, and favour, Prizes of accident, as oft as merit:

Which where they fall, as being flippery flanders The loue that leand on them as flippary too, Doch one plucke downe another, and together Dye in the fall. But ’tis not so with me; Fortune and I are friends, I doe enioy At ample point, all that I did possif, Saue those mens looks: who do me thinkes finde out Something not worth in me such rich beholding, As they have often gluen. Here is Vlyffes, He interrupt his reading: how now Vlyffes?

Vlyff. Now great Thee’s Sonne.

Achill. What are you reading?

Vlyff. A strange fellow here

Writes me, that man, how dearly ever parted, How much in hauing, or without, or in,

Cannot make boasf to hauue that which he hath;

Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflektion:

As when his vertues shineing upon others, Heate them, and they retort that heate againe

To the firft gierer.

Achill. This is not strange Vlyffes:

The beaute that is borne here in the face,

The beaute he knows not; but commands it felse,

Not going from it felse: but eye to eye oppo’d,

Salutes
Salutes each other with each others forme.
For speculation turns not to it selue,
Till it hath trauell'd, and is married there
Where it may fee it selue: this is not strange at all.
\textit{Vijf.} I doe not name it at the position,
It is familiar; but at the Authors dict,
Who in his circumstances, expressly proues
That no may is the Lord of any thing,
(Though in and of him there is much confifting,)
Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himselfe know them for ought,
Till he behold them formed in their applaude,
Where they are extended: who like an arch reuerb'rate
The voyage againe; or like a gate of feele,
Fronting the Sunne, receueth and renders backe
His figure, and his heate. I was much rapt in this,
And apprehended Mars immediately:
The unknowne \textit{Alax}.
Heauen's what a man is there? a very Horfe, (are)
That has he knowes not what. Nature, what things there
Most abiet in regard, and deare in vie.
What things againe most hatred in the same,
And poore in worth: now shall we fee to morrow,
An act that very chance doth throw upon him?
\textit{Alax} renown'd? O heauen, what some men doe,
While some men leave to doe!
How some men creep in skilly fortune halls,
Where others play the Idoles in her eyes:
How one man eates into another pride,
While pride is reafing in his wantonnesse:
To fee thefe Grecian Lords; why, even already,
They clap the lubber \textit{Alax} on the shoulder,
As if his flute were on braue \textit{Hetters} breath,
And great Troy thinkeing.
\textit{Achil.} I doe beleue it:
For they paft by me, as mylers doe by beggars,
Neither gae to me good word, nor looke:
What are my deedes forgot?
\textit{Vijf.} Time hath(my Lord) a wallet at his backe,
Wherein he puts almes for oblivion:
A great \textit{Sia}d monster of ingratitude:
Thofe errats are good deades paft,
Which are deuast'd as fat as they are made,
Forgot as fome as done: perfeuerance, dreare my Lord,
Keepes honor bright, to haue done, is to hang
Quite out of fashion, like a ruttie male,
In monimentall mockrie: take the infant way,
For honour travelles in a straigt to narrow,
Where one but goes a bracht, keepeth then the path:
For emulation hath a thousand Sonnes,
That one by one purfue; if you glue way,
Or hedge aside from the directr forth right;
Like to an entred Tyde,they all rush by,
And leave you hindmoft:
Or like a gallant Horfe falsie in first ranke,
Lye there for pawnement to the abiet, neere
Ore-run and trampled on: then what they doe in present,
Though leefe then yours in paft, must o're-top yours:
For time is like a fashionable Horfe,
That lightly flaks his passion
\textit{Greed} by th'hand;
And with his armes out-stretche'd,as he would flye,
Graspe in the commer: the welcome euer smyles,
And farewells goes out flyinge: O let not vertue seeke
Remuneration for the thing it was: for beautie, wit,
High birth, vigor of bone, defect in service,
Luous, familiarity, and virtue all
To envious and calumminating time:
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin:
That all with one consent prife new borne gaules,
Though they are made and moulded of things paft,
And goe to dust, that is a little gullie,
More laud then guilt outwashed.
The present eye praieth the pref at obiect:
Then manuell not thou great and compleat man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship \textit{Alax};
Since things in motion begin to catch the eye,
Then what not fies: the cry went out on thee,
And all it might, and yet it may againe,
If thou wouldst not entombe thy selue alleie,
And cafe thy reputation in thy Tent;
Whole glorious deeds, but in their fields of late,
Made emulous millions mongst the gods themselfes,
And drue great \textit{Mars} to passion.
\textit{Achil.} Of this my priuacie,
I have fome reaons.
\textit{Vijf.} But 'gainst thy priuacie
The reaons are more potent and heroycall:
'Tis knowne \textit{Achilles} that you are in lone
With one of \textit{Priams} daughters.
\textit{Achil.} Ha! knowe?
\textit{Vijf.} Is that a wonder?
The prouidence that's in a watchfull State,
Knowes almost every graine of Platos gold;
Findes botome in that uncomprehenfible deapes;
Keepes place with thoughts: and almost like the gods,
Doe thoughts vnuaile in their dumbe cradles:
There is a myteryfe (with whom relation Dure neuer middle) in the soule of State;
Which hath an operation more divine,
Then breath or pen can glue exprueffion to:
All the commerces that you have had with Troy,
As perfectly is ours, as yours, my Lord.
And better would it fit \textit{Achilles} much,
To throw downe \textit{Hetters} then \textit{Poxema}.
But it must greene yong \textit{Virbut} now at home,
When fame shall in her Iland found her trumpes;
And all the Grecifh Girles shall tripping fing,
Great \textit{Hetters} fitter did \textit{Achilles} winne;
But our great \textit{Alax} bruely bate downe him,
Farewell my Lord! I as your iouer speake;
The foole flodes ore the Ice that you shuld breake.
\textit{Patr.} To this effect \textit{Achilles} have I mou'd you;
A woman impudent and mannifi growne,
Is not more loth'd, then an effeminate man,
In time of action: I fland condemn'd for this;
They thinke my little fomacke to the warre,
And your great loue to me, refraines you thus:
Sweete, roufe your felfes and the weake wanton,
\textit{Capit} Shall from your necke vnloose his amorous fould,
And like a dew drop from the Lyons mane,
Be shooke to arie ayre.
\textit{Achil.} Shall \textit{Alax} fight with \textit{Hetters}?
\textit{Patr.} I, and perhaps receive much honor by him.
\textit{Achil.} I see my reputation is at flake,
My name is thowly gored.
\textit{Patr.} O then beware:
Thofe wounds ease felle, that men doe glue themselfes:
Omission to doe what is neceffary,
Seals a comminacion to a blanke of danger,
And danger like an auge subtilet taints
Even then when we fit idey in the tunne.
\textit{Achil.} Go call \textit{Theagthen} hither sweet \textit{Patroclus}, \section*{Troylus and Cr\v{sida.}
Troylus and Cresseida.

He fend the fool to Aias, and defire him
'Twine the Trojan Lords after the Combat
To fee vs here vnaerm'd: I have a womans longing,
An appetite that I am fickle withal,
To fee great Hector in his weades of peace; Enter Thers.
To talke with him, and to behold his vifage,
Even to my full of view. A labour fau'd.
Thers. A wonder.
Achil. What?
Thers. Aias goes vp and downe the field, asking for himselfe.
Achil. How can that be?
Thers. Hee must fight fingly to morrow with Hector,
And is fo prophetically proud of an heroicall cudgelling,
that he rases in faying nothing.
Achil. How can that be?
Thers. Why he talkes vp and downe like a Peacock,
A frite and a rougher, to toke with him and two's out,
and if there is: but it lyes as coldly in him, as fire in a flint, which will not fhew without knocking. The mans vndone for ever for if Hector breake not his necke 'tis combat, hit break't himselfe in vaine-glory. He knowes not mee:
I fay, good morrow Aias; And he replies, thankes Agamemnon.
What thinke you of this man, that takes me for the Generall?
Hee's growne a very land-fith, languageffe, a monfter:
A plague of opinion, a man may weare it on both fides like a leather kerkin.
Achil. Thou muft be my Ambaffador to him Thers.
Thers. Who, I? why, hee defire no body: he proffes not anfwering; fpeaking is for beggers: he weares his tongue in his armes: I will put on his prefence; let Partreclus make his demands to me, you fhall fee the Pageant of Aias.
Achil. To him Patureclus; tell him, I humbly defire the valiant Aias, to inuite the moft valorous Hector, to come vnaerm'd to my Tent, and to procure fafe conduct for his perfon, of the magnanimos and moft iuftrious, fire or teenen times honour'd Captain, Generall of the Grecian
Armie Agamemnon, &c. doe this.
Par. I know bleffe great Aias,
Thers. Hum.
Par. I come from the worthy Achil.
Thers. Ha?
Par. Who muft humbly defire you to inuite Hector to his Tent.
Thers. Hum.
Par. And to procure fafe conduct from Agamemnon.
Thers. Agamemnon?
Par. I my Lord.
Thers. Ha?
Par. What fay you too?
Thers. God buy you with all my heart.
Par. Your anfwier fir.
Thers. If to morrow be a faire day, by eauen a cloche it will goe one way or other; howfoever, he fhall pay for me ere he hat me.
Par. Your anfwier fir.
Thers. Fare you well withall my heart.
Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?
Thers. No, but he's out a tune thus: what mufcike will be in him when Hector has knocked out his braines, I know not: but I am sure none, vnleffe the Fider Apollo get his finewes to make catlings on.
Achil. Come, thou fhalt bear a Letter to him fright.
Thers. Let me carry another to his Horfe; for that's the more capable creature.
Achil. My minde is troubled like a Fountaine fir'd,
And I my felle fir not the bottome of it.
Thers. Would the Fountaine of your minde were cleere againe, that I might water an Afe at it: I had rather be a Tieke in a Sheep, then fuch a vallant ignorance.

Enter at one doore Eneas with a Torche, at another
Paris, Diomede, Antenor, Diomed the Grecian, with Torches.
Par. See hoa, who is that there?
Diom. It is the Lord Eneas.
Eneas. Is the Prince there in perfon?
Had I to good occaion to lye long
As you Prince Paris, nothing but heauenly buineffe,
Should rob my bed-mate of my company.
Diom. That's my minde too: good morrow Lord
Eneas.
Par. A valiant Greeke Eneas, take his hand,
Wimeffe the proceffe of your speeche within;
You told how Diomed in a whole weake by dayes
Did haunt you in the Field.
Eneas. Health to you valiant fir,
During all question of the gentle truce:
But when I meete you arm'd, as blacke defance,
As heart can thinke, or courage execute.
Diom. The one and other Diomed embraces,
Our blouds are now in calme; and fo long health:
But when contention, and occasion meetes,
By Jove, Ie play the hunter for thy life,
With all my force, purfuite and pollicy.
Eneas. And thou shalt hunt a Lyon that will flye
With his face backward, in humane gentlineffe;
Welcome to Troy; now by Anchises life,
Welcome indeede: by Venus hand Ieware,
No man alleue can louse in fuch a fort,
The thing he meanes to kill, more excellently.
Diom. We sympathize: true let Anchises lye
(If to my fword his fate be not the glory)
A thousand compleate courfes of the Sunne,
But in mine emulous honor let him dye:
With every joynt a wound, and that to morrow.
Eneas. We know each other well.
Diom. We doe, and long to know each other worfe.
Par. This is the mof, delightfull'ft gentle greeting;
The nobleft hatefull love, that ere I heard of.
What buineffe Lord so early?
Eneas. I was fent for to the Kingsbut why, I know not.
Par. His purpofe meets yougill was to bring this Greek
To Calchas's houfe; and there to render him,
For the enfreed Antenor, the faire Cressida.
Lers haue your company; or if you pleafe,
Haue there before vs. I confantly doe thinke
(Or rather call my thought a certaine knowledge)
My brother Troylus lodgeth there to night.
Roufe him, and gue him note of our approach,
With the whole quality whereof, I feare
We fhall be much yvameac.

Eneas. That I affure you:
Troylus had rather Troy were bore to Greece,
Then Cressida borne from Troy.
Par. There
Troylus and Cressida.

Par. There is no helpe:
The bitter diisoposition of the time will haue it to.
On Lord, weele follow you.

Cressida. Good morrow all.

Par. And tell me noble Diomed; faith tell me true,
Even in the foule of found good fellow ship,
Who in your thoughts meritt faire Helen most?
My selfe, or Memenias?

Diomed. Both alike.
He merites well to have her, that doth seek her,
Not making any scruple of her foyle,
With such a hell of paine, and world of charge.
And you as well to keep her, that defend her,
Not pallatting the taste of her diisounour,
With such a costly lofe of wealth and friends:
He like a puling Cuckold, would drinke vp
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece:
You like a leatcher, out of whorholf loynes,
Are pleas'd to breede out your inheritors:
Both merits poys'd, each weights no lesse nor more,
But he as he, which heauler for a whore.

Par. You are too hard to your country-woman.

Dis. Shee's better to her countrey: heare me Parb,
For every falle drop in her bauldy veins,
A Grecians life hath funke; for every scrople
Of her contaminatid carion weight,
A Troyan hath beene flame. Since the could speake,
She hath not giuen so many good words breath,
As for her, Greekes and Troyans suffered death.

Par. Faire Diomed, you doe as chapeau doe,
Dil praffle the thing that you defiere to buy:
But we in silence hold this vertue well;
Wecie not commend, what we intend to sell.
Here lyes our way.

Enter Troylus and Cressida.

Troylus. Deere trouble not your selfe: the morne is cold.

Cressida. Then sweet my Lord, Ile call mine Vnckle down;
He shall vnbolt the Gates.

Troylus. Trouble him not:
To bed, to bed: sleepe kill those pritty eyes,
And giue as soft attachment to thy letense,
As Infants empty of all thought.

Cressida. Good morrow then.

Troylus. I prittehe now to bed.

Cressida. Are you a weare of me?

Troylus. O Cressida! but that the bufe day
Walk'st by the Larke, hath rourd the ribauld Crowes,
And dreaming night will hide our eyes no longer:
I would not from thee.

Cressida. Night hath beene too briefe.

Troylus. Befrewre the witch! with venemous wight she tawdiously as hell: but flies the grapes of love,
With wings more momentary,swift then thought:
You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cressida. Prithhee tarry, you men will neuer tarry;
O foolish Cressida, I might have full hold off,
And then you would haue tarried. Harke, then's one vp?
Pand, within. What's all the doores open here?

Troylus. It is your Vnckle.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Cressida. A peffilence on him: now will he be mocking:
I shall haue such a life.

Troylus. How now, how now? how doe maiden-heads?
Here you Madam, what's my cousin Cressida?

Cressida. Go hang your selfe, you naughty mocking Vnckle:
You bring me to doo----and then you floute me too.

Troylus. To do what? to do what? let her say what:
What haue I brought you to doe?

Cressida. Come,come, beshrew your heart: youe nere be good, nor fauler others.

Troylus. Ha, ha: alas poore wretch: a poore Chipskele, haft
not flept to night? would he no (a naughty man) let it sleepete a bug-beare take him.

Cressida. Did not I tell you? would he were knocked ith' head. Who's that at doore? good Vnckle goe and fee.
My Lord, come you apace into my Chamber:
You smile and mocke me, as if I meant naughtly.

Troylus. Ha, ha.

Cressida. Come you are deceiued, I think of no such thing.
How earneitly they knocke: pray you come in.

Troylus. I would not for halfe Troy have youe fonce here.

Cressida. Who's there? what's the matter? will you beste downe the doore? How now, what's the matter?

Cressida. Good morrow Lord, good morrow.

Troylus. Who's there my Lord c.Emes? by my troth I knew you not: what news with you so early?

Cressida. Is not Prince Troylus here?

Troylus. Here! what should he doe here?

Cressida. Who, nay then: Come, come, youle doe him wrong, ere y'are ware: youle be so true to him, to be faile to him: Doe not you know of him, but yet goe fetch him bithen goe.

Enter Troylus.

Troylus. How now, what's the matter?

Cressida. My Lord, I scarce have leasure to falte you,
My matter is so rafh: there is at hand,
Parb your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Auctor
Delier'd to vs, and for him forth-with,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this houre,
We must clue vp to Diomed hand
The Lady Cressida.

Troylus. Is it concluded so?

Cressida. By Priam, and the generall state of Troy,
They are at hand, and ready to effect it.

Troylus. How my atchievements mcke me;
I will goe meete them: and my Lord of.Emes,
We met by chance; you did not finde me here.

Cressida. Good, good, my Lord, the secrets of nature
Haue not more gift in tacturnitie.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pandarus. It's possible no sooner got but loft: the diuell take Auctor; the yong Prince will goe mad: a plague
vpon Auctor; I would they had brok's necke.

Cressida. How now? what's the matter? who was here?

Pandarus. Ah, ha!

Cressida. Why figh you so profoundly? wher's my Lord?
gone? tell me sweet Vnckle, what's the matter?

Pandarus. Would I were as depe vnder the earth as I am above.

Cressida. O the gods! what's the matter?

Pandarus. Prythee get thee in: would thou hadt nere been borne; I knew thou wouldt be his death. O poore Gentleman a plague vpon Auctor.

Cressida. Good
Troylus and Cressida.

Cref. Good Vacke! I befeech you, on my knees, I befeech you what's the matter?
Pan. Thou must be gone wrest, thou must be gone; thou art chang'd for Allender: thou must to thy Father, and be gone from Troylus: 'twill be his death: 'twill be his bane, he cannot bear it.
Cref. O you immortal gods! I will not goe.
Pan. Thou must.
Cref. I will not Vack: I have forgot my Father: I know no touch of contanguiitie: No kin, no love, no blood, no soule, no nere me, As the sweet Troylus: O you gods diuine!
Make Cressida name the very crowne of Fatnood! If ever the pleaue Troylus: time, once and death, Do to this body what extremitie you can; But the strong safe and building of my loue, Is as the very Cressida of this earth, Drawing all things to it. I will goe in and weeps.
Pan. Doe, doe.
Cref. Tearre my bright heire, and scrath my prised cheekes,
Cracke my deereuyoce with fobs, and breake my heart
With founding Troylus. I will not goe from Troy.Exeunt.

Enter Pars, Troylus, Cressida, Delphina, Acton, and Damidea.

Pan. It is great morning, and the houre prefant
Of her deliuerie to this valiant Grecian
Comes faft vpon: good my brother Troylus,
Tell you the Lady what she is to doe,
And haft her to the purpoe:
Troy. Walk into her house:
Ie bring her to the Grecian presently;
And to his hand, when I deliuer her,
Thinking it an Altar, and thy brother Troylus
A Priest, there offering to it his heart.
Pan. I know what 'ts to loue,
And would, as I shall pittie, I could helpe.
Please you walke in, my Lords. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.
Cref. Why tell you me of moderatyon?
The griefe is fine, full perfect that I taste,
And no lesse in a fene as strong
As that which cauleth it. How can I moderate it?
If I could temperifie with my affection,
Or brew it to a weake and colder pallat,
The like alaiment could I glue my griefe:
My loue admits no qualifying croffe; Enter Troylus.
No more my griefe, in fuche a precioso loose.
Pan. Here, here, here, he comes, a sweet ducke.
Cref. O Troylus, Troylus!
Pan. Why tell you me of moderatyon?
Cref. Why ask you of me of moderatyon?
The griefe is fine, full perfect that I taste,
And no lesse in a fene as strong
As that which cauleth it. How can I moderate it?
If I could temperifie with my affection,
Or brew it to a weake and colder pallat,
The like alaiment could I glue my griefe:
My loue admits no qualifying croffe; Enter Troylus.
No more my griefe, in fuche a precioso loose.
Pan. Here, here, here, he comes, a sweet ducke.
Cref. O Troylus, Troylus!
Pan. What? is there a part of Cressidas is here? let me embrace too: oh hart, as the goodly saying is: O heart, heauie heart, why fioght thou without breaking? where be answers againe? because thou canst not safely thine (smart by friendship; nor by speaking; there was nearer a truer rime; let us call away nothing, for we may like to have neede of such a Verse: we see it, we see it: how now Lamps? Troy. Cressida: I lose thee in so strange a puritie;
That the blest gods, as angry with my fancie,
More bright in zeale, then the deuotion which
Cold lips blow to their Deities: take thee from me.
Cref. Have the gods caue?
Pan. I, I, I, this is too plaine a cafe.
Cref. And is it true, that I muat goe from Troy?
Troy. A hatefull truth.
Cref. What, and from Troylus too?
Troy From Troy, and Troylus.
Cref. It is possible.
Troy. And sodainely, where inuile of chance
Puts backe leaue-taking, iuluses roughly by
All time of pauue; rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoyndaunce: forcibly prevents
Our lockt embrasures; strangelles our desire vows,
Euen in the birth of our owne laboring breath.
We two, that with fo many thousand fighes
Did buy each other, muat poorly fell our selves,
With the rude breuitie and dischARGE of our
Inurious time; now with a robbers haste
Grans bruce with this ourweb vp, vp, he knows not how.
As many farwells as he fars in heauen,
With diswita breath, and confign'd kifles to them,
He fumbles vp in a loose adiew;
And scents vs with a finge famihit kiffe,
Difcharging with the falt of broken teares. Enter Cressida. Cressida within. My Lord, is the Lady ready?
Troy. Harke, you are call'd: some fay the genius fo
Cries, come to him that infantly muat dye.
Bid them haue patience: the shall come anon.
Pan. Where are my teares. Raine, to lay this winde, or my heart will be blowne vp by the root.
Cref. I muat then to the Grecians?
Troy. No remedy.
Cref. A wouf Troylus, a mong't it the merry Grecians.
Troy. When shall we fea age?
Troy. Here me my loue: be thou but true of heart.
Cref. I true? how now? what wicked deeme is this?
Troy. Nay, we muat vfe expoluvalion kindely,
For it is parting from vs;
I speake not, be thou true, as fearing thee:
For I will throw my Glowe to death himselfe,
That there's no maculation in thy heart:
But be thou true, say I, to fition in
My frquent protestation: be thou true,
And I will fee thee.
Cref. O you shall be espof'd, my Lord to dangers
As infinite, as imminent: but Ie be true.
Troy. And Ie grow friend with danger;
Weare this Sleeve.
Cref. And you this Glowe.
When shal I fee you?
Troy. I will corrupt the Grecian Centinels,
To give thee nightly visitation.
But yet be true.
Cref. O heauen's: be true againe?
Troy. Heare why I speake it; Loue;
The Grecian youths are full of quallity,
Their loving well compoud'd, with spirit of nature,
Flawing and swelling ore with Arts and exercice:
How noiceties may move, and parts with perfon.
Alas, a kinde of godly icollousie;
Which I beleece you call a vertuous finne;
Makes me affraid.
Cref. O heauen's, you loue me not!
Troy. Dye I a villain then:
In this I do not call your faith in question
So mainely as my merit: I cannot ling,
Nor heale the high Laulow: nor sweeten tale;
Nor play at subtile games; faire vertues all;
Troylus and Cressida.

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:
But I can tell that in each grace of these,
There lurks a still and dumb-difficult silence,
That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted.

c/£ne. Do you think I will:
Troy. No, but something may be done that we will not:
And sometimes we are duteous to our felues,
When we will tempt the frailtude of our powers,
Prefuming on their changeful potentiae.

c/£ne within. Nay, good my Lord?
Troy. Come kif, and let vs part.
Paris within. Brother Troyes?
Troy. Good brother come you hither,
And bring c/£ne and the Grecian with you.

c/£ne. My Lord, will you be true?
Exeunt:

Enter the Greeks.
Fear not my truth; the mornall of my wit
Is plaine and true, ther's all the reach of it.
Welcome sir Diomed, here is the Lady
Which for Antenor, we deliver you.
At the port (Lord) ile glue her to thy hand,
And by the way posseffe thee what she is.
Entreate her faire; and by my foule, faire Greccke,
If ere thou fland at mercy of my Sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as sife
As Priam is in Illon?

Diomed. Faire Lady Cressid,
So please you fauete thanks this Prince expexts:
The luftre in your eyes, heaven in your cheeke,
Pleaseth your faire vilage, and to Diomed
You shall be milite, and command him wholly.
Troy. Grecian, thou doft not vfe me curteoufly,
To shame the seal of my petition towards,
I praifiing her. I tell thee Lord of Greccke:
Shee is as farre high soaring o're thy praiies,
As thou unworthy to be call'd her fervant:
I change thine vfe her well, even for my charge:
For by the dreadful Plote, if thou do'st not,
(Though the great bulke Achilles be thy guard)
Ile cut thy thraote.

Diomed. Oh be not mou'd Prince Troyes;
Let me be pruifled'd by myplace and meffage,
To be a teaker free; when I am hence,
Ile anfwere to my iuft: and know my Lord;
Ile nothing doe on charge: to her owne worth
She shall be pri't: but that you say, be't so:
Helpsake it in my spirit and honor, no.

Troy. Come to the Port. By tell thee Diomed,
This brave, shall oft make thee to hide thy head:
Lady, glue me your hand, and as we walk,
To our owne felues bend we our needfull talk.

Sound Trumpet.

Par. Harke, Hector Trumpet.
c/£ne. How hau'e we spent this morning
The Prince mutte think me tardy and remifse,
That I was to ride before him in the field.

Par. 'Tis Troyes fault: come, come, to field with him.

Exeunt.

Dis. Let us vs make ready straignt.
c/£ne. Yea, with a Bridgroomes fresh alacritie
Let vs addresse to tend on Heptor heele:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lye
On his faire worth, and angle Chialeria.

Enter Ajax armed, Achilles, Patroclus, Agamemnon,
Menelaus, Vlij, Nestor, Calcas, &c.

Ago. Here art thou in appointment fresh and faire,
Anticipating time. With starting courage,
Gue with thy Trumpet a loud note to Troy
Thou dreadful Ajax, that the appuiled aire
May pierce the head of the great Combatant,
And halie him hither.

Nest. Thou, Trumpet, ther's my purfe:
Now cracke thy luings, and spilt thy brauen pipe:
Blow vaille, till thy sphereed Bias cheeke.
Out-swell the collicke of puf Aquilon:
Come, draw thy cheef, and let thy eyes spout bloud:
Thou bowesest for Heptor.

Vlij. No Trumpet anfwers.
Achill. 'Tis but early dayes.
Ago. Is not young Diomed with Calcas daughter?

Vlij. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gate,
He rites on the toe: that spirit of his
In aperition lifts him from the earth.

Ago. Is this the Lady Cressid?

Nest. Even the.

Ago. Most dearly welcome to the Greckees, sweete Lady.

Nest. Our Generall doth salute you with a kiffe.

Vlij. Yet is the kindenelle but particular: were better
The were kife in general.

Nest. And very courteoufly: Ile begin. So much for Nestor.

Achill. Ile take that winter from your lips faire Lady
Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kifing once.

Patroclus. But that's no argument for kifing now;
For thus pop't Paris in his hardiment.

Vlij. Oh deadly gall, and thame of all our scornes,
For which we loose our heads, to gild his hornes.

Patroclus. The fift was Menelaus kiffe, this mine:

Patroclus kifhes you.

Men. Oh this is trim.

Patroclus. Paris and I kiffe euermore for him.
Men. Ile have my kiffe fir: I Lady by your leave.
Cref. In kifing doe you render, or receive.
Patroclus. Both take and give.

Cref. Ile make my match to liue,
The kiffe you take is better then you glie:
therefore no kiffe.

Men. Ile give you boote, Ile give you three for one.

Cref. You are an odde man, give euem, or give none.

Men. An odde man, Lady, evry man is odde.

Cref. No, Paris is not; for you know 'tis true,
That you are odde, and he is euem with you.

Men. You fillip me a'th' head.

Cref. No, Ile be fwayne.

Vlij. It were no match your naile against his horne:
May I sweete Lady beg a kiffe of you?

Cref. You may.

Vlij. I doe defire it.

Cref. Why begge then?

Vlij. Why then for Venus fake, give me a kiffe:
When Helen is a maide againe, and his.

Cref. I am your debtor, claime it when 'tis due.

¶ of 3

Vlij. Neuer's
Troylus and Cressida.

[Verse]

Of swim. Neuer's my day, and then a kiffe of you.

Dium. Lady a word, He bring you to your Father.

Nep. A woman of quicke fence.

Pifi. Yete, fie, upon her :

There's a language in her eye, her cheeke, her lip;

Nay, her foote feakes, her wanton spirites looke out

At every lyont, and motive of her body :

Oh these encounters fo glib of tongue,

That glue a coafting welcome ete it come t;

And wide vnclape the tables of their thoughts,

To every tickling reader: let them downe,

For sluttish spoyles of opportunitie;

And daughters of the game.

Enter all of Troy, Hector, Paris, Aenes, Helena, and Attendants. Floris.

All. The Troians Trumpet.

Ages. Yonder comes the troope.

Exeunt.

Hec. If not Achilles fir, what is your name?

Ach. If not Achilles nothing.

Hec. Stand by our Aias: as you and Lord Aeneas

Convent upon the order of their fight,

So be't: either to the vtermost,

Or rile a breach: the Combatants being kin,

Halfe hims their fitle, before their strokes begin.

Pifi. They are oppred already.

Ages. What Trojan is that fame that looke so heauy?

Pifi. The youngef Sonne of Priam;

A true Knight: they call him Troylus;

Not yet mature, yet matchelfe, firme of word,

Speaking in deelea, and dreeelefe in his tongue;

Not soome proock'y: nor being proock't,loone calm'd;

His heart and hand both open, and both free:

For what he has, he glesse: what thinkes, he thewes;

Yet glesse he nor till judigeament his bounty,

Nor dignifies an impaire thought with breath:

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;

For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes

To tender obiects; but he, in heat of action,

Is more vindecuatie then leaual foule.

They call him Troylus: and on him creft,

A fecond hope, as fairly built as Hector.

Thus faies Aeneas, one that knows the youth,

Even to his inches: and with private fouls,

Did in great Illion thus tranflate him to thee.

Alarum.

Ages. They are in action.

Nep. Now Aias hold thinke owne.

Troy. Hector, thou sleepe't, awake thee.

Ages. His blowes are wel dispo'd there Aias. trupets

Diam. You must no more.

Exeunt. Princes enough, io pleaze you.

Aia. I am not warme yet, let vs fight againe.

Diam. As Hector pleases.

Hec. Why then will I no more:

Thou art great Lord, my Fathers sisters Sonne;

A coulen german to great Priams seade:

The obligation of our blood forbids

A gorie emulation: twixt vs twaine:

Were thy commixion, Greeke and Trojan fio:

That thou could fay, this hand is Grecian all,

And this is Trojan: the finewes of this Legge,

All Greekes, and this all Troy: my Mothers bloud

Runs on the dexter cheeke, and this finifter

Bounds in my fathers: by love multipotent;

Thou shoul'd not bare from me a Greeckish member

Wherein my word had not imprefure made

Of our ranke feud: but the iuft gods gainfay,

That any drop thou borrow'd from thy mother,

My fainted Aures, thou by my mortall Sword

Be drained. Let me embrace thee Aias:

By him that thunders, thou haft luftie Armes;

Hector would have them fall upon him thus,

Cosen, all honor to thee.

Aia. I thanke thee Hector:

Thou art too gentle, and too free a man:

I came to kill thee Cozen, and bare hence

A great addition, earned in thy death.

Hec. Not Neoptolemus fo mirable,

On whose bright creft, fame with her low'd (O yes)

Cries, This is he: could't promit to himselfe,

A thought of added honor, torne from Hector?

Exeunt. There is expectance here from both the fides,

What further you will doe?

Hec. Weele anwerre it:

The life is embracement: Aias, farewell.

Aia. If I might in entreaties finde fucceffe,

As feld I have the chance: I would defire

My famous Cousin to our Grecian Tents.

Diam. Tho Agamemnon with, and great Achilles

Both long to fee vnarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hec. Aeneas, call my brother Troylus to me :

And figure this losing interview

To the etpeclers of our Trojan part:

Defire them home. Give me thy hand, my Cousin:

I will goe eate with thee, and fee your Knights.

Enter Agamemnon and the rett.

Aia. Great Agamemnon comes to mee vs here.

Hec. The worthy of them, tell me name by name:

But for Achilles, mine owne ferching eyes

Shall finde him by his large and porty fize.

Ages. Worthy of Armes: as welcome as to one:

That would be rid of such an enemie.

But no welcome: understand more cleere

What's paft, and what's to come, is fire'd with huskes;

And formeless ruine of obligation:

But in this extant moment, faith and troth,

Strain'd purely from all hollow bias drawing:

Bid thee with moft divine integritie.

From heart of very heart, great Hector welcome.

Hec. I thanke thee moft imperious Agamemnon.

Ages. My
Ach. Behold thy fill.
Hec. Nay, I have done already.
Ach. Thou art to breathe, I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee, limb by limb.
Hec. O, like a Brock of sport thou'rt read in ore:
But there's more in me then thou understand'st.
Why doest thou so oppose me with thine eye?
Ach. Tell me you Heavens, in which part of his body
Shall I destroy him? Whether there, or there, or there,
That I may give the local wound a name,
And make difficult the very breach, where-out
Hec. great spirit flw. Answer me heauns.
Hec. It would discredit the blest Gods, proud man,
To answer such a question; Stand again;
Think it thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to prenominate in nice consider-
Where thou wilt hit me dead?
Ach. I tell thee yea.
Hec. Wert thou the Oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee: henceforth guard thee well,
For he not kill thee not there, nor there,
But by the forge that flythed Mars his helm,
Ille kill thee everywhere, yea, and ere.
You wildest Grecians, pardon me this bragg,
His infolence draws folly from my lips,
But Ile endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never——
Ach. Do not chafe thee Cofs:
And you Achilles, let these threats alone
Till accident, or purpose bring you too's.
You may every day enough of Hec.
If you have flamacke. The general flate I fear,
Can Gareo intreat you to be oddle with him.
Hec. I pray you let vs see you in the field,
We have had pelting Warres since you refud——
The Grecians caufe.
Ach. Doth thou intreat me Hec?
To morrow do I meete thee fell as death,
To night, all Friends.
Hec. Thy hand vpon that match.
Ag. First, all you Peeres of Greece go to my Tent,
There in the full coniuine you: Afterwards,
As Hector layre, and your bounties shall
Concorde together, severally intreat him.
Beate lowd the Taborins, let the Trumpets blow,
That this great Souldier may his welcome know. Exeunt
Troy. My Lord Ulysses, tell me I believe you,
In what place of the Field doth Calchas keeps?
Ulyss. At Mermalaus Tent, most Princely Troylus,
There Diomed doth seat with him to night,
Who neither looks on heaven, nor on earth,
But guists all garr and bent of amorous view
On the fair Griss.
Troy. Shall I (sweet Lord)be bound to thee so much,
After we part from Agamemnon's Tent,
To bring me thither?
Ulyss. You shall command me sir:
As gentle tell me, of what Honour was
This Grissins in Troy, had the no Lower there
That wailes her abscence?
Troy. O sir, to such as boastth shew their scarres,
A mocke is due: will you walke on my Lord?
She was belou'd, the lou'd; she is, and sooth;
But fill sweet Love's fire, for Fortune too.
Exeunt
Ach. Ile heat his blood with Greekishe wine to night,
Troylus and Crefsida.

Which with my Cmctor Ile coole to morrow:

Patroclus, let vs Feast him to the hight.

Pat. Heere comes Therites. Enter Therites.

Ther. How now, thou core of Envy?

Ther. Thou crusty batch of Nature, what's the news?

Ther. From whence, Fragment?

Ther. Why thou full dill of Foole, from Troy.

Pat. Who keepes the Tent now?

Ther. The Surgeons box, or the Patients wound.

Pat. Well faid aduersity, and what need these tricks?

Ther. Prythee be silent boy, I profit not by thy talkes, thou art thought to be Achilles male Varlot.

Patroclus. Male Varlot you Rogue! What's that?

Ther. Why his masculine Whore. Now the rotten diseases of the South, gat-gripping Rupites, Catarrhes, Loads a granuell I'th'backe, Lethargies, cold Palfies, and the like, take and take againe, such preposterous discoueries.

Pat. Why thou damnable box of enuy thou, what mean'th thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Pat. Why no, you ruinous But, you whoron indignant Curre.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle, immaterial skiele of Sleep, fill'd thou green Sarcenet flap for a fore eye, thou taffell of a Prodigious purle thouually the poore world is peirted with such water-flies, diminutives of Nature.

Pat. Out gall.

Ther. Finch Egge.

Ach. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite From my great purpose in to morrowes battell:

Here is a Letter from Queene Ithaca,

A token from her daughter, my faire Loue,

Both taxing me, and gaging me to keepe

An Oath that I haue sworne. I will not breake it,

Fall Greeces, falle Fame, Honor or go, or flay,

My maior voye yses here; this Ile obays:

Come,come Therites, help to trim my Tent,

This night in banquetting muft all be spent,

Away Patroclus. Exit.

Ther. With too much blood, and too little Brain, these two may run mad: but if with too much Braine, and too little blood, they do, Ile be a curer of madmen. Here's a Argamennon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loues Quieties, but he has not so much Braine as eare-wax; and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there his Brother, the Bull, the primitive Statue, and oblique memoriall of Cuckolds, a thrifty shifting-horne in a chaine, hanging at his Brothers legge, to what forme but that he is, hold wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turne him too: to an Affe were nothing; hee is both Affe and Ox; to an Ox were nothing, hee is both Ox and Affe: to be a Dogge, a Mule, a Cat, a Fitschew, a Toade, a Lizard, an Owle, a Puttocke, or a Herring without a Roe, I would not care: but to be Memlant, I would confpire against Delphny. Ashe me not what I would be, if I were not Therites for I care not to bee the lowe of a Lazzar, so I were not Memlant. Hoy-day, spirits and fire.

Enter Heitor, Anea, Argamennon, Vlistes, Heior, Diomed, with Lights.

Anea. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Anea. No yonder his, there where we see the light.

Heior. I trouble you.

Anea. No, not a whit.

Enter Akelles.

Vlist. Heere comes himselfe to guide you?

Akelles. Welcome brave Heitor, welcome Princes all.

Again. So now faire Prince of Troy, I bid goodnight, Achilles commands the guard to tend on you.

Heitor. Thanks,and goodnight to the Greeks general.

Men. Goodnight my Lord.

Heitor. Goodnight sweet Lord Memlant.

Ther. Sweet draught: sweet quoth-a? sweet sinnke, sweet sure.

Akell Goodnight and welcome, both at once, to those that go, or tarry.

Anea. Goodnight.

Akell. Old Nefor tarries, and you too Diomed,

Keere Heitor company an houre, or two.

Diom. I cannot Lord, I haue important businesse.

The tide whereof is now, goodnight great Heitor.

Heitor. Giue me your hand.

Vlist. Follow his Torch, he goes to Chauel Tent, Ile keep you company.

Troy. Sweet rest, you honour me.

Heitor. And so good night.

Akell. Come,come, enter my Tent. Exeunt.

Ther. That fame Diomeds a false-hearted Rogue, a most vnfaith Knaue; I will no more truit him when hee leeres, then I will a Serpent when hee hisses; he will spend his mouth & promisses, like Brabier the Hound; but when he performs, Astronomers foretell it, that it is prodigious, there will come some change: the Sunne borrowes of the Moone when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leaue to fee Heitor, then not to dogge himthesly lay, he keepe a Troyan Drab, and vise the Traftour Chauel his Tent. Ile after—Nothing but Letherie? All inconvenant Varlets. Exeunt.

Enter Diomed.

Dio. What are you vp here ho? speake?

Chal. Who calls?

Dio. Diomed, Chauel(I thinkes) wher's you Daughter?

Chal. She comes to you.

Enter Troylus and Vlistes.

Vlist. Stand where the Torch may not discouer vs.

Enter Crefsid.

Troy. Crefsid comes forth to him.

Dio. How now my charge?

Cref. Now my sweet gardian: harke a word with you.

Troy. Yes, so familiar?

Vlist. She will sing any man at first sight.

Troy. And any man may finde him, if he can take her life: she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember?

Cal. Remember? yes.

Dio. Nay, but doe then; and let your mind hee be coupled with your words.

Troy. What should she remember?

Vlist. Litt?

Cref. Sweete hony Greek, tempt me no more to folly,

Troy. Roguery.

Dio. Nay then.

Cref. Ile tell you what.

Dio. Fa, fa, come tell a pin, you are a forsworne.----

Cref. In faith I cannot: what would you have me do?

Troy. A lugging trickey, to be secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would betroth on me?

Cref. I prethee do not hold me to mine oath.

Bid me doe not any thing but that sweete Greeke.

Dio. Good
Troylus and Cressida.

Dio. Good night.
Troy. Hold, patience.
Virg. How now Trojan?
Cref. Diomed.
Dio. No, no, good night: Ile be your foole no more.
Troy. Thy better must.
Cref. Harke one word in your ear.
Troy. O plague and madneffe! Vlif. You are mused Prince, let vs depart I pray you, Lest your displeasure should enlarge it else.
To wrathfull tearmes: this place is dangerous;
The time right deadly: I beseech you goe.
Troy. Behold, I pray you.
Vlif. Nay, good my Lord goe off:
You now to great distraction: come my Lord?
Troy. I pray thee stay.
Vlif. You have not patience, come.
Troy. I pray you stay by hell and hell torments, I will not speake a word.
Dio. And so good night.
Cref. Nay, but you part in anger.
Troy. Doth that griefe thee? O withered true! O
Virg. Why, how now Lord?
Troy. By Jove I will be patient.
Cref. Guardian? why Grecke?
Dio. Fo, fo, adue, you pater.
Cref. In faith I doe not: come hither once again.
Vlif. You shake my Lord at something; will you goe?
You will break out.
Troy. She stakess his checke.
Vlif. Come, come.
Troy. May stay, by Jove I will not speake a word.
There is betweene my will, and all offences,
A guard of patience: flay a little while.
Tber. How the diuell Luxury with his fat rumpe and potato finger, tickles thee together: frye lechery, frye.
Dio. But will you then?
Cref. In faith I will lo; neuer truft me elfe.
Dio. Glue me some token for the surety of it.
Cref. Ile fetch you one.
Vlif. You have sworne patience,
Troy. Fear me not sweorde Lord.
I will not be my selfe, nor haue cognition
Of what I feele: I am all patience.
Enter Crefid.
Tber. Now the pledge, now, now, now.
Cref. Here Diomed, keep hee this Sleeue.
Troy. O beaute! where is thy Faith?
Cref. My Lord.
Troy. I will be patient, outwarde I will.
Cref. You looke upon that Sleeue? behold it yeild:
He lou'd me: O faire wench: giue me againe,
Dio. Whole was't?
Cref. It is no matter now I haue't againe.
I will not meete with you to morrow night:
pray thee Diomed vieste me no more.
Tber. Now the sharpens: well said Whetstone.
Dio. I shall haue it.
Cref. What is this?
Dio. I tate.
Cref. O all you gods! O prettie, prettie pledge;
Thy Maifer now lies thinking in his bed
Of thee and me, and fighes, and takes my Gloue,
And giuen memorall daintie kiffes to it;
As he kiffed thee.
Dio. Nav, doe not snatch it from me.
Cref. He that takes that, takes my heart withall.

dio. I had your heart before, this follows it.
Troy. I did sweare patience.
Cref. You shall not haue it Diomed, faith youshall not:
I lea you something else.
Dio. I will have this: whose was it?
Cref. It is no matter.
Dio. Come tell me wheife it was?
Cref. 'Twas one that lou'd me better then you will.
But now you have it, take it.
Dio. Whole was it?
Cref. By all Dianas waiting women yond:
And by her selfe, I will not tell you wheife.
Dio. To morrow will I ware it on my Helme,
And griue his spirit that dares not challenge it.
Troy. Wett thou the diuell, and worth it on thy borne,
It should be challenge'd.
Cref. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past; and yet it is not:
I will not keep my word.
' Di in. Why then farewell,
Then neuer shalt mocke Diomed againe.
Cref. You shall not gooe: one cannot speake a word,
But it fruite flarts you.
Dio. I doe not like this fooling.
Tber. Nor I by Pluto: but that that likes not me, please me best.
Dio. What shall I come? the houre.
Cref. I, come: O Jove! doe, come: I shall be plag'd.
Dio. Farewell till then.
'Exit.
Cref. Good night: I prythee come:
Troylus farewell; one eye yet looke on thee;
But with my heart, the other eye, doth fee.
Ah poore our faxes: this fault in me finde:
The error of our eye,directs our minde.
What error leads, mutt erre: O then conclude,
Minde swall'd by eyes, are full of turpitude.
'Exit.
Tber. A proove of strength the could not publish more;
Vnlee the fee, my minde is now turn'd whore.
Virg. Al's done my Lord.
Troy. It is.
Vlif. Why stay we then?
Troy. To make a recordation to my foule
Of every syllable that here was spoke:
But if I tell how these two did coache;
Shall I not lye, in publisheing a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart:
An esperance so obstinately strong,
That doth inuerse that teif of eyes and eares;
As if those organs had decepitious functions,
Crested onely to calummate.
Was Cressid here?
Vlif. I cannot conuire Trojan.
Troy. She was not true.
Vlif. Most true she was.
Troy. Why my negation hath no tafe of madneffe?
Vlif. Nor mine my Lord: Cressid was here but now.
Troy. Let it not be beleu'd for womanhood:
Thinke we had mothers; doe not glue aduantage
Toriborne Criticks, apt without a theme
For depration, to quiere the generall sex
By Cressids rule. Rather think this not Cressid.
Vlif. What hath the done Prince, that can foyle our mothers?
Troy. Nothing at all, vnlee that this were the.
Tber. Will he swagger himselfe on oer's owne eyes?
Troy. This the? no, this is Diomed Cressida: If beaute have a foule, this is not she: If
If foules guide vowes; if vowes are fanctimonie; If fanctimonie be the gods delight: If there be rule in vallt et felce, This is not the: O madness of discourse! That cause fets vp, with, and against thy felce By foule authoritie: where reafon can revolt Without perdilion, and loffe affume all reafon, Without revolve. This is, and is not Creshid: Within my foule, there doth condue a fight Of this strange nature, that a thing inferre, Disdies more wider then the skie and earth: And yet thefpacious breath of this diuision, Admires no Orifex for a point as futile, As Arachnes broken woorfe to enter: Incifance, O incifance! strong as Plutus gates: Creshid is mine, tied with the bonds of heauen; Incifance, O incifance, strong as heauen it felce: The bonds of heauen are flipt, diffould, and loosed, And with another knot flew finger tied, The fractions of her faith, ows of her loue; The fragments, fcraps, the bits, and greazie reliques, Of her ore-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed. Vifus. May worthy Troylus be half attached With that which here his passion doth expire: Troy. I Grecian: and that shall be divulged well In Characters, as red as Mars his heart Inflam'd with Venus: newer did young man fancy With fo eternall, and fo fixt a foule. Harke Greek: as much I doe Creshid loue; So much by weight, hate I her Diomed, That Steene is mine, that heele bare in his Helme: Were it a Caste compos'd by Volcan's skill, My Sword should bite it: Not the dreadful full spout, Which Shipmen doe the Hurricano call, Confring'd in maffe by the almighty Fenne, Shall dizzie with more clamour Neptunes eare In his difcent; then shall my prompted sword, Falling on Diomed. Thers. Heele tickle it for his concupise. Troy. O Creshid! O false! Creshid! falle, false: Let all wanruths fland by thy flained name, And theye feme glorious. Vifus. O containce your felce: Your passion drawes eares hither.

Enter ερημος.

ερημος. I haue beene seeking you this houre my Lord: Heeter by this is arminge to Troy. Aux you Guard, flaes to conduct you home. Troy. Haue with you Prince: my curteous Lord adec: Farewel retouled faire: and Diomed, Stand falt, and weare a Caffe on thy head. Vifus. He bringe you to the Gates. Troy. Accept distracted thankes. Exeunt Troylus,ερημος, and ολίγος.

Thers. Would I could meece that roague Diomed, I would croke like a Rauen: I would boode, I would boode: Petracalus will gue me any thing for the intelligence of his whores; the Parrot will not doe more for an Almond, then he for a commodious drab: Lecchery, lechery, still warres and lechery, nothing else holds fasion. A burning duell take them. Enter Heeter and Andromache.

And. Why was my Lord so much vengently temper'd, To stop his eares against admonishment? Vnarne, vnarne, and doe not fight to day. Heeter. You traine me to offend you: get you gone.

By the everlasting gods, Ile goe. And. My dreams will sure prowe omenous to the day. Heeter. No more I lay. Enter Caffandra.

Caff. Where is my brother Heeter? And. Here fiter, arm'd, and bloody in intent: Confort with me in loud and deere petition: pursue we him on knees: for I have dreampt Of bloody turbulence; and this whole night Hath nothing, becne but heapes, and formes of slaughter. Caff. O, 'tis true. Heeter. Ho! bid my trumpet found. Caff. No notes of fallie, for the heuens, sweet brother. Heeter. Began I say: the gods have heard me sweare. Caff. The gods are deafe to hot and peninsil vowes; They are polluted offringes, more aboord Then fpoiled Luiers in the sacrific. And. O be perfuwaded, doe not count it holy, To hurt by being lufit: it is as lawfull: For we would count guie much to as violent thefles, And rob in the behalf of charite. Caff. It is the purpose that makes strong the vowe; But vowes to every purpose muft not hold: Vntame sweete Heeter. Heeter. Hold you still I say: Mine honour keepes the weather of my fate: Life every man holds deere, but the deere man Holds honor faire more precious, deere, then life. Enter Troylus. How now yong man? mean'th you to fight to day? And. Caffandra, call my father to perfuwade. Exit Caffandra. Heeter. No faith yong Troylus, doe thy harneffe youth: I am to day ith'vaine of Chiaralie: Let grow thy Sinews till their knots be strong; And tempt not yet the bruffles of the warre. Vnarne then, goe; and doubt thou not brave boy, Ile flant to day, for thee, and me, and Troy. Troy. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you; Which better fits a Lyon,then a man. Heeter. What vice is that? good Troylus childe me for it. Troy. When many times the captive Creckan falt, Euen in the fame and winde of your faire Sword: You bid them rife, and lie. Heeter. O 'tis faire play, Troy. Fools play, by heauen Heeter. Heeter. How now? how now? Troy. For the loue of all the gods Let's leau the Hermit Pity with our Mothers; And when we have our Armors buckled on, The venom'd vengeance ride vpon our swords, Sper them to ruthfull worke, reine them from ruth. Heeter. Tie fads, tie. Troy. Heeter, then 'tis warres. Heeter. Troylus, I would not haue you to fight to day. Troy. Who shold with-hold me? Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars, Beckning with ferie truncheon my reire; Not Priammys, and Herakles on knes; Their eyes ore-called with recourfe of teares; Nor you my brother, with your true sword drowne Oppof'd to hinder me,should stop my way: But by my rul. Enter Priam and Caffandra.

Caff. Lay hold vpon him Priam, hold him faft: He is thy crutch; now if thou looke thy faft, Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Troylus and Cressida.

Enter Thersites in excursion.

Thers. Now they are clapper-clawing one another, Ile goe looke on: that dissembling abominable variet Dismal, has got that fame tourne, doting, foolifh yong knaves of Troy, there, in his Helme: I would faie see them meeteth, that fame yong Trojan safe, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whore-maiterly villaine, with the Sleeue, backe to the dissembling luxurious drabbe, of a sleezelett errant:O th'toother side, the pollicie of those craffe swearing rascals: that fole old Monfe- eaten drye cheefe, Nefer't and that fame dogge- Vlifs' is not prou'd worth a Black-berry. They set me vp in policy, that munggrill cure Axus, against that dogge of as bad a kind, Achilles. And now is the cure Axus prouder then true deadly hurtes, and will not arme to day. Whereupon, the Greclans began to proue barbarifme; and pollice growes into an ill opinion.

Enter Diomed and Troylus.

Soft, here comes Sleeue, and th'Other.

Troy. Flye not: for should'nt thou take the River Stix, I would swim after.

Diom. Thou dost miscall retire: I doe not flye, but aduantagious care Withdraw me from the odds of multitude: Haue at thee?

Helfor. What art thou Greek? art thou for Helfor's match? Art thou of blood, and honour?

Troy. No, no: I am a rafacle: a fcuruie railing knaue: a very filthy rogue.

Helfor. I doe beleue thee, blue.

Troy. God a mercy, that thou wilt beleue me: but a plague brake thy nekke—for frightening me: what's become of the wrenching rougues? I think they have swallowed one another. I would laugh at that miracle:—yet in a fort, lecherie eates it felse: Ile sseeke them. Exit.

Enter Diomed and Seruants.

Dis. Coo, coo, my seruant, take thou Troylus Horfe; Pretend the faire Steede to my Lady Cressids: Fellow, commend my feruice to her beauty; Tell her, I haue chaftif'd the amorous Troyan: And am her Knight by proffes.

And stands Callophus-wife waung his beme, Upon the pashed courtes of the Kings: Epipolus and Celas, Polixen is faine; Amphimaus, and Troyes deadly hurt; Patroclus pane or faine, and Palacontes Sore hurt and bruifed: the dreadfull Sagittary Appuus our numbers, haue we Diomed To re-enforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nefer.

Nefer. Coo heare Patroclus body to Achille, And bid the snale-pac'd Axus arme for flame; There is a thousand Helfers in the field: Now here he fights on Galatebe his Horfe, And there lacks work: anon he's there a footes, And there they fly or dye, like fcelled fucis,

Before
Troylus and Cressida.

Before the belching Whale; then is he yonder,
And there the straying Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fell downe before him, like the mowers swath;
Here, there, and every where, he leaves and takes;
Dexteriti fo obeying appetite,
That what he will, he does, and does so much,
That prove is call'd impossibility.

Enter Vizfigus.

Vizf. Oh, courage, courage Princes! great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance;
Patroclus wounds haue rouz'd his drowsie bloud,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noethe, handleth, hacks and chipte, come to him;
Crying on Hector. Aias hath lost a friend,
And foames at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it:
Roaring for Troylus; who hath done to day,
Mad and fantafickke execution;
Engaging and redeeming himselfe,
With such a carefull force, and forceable care,
As if that luck in very sight of cunning, had him win all.

Enter Aias.

Aia. Troylus, thou coward Troylus,
Exit.

Diom. I, there, there,
Exit.

Neft. So, so, we drawe together.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector?

Come, come, thou boy-queller, shew thy face:
Know what it is to meete Achilles angry.

Hector, where's Hector? I will none but Hector.

Exit.

Aia. Troylus, thou coward Troylus, shew thy head.

Enter Diomed.

Diom. Troylus, I say, who's Troylus?

Aia. What would'thou say?

Diom. I would correct him.

Aia. Were I the Generall,

Thou shoul'dst haue my office,

Ere that correction: Troylus I say, what Troylus?

Enter Troylus.

Troy. Oh traitour Diomed!

Turne thy falfe face thou traytor.

And pay thy life thou owst me for my horse.

Dis. Ha, art thou there?

Aia. Ile fight with him alone, stand Diomed.

Dis. He is my prize, I will not looke upon.

Troy. Come both you caging Greeks, haue at you both.

Exit Troylus.

Enter Hector.

Hec. Yea Troylus? O well fought my yeonge Brother.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Now doe I fee thee; haue at thee Hector.

Achil. I doe disdaine thy currette, proud Trojan:

Be happy that my armes are out of vie:

My reft and negligence befriends thee now,

But thou anon shalt hear me of againe:

Till when ye goe faire thy fortune.

Exit.

Hect. Fare thee well;

I would have beene more more a frether man,

Had I expected thee: how now my Brother?

Enter Troylus.

Troy. After hath tame Nilus; shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorius heauen,

He shall not carry him: He be tane too,

Or bring him off: Fate haue me what I say;

I wreske not, though thou end my life to day.

Exit.

Enter one in Armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greke,

Thou art a goodly marke:

Not wilt thou not? I like thy armour well,

Ile fruith it, and vnlooke the riusts all,

But Ile be maiftre of it: wilt thou not baft abide?

Why then flye on, Ile hunt thee for thy hide.

Exit.

Enter Achilles with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me you my Myrmidons:

Marke what I say; attend me where I wheel:

Strike not a stroke, but keepe your felues in breath;

And when I haue the bloody Hector found,

Empale him with your weapons round about:

In hellett manner execute your armes.

Follow me first, and my proceedings eye;

It is decreed, Hector the great must dye.

Exit.

Enter Tenetes, Menelau, and Pari.

Ther. The Cockold and the Cockold maker are at it:

now bull, now dogge, lowe; Pari lowe; now my double hen's spearow; lowe Pari, lowe; the bull has the game: were horses ho?

Exit Taris and Menelau.

Enter Balfard.

Balf. Turne flame and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Balf. A Balfard Sonne of Priaem.

Ther. I am a Balfard too, I loue Balfards, I am a Balfard begot, Balfard infructed; Balfard in minde, Balfard in vaulour, in euery thingliegiment: one Beare will not bite another, and wherefore should one Balfard? take heed, the quarel's most ominous to vs: if the Sonne of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgement: farewell Balfard.

Balf. The dullwells take thee coward.

Exeunt.

Hec. Most purified core to faire without;

Thy goodly armour thus hath copt thy life.

Now is my daies worke done; Ile take good breath:

Reft Sword, thou haft thy fill of blood and death.

Enter Achilles and his Myrmidons.

Achil. Look where Hector how the Sunne begins to set;

How vygly night comes breathing at his heles,

Euen with the vale and darkling of the Sunne.

To clofe the day vp, Hector life is done.

Hec. I am vnarm'd, forgoe this vantage Cresske.

Achil. Strike fellowes, strike, this is the man I seekes.

So Illion fall thou; now Troy shooke downe;

Here lyes thy heart, thy finenes, and thy bone.

On Myrmidons, cry you all a maiene, Achilles hath the mighty Hector slaine.

Retreat.

Harke, a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Greet. The Trojan Trumpets sounds the like my Lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night ore-fpreds the earth

And flicker-like the Armies seperates

My halfe fupt Sword, that frankly would have fed,

Plea'd with this dainty bed; thus goes to bed.

Come, yе his body to my horses tayle;

Along the field, I wil the Trojan trailer.

Exeunt.

Sound Retreat. Shout.

Enter Agamemnon, Aias, Menelau, Neftor, Diomed, and the rieft marching.

Agia. Harke, harke, what shoute is that?

Great Troy is ours, and our sharpe wars are ended.

Exeunt.

Enter gentlemen, Paris, Antenor and Deiphobus.
My Lord, you doe discomfort all the Hoste.
Troy. You understand me not, that tell me so:
I doe not speake of flight, of feare, of death,
But dare all imminence that gods and men,
Adreffe their dangers in. Heleor is gone:
Who shall tell Priam fo? or Hecuba?
Let him that will a freecouche eye be call'd,
Goe in to Troy, and say there, Heleor's dead:
There is a word will Priam turne to stone;
Make we, and bide of the maides and wives;
Coole chacnes of the youth; and in a word,
Scare Troy out of it selfe. But march away,
Heleor is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet: you vie abominable Tents,
Thus proudly pight vpun our Phrygian plaines:

The Tragedy of Coriolanus:

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Company of Mutinous Citizens, with Staves, Clubs, and other weapons.

1. Citizen. Efore we proceed any further, hear me speake.
   All. Speake, speake.
   1. Cit. You are all resolute rather to do then to famish?
   All. Resolu'd, resolu'd.
   1. Cit. First you know, Caius Marius is chief enemy to the people.
   All. We know't, we know't.
   1. Cit. Let vs kill him, and we'll have Corne at our own price. It's a Verdict?
   All. No more talking on't; Let it be done, away, away.
   2. Cit. One word, good Citizens.
   1. Cit. We are accounted poor Citizens, the Patri- cians good: what Authority fortes one, would release vs. If they would yeele vs but the superfluitie while it were wholsome, wee might gueffe they releued vs humanely: But they thinke we are too deere, the leannes that affiitds wee, the object of our misery, is as an inuentory to particularize their abundance, our suffrance is a gaine to them. Let vs revenge this with our Pikes, ere we become Rakes. For the Gods know, I speake this in hangre for Bread, not in thirst for Reuenge.
   2. Cit. Would you proceede especialy against Caius Marius.
   All. Against him first: He's a very dog to the Commonalty.
   2. Cit. Consider you what Services he ha's done for his Country?
   1. Cit. Very well, and could bee content to give him good report for't, but that hee payes himselfe with brea- king pride.
   All. Nay, but speake not maliciously.
   1. Cit. I say vnto you, what he hath done Famoulie, he did it to that end: though soft conience'd men can be content to say it was for his Countrye, he did it to pleafe his Mother, and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his vertue.
   2. Cit. What hee cannot helpe in his Nature, you account a Vice in him: You muft in no way fay he is co- uteous.
   1. Cit. If I muft not, I neede not be barren of Accu- tions he hath faults (with surplus) to trye in repetition.

What flows there? The other side a'th City is rife: why fay we prating here? To th'Capitoll.
   All. Come, come.

1. Cit. Soft, who comes here?
   Enter Menenius Agrippa.
   2. Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa, one that hath al- ways lou'd the people.
   1. Cit. He's one honest enough, wold al the rest wer fo.
   2. Cit. Our busines is not vnknowne to th'Senat, they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, w now wee'll shew em in deeds: they say poore Suters have strong breaths, they shal know we have strong arms too.
   Menen. Why Maffers, my good Friends, mine honest Neighbours, will you vndo your selues?
   2. Cit. We cannot Sir, we are vndone already.
   Men. I tell you Friends, most charitable care Haue the Patricians of you for your wants.
   Your sufferings in this death, you may as well
   Strike at the Heauen with your staves, as lift them
   Against the Roman State, whose course will on
   The way it takes: cracking ten thousand Curbes
   Of more strong linke affulf, then can euer
   Appear in your impediment. For the Dearth,
   The Gods, not the Patri- cians make it, and
   Your knees to them (not armes) must helpe. Alacke,
   You are transported by Calamity
   Thether, where more attends you, and you flander
   The Helmes o'th State; who care for you like Fathers,
   When you CURFE, them, as Enemies.
   2. Cit. Care for vs? True indeed, they were cur'd for vs
   yet. Suffer vs to famish, and their Store-houses cram'd with Graine: Make Edicts for Vfurie, to support Vfur- ers; repeale daily all who Idome Act establighed against the rich, and proude more piercing Statutes daily, to chaine vp and restraine the poore. If the Warrs eate vs not vppes, they will, and there's all the loue they beare vs.
   Menen. Either you must
   Confeffe your selues wondrous Malicous,
   Or be accus'd of Folly. I shall tell you
   A pretty Tale, it may be you have heard it,
   But since it servis my purpoe, I will venture
   To scale a litle more.
   2 Cit. Well,
   Ile heare it Sir: yet you muft not thinke
   To fobbe off our diffraige with a tale:
   But and pleafe you deliuer.
   Men. There was a time, when all the bodies members
   Rebell'd against the Belly; thus accus'd it:
   That onely like a Gulfe it did reme

1st m'd it a th'body, idle and vnaëthue,
Still cubbording the Vland, neuer bearing
Like labour with the relf, where th'other Instruments
Did fee, and heare, draughts, influff, walkes, feele,
And mutually participate, did minifter
Wnto the appetite; and affection common
Of the whole body, the Belly answ'r'd.

2d Gr. Well sir, what answ'red the Belly.
Sir, I shall tell you with a kinde of Smile,
Which we're came from the Lungs, but euen thus:
For looke you I may make the belly Smiles,
As well as speakes, it taintingly replied
To'th'difcontented Members, the mutinous parts
That emu'd his receive: euen so matter finly,
As you maligne our Senators, for that
They are not fuch as you.

2d Gr. Your Bellies answ're: What
The Kingly crown'd head, the vigilant eye,
The Counsellor Heart, the Arme our Souldier,
Our rul're, the Legge, the Tongue our Trumpeter,
With other Muniments and payn helps
In this our Fabricke, if that they?

Men. What then? Foreme, this Fellow speakes.
What then? What then?

2d Gr. Should by the Cormorant belly be restrain'd,
Who is the finke a th'body.

Men. Well, what then?

2d Gr. The former Agents, if they did complain,
What could the Belly answ're?

Men. I will tell you,
If you'll bellow a small (of what you have little)
Patience awhile; you'll hear the Bellies answ're.

2d Gr. Y'are long about it.

Men. Note me this good Friend;
Your moft graue Belly was deliberate,
Not rauh like his Accusers, and thus answ'red.
True is it my Incorporate Friends (quoth he)
That I receive the generall Food at first
Which you do live upon: and fit it is,
Because I am the Store-house, and the Shop
Of the whole Body. But, if you do remember,
I fend it through the Rivers of your blood
Eaugh to the Court, the Heart, to th'eye, th'Braine,
And through the Crankes and Offices of man,
The strongest Nerues, and fmall influent Veines
From me receive that natural competence
Whereby they live. And though that all at once
(You my fat friends, this fakes the Belly) marke me.

2d Gr. I fir, we'll well.

Men. Though all at once, cannot
See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my Awdit vp, that all
From me do backe receive the Flower of all,
Andlease me but the Bran. What fay you too't?

2d Gr. It was an answ're, how apply you this?

Men. The Senators of Rome, are this good Belly,
And you the mutinous Members: For examine
Their Counsalls, and their Caresdifficlt things rightly,
Touching the Weale a'th'Scommon, you shall finde
No publique benefit which you receive
But it proceeds, or comes from them to you,
And no way from your fulves. What do you thinke?
You, the great Too of this Assembly?

2d Gr. I the great Too? Why the great Too?
Doe not the Graces and Goddes send, best, pooreft
Of this moft wise Rebellion, thou goest formost:

Thou Rafcall, that art workt in blood to run,
Lead it firft to win some vantage.
But make you ready your filete bats and clubs,
Rome, and her Rains are at the point of battell,
The one fide must haue baile.

Enter Caius Martius.

Hayle, Noble Martius.

Mar. Thanks. What's the matter you differentious rogues
That rubbing the poore itch of your Opinion,
Make your felues Scabs.

2d Gr. We have euer your good word.

Mar. He that will glue good words to thees, will flatter
Beneath absoring. What would you have, you Carres,
That like nor Peace, nor Warre? The one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. He that trufts to you,
Where he should finde you Lyons, finde you Hares:
Where Foxes, Geefe you are: No furer, no,
Then is the coale of fire upon the Ice,
Or Halibone in the Sun. Your vertue is,
To make him worthy, whollyeoffence fubdues him,
And curfe that Iuflice did it. Who defueres Greatnes, Defures your Hat: and your Affections are
A reckmans Appetite; who defires moft that
Which would encrease his euill. He that depends Upon your favours, swimmes with finnes of Leads,
And lewes downe Oakes, with rufhes. Hang yestruft ye?
With euerie Minute you do change a Minde,
And call him Noble, that was now your Hat:
Him vildes, that was your Garland. What's the matter,
That in thefe fouerall places of the Citie,
You cry against the Noble Senate, who (Vnder the Gods) keepe you in aue, which elfe
Would feede on one another? What's their seeking?

Men. For Corne at their owne rates, whereof they say
The Citie is well for'd.

Mar. Hang 'em: They fay?

They'll fit by th'fire, and preumne to know
What's done 'tis Capitoll: Who's like to rife,
Who thriues, & who declines: Side fa£ions, & glue out
ConieCurial Marriages, making parties strong,
And feebling such as fand not in their liking,
Below the coled Shoone. They fay they're grain enough?
Would the Nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me vfe my Sword, I'de make a Quartie
With thoundeds of thefe quarter'd flaves, as high
As I could picke my Lance.

Men. They fay thefe are almoft thoroughly perfwaded:
For though abundantly they lacke difcretion
Yet are they passing Cordually. But I befeech you,
What fayes the other Troope?

Mar. They are diffolu'd: Hang em;

They fay they were an hunger, figh'd forth Proverbes
That Hunger-broke flone wals: that doggles must eate
That meate was made for mouths. That the gods fent not Corne for the Richmen onely: With these fires
They vended their Complainings, which being answ'red
And a petition granted them, a strange one,
To breake the heart of generality,
And make bold power looke pale, they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the horns a'th'Moone,
Shooting their Emulation.

Men. What is graunted them?

Mar. Five Tribunes to defend their vulgar widows
Of their owne choice. One's Lucius Bratus,
Sicinius Vellutus, and I know not. Steathe,

The
The Tragedy of Coriolanus.

The rabble should have first vnoo'ft the City
Ere fo preuayl'd with me; it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater Theames
For Infruactions arguing.

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go get you home you Fragments. Enter a Muffinger baftily.

Meff. Where's Caius Martius?

Mar. Heere: what's the matter?

Meff. The newer is br, the Volcens are in Armes.

Mar. I am glad on't, then we shall ha means to vent
Our musle supefruity. See our beft Elders.

Enter Sicinius Velatus, Annius Brutus Cominius, Titus Larinius, with other Senators.

1. Sen. *Martius 'tis true, that you have lately told vs,
The Volcens are in Armes.

Mar. They have a Leader,

Tullus Aufidius that will put you too't
I finne in enuoying his Nobilitie:
And were I any thing but what I am,
I would with me only he.

Com. You have fought together?

Mar. Were halfe to halfe the world by th'eare, & he Upon my partie, I'd resolt to make Onely my warres with him. He is a Lion
That I am proud to hunt.

1. Sen. Then worthy Martius,
Attend vpon Cominius to theke Warres.

Com. It is your former promise,

Mar. Sir it is,
And I am confant; Titus Lucius, thou
Shalt fee me once more strike at Tullus face.

What art thou fliue? Stand it out?

Tit. No Caius Martius,
He leane vpon one Crutch, and fight with tother,
Ere they behinde this Bucaneffe,

Men. Oh true-bred.

Sen. Your Company to'th'Capitoll, where I know
Our greatest Friends attend vs.

Tit. Lead you on: Follow Cominius, we must follow you, your right worthy you Priority.

Com. Noble Martius.

Sen. Hence to your homes, be gone.

Mar. Nay let them follow,
The Volcens haue much Corne: take these Rats thither,
To grau their Garmen, Worthyfill Mutiners.

Your value purses well forth: Pray follow.

Sen. Was euer man so proud as is this Martius?

Bru. He has no equal.

Sicin. When we were choosen Tribunes for thepeople.

Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eye.

Sicin. Nay, but his taunts.

Bru. Being mock'd, he will not spare to gird the Gods.

Sicin. Bemoke the modest Moore.

Bru. The prefent Warres deuoure him, he is Growne
Too proud to be fo valiant.

Sicin. Such a Nature, tickled with good successe, difdaines the shadow which he treads on at moone, but I do wonder, his inholence can brooke to be commanded under Cominius?

Bru. Fame, at the which he aymes,
In whom already he's well gra'd, cannot Better be held, nor more attaun'd then by

A place below the firft: for what miscarries
Shall be the Generals faults, though he perfoine
To th'vntoml'd of a man, and giddy cenfure
Will then cry out of Martius: Oh, if he Had borne the buonelle.

Sen. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion that fo fliuces on Martius, shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Come: halfe all Cominius Honors are to Martius
Though Martius earn'd them not: and all his faults
To Martius shall be Honors, though indeed
In ought he merit not.

Sen. Let's hence, and heare
How the dispatch is made, and in what fashion
More then his singularity, he goes
Vpon this prefent Affion.

Bru. Let's along.

Enter Tullus Aufidius with Senators of Coriolius.

1. Sen. So, your opinion is Aufidius,
That they of Rome are entred in our Counsaiers,
And know how we procee.

Auf. Is it not yours?

What euer you bin thought one in this State
That could be brought to bodily act, ere Rome
Had circumanction: 'tis not foure dayes gone
Since I heard thence, these are the words, I thinke
I have the Letter here: yes, here it is;
They haue pref a Power, but it is not knowne
Whether for East or West: the Dearth is great,
The people Mutinous: And it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Martius your old Enemy
(Who is of Rome worfe hated then of you)
And Titus Larinius, a moft valiant Roman,
These three lesde on this Preparation
Whether 'tis bent: most likely, 'tis for you:
Consider of it.

1. Sen. Our Armie's in the Field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To anwer vs.

Auf. Nor did you thinke it folly,
To keere your great pretences vay'd till when
They needes must char themselues, which in the hatching
It seem'd appear'd to Rome. By the difcouery,
We shalbe shortned in our ayme, which was
To take in many Townes, ere (almost) Rome
Should know we were about.

2. Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your Commission, hye to you to our Bands,
Let vs alone to guard Coriolius
If they let downe before's: for the remoue
Bring vp your Army: but (I thinke) you'll finde
These men not prepar'd for vs.

Auf. O doubt not that,
I speake from Certainties. Nay more,
Some parches of their Power are forth already,
And onely hitherward. I leave your Honors.
If we, and Caius Martius chance to meete,
'Tis lawome betweene vs, we shall euer strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The Gods asift you.

Auf. And keep your Honors safe.

All. Farewell.

*Exeunt omnes.

Enter.
Enter Volumnia and Virgilia, mother and wife to Marcius.

Volum. I pray you daughter sing, or express your selfe in a more comfortable fort: If my Sonne were my Husband, I should freeler rejoice in that absence wherein he wonne Honor, then in the embracements of his Bed, where he would shew most love. When yet hee was but tender-bodied, and the onely Sonne of my womb, when youth with comeliness pluck'd all gaze his way: when for a day of Kings continence, a Mother should not fel him an houre from her beholding; I considering how Honour would become such a person, that it was no better then Picture-like to hang by th'wall, if renowne made it not firre, was pleas'd to let him fecke danger, where he was like to finde fame: To a cruel Warre I lent him, from whence he return'd, his brows bound with Oake. I tell thee Daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a Man-child, then now in first seeing he had prou'd himselfe a man.

Virg. But had he died in the Buinate Madame, how then?

Volum. Then his good report should have beene my Sonne. I therein would have found issue. Heare me profess sincerely, had I a dozen fons each in my love alike, and none leftie deere then thine, and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven dye Nobly for their Country, then one voluptuously furret out of Aethon.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you. Virg. Befeech you grant me leave to retire my selfe.

Volum. Indeed you shall not:

Me thinkes, I here bethir your Husband Drummme: See him plucke Auffidius downe by th'haire: (As children from a heare) the Voles shanning him: Me thinkes I see him flampe thus, and call thus, Come on you Cowards, you were got in fear Though you were borne in Rome; his bloody brow With his mail'd hand, then whipping forth he goes Like to a Harned man, that talk'd to move Or all, or loole his hyre.

Volum. Away you Poole; it more becomes a man Then gitt his Trophe. The broths of Hecha When the old suckle Hector, look'd not loueller Then Hector forbode, when it fit forth blood At Grecian sword. Contemning, tell Valeria We are fit to bid her welcome.

Exit Gent. Urr. Heauen bleffe my Lord from fell Auffidius. Val. He'll beat Auffidius head below his knee, And trend upon his neck.

Enter Valeria with an Wiper, and a Gentlwoman.

Val. My Ladies both good day to you.

Volum. Sweet Madam.

Urr. I am glad to see your Ladyship.

Val. How do you both? You are manifest house-keepers. What are you fowling here? A fine spotte in good faith. How does your little Sonne?

Vir. I thank ye your Lady-ship: Well good Madam.

Val. He had rather fee the swordes, and hearre a Drum, than looke vpon his Schoolmutter.

Val. A my word the Fathers Sonne: Ike sware 'tis a very pretty boy. A my troth, I look'd vpon him a Wensday halfe an houre together: he's such a confirm'd countenance. I saw him run after a gilded Butterfly, & when he caught it, he let it go againe, and after it go againe, and other and other he comes, and vp againe: catch it again: or whether his foot erag'd him, or how 'twas, hee did fo set his teeth, and teare it. Oh, I warrant how he mamockt it.

Val. One on's Father's moods.

Val. Indeed la, its a Noble childe.

Vir. A Cracke Madam.

Val. Come, lay affe your fitcherry, I must haue you play the idle Hufwife with me this afternoone.

Virg. No (good Madam) I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors?

Volum. She shall, she shall.

Virg. Indeed no, by your patience; Ile not ouer the threshold, till my Lord returne from the Warres.

Val. Fye, you confine your selfe most unreasonably: Come, you must go visit the good Lady that lies in.

Virg. I will with her speedy strength, and visite her with my prayers: but I cannot go thither.

Volum. Why I pray you.

Virg. 'Ts not to faue labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope; yet they say, all the yearne the saxon in Piffes absence, did but fill Athene full of Mothes. Come, I would you Cambriick were fensible as your finger, that you might ease pricking it for pitie. Come you shall go with vs.

Virg. No good Madam, pardon me, indeed I will not forth.

Val. In truth it is go with me, and Ile tell you excellent news of your Husband.

Virg. Oh good Madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not leaue you: there came newes from him last night.

Urr. Indeed Madam,

Val. In earnest it's true; I heard a Serenour speake it. Thus it is: the Volces have an Army forth, against who Cominius the Generall is gone, with one part of our Roman power. Your Lord, and Titus Lartius, are fell down before their City Cartilas, they nothing doubt prueling, and to make it breefc Warres. This is true on mine Honor, and fo I pray go with vs.

Virg. Glue me excufe good Madam, I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Val. Let her alone Ladie, as she is now: She will but diflate our better mirth.

Valeria. In troth I thinks she would: Fare you well then. Come good sweet Ladie. Prythee Virgilia turne thy solemnesse out a doore, And go along with vs.

Virg. No.

At a word Madam; Indeed I muet not, I with you much mirth.

Val. Well, then firewel.

Execute Ladies.

Enter Martius, Titus Lartius, with Drumme and Colours, with Captaines and Soldiers, as before the City Cartilas: to them a Messenger.

Martius. Yonder comes Newes: A Wager they have met.

Lar. My horce to yours, no.

Mar. Tit's done.

Lart. Agreed.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Mar. Say, ha’s our Generall met the Enemy?

M. Eff. They lye in view, but have not spoke as yet.

Lart. So, the good Horfe is mine.

Mar. Ile buy him of you.

Lart No, Ile nor fel, nor give himt Lend you him I will For halle a hundred yeares, I Summon the Towne.

Mar. How farre off ile these Armies?

M. Eff. Within this mile and halfe.

Mar. Then shall we hear their Lurum, & they Ours.

Now Mars, I prythee make vs quicke in worke, That we with smaiking swords may march from hence To help our helde Friends. Come, blow thy blast.

They Sound a Parley: Enter two Senators with others on the Walls of Coriolanus.

Tellius Auffidius, Is he within your Walles?

1. Seraf. No, no a man that fears you lefte then he, That’s leffer then a little: Drum a parley off.

Heare, our Drummes Are bringing forth our youth: Wee’l breake our Walles Rather then they shall pound vs vp our Gates.

Which yet feeme flat, we hawe but pit with Rudes, They’re open of themselves. Harke you, farre off

I Alarum farre off.

There is Auffidius. Lift what worke lie makes Amongst your choosen Army.

Mar. Oh they are at it.

Lart. Their noiz be our incription. Ladders hoa.

Enter the Army of the Uiles.

Mar. They fear vs not, but ifisse forth their Cittie.

Now put your Shilds before your hearts, and fight With hearts more proofs then Shilds.

Advance brave Titus, They do dilaine vs much beyond our Thoughts, which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on my fellows He that retires, Ile take him for a Vole, And he shall feele mine edge.

Alarum, the Romans are beat back to their Trenches Enter Martius Corfiny.

Mar. All the contagion of the South, light on you, You Shame of Rome: you heard of Byles and Plagues Plaister you o’re, that you may be aborth’s Farther then feene, and one infect another Against the Winde a mile: you foules of Ceece, That heare the shapes of men, how hawe you run From Siauces, that Apes would beate; Flote and Hell, All hurt belinde, backes red, and faces pale With flight and agued faire, mendi and charge home, Or by the fires of heauen, Ile lease the Foe, And make my Warres on you: Looke too’t: Come on, If you fhall faie, we’ll beate them to their Wives, As they vs to our Trenches followes.

Another Alarum, and Martius followes them to garth, and is shut in.

So, now the gates are ope: now prove good Seconds, Tis for the followers Fortune, widens them, Not for the flyers: Marke me, and doe the like. Enter the Guit.

1. Syl. Foole-hardiness, not I.

2. Syl. Nor I.

1. Syl. See they have shut him in. Alarum continues All. To the’pot I warrant him. Enter Titus Lartius Tit. What is become of MArtius?

All. Staine (Sir) doublet.

1. Syl. Following the Flyern at the very heels, With them he enters: who ypon the sodaine Clapt to their Gates, he is himselfe alone, To answer all the City.

Lar. Oh Noble Fellow!

Who fealdy out-dares his fenceleffe Sword, And when it bowes, fland’t vp: Thou art left Martius, A Carbuncle intire: as big as thou art Were not fo rich a Jewell. Thou wa’t a Soul’d Euen to Calues with, not fierce and terrible Oneely in strokes, but with thy grim looks, and The Thunder-like perculion of thy founds Thou mad’t thine enemies thake, as if the World Were Faeorous, and did tremble.

Enter Martius bleeding assaulted by the Enemy.

1. Syl. Lookie Sir.

Lar. O tis Martius.

Let’s fetch him off, or make remaine alike.

They fight, and all enter the City.

Enter certaine Romanes with shotles.

1. Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

2. Rom. And I this.

Alarum continues still a parley off.

Enter Martius, and Titus with a Trumpet.

Mar. See here these moners, that do prize their hours At a crack’d Drachme: Cuhions, Leaden Spoones, Irons of a Doit, Dublets that Hangmen would Bury with thate wore them. These bafe flakes, Ere yet the fight be done, packe vp, downe with them. And harke, what noyfe the General makes: To him There is the man of my foules hate, Auffidius, Piercing our Romanes: Then Valiant Titus take Convenient Numbers to make good the City, Whill’t I with those that have the spirit, wil haie To helpe Comines.

Lar. Worthy Sir, thou bleed’t, Thy exercice hath bin too violent, For a second course of Fight.

Mar. Sir, praffe me not:

My worke hath yet not warm’d me. Fare you well:

The blood I drop, is rather Physycall Than dangerous to me: To Auffidius thus, I will appear

Lar. Now the faire Goddesse Fortune, (and fight. Fall deep in loue with thec, and her great charmes Milguide thy Oppofer swords, Bold Gentleman: Prosperity be thy Page.

Mar. Thy Friend no leffe, Then thofe the placeth highest: So farewell.

Lar. Thou woorlief Martius,

Go found thy Trumpet in the Market place, Call eithther all the Officers at Th Towne, Where they shall know our mindes. Away.

Enter Comines as it were in retire, with soldiers.

Com. Breath you my friends, weel fought, we are come Like Romans, neither foolish in our handes, (off Nor Cowardly in retire: Beleue me Sirs, We shall be charg’d againe. Whiles we hawe strooke By Interims and concoueyng guths, we have heard The Charges of our Friends. The Roman Gods, Leade their succeses, as we with our owne, That both our powers, with smiling Fronts encountering, May give you thankfull Sacrifice. Thy News?

Enter a Maffager.

Meff. The Citizens of Corioli have yflied, And gueen to Lartius and to Martius Battale:

aa 3
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

I saw our party to their Trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speakest truth,
Me thinkes thou speakest not well. How long is't since?
Mef. Above an hour, my Lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile,briefly we heard their drummes.
How could't thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy Newes fo late?

Mef. Spies of the Volites
Held me in chase, that I was force'd to wheel
Three or foure miles about, elsc had I fte
Halfe an hour since brought my report.

Enter Martius.

Com. Whofe yonder,
That don't appeare as he were Plead'D O Gods,
He has the laft of Martius, and I have
Before time fene him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. The Shepherd knowes not Thunder fr0 a Taber,
More then he knowes the foun of Martins Tongue
From every meaner man.

Martius. Come I too late?

Com. If, you come not in the blood of others,
But manified in your owne,

Mar. Oh! let me clip ye
In Armes as foun'd, as when I wo'd in heart,
As merry, as when our Nuptiall day was done,
And Tapers burnt to Bedward.

Com. Flower of Warriours, how la't with Titus Martius?
Mar. As with a man bafeled about Decrees:
Condemning fome to deatth, and fome to exile,
Ransoming him, or pittyng, threatening th'other;
Holding Coriles in the name of Rome,
Euen like a fawning Grey-hound in the Leaf,
To let him fly at will.

Com. Where is that Slace
Which told me they had beate you to your Trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither,

Mar. Let him alone,
He did informe the truth: but for our Gentlemen,
The common file,(a plaque-Tribunes for them)
The Mowes I'm thun'd the Cat,as they did budge
From Raflcs worfe then they.

Com. But how preuall'd you?

Mar. Will the time ferue to tell, I do not think:
Where is the enemy? Are you Lords th' Field?
If not, why cafe you till you are fo?

Com. Martius, we hafe at difadvantage fought,
And did retyr to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their Battell? Know you on w fide
They have plac'd their men of troufe?

Com. As I guiffe Martius,
Their Bands i' th Vaward are the Antients
Of their beft troufe: O're them Affidius,
Their very heart of Hope.

Mar. I do befech you,
By all the Battles wherein we hafe fought,
By th'Blood we have shed togethers,
By th'Vowes we have made
To endure Friends, that you directly fet me
Against Affidius, and his Antients,
And that you not delay the prefent (but Filling the sire with Swords advanc'd) and Darts,
We can waste this very hour.

Com. Though I could with,

You were conducted to a gentle Bath,
And Balmes applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking, take your choice of thofe
That beft cane aye your affion.

Mar. Thofe are they
That moft are willing; if any fuch be here,
(As it were finne to doubt) that lose this painting
Wherein you fee me fhew'd, if any feare
Leifem his perfon, then an ill report:
If any thinkes, brave death out-weighes bad life,
And that his Countries deere him felfe,
Let him alone: Or fo many fo minded,
Wafe thus to exprefs his difpofition,
And follow Martius.

They all fhou'd arm, waue their fwordps, take him up in their
Armes, and caft up their Cafps.

Oh me alone, make you a fword of me:
If thefe fluemes be not outward, which of you
But is foure Voyle? None of you, but is Able to beare againft the great Affidius
A Shield, as hard as his.

A certaine number
(Though thanks to all) mutt I felfe from all:
The reft shall beare the businesse in fome other figh
(As caufe will be obied:) pleafe you to March,
And foure fhall quickly draw out my Command,
Which men are bett inclin'd.

Com. March on my Fellowe:
Make good this olenation, and you fhall
Dvide in all, with vs.

Excult

Titus Martius, having get a guard upon Coriles, going with Drunke and Trumpet toward Comment, and CAim Martius,
Enters with a Lieutenant, other Soulions, and a Scout.

Lar. So, let the Ports be guarded; keepe your Duties
As I haue let them downe. If I do fend, dispatch
Thofe Centuries to your ayd, the reft will ferue
For a fhort holding, if we loofe the Field,
We cannot keep the Towne.

Lieu. Fear not our care Sir.

Lar. Hence, and shut your gates vp one's:
Our Guider come, to th'Roman Campa conduced
Exit Alarums, as in Batallte.

Enter Martius and Affidius at furuer doores.

Mar. Ile fight with none but thee,for I do hate thee
Worfe then a Promife-breaker.

Affid. We hate alike:
Not Affridus owns a Serpent I abhorre
More then thy Fame and Envy: Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the firft Budge dye the others Slace,
And the Gods doome him after.

Aff. If I dye Martius, hollow me like a Hare.

Mar. Within thefe three hours Tailus
Alone I fought in your Coriles wallis,
And made what worke I plea'd: Tis not my blood,
Wherein thou fleft me maske, for thy Renaunce
Wrench vp thy power to th'higheft.

Aff. Wou'd thou the Hiceter,
That was the whip of thy brag'd Progeny,
Thou fhould't not fcape me here.

Here they fight, and certaine Voices come in the ayde
of Affid. Martius fights till they be driven in breathes.

Officious, not wants, you have shou'd me
In your condemned Seconds.

Flourish.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Flouris. Alterum. A Retreat is founded. Enter at one Dorc Cominius, with the Romanes: At another Dorc Martius, with bis Armes to a Scarf.

Com. If I should tell thee o're this thy sayes Worke, Thou't not beleue thy deeds: but I'll report it, Where Senators shall mingle tears with smiles, Where great Patriarchs shall attend, and shew, I'th'end admire: where Ladies shall be frighted, And gladly quak'd, heare more: where the dull Tribune, That with theuffle Plebeans, hate thine Honors, Shall say against their hearts, We thank the Gods Our Rome hath such a Sounder. Yet can't thou to a Morfell of this Feaß, Hauling fully din'd before.

Enter Titus with bis Power, from the Pursuit.

Titus Lartius. Oh General: Here is the Steed, wee the Caparison: Hadst thou beheld —

Martius. Pray now, no more: My Mother, who ha's a Charter to extoll her Blood, When she do's praise me, grines me: I haue done as you have done, that's what I can, Induc'd as you have bee, that's for my Country: He that ha's but effected his good will, Hath ouer'tha mine Act.

Com. You shall not be the Graue of your defearing, Rome must know the value of her owne: 'Twere a Concealement worse then a Theft, No leffe then a Tradecum, To hide your doings, and to silence that, Which to the fpire, and top of prayses vouch'd, Would ferme but modest: therefore I beleeu you, In figne of what you are, not to reward What you have done, before our Armie hear me. Martius. I haue some Wounds vpon me, and they smart To haue themselfes remembred.

Com. Should they not: Well might they suffer 'gainst Ingratitude, And tent themselues with death: of all the Horfes, Whereof we haue ta'ne good, and good store of all, The Treasure in this field achierued, and Citie, We render you the Tenth, to be ta'ne forth, Before the common diftribution, At your own choyce.

Martius. I thank you General: But cannot make my heart content to take A Bribe, to pay my Sword: I doe refuse it, And stand vpon my common part with thoefe, That haue beheld the doing.

A long flouris. They all cry, Martius, Martius, cast up their Cens and Launche: Cominius and Lartius fland bare.

Mar. May these fame Instruments, which you prophane, Neuer found more: when Drums and Trumpets shall I'Th'eld prove flatterers, let Courts and Cities be Made all of self-fac'd botheing:
When Steele grows fo't, as the Pharisites Silke, Let him be made an Overture for th'Warres: No more I say, for that I haue not wath'd

My Nofe that bled, or fo'ly'd some debile Wretch, Which without note, here's many elfe haue done, You shoot me forth in acclamations hyperholical, As if I lou'd my little should be dieted
In prayes, as we'll with Lyons.

Com. Too modest are you:
More cruel to your good report, then gratefull To vs, that glide you truly: by your patience, If 'gainst your felle you be incens'd, wee're put you (Like one that means his proper harme) in Masques, Then reason safely with you: therefor be it knowne, As to us, to all the world, That Caius Martius Wares this Warres Garland: in token of the which, My Noble Steed, knowne to the Campe, I glue him, With all his trim belonging: and from this time, For what he did before Corbiles, call him, With all th'applause and Clamor of the Hoeft.

Marcus Caius Corioli. Bear' th'addition Nobly ever?

Flouris. Trumpets found, and Drums.

Onens. Marcus Caius Corioli.

Martius. I will goe with:
And when my Face is faire, you shall perceu
Whether I bluh, or no: howbeit, I thank you, I meant to Ride your Steed, and at all times To vnder-creft your good Addition, To the fairenest of my power.

Com. So, to our Ten.

Where ere we do repose vs, we will write To Rome of our successe: you Titus Lartius Mulf to Corioli backe, send vs to Rome The helb, with whom we may articulate, For their owne good, and ours.

Lartius. I shall, my Lord.

Martius. The Gods begin to mocke me:
I that now refus'd most Princely gifts,
Ag bound to begge of my Lord General.

Com. Tak't, tis yours: what it?

Martius. I sometime lay here in Corioli,
At a poore mans house: he vs'd me kindly,
He cry'd to me: I saw him Prisoner:
But then Auffidius was within my view,
And Wrath o're-theleth'm'd my pitte: I request you to give my poore Hoft freedome.

Com. Oh well beggd:
Were he the Butcher of my Sonne, he should Be free, as is the Winde: deliver him, Titus.

Lartius. Martius, his Name.

Martius. By capacet yeptot: I am wareye, yes, my memoria is tyr'd:
Haue we no Wine here?

Com. Goe we to our Tent:
The bloud vpon your Vidage dryes, 'ts time
It should be lookt too: come.

A flourish. Cornets. Enter Tullus Auffidius bleeding, with two or three Scourdiots.

Auffi. The Townes is ta'ne.

Sould. 'Twill be deliver'd backe on good Condition. Auffid. Condition?
I would I were a Roman, for I cannot,
Being a Volte, be that I am. Condition?
What good Condition can a Treatie finde
I'h part that is at mercy? But times, Martius,
I have fought with these: so often haft thou best me:
And would'st doe fo, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eate, By th'Elements,
If ere againe I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine, or I am his: Mine Emulation
Hath not that Honor in't it had: For where
I thought to crush him in an equal Force,
True Sword to Sword: I let poch he at some way,
Or Wrath, or Craft may get him.

Soli. He's the duell.
Aup. Bolder, though not so sublimey valor poison'd,
With only full'ring flame by him: for him
Shall fly out of itself, nor sleepe, nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick; nor Phane, nor Capitoll,
The Prayers of Priests, nor times of Sacrifice:
Embarcements all of Fury, shall lift vp
Their rotten Prulledge, and Cuthome 'gainst
My hate to Martius. Where I finde him, were it
At home, upon my Brothers Guard, even there
Against the hopitable Canon, would I
With my fierce hand in't heart. Go you to th'Citie, Learn in this, held, and what they are that must Be Hottages for Rome.

Soli. Will not you go?
Ap. If I am attended at the Cyprus grous. I pray you
('Tis South the City Mills') bring me word thither
How the world goe': that to the pace of it
I may proue on my journey.

Soli. I shall fir.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Menenius with the two Tribunes of the people, Sicinius & Brutus.

Men. The Agurer tells me, wee shall have Newes to night.

Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Martius.

Sici. Nature teaches Beasts to know their Friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the Wolfe love?

Sici. The Lambe.

Men. I, to deouer him, as the hungry Plebeians would the Noble Martius.

Bru. He's a Lambe indeed, that bees like a Beare.

Men. He's a Beare indeed, that liues like a Lambe.

You two are old men, tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Bru. Well fir.

Men. In what enormity is Martius poore in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poore in no one fault, but flore'd withall.

Sici. Epesically in Pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boating.

Men. This is strange now: Do you two know, how you are censured here in the City, I mean of vs all th'right hand File, do you?

Bru. Why? how were we censur'd?

Men. Because you talke of Pride now, will you not be angry.

Bru. Well, well fir, well.

Men. Why 'tis no great matter: for a very little thereof of Occasion, will rob you of a great deal of Patience:

Give your dispositions the reines, and bee angry at your pleasures (at the least) if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so: you blame Martius for being proud.

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can doe very little alone, for your helps are many, or else your actions would growe wonderous finge: your abilities are to Infant-like, for doing much alone. You talke of Pride: Oh, that you could turn your eyes toward the Napes of your neckes, and make but an Interiour survei of your good felices. Oh that you could.

Bru. What then sir?

Men. Why then you should discouer a brace of vm-meriting, proud, violent, tetti Magistrates (alias Foolies) as any in Rome.

Sici. Menenius, you are knowne well enough too.

Men. I am knowne to be a humorous Patrician, and one that louses a cup of hot Wine, with not a drop of allying Tiber in't: Said, to be something imperfect in favouring them in an Affie, hard and Thorough you upon the trubill motion: One, that couerfies more with the Buttocke of the night, then with the forehead of the morning. What I think, I vter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such Weales men as you are (I cannot call you Liburnifacis,) if the drinke you give me, touch my Pa- lat adueritly, I make a crooked face at it, I can say, your Worthippes have deliu'd the matter well, when I finde the Affie in compound, with the Maior part of your fyllables. And though I must be contente to beare with thofe, that lay you are reuerend grue men, yet they yle deadly, that tell you have good faces, if you see this in the Map of my Microcosme, follows it that I am knowne well enoufgh too? What harme can your bestome Consequietties gliese out of this Charracter, if I be knowne well eufrough too?

Bru. Come fir come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither mee, your felues, nor any thing you are amibrous, for poor knaues cappes and legges: you ware out a good wholefome Forenoone, in hearing a caui betweene an Orendge wife, and a Forfetter, and then returne the Controversie of three-pence to a second day of Audience. When you are hearing a matter betweene party and party, if you channce to bee pinch'd with the Collick, you make faces like Mummers, fet vp the bloody Flagge against all Patience, and in roaring for a Chamber-pot, dismiife the Controversie bleeding, the more intangled by your hearing: All the peace you make in their Cause, is calling both the parties Knaues. You are a payre of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well vnderfood to bee a perficter gyber for the Table, then a necessari Bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very Priests must become Mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous Subiects as you are, when you speake beft vnto the purpose. It is not worth the waggings of your Beards, and your Beards deferue not so honourable a grace, as to stufse a Botchers Cohin, or to be intomb'd in an Affie Packe-faddle; yet you must bee saying, Martius is proud: who in a cheape effimation, is worth all your predeceffors, since Descallion, though per- aduenture some of the beft fom were hereditarie hang- men. Godden to your Worthipres, more of your conser- vation would infect my Braine, being the Hearldifmen of the Befity Plebeians. I will be bold to take my leave of you.

Bru. and Sic.

Aside.

Enter.
Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Valeria.

How now (my faire as Noble) Ladies, and the Moon was three Earthly, no Nobler; whither do you follow your Eyes to fast?

Volum. Honorable Memenius, my Boy Martius approaches: for the loue of Luno let's goe.

Memen. Ha? Martius comming home?

Volum. I, worthy Memenius, and with most prosperous approbation.

Memen. Take my Cappe Jupiter, and I thank thee: hoo, Martius comming home?

Volum. Look, here's a Letter from him, the State hath another, his Wife another, and (I think) there's one at home for you.

Memen. I will make my very house reele to night.

A Letter for me?

Virgil. Yes certeine, there's a Letter for you, I saw't.

Memen. A Letter for me? it givens me an Estrate of fe-uen yeares old; in which time, I will make a Hole at the Physician. The most soueraine Prescriftion in Galen, is but Emperick quicke; and to this Preferuatie, of no better report then a Horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded?

Virgil. Oh no no no.

Volum. Oh, he is wounded, I thanke the Gods for't.

Memen. So doe I too, if it be not too much: it brings a Victorie in his Pocket the wounds become him.

Volum. On's Browses: Memenius, he comes the third time home with the Oaken Garland.

Memen. Ha! he discipil'd Auffidius foundly?

Volum. Titus Larus writes, they fought together, but Auffidius got off.

Memen. And 'twas time for him too, Ile warrant him that; and he had that by him, I would not have been so faddious'd, for all the Chuds in Cariles, and the Gold that's in them. Is the Senate pooff of this?

Volum. Good Ladies let's goe. Yes, yes, yes: The Senate ha's Letters from the Generall, wherein he givens my Sonne the whole Name of the Warre: he hath in this action out-done his former deeds doubly.

Virgil. In roth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Memen. Wondrous: I, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Virgil. The Gods graunt them true.

Volum. True! Ile be fmove they are true; where is hee wounded, God faue your good Worships? Martius is comming home: hee ha's more caufe to be proud: where is he wounded?

Volum. Ith shoulder, and ith'left Arme: there will be large Cicatrices to shew the People, when hee shall stand for his place: he received in the repulse of Tarquin feuen hurts ith' Body.

Memen. One ith' Neck, and two ith' Thigh, there's nine that I know.

Volum. Hee had, before this last Expedition, twentie five Wounds upon him.

Memen. Now it'stwente feuen; every gash was an Enemies Graue. Hearke, the Trumpets. A showe, and flourish.

Volum. There are the Vipers of Martius: Before him, hee carres Nobly; And behind him, hee leaves Teares:

Death, that darke Spirits, in'n nere Arme doth lye, Which being advance'd, declines, and then men dye.

A Senner. Trumpets sound.

Enter Commodus the Generall, and Titus Latinus; be- tween them Coriolanus, crowned with an Oaken Garland, with Captains and Soldiers, and a Herald.

Herald. Know Rome, that all alone Martius did fight Within Coriolo's Gates: where he hath wonne, With Fame, a Name to Martius Caius; Their in honor follows Martius Caius Coriolanus.

Welcome to Rome, renown'd Coriolanus.

Sound. Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renown'd Coriolanus.

Coriol. No more of this, it does offend my heart: pray now no more.

Com. Look, Sir, your Mother.

Coriol. Oh! you have, I know, petition'd all the Gods for my prosperitie.

Kneels.

Volum. Nay, my good Soulard, vp:

My gentle Martius, worthy Caius,

And by deed-achieving Honor newly nam'd,

What is it (Coriolanus) must I call thee?

But oh, thy Wife.

Coriol. My gracious silence, hayle:

Would't thou have laugh'd, had I come Coffin'd home,

That weep't to see me triumph? Ah my dear,

Such eyes the Widows in Cariles were,

And Mothers that lacke Sonses.

Com. And fixe you yet! Oh my sweet Lady, pardon.

Volum. I know not where to turne.

Oh welcome homeward and welcome Generall,

And y'are welcome all.

Mene. A hundred thousand Welcomes: I could weep, and I could laugh,

I am light, and heauie; welcome:

A Carie begin at very root on't heart,

That is not glad to see thee.

Yon are three, that Rome should dot on:

Yet by the faith of men, we have

Some old Crab-trees here at home,

That will not be grafted to your Kailith.

Yet welcome Warriors:

Wee call a Nettle, but a Nettle;

And the faults of foole, but folly.

Com. Euer right.

Cor. Memenius, euer, euer,

Herald. Glue way there, and goe on.

Cor. Your Hand, and yours?

Ere in our owne houle I doe shade my Head,

The good Patricians must be visitid,

From whom I have receiv'd not onely greetings,

But with them, change of Honors.

Volum. I have liued,

To fee inherited my very Wilhes,

And the Buildings of my Fancre:

Onely there's one thing wanting,

Which (I doubt not) but our Rome

Will call upon thee.

Cor. Know, good Mother,

I had rather be their feruant in my way,

Then sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol.

Flourish, Cornets.

Exeunt in State, as before. Enter
Enter Brutus and Scitius.

Brut. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights Are speculatively to see him. Your prattling Nurse Into a rapture lets her Baby cry, While she chat him: the Kitchin Malkie pinces Her richest Lockram bout her recchee necke, Clambring the Walls to eye him! Stella, Bulkis, Windowes, are smother'd vp, Leads fill'd, and Ridges horse'd With variable Complexions; all agreeing In earneftneffe to see him: feld-showe Flamins Doe preffe among the popular Thronge, and pufe To winne a vulgar station: our voy'd Dames Commit the Warre of White and Damaske In their nicely gawde Cheekes, toth wantyon foyle Of Phenous burning Kisses: such a poother, As if that whatsoever God, who leads him, Were flyly crept into his humane powers, And gave him gracefull pittance.

Scit. On the suddaine, I warrant him Confull.

Brut. Then our Office may, during his power, goe fliepe.

Scit. He cannot temp ratey transport his Honors, From where he should begin, and end, but will Lose thefe he hath wonne.

Brut. In that there's comfort.

Scit. Doubt not, The Commoners, for whom we stand, but they Vpon their ancient mallice, will forget With the least caufe, these his new Honors, Which that he will give them, make I as little question, As he is proud to do't.

Brut. I heard him swear, Were he to stand for Confull, never would he Appear 7th Market place, nor on him put The Naples Vufure of Humilitie, Nor shewing(as the manner is)his Wounds Toth’ People, begge their flinking Breaths.

Scit. 'Tis right.

Brut. It was his word: Oh he would milke it, rather then carry it, But by the fuite of the Gentry to him, And the defire of the Nobles.

Scit. I with no better, then have him hold that purpce, and to put it in execution.

Brut. 'Tis most like he will.

Scit. It shall be to him then, as our good wills; a sure defeuction.

Brut. So it must fall out To him, or our Authorities, for an end.

We must degge the People, in what hatred He still hath held them: that to's power he would Haue made them Males, fen'cd their Pleaders, And diaproporitied their Freedomes; holding them, In humane Action, and Capacite, Of no more Soule, nor finneffe for the World, Then Camels in their Warre, who have their Pround Only for hearing Barthens, and fore blowes For finkng vnder them.

Scit. This(as you fay) suggested, At some time, when his fearing Indolence Shall teach the People, which time fhall not want, If he be put vpon't, and that's as cafe, As to fet Dogges on Sheepes, will be his fire To kindle their dry Stubble: and their Blaze Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Minifter.

Brut. What's the matter?

Min. You are fent for to the Capitoll: "Tis thought, that Mærtius shall be Confull: I have feene the dumbe men throng to fee him, And the blind to hear him speak'Matrons fong Glones, Ladies and Maid's their Scarfes, and Handkerchers, Vpon him as he pa'd: the Nobles bended As to lower Statute, and the Commons made A Shower, and Thunder, with their Capes, and Showts: I neuer faw the like.

Brut. Let's to the Capitoll, And carry with vs Eares and Eyes for th'time, But Hearts for the event.

Scit. Have with you. Exit.

Enter two Officers, to lay Caffions, as it were, in the Capitoll.

1. Off. Come, come, they are almost here: how many stand for Confuillips?

2. Off. Three, they fay: but 'tis thought of every one, Coriïanus will carry it.

1. Off. That's a braue fellow: but hee's vengeance proud, and loues not the common people.

2. Off. 'Faith, there hath bene many great men that have flatter'd the people, who ne're loued them; and there be many that they have loued, they know not wherefore: so that if they loue them not why, they hate vpon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriïanus neyther to care whether they loue, or hate him, manifest the true knowledge he has in their disposition, and out of his No ble carelesneffe lets them plainly fee't.

1. Off. If he did not care whether he had their loue, or no, hee waue indifferent;y, 'twist doing them neyther good, nor harme: but hee feeke's their hate with greater devotion, than they can render it him; and leaves nothing vndone, that may fully discouer him their oppofite. Now to feme to affed the mallice, and difpleasure of the People, is as bad, as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their loue.

2. Off. Hee hath deferved worthy of his Country, and his affent is not by fuch eafe degrees as whofe, who hauing the people fppeare and courteous to the People, Bon netted, without any further deed, to have them at all into their estimation, and report: but hee hath fo plantet his Honors in their Eyes, and his actions in their Hearts, that for their Tongues to be filent, and not confii⼉g fo much, were a kind of ingrateful Injuri: to report otherwife, were a Mallice, that guing it felde the Lyce, would plaçte reproofs and rebuke from every Eare that heard it.

1. Off. No more of him, hee's a worthy man: make way, they are comming.

A Swene. Enter the Patricians, and the Tribunes of the People, Letters before them: Coriïanmus, Mene nius, Cominius the Conful: Scitius and Brutus take their places by themfelues: Coriï anus flandes.

Mene. Hauing determined of the Voles, And to fend for Titus Latinus: it remains, As the maine Point of this our after-meeting,
To gratifie his Noble service, that hath
Thus stond for his Country. Therefore pleafe you,
Moff reuerend and graue Elders, to desire
The prefent Conflall, and laft Generall,
In our well-found Successe, to report
A little of that worthy Worke, perform'd
By <Marinus Caius Coriolanus: whom
We met here, both to thank, and to remember,
With Honors like himfelfe.

1. Senat. Speak, good Cominius:
Leafe nothing out for length, and make vs thinke
Rather our fates defugue for requifite,
Then we to ftretch it out. Matters a' th People,
We doe requifte your kindeft cares: and after
Your louing motion toward the common Body,
To yeeld what paffed here.

Sciui. We are concemned upon a pleafing Treftie, and have hearts inclinable to honor and advance the Theame of our Assembly.

Brutus. Which the rather wee fhall be bleft to doe, if he renowne the value of the People, then he hath ereto priz'd them at.

Menen. That's off, that's off: I would you rather had been silent! Pleafe you to heare Cominius fpake?

Brutus. Most willingly: but yet my Caution was more pertinent then the rebuke you glue it.

Menen. He loues your People, but tye him not to be their Bed-fellow: Worthie Cominius fpake.

Coriolanus rife, and offers to go away.

Nay, keep your place.

Senat. Sir Coriolanus: neuer fame to heare
What you have Nobly done.

Coriol. Your Honors pardon:
I had rather have my Wounds to heale again,
Then hearre how fay how I got them.

Brutus. Sir, I hope my words dis-bench'd you not?

Coriol. No Sir: yet off,
When blowes have made mee flay, I fled from words.
You footh'd not, therefore hurt not: but your People,
I love them as they weigh—

Menen. Pray now fit downe.

Coriol. I had rather have one scratch my Head i'th'Sun,
When the Alarum were brutcke, then idly fit
To heare my Notings monfter'd.

Exit Coriolanus

Menen. Matters of the People,
Your multiplying Spawne, how can he flatter?
That's thouland to one good one, when you now fee
Thee Europe foone to tume to Ruine, for Comnocor,
Then on eares to hearre it. Proceed Cominius.

Com. I fhall lacke voyce: the deeds of Coriolagus
Should not be vitter'd feebly: it is held,
That Valour is the cheifleft Virtue,
And moft dignifies the hauer: if it be,
The man I fpake of, cannot in the World
Be finely counter-poy'd: at fixteen yeeres,
When Tarquin made a Head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the marke of others: our then Dictator,
Whom with all prayse I point at, faw him fight,
When his Amazons Shrine he drove
The brizled Lippes before him: he befrid
An o're-preft Roman, and i'th'Confules view
Slew three Opponers: Tarquins felle he met,
And flrucke him on his Knee: in that fayne foates,
When he might ad the Woman in the Scene,
He prou'd beft man i'th'field, and for his need
Was Brow-bound with the Oake: His Pupill age

Man-entred thus, he waxed like a Sea,
And in the brunt of feventeen Battales since,
He lurcht all Swords of the Garland: for this left,
Before, and in Coriolas, let me fay
I cannot fpeak him better: he flect the flyers,
And by his rare example made the Coward
Turne terror into fpirit: as Weeds before
A Veffel vnder faye, fo men obey'd,
And fell below his Stem: his Sword, Deaths flampe,
Where it did marke, it tooke from face to foot:
He was a thing of Blood, wholey every motion
Was tim'd with dying Cryes: alone he entred
The mortall Gate of th'Citie, which he painted
With flanfelle definie: aydeffe came off,
And with a hidden re-inforcement flrucke
Carioles like a Planet: now all's his,
When by and by the dinne of Warre gan pierce
His readie fence: then ftrait his doubled fpirit
Requickned what in fleep was fatigate,
And to the Battale came he, where he did
Runne reeking o're the flum of men, as if twere
A perpetuall fpyole: and till we call'd
Both Field and Citie ours, he neuer flood
To eafe his Britt with panting.

Menen. Worthy man.

Senat. He cannot but with meafeure fit the Honors which we defeife him.

Com. Our fpyoles he kickt at,
And look'd vpon things precious, as they were
The common Muck of the World: he countes leffe
Then Militer it felle would glue, rewards his deeds
With doing them, and is content
To spend the time, to end it.

Menen. Hee's right Noble, let him be call'd for.

Senat. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Enter Coriolanus.

Menen. The Senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd to make thee Conflall.

Coriol. I doe owe them fyll my Life, and Service.

Menen. It then remains, that you doe speake to the People.

Coriol. I doe befeech you,
Let me o're-leape that cutforme: for I cannot
Put on the Gowne, fliod naked, and entreat them
For my Wounds like, to give their fuffrage:
Pleafe you that I may paife this doing.

Sciui. Sir, the People muft have their Voyces,
Neyther will they hate one lot of Ceremonie.

Menen. Put them not too't
Pray you goe fit you to the Cuffome,
And take to you, as your Predecessors have,
Your Honor with your forme.

Coriol. It is a part that I fhall blufh in aiting,
And might well be taken from the People.

Brutus. Markke you that.

Coriol. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus Shew them th'vnaking Skarres, which I fhould hide,
As if I had receiu'd them for the hyre
Of their breath only.

Menen. Doe not breake vpon:
We recommend to you Tribunes of the People
Our purpofe to them, and to our Noble Conflall
With we all Joy, and Honor.

Senat. To
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Senet. To Coriolanus come all joy and Honor.
Florij. Cornet.
Then Exeunt. Minet Scincius and Brutus.
Brut. You see how he intends to vie the people.
Scin. May they perceive his intent? he will require them
As if he did contemne what he requested,
Should be in them to glue.
Senet. Come, we'll informe them
Of our proceedings here on th'Market place,
I know they do attend vs.

Enter seven or eight Citizens.

1 Cit. Once if he do require our voyces, woe ought not to deny him.
2 Cit. We may Sir if we will.
3 Cit. We have power in our felues to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: For, if hee shew vs his wounds, and tell vs his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speake for them: So if he tel vs his Noble deeds, we must also tell him our Noble ac-ception of them. Ingratitude is monftrous, and for the multitude to be ingratefull, was to make a Moniter of the multitude; of which, we being members, should bring our felues to be monftrous members.
1 Cit. And to make vs no better thought of a little helps will ferue: for once we stood vp about the Corne, he himfelfe fuckle not to call vs the many-headed Multitude.
3 Cit. We have bene call'd fo of many, not that our heads are fome browne, fome blacke, fome Abram, fome bald;
but that our wits are fo diuirtly Coulourd; and truf-
ty I thinke, if all our wifes were to fille out of one Scull, they would flye East, West, North, South, and their content of one direct way, should be at once to all the points a'th Compass.
2 Cit. Thinke you so? Which way do you judge my wit would flye.
3 Cit. Nay your wit will not so fonce out as another mans will, 'ts ftrongly wadg'd vp in a blocke-head : but if it were at liberty, 'twould fure Southward.
2 Cit. Why that way?
3 Cit. To looke it fide in a Fogg, where being three parts melted away with rotten Dewes, the fourth would returne for Confiance fake, to helpe to get thee a Wife.
2 Cit. You are neuer without your tricks, you may,
you may.
3 Cit. Are you all refolu'd to give your voyces? But that's not enough, the greates part carries it, I say. If hee would incline to the people, there was never a worthier
man.

Enter Coriolanus in a gowne of Humility, with Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the Gowne of humilitie, mark the behaviour: we are not to fay altogether, but to come by him where he flands, by one, by twoes, & by threes.
He's to make his requells by particulars, wherein euery
one of vs ha's a fingle Honor, in giuing him our own voces with our owne tongues, therefore follow me, and he direft you how you fhall goe by him.

Men. Oh Sir,you are not rightheau you are not known.
The worthieft men have done't?
Cori. What muft I fay, I pray Sir?
Plague vpnot, I cannot bring
My tongue to fuch a pace. Looke Sir, my wounds,
I got them in my Countrie Service, when
Some certaine of your Brethren roat'd, and rannie
From th'nofic of our owne Drummes.
Men. Oh me the Gods,you muft not fpake of that,
You muft refire them to thinke vpon you.
Cori. Thinke vpon me! Hang'em,
I would they would forget me, like the Vertues
Which our Duines lade by em.
Men. You'll marre all,
He leave you? Pray you fpake to em, I pray you
In whatfome manner.

Exit.

Enter three of the Citizens.

Cori. Bid them wash their Faces,
And keep their teeth cleane; So,here cometh a brace,
You know the caufe (Sir) of my flanding here.
3 Cit. We do Sir, tell vs what hath brought you too't.
Cori. Mine owne defire.
2 Cit. Your owne defire.
Cori. 1, but mine owne defire.
3 Cit. How not your owne defire?
Cori. No Sir, 'twas never my defire yet to trouble the poore with begging.
3 Cit. You muft thinke if we glue you any thing, we hope to gaine by you.
Cori. Well then I pray,your price a'th'Consulhip.
1 Cit. The price is, to aske it kindly.
Cori. Kindly fir, I pray let me ha't: I have wounds to shew you, which shall bee yours in private: you your good voice Sir, what fay you?
2 Cit. You shall ha't worthy Sir.
Cori. A match Sir, there's in all two worthy voyces begg'd I have your Almes, Aideu.
3 Cit. But this is something odde.
2 Cit. And twere to glue againe: but 'tis no matter.

Exeunt. Enter two other Citizen.

Cori. Pray you now, if it may fland with the tune of your voices, that I may bee Conful, I have here the Culomnic Gowne.
1. You have deferued Nobly of your Countrie, and you have not deferued Nobly.
Cori. Your Aenigma.
2. You have bin a fouenge to her enemies, you have bin a Rod to her Friends, you have not indece loued the Common people.
Cori. You should account mee the more Vertuous, that I have not bin common in my Loue, I will fir fatter
my fworne Brother the people to earne a decreer eftimation of them, 'tis a condition they account gentle: & fince
the wichdom of their choice, is rather to haue my Hat, then my Heart, I will practive the ininfaming nod, and be off to them moft counterfettly, that is fir, I will counter-fit the bewitchment of fome popular man, and glue it bountifull to the defiers: Therefore befeech you, I may be Conful.
2. Wee hope to finde you our friend: and therefore give you our voices heartily.
1. You have recewed many wounds for your Countrey.
Cori. I will not Seale your knowledge with fhwewing them. I will make much of your voyces, and fo trouble you no farther.

Both. The Gods giue you joy Sir heartily.
Cori. Most sweet Voyces:
Better it is to dye, better to Proue,
Then craue the higher, which firft we do deffire.
Why in this Woolsiath tongue shou'd I fland here,
To begge of Hob and Dicke, that does appeare

Their
Their needlefs Vouches: Culfome calls me too't.
What Culfome wills in all things, should we doo't?
'The Duft on antique Time would lye vswept,
And mountainous Error be too highly hearted,
For Truth to e're-pere, Rather then Soil it fo,
Let the high Office and the Honor go
To one that would doe thus. I am halfe through,
The one part suffer'th, the other will I doe.
Enter three Citizens more.
Here come more Voyces.
Your Voyces? for your Voyces I have fought,
Watcht for your Voyces: for your Voyces, beare
Of Wounds, two dozen odde: Battales thricfe fix
I have seen, and heard of: for your Voyces,
Have done many things, some left, some more:
Your Voyces? Indeed I would be Confull.
1.Cit. Hee ha's done Noble, and cannot goe without any honest man Voyce.
2.Cit. Therefore let him be Confull: the Gods give him loye, and make him good friend to the People.
All. Amen, Amen, God faue thee, Noble Confoll.
Coris. Worthy Voyces.

Enter Mementus, with Brutus and Scicius.
Menc. You have fluid your Limitation:
And the Tribunes eund you with the Peoples Voyces,
Remains, that in th'Official Markes inuoked,
You anon doe meet the Senate.
Coris. Is this done?
Scici. The Culfome of Request you have dicharg'd:
The People doe admit you, and are summon'd
To meet anon, vpon your approbation.
Coris. Where? at the Senate-house?
Scici. There, Corollans.
Coris. May I change these Garments?
Scici. You may, Sir.
Coris. That I might do: and knowing my selfe again,
Repayre toth' Senate-houfe.
Menc. Ilke keepes you company. Will you along?
Brut. We stay here for the People.
Scici. Fare you well.
Envoys Coriol. and Mencus.
He ha's it now: and by his Looks, me thinkes,
"Tis warme at's heart.
Brut. With a proud heart he wore his humble Weeds:
Will you dismifie the People?
Enter the Plebeians.
Scici. How now, my Matters, have you chose this man?
1.Cit. He ha's our Voyces, Sir.
Brut. We pray the Gods, he may deferue your loues.
2.Cit. Amen, Sir: to my poore vnworthy notice,
He mock'd vs, when he begg'd our Voyces.
3.Cit. Certainly, he bow'd vs downe-right.
1.Cit. No, to his kind of speech, he did not mock vs.
2.Cit. Not one amongst vs, saue your selfe, but sayes
He was vs scornfully: he should have shew'd vs
His Marks of Merity, Wounds receeu'd for' Country.
Scici. Why fo he did, I am sure.
All. No, no, no man w'em.
3.Cit. Hee saide hee had Wounds,
Which he could shew in priuate:
And with his Hat, thus waving it in fcorne,
I would be Confull, fayes he: aged Culfome,
But by your Voyces, will not fo permit me.
Your Voyces therefore: when we graunted that,
Here was, I thanke you for your Voyces, thanke you
Your most sweet Voyces:now you have left your Voyces,
I have no further with you. Was not this mockerie?
Scici. Why eyther were you ignorant to fee't?
Or fee'reg it, of such Childish friendship,
To yeold your Voyces?
Brut. Could you not have told him,
As you were leffon'd: When he had no Power,
But was a pettie servant to the State,
He was your Enemy, euer fpake against
Your Liberties, and the Charters that you beare
To the Body of the Weale: and now arriuing
A place of Potencie, and fway o'th' State,
If he should fill malignantly remaine
Falt Foe toth' Plebeis, your Voyces might Be Curfis to your felues. You should haue saide,
That as his worthy deeds did clayne no leffe
Then what he ftood fo to his gracious nature
Would thinke vpon you, for your Voyces,
And tranfalte his Maitlce towards you, into Lour,
Standing your friendly Lord.
Scici. Thus to have.
As you were fore-adul'd, had toucht his Spirit,
And try'd his Inclination: from him pluckt
Eyther his gracious Promif, which you might
As caufe had call'd you vp, haue haeld him to;
Or elke it would have gaff'd his farty nature,
Which eaily endures not Article,
Tying him to ought, fo putting him to Rage,
You should haue ta'ne th'advantage of his Choller,
And paft'd him vnneckled.
Brut. Did you percieve,
He did follicite you in free Contempt,
When he did need your Loues: and doe you thinke,
That his Contempt shall not be bruizing to you,
When he hath power to cruft? Why, had your Bodyes
No Heart among you? Or had you Tongues, to cry
Against the Restor'd of Judgement?
Scici. Have you, ere now, deny'd the asker:
And now againe, of him that did not ake, but mock,
Beftow your fu'-for Tongues?
3.Cit. Hee's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.
2.Cit. And will deny him:
He haue fuen hundred Voyces of that found.
1.Cit. I twice fuen hundred, & their friends, to piece 'em.
Brut. Get you hence infantly, and tell those friends,
They have chose a Confull, that will from them take
Their Liberties, make them of no more Voyce
Then Dugges, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to doe so.:
Scici. Let them allimbleand on a faver Judgement,
All reuoke your ignorant election: Enforce his Pride,
And his old Hate vnto you: befores, forget not
With what Contempt he wore the humble Weed,
How in his but he scorn'd you but your Loues,
Thinking vpon his Servuces, tooke from you
Th'apprehension of his prefent portance,
Which most gibingly, vngracefull, he did fufion
After the inuteater Hate he beares you.
Brut. Lay a fault upon you, your Tribunes,
That we labour'd (no impediment betweene)
But that you must caft your Election on him.
Scici. Say you chose him, more after our commandement,
Then as guided by your owne true affections,and that
Your Minds pre-occupy'd with what you rather must do,
Then what you should make you against the graine
To Voyce him Confull. Lay the fault on vs.
Brut. If, pare vs not: Say, we read Lectures to you, how yougely he began to serve his Country, how long continued, and what Rock he springs of, The Noble House, o'th' Martians: from whence came That Arcus Martius, Names Daughters Sons; Who after great Hystilis here was King, Of the same Houfe Poblius and Quintus were, That our bel Water, brought by Conduits hither, And Nobly nam'd, to twice being Senfor, Was his great Ancestor.

Seicin. One thus defended, That hath befide well in his perfon wrought, To be fet high in place, we did commend To your remembrances: but you have found, Skalings his prefent bearing with his palt, That here's your fixed enemy, and resolve Your fuddaine approbation.

Brut. Say you ne're had don't, (Harpe on that thill) but by our putting on: And prefently, when you have drawn your number, Repaire toth' Capitoll.

All. We will fo: almost all repent in their election. Exeunt Plebeians.

Brut. Let them goe on:
This Mutiny were better put in hazard, Then flay pail doubt, for greater: If, as his nature is, he fell in rage With their refuall, both offence and anfwer The vantage of his anger.

Seicin. Toth' Capitoll, come: We will be there before the freime o'th' People: And this flall feeme, as partly 'ts, their owne, Which we have guided onward. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, all the Gentry, Cominius, Titus Latinus, and other Senators.

Cori. Talibus Auffidius then had made new head. Latinus. He had, my Lord, and that it was which cas'd our Plprinter Compoftion.

Cori. So then the Volces fland but as at first, Readie when time flall prompt them, to make roade Upon't again.

Com. They are worne (Lord Comfull) fo, That we shall hardly in our ages fee Their Banners waue again.

Cori. Saw you Auffidius?

Latinus. On Lifeguard he came to me, and did curfe Against the Volces, for they had fo vildly Yelled the Towne: he is retreyd to Antium.

Cori. S poke he of me?

Latinus. He did, my Lord.

Cori. How? what?

Latinus. How often he had met you Sword to Sword: That of all things upon the Earth, he hated Your perfon most: That he would pamne his fortunes To hopeiffe reftitution, fo he might Be call'd your Vanquisher.

Cori. At Antium liues he?

Latinus. At Antium.

Cori. I wish I had a caufe to feeke him there, To oppofe his hatred fully. Welcome home. Enter Scicinus and Bruttus.

Rebold, there are the Tribunes of the People, The Tongues o'th' Common Mouth. I do defpite them:

For they doe pranke them in Authoritie, Against all Noble sufferance.

Scicin. Paffe no further.

Cori. Hah? what is that?

Brut. It will be dangerous to goe on--No further.

Cori. What makes this change?

Mene. The matter?

Com. Hath he not paif'd the Noble, and the Common?

Brut. Cominius, no.

Cori. Have I had Childrens Voyces?

Senat. Tribunes give way, he flall toth' Market place.

Brut. The People are incend'd against him.

Seicin. Stop, or all will fall in brolye.

Cori. Are thefe your Hear'd?

Mutl thefe haue Voyces, that can yeild them now, And打折 declar their tongue? what are your Offices? You being their Mouthes, why rule you not their Teeth? Have you not fet them on?

Mene. Be calm, be calm.

Cori. It is a purpof'd thing, and grownes by Plot, To curbe the will of the Nobilitie:

Suffer, and live with fuch as cannot rule, Nor euer will be ruled.

Brut. CalT not a Plot: The People cry you mokeft them: and of late, When Corne was giuen them grate, you repin'd; Scandal'd the Suppliants: for the People, call'd them Time-pleafer, flatterers, foes to Noblenesse.

Cori. Why this was knowne before.

Brut. Not to them all.

Cori. Have you inform'd them fithence?

Brut. How? I informe them?

Com. You are like to doe fuch businesse.

Brut. No not unlike each way to better yours.

Cori. Why then should I be Comfull? by yond Clouds Let me defende fo ill as you, and make me Your fellow Tribune.

Scicin. You shew too much of that, For which the People firfe: if you paffe To where you are bound, you must enquire your way, Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit, Or neuer be fo Noble as a Comfull, Nor yoke with him for Tribune.

Mene. Let's be calm.

Com. The People are abus'd: fet on this paftling Becomes not Rome: nor ha's Coriolanus

Defuer'd this fo dishonor'd Rub, layd falsely I' th' plaine Way of his Merit.

Cori. Tell me of Corne: this was my speech, And I will speake't again.

Mene. Not now, not now.

Senat. Not in this heat, Sir, now.

Cori. Now as I flue, I will.

My Nobler friends, I crave their pardons:
For the mutuable rankes-fente Maynies,
Let them regard me, as I doe not flatter, And therein bold them felves: I lay again, In foothering them, we nourish 'gainft our Senate The Cockle of Rebellion, Infolence, Sedition, Which we our felves have plowed for, fow'd, & fattered, By mingling them with vs, the honor'd Number, Who lack not Vertue, nor, nor Power, but that Which they have giuen to Beggers.

Mene. Well, no more.

Senat. No more words, we befeech you.

Cori. How? no more?
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

As for my Country, I have shed my blood, Not fearing outward force: So shall my Lungs Coine words till their decay, against those Meazels Which we disdain'd should Tetter vs, yet wait The very way to catch them.

Bru. You speak a'th'people, as if you were a God, To punish; Not a man, of their Infamy.

Sicin. 'Twere well we let the people know't.

Mene. What, what? His Choller?

Cor. Choller! Were I as patient as the midnight sleep, By Iose, 'twould be my minde.

Sicin. It is a minde that shall remain a poison Where it is: not poynon any further.

Corin. Shall remaine?

Heare you this Trition of the Minions? Marke you His absolute Shall?

Com. 'Twas from the Cannon.

Cor. Shall? O God! but most vnwise Patricians:why
You gaue, but wreakefull Senators, haue you thus Given Hidra here to choo[e an Officer, That with his peremptory Shall, being but The homed, and not the Master, lets not spirit To sly, hee't turne your Current in a ditch, And make your Channel his? If he haue power, Then vale your Ignorance: If none, awake Your dangerous Lenity: If you be Learn'd, Be not as common Poodles; if you are not, Let them haue Cushions by you. You are Plebeians, If they be Senators: and they are no leeffe, When both your voices blended, the great't taste Moft palleth theirs. They choose their Magistrate, And such a one as he, who puts his Shall, His popular Shall, against a grauer Bench Then ever frownd in Greece. By Iose himselfe, It makes the Confus safe; and my Soule akes To know, when two Authorities are vp, Neither Supreme; How fooone Confusion May enter, twixt the gap of Both, and take The one by th'othe.

Com. Well, on'th'Market place.

Corin. Who euer gau[e that Counsell, to glu[e forth The Com a'th'Store-houfe gratis, as 'twas vs'd Sometime in Greece.

Mene. Well, well, no more of that.

Cor. Thogh there the people had more absolute pow[e I say they norlith difobediences fed, the ruin of the State.

Bru. Why shall the people give One that speaks thus, their voyce?

Cor. He gleue my Reasons,
More worshirr then their Voyces. They know the Comre Was not our recompence, refing well affair'd They ne're did seruice for't; being pref't th'o' Warre, Even when the Nauell of the State was touch'd, They would not thrue the Gates: This Kinde of Service Did not defuer Corre gratis. Being i'th'Warre, Those Mutinies and Reuels, wherein they show'd Moft Valour, spoke not for them. Th'Accusatyon Which they have often made against the Senate, All caufe vnborne, could neuer be the Nature Of our fo franke Donation. Well, what then? How shal this Bofome-multiplied, digeft The Senators Courtfe[e? Let deeds exprefse What's like to be their words. We did requite it, We are the greater pole, and in true feare They gaine vs our demands. Thus we deafe The Nature of our Seats, and make the Rabble

Call our Cares, Fears; which will in time Breake ope the Lockes a'th'Senate, and bring in The Crowes to pecke the Eagles.

Mene. Come enough.

Bru. Enough, with our meaure.

Corin. No, take more.

What may be sworne by, both Diuine and Humane, Scale what I end withall. This double worship, Whereon part do's disdain'd with cafe, the other Inuft without all reason; where Gentry, Title, wisdom Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no Of generall Ignorance, it must omit Recall Necessities, and glue way the while To nottable Slightneffe. Purpoze fo bar'd, it follows, Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore beleef you, You that will be leefe fearfull, then discreet, That loute the Fundamentill part of State More then you doubt the change on't: That preferre A Noble life, before a Long, and With, To rumpe a Body with a dangerous Phyfickke, That's fure of death without it: at once plucke out The Multitudinous Tongue, let them not like The sweet which is their poynon. Your difhonor Mangles true judgement, and breaues the State Of that Integrity which shou'd becom't: Not hauing the power to do the good it would For th'ill which doth controul't.

Bru. Has faid enough.

Sicin. Ha's spoken like a Traitor, and shal answer As Traitors do.

Corin. Thou wretch, deflight ore-whelme thee :

What should the people do with thefe said Tribunes? On whom depending, their obedience faileth To'th'greater Bench, in a Rebellion:

When what's not meet, but what must be, was Law, Then were they choien: in a better howre,

Let what is meet, be faide it must be meet,
And throw their power th'o'uff.

Bru. Manifest Treason.

Sicin. This a Confu[? No.

Enter an ædile.

Bru. The Ediles hoe: Let him be apprehended:

Sicin. Go call the people, in whole name my Seife Attach thee as a Traitorous Innocuator: A Foe to'th'publike Weal. Obey I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.

Corin. Hence old Goat.

Ali. We're Surety him.

Com. Ag'd fir, hands off.

Corin. Hence rotten thing, or I shall flake thy bones
Out of thy Garments.

Enter a raddle of Plebeians with the ædiles.

Mene. On both sides more respect.

Sicin. Here's hee, that would take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him ædile.

Ali. Downe with him, downe with him.

2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons:

They all bufle about Coriolanus.

Tribunes, Patricians, Citizens: what ho:

Sicinins, Brutus, Coriolanus, Citizens.

Mene. What is about to be? I am out of Breath, Confusions neere, I can not speake, You, Tribunes To'th'people: Coriolanus, patience: Speak good Sicinins.

Bb 2 Sicin.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus

_Sci._ Hear me, People peace.

_All._ Let's here our Tribune: peace, speakes, speake, speake.

_Sci._ You are at point to loose your Liberties: Martius would have all from you, Martius, Whom late you have nam'd for Consull.

_Mene._ Fie, fie, fie, this is the way to kindle, not to quench.

_Sci._ To unbuild the City, and to lay all flat. What is the City, but the People? All. True, the People are the City.

_Brut._ By the content of all, we were establish'd the Peoples Magistrates.

_All._ You fo remaine.

_Mene._ And fo are like to doe.

_Com._ That is the way to lay the City flat, To bring the Roofe to the Foundation, And burie all, which yet diftidly raungeth In heapes, and piles of Ruine.

_Sci._ This deferves Death.

_Or._ Let vs lose it: we doe here pronounce, Upon the part o' th' People, in whose power We were eccled thiers, Martius is worthy _of preuent Death._

_Sci._ Therefore lay hold of him: Bear him to his Rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruution call him.

_Brut._ Adiles feize him.

_All._ Yeeld Martius, yeeld.

_Mene._ Hear ye one word, beseech you Tribunes, hear me but a word.

_AEdiles._ Peace, peace.

_Mene._ Be that ye feeme, truly your Countries friends, And temp'rate proceed to what you would Thus violently redrefse.

_Brut._ Sir, those cold wayes, That feeme like prudent helps, are very poyfonous, Where the Difcafe is violent. Lay hands vpon him, And beare him to the Rock. Corio. draws his Sword.

_Corio._ No, I die here: There's some amonc you have beheld me fightting, Come trye vpon your felues, what you have feene me.

_Mene._ Downe with that Sword, Tribunes withdraw a while.

_Brut._ Lay hands vpon him.

_Mene._ Helpe Martius, helpe: you that be noble, helpe him young and old.

_All._ Downe with him, downe with him. _Exeunt._

_In this Mutiny, the Tribunes, the AEdiles, and the People are beat in._

_Mene._ Goe, get you to our Houfe: be gone, away, All will be naught elie.

_2. Sena._ Get you gone.

_Com._ Stand fast, we have as many friends as enemies.

_Mene._ Shall it be put to that?

_Sena._ The Gods forbid:

_I prythee noble friend, home to thy Houfe, Leave vs to cure this Case._

_Mene._ For 'tis a Sore vpon vs, You cannot Tent your felfe: be gone, befeech you.

_Corio._ Come Sirs, along with vs.

_Mene._ I would they were Barbarians, as they are, Though in Rome litter'd: not Romans, as they are not, Though called i'th' Porch o' th' Capitoll: Be gone, put not your worthy Rage into your Tongue,

One time will owe another.

_Corio._ On faire ground, I could beat forte of them.

_Mene._ I could my felfe take vp a Brace of' th' beft of them, yet the two Tribunes.

_Cor._ But now 'tis oddes beyond Arithmetick, And Manhood is call'd Foolerie, when it flands Against a falling Fabrick, Will you hence, Before the Tagge returne? whole Rage doth rend Like interrupted Waters, and o're-reale.

_What they are v'd to beare._

_Mene._ Pray you be gone:

_Ile trie whether my old Wit be in request With thofe that have but little: this must be patcht With Cloth of any Colour._

_Cor._ Nay, come away._

_Exeunt Coriolanus and Cominius._

_Patri._ This man ha's marr'd his fortune.

_Mene._ His nature is too noble for the World:

_He would not chatter Neptune for his Trindt, Or Love, for's power to Thunder: his Heart's his Mouth:_

_What his Bred forgets, that his Fortune mutt vent, And being angry, does forget that ever He heard the Name of Death. A Noise within._

_Here's goodly worke._

_Patri._ I would they were in Tyber.

_Mene._ I would they were in Tyber.

_What the vengeance, could he not speake 'em faire? Enter Brutus and Sicinius with the rabble againe._

_Sicin._ Where is this Viper, That would depopulate the city, & be every man himself._

_Mene._ You worthy Tribunes.

_Sicin._ He shall be throwne downe the Tarpeian rock With rigorous hands: he hath refifted Law, And therefore Law shall confume him further Triall Then the feeurity of the publicke Power, Which he fo late at naught.

_1 Cit. He shall well know the Noble Tribunes are The peoples mouths, and we their hands._

_All._ He shall fare ont.

_Mene._ Sir, fir.

_Sicin._ Peace.

_2Cit._ Do not cry haucoc, where thou holdest but hunt With modest warrant._

_Mene._ Sicin. You were Indifferent when I came, I turne I hope you have not that you have hople To make this refuge?_

_Mene._ Here he speake? As I do know The Confuls worthwhiles, so can I name his Faults._

_Sicin._ Confult? what Confult?_

_Mene._ The Confult Coriolanus._

_Brut._ He Confult.

_All._ No, no, no, no, no, no.

_Mene._ If by the Tribunes leave, And yours good people, I may be heard, I would craue a word or two, The which shall turne you to no further harme, Then so much loffe of time.

_Sic._ Speake brefely then, For we are peremptory to dispatch This Viporous Traitor, to cleach him hence Were but one danger, and to kepe him here Our certaine death therefore it is decreed, He dyes to night.

_Mene._ Now the good Gods forbid, That our renowned Rome, whole gratefull Tenderness her deareted Children, is enroll'd.

_In Rowe, Sirs, Beakes, like an un unnaturall Dam Should now cate vs over own._
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Sicin. He's a Disease that must be cut away.
Meme. Oh he's a Limbe, that ha's but a Disease
Mortally, to cut it off: to cure it, easie.
What ha's he done to Rome, that's worthy death?
Killing our Enemies, the blood he hath loft
(Which I dare vouch, is more then that he hath
By many an Ounce) he dropp'd it for his Country:
And what is left, to loose it by his Country,
Were to vs all that don't, and suffer it
A brand to th'end a'th World.

Sicin. This is cleane Kame.

Brut. Meerely away:
When he did loue his Country, it honour'd him.
Meme. The servise of the foote
Being once gangren'd, is not then repli{ed
For what before it was.

Brut. We'll hear no more:
Purse him to his house, and plucke him thence,
Leaft his infection being of catching nature,
Spred further.

Meme. One word more, one word:
This Tiger-footed-rage, when it shall find
The harme of vnscan'd without, will (too late)
Tye Leaders poud too's heels. Proceed by Procede,
Leaft parties (as he is belou'd) breake out,
And tace great Rome with Romans.

Brut. If It were so ?
Sicin. What do ye talk ?
Have we not had a taste of his Obligence?
Our Ediles imot: our selves relifted: come.

Meme. Consider this: He ha's bin bred i'th'Warres
Since a could draw a Sword, and is ill-schoold
In bouded Language: Measle and Bran together
He throwes without distin{ion. Give me leave,
He go to him, and vnder{ake to bring him in peace,
Where he shall ans{er by a lawfull Forme
(In peace) to his vertue peril.

Sen. Noble Tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove to bloody: and the end of it,
Vnknowne to the Beginning.

Sic. Noble Menners, be you then as the peoples officer:
Maffers, lay downe your Weapons.

Brut. Go not home.

Sic. Meet on the Market place: we'ell attend you there:
Where if you bring not Maritius, we'ell proceede
In our first way.
Meme. He bring him to you.
Let me desire your company: he must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

Sena. Pray you let's to him. Exeunt Omnnes.

Enter Coriolanus with Nobles.
Corio. Let them pull all about mine eares, pret{ent me
Death on the Wheel, or at wilde Horfes heele,
Or plie ten hilles on the Tarpeian Rockes,
That the precipitation might dome frett
Below the beame of light; yet will I fill
Be thus to them. Enter Volumnius.

Noble. You do the Noble.
Corio. I mufe my Mother
Do's not approve me further, who was wont
To call them Wollen Vaffailes, things created
To buy and sell with Groats, to shew bare healls
In Congregations, to yawne, be fillie, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance flood vp

To speake of Peace, or Warre. I talke of you,
Why did you with me milder? Would you haue me
Falle to my Nature? Rather fay, I play
The man I am.
Volumn. Oh sir, sir, sir,
I would haue had you put your power well on
Before you had wore it out.

Corio. Let go.

Vol. You might have beene enough the man you are,
With drinking liffe to be so: Letter had bin
The things of your dispositions, if
You had not shew'd them how ye were disposed'd
Ere they lack'd power to croffe you.

Corio. Let them hang.
Volumn. I, and burne too.

Exeunt Menners with the Senators.

Meme. Come, come, you haue bin too rough, somthing too rough: you muft returne, and mend it.

Sen. There's no remedy,
Vnleffe by not f'o doing, our good Cite.
Cleawe in the midd'ly, and perfe.

Volumn. Pray be counciff'd ;
I haue a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a braine, that leads my vfe of Anger
To better vantage.
Meme. Well sayd, Noble woman:
Before he should thus floope to'th'heart, but that
The violent fit ath' time caues it at Phyllicke
For the whole State; I would put mine Armour on,
Which I can fearfully bear.

Corio. What muft I do ?
Meme. Returne to th' Tribune.

Corio. Well, what then?what then?

Meme. Repent, what you have spoke.

Corio. For them, I cannot do it to the Gods,
Muft I then doo't to them?

Volumn. You are too absolue,
Though therein you can never be too Noble,
But when extremeties spake. I have heard you fay,
Honor and Policy, like vnfeuer'd Friends,
Fth'Warre do grow together: Grant that, and tell me
In Peace, what each of them by th'other looke,
That they combine not there ?

Corio. Tuf't, tuf't.

Meme. A good demand.

Volumn. If it be Honor in your Warres, to feme
The fame you are not, which for your beft ends
You adopt your policy: How is it left or worfe,
That it shall hold Companionfhip in Peace
With Honour, as in Warre; since that to both
It stands in like requet.

Corio. Why force you this ?

Volumn. Because, that
Now it lyes you on to speake to th'people:
Not by your owne Instruction, nor by'th'matter
Which your heart promptly, you, but with fuch words
That are but rooted in your Tongue;
Though but Baffards, and Syllables
Of no allowance, to your beomes truth.
Now, this no more dilhonor you at all,
Then to take in a Towne with gentle words,
Which elle would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.
I would dissemble with your Nature, where
My Fortunes and my Friends at flake, require'd
I should do fo in Honor. I am in this

b b 3 Your
Your Wife, your Sonne: These Senators, the Nobles,
And you, will rather shew our general Love,
How you can frown, then spend a fawne upon him,
For the inheritance of their loves, and safeguard
Of what that want might ruine.

Com. Noble Lady,
Come goe with vs, speake faire; you may alwey so,
Not what is dangerous preuent, but the loffe
Of what is past.

Volum. I pay thee now, my Sonne,
Goe to them, with this Bonnet in thy hand,
And thus faire hauing fretchte it (here be with them)
Thy Knee buffling the fones: for in fuch bufineffe
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of th'ignorant

More learned then the cares, waulling thy head,
Which often thus correcting thy Ruff heart,
Now humble as the ripeft Mulberry,
That will not hold the handling: or fay to them,
Thou art their Souldier, and being bred in broyles,
Haf the not the fawt way, which thou don't confende
Were fit for thee to be what they make thee.
In asking their good loues, but thou wilt frame
Thy felte (forthof) hereafter theirs fo farre,
As thou haft power and perfon.

Menen. This but done,
Even as the fpeakes, why their hearts were yours:
For they have Pardons, being ask'd, as free,
As words to little purpofe.

Volum. Prythee now,
Goe, and be rul'd: although I know thou hadft rather Follow thine Enemy in a ferie Guile,
Then flatter him in a Bower.

Enter Cominius.

Here is Cominius.

Com. I haue beene i'th' Market place: and Sir 'tis fit
You make strong partie, or defend your felfe
By calmeneffe, or by abfence: all's in anger.

Menen. Oney faire speech.

Com. I thinke 'twill ferue, if he can thereto frame his spirit.

Volum. He muft, and will:

Prythee now fay you will, and goe about it.

Caro. Muft I goe shew them my vnbarb'd Sconce?

Muff I with my fad Tongue glue to my Noble Heart
A Lyre, that it muft heare well? I will do'nt.

Yet were there but this finge Ploft, to loofe
This Mould of Martyrs, they to duft shoulde grinde it,
And throw't againft the Winde. Toth' Market place:
You haue put me now to fuch a part, which neuer
I fhall difcharge to oth' Life.

Com. Come, come, wee'le prompt you.

Volum. I prythee now fweet Son, as thou haft faid
My praifes made thee firit a Souldier; fo
To haue my praife for this, perforne a part
Thou haft not done before.

Caro. Well, I muft do'nt.

Away my difpoftion, and poffeffe me
Some Harlots fpirit: My throat of Warre be turn'd,
Which quier'd with my Drumme into a Pipe,
Small as an Eunuch, or the Virgin voyce
That Babies fall a-bepte: The smiles of Knaves
Tent in my cheeks, and Schoole-boyes Teares take vp
The Glaffes of my fight: A Beggar Tongue

Make motion through my Lips, and my Arm'd knees
Who bow'd but in my Strop, bend like his
Th' Noon, all his receipts; And Alm's. I will not do'nt,
Leafe I furceafe to honor mine owne truth,

And by my Bodies aotion, teach my Minde
A moft inhernt Bafennefe,

Volum. At thy choice then:

To begge of thee, it is my more dif-honor,
Then thou of them. Come all to ruine, let Thy Mother rather feele thy Pride, then feare
Thy dangerous Stoutneffe: for I mocke at death
With as bigge heart as thou. Do as thou lift,
Thy Valiantneffe was mine, thou fuck'd it from me:
But owe thy Pride thy felfe.

Caro. Pray be content:

Mother, I am going to the Market place:

Chide me no more. Ile Mountebanke their Loues,
Cogge their Hearts from them, and come home belou'd
Of all the Trades in Rome. Looke, I am going:
Commend me to my Wife, Ile returne Confiail,
Or neuer truft to what my Tongue can do
I'th way of Flattery further.

Volum. Do your will.

Exit Volumnia.

Com. Away, the Tribunes do attend you: arm your felf
To answer mildly: for they are prepar'd
With Accufations, as I heare more ftrong
Then are upon you yet.

Caro. The word is, Mildly. Pray you let vs go,
Let them acufe me by inventioun: I'll
Will anfwer in mine Honor.

Menen. I, but mildly.

Caro. Well mildly be it then, Mildly.

Exeunt.

Enter Scenius and Brutus.

Brun. In this point charge him home, that he affects Tyrannicall power: if he evade vs there,
Informe him with his ennuy to the people,
And that the Spole got on the Antients
Was ne're diiibuted. What, will he come?

Enter an Edile.

Edile. Hoe's comming.

Brun. How accompanied?

Edile. With old Memmius, and thofe Senators
That alwayes favour'd him.

Sicini. Have you a Catalogue
Of all the Voices that we have procu'rd, let downe by'th
Edile. I have; 'tis ready.

Sicini. Have you collected them by Tribes?

Edile. I haue.

Sicini. Arrange prefently the people hither:

And when they haue me lay, it shall be fo,
I'th'right and strength a' th'Commons: be it either
For death, for fine, or Banifhment, then let them
If I lay Fine, cry Fine; if Death, cry Death,
Inflicting on the olde preroguitive
And power 'th Truth a' th'Caufe.

Edile. I shall informe them.

Brun. And when firch time they haue begun to cry,
Let them not ceafe, but with a dinne confud
Informe the prefent Execution
Of what we chauce to Sentence.

Edile. Very well.

Sicini. Make them be frong, and ready for this hint
When we shall hap to gla'th them.

Brun. Go about it,

Put him to Choller fraise, he hath bene vs'd
Ever to conquer, and to haue his worth
Of contradicit: Being once chauf, he cannot
Be rein'd againe to Temperance, then he spakes

That's
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

What's in his heart, and that is there which lookes
With vs to breake his necke.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, and Cominius with soldiers.

Sein. Well, here he comes.

Men. Calmely, I do beseech you.

Cor. I, as an Hollfer, that fourth poorest peace
Will bear the Knaue by'th Volume:
Th'honor'd Gods

Keep a Rome in Safety, and the Chaires of Justice
Supplied with worthy men, plant love amongs
Through our large Temples with ye sheaves of peace
And not our streets with Warre.

1 Sen. Amen, Amen.

Men. A Noble wish.

Enter the Edile with the Plebeians.

Sein. Draw neere ye people.

Edile. Lift to your Tribunes. Audience:

Peace I say.

Cor. First hear me speake.

Th'Edil. Well, say: Peace ho.

Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further then this present? Must all determine beare?

Sein. I do demand,

If you submit you to the peoples voices,
Allow their Officers, and are content
To suffer lawfull Censure for such faults
As shall be prou'd upon you.

Cor. I am Content.

Men. Lo Citizens, he sayes he is Content.
The warlike Servuce he ha's done, consider: Thinke.
Up with the wounds his body bears, which fell
Like Graues in th' holy Church-yard.

Cor. Scratches with Briars, scarres to move
Laughter onely.

Men. Consider furthe: That when he speakes not like a Citizen, You finde him like a Soldier; do not take
His rougher Actions for malicious founds: But as I say, such as become a Soldier,
Rather then enuy you.

Com. Well, well, no more.

Cor. What is the matter,
That being past for Consull with full voyce;
I am fo dishonour'd, that the very houre
You take it off again.

Sein. Answer to vs.

Cor. Say then: 'ts true, I ought fo

Sein. We charge you, that you have contribu'd to take
From Rome all seallon'd Office, and to winde
Your selfe into a power tyrannical,
For which you are a Traitor to the people.

Cor. How? Traitor?

Cor. The fires i'th lowest hell. Fould In the people:
Call me their Traitor, thou injurious Tribune.
Within thine eyes fate twenty thousand deaths
In thy hands cloutch'd: as many Millions in
The lying tongue, both numbers. I would say
Thou lievst unto thee, with a voice as free,
As I do pray the Gods.

Sein. Marke you this people?

All. To'th Rocke, to'th Rocke with him.

Sein. Peace:

We neede not put new matter to his charge:
What you have seene him do, and heard him speake:

Beating your Officers, cursing your felowe,
Opposing Lawes with troakes, and heere defying
Those whole great power must try him.

Even this fo crimini'll, and in such capitall kinde
Defieres th'extremest death.

Brut. But since he hath fur'd well for Rome.

Cor. What do you prate of Service.

Brut. I talke of that, that know it.

Cor. You?

Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother.

Com. Know, I pray you.

Cor. Ic know no further:

Let them pronounce the seewe Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, Fleeting, pent to linger
But with a graine a day, I would not buy
Their mercie, at the price of one faire word,
Nor checke my Courage for what they can glue,
To hauet with faying, Good morrow.

Sein. For that he ha's

(As much as in him lies) from time to time
End'd against the people; seeking means
To plucke away their power; as now at last,
Given Hoftile brokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded Justice, but on the Minifters
That doth discribe it. In the name a'th'people,
And in the power of vs the Tribunes, wee
(End'n from this Inflante) banifh ban th'ou're City
In peril of precipitation
From off the Rocke Tarpeian, nevermore
To enter our Rome gates. I' th'Peoples name,
I say it shall bee fo.

All. It shall be fo, it shall be fo: let him away:
Here's banish'd, and it shall be fo.

Com. Hear me my Masters, and my common friends

Sein. He's sentenc'd: No more hearing.

Com. Let me speake:

I have bene Consull, and can flew from Rome
Her Enemies markes vpom me. I do love
My Countries good, with a repect more tender,
More holy, and profound, then mine owne life,
My deere Wives effimate, her wombs encreafe,
And treaure of my Loynes: then if I would Speak that.

Sein. We know your drift: Speake what?

Brut. There's no more to be fyd, but he is banish'd
As Enemy to the people, and his Country.

It shall bee fo.

All. It shall be fo, it shall be fo.

Cor. You common cry of Cun, whose breath I hate,
As rekke a'th'rotten Fennes: whose Loues I prize,
As the dead Carkeftes of vnburied men,
That do corrupt my Ayre: I banish you,
And here remaine with your uncerantiae.

Let every fable Rumor flake your hearts:
Your Enemies, with nodding of their Plumes
Fan you into dispaire: Hauie the power still
To banifh your Defenders, till at length
Your ignorance (which findes not till it feels,
Making but reperation of your felues,
Still your owne Foes) deliver you
As moft abated Captives, to some Nation
That wonne you without blouws, despfing
For you the City, Thus I turne my backe;
There is a world elsewhere.

Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, with Camillus.

They all fou't, and throw vp their Caps.

Edile.
The Tragedy of Coriolanus.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgillia, Menenius, Cominius, with the young Nobility of Rome.

Coriolanus. Come leave your tears a brief farewell the beast. With many heads butts me away. Nay Mother, Where is your ancient Courage? You were va'd To say, Extreme miseries was the turer of spirits, That common chances. Common men could bear, That when the Sea was calme, all Boats alike Shew'd Matteraship in floating. Fortunes blowes, When most strooke home, being gentle wounded, cruel A Noble cunning. You were va'd to load me With Precepts that would make insincible The heart that conn'd them.

Virg. Oh heauens! Oh heauens!

Coriolanus. Nay, I pray thee woman.

Pol. Now the Red Peffillence strike at Trades in Rome, And Occupations perish.

Coriolanus. What, what, what: I shall be loud when I am lack'd. Nay Mother, Refume that Spirit, when you were wont to say, If you had been the Wife of Hercules, Six of his Labours you'd have done, and fa'd Your Husband so much fweet. Cominius, Droope not, Aideus. Farewell my Wife, my Mother, Ile do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius, Thy teares are falter then a younger man, And venomous to thine eyes. My (sometime) General, I have feene the Sterne, and thou haft oft befeechd Heart-hardning fpectacles. Tell th'eir fad women, 'Tis fond to waile insuitable frokes, As 'tis to laugh at'em. My Mother, you wot well My hazards still have beene your fAccess, and Believe't not lightly, though I go alone Like a to a lovely Dragon, that his Fenne Makes fear'd, and talk'd of more then fene: your Sonne Will or exceed the Common, or be caught With caufeful baits and practice. Volum. My first fonne, Whether will thou go? Take good Cominius With thee awhile: Determine on some course More then a wilde expodure, to each chance That farr's 1'th way before thee. Coriolanus. O the Gods! Com. Ile follow thee a Moneth, devise with thee Where thou shalt ref, that thou may'ft hear of vs, And we of thee. So if the time thruit forth A caufe for thy Repeale, we shall not tend O're the vaft world, to feeke a fingle man, And lose advantage, which doth ever coole 1'th emulation of the neede.

Coriolanus. Fare ye well: Thou haft yeares upon thee, and thou art too full Of the warres furfte, to go roue with one That's yet vnbru'd: bring me but out at gate. Come my fweet wife, my deere Mother, and My Friends of Noble touch: when I am forth, Bid me farewelle, and smile. I pray you come: While I remaine ahoue the ground, you hall Hear from me still, and never of me ought But what is like me formerly.

Menenius. That's worthyly As any care can hear. Come, let's not wepe, If I could shewe off but one feasen yeeres From these old armes and legges, by the good Gods I'd with thee, every foot.

Volumnia. Give me thy hand. come.

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brutus, with the Edile.

Sicinius. Bid them all home, he's gone! we'll no further, The Nobility are vexed, whom we fea have fided In his behalfe.

Brutus. Now we have fhewe our power, Let us ferme humber after it is done,

Then when it was a dooing.

Sicinius. Bid them home: say their great enemy is gone, And they, fand in their ancient brethren.

Brutus. Difmisfe them home. Here comes his Mother. Enter Volumnia, Virgillia, and Menenius.

Sicinius. Let's not meet her.

Brutus. Why?

Sicinius. They fay he's mad.

Brutus. They have done that of vs: keepe on your way.

Volum. Oh y'are well met:

Th'hoorded plague a'th Gods requit your loue.

Menenius. Peace, peace, be not fo loud.

Volum. If that I could for weeping, you should heare, Nay, and you shall hear some. Will you be gone?

Virg. You shall fly two: I would I had the power To fly fo to my Husband.

Sicinius. Are you mankinde?

Volum. I foole, is that a shame. Note but this Foole, Was not a man my Father? Had't thou Fofhip Glo, To banifie him that strooke more blowes for Rome Then thou haft [oken words.

Sicinius. Oh bleffed Heauens!

Volum. Moe Noble blowes, then euer f fife words.

And for Rome's good, Ile tell thee what: yet goe: Nay but thou fhall flye too: I would my Sonne Were in Arabia, and thy Tribe before him, His good Sword in his hand.

Sicinius. What then?

Virg. What then? He'd make an end of thy pofterity.

Volum. Baffardis, and all.

Good man, the Wounds that he does bear for Rome!

Menenius. Come, come, peace.

Sicinius. I would he had continued to his Country As he began, and not vnkind himeselfe

The Noble knot he made.

Brutus. I would he had.

Volum. I would he bad! 'Twas you incent the rable.

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth, As I can of thofe Miferies which heaven Will not have earth to know.

Brutus. Pray let's go.

Volum. Now pray'st ir get you gone.

You have done a brave deed: Ere you goe, heare this: As farre as doth the Capitol excede

The meanet houfe in Rome; so farre my Sonne

This
This Ladies Husband here ; this ( do you see)
Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

But, well, well, we'll leave you.

Why stay we to be baited
With one that wants her Wits.

Take my Prayers with you.

I would the Gods had nothing else to do,
But to confirm my Curses. Could I meet 'em
But once a day, it would vanquish my heart
Of what byst heavy 'tis.

You. You have told them home,
And by my troth you have caufe ; you'll Sup with me.

Angers my Meate ; I suppe upon my felle,
And so fall ferue with Feeding : Come, let's go,
Leave this faint-puling, and lament as I do,
In Anger, Iam-like : Come, come, come.

Mens. Fie, fie, fie.

Enter a Roman, and a Voice.

Rom. I know you well sir, and you know mee ; your voice I think is Adrian.

Voice. It is so sir, truly I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman, and my Seruices are as you are, against 'em. Know you me yet.

Rom. The same fir.

Voice. You had more Beard when I left you, but your Faour is well appear'd by your Tongue. What's the Newes in Rome : I have a Note from the Volcan flate to finde you out there. You have well faued mee a dayes lourney.

Rom. There hath beene in Rome strange Insurrections : The people, against the Senators, Patricians, and Nobles.

Vol. Hath bin ; is it ended then? Our State thinks not so, they are in a mot warlike preparation, & hope to com upon them, in the haste of their diuision.

Rom. The maine blaz of it is paft, but a small thing would make it flame againe. For the Nobles receive fo to heart, the Banifhment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe appetife, to take all power from the peole, and to plucke from them their Tribunes for cue. This Ies glowing I can tell you, and is almost more for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus Banish'd?

Rom. Banish'd fir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence Nicansom.

Rom. The day ferues well for them now. I have heard it faide, the fittest time to corrupt a mans Wife, is when she's false out with her Husband. Your Noble Titius Auscidius well appeare in these Warres, his great Oppofe Coriolanus being now in no request of his countrie.

Voice. He cannot choofe ; I am most fortunate, thus accidently to encounter you. You have ended my Businelle, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall betweene this and Supper, tell you more things from Rome ; all tending to the good of their Adueraries. Have you Army ready fay you?

Vol. A mot Royall one : The Centurions, and their charges diftinctly billeted already in their entertainment, and to be on foot at an hours warning.

Rom. I am joyfull to hear of their readineffe, and am the man I thinkes, that shall for them in pretent Action. So fir, heartily well met, and most glad of your Company.

Voice. You take my part from me fir, I haue the moft caufe to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let vs go together.

Enter Coriolanus in meanes Apparell, Diffigled, and muflied.

Corio. A goodly City is this Antium. City.

'Tis I that made thy Widowes : Many an heyre Of thefe faire Edifices foroure Warres

Haue I heard groane, and drop ; Then knowe me not,

Leafh that thy Wlues with Spits, and Boyes with flones In puny Battell flay me. Saue you fir.

Enter a Citizen.

Cit. And you.

Corio. Direct me, if it be your will, where great Auscidius lies : Is he in Antium ?

Cit. He is, and Feasts the Nobles of the State, at his houfe this night.

Corio. Which is his houfe, befeech you ?

Cit. This heere before you.

Corio. Thanke you fir, farewell.

Exit Citizen.

Oh World, thy fittry turns I Friends now fall worn,
Whole double boomes for me to weare one heart.
Whole Hours, whose Meale and Exercife
Are fill together : who Twin (as 'twere) in Loue,
Unfeparable, Shall within this houre,
On a diuision of a Doit, break out
To bither Emnity : So fellet Poes,
Whose Paffions, and whose Plots have broke their Sleep
To take the one the other, by some chance,
Some tricke not worth an Egge, shall grow deere friends
And inter-joyne their yllues. So with me,
My Birth-place Haue I, and my loves upon
This Enemy Towne : He enter, the flay me.
He does faire Justice : if he give me way,
Ile do his Country Seruice.

Exit.

Muficke plays. Enter a Servaingman.

Enter another Servaingman.

Enter Corioan.'

Corio. A goodly House : The feast smels well : but I appere not like a Guest.

Enter the first Servaingman.

Ser. What would you have Friend ? whence are you ?

Here's no place for you : Pray go to the doore ?

Exit Corioan.

I have defuer'd no better entertainment, in being Corioan.'

Enter second Servaingman.

Ser. Whence are you fir ? He's the Porter his eyes in his head, that he gues entrance to fuch Companions ?

Pray get you out.

Corio. Away.

Corio. Now th'art troublesome.

Ser. Are you fo brave : Ile have you talkt with anon

Enter 3 Servaingman, the 1 meets him.

What Fellowes this?

1 A strange one as euer I look'd onl : I cannot get him out o'th'houfe : Prythee call my Master to him.

3 What have you to do here fellow ? Pray you avoid the house.

Corio. Let me but fland, I will not hurt your Harth.

What are you ?

Corio. A Gentleman.

3 A marv'ous poore one.

Corio. True, so I am.

3 Pray you poore Gentleman, take vp some other fation,
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Th'art tyr'd, then in a word, I also am Longer to liue most weare: and prefer My throat to thee, and to thy Ancient Malice: Which not to cut, would fliew thee but a Fool, Since I have ever followed thee with hate, Drawne Tunes of Blood out of thy Countries breaf, And cannot liue but to thy fhaile, vnjeile It be to do thee fervice.

Aef. Oh Martius, Martius; Each word thou haft spoke, hath weeded from my heart A roote of Ancient Enuy. If Jupiter Should from yond cloud speake dulce things, And lay 'ts true; I'de not beleue them more Then thou all-Noble Martius. Let me twine Mine armes about that body, where againft My grained Ash an hundred times hath broke, And fcar'd the Moone with fpinlers: here I deep The Anuile of my Sword, and do confeft As hotly, and as Nobly with thy Love, As euer in Ambitious strength, I did Contend againft thy Valour. Know thou fift, I lou'd the Maid I married: never man Sigh'd truer breath. But that I fee thee heere Thou Noble thing, more dances my rapt heart, Then when I first my wedded Miftirs law Beltride my Threshold. Why, thou Mars I tell thee, We have a Power on foote: and I had purpofe Once more to hew thy Target from thy Branne, Or loofe mine Arme for't: Thou haft beat me out Twelve fourteen times, and I have nightly fince Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thy felie and me: We have beene downe together in my sleep, Unbuckling Helmes,fitting each others Threat, And wak'd halfe dead with nothing. Worthy Martius, Had we no other quarrell elfe to Rome, but that Thou art thence Banished, we would murther all From twelve to feuenteene: and powring Warre Into the bowels of vngrateful Rome, Like a bold Flood o're-beate. Oh come,go in, And take our Friendly Senators by'th hands Who now are heere, taking their leaues of mee, Who am prepar'd againft your Territories, Though not for Rome it felie. Cor. Thou bleffe me Gods, Aef. Therefore moft absolute Sir, if thou wilt have The leading of thine owne Revenges, take Th'one halfe of my Commiffion, and let downe As beft thou art experienc'd, thence thou know'st Thy Countries strength and weakefte, thine owne waies Whether to knocke againft the Gates of Rome, Or rudely vilit them in parts remote, To fpace them, ere defroy. But come in, Let me commend thee firft, to thofe that shall Say yea to thy defires. A thousand welcomes, And more a Friend, then ere an Enemie, Yet Martius that was much. Your hand: moft welcome, Exit two of the Servicemen.

Heere's a strang e alteration?
1. Heere's a strang e alteration?
2. By my hand, I had thought to have brooken him with a Cudgell, and yet my minde gave me, his clothes made a falle report of him.
3. What an Arme he has, he turn'd me about with his finger and his thumbe, as one would fet up a Top. Nay, I knew by his face that there was fome-things in him. He had fir, a kinde of face thought I, cannot tell
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

tell how to teatme it.
1 He had fo, looking as it were, would I were hang'd but I thought there was more in them, then I could think.
2 So did I, Ile be sworne: He is simply the rarest man i'th world.
3 I think he is: but a greater soldier then he, You wot one.
4 Who my Master?
5 Nay, it's no matter for that.
6 Worth fix on him.
7 Nay not fo neither: but I take him to be the greater Souldier.
8 Faith looke you, one cannot talk how to say that fo for the Defence of a Towne, our General is excellent.
9 I, and for an assalt too.
Enter the third Seruingman.
3 I would not be a Roman of all Nations; I had as lie be a condemn'd man.
Both Wherefore? Wherefore?
3 Never here's he that was wont to thwacke our General, Colen Martius.
1 Why do you say, thwacke our General?
3 I do not say thwacke our General, but he was always good enough for him.
2 Come we are fellowes and friends: he was ever too hard for him, I haue heard him fo fo himself.
1 He was too hard for him directly, to say the Truth on'th not before Coriules, he foctch him, and nottech him like a Carbinado.
2 And hee had bin Cannibly guen, hee might have boyld and eaten him too.
1 But more of thy Newes.
3 Why he is fo made on heere within, as if hee were Son and Heire to Mars, set at vpper end o'th Table: No question askt him by any of the Senators, but they stand bold before him. Our General himselfe makes a Mirth of him, Sandifrs himselfe with's hand, and turns vp the white o' th'eye to his Discourse. But the botteme of the Newes is, our General is cut t'h'middle, & but one halfe of what he was yesterda. For the other ha's halfe, by the Intrewe and graunt of the whole Table. Hee'll go he fayes, and folke the Porter of Rome Gates by th'eares. He will move all downe before him, and leave his baggage pou'd.
2 And he's as like to do't, as any man I can imagine.
3 Doo't? he will do't: for look you sir he has as many friendes as Enemies: which Friends sir as it were, durt not (looke you sir) thew themselfe (as we terme it) his Friends, whilte he in Directitude.
1 Directitude? What's that?
3 But when they shall fee sir, his Cret vp againe, and the man in blood, they will out of their Burroughes (like Conies after Raine) and recoll all with him.
1 But when goes this forward?
3 To morrow, to day, presently, you shall have the Drum ftooke vp this afternoone: 'Tis as it were a parcel of their Feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.
2 Why then wee shall have a flying World againe: This peace is nothing, but to ruff Iron,creasce Taylors, and breed Ballad-makers.
1 Let me haue Warre say I, it exceeds peace as farre as day do's night: It's frightely walking, audible, and full of Venta. Peace, is a very Apology, Letherig, mulf'd, deafe, flece, infenible, a getter of more bavid Child-dren, then warres a destroyer of men.
2 'Tis fo, and as warres in some fort may be faide to be a Rauifher, fo it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of Cuckolds.
1 I, and it makes men hate one another.
3 Reafeon,because they then leffe neede one another: The Warres for my money. I hope to see Romanes as cheape as Volcians. They are rizing, they are rizing.
Both In, in, in, in.
Exeunt
Enter the two Tribunen, Sceines, and Brutus.
Scein. We haue not him, neither need we fear him, His remedies are tame, the present peace.
And quietnesse of the people, which before Were in wildy hure. Heere do we make his Friends Blush, that the world goes well: who rather had, Though they themselues did suffer by't, behold Difficultes numbers goe by his streets, then fee Our Tradesmen finging in their shops, and going About their Functions friendly.
Enter Mecinien.
Bru. We ftood too in good time. Is this Mecinien?
Scein. 'Tis he, 'tis he! O he is grown moth kind of late: Halle Sir.
Scein. Your Coriolenus is not much mift, but with his Friends: the Commonwealth doth stand, and fo would do, were he more angry at it.
Mecin. All's well, and might have bene much better, if he could have tempord't. Scein. Where is he, heare you? Mecin. Nay I heare nothing: His Mother and his wife, heare nothing from him. Enter three or foure Citizens.
All. The Gods prefere you both.
Scein. Gooden our Neighbours.
Bru. Gooden to you all, gooden to you all.
1 Our felues,our wifes, and children, on our knees, Are bound to pray for you both.
Scein. Lieue, and thrue.
Bru. Farewell kinde Neighbours: We with Coriolenus had lou'd you as we did.
All. Now the Gods keepe you.
Both Tri. Farewell,farewell. Exeunt Citizens
Scein. This is a happier and more comedy time, Then when these Fellowes ran about the streets, Crying Confusion.
Bru. Caius Martius was
A worthy Officer i'th Warre, but Infolent, O'recome with Pride, Ambitious,paft all thinking Selfe-jouing.
Scein. And asfcending one folke Throne, without affifance Mecin. I think not fo.
Scein. We should by this, to all our Lamentation, If he had gone forth Confuelt, found it fo.
Bru. The Gods have weel prevented it, and Rome Sits safe and still, without him. Enter an eddile.
Exeunt. Worthy Tribunes,
There is a Slave whom we have put in prifon, Reports the Volkes with two feuerall Powers Are entred in the Roman Territories, And with the deepest malice of the Warre, Distroy, what lies before 'em.
Scein. 'Tis Ausiffidius, Who hearing of our Martius Banishment, Thrifs forth his horses againe into the world Which were in-thell'd, when Martius ftood for Rome,
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

And durst not once peep out.
Sec. Come, what talk ye of Marsius.
Bras. Go see this Rumour whipt, it cannot be,
The Voices are broke with vs.
Mene. Cannot be?
We have Record, that very well it can,
And three examples of the like, hath beene
Within my Age. But reason with the fellow
Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Leaft you shall chance to give up your Information,
And beate the Mensenger, who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.
Sec. Tell not me : I know this cannot be.
Bras. Not possible.

Enter a Mensenger.
Mene. The Knights in great carresneffe are going
All to the Senate-houfe : some newes is comming
That turns their Countenances.
Sec. 'Tis this Slave :
Go whip him fore the peoples eyes : His raising,
Nothing but his report.

Mene. Yes worthy Sir,
The Slaves report is seconed, and more
More fearfull is deliver'd.
Sec. What more fearfull?

Mene. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
How probable I do not know, that Marsius
Joyn'd with Aufidius, leads a power gainst Rome,
And voyes Reuenge as furious, as beworne
The yong and oldift thing,
Sec. This is most likely,
Bras. Rain'd onely, that the weaker fort may with Good Marsius home again.
Sec. The very tricke on't.
Mene. This is vanilky,
He, and Aufidius can no more attone
Then violent't Contrariety.

Enter Mensengers.
Mene. You are sent for to the Senate :
A fearfull Army, led by Caius Marsius,
Associated with Aufidius, Rages
Vpon our Territories, and have already
O've-borne their way, confum'd with fire, and tooke
What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.
Com. Oh you have made good worke.
Mene. What newes? What newes?

Com. You have hulp to rauish your owne daughters,
To melt the City Leads vpon your pates,
To see your Wives dibonour'd to your Nos'es.

Mene. What's the newest? What's the newes?
Com. Your Temples burned in their Ciment, and Your Franchises, whereon you flood, confin'd
Into an Augors boxe.

Mene. Pray now, your Newses :
You have made faire worke I fear me ; pray your Newses,
If Marsius shou'd beion'd with Volcanes.

Com. If? He is their God, he leads them like a thing
Made by some other Deity then Nature,
That shaves man Better : and they follow him
Against vs Brats, with no leffe Confidence,
Then Boyes purifying Summer Butter-flies,
Or Butchers killing Fieses.
Mene. You have made good worke;
You and your Apromen ; you, that flood so much
Upon the voys of occupation, and
The breath of Garlick-eaters.

Com. He'll shake your Rome about your ears.

Mene. As Hercules did shake downe Mellow Fruite :
You have made faire worke.

Bras. But is this true fit?

Com. I, and you look eale
Before you finde it other. All the Regions
Do slymly Reuel, and who refults
Are mock'd for vaunct Ignorance,
And perih conflant Foole's : who ist can blame him?
Your Enemies and his, finde something in him.

Mene. We are all vnclene, vnclene
The Noble man hauw mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?

The Tribunes cannot doot for shame ; the people
Defere such pity of him, as the Wolfe
Doe's of the Shepheards : for his beft Friends, if they Should say be good to Rome, they charg'd him, even
As those should do that had deferu'd his hate,
And therein they'd like Enemies.

Mene. 'Tis true, if he were putting to my house, the brand
That should confume it, I have not the face
To say, befeech you cefae. You have made faire hands,
You and your Crafts, you have crafted faire.

Com. You have brought
A Trembling vpon Rome, such as was never Scarceable of helpe.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.

Mene. How? Was't we? We lout'd him,
But like Beasts, and Cowardly Nobles,
Gave way vnto your Cluters, who did hoote
Him out o'th Citty.

Com. But I fear
They'll roare him in againe.

Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his Officer : Desperation,
Is all the Policy, Strength, and Defence
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troops of Citizens.
Mene. Heere come the Cluters.
And is Aufidius with him? You are they
That made the Ayre vnwholome, when you caft
Your thinking, great Cap, in hooting
At Coriolanus Exile. Now he's comming,
And not a hair vpon a Souldiers head
Which will not proue a whip : as many Coxcombes
As you threw Caps vp, will he tumble downe,
And pay you for your voyces. 'Tis no matter,
If he could burne vs all into one coole,
We have deferu'd it.

Omnes. Faith, we heare fearfull Newes,
1 Cit. For mine owne part,
When I fald banish him, I fald 'twas pitty.
2. And so did I.
3. And so did I : and to say the truth, so did very many of vs, that we did we did for the best, and though wee willingly commited to his Banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. Y'are goodly things, you Voyces.

Mene. You have made good worke
You and your cry. Shall's to the Capitol?

Com. Oh I, what eile?

Secin. Go Matter get you home, be not dismay'd,
There are a Side, that would be glad to have
This true, which they fo freme to rare. Go home,
And shew no signe of Peare.

1 Cit.

622
Enter Meneinius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, the two Tribunes, with others.

Mene. No, Ile not go: you hear what he hath said Which was sometime his Generall: who loved him In a most deere particular. He call'd me Father: But what o'th Lee you go that banish'd him A Mile before his Tent, fall downe, and kneel The way into his mercy: Nay, if he cou'd To heare Cominius speake, Ile keepe at home.

Com. He would not feeme to know me.

Mene. Do you hence?

Com. Yet one time, he did call me by my name: I vrg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops That we have bled together. Coriolanus

He would not answer too: Forbad all Names, He was a kinde of Nothing, Titileffe,

Till he had forg'd him selfe a name a'th fire Of burning Rome.

Mene. Why fo: you have made good worke:

A pair of Tribunes, that haue wrack'd for Rome, To make Coles cheape: A Noble memory.

Com. I minded him, how Royall twas to pardon When it was lefe expected. He replay'd It was a bare petition of a State To one whom they had punish'd.

Mene. Very well, could he say lefe.

Com. I offered to awaken his regard For's private Friends. His answer to me was He could not say to picke them, in a pile Of noyome mighty Chaffe. He said, 'twas folly For one poore graine or two, to leave vnburnt And still to nofe th'offence.

Mene. For one poore graine or two?

I am one of those: his Mother, Wife, his Childe, And this brave Fellow too: we are the Graines, You are the mighty Chaffe, and you are smelt Above the Moone. We must be burnt for you.

Sicin. Nay, pray be patient: If you refule your syde In this so neer-needed helpes, yet do not, Vpbruid's with our diftreffe. But fare if you Would be your Countries Pleder, your good tongue More then the infant Armie we can make Might flop our Countryman.

Mene. No: Ile not meddle.

Sicin. Pray you go to him.

Mene. What should I do?

Brut. Onely make triall what your Loue can do, For Rome, towards Martius.

Mene. Well, and say that Martius returne mee, As Cominius is return'd, vnderstand: what then? But as a discontented Friend, greenle-shot With his vnoindiffe. Say't be fo?

Sicin. Yet your good will

Muff have that thankes from Rome, after the measure As you intende well.

Mene. Ile vndertak't:

I thinke he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip,
And humme at good Cominius, much vahearts mee.
He was not taken well, he had not din'd,
The Venes vnfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We pow'r upon the Morning, are napt.
To glue or to forgive; but when we haue suff't
These Pipes, and these Conveynances of our blood
With Wine and Feeding, we haue supplie Scales
Then in our Priet-like Falts: therefore Ile watch him
Till he be dictated to my requet,
And then Ile let vpon him.

Brut. You know the very rode into his kindneffe,
And cannot lofe your way.
Men. Good faith Ile prove him,
Speed how it will. I shall ere long, haue knowledge
Of his successe.

Com. Hee's neuer heare him.

Sen. Not.

Com. I tell you, he doe's fit in Gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burne Rome: and his Injury
The Gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him,
"Twas very faintly he fald Rife: difmit me
Thus with his speechshead hand. What would he do
He fent in writing after me: what he would not,
Bound with an Oath to yeeld to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain, vnleeffe his Noble Mother,
And his Wife, who (as I heare) meant to folcitate him
For mercy to his Country: therefore let's hence,
And with our faire intrestes haft them on.

Excut.

Enter Mencenus to the Watch or Guard.

1. War. Stay: whence are you.
2. War. Stand, and go backe.
Mr. You guard like men, 'tis well. But by your leave,
I am an Officer of State, & come to speak with Coriolanus
From whence ?
Men. From Rome.
1. You may not passe, you muft returne: our Generall will no more haue from thence.
2. You'll fee your Rome embrac'd with fire, before
You'll speake with Coriolanus.
Men. Good my Friends,
If you haue heard your Generall talke of Rome,
And of his Friends there, it is Lows to Blankes,
My name hath touch't your cares: it is Mencenus.
1. Be it so, go backe the vertue of your name,
Is not heere paffable.

Men. I tell thee Fellow,
Thy Generall is my Louer: I haue beene
The booke of his good Acts, whence men haue read
His Fame vnparalell'd, happily amplifi'd:
For I haue euer verified my Friends,
(Of whom hee's cheefe) with all the fize that verity
Would without lapinf fufferer: Nay, sometimes,
Like to a Bowle vpon a subtile ground
I have tumbled past the throw: and in his praise
Haue (almost) flampt the Leafting. Therefore Fellow,
I muft haue leaue to passe.

1. Faith Sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalfe, as you have vterr'd words in your owne, you shou'd not paffe heere no, though it were as vertuous to lyse, as to lie chaflly. Therefore go backe.

Men. Prythee fellow, remember my name is Mencenus, always factionary on the party of your Generall.

2. Howbeoeuer you haue bin his Lier, as you fay you have, I am one that telling true vnder him, muft fay you cannot passe. Therefore go backe.

Men. Ha's he din'd can't thou tell? For I would not speake with him, till after dinner.

1. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy Generall is.

1. Then you shou'd hate Rome, as he do's. Can you, when you have putt out your gates, the very Defender of them, and in a violent popular ignorance, gien your enemy your shield, thinke to front his reuenges with the eafe groanes of old women, the Virginall Palms of your daughters, or with the palp'd interceffion of fuch a decay'd Dottant as you feeme to be? Can you thinke to blow out the intended fire, your City is ready to flame in, with fuch weake breath as this? No, you are deceiu'd, thence backe to Rome, and prepare for your execution : you are condemn'd, our Generall has vowe you out of repreu and pardon.

Men. Sirra, if thy Captaine knew I were here,
He would vie me with emiuation.

1. Come, my Captaine knowes you not.

Men. I meane thy Generall.

1. My Generall care's not for you. Back I fy, go: leaft
I let forth your halfe pinte of blood. Backs, that's the v-moft of your hauling, backe.

Men. Nay but Fellow, Fellow.

Enter Coriolanus with Auffidius.

Cor. What's the matter ?
Men. Now you Company, Ile fay an arrant for you:
you shall know now that I am in emiuation: you shall perceive, that a lacke gardant cannot office me from my Son Coriolanus, guffle but my entertainment with him: if thou fland'ft not ftate of hange, or of some death
more long in Speculation, and crueller in suffering, behold now prefently, and fwoond for what's to come vpon thee. The glorious Gods fit in howrely Synod about thy particular prosperity, and loue thee not worse then thy old Father Menenius do's. O my Son, my Son! thou art preparing fire for vs: looke thee, here's water to quench it.
I was hardly mov'd to come to thee: but being affured none but my felfe could move thee, I have bene blowne out of your Gates with fighes : and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary Countrimen. The good Gods affwage thy wrath, and turne the dregs of it, vpon this Variet heere: This, who like a blockhe hath denied my accesse to thee.

Cor. Away.

Men. How! Away?

Cor. Wife, Mother, Child, I know not. My affaires
Are Seruanted to others: Though I owe
My Revenue properly, my remilion lies
In Vulcanicke, That we have beene familiar,
Ingrate forfiteneffe shall poifon rather
Then pity: Note how much, therefore be gone.
Mine cares against your futures, are stronger then
Your gates againft my force. Yet for I loued thee,
Take this along, I write it for thy fake,
And would haue fent it. Another word Mencenus,
I will not heare thee speake. This man Auffidius
Was my belou'd in Rome: yet thou behold't.

Auffid. You keepe a conffant temper,
Men. The Guard and Mencenus,

1. Now Sir, is your name Mencenus?
2. 'Tis a spell you fce of much power :
You know the way home againe.
1. Do you heare how we are shent for keeping your greastneffe backe ?
2. What care do you thinke I have to fwoond?
Men. I neither care for th'world, nor your Generall:
for such things as you, I can scarce thinke they're any, y're fo flight. He that hath a will to die by himfelf, feares it not.
not from another: Let your Generall do his work. For you, bee that you are, I long; and your miseries encrease with your age. I say to you, as I was said to, Away, Exit
A Noble Fellow I warrant him.
The worthy Fellow is our General. He's the Rock,
The Oak not to be winde-shaken. Exit Watch.
Enter Coriolanus and Ausfildia.
Corio. We will before the walls of Rome to morrow
Set downe our Head. My partner in this Aktion,
You must report to th' Volcan Lords, how plainly
I have borne this Buinette.
Asf. Onely their ends you have resepted,
Stop your cares against the generall suite of Rome:
Neuer admitted a priuate whisper, no not with such friends
That thought them fure of you.
Corio. This laf old man,
Whom with a crack'd heart I haue sent to Rome,
Lou'd me, aboue the measure of a Father,
Nay godded me indeed. Their laste refuge
Was to fenden him: for whose old Loue I have (The Loue I loued fowrdly to him) once more offer'd
The first Conditions which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him onely,
That thought he could do more: A very little
I haue yelded too, Freth Embasses, and Suites,
Nor from the State, nor priuate friends hereafter
Will I lend care to. Hath what shout is this? About within Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow
In the same time 'tis made? I will not.
Enter Virginilia, Volumnia, Valeria, yong Martius, with Attendants.
My wife comes form'd, then the honour'd mould
Wherein this Trunke was fram'd, and in her hand
The Grandchild to her blood. But out affection,
All bond and priulidge of Nature breakes;
Let it be Vertuous to be Oblinate.
What is that Curtifce worth? Or those Doves eyes,
Which can make Gods forworne? I melt, and am not
Of stronger earth then others: my Mother bowes,
As if Olympus to a Mole-hill should
In supplication Ned: and my yong Boy
Hath an Apfeet of interception, which
Great Nature cries, Deny not. Let the Volces
Plough Rome, and harrow Italy, Ile neuer
Be such a Goiling to obey inftinct; but fland
As if a man were Author of himself, & knewe no other kin
Vergil. My Lord and Husband.
Corio. Their eyes are not the fame I wore in Rome.
Virg. The sorrow that deliveres vs thus chang'd,
Makes you thinkes so.
Corio. Like a dull Actor now, I have forgot my part,
And I am out, even to a full Disgrace. Bett of my Flefh,
Forgive my Tyranny: but do not say,
For that I forgive our Romanes. O a kiffe
Long as my Exile, sweet as my Reuenge! Now by the jealous Queene of Heauen, that kiffe
I carried from thee deare; and my true Lippe
Hath Virgin'd it ere fonce. You Gods, I pray,
And the moft noble Mother of the world
Leave vnflated, Sinke my kneele th'earth,
Of thy deepie duty, more impression fwell
Then that of common Sonnes.
Volum. Oh stand vp blest! I
With it with no softer Cord than the Flint
I kneele before thee, and vnproperly
Shew duty as miltaken, all this while,
Betweene the Childe, and Parent.
Corio. What's this? your knees to me?
To your Corrected Sonne?
Then let the Pibbles on the hungry beach
Fillup the Stares: Then, let the mutinous winde
Strike the proud Cedars against the fiery Sun:
Murd'ring Impoffibility, to make
What cannot be, flight worke.
Volum. Thou art my Warriour, I hope to frame thee
Do you know this Lady?
Corio. The Noble Sifer of Publicipa;
The Moone of Rome: Chaffe at the Ifcle
That curdied by the Froft, from pureft Snow,
And hangs on Diana Temple; Deere Valeria.
Volum. This is a poore Epitome of yours,
Which by that interpretation of full time,
May fhe in all your felfe.
Corio. The God of Souliders:
With the contain of supreme Ioue, informe
Thy thoughts with Nobleffe, that thou mayst prove
To fame vnvulnerable, and fickle Pth Warres
Like a great Sea-marks flanding every flaw,
And fuing thofe that eye thee.
Volum. Your knee, Sirrah.
Corio. That's my braue Boy.
Volum. Even be, your wife, this Ladie, and my felfe,
Are Sutors to you.
Corio. I befeech you peace:
Or if you'd ask, remember this before;
The thing I haue forworne to graunt, may neuer
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Diffimile my Soldiers, or capitulate
Again, with Rome's Mechanikes. Tell me not Wherein I feme unnatural: Desire not t'allay
My Rages and Reuenges, with your colder reaons.
Volum. Oh no more, no more:
You have faid you will not grant vs any thing:
For we have nothing els to aske, but that
Which you deny already: yet we will aske,
That if you faile in our requet, the blame
May hang upon your hardneffe, therefore hear vs.
Corio. Affidius, and you Volces marke, for wee'l
Hearre nought from Rome in priuate. Your requet?
Volum. Should we be filent & not speak, our Raiment
And flate of Bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy Exile. Thinke with thy felfe,
How more vnfortunate then all living women
Are we come hither: since that thy fight, which should Make our eies flow with joy, harts dance with comforts,
Confrains them wepe, and shake with feare & forow,
Making the Mother, wife, and Childe to fee,
The Sonne, the Husband, and the Father tearing
His Countries Bowels out, and to poore we
The Thine ennemies most capital: Thou barr'st vs
Our prayers to the Gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy. For how can we?
Alas! how can we, for our Country pray?
Wherefore we are bound, together with thy victory:
Wherefore we are bound, Alacke, or we muft looke
The Countrie our deere Nurfe, or else thy perfon
Our comfort in the Countrie. We muft finde
An euident Calamity, though we had
Our with, which fide shoulde win. For either thou Mift as a FornaineRecreant be led
With Manacles through our streets, or else
Triumpantly trade on thy Countrie ruine,
The Tragedy of Coriolanus.

And bear the Palme, for having bravely shed
Thy Wife and Childrens blood: For my fele, Sonne, I durpose not to waite on Fortune, till
These warres determine: If I cannot perfwade thee,
Rather to shew a Noble grace to both parts,
Then feke the end of one; thou shalt no sooner
March to affult thy Country, then to treade
Truth too, thou shalt not) on thy Mothers wombe
That brought thee to this world.

Boy. A Shall not treat on me: Ile run away
Till I am bigger, but then Ile fight.

Caris. Not of a womans tenderneffe to be,
Requires nor Childre, nor womans face to see:
I have fate too long.

Volum. Nay go not from vs thus:
If it were so, that our requent did tend
To face the Romane, thereby to defroy
The Voxes whom thou feue, thou might condemme vs
As poynous of your Honour. No, our fuite
Is that you reconcile them: While the Voxes
May fay, this mercy we haue shewed: the Romanes,
This we receiv'd, and each in either side
Gave the All-halle to thee, and cry Eblet
For making vp this peace. Thou know'r (great Sonne)
The end of Warres uncertain: but this certaine,
That if thou conquer Rome, the benefi
Which thou shalt thereby recepe, is such a name
Whole repetition will be doone with Corfles:
Whole Chronicle thus writ, the Man was Noble,
But with his left Attempt, he wip'd it out:
Defroy'd his Country, and his name remains
To th'inuing Age, abhorrd: Speake to me Son:
Thou haft affected the fume Straines of Honor,
To imitate the graces of the Gods,
To teare with Thunder the wide Checkes a'th' Ayre,
And yet to change thy Sulphure with a Boul't
That shoul be rius an Oake. Why do't not speake?
Think it thou it Honourable for a Nobleman
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speake you:
He carres not for your weeping. Speake thou Boy,
Perhaps thy childifneffe will moue him more
Then can our Reafons. There's no man in the world
More bound to his Mother, yet heere he lets me prate
Like one I'th'Stoocks. Thou haft neuer in thy life,
Shone thy derer Moother, nor any current,
When the (poore Hen) load of no record brood,
Ha's clock'd thee to the Warres; and fafeli home
Loden with Honor. Say my Request vnnuit,
And fparne me backe: But, if it be not fo
Thou art not honcht, and the Gods will plague thee
That thou refrain't from me the Dutie, which
To a Mothers part belongs. He turns away:
Down Ladies let vs flame him with him without knees
To his fur-name Coriolanus longs more pride
Then pitty to our Prayers. Downe: an end,
This is the lift. So, we will home to Rome,
And dye among our Neighbours: Nay, behold's,
This Boy that cannot tell what he would haue,
But kneelles, and holds vp hands for fellowship,
Doe's reafon our Petition with more ftreng
Then thou haft to deny't. Come, let vs go:
This Fellow had a Voxen to his Mother:
His Wife is in Coriaces, and his Childre
Like him by chance: yet give vs our dispatch:

I am hurft vntill our City be afire, & then Ile speake a little Hold her by the hand flent.

Caris. O Mother, Mother!

What have you done? Behold, the Heauens do ope,
The Gods looke downe, and this vnnatural Scene
They laugh at. Oh my Mother, Mother: Oh!
You haue wonne a happy Victory to Rome.
But for your Sonne, beleue it: Oh beleue it,
Most dangerously you haue with him preuis'd,
If not foor mortall to him. But let it come:
Affidius, though I cannot make true Warren,
Ile frame conuenient peace. Now good Affidius,
Were you in my fied, you would have heard
A Mother leeff! or granted leeff Affidius?
Aff. I was most withall.

Caris. I dare be fwoone you were:
And fir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to feate compaiion. But (good fir)
What peace you'll make, abufe me: For my part,
He not to Rome, Ile backe with you, and pray you
Stand to me in this caufe. Oh Mother! Wife!
Aff. I am glad thou haft let thy mercy, & thy Honor
At difference in thee: Out of that Ile worke
My felle a former Fortune.

Menc. I by any way; But we will drinke together:
And you shall beare
A better witneffe backe then words, which we
On like conditions, will haue Counter-feil'd.
Come enter with vs: Ladies you deferue
To have a Temple bullyou: All the Swords
In Italy, and her Confedrate Armes
Could not have made this peace.

Exeunt.

Enter Memenius and Sicinius.

Menc. See you on'd Colon a'th' Capitol, you'nd corner
Stein. Why what of that?

Menc. If it be poible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the Ladies of Rome, especially his Mother, may preuaile with him. But I say, there is no hope in't, our thrauts are fennent'd, and they vppon execution.

Stein. Is't poible, that fo short a time can alter the condition of a man.

Menc. There is difference between a Grub & a Butterly, yet your Butterly was a Grub: this Martius is grownne from Man to Dragon: He has wings, he's more then a creeping thing.

Stein. He lou'd his Mother dearely.

Menc. So did he mee: and he no more remembers his Mother now, then an eighte yeare old horfe. The tartnaffe of his face, fowres ripe Grapes. When he walks, he moies like an Engine, and the ground thrinke before his Treading. He is able to pierce a Corfelt with his eye; Talkes like a knell, and his hum is a Battery. He fits his State, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids done, is finifiht with his bidding. He wants nothing of a God but Eternity, and a Heauen to Throne in.

Stein. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Menc. I paint him in the Character. Mark what mercy his Mother shall bring from him: There is no more mercy in him, then there is milke in a male-Tyger, that shall our poore City finde: and all this is long of you.

Stein. The Gods be good vnto vs.

Menc. No, in such a cafe the Gods will not be good vnto vs. When we hand'd him, we refpecred not them: and he returning to breake our necks, they refpecred not vs.

Enter a Maffinger.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Mf. Sir, if you'd face your life, flye to your House;
The Plebeians have got your Fellow Tribune,
And hate him vp and downe; all swareng, if
The Roman Ladies bring not comfort home,
They'll giue him death by Inches.

Enter another Mf.singer.

Sein. What's the News?

(Preuat't d,
Mf. Good News, good newes, the Ladies haue
The Velcians are dividd'd, and Martius gone:
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
Nor,not th'expulsion of the Tarquins.
Sein. Friend, art thou certaine this true?
Is't most certaine.

Mf. As certaine as I know the Sun is fire i
Where haue you lurk'd that you make doubt of it?
Ne'te through an Arch so hurled the browne Tide,
As the recomposed through the gates:
Trumpets, Hobegy, Drums beats, altogether.
The Trumpets, Sack-buts, Palfircies, and Fifes,
Tabors, and Symboles, and the showring Romans;
Make the Sunne dance. Hearke you. A stout within

Mf. This is good News:
I will go mee the Ladies. This Volumena,
Is worth of Confuls, Senators, Patricians,
A City full : of Tribesmen such as you,
A Sea and Land full: you haue pray'd so well to day:
This Morning, for ten thousand of your throates,
I'd not have guen a dott. Harke, how they joy.
Sound full with the Shouts.

Sein. First, the Gods bleffe you for your tyrings:
Next, accept my thankfulness.
Mf. Sir, we have all great cause to giue great thanks.
Sein. They are near the City.
Mf. Almoft at point to enter.
Sein. We'll mee them, and help the joy. Exeunt.

Enter two Senators, with Ladies, passing our
The Stage, with other Lords.

Sena. Behold our Patronesse, the life of Rome:
Call all your Tribes together, praise the Gods,
And make triumphant fires, drew Flowers before them:
Vnshoot the noise that Banish'd Martius;
Repeale him, with the welcome of his Mother:
Cry welcome Ladies, welcome.

All. Welcome Ladies, welcome.

A Flourish with Drums & Trumpets.

Enter Twinn Auffidius, with Attendants.

Auff. Go tell the Lords at the City, I am here i
Deliver them this Paper: hauing read it,
Bid them repayre to this Market place, where I
Euen in theirs, and in the Commons cares
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse:
The City Ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends t'appeare before the People, hoping
To purge himself with words. Dispatch.

Enter 3 or 4 Conspirators of Auffidius Faction.

Moff Welcome.

1.Con. How is it with our General?
Auff. Even so, as with a man by his owne Almes improyfon'd, and with his Charity flame.
2.Con. Moff Noble Sir, If you do hold the fame intent
Wherein you wish vs parties : We'll deliver you
Of your great danger.
Auff. Sir, I cannot tell,
We must proceed as we do finde the People.
3.Con. The People will remaine uncertayne, whil't
'Twixt you there's difference : but the fall of either
Makes the Surruior heyre of all.
Auff. I know it.

And my pretext to strike at him, admits
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd
Mine Honor for his truth : who being so heighten'd,
He water'd his new Plants with dewes of Flattery,
Seducing fo my Friends: and to this end,
He bow'd his Nature, never knowne before,
But to be rough, vnsayable, and free.
3.Conf. Sir, his routentef
When he did stand for Consull, which he loft
By lack of flooping.
Auff. That I would haue spoke's a
Being banish'd f'or's, my Hart,
Prefettred to my knife his Throat : I tooke him,
Made him loynt-farnt with me : Gaue him way
In all his owne desires: Nay, let him choose
Out of my Files, his projects, to accomplish
My self and freshet men, fera'd his dignifications
In mine owne perfon: holpe to reape the fame
Which he did end all his and took some pride
To do my selfe this wrong: Till at the last
I feem'd his Foeller, not Partner; and
He wadg'd me with his Countenance, as if I had bin Mercenary.
1.Con. So he did my Lord:
The Army marueyl'd at it, and in the last,
When he had carr'd Rome, and that we look'd
For no leffe Spole, then Glory.
Auff. There was it:
For which my finewes shall be stretcht vp on him,
At a few drops of Womens rhueme, which are
As cheape as Lies; he fold the Blood and Labour
Of our great Action; therefore shall he dye,
And Ie renewe me in his fall. But hearke.

Drummes and Trumpets:floundes,with great flowers of the people.

1.Con. Your Native Towne you enter'd like a Poete,
And had no welcomes home, but he returns
Splitting the Ayre with noyset.
2.Con. And patient Fools, whose.
Whole children he hath slaine, their base throats tearre
With giving him glory.

3.Con. Therefore at your vantage,
Ere he expresse himselfe, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feele your Sword:
Which we will secound, when he lies along
After your way. His Tale pronounc'd, shall bury
His Reasons, with his Body.
Auff. Say no more. Here cometh the Lords,
Enter the Lords of the City.
All Lords. You are most welcome home.
Auff. I have not deferr'd it.
But worthy Lords, haue you with heede perused
What I have written to you?
All. We have.
1.Lord. And greeue to heare t's
What faults he made before the last, I think
Might haue founde cause Fines: But there to end
Where he was to begin, and glue away
The benefit of our Leuies, anfwering vs
With our owne charge: making a Treatie, where
There was a yealding; this admits no excufe.

Auff.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus

Asf. He approaches, you shall heare him.
Enter Coriolanus Marching with Drumme, and Colours. The Commons being with him.

Coris. Haile Lords, I am returnd your Souldier: No more infected with my Countreys blood Then when I parted hence: but still subduing Vnder your great Command. You are to know, That proferously I have attempted, and With bloody paffage led your Warres, even to The gates of Rome: Our spoiles we have brought home Both more then counterpoize a full third part The charges of the Aflion. We have made peace With no leffe Honor to the Antients Then fame to th'Romains. And we heare deliuer Sublverid by'th'Consuls, and Patricians, Together with the Seale a'th Senat, what We have compounded on.

Asf. Read it not Noble Lords, But tell the Traitor in the highest degree He hath abus'd your Powers.

Coris. Traitor? How now?

Asf. I Traitor, Martius. Coris. Martius?

Asf. I Martius, Caius Martius: Do not thinke He grace thee with that Robbery, thy base name Coriolanus in Coriules?

You Lords and Heads a'th State, perfidiously He ha's betray'd your businesse, and given vp For certaine drops of Salt, your City Rome: I say your City to his Wife and Mother, Breaking his Oath and Refolution, like A twist of rotten Silke, never admetting Countenance a'th'warre: But at his Nuries teares He whin'd and roar'd away your Victory, That Pages blush'd at him, and men of heart Look'd wondering each at others.

Coris. Hearst thou Mars?

Asf. Name not the God, thou boy of Tares.

Coris. Ha?

Asf. No more.

Coris. Meafeurleffe Lyar, thou haft made my heart Too great for what contains it. Boy! Oh Slave, Pardon me Lords, 'tis the first time that ever I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments my grave Lords Must glue this Curre the Lyre: and his owne Notion, Who weares his fripes impref on him, that Must bear my beating to his Gruae, shall ioyne To thrift the Lyre on'to him.

1 Lord. Peace both, and heare me speake.

Coris. Cut me to peeces Vokians men and Lads, Staine all your edges on me. Boy, falfe Hound: If you have writ your Annales true, 'tis there, That like an Eagle in a Doue-coat, I Flatter'd your Vokians in Coriules. Alone I did it, Boy.

Asf. Why Noble Lords,

Will you be put in mind of his blinde Fortune, Which was your shame, by this vnholie Braggart?

'Fore your owne eyes, and ears?

All Confs. Let him dye for't.

All People. Teare him to peeces, do it prefently: He kill'd my Sonne, my daughter, he kill'd my Coynhe Marcus, he kill'd my Father.

2 Lord. Peace bow: no outrage, peace:
The man is Noble, and his Fame folds in This Orbe o'th'earth: His last offences to us Shall haue judicious hearing. Stand Auffidius, And trouble not the peace.

Coris. O that I had him, with six Auffidiusses, or more: His Tribe, to wie my lawfull Sword.

Asf. Infolent Villaine.

All Confs. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him.

Draw both the Conffirators, and his Martius, who failles, Auffidius stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold.

Asf. My Noble Mafters, heare me speake.

1 Lord. O Tullus.

2 Lord. Thou haft done a deed, whereat Valour will wepe.

5 Lord. Tread not upon him Mafters, all be quiet,

Put vp your Swords.

Asf. My Lords,

When you shall know (as in this Rage Prouok'd by him, you cannot) the great danger Which this manes life did owe you, you'll rejoyce That he is thus cut off. Pleece it your Honours To call me to your Senate, Ile deliuer My felse your loyall Seruant, or endure Your heauiek Cenfure.

1 Lord. Beare from hence his body,

And mourne for him. Let him be regarded As the most Noble Coarfe, that ever Herald Did follow to his Vrne.

2 Lord. His owne impatience,

Takes from Auffidius a great part of blame:

Let's make the bed of it.

Asf. My Rage is gone,

And I am fruicke with forrow. Take him vp:

Helpe three a'th'cheerful Souldiers, ile be one.

Beate thou the Drumme that it speake mournfully:

Traille thy feele Pikes. Though in this City herc Hith widowed and vnchielded many a one,

Which to this hour bewaile the Inury,

Yet he shall have a Noble Memory. Affift.

Exeunt bearing the Body of Martius. A dead March

Sound'd.

FINIS.
The Lamentable Tragedy of Titus Andronicus.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Flourish. Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft. And then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one door, and Bafianna and his Followers at the other, with Drum & Colours.

Saturninus, Oble Patricians, Patrons of my right, Defend the justice of my Cause with Armes. Then let my Fathers Honour live in me, Nor wrong mine Age with this indignity. Bafianna, Romanes, Friends, Followers, Fauourers of my Right: If ever Bafianna, Caesar Sonne, Were gracious in the eyes of Royall Rome, Kepe then this passage to the Capitol: And suffer not Dishonour to approach Thy Imperial Seate to Vertue: confecrate To Justice, Continence, and Nobility: But let Defert in pure Election shine: And Romanes, fight for Freedom in your Choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus aloft with the Crown. Princes, that arise by Factions, and by Friends, Ambitiously for Rule and Empery: Know, that the people of Rome for whom we stand A speciall Party, hase by Common voyce In Election for the Romane Emperie, Chosen Andronicus, Sur-named Titus; For many good and great deferts to Rome. A Nobler man, a braver Warriour Lines not this day within the Gty Walles. He by the Senate is acceted home, From weary Wars against the barbarous Gothe, That with his Sonnes (a terror to our Foes) Hath youl'd a Nation strong, train'd vp in Armes. Ten yeares are spent, since first he undertooke This Cause of Rome, and chaticfed with Armes Our Enemies pride. Fite times he hath return'd Bleeing to Rome, bearing his Valiant Sonnes In Coffins from the Field. And now at last, laden with Honours Spoyles, Returns the good Andronicus to Rome, Renowned Titus, flourishing in Armes.

Let vs intreat, by Honour of his Name, Whom (worthily) you would have now succede, And in the Capitol and senates right, Whom you pretend to Honour and Adore, That you withdraw you, and abate your Strength, Dismisse your Followers, and as Suters should, Please your Deferts in Peace and Humblenefe. Saturninus. How sayre the Tribune speakes, To calme my thoughts. Bafianna. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affie In thy uprightnesse and Integrity: And so I loue and Honor thee, and thine, Thy Noble Brother Titus, and his Sonnes, And Her (to whom my thoughts are humbled all) Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich Ornament, That I will heere dismisse my louing Friends: And to my Fortunes, and the Peoples Fauour, Commit my Caufe in balancce to be weigh'd. Exit Souldiers.

Saturninus. Friends, that hauve beene Thus forward in my Right, I thank you all, and heere Dismisse you all, And to the Loue and Favour of my Countrey, Commit my Selfe, my Perfon, and the Caufe: Rome, be as luff and gracios vnto me, As I am confident and kinde to thee, Open the Gates, and let me in.

Bafianna. Tribunes, and me, a poore Competitor. Flourish. They go vp into the Senat house.

Enter a Captaine. Cap. Romanes make way: the good Andronicus, Patron of Vertue, Rome's best Champion, Sucessfull in the Battailses that he fights, With Honour and with Fortune is return'd, From whence he circumzizted with his Sword, And brought to yoke the Enemies of Rome.

Sound Drummes and Trumpets. And then enter two of Titus Sonnes: After them, two men bearing a Coffin coverd with blacke, then two other Sonnes. After them, Titus Andronicus, and then Tamora the Queen of Godes, & her two Sonnes Chiron and Demetrius, with Aaron the Moor, and others, as many as can bee: They set downe the Coffin, and Titus speakes.

Andronicus. Haile Rome: Victorious in thy Mourning Weedes:

Loe,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

'loe as the Barke that hath discharge'd his freight,
Returns with precious laden to the Bay,
From whence at first the weath'rd her Anchorage:
Commeth Androcnus bound with Lawrell bowes,
To refalute his Country with his tears,
Tears of true joy for his returne to Rome,
Thou great defender of this Capitoll,
Stand gracios to the Righteous that we intend,
Romaines, of fiue and twenty Valiant Sonnes,
Halfe of the number that King Prium had,
Behold the poore remains alive and dead!
These that Sunrime, let Rome reward with Loue:
These that I bring unto their latest home,
With burfull amongst their Auscetors,
Heere Gothes haue given me leaue to sheath my Sword:
Titius ynkinde, and carelesse of thine owne,
Why suffer'st thou thy Sonnes vnburied yet,
To houer on the dreadfull flore of Sile?
Make way to lay them by their Bretheren.

They open the Tomb.
There grееte in silenc as the dead are wont,
And sleepe in peace, flaine in your Countries warres:
O sacred receptacle of my loves,
Sweet Cell of vertue and Nobilitie,
How many Sonnes of mine haft thou in flore,
That thou wilt never render to me more?
Luc. Give vs the proudeft prinzer of the Gothes,
That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manus fratum, sacrifice his flesh:
Before this earthly prinzer of that,
That the shadowes be not vnnappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.
Tit. I giue him you, the Noblest that Suruises,
The eldest Son of this disfetted Queene.

Enter Obsequies, Obsequies, Gracious Conqueror,
Victorious Titius, true the tears I shed,
A Mothers teares in passion for her sonne:
And if thy Sonnes were ever deere to thee,
Oh thinke thy Sonnes to be as deere to mee.
Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome
To beautifie thy Triumphs, and returne
Captiue to thee, and to thy Romaine yoke,
But must my Sonnes be slaughtred in the streete,
For Valiant doings in their Countries caufe?
O! If to fight for King and Common-wealth,
Were piety in thine, it is in thee:
Andronicus, flaine not thy Tombe with blood.
Wilt thou draw neere the nature of the Gods?
Draw neere them then in being mercifull.
Sweet mercy is Nobilitie true badge,
Thrice Noble Titius, spare my first borne sonne.

Tit. Patient your Wife Madam, and pardon me.
These are the Bretheren, whom you Gothes beheld
Aliue and dead, and for their Bretheren flaine,
Religiosly they ask for a sacrifice:
To this your sonne is markt, and die he must,
Tappest their graving shadowes that are gone.
Luc. Away with him, and make a fire straight,
And with our Swords upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean confum'd.

Exit Sonnes with Alarbus.

Teme, O cruell irreligious piety.
Cle. Was ever Sycylla halfe so barbarous?
Dem. Oppose me Sycylla to ambitious Rome,

Alarbus goes to rest, and we furuise,
To tremble unnder Titius threatening looks,
Then Madam fland refolu'd, but hope withall,
The felle-fame Gods that arm'd the Queene of Troy
With opportunitie of sharpe reuenge
Vpon the Thracian Tyrant in his Tent,
May favour Tamora the Queene of Gothes,
(When Gothes were Gothes, and Tamora was Queene)
To quict the bloody wrongs vpon her foes.

Enter the Sonnes of Androcnus againe.

Luc. See Lord and Father, how we have perform'd
Our Romaine Rightes, Alarbus limbs are lopt,
And intrals feede the facrifising fire,
Whose smoke like incense doth perfume the skie.
Remaineth nought but to interre our Bretheren,
And with lowd Larums welcome them to Rome.
Tit. Let it be so, and let Androcnus
Make this his latest farewell to their foules.

Flourish.

Then Sound Trumpets, and lay the Coffins in the Tombe.
In peace and Honour rest you heere my Sonnes,
Romes readiely Champions, repose you heere in rest,
Secure from worldly chaunces and mishaps:
Heere larks no Treafter, heere no enuiues twells,
Heere grow no damned grudges, heere are no forrones,
No noyse, but silenc and Eternall sleepe,
in peace and Honour rest you heere my Sonnes.

Enter Launia.

Luc. In peace and Honour, hie Lord Titius long,
My Noble Lord and Father, lieue in Fame:
Loe at this Tombe my tributarie teares,
I render for my Bretherens Obsqueues:
And at thy feete I kneele, with teares of joy
Shed on the earth for thy returne to Rome.
O bleffe me heere with thy victorious hand,
Whose Fortune Romes beft Citizens applaud'd.
Tit. Kind Rome,
Thad Ift thou lovingly referu'd
The Cordiall of mine age to glad my hart,
Launia liue, out-lie thy Fathers dayes:
And Fames eternall date for vertues praise.
Marc. Long live Lord Titius, my beloued brother,
Gracious Triumpher in the eyes of Rome.
Tit. Thankes Gentile Tribunue,
Noble brother Marcus.
Marc. Mar. and welcome! Nephews from successfull wars,
You that furuise and you that sleepe in Fame:
Faire Lords your Fortunes are all aike in all,
That in your Countries seruice drew your Swords.
But O'er Titius is this Funerall Pompe,
That hath aphi'd to Solons Happines,
And Triumphs ouer chaunce in honors bed,
Titius Androcnus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in iustice thou haft euer bene,
Send thee by me their Tribunue and their truth,
This Piliament of white and spotlesse Hae,
And name thee in Eleccion for the Empire,
With thefe our late decafed Emperors Sonnes
Be Candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to ext a head on heauld left Rome.
Tit. A better head her Glorious body fits,
Then his that shakes for age and feeble-neffe.
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

What should I do this Robe and trouble you,
Be chozen with proclamations to day,
To morrow yeild vp rule, refigne my life,
And let abroad new businesse for you all.
Rome I have bene thy Southerly forty years,
And led my Countries strength succedually,
And buried one and twenty Valiant Sonses,
Knighted in Field, flaine manfully in Armes,
In right and Seruice of their Noble Country:
Glue me a flaffe of Honour for mine age,
But not a Scenier to controule the world,
Vfright he held it Lords, that held it left.

Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtaine and ask the Empirie.
Sat. Proud and ambitious Tribune can't thou tell?
Titus. Patience Prince Saturninus.
Sat. Remaine do me right.

Patricians draw your Swords, and sheath them not Till Saturninus be Rome Empoure:
Andronicus would thou wert shift to hell,
Rather then rob me of the peoples harts.

Proud Saturninus, interruptor of the good
That Noble minded Titus meanes to thee.
Tit. Content thee Prince, I will restore to thee
The peoples harts, and weane them from themselfes.

Bafs. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee
But Honour thee, and will doe till I die:
My Facion if thou strenghen with thy Friend?
I will most thankfull be, and thankes to men
Of Noble minds, is Honourable Meede.

Tit. People of Rome, and Noble Tribune s here,
I ask your voyces and your Suffraiges,
Will you bellow them friendly on Andronicus?
Tribunes. To gratifie the good Andronicus,
And Gratulate his safe returne to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes I thank you, and this fare I make,
That you Create your Emperours eldest Sonne,
Lord Saturninus, whose Vertues will I hope,
Reflect on Rome as Tytans Rayes on earth,
And ripen Justice in this Common-weale:
Then if you elec't by my aduise,
Crowne him, and say ": Long live our Empoure.

Mar. As. With Voyces and applaus of every fort,
Patricians and Plebeians we Create
Lord Saturninus Rome Great Empoure,
And say, Long live our Empoure Saturnine.
A Long Flourish till they come downe.

Sat. This Andronicus, for thy Favours done,
To vs in our Election this day,
I give thee thankes in part of thy Deferes,
And will with Deeds requite thy gentleness:
And for an Unlet Titus to advance
Thy Name, and Honorable Famillie,
Launia will I make my Emperess,
Rome s Royall Miftris, Miftris of my hart
And in the Sacred Ethan her espoufe:
Tell me Andronicus doth this motion please thee?
Tit. It doth my worthy Lord, and in this march,
I hold me Highly Honoured of you Princes,
And here in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,
King and Commander of our Common-weale,
The Wide-worlds Empoure, do I Consecrate,
My Sword, my Charif, and my Prifoners,
Prideft well Worthy Rome Imperial Lord:
Receive them then, the Tributes that I owe,
Mine Honours Ensignes humbled at my feetes.

Sat. Thanks Noble Titus, Father of my life,
How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts
Rome shall record, and when I do forget
The leaf of these unspeakable Deferes,
Romans forget your Felicity to me.

Tit. Now Madam are your prisoner to an Empoure,
To him that for you Honour and your State,
Will vie you Noble and your followers.

Sat. A goodly Lady, truft me of the Hue
That I would choofe, were I to choose a new:
Cleare vp faire Queene that cloudye countenance,
Though chance of ware
Hath wrought this change of cheere,
Thou com't not to be made a fcorne in Rome:
Princely shal be thy vflage every way.
Reft on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: Madam he comforts you,
Can make your Greater then the Queene of Gothes?
Launia you are not displeas'd with this?
Lau. Not I my Lord, lath true Nobilitie,
Warrants these wordes in Princely curtesie.

Sat. Thanks sweete Launia, Romans let vs goe:
Randomlye here we fat our Prifoners free,
Proclaime our Honors Lords with Trompe and Drum.
Bafs. Lord Titus by your leave, this Mald is mine.
Tit. How far? Are you in earnest then my Lord?
Bafs. I Noble Titus, and refoul'd withal,
To doe my felle this reason, and this right.
Marc. Suum cuique, is our Romeane luffice,
This Prince in Justice ceazeth but his owne.
Lau. And that he will and shall, if Lucina live.

Tit. Traytors aunent, where is the Emperours Guardes?
Treacon my Lord, Launia is surpris'd.
Sat. Surpris'd, by whom?
Bafs. By him that lyftly may
Beare his Betroth'd, from all the world away.

Muti. Brothers helpe to concey her hence away,
And with my Sword Ile keepe this doore seale.

Tit. Follow my Lord, and Ile soone bring her backe.
Muti. My Lord you paffe not here.

Tit. What villaine Boy, bar't me Ile soone in Rome?
Muti. Hepp Lucina helpe,
He kis him.
Lau. My Lord you are refin'd, and more then fo,
In wrongfull quarrell, you haue flaine your Son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he are any Sonnes of mine,
My fonnnes would never so dhiourney me.
Traytor refoure Launia to the Empoure.
Lau. Dead if you will, but not to be his wife,
That is another lawfull promit Loste.

Enter aloft the Empoure with Tamara and her two Sonnes, and Aaron the Moor.

Emp. No Titus, no, the Empoure needes her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy flockes:
Ile truft by Leisur him that mocks me once.
Thee neuer: nor thy Trayterous haunted fonnnes,
Confederates all, thus to dhiourney me.
Was none in Rome to make a flate
But Saturninus? Full well Andronicus
Agree thee Deeds, with that proud bragge of thine,
That said'I, beg'd the Empire at thy hand,'

Tit. O monstruous, what reproachfull words are theft?
Sat. But goe thy wayes, goe gue that changing pece,
To him that flourisht for her with his Sword:
A Valliant fonne in-law, thou that enjoyed,
One,fit to bandy with thy lawlesse Sonnes,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

To ruffle in the Commons-wesith of Rome.

Tit. These words are Razors to my wounded hart.

Sat. And therefore louely Tamora Queene of Gothes,
That like the stately Tebe mong't her Nimphs
Doth ouer-shine the Gallant't Dames of Rome;
If thou be pleas'd with this my sodaine choyfe,
Behold I choose thee Tamora for my Bride,
And will Create thee Empresse of Rome.

Speak Queene of Gothes doft thou applau'd my choyfe?
And here I sweare by all the Romaine Gods,
Sith Priet and Holy-water are fo neere,
And Tapers burne fo bright, and every thing
In readiness for Hymnecus stand,
I will not reluate the streets of Rome,
Or clime my Palisce, till from forth this place,
I leade efploy'd my Bride along with me,

Tam. And here in sight of heaven to Rome I sweare,
If Saturnine advance the Queene of Gothes,
Shew I will a Hand-maid be to his desires,
A loving Nurse, a Mother to his youth.

Sat. Afcend faire Queene, Panthean Lords, accompany
Your Noble Emperour and his looney Bride,
Sent by the heauens for Prince Saturnine,
Whofe wilfome hath her Fortune Conquered,
There shall we Connummate our Spoufall rites.

Enter Marcus and Titus Sonses.

Mar. O Titus fie! O fie what thou hast done!
In a bad quarrell, flame a Vertuous fonne.

Tit. No foolifh Tribunno, no: No fonne of mine,
Nor thou, nor thefe Confederates in the deed,
That hath dishonoured all our Family,
Vnworthy brother, and vnworthy Sonses.

Luc. But let vs give him burial as becomes:
Glue Mutius buriall with our Bretheren.

Tit. Traytors away, he reft's not in this Tome:
This Monument five hundred yeares hath flood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edifed:
Heere none but Souldiers, and Rome's Seruitors,
Repofe in Fame: None basely flame in braules,
Bury him where you can, he comes not heere.

Mar. My Lord this is impety in you,
My Nephew Mutius deeds do pleade for him,
He muft be buried with his bretheren.

Titus two Sonses speaks.

And shall, or him we will accompany.

Tit. And shall! What villain was it fpoke that word?

Titus fones speaks.

He that would vouch'd it in any place but heere.

Tit. What would you bury him in my defpit?

Mar. No Noble Titus, but intrest of thee,
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, Even thou haft broke vpon my Creft,
And with thofe Boyes mine Honour thou haft wounded,
My foes I doe repute you every one.

So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

1. Sonne. He is not himefelf, let vs withdraw.

2. Sonne. Not I tell Mutius bones be buried.

The Brother and the fones speaks.

Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plea'd.

2. Sonne. Father, and in that name doth nature speake.

Luc. Speake thou no more if all the reft will speece.

Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to interre
His Noble Nephew heere in vertues neft,
That died in Honour and Launia's caufe.

Thou art a Romaine, be not barbarous:
The Greeks vpon aludile did bury Ajax
That flew himeffe: And L'Arius fonne,
Did graciously pleade for his Funerals:
Let not young Mutius then that was thy ioy,
Be bar'd his entrance heere.

Tit. Rife Marcus, rife,
The difmal't day is this that ere I saw,
Till we be difhonoured by my Sonnes in Rome:

Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

They put him in the Tombe.

Luc. There lie thy bones sweet Mutius with thy Till we with Trophies do adore thine Tombe, (friends

No man shed teares for Noble Mutius;
He lies in Fame, that di'd in vertues caufe.

Exit.

Mar. My Lord to flip out of thefe sudden dumps,
How comes it that the fulble Queene of Gothes,
Is of a fodeine thus aduan'd in Rome?

Ti. I know not Marcus: but I know it is,
(Whether by defhie or no) the heauens can tell,
Is she not then beholding to the man,
That brought her for this good high turne fo farre?
Yes, and will Nobly him renumerate.

Flourish.

Enter the Emperor, Tamora, and her two sons, with the Moor at one door. Enter at the other door Bagthianus and Launia with others.

Sat. So Bagthianus, you have paid your prize,
God give you joy fir of your Gallant Bride.

Bag. And you of yours my Lord: I say no more,
Nor with no leffe, and fo I take my leave.

Sat. Traytor, if Rome haue law, or we have power,
Thou and thy Faction fhall repent this Rape.

Bag. Rape call you it my Lord, to ceale my owne,
My true betrothed Loue, and now my wife?
But let the lawes of Rome determine all,
Mesne while I am poffiff of that mine.

Sat. 'Tis good fir: you are very short with vs,
But if we fluce, weele be as sharfe with you.

Bag. My Lord, what I have done as beft I may,
Anfwer I muft, and shall do with my life,
Onely thus much I give your Grace to know,
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This Noble Gentleman Lord Titus here,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd,
That in the refcue of Launia,
With his owne hand did flay his yongeft Son,
In zele to you, and highly mou'd to wrath.
To be controule'd in that he frankly gue:
Receive them then to favour Saturnin's,
That hath expray'd himfelfe in all his deeds,
A Father and a friend to thee, and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bagthianus leaue to plead my Deeds,
'Tis thou, and thoufe, that have dinhonoured me,
Rome and the righteous heauens be my judge,
How I have lou'd and Honour'd Saturnin.

Tam. My worthy Lord if euer Tamora,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Were gracious in those Princely eyes of thine,
Then heare me speake indifferently for all:
And at my fute (sweet) pardon what is paff.
Satur. What Madam, be dihonour'd openly,
And safely put it vp without reuenge!
Tam. Not fo my Lord,
The Gods of Rome for-tend,
I shou'd be Author to dihonoure you.
But on mine honour dare, I vndertake
For good Lord Tito's innocence in all:
Whole fury not diuersed speakes his griefes:
Then at my fute looke graciously on him,
Loofe not fo noble a friend on vaine fuppos,
Nor with fower lookes afflict his gentle heart.
My Lord, be rul'd by me, be wonne at laft,
Diffeamble all your griefes and difcontents,
You are but newly planted in your Throne,
Leaft then the people, and Patricions too,
Vpon a fuit furcey take Titus part,
And fo fupplant vis for ingratitude,
Which Rome repares to be a hainous finne.
Yeeld at intrait, and then let me alone: I
Ile finde a day to mascarfe them all,
And race their faction, and their familie,
The cruell Father, and his tray'trous fonnes,
To whom I fued for my deare fonnes life.
And make them know what 'tis to let a Queene.
Kneele in the freetes, and beg for grace in vaine.
Come, come, sweet Emperour, (come Andronicus)
Take vp this good old man, and cheere the heart,
That dies in tempell of thy angry frowne.
King. Rife Titus, rife,
My Emprefle hath prevail'd.
Titus. I thank you Maieffie,
And her my Lord,
These words, these lookes,
Infide new life in me.
Tam. Titus, I am incorporare in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily.
And muft aduife the Emperour for his good,
This day all quarrels die Andronicus.
And let it be mine honour good my Lord,
That I haue reconcil'd your friends and you.
For you Prince Bajiosmus, I haue paff
My word and promife to the Emperour,
That you will be more milde and tractable.
And fare not Lords:
And you Lauinia,
By my aduife all humbled on your knees,
You shall aske pardon of your Maieffie.
Son. We doe,
And vow to heauen, and to his Highnes,
That what we did, was mildly, as we might,
Tending our fathers honour and our owne.
Marc. That on mine honour heere I do protest.
King. Away and talke not, trouble vs no more.
Tamora. Nay, nay,
Sweet Emperour, we muft all be friends,
The Tribune and his Nephews kneele for grace,
I will not be denied, sweet hart looke back.
King. Marcus,
For thy fake and thy brothers heere,
And at my louely Tamora's intrait,
I doe remit these young mens haynes faults.
Stand vp, Lauinia, though thou left me like a churl,
I found a friend, and fure as death I trowe,
I would not part a Batchelour from the Frieff.
Comes, if the Emperours Court can faiet two Brides,
You are my guest Lauinia, and your friends:
This day fhall be a Loue-day Tamor a.
Tit. To morrow and it pleaf your Maieffie,
To hunt the Panther and the Hart with me,
With horne and Hound,
Wecle give your Grace Bon jour.
Satur. Be it fo Titus, and Gramercy to.

Actus Secunda.

Flourijh. Enter Aaron alone.

Aaron. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus toppe,
Safe out of Fortunes hot, and fit soft,
Secure of Thunders cracke or lightning flash,
Adunade about pale enuies threatening reach:
As when the golden Sunne salutes the morn,
And hauing glit the Ocean with his beams,
Gallop the Zodiacke in his glistering Coach,
And ouer-looks the heighte piering hills:
So Tamora,
Vpon her wit doth earthly honour waite,
And vertue floopes and trembles at her frowne.
Then Aaron arme thy hart, and fit thy thoughts,
To mount aloft with thy Emperiall Miftit,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Haft prifoner held, fetted in amorous chains,
And fitter bound to Aarons charming eyes,
Then is Prometheu's tile to Caucesus.
Away with flauifh weedes, and idle thoughts,
I will be bright and shine in Pearle and Gold,
To waite vpon this newe made Emprefle.
To waite faid I? To wanton with this Queene,
This Godeffe, this Semeiremis, this Queene,
This Syren, that will charm Romes Saturnins,
And fec his fhipperack, and his Common weales.
Hallo, what forme is this?

Enter Chiron and Demetriae brauing.

Dem. Chiron thy yeres want witt, thy witt want edges
And manners to intro'd where I am grac'd,
And may for ought thou know it affecte
Chir. Demetriai, thou dost not over-worke in all,
And so in this, to bear me downe with braues,
'Tis not the difference of a yeere or two
Makes me leffe gracious, or thee more fortunate:
I am as able, and as fit, as thou,
To ferue, and to deferve my Miftit grace,
And that my fword vpon thee shall approve,
And plead my passions for Lauinia's love.
Aaron. Chir. chine, these louers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why Boy, although our mother (vnauided)
Gave you a dauning Rapier by your fide,
Are you fo deare growne to threat your friends?
Goe too i have your Lath glued within your fheat,
Till you know better how to handle it.
Chir. Mean ye while fit, with the little skill I hau,
Full well fayl thou perceiue how much I dare.

Aaron. Why how now Lords?
So nere the Emperours Palacie dare you draw,
And maintaine such a quarrell openly?
Full well I wote, the ground of all this grudge.
I would not for a million of Gold,
The caufe were knowne to them it most concerns?
Nor would your Noble mother for much more
Be so dishonored in the Court of Rome:
For shame put vp,

_Deme._ Not I, till I have feaith'd
My rapiers in his bofom, and withall
Thrust thefe reprochfull speeches downe his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my diſhonour here.

_Chi._ For that I am prepar'd, and full resolu'd,
Foul spoked Coward,
That thundreft with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing dar'nt performe.

_Aron._ A way I say,
Now by the Gods that warlike Goths adore,
This pretty brabble will vndoo vs all:
Why Lords, and thinke you not how dangerous
It is to fet upon a Princes right?
What is _Lavinia_ then become so loue,
Or _Bajianus_ too degenerate,
That for her lone such quarrels may be broacht,
Without controulement, Juflice, or reuenge?
Young Lords beware, and shou'd the Emprefse know,
This discord ground, the musicke would not pleafe.

_Chi._ I care not, I knew the and all the world,
I loue _Lavinia_ more then all the world.

_Deme._ Youngling,
Learne thou to make some meaneer choife,
_Lavinia_ is thine elder brothers hope.

_Aron._ Why are ye mad? Or know ye not in Rome,
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brooke Competitors in loue?
I tell you Lords, you doe but plot your death,
By this deuile.

_Chi._ _Aron_, a thousand deaths would I propofe,
To atchieue her whom I do loue.

_Aron._ To atchieue her, how?

_Deme._ Why, mak'st thou it fo strange?
Shee is a woman, therefore may be wooo'd,
Shee is a woman, therefore may be wonne,
Shee is _Lavinia_ therefore must be loue'd.
What man, more water glideth by the Mill
Then woots the Miller of, and ease it is
Of a cut loafe to feale a fliue we know:
Though _Bajianus_ be the Emperours brother,
Better then he have wore _Vulcan's_ badge.

_Aron._ I, and as good as _Saturnus_ may.

_Deme._ Then why should he diſpaire that knowes to
With words, faire lootes, and liberalitie:
(court it
What haft not thou full often truchke a Doe,
And borne her cleanly by the Keepers note?

_Aron._ Why then it feemes fome certaine snatch or fo
Would ferue your tumes.

_Chi._ I fo the tumes were ferued.

_Deme._ _Aron_ thou haft hit it.

_Aron._ Would you had hit it too,
Then should not we be tir'd with this adoo:
Why haft thou, haft thou, and are you fuch foolees,
To fquare for this? Would it offend you then?

_Chi._ Faith not me.

_Deme._ Nor me,fo I were one.

_Aron._ For shame be friends, & joyne for that you la
'Tis politic, and pragamere muft doe
That you affiet, and fo muft you refoole,

That what you cannot as you would atchieue,
You muft perfore accomplish as you may:
Take this of me, _Lucrece_ was not more chaft
Then this _Lavinia, Bajianus_ lau,
A fpiedier couerle this lingering languifhment
Muf't we purifie, and I have found the path:
My Lords, a folemne hunting is in hand,
There will the lowely Roman Ladies troope:
The Forrest walks are wide and fmacious,
And many unfigured plots there are,
Fitted by kinde for rape and villainie:
Single you thither then this dainty Doe,
And firke her home by force, if not by words:
This way or not at all, fland you in hope.
Come, come, our Empreff with her facred wit
To valliance and vengeance confrerate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend,
And the fhill file our engines with adult,
That will not fuffer you to fquire your felues,
But to your wishes height advance you both,
The Emperours Court is like the houfe of Fame,
The palace fill of tongues, of eues, of ears:
The Woods are rufhleffe, dreaded, defe, and dull:
There fpake, and firke braye Boyes, & take your tumes.
There ferue your lufts, fadow'd from heauens eye,
And recall in _Lavinia's_ Trefurie.

_Chi._ Thy counfell Lad smells of no cowardife.

_Deme._ _Sufeaut nefas_, till I finde the freames,
To coole this heat, a Charme to calme their fits,
_Per Sigia per mare_Feбор.

Exeunt.

Enter _Titus Andronicus_ and his three fones, making a noyfe with Romes and borones, and _Murcia._

_Tit._ The hunt is vp, the morne is bright and gray,
The fields are fragrant, and the Woods are greene,
Vconce heere, and let vs make a bay,
And wake the Emperour, and his lovely Bride,
And rouze the Prince, and ring a hunters peale,
That all the Court may echo with the noyfe.
Sones let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the Emperours perfon carefully:
I have bene troubled in my sleepe this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath infpirt.'

_Winde Hornes._
Heere a cry of borones, and winde borones in a peale,then
Enter _Saturnus_, _Tamora_, _Bajianus_, _Lavinia_, _Chiron_, Deme, and their Attendants.

_Tit._ Many good morrowes to your Maiffies,]
Madam to you as many and as good.
I promisied your Grace, a Hunters peale.

_Satur._ And you have rung it fuitly my Lords,
Somewhat to earyl for new married Ladies.

_Baj._ _Lavinia_, how fay you?

_Lau._ I lay no:
I have bene awake two houres and more.

_Satur._ Come on them, horfe and Chariots letvs have,
And to our fport Madam, now thin ye fee,
Our Romaine hunting.

_Mur._ I have dogges my Lord,
Will rouze the proudent Panther in the Chafe,
And clime the higheft Pomontary top.

_Tit._ And I hine horfe will follow where the game
Makes way, and runnes like Swallowes ore the plaines

_Deme._ _Chiron_
To Be Sweeter

Which Heere
And His Harke Blood,
Which Euen though
And The My Whiles
(Let us) as a
And to repose sweet Gold for their variët,
That have their Almes out of the Empresse Cheef.

Enter Tamora to the Moore.

Tamo. My lovely Aaron,
Wherefore look't thou Said,
When everything doth make a Gleefull boast ?
The Birds chant a melody on every bush,
The Snake lies rolled in the cheerfull Sunne,
The Greene leaves quiter.with the cooling winde,
And make a choker'd shadow on the ground :
Under their sweete shade, Aaron let vs fit,
And whil'st the babbling Echo mock's the Hounds,
Replied thisty to the well tun'd-Horses,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let vs sit downes, and marker their yelping noyse:
And after conflict, such as was suppos'd.
The wandring Prince and Dido once enioy'd,
When with a happy forme they were surpris'd,
And Curtain'd with a Counfalie-keeping Caeu,
We may each wrought in the others armes,
(Our pastimes done) poffesse a Golden flumber,
Whiles Hounds and Horses, and sweet Melodious Birds
Be vnto vs, as is a Nurser Song
Of Lullabie, to bring her Babe asleepe.

Aron. Madame,
Though Venus govern your defires,
Saturn is Dominator over mine:
What signifies my deadly flaming eye,
My silence, and my Cloudy Melancholie,
My Reecie of Woolly hair, that now vncurled,
Even as an Adder when the doth vnowle
To do some fatall execution?
No Madam, these are no Venusiall signes,
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood, and reuenue, are Hammering in my head.
Harke Tamora, the Empresse of my Soule,
Which never hopes more heauen, then rests in thee,
This is the day of Doome for Bajfianus;
His Wifdom mult looke her tongue to day,
Thy Sonnes make Pillage of her Chastity,
And wash their hands in Bajfianus Blood.
Seest thou this Letter, take it vp I pray thee,
And gule the King this fatall plotted Scrowle,
Now question me no more, we are epied,
Heree comes a parcel of our hopefull Booty,
Which dreads not yet their lies destruction.

Enter Bajfianus and Lavinia.

Tamo. Ah my sweet M'lore:
Sweeter to me then life.
Aron. No more great Empresse, Bajfianus comes,
Be crore with him, and Hee goe fetch thy Sonnes
To backe the quarrrell what fo ere they be.
Baffi. Whom have we hearre?
Romes Royall Empresse,

Vnfurnisht of our well beeming troope?
Or is it Dian habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy Groues,
To see the generall Hunting in this Forreit?

Tamo. Sawcie controuler of our private gleeves,
Had I the power, that some day Dian bad:
Thy Temples should be planted presently,
With Horses, as was Actions, and the Hounds
Should drue vsn thei new transformed limbes,
Vnnannery Intruder as thou art.

Lad. Under your patience gentle Empresse,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in Horning,
And to be doubted, that your More and you
Are fangled forth to trye experiments:
Love held your husband from his Hounds to day,
'Tis pity they should take him for a brag.
Baffi. Believe me Queen, your swarth Cymeron,
Dost make your Honour of his bodies Hue,
Spotted, deteled, and abominable.
Why are you sequestred from all your traine?
Dismounted from your Snow-white goodly Steed,
And wandred hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied with a barbarous More,
If foule defire had not conducted you?

Lad. And being intercepted in your sport,
Great reaision that my Noble Lord, be rated
For Sackenliffe, I prays you let vs hence,
And let her joy her Rauen coloured loose,
This valley fits the purpos passing well.
Baffi. The King my Brother shall have notice of this.

Lad. I, for these slips have made him noted long,
Good King, to be so mightily abased.

Tamora. Why I have patience to endure all this?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dem. How now deere Soueraigne
And our gracious Mother,
Why dooth your Highnes looke fo pale and wan?

Tamo. Have I not reason thinkes you to look pale.
These two have tie'd me hither to this place,
A barren, defeteved vall you see it is.
The Trees though Sommer,yet forlorne and leane,
Ore-come with Mofse, and balefull Miftello.
Heree never shines the Sunne, heree nothing breeds,
Waffe the nightly Owe, or fatall Rauen:
And when they shewd me this abhorred pit,
They told me heere at dead time of the night,
A thousand Fiends, a thousand hissing Snakes,
Ten thousand swelling Toades,as many Vrchna,
Would make such fearefull and confused cryes,
As any mortall body hearing it,
Should fritis fall mad, or else die sudenly.
No Sinner had they told this hellish tale,
But fritis they told me they would binde me heree,
Vnto the body of a diimall you,
And leave me to this miserable death.
And then they call'd me foule Adulteresse,
Lilious God, and all the bitterest tearsmes
That euer eare did heare to such effect.
And had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeence on me they had executed:
Reuenge it, as you love your Mothers life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my Children.

Dem. This is a witnesse that I am thy Sonne. stab bim.
Ohi. And this for me,
Strok home to shew my strengthe.

Lad. I come Sentarin, say Barbarous Tamora.

For
For no name fits thy nature but thy owne,
Tam. Glue me thy poynland, you shal know my boyes
Your Mothers hand shall right your Mothers wrong.

Demet. Stay Madam heere is more belongs to her,
Firt thraft the Come, then afterbne the straw:
This Minion food upon her chalifty,
Vpon her Nuptiall vow, her loyalties.
And with that painted hope, braves your Mightineffe,
And shall the carry this vnto her grave?
Chi. And if she doe,
I would I were an Eunuch,
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead Trunk-Pillow to our luft.

Tam. But when ye have the hony we defire,
Let not this Waife out-lie vs both to fling.

Chir. I warrant you Madam we will make that fure:
Come Miitris, now perfore we will enjoy,
That nice-prefered selfe of yours.

Lau. Oh Tamara, thou beart a woman face.
Tam. I will not hear her speake away with her.
Lau. Sweet Lords intrest her hear me but a word.

Demet. Liiten faire Madam, let it be your glory
To fee her teares, but be your hart to them,
As varelenting flipt to drops of raine.

Lau. When did the Tigers young-ones teach the dam?
O do not leare her wrath, the taught it ther.
The milke thou fuc'd from her did turne to Marble,
Euen at thy Teat thou hadst thy tenderry, Yet ever Mother breeds not Sonnes alike,
Do thou intrest her thow a woman pity.

Chir. What,
Would'thou haue me proue my felle a baflard?

Lau. 'Tis true,
The Rauen doth not hatch a Larke,
Yet haue I heard, Oh could I finde it now,
The Lion mou'd with pity, did indure
To haue his Princely paws part all away,
Some fay, that Rauens fether forlorn children,
The whitl'll their owne birds familie in their nefts:
Oh be to me though thy hard hart fay no,
Nothing so kind but something pittifull.

Tam. I know not what it means away with her.

Lau. Oh let me teach thee for my Fathers fake,
That gauue thee life when well he might haue flaine thee:
Be not obdurate, open thy defe eares.

Tam. Had'thou in perforne feroxe offended me.
Euen for his fakke am I pittiflle
Remember Boyes I pow'd forth teares in vaine,
To faue your brother from the sacrificce,
But fierce Andronicus would not relent,
Therefore away with her, and vie her as you will,
The worse to her, the better lou'd of me.

Demet. Oh Tamara,
Be call'd a gentle Queene,
And with thine owne hands kill me in this place,
For 'tis not life that I haue beg'd so long,
Poor I was faine, when Bajaziens dy'd.

Tam. What beg'th thou then? fond woman let me go?
Lau. 'Tis prefent death I beg, and one thing more,
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell:
Oh keepe me from their worfe then killing luft,
And tumble me into some loathfome pit,
Where never mens eye may behold my body,
Doe this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So fhoul I rob my sweet Sonnes of their fee,
No let them fatifie their luft on thee.

Deme. Away,
For thou haft flaid vs heere too long.
Lau. Me. No Garace,
No womanhood? Ah beastily creature,
The bload and enemy to our generall name,
Confusion fall——

Chi. Nay then Ie stope thy mouth
Bring thou her husband,
This is the Hole where Aaron bid vs hide him.

Tam. Farewell my Sonnes, ffee that you make her fure,
Nere let my heart know merry cheere indeed,
Till all the Andronicus be made away:
Now will I hence to fseeke my lovely Moors,
And let my spleenfull Sonnes this Trull defloure.

Exit.

Enter Aaron with two of Titus Sonnes.

Aaron. Come on my Lord is, the better foote before,
Straight will I bring you to the lothome pit.
Where I eplied the Panther falt asleep.

Quint. My fhit is very dull what ere it bodes.

Mar. And mine I promife you, were it not for shame,
Well could I leaue our fport to fleep a while.

Quint. What art thou fallen?
What subtile Hole is this?
Whole mouth is couered with Rude growing Briars,
Upon whole leaes are drops of new-bled-blood,
As fresh as mornings dew dili'd on flowers,
A very fital place it femeles to me:

Speake Brother haft thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mar. Oh Brother,
With the diffal'd obied?
That euer eyfh with light made heart lamen.

Aaron. Now will I fetch the King to finde them heere,
That he thereby may have a lycel geffe,
How these were they that made away his Brother.

Exit Aaron.

Mar. Why doft not comfort me and helpe me out,
From this vnhallow'd and blood-stained Hole?
Quintus. I am surprifed with an vncouthe feare,
A chilling fweat ore-runs my trembling joynts,
My heart fulpends more then mine ele can fee.

Mar. To proue thou haft a true diuining heart,
Aaron and thou looke downe into this den,
And fee a fairefull light of blood and death.

Quintus. Aaron is gone,
And my compaffionate heart
Will not pernit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by furnife:
Oh tell me how it is, farre nere till now
Was I a child, to feare I know not what.

Mar. Lord Bajazien lies embrowed heere,
All on a hrape like to the slaughtred Lambe,
In this deteleted, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quint. If it be darke, how dooff thou know 'tis he?

Mar. Vpon his bloody finger he doth weare
A precious Ring, that lightens all the Hole:
Which like a Taper in some Monument,
Doth shin vpon the dead mens earthly cheekes,
And thews the ragged intralles of the pit:
So pale did shin the Moone on Piramus,
When he by night lay bath'd in Maiden b lood:
O Brother helpe me with thy fainting hand.
If faire hath made thee faint, as mee it haths,
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hatefull as Oitius miffle mouth.

Quint. Reach me thy hand, that I may helpe thee out,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Or wishing strength to doe thee so much good, I may be pluckt into the swallowing wome, Of this deep pit, poore Bajianus grace: I have no strength to plucke thee to the brinkes.

Enter. Nor I no strength to clime without thy help, Thy hand once more, I will not looke againe, Till thou art here aloft, or I below, Thou canst not come to me, I come to thee. Both fall in.

Satur. Along with me, Ile fee what hole is here, And what he is that now is leapt into it. Say, who art thou that lately didst defend, Into this gaping hollow of the earth? Marz. Thy handwip sonne of old Andronicus, Brought hither in a most vnluckie houre, To finde thy brother Bajianus dead. Sat. My brother dead? I know thou dost but left, He and his Lady both are at the Lodge, Upon the North-side of this pleasant Chafe, 'Tis not an houre since I left him there. Marz. We know not where you left him all alie, But out alas, heare heave we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, Andronicus, and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my Lord the King? King. Here be Tamora, though grief'd with killing griefe. Tam. Where is thy brother Bajianus? King. Now to the bottome doth thoy search my wound, Poore Bajianus heere lies murthered. Tam. Then all too late I bring this faultfull writ, The complot of this timelesse Tragedie, And wonder greatly that mans face can fold, In pleaing Smiles fuch murderous Tyrannie.

She giveth Saturnine a Letter.

Saturninus reads the Letter.

And if we miste to meete him banefully, Sweet hurtman, Bajianus'tis we meanes, Doe thou so much as dig the grave for him, Thou know'st our meaning, look for thy reward Among the Nettles at the Elder tree, Which ever fades the mouth of that faine pit: Where we decreed to bury Bajianus Doe this and purchase vs thy trusting friends.

King. Oh Tamora, was ever heard the like? This is the pit, and this the Elder tree, Looke first, if you can finde the huntman out, That should have murthered Bajianus heere.

Aron. My gracious Lord heere is the bag of Gold. King. Two of thy wheples, fell Curs of bloody kind Have heere bereft my brother of his life: Sirs drag them from the pit unto the prifon, There let them bide untill we haue deu'd Some newer heard of tortering paine for them.

Tam. What are they in this pit, Oh wondrous thing! How easiely murder is diciouer'd? Tin. High Emperour, vpon my feeble knee, Ibeg this boon, with tears, not lightly thed, That this fell fault of my accursed Sonnes, Accursed, if the fault be proud in them. King. If he be proud? you see it is apparant, Who found this Letter, Tamora was it you? Tamora. Andronicus himselfe did take it vp. Tit. I did my Lord, Yet let me be theri baile. For by my Fathers reverent Tombe I vow They shall be ready at your Highnes will, To answere their fussion with their lives, King. Thou shalt not baile them, fee thou follow me: Some bring the murthered body, some the murtherers, Let them not speake a word, the guilt is plaine, For by my foule, were there worne end then death, That end vpon them shold be executed. Tamo. Andronicus I will entreat the King, Fear not thy Sonnes, they shall do well enough. Tit. Come Lucius come, Stay not to talke with them.

Enter the Emperesse Sonnes, with Launia, her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out, and rauifhit.

Deme. So now goe tell and if thy tongue can speake, Who twas that cut thy tongue and rauifhit thee. Chi. Write downe thy mind, beway thy meaning fo, And if thy Humpes will let thee play the Scribe. Dem. See how with signes and tokens she can fowle. Chi. Goe home, Call for sweet water, wash thy hands. Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash. And so let's leaue her to her silent walks. Chi. And twere my caufe, I shold goe hang my self. Dem. If thou hast't hands to helpe thee knit the cord. Exeunt.

Windo Horae.

Enter Marcus from hunting, to Launia.

Who is this, my Niece that flies away fo fast? Cofen a word, where is your husband? If I do dreame, would all my wealth would wake me; If I doe wake, some Planet strike me downe, That I may flumber in eternall sleepe. Speake gentle Niece, what ferne Voygent hands Hath lopt, and hew'd, and made thy body bare Of her two branches, thowe sweet Ornaments Whole circletting shadowes, Kings have sought to sleep in And might not come to great a happiness As half thy Loun? Why dooth not speake to me? Alas, a Crimson river of warme blood, Like to a bubling fountain stir'd with wind, Doth rise and fall betweene thy Roied lips, Comming and going with thy hony breath. But sure some Terens hath defouler thee, And least thou should't detect them, cut thy tongue. Ah, now thou turn't away thy face for flame: And notwithstanding all this loffe of blood, As from a Conduit with their lipping Spouts, Yet doe thy cheekes looke red as Titans face, Blufhing to be encountered with a Cloud, Shall I speake for thee? shall I say 'tis so? Oh that I knew thy hart, and knew the beaft That I might raile at him to sake my mind. Sorrow concealed, like an Ouen flipp'd, Doth burne the hart to Cinders where it is. Faire Pheomela the but loft her tongue, And in a tedious Sampler fowerd her minde. But louely Niece, that meane is cut from thee, A crafter Terens half thou met withall, And he hath cut thofe pretty fingers of, That

The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

That could have better fowed then Philomel.
Oh had the monster scene those Lilly hands,
Tremble like Apean leaves upon a Lute.
And make the firk en frings delight to slife them,
He would not then have sought them for his life.
Or had he heard the heauenly Harmony,
Whch that sweet tongue hath made:
He would have dropit his knife and fell asleepe,
As Cerberus at the Thracian Poets feete.
Come, let vs goe, and make thy father blind,
For such a light will blinde a fathers eye.
One haures florne will drowne the fragrant meades,
What, will whole months of teares thy Fathers eyes?
Doe not draw backe, for we will mourne with thee:
Oh could our mourning eafe thy milery.

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Judges and Senecours with Titus two fannes bound,
Passing on the Stage to the place of execution, and Titus going before paching.

Tit. Heare me greue fathers, noble Tribunes say,
For pity of mine age, whole youth was spent
In dangerous warres, whilft ye security slept:
For all my blood in Romes great quarrel shed,
And for the bitter teares, which now ye see,
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheekes,
Be pittifull to my condemned Sonnes,
Whole foules is not corrupt as 'tis thought:
For two and twenty fannes I neuer wept,
Because they die in honours lofty bed.

Andronicus lyeth deare, and the Judges passe by him.
For these, Tribunes, in the duft I write
My harts deepe languor, and my foules sad teares:
Let my teares flanch the earths drie appetite.
My fannes sweet blood, will make it flame and blushe:
O earth! I will be friend thee more with raine
Exeunt that shall confult from these two ancient ruines,
Then youthfull April shall with all his shoures
In summers drought; Ile drop vpon thee still,
In Winter with warme teares Ile melt the fnow,
And keepe erenam full spring time on thy face,
So thou refus to drinke my deare fannes blood.

Enter Lucius with his weapon drawn.

Oh reuerant Tribunes, oh gentle aged men,
Vnbide my fannes, resit the doome of death,
And let me lay (that never wont before)
My teares are now preauling Gratours.
Lu.  Oh noble father, you lament in vaine,
The Tribunes heare not, no man is by,
And you recount your sorrowes to a Stone.
Tit. Ah Lucius for thy brothers let me plead,
Grave Tribunes, once more I intreat of you.
Lu. My gracious Lord, no Tribune heares you speake.
Tit. Why 'tis no matter man, if they did heare
They would not marke meoroh if they did heare
They would not pity me.
Therefore I tell my sorrowes boodles to the stones.

Who though they cannot answere my diffiret,
Yet in some sort they are better then the Tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale:
When I doe wepe, they humbly at my feete
Receive my teares, and seeme to wepe with me,
And were they but attired in graue weedes,
Rome could afford no Tribune like to thefe.
A Stone is as soft waue,
Tribunes more hard then ftones:
Affone is silent, and offendeth not,
And Tribunes with their tongues doome men to death.
But wherefore fland'ft thou with thy waun drawnne?
Lu. To rescue my two brotheres from their death,
For which attempt the Judges haue punctract.
My everlafting doome of banishment.
Tit. O happy man, they have befriended thee:
Why foole? Lucius, do thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wildernes of Tigers?
Tigers must praie, and Rome affords no prey
But me and mine: how happy art thou then,
From thefe devourers to be banished?
But who comes with your brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Mar. Titus prepare thy noble eyes to wepe,
Or if not so, thy noble heart to breake:
I bring confirming sorrow to thine age.
Tit. Will it confume me? Let me fee it then.
Mar. This was thy daughter.
Tit. Why Marcus to thee is.
Luc. Aye me this object kills me.
Tit. Faint-harted boy, arife and looke vpon her,
Speak Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handleffe in thy Fathers sight?
What foole hath added water to the Sea?
Or brought a faggot to bright burning Troy?
My grieue was at the height before thou cam'st,
And now like Nyfus it didst ninth bounds:
Glue me a Sword, Ie chop off my hands now,
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vaine:
And they have nur't this woe,
In feeding life:
In bootlesse prayer haue they bene held vp,
And they have fayed me to effeche effic.
Exeunt now all the servcie I require of them,
Is that the one will helpe to cut the other:
'Tis well Lavinia, that thou haft no hands,
For hands to do Rome seruice, is but vaine.
Luc. Spake gentle fitter, who hath martyr'd thee?
Mar. That deffalliful engine of her thoughts,
That blab'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torne from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where like a sweet melodius bird it fung,
Sweet varied notes inchanting euer ear.
Luc. Ohy lay thou for her,
Who hath done this deed?
Mar. Oh thus I found her fraying in the Parke,
Seeking to hide her life as doth the Deare
That hath recuelle some vncruing wound.
Tit. It was my Deare,
And he that wounded her,
Hath hurt me more, then he kild me dead:
For now I stand as one upon a Rocke,
Insuiron'd with a wilderneffe of Sea.
Who marks the wauning tide,
Grow wawe by wawe,
Exeunt

1. Oh gracious Emperour, oh gentle Aaron. Did euer Rauen Fang so like a Larke, That giues sweet tydings of the Sunnes virole? With all my heart, Ile fend the Emperour my hand, Good Aaron wilt thou help to chuse it off? Lu. Stay Father, for that noble hand of thine, That hath throwne downe so many enemies, Shall not be fent: my hand will serue the turne, My youth can better fpare my blood then you, And therefore mine hall saue my brothers lives. Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome, And rea'd aloft the bloody Battleaxe, Writing deftruction on the enemies Cattle? Oh none of both but are of high defert: My hand hath bin but idle, let it fere To ranfome my two nephews from their death, Then haue I kept it to a worthy end.

More. Nay come agree, whole hand hallgoe along For feare they die before their pardon come. & Mar. My hand hall goe. Lu. By heauen it hall thou goe. Ti. Sirs ftrue no more, fuch withered hears as these Are meete for plucking vp, and therefore mine. Lu. Sweet Father, if I hall be thought thy fonne, Let me redeeme my brothers both from death. Mar. And for our fathers fakle, and mothers care, Now let me fave a brothers love to thee. Ti. Agree between you, I will spare my hand. Lu. Then Ile goe fetch an Axe. & Mar. But I will vfe the Axe. Exeunt

Ti. Come hither Aaron, Ile deceuie them both, Lend me thy hand, and I will giue thee mine, & More. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest, And neuer wille I lie deceuie men fo: But Ile deceuie you in another fort, And that you'll say ere halfe an hour passe.

He cuts off Titus hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus again.

Ti. Now say you strie, what shall be, is dispatcht? Good Aaron giue his Maiefie me hand, Tell him, it was a hand that warded him From thousand dangers: bid him bury it: More hath it merited: That let it haue. As for my fonnes, fay I account of them, As jewels purchace at an euer man haue, But I hall giue thy hand, and giue thee mine, And yet deceuie too, because I bought mine owne. Aaron. I goe Andronicus, and for thy hand, Lucius. And by and by to haue thy fonnes with thee: Their heads I meane: Oh how this villany Dofh fit me with the very thoughts of it. Let foole doe good, and faire men call for grace, Aaron will have his foule backe like his face. & Exeunt

Ti. O heere I lift this one hand vp to heauen, And bow this feeble ruine to the earth, If any power pitties wretched teares, To that I call: what wilt thou kneele with me? Doe then deare heart, for heauen shall heare our prayers, Or with our fight weele breath the welkin dimme, And flaine the Sun with fogg against time cloudes, When they do hug him in their melting bofomes. & Mar. Oh brother speak with possibilities, And do not brake into these deepe extrematies.

Ti. Is not my sorrow deepe, hauing no botome? Then
Enter a missing or with two beads and a hand.

Mfl. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid,
For that good hand thou sentst the Emperor:
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons.
And hereis thy hand in scorne to thee sent backe:
Thy griefes, their spurs: Thy resolution mock'd,
That woe is to me thine upon your woe,
More then remembrance of my fathers death.
Exit.

Marc. Now let hot Ætna coole in Cicilie,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell,
These miseries are more then may be borne.
To weep with them that weep, doth ease some deale,
But sorrow floutd at, is double death.

Luc. Ah that this fhoot should make so deep a wound,
And yet detest d life not shrike theoret:
That ever death should let life beare his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe.

Marc. Alas poore hart that kiife is comfortles,
As frozen water to a starued flakke.

Titus. When will this fearfull flumber haue an end?

Marc. Now farwell flatterie, die Andronicus,
This doth no flumber, fee thy two sons heads,
Thy warlike hands, thy mangled daughter here:
Thy other banish'f sons with this deere fight
Strucke pale and bloodlesse, and thy brother I,
Even like a flony Image, cold and numme.
Ah now no more will I controule my griefes,
Run off thy thyriuer hurting, thy other his bide,
Gnawing with thy teeth, and be this dismall fight
The closing vp of our most wretched eyes:
Now is a time to forrime, why art thou still?

Titus. Ha, ha, ha,
Marc. Why doth thou laugh? it fits not with this hour.

Titus. Why have I no other teare to shed:
Befides, this forrow is an enemy,
And would vfurpe upon my watery eyes,
And make them blinde with tributarie teares.
Then which way shall I finde Reuenges Cauce?
For these two heads doe beame to speake to me,
And threat me, I shall never come to blifie,
Till all these mifchiefes be returned againe,
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come let me see what taske I have to doe,
You haueus people, circle me about,
That I may turne me to each one of you,
And sweare unto my soule to right your wrongs.
The vow is made, come Brother take a head,
And in this hand the other will I bear:
And Launia thou shalt be employd in these things:
Bear thou my hand sweet wench betweene thy teeth:
As for thee boy, goe get thee from my flight,
Thou art an Exile, and thou must not stay,
Hie to the Gothes, and raife an army there,
And if you lose me, as I thinke you doe,
Let's kiffe and part, for we have much to doe.

Marc. Lucius.

Luc. Farewell Andronicus my noble Father:
The wofull man that euer li'd in Rome:
Farewell proud Rome, till Lucius come againe,
Heloses his pledges dearer then his life:
Farewell Launia my noble fetter,
O would thou wert as thou to faire haue beene,
But now, nor Lucius nor Launia liues
But in oblivion and hateful griefes:
If Lucius liue, he will requit your wrongs,
And make proud Saturnine and his Empeffee
Bag at the gates likes Tarquin and his Queene.
Now I to the Gothes and raife a power,
To be reueng'd on Rome and Saturnine,

Marc. A Basket.

Enter Andronicus, Marcus, Launia, and the Boy.

An. So, so, now fit, and looke you eat no more
Then will preferue left to much strength in vs
As will requite these bitter woe's of ours.

Marcus vnknit that forrow-wreathen knot:
Thy Neece and I ( poore Creatures ) want our hands
And cannot passionate our tenfold griefes,
With fouled Armes. This poore right hand of mine,
Is left to tirrannize vpou my breath.
Who when my hart all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prifon of my flesh,
Then thus I thumppe it downe.
Thou Map of woe, that thus doft talk in signes,
When thy poore hart beates without ragious beating,
Thou canst not drinke it thus to make it still?
Wound it with fighting girles, kill it with prones:
Or get some little knife betweene thy teeth,
And luff against thy hart make thou a hole.
That all the teares that thy poore eyes let fall
May run into that fincke, and foaking in,
Drowne the lamenting foole, in Sea salt teares.

Marc. By brother fy, teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands vpou her tender life.

An. How now! Has forrow made thee doate already?
Why Marcus, no man should be mad but I:
What violent hands can the lay on her life:
Ah, wherefore doft thou vrge the name of hands,
To bid eEmune tell the tale twice ore
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O handle not the theame, to talke of hands,
Least we remember all that we have none,
Fie, fie, how Frantically I square my talk.
As if we should forget we had no hands:
If Marcus did not name the word of hands,
Come, lets fall too, and gentle girle cate this,
Heere is no drinke? Harke Marcus what she faies,
I can interpret all her martins signes.
She faies, she drinks no other drinke but teares
Breu'd with her forrow: mehf'd vpou her cheeks,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

ACTUS QUARTUS.

Enter young Lucius and Luainia running after him, and the Boy flies from her with his books under his arm.

Boy. Help Grandfier help me, my Aunt Luainia,
Follows me every where I know not why.
Good Uncle Marcus fee how swift the comer,
Alas sweet Aunt, I know not what you mean.

Mar. What means my Niece Luainia by theft signes?

Ti. Fearst not Lucius, somewhat doth she mean:
See Luainia see, how much the makes of thee:
Some whether would she have thee goe with her.
Ah boy, Cornelia never with more care
Read to her fones, then she hath read to thee,
Sweet Poetry, and Tullies Oratour:
Canst thou not giue wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My Lord I know not I, nor can I giue,
Venefice some fit or issue do poiffe her:
For I have heard my Grandfier lay full oft,
Extremity of griefes would make men mad.
And I have read that Heucwe of Troy,
Ran mad through forrow, that made me feare,
Although my Lord, I know my noble Aunt,
Loues me as deare as ere my mother did,
And would not but in fury fright my youth,
Which made me downe to throw my bookses, and flie
Caufes perhaps, but pardon me sweet Aunt,
And Madam, if my Uncle Marcus goe,
I will most willingly attend your Ladyship.

Mar. Lucius I will.

Ti. How now Luainia, Marcus what means this?
Some booke there is that she defires to fee,
Which is it girlie of theft? Open them boy,
But thou art deeper read and better skil,
Come and take choife of all my Library,
And do befal to thy forrow, till the heaven's
Reueale the dauned contriver of this deed.
What booke?
Why lifts the vp her armes in sequence thus?

Mar. I think the means that ther was more then one
Confedrate in the faft, I more there was:
Or elze to heauen she haues them to reuenge.

Ti. Lucius what booke is that the tofteth for?

Boy. Grandfier 'tis Ouida Metamorphosis,
My mother gave it me.

Mar. For love of her that's gone,
Perhapes she culd it from among the reft.

Ti. Soft, fo bully she turns the leauens,
Help her, what would the finde? Luainia hall I read?
This is the tragick tale of Pholomel?
Stanza of Tereus treasion and his rapte,
And rape I feare was roote of thine annoy.

Mar. See brother see, note how she quotes the leauens

Ti. Luainia, went thou thus surpriz'd sweet girlie, Raulhilt and wrong'd as Pholomela was?
For'd in the ruthless, yah, and gloomy woods?
See, fee, I fuch a place there is where we did hunt,
(O had we never, never hunted there)

Patern'd by that the Poet heere describes,
By nature made for murmurs and for rapts.

Mar. O why should nature build so foule a den,
Vifelle the Gods delight in tragedies?

Ti. Gius signes sweet girlie, for heere are none but friends
What Romaine Lord it was durft do the deed?
Or flunkie not Saturnine, as Targuine erits,
That left the Campe to finne in Lacreece bed.

Mar. Sit downe sweet Neece, brother sit downe by me,
Appolo, Pallas, Ioe, or Mercury,
Inpire me that I may this treasion finde.
My Lord looke here, looke heree Luainia.

He writes his Name with his laffes, and guides it with faiths and mearel.

This fandle plot is plains, guide if thou canst.
This after me, I haue writ my name,
Without the helpe of any hand at all.
Cur'd be that hart that forc'd me to that shift:
Write thou good Nephe, and here display at luft,
What God will have discouered for reuenge,
Heauen guide thy pen to print thy forrowes plaine,
That we may know the Tryatours and the truth.

She takes the staffe in her mouth, and guides it with her jumps and writes.

Ti. Oh doe ye read my Lord what the hath writs?

Strappum, Citron, Demetrius.

Mar. What, what, the lufffull fonnies of Tamora,
Performers of this halnous bloody deed?

Ti. Mogu! Dominator poli,
Tam lentus audito scelera, tam lentus vides?

Mar. Oh calme thee, gentle Lord: Although I know
There is enough written vpon this earth,
To fillre a mulrine in the mildest thoughts,
And arm the minds of infants to exclamations.
My Lord kneele downe with mee; Leonia kneele,
And kneele (sweet boy, the Romaine Heltes hope,
And aweare with mee, as with the woffull Feere
And father of that chaft disdouned Dame,
Lord Lucius Brutes averse for Lucree rap'e,
That we will profecute (by good aduice)
Mortall reuenge vpon these traitoroy Cothes,
And fee their blood, or die with this reproach.

Ti. Ti's faire enough, and you knew how.

But if you hunt Thele Beare-whelpes, then beware
The Dam will wake, and if the winde you once,
She's with the Lyon deeply fell in league.
And tolls him whilffe the palyeth on her backe,
And when he fleeces will he do what the lift.
You are a young huntman Marcus, let it alone:
And come, I will goe get a leafe of brace,
And with a God of fleeces will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry Northerne winde
Will blow these fands like Silets leaves abroad,
And wheres your lefson then. Boy what say you?

Boy. I say my Lord, that if I were a man,
Their mothers bed-chamber should not be lafe,
For these bad bond-men to the joyce of Rome.

Mar. I that's my boy, thy father hath full oare,
For his vagnetruefull country done the like.

Boy. And Vncle fo will I, and if I live.

Ti. Come goo with me into mine Armorie,
Lucius Ile fit thee, and withall, my joy.
Shall carry from me to the Empresse fonna,
Prefents that I intend to fend them both,
Come, come, thou'll do thy meffage, wilt thou not?

Boy. I with my daggar in their boomes Grandfire:

Lucius nooke to my houfe,
Lucius and Ile goo brace it at the Court,
I marry will we fir, and weele be waited on.

Exeunt. Mar. O heauens! Can you heare a good man groane
And not relent, or not compasion him?
Marcus attend him in his extase,
That hath more fears of forrow in his heart,
Then foes-mens marks vpon his batter'd shield,
But yet to luft, that he will not reuenge,
Reuenge the heauens for old Andronicus.

Exit. Enter Aron, Citron and Demetrius at one dordant and another do young Lucius and another, with a bundle of weapons, and woes writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius heeres the fonne of Lucius,
He hath some meffage to deliever vs.

Aron. I come mead meffage from his mad Grandfather.

Boy. My Lords, with all the humbless I may,
I greeete your honours from Andronicus,
And pray the Romane Gods confound you both.

Deme. Gramercie louely Lucius, what's the newes?
For villanies mark't with rape. May it please you,
My Grandfire well adult'd hast sent by me,
The goodliest weapons of his Armorie,
To gratifie your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome, for he bad me say:
And fo I do and with his gifts pretent
Your Lordshipp, when euer you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well,
And fo I leave you both: like bloody villains.

Integret iuicte et senis, non egit maury iacula me arce.

Chi. O 'tis a verfe in Horace, I know it well.
I read it in the Grammer long agoe.

Moore. I luft, a verfe in Horace tright, you haue it,
Now what a thing it is to be an Aife?
Heer's no found left, the old man hath found their guilt,
And fends the weapons wrapt about with lines,
That wound beyond their feeling) to the quick:
But were our witty Empresse well a foot,
She would applaud Andronicus conceit;
But let her ref, in her vernet a while.
And now young Lords, wa'ts toot a happy thare
Led vs to Rome strangers, and more then fo;
Captuies, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good before the Pallace gate,
To brane the Tribune in his brothers hearing.

Deme. But me more good, to fee great a Lord
Bafeully intime, and fend vs gifts.

Moore. Had he not reafon Lord Demetrius?
Did you not vfe his daughter very friendly?

Deme. I would we had a thousand Romane Dames
At such a bau, by turne to ferue our luft.

Chi. A bedrable with, and full of love.

Moore. Here's Lucius's but you mother for to say, Amen.

Chi. And that would the for twenty thousand more.

Deme. Come, let vs go, and pray to all the Gods
For our beloved mother in her paines.

Pray to the deuils, the gods have gluens vs over.

Deme. Why do the Emperors trumpets flourish thus?

Chi. Belike for joy the Emperour hath a fonna.

Deme. Soft, who comes heere?

Enter Nurfe with a blacke a Moore child.

Nur. Noy heavd not morrow Lords?

O tell me, did you fee Aaron the Moore?

Aron. Well, more or leffe, or nere a whit at all,
Heere Aaron is, and what with Aaron now?

Nurfe. Oh gentle Aaros, we are all vndone,
Now helpe, or owe bide thee eternmore.

Aron. Why, what a carterwailing doth thou keepe?
What doft thou wrap and fumble in thine armes?

Nurfe. O that which I would hide from heauens eye,
Our Empresse flame, and sately Romes dlgrace,
She is delievered Lords, she is delievered.

Aron. To whom?

Nur. Heere, what she is brought a bed?

Aron. Wel God give her good rest,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

What hath he sent her?

Nurse. A deuil.

Alan. Why then she is the Deuil's Dam: a joyful issue.

Nurse. A lyelee, dillmull, blacke & forrowfull issue,

Here is the babe as loathsome as a toad,

Among't the fairest breeders of our clime,

The Empress finds it these, thy flame, thy zeal,

And bids thee chrin it with thy daggars point.

Alan. Out you whore, is black so safe a hue?

Sweet blowes, you are a beauteous blossom faire:

Dame. Villaine what bale thou done?

Alan. That which thou canst not vnde.

Chi. Thou haft vndone our mother.

Dame. And therein hellish dog, thou haft vndone,

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choyce,

Accurst the off-spring to foule a fiend,

Chi. It shall not live.

Alan. It shall not die.

Nurse. Aaron it muft, the mother wils it fo.

Alan. What, muft it Nurse? Then let no man but I

Do execution on my flesh. And bide it.

Dame. Ile broach the Tapiole on my Rapers point:

Nurse glue it me, my word shall soone dispacht it.

Alan. Sooner this word shall plough their bowells vp.

Stay murtherous villains, will you kill your brother?

Now by the burning Tapers of the skie,

That's done fo brightely when this Boy was goy,

He dies upon my Semitars sharpe point,

That touches this my first borne sone and heire.

I tell you young-lings, not Encadinus

With all his threatening band of Typhon broode,

Nor great Altidor nor the God of warre,

Shall cease this prey out of his fathers bands;

What, what, ye fanguine shallow harte Boyses,

Ye white-limb'd walls, ye Ale-houfe painted signes,

Cote-blacke is better then another hue,

In that it fomes to beare another hue:

For all the water in the Ocean,

Can neuer turne the Swans blace legs to white,

Although the lave them hauely in the flow:

Tell the Emprefle from me, I am of age

To keepe mine owne, excuse it how can.

Deme. Will thou betray thy noble mistris thus?

Alan. My mistris is my mistris: this my felfe,

The vigour, and the picture of my youth:

This, before all the world do I preferre,

This mauer all the world will I keepe safe,

Or fome of you shall moake it for me in Rome.

Dame. By this our mother is for ever sham'd.

Chi. Rome will defpife her for this foule escape.

Nur. The Empereur in his rage will doome her death.

Chi. I blsth to thinke vpon this ignominie.

Alan. Why there's the privilege your beauty bears:

Fie treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counfels of the hart:

Heer's a young Lad fram'd of another leere,

Looke how the blace flaue smiles vpon the father;

As who shold say, old Lad I am thime owne,

He is your brother Lords. And blest by God

Of that felde blood that first gave life to you,

And from that wombe where you imprifoned were

He is infranchised and come to light:

Nay he is your brother by the father side,

Although my face be flame'd in his face.

Nurse. Aaron what is it that I lay vnto the Emprefle?

Deme. Adulte thee Aaron, what is to be done,

And we will all subscribe to thy aduife:

Sauc thou the child,fo we may all be safe.

Alan. Then fit we downe and let vs all confult.

My fonne and I will haue the winde of you:

Keepe there, now talke at pleasure of your safety.

Deme. How many women faw this childe of his?

Alan. Why so braue Lords, when we alone in league

I am a Lambe but if thou braue the More,

The chafed Bore, the mountaine Lyonelle,

The Ocean fwiels not fo at Aaron formes:

But fay agayne, how many faw the childe?

Nurse. Cornelia, the midwife, and my felfe,

And none elfe but the delierued Emprefle.

Alan. The Emprefle, the Midwife, and your felfe,

Two may keepe counfelf, when the the third's away:

Goe to the Emprefle, tell her this I fay,

He kile her Wecke,wecke,do cries a Pige prepared to th'pit.

Deme. What mean'th it now Aaron?

Wherefore didn't thou this?

Aaron. O Lord fir, 'tis a deed of pollicie?

Shall the lie to betray this guilt of our's:

A long tong'd babling Goliff? No Lords no:

And now be it knowne to you my full intent.

Not farre, one Mulfous my Country-man

His wife but yesternight was brought to bed,

His childe is like to her,faire as you are:

Goe paccle with him, and glue the mother gold,

And tell them both the circumstance of all,

And how by this their Childe shall be aduau'd,

And be receivd for the Emperours heyre,

And subfleted in the place of mine.

To caime this tempett whirling in the Court,

And let the Emperour dandle him for his owne.

Harke ye Lords, ye fe fe I haue givn her phylicke,

And you must needs beftow her funeral,

The fields are neere, and you are gallant Gromes:

This done, fee that you take no longer daies

But fend the Midwife prefently to me.

The Midwife and the Nurfe well made away,

Then let the Ladies tattle what they pleafe.

Chi. Aaron I fee thou wilt not truft the ayre with fe

Deme. For this care of Tamorrs,

Her fel's, and hers are highly bound to thee.

Aaron. Now to the Gothes, as fwiit as Swallow flies,

There to dispofce this trauforest in mine armes,

And fcretly to greate the Emprefle friends:

Come on you thick-lipt-flaue, le beare you hence,

For it is you that puts vs to our shift's:

Ie make you feed on berries, and on roots,

And feed on curds and whay, and fucke the Gothe,

And caffan in a Caue, and bring you vp

To be a warriour, and command a Campe.

Exit.

Enter Titus, old Marcus, young Lucius, and other gentlemen with boyes, and Titus bears the armes with

Letters on the end of them.

Tit. Come Marcus, come, kinemen this is the way.

Sir Boy let me fee your Archerie,

Looke ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straignt:

Terres Africaines, be you remembered Marcus.

She's gone, she's fled, firs take you to your tooles,

You Colens shall goe found the Ocean:

And call your neithraply you may find her in the Sea,

Yet ther's as little iud betwixt that Land:

No Publius and Sempronius, you must doe it,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Enter the Clowne with a basket and two Pigeons in it.

Tity. Newes, newes, from heauen, Marcus the post is come. Sirrah, what tidings? haue you any letters? Shall I haue Justice, what sayes Iupiter?

Clowne. No the Libbettaker, he sayes that he hath taken them downe againe, for the man must not be hang'd till the next weeke.

Tit. Why, did'st thou not come from heauen?

Clowne. From heauen? Alas sir, I never came there, God forbid I should be so bold, to preffe to heauen in my young daies. Why I am going with my pigeons to the Tresnall Plebs, to take vp a matter of brawle, betwixt my Uncle, and one of the Emperiall men.

Mar. Why sir, that is as fit as can be to ferue for your Oration, and let him deliver the Pigeons to the Emperour from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an Oration to the Emperour with a Grace? Clowne. Nay truly sir, I could not say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, can you with a Grace deliver a Supplication?

Clowne. I sir.

Tit. Tituples. Then here is a Supplication for you, and when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneele, then kill his foot, then deliver vp your Pigeons, and then looke for your reward. He be at hand sir, fee you do it brullly.

Clowne. I warrant you sir, let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah haue thout a kniffe? Come let me fee it, Heere Marcus, hold it in the Oration, For thou hast made it like an humble Supplicant; and when thou hast given it the Emperour, Knocke at my doore, and tell me what he sayes.

Clowne. God be with you sir, I will.

Tit. Come Marcus let vs goe, Publius follow mee.

Exeunt.

Enter Emperour and Emperesse, and her two sons, the Emperour brings the Arrows in his hand that Titus flie at him.

Satur. Why Lords, What wrongs are thefe I was ouer sene An Emperour in Rome thus ouerborne, Troubled, Confronted thus, and for the extent Of eual Justice, vil'd in such contempt? My Lords, you know the mightfull Gods, (How euer thefe disturburs of our peace But in the peoples ears there nought hath paizd, But euen with law against the willfull Sannes Of old Andronicus. And what and if His forrowes haue to ouerwhelm'd his wits, Shall we be thus affrighted in his wreakes, His fits, his frenzie, and his utterneffe? And now he writes to heauen for his redresse. See, heeres to Ioue, and this to Mercury,

This
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

This to Apollo, this to the God of warre:
Sweet frowles to file to the streets of Rome:
What's this but Libelling against the Senate,
And blazoning our Injustice every where?
A goodly humour, is it not my Lords?
And who would say, in Rome no Justice were.
But if I live, his fained exsitus
Shall be no shelter to these outrages:
But he and his shall know, that Justice lives
In Saturnis health: whom if he fleope,
He'll to awake, as he in fury shall
Cut off the proud Conspirator that lives.

Tamo. My gracious Lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, Commander of my thoughts,
Calme thee, and bear the faults of Titus age,
The effects of sorrow for his valiant Sonnes,
That threats in course of him revenge, and fear'd his heart;
And rather comfort his distreßed plight,
Then prostrate the meanest or the best
For these contempes. Why thus it shall become High witted Tamora to glose with all:

Aside.

Enter Clowe.

How now good fellow, wouldst thou speake with vs?
Clow. Yea forsooth, and your Milleship be Emperill.
Tam. Emperill I am, but yonder sits the Emperour.
Clow. 'Tis he, God & Saint Stephen give you good den;
I have brought you a Letter, & a couple of Pigion's here.

He reads the Letter.

Suru. Goe take him away, and hang him prefently.
Clow. How much money must I have?
Tam. Come flourah you must be hang'd.
Clow. Hang'd? I her Lady, then I have brought up a neck
To a faire end.

Suru. Delightful and intollerable wronges,
Shall I endure this monfrous villany?
I know from whence this name defile proceeds;
May this be borne? As if his traytour Sonnes,
That dy'd by law for murther of our Brother,
Have by my meanes beene butcher'd wrongfully?
Goe dragge the villain lither by the hair,
Nor Age, nor Honour, shall shape priviledge:
For this proud mocke, lie be thy younger man:
Sly frantick wretch, that holp't to make me great,
In hope thy selfe should governe Rome and me.

Enter Quintus Emillius.

Suru. What newses with thee Emillius?
Emill. Arme my Lords, Rome never had more caufe,
The Gothes have gather'd head, and with a power
Of high refulved men, bent to the fpyole
They hither march amaine, vnder conduce
Of Lucius, Sonne to old Andronicus;
Who his harts in couer to hide, and to do
As much as euer Coriolanus did.
King. Is warlike Lucius Generall of the Gothes?
These tydings nip me, and I hang the head
As flowers with froth, or graffe beat downe with stormes:
I, now begins our fowres to approach,
'Tis he the common people love fo much,
My felle hath often heard them say,
(When I have walked like a private man)
That Lucius banishment was wrongfullly,
And they have wilfe that Lucius were their Emperour.
Tam. Why should you fcare? Is not our City strong?

King. I, but the Citizens fauor Lucius,
And will resolt from me, to succour him.
Tam. King, be thy thoughts Imperious like thy name.
Is the Sunne dim'd, that Gras do flie in it?
The Eagle fuffers little Birds to finge,
And is not carefull what they meane thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings,
He can at pleafure fint their melancholy.
Even to mayef thoy, the giddy men of Rome,
Then clear the thy spirit,for know thou Emperour,
I will enchaunt the old Andronicus,
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous
Then bates to fish, or hony flakes to shepe.
When as the one is wounded with the bate,
The other rotted with delicious foode.

King. But he will not entreat his Sonne for vs.
Tam. If Tamora entreat not him, then he will,
For I can smooth and fill his aged ear,
With golden promifes, that were his heart
Almoft Impregnable, his old eares deafe,
Yet shold both ear and heart obey my tongue.
Goe thou before to our Embaffadour,
Say, that the Emperour requests a parly
Of warlike Lucius, and appoinst the meeting.
King. Emillius do this message Honourably,
And if he stand in Hoftage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.
Emill. Your bidding shall I do effeectually.

Exit. Tam.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the Art I have,
To plucke proud Lucius from the warlike Gothes.
And now sweet Emperour be blythe againe,
And bury all thy feare in my deuiles.

Suru. Then goe faucelently and plead for him.

Exit.

Actus Quintus.

Flourish. Enter Lucius with an Army of Gothes,
with Drum and Souldiers.

Luc. Approved warriours, and my faithfull Friends,
I have receiued Letters from great Rome,
Which dignifies what hate they beare their Emperour,
And how defirous of our fight they are.
Therefore great Lords, be as your Titles witneffe,
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs,
And wherein Rome hath done you any feate,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

Goth. Brave flip, sprung from the Great Andronicus,
Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort,
Whose high exploits, and honourable Deeds,
Ingratefull Rome requires with foul contempt:
Schoild in vs, weele follow where thou lead'st,
Like flinging Bees in hotter Sommer's day,
Led by their Maitre to the flowerd fields,
And be aueg'd on cursed Tamora:
And as he faith, so fay we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank you, and I thanke you all.
But who comes heere, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth leading of Aaron with his child in his arms.

Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I fraid,
To gaze upon a ruinous Monarchie,

And
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

And as I earnestly did fixe mine eye
Upon the wafted building, sudainely
I heard a childly cry unnderneath a wall:
I made vnto the noyle, when loone I heard,
The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:
Peace Tawny, saye, halfe me, and halfe thy Dam,
Did not thy Hue bewray whofe best thou art?
Had nature lent thee, but thy Mother looke,
Villaine thou might'nt have bene an Emperour,
But where the Bull and Cow are both milk-white,
They never do beget a coile-blacke-Calfe:
Peace, villaine peace, euin thus he rates the babe,
For I must beeare thee to a trusty God,
Who when he knowes thou art the Emperresse borne,
Will hold thee dearly for thy Mothers sake,
With this, my weapon drawne I rught upon him,
Surpris'd sudainely, and sought him either
To vfe, as you thinke needful of the man.
Luci. Oh worthy God, this is the incarnate deuill,
That rob'd Androicinus of his good hand:
This is the Pearle that pleat's your Emperresse eye,
And here's the Baule Fruite of his burning luft.
Say wall-p'y flauce, whether would'ft thou convey
This growing Image of thy fend-like face?
Why doft not speake, what doth not a word?
A halter Souldiers, hang him on this Tree,
And by his side, in Fruits of Baffardie.

Aren. Touch not the Boy, he is of Royall blood.
Luci. Too like the Syre, for euery being good.
Firft hang the Child that he may see it sparril,
A fight to vxe the Fathers foule withall.

Aren. Get me a Ladder Lucini, take the Childe,
And beare it from me to the Emperesse:
If thou do this, Ile shew thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantag thee to hear;
If thou wilt not, befall what may befal,
Ile speake no more: but vengeance rote you all.
Luci. Say on, and if it please me which thou speakest,
Thy child shall live, and I will see it Nowright.
Aren. And if it please thee? why affaye thee Lucius,
'Twill vexe thy foule to hear what I shall speake:
For I must talke of Marthers, Rapes, and Maffaces,
Acts of Blacke-night, abominable Deeds,
Compleats of Mitchiles, Trogion, Villaines.
Ruffhelt to hear, yet pittiously preform'd,
And this child all beuried by my death,
Vnleefe thou speare to me thy Childe shall live.
Luci. Tell on thy minde,
I say thy Childe shall live.

Aren. Swere that he shall, and then I will begin.
Luci. Who shoul I swere by, Thou beleucent no God,
That graunted, how can't thou beleuence an oath?
Aren. What if I do not, as indeed I do not,
Yet for I know thou art Religious,
And haft a thing within thee, called Conscience,
With twenty Popish tricks and Ceremonies,
Which I have seene thee carefull to obtaine:
Therefore I vrged thy oath, for that I know
An Idiot holds his Bambles for a God,
And keps the oath which by that God he sweares,
To that Ile vrg him; therefore thou shalt vow
By that fame God, what God so ere it be
That thou adorest, and haft in reuerence,
To face my Boy, to nourish and bring him vp,
Ore else I will discouer ought to thee.

Luci. Even by my God I swear to thee I will,
Aren. First know thou,
I begot him on the Empresse,
Luci. Oh most Infaitate luxurious woman!

Aren. Tut Lucini, this was his deed of Charlie,
Tout that which thou failet hear of me anon
'Twas her two Sonsnes that murdered Baffanius,
They cut thy Siffers tongue, and rauifht her,
And cut her hands off, and trim'd her as thou faw't.
Luci. Oh detestable villaine!
Call it thou that Trimming?
Aren. Why she was waft, and cut, and trim'd,
And'twas trim sport for them that had the doing of it.
Luci. Oh barbarous beastly villaines like thy selfe!

Aren. Indeede, I was their Tutor to inuict them,
That Codding spirit had they from their Mother,
As faire Carde as earth:

That bloody minde I think they learn'd of me,
As true a Dog as euer fought at head.
Well, let my Deeds be winneffe of my worth;
I trayn'd thy Bretheren to that guillifull Hole,
Where the dead Corps of Baffanius lay:
I wrote the Letter, that thy Father found,
And hid the Gold within the Letter mention'd.
Confederate with the Queene, and her two Sonsnes,
And what not done, thou haft caufe to rue,
Wherein I had no froke of Mitcheife in it.
I play'd the Chester for thy Fathers hand,
And when I had it, drew my felle apart,
And almoft broke my heart with extreme laughter.
I pried me through the Creuse of a Wall,
When for his hand, he had his two Sonsnes heads,
Behold his tears, and laught fo heartily,
That both mine eyes were rainie like to his:
And when I told the Emperesse of this sport,
She founded almoft at my pleasing tale,
And for my taylgs, gave me twenty kiffes.

Goth. What canst thou say all this, and neuer blufh?

Aren. I like a blacke Dogge, as the saying is.
Luci. Art thou not forry for these hainous deedes?
Aren. Yea, that I had not done a thousand more:
Even now I curfe the day, and yet I thinke
Few come within few compaste of my curfe,
Wherin I did not come Notorious ill,
As kill a man, or elle deuile his death,
Raufh a Maid, or plot the way to do it,
Aufe some Innocent, and forwairre my felle,
Set deadly Emnity betweene two Friends,
Make poore mens Cattell breake their neckes,
Set fire on Barnes and Haylackes in the night,
And bid the Owners quaene them with the teares:
Oft hauie I dig'd vp dead men from their graves,
And yet them vpright at their deere Friends doore,
Even when their forewes almoft was forgot,
And on their delicines, as on the Barkes of Trees,
Hauie with my knife caried in Romaine Letters,
Let not your forrow die, though I am dead.
Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things
As willingly, as one would kill a Fly,
And nothing greuese me hardly in these,
But that I cannot doe ten thousand more.
Luci. Bring downe the diuell, for he must not die
So sweet a death as hanging preffently.
Aren. If there be diuells, would I were a deuill,
To line and burne in eueryting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,

But
But to torment you with my bitter tongue.

Luc. Sirs flay his mouth, & let him spake no more. Enter Emilius.

Goth. My Lord, there is a Meffenger from Rome
Defines to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come neere.

Welcome Emilius, what the news from Rome ?

Emi. Lord Lucius, and you Princes of the Gothes,
The Romaine Emperour greetes you all by me,
And for he vnderstands you are in Armes,
He crazes a parly at your Fathers house.
Willing you to demand your Hoftages,
And they shall be immediately delivered.

Goth. What fies our General ?

Luc. Emilius, let the Emperour give his pledges
Unto my Father, and my Vncle Marcus.

Flourish.

And we will come : march away.

Enter Tamora, and her two Sons disguised.

Tam. Thus in this strange and sad Habillament,
I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say, I am Revenge fent from below,
To loynge with him and right his haunis wrongs:
Knocke at his fudy where they fay he keepes,
To ruminat strange plots of the Reuenge,
Tell him Revenge is come to loyne with him,
And worke confusion on his Enemies.

They knocke and Titus opens his fudy door.

Tit. Who doth molest my Contemplation ?
Is it your tricke to make me ope the door,
That fo my fad decrees may file away,
And all my fludie be to no effect ?
You are decei'd,for what I meant to doe,
See here in bloody lines I have fict downe :
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee,

Tit. No not a word : how can I grace my tale,
Wanting a hand to give it action,
Thau haft the ods of me, therefore no more.

Tam. If thou did ft I know me,
Thou would'ft talke with me.

Tit. I am not mad, I know thee well enough,
Wittife this wretched flump,

Wittife the light fironm lines,

Wittife these Trenches made by griefe and care,
Wittife the tyring day, and heavtie night,
Where is the newre, that I may find out
For our proud Emprefse, Mighty Tamora:
Is not thy comming for my other hand ?

Tam. Know thou fad man, I am not Tamora,
She is thy Enemy, and thy Friend,
I am Revenge fent from th?Infernal Kingdom,
To ease the gnawing Vulture of the mind,
By working wraeffull vengeance on my Foes:
Come downe and welcome me to this worlds light,
Conferre with me of Murder and of Death,
That's not a hollow Cauze or lurking place,
No Vait obfcurity, or Miftie vale,
Where bloody Murther or deteated Rape,
Can cooch for fear, but I will finde them out,
And in their cares tell them my dreadfull name,
Reuenge, which makes the foule offencers quake.

Art thou Revenge? and art thou fent to me,
To be a torment to mine Enemies?

Tam. I am, therefore come downe and welcome me.
Enter Marcus.

Tit. Marcuc my Brother, 'tis fit Titus calls,
Go gentle Marcus to thy Nephew Lucius,
Thou shalt enquire him out among the Goths,
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest Princes of the Goths,
Bid him encampe his Soldiery where they are,
Tell him the Emperor, and the Emperesse too,
Feasts at my house, and he shall Feast with them,
This do thou for my love, and so let him,
As he regards his aged Fathers life.

Luc. This will I do, and soon returne againe.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me,
Or els Ile call my Brother backe againe,
And cleave to no reuenge but Lucius.

Tam. What say you Boyes, will you bide with him,
While I goe tell my Lord the Emperour,
How I have govern'd our determined left?
Yeeld to his Humour, smooth and speake faire him,
And tarry with him till I turne againe.

Tit. I know them all though they suppose me mad,
And will ore-reach them in their owne deuices,
A payre of cursed hell-hounds and their Dam.

Dem. Madam depart at pleasoure, leave vs here.

Tam. Farewell Andronicus, reuenge now goes to
To lay a complot to betray thy Foes.

Tit. I know thou dost, and sweet revenge farewell.
Chit. Tell vs old man, how shall we be imploy'd?

Tit. Tut, I have worke enough for you to doe,
Publius come hither, Catius, and Valentine.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you thefe two?

Pub. The Emperesse Sonnes

Tam. I take them, Chiron, Demetrius.

Titus. Fie Publius, fie, thou art too much deceu'd,
The one is Murder, Rape is the others name,
And therefore bind them gentle Publius,
Catius, and Valentine, lay hands on them,
Oft have you heard me with for fuch an houre,
And now I find it, therefore binde them faire.
Chit. Villaines forbeare, we are the Emperesse Sonnes.

Pub. And therefore do we, what we are commanded.
Stop close their mouths, let them not speake a word,
Is he bane bound, looke that you binde them fast.

Enter Titus Andronicus with a knife, and Lauinia with a Bafon.

Oh Villaines, Chiron, and Demetrieus,
Here stand the spring whom you have stain'd with mud,
This goodly Sommer with your Winter mixt,
You kil'd her husband, and for that vill'd fault,
Two of her Brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off, and made a merry jest,
Both her sweet Hands, her Tongue, and that more deere
Then Hands or tongue, her spotiffe Chaffity,
Ihumane Traytors, you constrain'd and for't.
What would you say, if I should let you speake?
Villaines for shame you could not beg for grace.
Harke Wretchts, how I meant to misrty you,
This one hand yet is left, to cut your throats,
Whil't that Lauinia tweeke her flumps doth hold:
The Balon that receiues your guilty blood.
You know your Mother means to feast with me,
And calls her selfe Reuenge, and thinkes me mad.
Harke Villaines, I will grin'd your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it, Ile make a Paffe,
And of the Paffe a Coffin I will rearre,
And make two Passes of your flamefull Heads,
And bid that trumpter your unhallowed Dam,
Like to the earth swallow her increate.
This is the Feast, that I have bid her to,
And this the Banquet flie shall forset on,
For worfe then Phebus ou'd my Daughter,
And worfe then Preges, I will be reueng'd,
And now prepare your throats: Lauinia come,
Receive the blood, and when that they are dead,
Let me goe grin'd their Bones to powder small,
And with this hatefull Liquor temper it,
And in that Paffe let their vill'd Heads be bakte,
Come, come, be every one officious,
To make this Bancket, which I with might proue,
More ferre and bloody then the Centaures Feast.
He cuts their throats.
So now bring them in, for Ile play the Cooke,
And see them redly,gaint their Mother comes.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and the Goths.

Luc. Vnckle Marcus, since 'ts my Fathers minde
That I repair to Rome, I am content.
Goth. And ours with thine befall,what Fortune will.
Luc. Good Vnckle take you in this barbarous Moore,
This Ravenous Tiger, this accursed deuil,
Let him receiue no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the Emperous face,
For testimonie of her Soule proceedings.
And see the Ambush of our Friends be strong,
If ere the Emperour means no good to vs.

Areu. Some deuil whisper curfes in my eare,
And prompt me that my tongue may vter for th,
The Venerous Malelice of my dwelling heart.

Luc. Away Inhumanne Dogge, Unhallowed Slave,
Sirs, helpe our Vnckle, to convoy him in,
Flores. The Trumpets shew the Emperour is at hand.

Sound Trumpets. Enter Emperor and Emperisse, with Tribunes and others.

Sat. What, hath the Firemament more Suns then one?
Luc. What bootes it thee to call thy selfe a Sunne?
Marc. Rome? Emperour & Nephew brake the parie.
Those quarrels must be quietly debated,
The Feast is ready which the carefull Titus,

Hath
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

When with his solemne tongue he did aliofure
To loue-ficke Didoes fad attending ear,
The flor of that balefull burning night,
When fubfibGreekes furpriz'd King Priamus Troy:
Tell vs what Sinus hath bewichht our eares,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine,in,
That gies our Troy, our Rome the ciuill wound.
My heart is not complaft of flint nor feele,
Nor can I vter all our bitter griefe,
But floods of teares will drowne my Oratorie,
And break my very vittrance,even in the time
When it should moue you to attend me moft,
Lending your kind hand Commoleration.
Heere is a Captaine,let him tell the tale,
Your hearts will throb and weep to heare him speake.
Luc. This Noble Auditory,be it knoune to you,
That curfed Cibran and Demetrias
Were they that murdered our Emperor Brother,
And they it were that maifcled our Siffer,
For their fell souls our Brothers were beheaded,
Our Fathers teares defil'd, and kniffs soulen'd,
Of that true hand that fought Romeos quarrel out,
And fent her enemies vnto the graue.
Lafly, my felfe vnlkndly banihed,
The gates shut on me,and turn'd weeping out,
To beg reliefe among Rome's Enemies,
Who drownd the teares in my true teares,
And op'd their armes to imbrace me as a Friends:
And I am turned forth,be it knoune to you,
That have proue'd her welfare in my blood,
And from her bosome tooke the Enemies point,
Sheathing the steele in my aduentous body.
Alas you know, I am no Vaunter I,
My fcar can witneffe,dunbe although they are,
That my report is iuft and full of truth:
But loft,me thinkes I do diggrese too much,
Cytting my worthiefle prafce:Oh pardon me,
For when no Friends are by,men prafie themfelves,
Marc. Now is my turne to speake:Behold this Child,
Of this was Tamora delieverd,
The iffe of an Irreligious Moore,
Chiefes Architect and plotter of these woes,
The Villaine is alue in Titus houfe,
And as he is, to witneffe this is true.
Now judge what courfe had Titus to reuenge
Thesee wrongs, vnprifable paft patience,
Or more then any liuing man could bear;
Now you have heard the truth,what faie you Romeines?
Haue we done ought amifs? shew vs wherein,
And from the place where you behold vs now,
The poore remainder of Andronici,
Will hand in hand all headlong caft vs downe,
And on the ragged fames beat forth our brains,
And make a mutuall clofure of our houfe:
Speake Romeines speake,and if you fay we shall,
Loe hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.
Emili. Come come,thou reverent man of Rome,
And bring our Emporeur gentilly in thy hand,
Lucius our Emporeur for well I know,
The common voyce do cry it shall be fo.
Marc. Lucius,all hailie Rome Royall Emporeur,
Goe,goe into old Titus tortuworth houfe,
And let her heale that misbleving Moore,
To be adjuide's some difficult darthering death,
As punishment for his moft wicked life.
Lucius all hailie to Rome graciou Gouernour.

649
Lucius
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Luc.  Thankes gentle Romanes, may I gouerne so,
To heale Romes harms, and wipe away her woe.
But gentle people, giue me syne a-while,
For Nature putt me to a heawy taske:
Stand all aloofe, but Vackle draw you neere,
To shed obfoueious teares upon this Trunke:
Oh take this warme kiffe on thy pale cold lips,
Thefe sorrowfull drops upon thy bloud-flaine face,
The las true Duties of thy Noble Sonne.

Mar.  Teare for teare, and louing kiffe for kiffe,
Thy Brother Marcus tenders on thy Lips:
O were the rumme of these that I should pay
Countiefe, and infinite, yet would I pay them.

Luc.  Come hither Boy, come, come, and learne of vs
To melt in flowres: thy Grandfire lou'd thee well:
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee:
Sung thee asleepe, his Louing Breft, thy Pillow:
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Met, and agreeing with thine Infancie:
That respect: then, like a Louing Child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender Spring,
Because kinde Nature doth require it so:
Friends, shoulde affociate Friends, in Gleece and Wo.
Bid him farwell, commit him to the Graue,
Do him that kindneffe, and take leave of him.

Boy.  O Grandfire, Grandfire: even with all my heart
Would I were Dead, so you did Liue again.
O Lord, I cannot speake to him for weeping,
My teares will choake me, if I ope my mouth.

Romans.  You sad Andronicus, have done with woes,
Gius sentence on this execrable Wretch,
That hath bene breeder of these dire euents.

Luc.  Set him breft deepe in earth, and famish him:
There let him fland, and rave, and cry for fooide:
If any one releues, or pitties him,
For the offence, he dyes.  This is our doome:
Some flay, to see him fall'd in the earth.

Agr.  O why should wrath be mute, & Fury dumb?
I am no Baby I, that with base Prayers
I should repent the Evils I have done.
Ten thousand worfe, then ever yet I did,
Would I performe if I might have my will:
If one good Deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very Soule.

Lucius.  Some louing Friends conuey the Emp.; hence,
And gie him buriall in his Fathers graue.
My Father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith
Be cloed in our Houfholds Monument:
As for that heynous Tyger Tamora,
No Funerall Rite, nor man in mournfull Weeds:
No mournfull Bell shall ring her Buriall:
But throw her foureth to Beasts and Birds of prey:
Her life was Beast-like, and deuoud of pity,
And being fo, shall have like want of pity.
See Injurie done on Aaron that damn'd Moore,
From whom, our heavy hapnes had their beginning:
Then afterwards, to Order well the State,
That like Euents, may ne're it Ruinate.  Exeunt omnes.
THE TRAGEDIE OF

ROMEO and IVLIE.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, with Swords and Bucklers, of the House of Capulet.

Sampson.

Gregory: My word we'll not carry coales.
Greg. No, for then we should be Collars.
Samp. I mean, if we be in choller, we'll draw.
Greg. 1. While you live, draw your necke out o'th Collar.
Samp. I strike quickly, being mou'd.
Greg. But thou art not quickly mou'd to strike.
Samp. A dog of the house of Montague, moves me.
Greg. To moue, is to stirr: and to be valiant, is to stand:
Therefore, if thou art mou'd, thou runn'st away.
Samp. A dogge of that house shall moue me to stand,
I will take the wall of any Man or Maid of Montagues.
Greg. That thewes thee a weake flue, for the weakest goes to the wall.
Samp. True, and therefore women being the weaker Vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Montagues men from the wall, and thrust his Maides to the wall. (their men.)
Greg. The Quarrell is betweene our Mafter, and vs
Samp. 'Tis all one, I will shew my felfe a tyrannwitch when I have fought with the men, I will bee civil with the Maids, and cut off their heads.
Greg. The heads of the Maids?
Samp.1. the heads of the Maids, or their Maiden-heads,
Take it in what fentence thou wilt.
Greg. They must take it fence, that feel it.
Samp. Me they shall feel while I am able to fland:
And 'tis knowne I am a proper peece of fleth.
Greg. 'Tis well thou art not Fish: If thou had'ft, thou had'ft bene poore John. Draw thy Toole, here comes of the House of the Montagues.
Enter two other Servingmen.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrell, I will back thee
Sam. Fear me not.
Gre. No marrt: I fear thee.
Sam. Let vs take the Law of our fides;let them begin.
Gre. I will frowne as I pace by, & let the take it as they list
Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my Thumb at them, which is a difgrace to them, if they beare it.
Gre. Do you bite your Thumb at vs fir?
Samp. Do you bite my Thumbe, fir.
Gre. No.
Sam. Is the Law of our fide, if I say I?
Gre. No.

Sam. No fir, I do not bite my Thumbe at you fir: but I bite my Thumbe fir.
Gre. Do you quarrel fir?
Samp. Quarel fir no fir. (as you
Sam. If you do fir, I am for you, I ferue as good a man
Gre. No better?
Samp. Well fir.
Gre. Say better: here comes one of my masters kindmen.
Samp. Yes, better.
Gre. You Lye.
Rea. Part Foolies, put vp your Swords, you know not what you do.

Enter Quartel.

Tyb. What art thou drawne, among these heartlefe Hindes? Turne thee Benwolde, looke vpon thy death.
Rea. I do but keepe the peace, put vp thy Sword, or manage it to part these men with me.
Tyb. What draw, and talke of peace? I hate the word As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:
Hau'e at thee Coward.
Quartel.

Enter three or foure Citizens with Clubs.

Offi. Clubs, Bis, and Partition, strike, beat them downe with the Capulet, downe with the Montagues.
Enter old Capulet in b' GMme, and b' wife.
Cap. What noife is this?Giuve me my long Sword ho.
Wife. A crutch, a crutch: why call you for a Sword?
Cap. My Sword I say: Old Montague is come, And frouilhes his Blade In fght of me.
Enter old Montague, & his wife.
Moun. Thou villaine Capulet. Hold me not, let me go.
Wife. Thou shalt not fir a ftoole to fokee a Foe.
Enter Prince Exhales, with b' Traine.

Prince. Rebellious Subject's, Enemies to peace, Prophaners of this Neighbor-daine Stedd, Will they not heare? What hoce, you Men, you Beasts, That quench the fire of your pernicious Rage, With purple Fountaines iffuing from your Veines: On paine of Torture, from thoel bloody hands Throw your midtemper'd Weapons to the ground, And heare the Sentence of your moued Prince. Three ciuil Broyles, bred of an Ayery word, By thee old Capulet and Montague, Have thrice disturbed the quiet of our streets, And made Feria's ancient Citizens Calf by their Graue beffoming Ornaments, To wield old Partizans, in hands as old,
Cankred with peace, to part your Cankred hate,
If ever you disturb our streets againe,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time all the rest depart away:
You Capulet shall goe along with me,
And Montague come you this afternoone,
To know our Fathers pleasure in this cafe:
To old Free-towne, our common judgiment place:
Once more on paine of death, all men depart.
Exsunt.

Men. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroad?
Speake Nephew, were you by, when it began?

Ben. Heere were the ferants of your aduersarie,
And yours close fighting ere I did approach,
I drew to part them, in the infant came
The fiery Tubal, with his sword prepar'd,
Which as he breath'd defiance to my care,
He flour'd about his head, and cut the winde,
Who nothing hurt withall, hit him in forrce.
While we were enterchanging thrusts and blows,
Come more and more, and fought on part and part,
Till that the peace came, who parted either part.

Wife. O where is Romeo, fav you him to day?
Right glad am I, he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an houre before the worship Sun
Peer'd forth the golden window of the East,
A troubled mind drawe me to walke abroad,
Where vnderneath the grous of Sycamour,
That West-ward rooteth from this City siede:
So careely walking did I see your Sonne:
Towards him I made, but he was ware of me,
And glide into the court of the wood,
I measuring his afflictions by my owne,
Which then most fought, wher most might not be found:
Being one to many by my weary felde,
Purfued my Honour, not purfuing his
And gladly hum'd, who gladly fled from me.

Madam. Many a morning hath he there beene seene,
With teares augmenting the fresh mornings deaw,
Adding to clouds, more clouds with his deepe sights,
But all so foone as the all-cheering Sunne,
Should in the farthest East begin to draw
The shacle Curtains from Aurora bed,
Away from light shales home my heavy Sonne,
And private in his Chamber penne himselfe,
Shuts vp his windowes, locks faire day-light out,
And makes himselfe an artificiall night:
Blacke and portendous mists this humour prove,
Vaine good counsell may the caufe remove.

Ben. My Noble Vncle doe you know the caufe?

Madam. I neither know it, nor can learne of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any meannes?

Madam. Both by my selfe and many others Friends,
But he his owne afflictions counsellor,
Is to himselfe: I will not say how true
But to himselfe so secret and so close,
So farre from founding and discouery,
As is the bud bit with an enious worne,
Ere he can spread his sweete leues to the ayre,
Or dedicate his beauty to the same.
Could we but learne from whence his forrowes growe,
We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. See where he comes, so pleate you step aside,
Ile know his garnace, or be much deuide.

Rom. I would thou were so happy by thy stay,
To hear true thrife. Come Madam let's away.

Exsunt.
She is too faire too wife! fely too faire,
To merit blife by making me difpaire:
She hath forsworne to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead, that fhe to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul’d by me, forget to think of her.
Rom. O teach me how I fhould forget to think.
Ben. By giuing liberty vnto thine eyes,
Examine other beauties,
Es. ‘Tis the way to call her (exquifit) in question more,
These happy marks that kiffe faire Ladies brownes,
Being blacke, put vs in mind they hide the faire:
He that is brooken blind, cannot forget; The precious treasure of his eye fight lovt;
Shew me a Misfrefs that is paffing faire,
What doth her beauty ferue but as a note,
Where I may read who that paffing faire.
Farewell thou can‘t not teach me to forget,
Ben. He say that doctrine, or elfe die in debt.

Enter Capulet, Countr Paris, and the Clowne.
Capu. Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike, and ‘tis not hard I think,
For God hath made me to keep the peace.
Par. Of Honourable reckoning are you both,
And pitie ‘tis you live at sox fo long:
But now my Lord, what fay you to my fute?
Capu. But saying ore what I have laid before,
My Child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not beene the change of fourteen yeares,
Let two more Summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a Bride.
Par. Younger then the, are happy mothers made.
Capu. And tooe foone mar’d are those fo earlie made:
Earth hath swallowed all my hopes but she,
Shes the hopefull Lady of my earths:
But woe her gentle Parket her heart,
My will to her content, is but a part,
And thee agree, within her scope of choife,
Lyze my content, and faire according voice:
This night I hold an old accoutom’d Feast,
Whereeto I have invited many a Gueff,
Such as I love, and you among the store,
One more, most welcome makes my number more:
At my poor house, looks to behold this night,
Earth-treading flames, that make dark heauen light,
Such comfort as do lufy young men feel,
When well apparell’d April on the heele
Of limping Winter treads, even fuch delight
Among fresh Fennell buds shall you this night
Inhabit my houfe hear all, all ye:
And like her moft, whose merít moft shall be:
Which one more velv of many, mine being one,
May fland in number, though in reckoning none.
Comee with me: goo firth Trudge about,
Through faire Verona find thofe perfons out,
Whose names are written there, and to them fay,
My houfe and welcome, on their pleafure fay.

Ser. Find them out whose names are written.
Here it is written, that the Shoo-maker fhould meddle with his Yard,
And the Taylor with his Left, the Fisher with his Penfeil, and the Painter with his Nets.
But I am fent to finde thofe perfons whose names are wrt, & can never finde what names the writing perfon hath here writ (I mutt to the learnd) in good time.

Enter Benvolio, and Romeo.
Ben. Tut man, one fire burns out anothers burning,
One paine is defined by anothers anguifh:

Turne giddie, and be holpe by backward turning:
One delparate griefe, cure with anothers anguifh:
Take thou fome new infection to the eye,
And the rank poyton of the old wil die.

Rom. Your Plantan leaf leal is excellent for that.
Ben. For what I pray thee?
Rom. For your broken thin.
Ben. Why Romeo art thou mad?
Rom. Not mad, but bound more then a mad man is:
Shut vp in prifon, kept without my foode,
Whipt and tormented: and Golden good follow,
Ser. Godgigoden, I pray for can you read?
Rom. I mine owne fortune in my miferie.
Ser. Perhaps you have learn’d it without bookes:
But I pray you can read any thing you fee?
Rom. I, if I know the Letters and the Language.
Ser. Ye say honestly, red you merry.
Rom. Stay fellow, I can read.

He reads the Letter.
S Eigneur Martin, and his wife and daughter: County An-
Jilde, and his beautiful fiffers: the Lady widow of Otru-
Di, Simeone Placentio, and the lovely Notc: Mercutio and his brother Valentine: mine uncle Capulet his wife and daughters: my faire Niece Ruffaine, Louis Seigneur Valentine, & his Cifen Tybalt: Luiz and the lovely Helena.
A faire afsemble, whither should they come?

Rom. Whither? to supper?
Ser. To our houfe.
Rom. Whole houfe?
Ser. My Maifters.
Rom. Indeed I should have askt you that before.
Ser. Now I let tell you without asking. My maiftier is the great rich Capulet, and if you be not of the houfe of Montaguet I pray come and cruft a cup of wine. Reft you merry.

Ben. At this fame auncient Feast of Capulets
Sups the faire Ruffaine, whom thou do loue:
With all the admired Beauties of Verona,
Go thither and with vnattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I fhall fhow,
And I will make thee thinkly thy Swan a Crow.
Rom. When the beaten religion of mine eye
Mainrinues fuch faithfull, then turne teares to fire:
And thefe who often drown’d could never die,
Transparent Heretriques be burnt for liem.
One fairer then my loue: the all-fearing Sun
Nere faw her match, since first the world begun.
Ben. Try you faw her faire, none elfe being by,
Herfelfe pay’d with herfelf in either eye:
But in that Chriftall fcales, let there be wald,
Your Ladies loue againft some other Maid
That I will show you, flining at this Feast,
And the fhou (faint shell), well that now fheves beft.
Rom. Hee goe along, no fuch fight to be showne,
But to reioyce in splendor of mine owne.

Enter Capulet, Wife and Nutre.
Wife. Nutre what’s your daughte? call her forth to me.
Nutre. Now by my Maidenhead, at twelve yeares old
I had her come, what Lam:what Ladi bird, God forbid,
Where’s this Girls? what Init?

Enter Juliet.
Juliet. How now, who calls?
Nut. Your Mother.
Juliet. Madam I am heere, what is your will?
Wife. This is the matter: Nutre giue awele awhile, we mu mult talk in secret. Nurse come backe againe, I have remembered my daughter's of a pretty noted.

Nurse. Faith I can tell her age vnto an hour.

Wife. Shee's not fourteen.

Nurse. Ile lay fourteen of my teeth, And yet to my teene be it spokone, I have but foure, shee's not fourteen. How long is it now to Lammas tides?

Wife. A fortnight and odde dayes.

Nurse. Even or oddes, of all daies in yeare come Lammas Eve at night shal the be fourteen. Saffen & shee, God rest all Christian foules, were of an age. Well Saffen is with God, she was too good for me. But as I said, on Lammas Eve at night shall the be fourteen, that shall the marriage, I remember it well. 'Tis since the Earth-quake now eleven yeares, and the was wane'd I neuer shall forget it, of all the daies of the yeare, vpon that day: for I had then laid Worme-wood to my Dag sitting in the Sunne vnder the Doge-hope wall, my Lord and you were then at Mantua, nay I doe bear a braine. But as I said, when it did taie the Worme-wood on the nipple of my Dugge, and felt it bitter,pretty foule, to fee it teachie, and fall out with the Dugge, Shake quoth the Doue-houfe, 'twas no neede I throw the fire: for since that time it is a euen yeare,for then she could stand alone, nay br'th roode shee could runne, & waved all about: for euen the day before she broke her bow, & then my Husband God be with his foule, a was a merrie man, tooke vp the Child, yea quoth he, he'll shoue you off vnpon thy face? thou wilt fall backward when thou haue more wit, wilt thou not Iule? And by my holy-dam, the pretty wretch lefte crying, & said I: to fee now how a leuall shall come about. I warrant, & I shal lye a thousand yeares, I never should forget it: wilt thou not Iule quoth he? and pretty foule it flinted,and said I.

Old La. Inough of this, I pray thee hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes Madam,yet I cannot chafe but laugh, to thynke it should leaue crying, & say I: and yet I warrant it had vpon it brow, a bumble as big as a young Cockrels stone? A perilous knock, and it crie med bitterely. Yea quoth my husband, fall'll vpon thy face, thou wilt fall backward when thou commet to age: wilt thou not Iule? It flinted and said I.

Iule. And flint thou too, I pray thee Nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace I have done God marke thee too his grace thou with the prettie Babe that ere I affh, and I might lye to fee thee married once, I have my will.

Old La. Marry that marry is the very thame I came to talke of, tell me daughter Iule,

How stands your disposition to be Married?

Iule. It is an hour that I dreame not of.

Nurse. An hour, were not I thine onely Nurse, I would say thou hadst fuckt wisdome from thy trench.

Old La. Well think of marriage now,yonger then you Hearre in Perona, Ladies of efeeme, Are made already Morners. By my count thou was the prettiest Babe that ere I affh, and I might lye to fee thee married once, I have my will.

That you are now a Maid, thus then in breve:

The valiant Pars seekes you for his loue.

Nurse. A man young Lady, Lady, such a man as all the world. Why hee's a man of waxe.

Old La. Veronese Summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay here's a flower,infith a very flower.

Old La: What say you, can you love the Gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our Feast,

Read ore the volume of young Paris face,
And find delight, wriet there with Beauties pent
Examine every feuerial lineament,
And fee how one another lends content:
And what obcur'd in this faire volume lies,
Find written in the Margent of his eyes.
This precious Book of Love, this vnbound Louer,
To Beautifie him, onely lacks a Couer.
The fish lies in the Sea, and 's much pride
For faire without, the faire within to hide:
That Bookie in manies eyes doth share the glorie,
That in Gold clapes,Lockes in the Golden florie:
So you shall share all that he doth poiffe,
By hauing him, making your felte no kefe.

Nurse. No lefe, say biggerwomen grow by men.

Old La. Speake briefly, can you like of Paris loue?

Iuli. He looke to like, if looking liking moue.
But no more depe will I endart mine eye,
Then your content glues strength to make fiete.

Shall the Love be yours?

Enter Romeo, Mercutius, Benvollin, with five or six other Maskers, Torch-bearers.

Rom. What shal this speche be spokone for our excufe?
Or shall we on without Apologye?

Men. The date is out of such proludie,
Welle have no Cepheid,hood wintk with a skarfe,
Bearing a Tartars painted Bow of lath,
Skarring the Ladies like a Crow-keeper.
But let them mesure vs by what they will.
Welle mesure them a Measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a Torch, I am not for this ambling.
Being but heauy I will heare the light.

Mer. Nay gentle Rome, we must have you dance.
Rom. Not I believe me,you have dancing foole.
With nimble foole, I have a foule of Lead
So flakes me to the ground, I cannot moue.

Mer. You are a Louer, borrow Cepheid wings,
And foare with them aoue a common bound.
Rom. I am too farre earesmeied with his haft,
To foare with his light feathers, to to bound:
I cannot bound a pitch above dull wor.
Vnder louses heavy burthen doe I finke.

Hera. And to finke in it shoul you burthen louse,
Too great oppreffion for a tender thing.
Rom. Is loue a tender thing? It is too rough,
Too rude, too bitterous, and it pricks like thorne.

Mer. If loue be rough with you, be rough with loue,
Prickle louse for prickling, and you beat louse downe,
Gie me a Cafe to put my vilage in,
A Vifor for a Vilor, what care I
What curious eye doth quote determimates:
Here are the Beelte-browes shal blash for me.

Ben. Come knocke and enter, and no sooner in,
But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A Torch for me,let wants light of heart
Tickle the feneceffie rushes with their heele:
For I am prouerd with a Granadier Phrafe,
lie be a Candle-holder and looke on,
The game was nere fo faire, and I am done.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

Shall bitterly begin his fearefull date
With this nights resels and expire the terme
Of a depreed life clo'd in my brest
By some vile forfeit of vntrimy death.
But he that hath the hircage of my course,
Direct my fate: on luftie Gentlemen.

Enter Drum.

They march about the Stage, and Sursingome come forth with their napkins.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Where's Petron, that he helps not to take away?
He shall a Trencher I he scrape a Trencher?

1. When good menanan, shall lie in one or two mens hands, and they vnwaft too, 'tis a foule thing.

Ser. Away with the Joyntoole, remove the Courtcubboard, looke to the Plate: good thou, face mee a piece of Marchpane, and as thond me let, the Porter let in Sufan Grindfyne, and Nell, Anthonie and Petran.

2. I Boy readie.

Ser. You are lookt for, and cal'd for, askt for, & fought for, in the great Chamber.

1. We cannot be here and there too, chearly Boyes,
Be brick awhile, and the longer lurer take all.

Exeunt.

Enter all the Gufti and Gentlewomen to the Maskers.

1. Capu. Welcome Gentlemen,
Ladies that have their toes
Vnplagued with Cornes, will walk about with you:
Ah my Midtretles, which of you all
Will now deny to dance? She that makes dainty,
She ile Iware hath Cornes shall I come naere ye now?
Welcome Gentlemen, I have feme the day
That I have wore a Vifor, and could tell
A whispering tale in a faire Ladies ear
Such as would pleafe: 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone,
you are welcome Gentlemen, come Mufitians play:

Mighty plases: and the dance.

A Hall, Hall, glue roome, and note it Glories,
More light you knaues, and turne the Tables vp:
And quench the fire, the Roome is g owne too hot.
Ah firrah, this vnlookt for sport comes well:
Nay fit, nay fit, good Corn Capuler,
For you and I are not our douncing dyes:
How long 'tis now fince left your foles and I
Were in a Maske?

1. Capu. What man: 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much,
'Tis fince the Nuptiall of Lucentin,
Come Pencyoyf as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty yeares, and then we Maskt.

2. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more, his Sonne is elder sir:
His Sonne is thirty.

3. Cap. Will you teell me that?
His Sonne was but a Ward two yeares agoe.

Rom. What Ladie is that which doth inriche the hand
Of yonder Knight?

Ser. I know not sir.

Rom. O the doth teach the Torches to burne bright:
It feemes he hangs upon the cheekes of night,
As a rich Jewell in an Aristops care;
Beauty too rich for vse, for earth too deare:
So shewes a Snowye Dove trooping with Crowes,
As yonder Ladie ore her fellows showes;
The meaurse done, ile watch her place of hand,
And touching hers, make helde my rude hand.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

Did my heart love till now, forswear it fight,
For I never saw true Beauty till this night.

Tib. This by his voice, should be a Mantague.
Fetch me my Rapier Boy, what darest thou say,
Come hither, and with this antique face,
To Sherlock and come upon our Solomiet.
Now by the froke and Honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why now kinman, Wherefore thorne you so?

Tib. Vnleth this is a Mantague, our foe:
A Villaine that is hither come in spight,
To forne at our Solomiet this night.

Cap. Young Rome is it?

Tib. This he, that Villalry Romo.

Cap. Content thee gentle Coz, let him alone,
A bearst him like a portly Gentleman:
And to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a vertuous and well govern'd youth; I would not for the wealth of all the town,
Here in my house do him disparagement:
Therfore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will, the which If thou respect,
Shew a faire presence, and put off these frownes,
An ill befeceming semblance for a Fait.

Tib. It fits when such a Villaine is a guest,
Ile not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd.
What goodman boy, I say he shall, go too,
Am I the Maister here or you? go too,
Yeole not endure him, God shall mend my soule,
Yeole make a Mutninie among the Guests:
You will set cocke a hoope, yeole be the man.

Tib. Why Vnleth, 'tis a flame.

Cap. Go too, go too,
You are a fawcy Boy, 'tis fo foon?
This tricke may chance to fathch you, I know what,
You must contrary me, marry 'tis time.
Well said my hearts, you are a Princoks, goe,
Be quiet, or more light, more light for flame,
Ile make you quiet. What, chearely my hearts.

Tib. Patience perferror, with welfuller choler meeting,
Makes my flesh tremble in their different gretting,
I will withdraw, but this intrusion shall
Now feeming sweet, convert to bitter gall.

Exeunt.
Rom. If I prophane with my vnworthie hand,
This holy shrine, the gentile fin is this,
My lips to blussing Pilgrims did ready stand,
To smooth that rough touch, with a tender kis.

Iul. Good Pilgrime,
You do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion thews in this,
For Saints haue hands, that Pilgrims hands do tuch,
And palme to palme, is holy Palmers kiffe.

Rom. Have not Saints lips, and holy Palmers too?

Iul. I Piligrim, lips that they must vfe in prayer.

Rom. O then deare Saint, let lips do what hands do,
They pray[grant thou]leaf faith turne to dispaire.

Iul. Saints do not move,
Though grant for prayers fayke.

Rom. Then move not while my prayers effect I take:
Thus from my lips, by thine pray fin purgd.

Iul. Then haue my lips the fin that they haue tookeo.

Rom. Sin from my lips?O trepasis freely verg'd:
Give me my fin again.

Iul. You kiffe by'thbookes.

Nur. Madam your Mother cries a word with you.

Rom. What is her Mother?

Nur. Marrie Batcheler,
Her Mother is the Lady of the house,
And a good Lady, and a wife, and Vertuous,
I Nur'fth her Daughter that you talke withall:
I tell you, he that can lay hold of her,
Shall haue the chincks.

Rom. Is the a Capulet e?
O deare account! My life is my foes debt.
Ben. Away, be gone, the spot is at the heft.

Rom. I fo I feare, the more is my vrayete.

Cap. Nay Gentlemen prepare not to be gone,
We haue a trifling foolish Banquet towards:
It e'ne fo? Why then I thanke you all.
I thank you honest Gentlemen, good night:
More Torches here come on, then let's to bed.
Ah sirrah, by my fawe it waxes late,
Ile to my reft.

Iul. Come hither Nurie,
What is your Gentleman?

Nur. The Sonne and Heire of old Tuirto.

Iul. What's he that now is going out of doore?

Nur. Marrie that I think be young Petruch.

Iul. What's he that follows here that would not dance?

Nur. I know not.

Iul. Go ask his name if he be married,
My graue is like to be my wedded bed.

Nur. His name is Rome, and a Mantague,
The onely Sonne of your great Enemie.

Iul. My onely Loue sprung from my onely hate,
Too early vene, vnknowne, and knowne too late,
Prodigious birth of Loue it is to me.

That I must loue a loathed Enemie,

Nur. What's this? whats this?

Iul. A rime, I learne euem now
Of one I don't withall.

One calls within, Juliet.

Nur. Anon, anon:
Come let's away, the strangers all are gone.

Exeunt.

Chorus.
Now old desife doth in his death bed lie,
And yong affecction gapes to be his Heire,
That faire, for which Loue gron'd for and would die,
With tender Juliet matchet, is now not faire.
Now Rome is beleaued, and Loues againe,
A like bewitched by the charme of lookes:
But to his foe fupp'd he must complain,
And the thee Loue sweet bait from fairefull hookes:
Being held a foe, he may not haue access,
To breath fuch vows as Louers vie to sweare,
And the as much in Loue, her meane much leffe,
To meete her new Beloued any where:
But paflion lends them Power, time, meane to meete,
Tempring extremities with extreme sweete.

Enter Romeo alone.

Rom. Can I goe forward when my heart is here?
Turne backe dull earth, and find thy Center out.

Enter Benuolio, with Mercutio.

Ben. Romeo, my Cozen Romeo, Romeo.

Merc. He is wife,
And on my life hath f牢ne him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way and leapt this Orchard wall,
Call good Mercutio.

Nay, lie content too.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet.

Vnto the white vpturned wondering eyes
Of mortals that fell backe to gare on him,
When he befrides the lazie puffing Cloudes,
And filies vpon the bosome of the ayre.

Iul. O Rome, Rome, wherefore art thou Rome?
Denie thy Father and refuse thy name;
Or if thou wilt not, be but sworne my Love,
And Ie no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I heare more, or shall I speake at this?
Is. 'Tis but thy name that is my Enemy:
Thou art thy felfe, though not a Montague.
What's Montague? it is nor hand nor foot,
Nor armes, nor face, O be some other name
Belonging to a man.
What? in a names that which we call a Rose,
By any other word would st弥n as sweete,
So Rome would, were he not Rome call'd,
Retaine that dear perfection which he owes,
Without that title Rome, doffe thy name,
And for thy name which is no part of thee,
Take all my felfe.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but Loue, and Ie be new baptiz'd,
Hence forth I never will be Romeo.

Iull. What man art thou, that thus befcreen'd in night
So rambled on my couneill?
Rom. By a name, I know not how to telle thee who I am:
My name dear Saint, is hateful to my felfe,
Because it is an Enemy to thee,
Had I it written, I would teare the word.

Iull. My eares have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of thy tongues vterring, yet I know the found,
Art thou not Rome, and a Montague?
Rom. Neither faire Maid, if either thee dislike.
Iull. How can'th thou bether,
Tell me, and wherefore?
The Orchard walls are high, and hard to climbbe,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinmen find thee here,
Rom. With Loues light wings
Did I ore-perch thee Walls,
For dny limits cannot hold Loue out,
And what Loue can do, that dares Loue attempt:
Therefore thy kinmen are no flop to me.

Iull. If they do fee thee, they will murther thee.
Rom. Alacke there lies more perill in thine eye,
Then twenty of their Swords, looke thou but sweete,
And I am proofe against their enmy.
Iull. I would not for the world they faw thee here.
Rom. I have nights cloake to hide me from their eyes
And thou loue me, let them finde me here,
My life were better ended by their hate,
Then death proroged wanting of thy Loue.
Iull. By whose direction found'th thou out this place?
Rom. By Loue that first did promp me to enquire,
He lent me couneill, and I lent him eyes,
I am no Pylot,yet wert thou as far
As that vash-shore-waftet with the farthet Sea,
I should adventure for fuch Marchandise.

Iull. Thou knowest the maske of night is on my face,
Elfe would a Maiden broth bejeaunt my cheeke,
For that which thou hast heard me speake to night,
Faine would I dwell on forme, faine, Elaine,onde
What I have speake, but farewell Complement,
Dost thou Loue? I know thou wilt try 1,
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet

And I will take thy word, yet if thou swear'st,
Thou mathe prove false: at Louers perilous
They say true laught, oh gentle Rome,
If thou doft Loue, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou thinkst I am too quickly wonne,
Ie frowne and be peruerse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woe: But else for the world.

In truth faire Montague I am too fond:
And therefore thou mathe thinke my behaviour right,
That trust me Gentleman, Ie prove more true,
Then those that have coying to be strange,
I should have beene more strange, I must confesse,
But that thou ouer heard't ere I was ware
My true Loues passion, therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yeeling to light Loue,
Which the darke night hath so discouered,
Rom. Lady, by yonder Moone I vow,
That tips with fluer all thefe Fruite tree tops.

Iul. O sweare not by the Moone, th'inconfort Moone,
That monethly changes in her circled Orbe,
Leat that thy Loue prove likewise varible.
Rom. What thvil I sweare by?
Iul. Do not sweare at all:
Or if thou will sweare by thy gratious felfe,
Which is the God of my Idolatry,
And be beleue thee.
Rom. If my hearts desire loue.
Iul. Well do not sweare, although I joy in thee:
I have no joy of this contract to night,
It is too rath, too vnaduif'd, too sudden,
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be
Ere, one can say, it lightens,Sweete good night,
This bud of Loue by Summers ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous Flower when we meete,
Goodnight, goodnight, as weete repose and reft,
Come to thy heart, as that within my brest.

Rom. O wilt thou leave me so vnfaithful?
Iul. What faffion can't thou have to night?
Rom. Th'exchange of thy Loues faithful vow for mine.
Iul. I gaued thee mine before thou didst requite it:
And yet I would it were to give againe.
Rom. Would'st thou withwaite,
For what purpose Loue?
Iul. But to be franke and gue it thee againe,
And yet I wish but for the thing I have,
My bounty is as boundleffe as the Sea,
My Loue as deep, the more I glue to thee
The more I have, for both are infinite:
I here some noyde within desire Loue aside,
Cals within.

Anon good Nurse, sweet Montague be true:
Stay but alltill, I will come againe.
Rom. O blest, blest night, I am afear'd
Being in night, all this is but a dreame,
Too flattering sweete to be substance.
Iul. Three words desire Rome,
And goodnight indeed,
If that thy bent of Loue be Honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, lend me word to morrow,
By one that Ie procure to come to thee,
Where and what time thou wilt perforne the right,
And all my Fortunes at thy fote Ie lay,
And follow thee my Lord throughout the world.

Within : Madam.
I come, anon: but if thou meanest not well,
I do beceech thee

(By and by I come)
To cease thy Hift, and leave me to my grieve,
To morrow will I tend.
Rom. So thrus me loue.
Iul. A thousand times goodnight.
Exit.
Rom. A thousand times the worfe to want thy light,
Loue goes toward Loue as school-boys fro thier books
But Loue fro Loue, towards schoole with heatle looks.

Enter Iuliet againe.

Iul. Hift Rome, hift:O for a Falkners voice,
To lure this Taffell gentle backe againe,
Bondage is hoare, and may not speake aloud,
Eile would I teare the Cane where Eccho lies,
And make her ayrie tongue more hoare; then
With repetition of my Rome,
Rom. It is my foule that calls upon my name.
How fluer sweet, found Louers tongues by night,
Like forrest Muficke to attending eares.
Iul. Rome.
Rom. My Neece.
Iul. What a clock to morrow
Shall I tend to thee?
Rom. By the hour of nine.
Iul. I will not faile, 'tis twenty yeares till then,
I have forgot why I did call thee backe,
Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.
Iul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Remembering how I Loue thy company.
Rom. And Ie will stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other heme but this.
Iul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee gone,
And yet no further then a wantons Bird,
That let's it hop a little from his hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twilled Gyues,
And with a filken thred plucks it backe againe,
So loving Jealous of his liberty.
Rom. I would I were thy Bird.
Iul. Sweet so would I,
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing:
Good night, good night.
Rom. Butting is such sweete forrow,
That I shall goy goodnight till it be morrow.
Iul. Steepe dwelv upon thine eyes, peace in thy brest.
Rom. Would I were sleepe and peace to sweete to reff,
The grey ey'd morne smiles on the frowning night,
Checking the Eaterne Clouds with ftreakes of light,
And darknefe fleckles'd like a drunkard reeles,
From forth dayes path way, made by Tisius wheels.
Hence will I to my ghostly Fries clofe Cell,
His helpe to cruse, and my deare hap to tell.

Enter Friar alone with a booket.

Fri. The gray ey'd morne smiles on the frowning night,
Checking the Eaterne Cloudes with ftreakes of light:
And fleckles'd darknefe like a drunkard reeles,
From forth dales path, and Tisius burning wheels:
Now ere the Sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheere, and nights danke dew to dry,
I must vplift this Ouer Cage of ours,
With balefull weedes, and precious juiced flowers,
The earth that's Natures mother, is her Tombe,
What is her burying grave that is her wombe,
And from her wombe children of diuers kind:

We
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

We fucking on her natural bosome find:
Many for many vertues excellent:
None but for some, and yet all different.
O'mickle is the powerfull grace that lies
In Phoebus, Hebrus, Romes, and their true qualities:
For sought fo vile, that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some speciall good doth give:
Nor ought fo good, but That's from that faire vfe,
Revolts from true birt, trembling on abate.
Vertue it selfe turns vice being misapplied,
And vice sometime by action dignified.

Within the infant rin'd of this weake flower,
Poyson hath refidence, and medicine power:
For this being smeet, with that part chears each part,
Being tufted lays all fences with the heart.
Two such oppos'd Kings doth it affright
In man as well as Heavenes, grace and rude will:
And where the worfer is predominant,
Full soone the Canker death eates vp that Plant.

Rom. Good morrow Father.
Fri. Benevolence.

What early tongue so sweet suffiteth me?
Young Sonne, it argues a distempered head,
So soone to bid goodmorrow to thy bed;
Care keepes his watch in every old mans eye,
And where Care loses, sleep will never lye:
But where unbridled youth with vadydt braine
Doth cough his limbs, there golden sleepe doth reigne;
Therefore thy earlneffe doth me affisse,
Thou art vprou'd with some distemper;
Or if soe, then here I hit it right.

Our Rome hath not beene in bed to night.
Rom. That left is true, the sweeter rest was mine.
Fri. Good pardon fainest thou with Rosaline?
Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly Father? No,
I haue forgot that name, and that names woe.
Fri. That's my good Son, but where hast thou bin then?
Rom. Ie tell thee ere thou ask it me again
I haue beene feating with mine enemie,
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded both our remedies
Within thy helpe and holy phillccke lies:
I haue no hatred, bleffed manner loe
My intercession likewise heads my foe.
Fri. Be plaine good Son, rest homely in thy drif,
Riddling conceiption, fandes but riddling thrift.

Rom. Then plainly know my hearts deare Loue is fet,
On the faire daughter of rich Capulet;
As mine on hers, fo hers is fet on mine;
And all combin'd, faue what thou must combine
By holy marriage: when and where, and how,
We met, we wooke, and made exchange of vow:
Ie tell thee as we passe, but this I prays,
That thou content Knapme to pass us over.
Fri. Holy S. Francis, what a change is heere?
Is Rosaline that thou didst Loue so deare
So soone forfaken? young mens Loue then lies
Not truely in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Ina Maria, what a deale of braine
Hath wrought thy fellow checkes for Rosaline?
How much falt water throwne away in wate,
To seeson Loue that of it doth not taff.
The Sun not yet thy fighes, from heaven clears,
Thy old gromes yet ringing in my auncient ears:
Lo here upon thy cheke the flaine doth fit,

Of an old teare that is not wafft off yet.
If ere thou woulde thy felfe, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes, were all for Rosaline.
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence then,
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.
Rom. Thou child'd me oft for loving Rosaline.
Fri. For doing not for loving pupill mine.
Rom. And bad'd me bury Loue.
Fri. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to hase.
Rom. I pray thee chide me not, her I Loue now
Doth grace for grace, and Loue for Loue allow:
The other did not so.
Fri. O she knew well,
Thy Loue did read by rote, that could not spell:
But come young waferer, come goe with me,
In one respect, lie thy affiance be.
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turne thy househoold rancor to pure Loue.
Rom. O let vs hence, I stand on sudden shift.
Fri. Wilfully and low, theyumble that run fall.

Enter Benwick and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the deu e shoulde this Rome be? came he not home to night?
Ben. Not to his Fathers, I spake with his man.
Mer. Why that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline tormentts him so, that he will fure run mad.
Ben. Tibalt, the kinman to old Capiolu, hath lent a Letter to his Fathers house.
Mer. A challenge on my life.
Ben. Rome will anfwer me.
Mer. Any man that can write, may anfwer a Letter.
Ben. Nay, he will anfwer the Letters Maifter how he dares, being dared.
Mer. Alas poore Rome, he is already dead heab with a white wenchs blacke eye, runne through the care with a Loue long, the very piane of his heart, clef with the blind Bowes -boyes but -that, and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why what is Tibalt?
Mer. More then Prince of Cats. Oh hee's the Courageous Capitaine of Complements: he fights as you prick'fling keeps time, difance, and proportion, he releth his minum, one, two, and the third in your booms: the very burter of a filk burton, a Dualift, a Dualift: a Gentleman of the very firft houfe of the firft and second caufe: ah the immortall Paffio, the Punto reuerio, the Hay.

Ben. The what?
Mer. The Pox of such antique lipping affailing phantacies, the new tuners of accent: Ieuf a very good blade, a very tall man, a very good whore. Why is not this a lamentable thing Grandfire, that we should be thus afficted with these strange flites: these fashion Mongers, these par don-mee's, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench. O their bones, their bones.

Enter Rome.

Mer. Without his Roe, like a dried Hering. O feah, feah, how art thou suffined? Now is he for the numbers that Petrarck flowed in: Lauro to his Lady, was a kitchen wench, marrie she had a better Loue to beire her: Dido a dowdles, Cleopatra a Gipfe, Hellen and Hero, holdings and Harlot: Thesbie a gray cie or fo, but not to the purpose. Signior Rome, then here's a French salutation to your ff

French
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

French flop: you gae vs the the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both, what counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, the slip, can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon Mercutio, my businesse was great, and in such a case as mine, a man may straine curtesie.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours con-

fects a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning to curte.

Mer. Thou haft most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most curious excretion.

Mer. Nay, I am the very picke of curtesie.

Rom. Pinke for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why then is my Pumpe well flow'd.

Mer. Sure wit, follow me this leafe, now till thou haft worn out thy Pumpe, that when the fingle folde of it is worn, the leafe may remaine after the wearing, solefinglar.

Rom. O fingle fol'd leafe,

Saly singular for the fingle-leafe.

Rom. Come betweene vs good Benvolio, my wits faints.

Rom. Swits and spurs,

Swits and spurs, or Ile crie a match.

Mer. Nay, if I were to run the Wild Goofe chief, I am done: For thou haft moore of the Wild-Goofe in one of thy wits, then I am sure I have in my whole face. Was I with you ther for the Goofe?

Rom. Thou wate neuer with mee for any thing, when thou wate not there for the Goofe.

Mer. I will bite thee by the eare for that left.

Rom. Nay, good Goofe bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very Bitter-sweeting,

It is a moft harpe fawce,

Rom. And is it not well fera'd into a Sweet-Goofe?

Rom. Oh here's a wit of Cheuerell, that fretches from an yere narrow, to an ell broad.

Rom. I stretch it out for that word, broad, which added to the Goofe, proves thee faire and wide, abroad Goofe.

Mer. Why is not this better now, then groning for Loue, now art thou fociable, now art thou Romeo: now art thou what thou art, by Art as well as by Nature, for this driuing Loue is like a great Naturall, that runs lolling vp and downe to hid his bable in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou defire me to flop in my tale against the

Rom. Thou wouldst elfe have made thy tale large, faire.

Rom. O thou art dice'ly, I would have made it short, or I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant indeed to occupy the argument no longer.

Enter Nurfe and her man.

Rom. Here's goodly gear.

A sile, a sile,

Mer. Two, two, a Shirt and a Smocke.

Nur. Peter?

Peter. Anon.

Nur. My Fan Peter?

Mer. Good Peter to hide her face?

For her Fans the fairest face?

Mer. God ye gooden faire Gentlemew.

Nur. Is it gooden?

Mer. To you ittelle. I tell you: for the bawdy hand of the Dyall is now vsnpon the pricke of Noone.

Nur. Out upon your what a man are you?

Rom. One Gentlewoman,

That God hath made, himselfe to man.

Nur. By my troth it is fal, for himzelfe to, war quant ha Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tel you but young Romeo will be older when you haue found him, then was when you fought him: I am the youngest of that name, for I am tilled of a worfe.

Nur. You fay well.

Mer. Yea is the worth worl,

Very well tooke: I faith wisely, wisely.

Nur. If you be he fir,

I defire some confidence with you?

Rom. She will endeave him to some Supper.

Mer. A baud, a baud, a baud. So ho.

Rom. What haft thou found?

Mer. No hare fir, vnselle a Hare fir in a Lenten pie, that is some thing stale and hoare ere it be spent.

An old hare hoare, and an old hare hoare is very good meat in Lent.

But a Hare that is hoare is too much for a swore, when it hoares ere it be spent,

Romeo will you come to your Fathers? Weele to dinner thatther.

Rom. I will follow you.

Rom. Farewell ancient Lady: Farewell Lady, Lady, Lady.

Exit. Mercutio, Benvolio.

Nur. I pray you fir, what fawce Merchant was this that was so full of his torpier?

Rom. A Gentleman Nurfe, that loues to heare himselfe talke, and will speake more in a minute, then he will stand to in a Moneth.

Nur. And a speake any thing against me, Ile take him downe, & a were luther then he is, and twenty such lacks: and if I cannot, Ile finde those that shall: feurule knowe, I am none of his flert-gils, I am none of his skaines mates, and thou must stand by too and suffer cuya knowe to vfe me at his pleasure.

Pet. I faw no man vfe you at his pleasure: if I had, my weapon should quickly have beene out. I warrant you, I dare draw afoome as another man, if I see occasion in a good guarrell, and the law on my fide.

Nur. Now afore God, I am fo vexed, that every part about me quiuers, skurry knowe I pray you fir a word: and as I told you, my young Lady bid me enquire you out, what the bid me say, I will keepe to my felle: but first let me tel ye, if ye should leade her in a fooles paradys, as they say, it were a very grosse kind of behauow, as they say: for the Gentlemew woman is young: & therefore, if you should deale double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be oftered to any Gentlemew woman, and very weke dealeing.

Nur. Nurfe commend me to thy Lady and Miletreff, I protest nto thee.

Nur. Good heart, and yfaith I will tell her as much:

Lord, Lord she will be a flowfull woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her Nurfe? thou doest not marke me?

Nur. I will tell her fir, that you do protest, which as I take it, is a Gentleman-like offer.

(afternoone,)

Rom. Bid her deule some meane to come to threft this

And ther she shall at Friar Laurence Cell

Bethriul l and married: here is for thy paines.

Nur. No truly fir not a penny.

Rom. Go too, I fay you shall.

Nurfe
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

Nur. This afternoon sir? well she shall be thew.
Ro. And say thou good Nurce behind the Abbey wall, Within this hour my man shall be with thee, And bring thee Cords made like a tackled flaire, Which to the high top gallant of my Hoy, Must be my convey in the secret night. Farewell, be trulle and Ile quite thy paines: Farewell, commend me to thy Mistrefte.
Rom. What shift thou my deare Nurce?
Nur. Is your man secret, did you see hear say two may keep counsel turning one away.
Ro. Warrant thee my man as true as fresce.
Nur. Well sir, my Mistrefte is t be fweete Sir Lady, Lord, Lord, when 'twas a little prating thing. O there is a Noble man in Towne one Paris, that would faine lay knife aboard: but the good foole had as leave a fee ToADE, a very Toade as fee him. I long like an fweet, and tell her that Paris is the proper man, but Ile warrant you, when I say so, thee lookes as pale as any clout in the verfall world. Doth not Rosemarie and Romeo begin both with a letter?
Rom. I Nurfe, what of that? Both with an R
Nur. A moeker that's the dogname. R. is for the no, I know it begins with some other letter, and she hath the prettiest sententious of its, of you and Rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.
Enter Juliet.
Iul. The clocke strooke nine, when I did send the Nurfe, In halfe an hour she promised to returne, Perchance she cannot meete, that's not so: Oh she is lame, Loues Herauld should be thoughts, Which ten times fafter glides then the Sunnes beams, Drusing backe shadows over lowering hills. Therefore do nimble Pinon's Doves draw Loue, And therefore hath the wind-wift Capid wings: Now is the Sun upon the highmoft hill. Of these daies lourney, and from nine till twelve, I three long hours, yet she is not come. Had the affections and warme youthfull blood, She would be as swift in motion as a ball, My words would han'gy her to my sweete Loue, And his to me, but old folks, Many faine as they were dead, Wvneliedio, flow, heayy, and pale as lead.
Enter Nurfe.
Nur. O God she comes, O hony Nurfe what newes?
Haft thou met with him?fend thy man away.
Nur. Petor fly at the gate.
Iul. Now good sweet Nurfe: O Lord, why lookeft thou faf? Though newes, be faf, yet tell them merily. If good thou haft't the midstake of sweet newes, By playing it to me, with fo fower a face.
Nur. I am a weary, give me laue awhile, Fie how my bones ake, what a launt haue I had?
Iul. I would thou had'ft my bones, and I thy newes: Nay come I pray thee speake, good good Nurfe speake.
Nur. Ifes what haft? can you not stay a while? Do you not fee that I am out of breath?
Iul. How art thou out of breath, when thou haft broth To fay to me, that thou art out of breath? The execue that thou doit make in this delay, is longer then the tale thou doit excede. Is thy newes good or bad? Anwerve to that, Say either, and Ile fly the circumsaint:
Let me be satisfied, if good or bad?
Nur. Well, you have made a simple choice, you know not how to chafe a man: Rome, no not he though his face be better then any man, yet his legs exell all mens, and for a hand, and a foote, and a body, though they be not to be talkt on, yet they are past compare: he is not the flower of curteise, but Ile warrant him as gentle a Lambe: go thy wales wench, serve God. What have you din'd at home?
Iul. No nodst all this this did I know before What faies he of our marriage?what of that?
Nur. Lord how my head akes, what a head have I? It bestes as it would fall in twenty peasces, My backe a tother side to my backe, my backe: Behew your heart for fending me about To catch my death with a thousand vp and downe.
Iul. Haste! I am forrie that thou art so well. Sweet sweet, sweet Nurfe, tell me what faies my Loue? Nur. Your Loue faies like an honeft Gentleman, And a courtesoun, and a kind, and a handfome, And I warrant a vertuous where is your Mother?
Iul. Where is my Mother? Why she is within, where should the be?
How odly thou repil'ft:
Your Loue faies like an honeft Gentleman: Where is your Mother?
Iul. Here's such a coile, come what faies Romeo? Nur. Have you got leue to go to thirt to day? Iul. I have.
Nur. Then high you hence to Friar Lawrence Cell, There faies a Husband to make you a wife: Now comes the wanton blood vp in your checkers, Th'ill be in Scarlet frighte at any newes: He you to Church, I must an other way, To fetch a Ladder by the which your Loue Must clime a birds nee Soone when it is darke: I am the drudge, and tolle in your delight: But you shall bear the burtchen soone at night. Go lie to dinner, he sene to the Cell.
Iul. He is to high Fortune, honeft Nurfe, farewell. Exeunt.

Enter Friar and Romeo.
Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy sft, That after hours, with forrow child vs not.
Rom. Amen, amen, but come what forrow can, It cannot counterwaile the exchange of joy That one short minute gives me in her sight:
I: Do thou but clofe our hands with holy words, Then Loue-decoroing death doth what he dare,
Fri. These violent delights have violent ends, And in their triumphs like fire and powder; Which as they kille confume. The sweeteft honey Is loathforme in his owne delicioufnffe, And in the tife confoundes the appetite. Therefore Loue moderatly, long Loue doth fo,
Too swift arrives as tarde as too low.
Enter Juliet.
Here comes the Lady. Oh to light a foot Will nere wearre out the everlafling fint,
A lover may bestride the Goaffomours,
That ydes in the wanton Summer ayre,
And yet not fall, so light is vanitie.

I. Good even to my ghostly Confessor.
Fri. Romeo shall thank thee Daughter for vs both.
I. As much to him, ells in his thanks too much.
Fri. Ah Iuler, if the meare of thy joy
Be heart like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blaffon it, then sweaten with thy breath
This neighbour ayre, and let rich maffickes tongue,
Unfold the imag'in'd happynesse that both.
Receyue in either, by this deere encounter.

I. Conceit more rich in matter then in words,
Brags of his substanct,not of Ornament :
They are but beggers that can count their worth,
But my true Loue is growne to fuch fuch exceffe,
I cannot fume vp fome of halfe my wealth.

Fri.Come, come with me,& we will make short worke,
For by your leaves, you shall not fay alone,
Till holy Church incorporate two in one.

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio, and men.

Ben. I pray thee good mercius let't retire,
The day is hot, the Capuletts abroad :
And if we meet, we shall not fcape a brawl,for now thef hot dayes, is the mad blood ftrilling.

M. Thou art like one of thesee fellowes, that when he enters the confines of a Tauerne,claps me his Sword upon the Table, and fayes,God fende me no neede of thee and by the operation of the second cup,drawes him on the Drawer, when indeed there is no need.

Ben. Am I like fuch a Fellow ?
M. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jacke in thy mood, as any in Iuler: and affoonoe mouded to be moodie, and aff-
foonoe moodie to be mou'd.

Ben. And what too ?

M. Nay, and there were two fuch, we should have none shortly,for one would kill the other:thou, why thou wilt quarrell with a man that hath a hoare more, or a hoare leffe in his beard,then thou hast:thou wilt quarrell with a man for cracking Nuts, hauing no other reafon, but becaufe thou hast haefel eyes : what eye, but fuch an eye, would fpie out fuch a quarrell ? thy head is as full of quarrels,as an egg is full of fquets, and yet thy head hath bin beaten as ake as an egg for quarrelling:thou haft quar-
rel'd: with a man for coffing in the freet, because he hath wakened thy Dog that hath lane afleepe in the Sun.Did't thou not fall out with a Tutor for wearing his new Doub-
let before Easter ? with another,for tying his new fhoes with old Riband, and yet thou wilt Tutor me from quarrelling ?

Ben. And I were fo apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the Fee-simple of my life, for an houre and a quarter.

Enter Tybalt, Petrucho, and others.

Ben. By my head here comes the Capuletts.
M. By my heele I care not.

Tyb. Follow me clofe,for I will fpake to them.

Gentlemen,Good den, a word with one of you.

M. And but one word with one of us:couple it with something,make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. Thou fhall find me apt inoone to that fir, and you will give me occasion.

Merc. Could you not take some ocassion without suing ye ?

Tib. Mercutio thou confort with Romeo.

M. Confort what doft thou make vs Minfrels ? & thou make Minfrels of vs,lookke to heare nothing but dif-
cords theere's my fiddleflicker, theere's that fhall make you daughter. Come confort.

Rom. We talk here in the publike haunt of men :
Either withdraw your fome private place,
Or reafon coldly of your greuances :
Or else depart, here all eies gaze on vs.

M. Mens eyes were made to looke, and let them gaze.
I will not budge for no mans pleafure I.

Enter Romeo.

Tib. Well peace be with you sir, here comes my man.
M. But lie be hang'd sir if he weare your Liuer,
Marre go before to field,belle be your follower,
Your worship in that fene, may call him man.
Tib. Romeo the loue I beare thee,can affoord
No better terme then this: Thou art a Villaine.

Rom. Tibalt, the reafon that I have to loue thee,
Doth much exceffe the appertaining rage
To Such a greeting: Villaine am I none :
Therefore farewell, I fee thou know'st me not.

Tib. Boy,thys shall not excefe the injuries
That thou haft done me,therefore turne and draw.

Rom. I do proffe I never inuir'd thee,
But low'd thee better then thou can ft deuife :
Till thou haft know the reaoun of my loue,
And so good Capulet,which name I tender
As dearly as my owne,be fatisfied.

M. O calme,dishonourable, vile submission :
Ala Lucatke carries it away.

Tybalt you Rat-catcher,will you walke ?

Tib. What would thou have with me ?

M. Good King of Cats,nothing but one of your nine lies,that I meant to make bold withall, and as you shall wile me hereafter dry beate the reft of the eight. Will you pluck your Sword out of his Picher by the ears I Make half,leath mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tib. I am for you.

M. Gentle Mercutio, put thy Rapier vp.

M. Come fir,your Paffado.

Rom. Draw Benvolio,beat downe their weapons:

Gentlemen,for shame forbear this outrage,

Tibalt Mercutio, the Prince expressly hath Forbidden bandying in Verona streets.

Hold Tybalt, good Mercutio,

Exit Tybalt.

M. I am hurt.

A plague a both the Houfes, I am sped:
Is he gone and hath nothing ?

Ben. What art thou hurt ?

M. I, a scratch, a scratch, marry 'tis inoough,
Where is my Page?go Villaine fetch a Surgeon.

Rom. Courage man, the hurt cannot be much.

M. No 'tis not to deep as a well, nor fo wide as a Church door: but 'tis inoough, 'twill serve : aske me for to morrow, and you shall find me a graue man.I am pepper'd
I warrant,for this world I a plague a both your houfes.

What, a Dog, a Kæt, a Moufe, a Cat to scratch a man to deth : a Braggart, a Rogue, a Villaine, that fights by the book of Arithmetick, why the deale came you betwenee vs ? I was hurt vnder your arme.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

M. Helpe me into some houfe Benvolio,
Or I shall fainta plague a both your houfes.

They have made wormes in me,

Enter

Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's Is dead, That Gallant spirit hath affi'd to the Clouds, Which too violently here did force the earth. This time blacke Fate, on no days doth depend, This but begins, the wo others must end.

Enter Tybalt.

Romeo. Here comes the furious Tybalt backe againe.

Tybalt. He gone in triumph, and Mercutio flaine.
Away to heaven respecktfull Leniuitie,
And fire and Fury, be my conduct now.
Now Tybalt take the villaine backe againe
That late thou gav'lt me, for Mercutio foule Is but a little way above our heads,
Staying for stinie to keep me companie :
Either thou or I, or both, meue goe withhim.

Thou wretched Boy that di'ft comfort him here,
Shalt with him hence.

This shall determine that.

Romeo. away be gone :
The Citizens are vp, and Tybalt flaine,
Stand not amaz'd, the Prince will Doome thee death
If thou art takenhence, be gone away.

Of lam Fortune's fools,

Romeo. Why doth thou stay?

Enter Citizens.

Citi. Which way ran he that kild Mercutio?
Tybalt that Murthheres, which way ran he?

Romeo. There lies that Tybalt.

Citi. vp fit goe with me :
Icharge thee in the Princes names obey.
Enter Prince, old Montague, Capulet, their Wives and all.

Prince. Where are the vile beginners of this Fray?

Romeo. O Noble Prince, I can difcouer all
The vnluckie Mannage of this fallat brall :
There lies the man flaine by young Romeo,
That flew th' kinman brave Mercutio.

Cap. Wi. Tybalt, my Cozin? O my Brothers Child,
O Prince, O Cozin, Husband, O the blood is spild,
Of our deare kinman, Prince as thou art true,
For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.
O Cozin, Cozin,

Prince. Bern solo, who began this Fray?

Bern. Tybalt here flaine, whom Romeo's hand did flay,
Romeo that spoke him faire, bid him bethinke
How nice the Quarrell was, and vrg'd withall.
Your high difpleasure:all this vttred,
With gentle breath,calme looke, kneel humbly bow'd
Could not take truce with the vruuly fpeeeme
Of Tybalt's deafe to peace, but that he Tilts
With Peircing fteele at bold Mercutio's breath,
Who all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And with a Martiall fcoire, with one hand beates
Cold death afide, and with the other fends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity

Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud,
Hold Friends, Friends part, and twister then his tongue,
His agedarme,beats downe their fallat points,
And twist them ruheds, vnderneath whole armes,
An emulous thrust from Tybalt, hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled.
But by and by comes backe to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertained Reuenge,
And too't they goe like lightning, for ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt flaine:
And as he fell, did Romeo turne and flee:
This is the truth, or let Bernede die.

Cap. Wi. He is a kinman to the Montague,
Affection makes him false, he speakes not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this blakke frifet,
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for Justice, when thou Prince shalt giue:
Romeo flew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prince. Romeo flew him, he flew Mercutio,
Who now the price of his deare blood doth owe.

Cap. Not Romeo Prince, he was Mercutio's Friend,
His fault concludes, but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prince. And for that offence,
Immediately we doe exile him hence:
I have an interett in your hearts proceeding:
My bloud for your rude brawles doth lie a bleeding.
But: He Amerce you with fo throng a fine,
That you shall all repent the losse of mine.
It will be afeate to pleying and excuses,
Nor tears, nor prayers shall purchase our abuses.
Therefore ye none, let Romeo hence in haft,
Eile when he is found, that hour is his Iift.
Be are hence this body, and attend our will:
Mercy not Murders, pardoning those that kill.

Enter Juliet alone.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery footed steedes,
Towards Phæbus lodging, such a Wagoner
As Phæcon would whip you to the weft,
And bring in Cloudie night immediately.
Spreed thy clofe Curtaine Loue-performing night,
That run-aways eyes may wincke, and Romeo
Leape to their armes, vntalkt of and vnfeene,
Lovers can fee to doe their Amorous rights,
And by their owne Beaties:or if Loue be blind,
It bct agrees with night:come ciuill night,
Thou lober futed Matron all in blacke,
And learne me how to looke a winning match,
Paid for a pare of flamelefte Maidenhoods,
Hood my vnnam'd blood byting in my Cheekes,
With thy Blacke mantle, till strange Loue growe bold,
Thinke true Loue acted simple modefte:
Come night,come Romeo,come thou day in night,
For thou wilt lie vpon the fpringes of night
Whiter then new Snow upon a Rauens backe:
Come gentle night, come louting blackebrow's night,
Give me my Romeon, and when I shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little flarres,
And he will make the Face of heauen fo fine,
That all the world will be in Loue with night,
And pay no worship to the Garib Sun.
O I haue bought the Manion of a Loue,
Butnot poiffed it, and though I am fold,
Not yet enjoy'd, fo tedious is this day,
As is the night before some Fifhfullii.

ff 3
To an impatient child that hath new roses
And may not weare them,O here comes my Nurse:
"Enter Nurse with cords.
And she brings newes and cutty tongue that speaks
But Romeo, name, speaks heauenly eloquence:
Now Nurse, what newes'what haft thou there?
The Cords that Romeo bid thee fetch?
Nur.  I, I, the Cords.
Iuli.  Ay me, what newes?
Why doth thou wring thy hands,
Nur.  A weladye, hee's dead, hee's dead,
We are vn-done Lady, we are vn-done.
Alacke the day, hee's gone, hee's kil'd, he's dead.
Iul.  Can heauen be fo envious?
Nur.  Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot.O Romeo, Romeo,
Who euer would have thought it Romeo.
Iuli.  What diuell art thou,
That doft torment me thus?
This torture should be roard in dismall hell,
Hath Romeaine himselfe to pay thou but I,
And that bare vowell I shall payfom more
Then the death-darting eye of Cockatrice,
I am not I, if there be such an I.
Or those eyes flote,that makes thee answere I:
If he be flaine I, or if not, no.
Brieft, founde,determine of my weale or wo.
Nur.  I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,
God faue the marke, here on his manly breaste,
A pittous Courte, a bloody pittous Courte.
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaw'd in blood,
All in gore blood, I sawed them at the fight:
Iul.  O breake my heart,
Poore Banckrout breake at once.
To prifon eyes, nere looke on libertie.
Vile earth to earth refigne, end motion here,
And thou and Romeo preffe on heuitive beere.
Nur.  O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best Friend I had,
O curteous Tybalt moste Gentieaman,
That euer I should live to see thee dead.
Iul.  What flome is this that blowes fo contrarie?
Is Romeo haughted, and is Tybalt dead?
Nur.  Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished,
Romeo that kil'd him, he is banished.
Iul.  O God!
Did Roma his hand shed Tybalt blood
It did, it did, alas the day it did.
Nur.  O Serpent heart, hid with a flowing face.
Iul.  Did euer Dragon kepe to fare a Caue?
Beautiful Tyrant, fiend Angelical:
Ravenous Dune-feather'd Raven,
Wolulf-signe Lambe,
Dispifed subdance of Diuinesh flow:
Isst opposte to what thou lustly seem't,
A dimus Saint, an Honourable Villaine:
O Nature! what haft thou to doe in hell,
When thou didst buuer the spirit of a friend
In mortall paraide of such sweet flesh?
Was ever booke containing such vile matter
So fairely bound? O that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous Pallace.
Nur.  There's no trust, no faith, no honestie in men,
All periu'd, all forsworne, all naught, all efemblies,
Ah where's my man? give me some Aqua-vite?
These griefes, these woes, their sorrowes make me old:
Shame come to Romeo.
Iul.  Bitter'd be thy tongue
For such a wish, he was not born to shine:
Upon his brow shine is sham'd to fit:
For'tis a throne where Honour may be Crown'd
Sole Monarch of the vnlessefall earth:
O what a beast was I to chide him?
Nur.  Will you speake well of him,
That kil'd your Cozen?
Iul.  Shall I speake ill of him that is my husband?
Ah poore my Lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,
When I thee three hours wise have mangled it.
But wherefore Villaine did'th thou kill my Cozin?
That Villaine Cozin would kil'd my husband:
Eacke foolish tearrs, backe to your native spring,
Your tributarie drops belong to wo,
Which you mislaking offer vp to joy:
My husband Bues that Tybalt would have flaine,
And Tybalt dead that would have flaine my husband:
All this is comfort, wherefore wepe I then?
Some words there was worfer then Tybalt's death
That murdered me, I would forget it seene,
But oh, it preffes to my memory,
Like dammed guilty deedes to sinners minds,
Tybalt is dead and Romeo banished:
That banished, that one word banished,
Hath flaine ten thousand Tybalt's Tybalt's death
Was wo enough if it had ended there:
Or if lower woel delights in fellowship,
And needely will be rankt with other griefes,
Why followed not when she said Tybalt's death,
Thy Father or thy Mother, nay or both,
Which modern lamentation might have mou'd.
But which a reare-ward following Tybalt's death
Romeo is banished to speake that word,
Is Father, Mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slaine, all dead: Romeo is banished,
There is no end, no limits, measure, bound,
In that words death, no words can that woe found.
Where is my Father and my Mother Nurse?
Nur.  Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's Coaze,
Will you go to them? I will bring you thether.
Iul.  Wath they his wounds with tearsminte thal be spent
When thiers are drie for Romeo's banishment.
Take vp those Cordes, poor ene you are beguil'd,
Both you and I for Romeo is exild.
He made you for alhigh-way to my bed,
But I a Maid, die Maidens widowed.
Come Cord, come Nurce, Ile to my wedding bed,
And death not Romeo, take my Maiden head.
Nur.  Hie to your Chamber, Ile find Romeo
To comfort you, I wot well where he is:
Harke ye your Romeo will be here at night,
Ile to him, he is hid at Lawrence Cell.
Iul.  O find him, give this Ring to my true Knight,
And bid him come, to take hislait farewell.
Entr'Friar and Romeo.
Fri.  Romeo come forth,
Come forth thou scarrful man,
Affliction is enamor'd of thy parts:
And thou art wedde to calamite.
Nur.  Father what newes?
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet.

What is the Prince Doome?
What sorrow cause acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?
Fri. Too familiar
Is my deare Sonne with such fowre Company:
I bring thee tydings of the Princes Doome.
Rom. What lefte then Doomefday?
Is the Princes Doome?
Fri. A gentler judgement vanish from his lips,
Not bodys death, but bodys banishment.
Rom. Ha, banishment the mercifull, fay death:
For exile hath more terror in his looke,
Much more then death: do not fay banishment.
Fri. Here from Verona art thou banifie:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.
Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
But Purgatori Torrure, hell it fefe:
Hence banifie, he can fave from the world,
And worlds exile is death. Then banifie,
Is death, mifterr'd, calling death banifie,
Thou cutt'ft my head off with a golden Axe,
And fimplie fpon the stroke that murders me.
Fri. O deadie fin, O rude vthankfulneffe!
Thy falt our Law calles death, but the kind Prince
Taking thy part, hath ruft the fide the Law,
And turn'd that blaffe word death, to baniffment.
This is deare mercifull, and thou fett it not.
Rom. "Tis Torrure and not mercy, heauen is here
Where Iuliet liues, and euer Cat and Dog,
And little Moufe, every vnworthy thing
Liue here in Heauen and may looke on her,
But Romeo may not.More Validatife,
More Honourable flate, more Courthip lies
In carrion Fifies, then Romerworth may fake
On the white wonder of deare Iulietts hand,
And feaile immorall bleeding from her lips,
Who euene in pure and vettall modellife
Still blufh, as thinking their owne kiffe fin,
This may Fifies doe, when I from this muf't fife,
And falt thou yet, that exile is not death?
But Romeo may not.lee is banifie.
Had'ft thou no poynion mixt, no sharpe ground kniffe,
No fudden menee of death, though nere to meane,
But banifie to kill me? Banifie?
O Frier, the damned vile that word in hell:
Howlings attends it, how haft thou the hart
Being a Dine, a Ghoftly Confessor,
A Sin-Abfoluer,and my Friend profett:
To mangle me with that word, banifie?
Fri. Then fond Mad man, hear me peake.
Rom. O thou wilt peake againe of baniffment.
Fri. Ile gleue thee Armour to keepe off that word,
Aduerfities swete mifle, Philosophie,
To comfort thee, though thou art banifie.
Rom. Yet banifie?hang vp Philosophie:
Vnleffe Philosophie can make a Iulietts
Displant a Towne, recover a Princes Doome,
It helps not, it prevailest not, talke no more.
Fri. O then I fee, that Mad men have no eares.
Rom. How fhould they,
When witlenmen have no eyes?
Fri. Let me dispare with thee of thy eftate,
Rom. Thou can't not peake of that? doft not feele,
Wert thou as young as Iuliet my Loue:
An houre but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banifie,
Then mightest thou (peake,
Then mightest thou teare thy bayres,
And fall upon the ground as I doe now,
Taking the meffure of an vnmake graue.
Enter Nurse, and knockes.
Fri. Harke how they knocke:
(Who's there) Rome arife,
Thou wilt be taken, fay a while, fland vp:
Fri. Knocke.
Run to my study:by and by,Gods will
What fimpleseneffe is this? I come, I come.
Fri. Knocke.
Fri. Who knockes fo hard?
Whence come you? what's your will?
Enter Nurse.
Nur. Let me come in,
And you fhall know my errand:
I come from Lady Iuliet.
Fri. Welcome then.
Nur. O holy Frier,O tell me holy Frier,
Where's my Ladies Lord? where's Rome?
Fri. Theere on the ground,
With his owne teares made dranke.
Nur. O he is even in my Mistrefse cafe,
Luft in her cafe.O wofull sympaty:
Pittious predicament, euon to lies the,
Blubbring and weeping, weeping and blubbring,
Stand vp, fland vp, and you be a man,
For Iulietts fake, for her fake rife and fland:
Why should you fall into fo deepe an O.
Rom. Nurie.
Nur. Ah fir, ah fir,deaths the end of all.
Rom. Speak'st thou of Iuliet'show is it with her?
Doth not the thinkke me an old Murtherer,
Now I have fin'd the Childhood of our Ioy,
Wich blood removed, but little from her owne?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what fayes
My concealef Lady to our concealef Loue?
Nur. Oh the fayes nothing fir, but weeps and weeps,
And now fals on her bed, and then farts vp,
And Tybalt calls, and then on Rome cries,
And then downe falls againe.
Ro.As if that name shot from the dead leuell of a Gun,
Did murder her, as that names cursed hand
Murdred her kinman.Oh tell me Frier,tell me,
In what vile part of this Anatomicke
Doth my name lodge? Tell me,that I may fake
The hatefull Manfon.
Fri. Hold thy deute hand:
Arts thou a man? thy forme cries out thou art:
Thy teares are womanish, thy wild arks denote
The unreasonable Furie of a beaft,
Vnfeemly woman,in a feeming man,
And I'll befeeming beaft in feeming both,
Thou haft smaz'd me. By my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Haft thou laine Tybalt? wilt thou flay thy felfe?
And flay thy Lady,that in thy life lies,
By doing damm'd hate vpon thy felfe?
Why ray'st thou on thy birth? the heaven and earth?
Since
Since birth, and heaven and earth, all three do meet.

Thy noble shape is but a forme of waxes,

Digressing from the value of a man,

Thee dear Loue sworne but hollow perjurie,

Killing that Loue which thou haft vow'd to cherish.

Thy wit, that ornament, to Loue and Loue,

Mishapen in the conduct of them both:

Like powder in a skullish Souldiers flaskes,

Is set a fire by thine owne ignorance,

And thou dismemberd with thine owne defence.

Whatrowe thee man, thy Juliet is alive,

For whose deare sake thou wist but lately dead.

There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,

But thou flew't Tybalt, there art thou happy.

The law thou threatned death became thy Friend,

And turn'd it to exile, there art thou happy.

A packe or bleeding light vpon thy backe,

Happinefse Cleeve thee in her belt array,

But like a misshapen and fallen wench,

Thou putt'dst vp thy Fortune and thy Loue:

Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.

Goe get thee to thy Loue as was decreed,

Assend her Chamber, hence and comfort her:

But looke thou say not till the watch be fet,

For then thou canft not passe to Montana,

Where thou shalt live till we can finde a time.

To blaze your marriage, reconcile your Friends,

Beg pardon of thy Prince, and call thee backe,

With twenty thousand times more joy

Then thou wert forth in lamentation.

Goe before Nurse, commend me to thy Lady,

And bid her halten all the house to bed,

Which heavy sorrow makes them apt vnto.

Romeo is comming.

Nur. O Lord, I could have said here all night,

To heare good counsel: oh what learning is!

My Lord Ile tell my Lady you will come.

Rome. Do fo, and bid my Sweete prepare to chide.

Nur. Heere fit, a Ring the bid me give you fir:

Hie you, make hast, for it growes very late.

Rome. How well my comfort is reuied by this.

Fri. Go hence,

Goodnight, and here stands all your state:

Either be gone before the watch be fet,

Or by the breake of day dispis'd from hence,

Soloume in Montana, Ie find out your man,

And he shall signifie from time to time,

Every good hap to you that chances here:

Give me thy hand, 'tis late, farewell, goodnight.

Rome. But that a joy paff joy, calls out on me,

It were a griefe, fo briefe to part with thee:

Farewell.

Enter old Capulets, his Wife and Paris.

Cap. Things haue false out fir fo vnluckily,

That we have had no time to moore our Daughters

Loue you, the Loue'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,

And fo did I. Well, we were borne to die.

'Tis very late, the! not come down to night:

I promife you, but for your company,
Since arms from arms that voyce doth vs affray,
Hunting thee hence, with Hunt f'vpt the day,
O now be gone, more light & til'tght grooves.
Rom. More light & light, more darke & darkes our woos.
Enter Madam and Nurse.

Nur. Madam.

Nur. Your Lady Mother is coming to your chamber,
The day is broke, be wary, looke about.

Jul. Then window let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell, one kiffe and I to defend.

Art. thou gone for Love, Lord, my Husband, Friend,
I must heare from thee euery day in the houre,
For in a minute there are many dayes,
O by this count I shall be much in yeres,
Ere I againe behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell: I will omit no opportunitie,
That may convey my greetings Love, to thee.

Jul. O thinkst thou we shall euer meet againe?
Rom. I doubt it not, and all the woos shall ferue
For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Juliet. O God! I have an ill Dunning soule,
Me thinkes I see thee now, thou art so lowe,
As one dead in the bottome of a Tombe,
Either my eye-sight failes, or thou look't pale.

Rom. And trust me Love, in my eye so do you:
Drie sorrow drinks our blood.

Jul. O Fortune, Fortune, all men call thee fickle,
If thou art fickle, what doth thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? be fickle Fortune:
For then I hope thou wilt not keepe him long,
But send him backe.

Enter Mother.

Lady. Ho Daughter, are you vp?
Jul. Who is it that calls? Is it my Lady Mother.
Is the not downe so late, or vp so early?
What vnaccustom'd caufe procures her hither?

Lady. Why how now Juliet?

Jul. Madam I am not well.

Lady. Euermore weeping for your Cozins death?
What wilt thou wais him from his graue with teares?
And if thou couldst, thou coulst not make him live:
Therefore have done, some griefe, sheues much of Loue,
But much of griefe, sheues still some want of wit.
Jul. Yet let me wepe, for such a feeling loose.
Lady. So shall you feel the loose, but not the Friend
Which you wepe for.

Jul. Feeling to the loose,
I cannot chuse but ever wepe the Friend.

Lady. Well Girls, thou wept not so much for his death,
As that the Villaine lives which slaunder'd him.

Jul. What Villaine, Madam?

Lady. That fame Villaine Romeo.

Jul. Villaine and be, be many Miles affudder:
God pardon, I doe with all my heart;
And yet no man like he, doth griue my heart.

Lady. That is because the Traitor lives.

Jul. I Madam from the reach of thefe my hands:
Would none but I might venge my Cozins death.

Lady. We will have vengeance for it, feare thou not.
Then wepe no more, Ile fend to one in Mantua,
Where that fame banished Run-agate doth live,
Shall glue him fuch an vnaccustom'd dram,
That he shall soone keepe Tybalt company:
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet.

To go with Paris to Saint Peters Church:
Or I will drag thee, on a Hurdle thither.
Out you Greeneickneffe carrion, out you bagage,
You tallow face.
Lady, fie, fie, are what are you mad?
Iul. Good Father, I befeece you on my knees
Heare me with patience, but to speake a word.
Fa. Hang thee young bagage, disordered wretch,
I tell thee what, get thee to Church a Thursday,
Or never after looke me in the face.
Speake not, reply not, do not answere me.
My fingers itch, wife; we scarce thought vs blest,
That God had lent vs but this onely Child,
But now I see this one is too much too,
And that we have a curie in hauing her:
Out on her Hilding.
Nur. God in heauen bleffe her,
You are too blame my Lord to rate her fo.
Fa. And why my Lady wifedome? hold your tongue,
Good Prudence, imatter with your goell, go.
Nur. I speake no treason,
Fa. Peace you mumbling fool,
Vtter your gruatie oor a Goellis bowles
For here we need it not.
Lut. You are too hot.
Fa. Gods bread, it makes me mad:
Day, night, houre, ride, time, workes, play,
Along in companie, fill my care hath bin
To haue her match, and hauing nowe provided
A Gentleman of Noble Parentage,
Of faire Deemeates, Youthfull, and Nobly Allied,
Staft as they say with Honourable parts,
Proporion'd as ones thought would with a man,
And then to haue a wretched pulling fool
A whining mammet, in her Fortunes tender,
To answere, Ile not wed, I cannot Lose:
I am too young. I pray you pardon me.
But, and you will not wed, Ile pardon you.
Graze where you will, you shall not house with me:
Looke too, thinke on' by, I do not vse to lefe.
Thursday is near, lay hand on heart, aduise,
And you be mine, Ile give you to my Friend:
And you be not, hang, beg, fliaue, die in the streetes,
For by my foule, Ile neere acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall neuer do thee good:
Trut too, bethinke you, Ile not be forfworne
Iul. Is there no pittie fitting in the Cloudes,
That sees into the bottome of my griefe?
O sweate my Mother call me not away,
Delay this marriage, for a month, a weekke,
Or if you do not, make the Bridall bed
In that Min Monument where IuI follies lies.
M. Tale not to me, for Ile not speake a word,
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee,
Exit.
Iul. O God!
O Nurse, how shall this be presented?
My Husband is on earth, my faith in heauen,
How shall that faith retorne againe to earth,
Vnliefe that Husband send it me from heauen,
By leaving earth? Comfort me, confuile me:
Hackle, slacke, that heauen shoule pracliffe ftratagemes
Upon so fo for a fobblec as my felle.
What faith thou haue thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort Nurse.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

Iul. The teares have got small victorie by that:
For it was bad enow before their flight.
Pa. Thou wrong'st it more then teares with that report.
Iul. That is no flunder sir, which is a truth,
And what I spake, I spake it to thy face.
Par. Thy face is mine, and thou haft flundred it,
Iul. It may be so, for it is not mine owne.
Are you at leisure, Holy Father now,
Or shall I come to you at even here Mauffe?
Fri. My leisufe serves me penheve daughter now.
My Lord you must intrest the time alone.
Par. Godhold : I should disturb Deceon,
Juliet, on Thurday early will I rowve you,
Till then aduice, and keepe this holy knie.
Exit Paris.
Iul. O shut the doore, and when thou haft done so,
Come wepe with me, past hope, past care, past helpe.
Fri. O Iuliet, I alreadie know thy griefes,
It is tyme now that I may speake to my wifes:
I haere Thou muft and nothing may prouoke it,
On Thurday next be married to this Countie.
Iul. Tell me not Frier that thou hearest of this,
Whiles he speake to me how I may present it:
If in thy wifedome thou canst not give no helpe,
Do thou but call my reflection wife,
And with his knife, Ile helpe it presently.
God joyn'd my heart, and Romeos, thou our hands,
And e're this hand by thee to Romeos sea'd:
Shall be the Label to another Deede,
Or my true heart with treacherous resolu,
Tune to another, this shall flay them both:
Therefore out of thy long expec'tit time,
Gue me some present counsell, or behold
Twix't my extremes and me, this bloody knife
Shall play the veinpeers, arbitrating that,
Which the comminations of thy years and art,
Could to no issue of true honour bring:
Be not fo long to speake, I long to die,
If what thou speakest, speake not of remedy.
Fri. Hold Daughter, I doe speake a kind of hope,
Which I nade as desperate an esperance,
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If, rather then to marry Countie Paris
Thou haft the strength of will to flay thy felde,
Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thinglike death to chide away this shame,
That coul'd with death himselfe, to escape fro it:
And if thou dar'st, Ile give thee remedy.
Iul. Oib bid meleepe, rather then marrie Paris,
From of the Battelments of any Tower,
Or walke in theeslifh waies, or bid me lurke
Where Serpenes are chained me with rose Bearing Beares
Or hide me nightly in a Charnell house,
Ocreouer quite with dead men ratling bones,
With reckie shankes and yellow chappells fulle:
Or bid me go into a new made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his grave,
Things that to heare them told, haue made me tremble,
And I will doe it without feare or doubt,
To lye an unfrained wife to my sweet Loue.
Fri. Hold them goo home, be merrie, glie content,
To marrie Paris: wendife is to marrow,
To morrow night lowke that thou lie alone,
Let not thy Nurse lie with thee in thy Chamber;
Take thou this Vioill then be in bed,
And this distilling liquor drinke thou off,
When presently through all thy veins shall run,
A cold and drownie humour : for no pule
Shall keepe his nature prorogue, but forcest:
No warmth, no breath shall tellifie thou sleueth,
The Roses in thy lips and cheekes shall falle
To many afhes, the eyes winowes fall
Like death when he flut vp the day of life :
Each part depris'd of supple government,
Shall Riffe and thrace, and cold appear like death,
And in this borrowed likenesse of thrunke death
Thou shalt continue two and forty houres,
And then awake, as from a pleasant sleepe.
Now when the Bridgegroome in the morning comes,
To rowve thee from thy bed, there art thou dead :
Then as the manner of our country is,
In thy left Robes vncouer'd on the Beere,
Be borne to burliall in thy kindred graue:
Thou shalt be borne to that fame ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulet lie,
In the meane time against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my Letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come, and that very night
Shall Romeo beare thee hence to Manua.
And this shall free thee from this present shame,
If no inconstant toy nor womanish feare,
Abate thy valour in the ald ing.
Iul. Glue me, glue me, O tell not me of care.
Fri. Hold get you gone, be strong and prosperous:
In this resolute, lie fend a Frier with speed
To Manua with my Letters to thy Lord.
Loue giue me strength,
And strength shal helpe allord
Farewell deare father.

Enter Father Capulet, Mother, Nurse, and
Serving men two or three.

Cap. So manie guestes invite as here are writ.
Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning Cookes.
Ser. You shall have none ill sir, for Ie trie if they can lice their fingers.
Cap. How canst thou trie them so?
Ser. Marrie sir, 'tis an ill Cooke that cannot lice his owne fingers: therefore he that cannot lice his fingers goes not with me.
Cap. Go be gone, we shall be much vnready for this time: what is my Daughter gone to Frier Lawrence?
Nur. I forsooth.
Cap. Well he may chance to do some good on her,
A pecculif selfe-wild harlotry it is.

Enter Juliet.

Nur. See where she comes from Shrift
With merrie looke.

Cap. How now my headstrong,
Where haue you bin gadding?

Iul. Where I have learnt me to repente the sin
Of disobedient opposition,
To you and your beneficts, and am enioyn'd
By holy Lawrence, to fall prolfare here,
To beg your pardon: pardoon I befeehe you,
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the Countie, goe tell him of this,
Ile haue this knot kniue vp to morrow morning.
Iul. I met the youthfull Lord at Lawrence Cell,
And gave him what became Loue I might,
Not stepping ore the bounds of modellie.

Cap. Why I am glad on't, this is well, stand vp,

Exit.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet.

This is as it should be, let me see the County:
I marry go I say, and fetch him hither.
Now afore God, this reueren'd holy Frier,
All our whole Cittie is much bound to him.

Iul. Nurie will you goe with me into my Clozet,
To help me fort such needfull ornaments,
As you thinke fit to furnish me to morrow?

Me. No not till Thursday, there's time enough.

Fa. Go Nurie, go with her,
Weele to Church to morrow.

Exit Juliet and Nurie.

Me. We shall be short in our provision,
Tis now neere night.

Fa. Tutu, I will stirre about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee wife;
Go thou to Juliet, helpe to decke her,
Ile not to bed to night it is right:
Ile play the hubwife for this once. What ho?
They are all forth, well I will walke my selfe
To Countie Parā, to prepare him vp
Against to morrow, my heart is wondrous light,
Since this fame wayward Gyrlie is to reclaim'd.

Exit Father and Mother.

Enter Juliet and Nurie.

Iul. I thole attires are best, but gentle Nurie
I pray thee leave me to my selfe to night:
For I have need of many Oyster,
To move the heauens to smilie upon my flate,
Which well thou know'rt, is crofte and full of fin.

Enter Mother.

Mrs. What are you busie ho?need you my help?

Iul. No Madam, we have eul'd such necessaries
As are behouefull for our flate to morrow:
So pleafe you, let me now be left alone:
And let the Nurie this night fit vp with you,
For I am sure, you have your hands full all,
In this so fudden busineffe.

Mrs. Good night.

Get thee to bed and rest, for thou hast need.

Exit.

Iul. Farewell!
God knowes when we shall meete againe.
I have a faint cold fearre thrills through my veines,
That almost freezes vp the heat of fire:
Ile call them backe againe to comfort me.

Nurie, what should she do here?
My difmal Scene, I needs must be alone:
Come Viall, what if this mixture do not work at all?
Shall I be married then to morrow morning?
No, no, this shall forbid it. Lie thou there,
What if it be a poynon which the Frier
Subtilly hath minde to haue me dead,
Leael in this marriage he should be dihounour'd,
Because he married me before to Rome?
I feare it is, and yet me thinkes it should not,
For he hath alreadie trie a holy man.
How, if when I am lade into the Tombe,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeeme me? There's a fearefull point:
Shall not I then be flatted in the Vault?
To whose foul mouth no healthome ayre breaths in,
And there die strangeled ere my Romeo comes.
Or if I live, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,
As in a Vaulter, an ancient receptacle, Where for these many hundred yeeres the bones
Of all my buried Ancestors are packt,
Where bloody Tybalts yest, yet but greene in earth,
Lies flettring in his throw'd, where as they say,
At some hours in the night, Sprites refort:
Alacke, alacke, is it not like that I
So early waking, what with loudsome smelles,
And shrikes like Mandrakes borne out of the earth,
That liuing mortalls hearing them, run mad.
O if I wake, shal I not be driaffraught;
Inuroned with all these hideous fears,
And madly play with my forefathers joynts?
And plucke the mangled Tybalts from his throw'd?
And in this rage, with some great kinmanes bone,
As (with a clab) dash out my delerious brains.
O looke, me thinks I see my Coains Ghoul,
Seeking out Rome that did split his play
Vpon my Rapiers point: say Tybalts, say;

Enter Lady of the boughs, and Nurie.

Lady. Hold,
Take theke keies, and fetch more splices Nurie.

Nur. They call for Dates and Quinces in the Pafftrie.

Enter old Capulet.

Cap. Come, sir, sir, sir,
The second Cocke hath crow'd,
The Curpewell Bell hath rung, 'tis three a clocke:
Looke to the bakte meates, good Angelica,
Spare not for cost.

Nur. Go you Cat-queane, go,
Get you to bed, faith youle be fiche to fimore
For this nights watching.

Cap. No not a whitwhat? I have watche ere now
All night for lefte caufe, and nere beene fiche.

La. I you have bin a Moule-hunt in your time,
But I will watch you from fuch watching now.

Exeunt Lady and Nurie.

Cap. A leaual hoold, a leaual hoold,
Now fellow, what there?

Enter three or four with fisht, and logs, and bakset.

Fel. Things for the Cooks sir, but I knowe not what.

Cap. Make halft, make haft, firrah, fetch drier Logs.

Call Peter, he will flew thee where they are.

Fel. I have a head fir, that will find out logs,
And neuer trouble Peter for the matter.

Cap. Maife and well faid, a merrie horfon, ha,
Thou fhalt be loggerhead, good Father, 'tis day.

Play Music.

The Countie will be here with Muifckte ftraight,
For fo he faid he would, I here he meere,
Nurie, wife, what ho?what Nurie I fay?

Enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet,go and trim her vp,
Ile go and chat with Parā: he, make haft,
Make haft, the Bridgroome, he is come already:
Make halft I fay.

Why Lambe, why Ladylyfe you fuggabed,
Why Loue I fay? Madam, Iweet heart why Beide?
What not a word? You take your penworths now,
Sleepe for a weche, for the next night I warrant
The Countie Parā hath fet yp his reft,
That you shall reft but little, God forgive me:
Marrie and Amen t how found is he a fleepes?
1. The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

I must needs wake her: Madam, Madam, Madam,
I, let the Countie take you in your bed,
Heele fright you vp yafith. Will it not be?
What dreft, and in your clothes, and downe againe?
I must needs wake you: Lady, Lady, Lady?
Alas, alas, helpe, helpe, my Ladies dead,
Oh weleaday, that ever I was borne,
Some Aqua-vitae ho, my Lord, my Lady?

Ms. What noife is here? Enter Mother.

Nur. O lamentable day,
Ms. What is the matter?
Nur. Look, looke, oh haetic day.
Ms. O me, O me, my Child, my only life:
Reuile, looke vp, or I will die with thee:
Helpe, helpe, call helpe.

Enter Father.

Fa. For shewe me bring Iulet forth, her Lord is come.

Nur. O me, O me, my Child, my only life.

Fa. Death that hath tane her hence to make me walle,
Ties vp my tongue, and will not let me speake.

Enter Friar and the Countie.

Fri. Come, is the Bride ready to go to Church?

Fa. Ready to go, but neuer to returne.

O Sonne, the night before thy wedding day,
Hath death laine with thy wife: there the lies,
Flower as the was, deflowered by him.

Death is my Sonne in law, death is my Helre,
My Daughter he hath weeded. I will die,
And leave him all life living, all is deaths.

Fa. Have I thought long to see this mornings face,
And doth it give me such a fight as this?

Ms. Accurs'd, accurs'd, accurs'd, accurs'd, accurs'd, kil'd, kil'd,
Most miserable hours, that ere time was
In laeting labour of his Pilgrimage.
But one, poore one, one poore and losing Child,
But one thing to releyse and folace in,
And cruel death hath catcht it from my sight.

O wofull, wofull, wofull, day,
Most lamentable day, most wofull day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold.
O day, O day, O day, O hatefull day,
Neuer was seene so blacke a day as this:
O wofull day, O wofull Child.

Fa. Befuilde, divorced, wronged, frighted, flaine,
Moff detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel, cruel thee, quite ouerthrowne:
O love, O life, &t, but love in death.

Ms. Accus'd, accusat, accusat, accusat, kil'd, kil'd,
Most uncomfortable time, why can't thou now
To murther, murther our solemnitie?
O Child, O Childmy soule, and not my Child,
Dead art thou, slayke my Child is dead,
And with my Child, my loves are buried.

Fri. Peace ho for flame, confusions: Care, lives not
In these confusions, heauen and your felice
Had part in this faire Maid, now heauen hath all,
And all the better is it for the Maid:
Your part in her, you could not keepe from death,

But heauen keeps him his part in eternall life:
The most you sought was her promotion,
For 'twas your heauen, the should be adayn't,
And wepe ye now, feeling she is adayn't
About the Cloudes, as high as Heauen it selfe?
O in this love, you love your Child so ill,
That you run mad, feeling that she is well.
She's now well married, that lives married long,
But she's best married, that dies married yong.
Drie vp your tears, and flicke your Rosemarie
On this faire Coarfe, and as the cuftome is,
And in her beaute arraye her to Church:
For though some Nature bids all vs lament,
Yet Natures tears are Reafons merriement.

Fa. All things that we ordaine Feftiuall,
Turne from their office to blacke Funerall:
Our instrumens to melancholy Bellis,
Our wedding dyes, to a sad buriall Feast:
Our folenn Hymnes, to fullen Dyrges change:
Our Bri dall flowers ferue for a buried Coarfe:
And all things change them to the contrarie.

Fri. Sir go you in; and Madam, go with him,
And go for Paris, every one prepare.
To follow this faire Coarfe unto her grave:
The heuens do lowre vpunter you, for some ill:
Mowe them no more, by crofing their high will.

Mas. Faith we may put vp our Pipes and be gone.

Nur. Honest goodfowles! Ah put vp, put vp,
For well you know, this is a pitifull cafe.

Ms. I by my troth, the cafe may be amended.

Enter Peter.

Pet. Musiftions, oh Musitions,
Hearts cafe, hearts cafe,
O, and you will have me lue, play hearts cafe.

Ms. Why hearts cafe;

Pet. O Musitions,
Becauze my heart it selfe plases, my heart is full.

Ms. Not a dump we, 'tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then?

Ms. No.

Pet. I will then glue it you foundly.

Ms. What will you glue vs?

Pet. No money on my faith, but the gleeko.
I will glue you the Miniftrel.

Ms. Then will I give you the Seruing creature.

Pet. Then I lay the struing Creatures Dagger
On your pate. I will carie no Crochets, Ile Re you, lile Fa you, do you note me?

Ms. And you Re vs, and Fa vs, you Note vs.

2. Ms. Pray you put vp your Dagger,
And put out your wit.
Then haue at you with your wit.

Peter. I will driee-beate you with an iron wit,
And put vp your Yron Dagger.

Anfwere me like men:
When gripeing griefes to the heart doth wound, then Muskicke with her siller found.
Why siller found? why Muskicke with her siller found?
what fay you Simon Callings?

Ms. Mary firs, because siller hath a sweet found.

Pet. Prateft, what fay you Hugh Rebick?

Ms. It fay fayer found, because Musiftions found for fip.

Pet. Prateft to, what fay you James Sound-Pofi? (uer

3. Ms. Faith I know not what to fay.

Pet. O I cry you mercy, you are the Singer.
I will fay for you; it is Muskicke with her filler found,
The Tragedie of Romeo and Julliet.

Because Mutines have no gold for founding:
Then Mufccke with her fluer found, with speedie helpe
doth lend redrefse.

Mrs. What a pettiuent knawe is this fame?    Exit.

Mz. Hang him Jacke, come weele in here, tarrie for the Mourners, and flay dinner. Exit. Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trull the flattering truth of sleepe,
My dreams preface some joyfull newes at hand:
My bolomes Lifs lightly in his throne:
And all thias day an vocoum'd spirit,
Lifts me aboue the ground with cheerfull thoughts.
I dreamt my Lady came and found me dead,
(Strange dreame that gives a dead man leaue to think,)
And breath'd fuch life with killes in my lips,
That I reuiv'd and was an Emperour.
Ah me how fiaue is love, and foffett,
When but loues shadowes are fo rich in toy.

Enter Romeo's man.

Newes from Verona, how now Ballban &?
Doft thou not bring me Letters from the Friers?
How doth my Lady? Is my Father well?
How doth my Lady Juliet? that I ake againe,
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Man. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill.

Her body sleepe in Capel's Monument,
And her immortal part with Angels live,
I faw her laid low in her kindreds Vault,
And presently tooke Poffe to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing thefe ill newes,
Since you did leaue it for my office Sir.

Rom. Is it even fo?
Then I denie you Searres.
Thou knoweft my lodging, get me inke and paper,
And hire Pot-Horfc, I will hence to night.

Man. I do beseach you fir, hauke patience:
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventur.

Rom. Thuf, thou art undue,
Leaue me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Haft thou no Letters to me from the Friers?

Man. No my good Lord. Exit Man.

Rom. Mo matter: Get thee gone,
And hyre thofe Horfc, Ile be with thee fraught.
Well Julliet, I will lie with thee to night:
Let fce for meanes; O mischieue thou art swift,
To enter in the thoughts of defperate men:
I do remember an Apothecarie,
And here abouts doles, which late I noted
In tattred werdes, with ouerhelming broues,
Culling of Simples, meager were his lookes,
Sharpe miferie had worn me to thebones:
And in his needle shop a Tortorys hung,
An Algerger thufl, and other skins,
Of ill flap'd fishes, and about his felues,
A beggerly account of empfe boxes,
Greene earthen pots, Bladders, and maffe feedes,*.
Remants of packthread, and old cokes of Roses
Were thinly scattered, to make vp a shew.
Noting this penury, to my felie I faid,
An if a man did need a poufon now,
Whofe fale is perfit death in Mantuas,
Here lies a Califfic wretch would fell it him.
O this fame thought did but fore-run my need,
And this fame needle man muff fell it me.

As I remember, this should be the howe,
Being holy day, the beggers shop is shut.
What do? Apothecarie?

Enter Apothecarie.

App. Who call's fo low a day?

Rom. Come hither man, I fee that thou art poore,
Hold, there is forte Ducks, let me haue
A dram of poufon, fuch foon a feeding gearse,
As will dillepe it felle through all the veins,
That the life-wearie-taker may fall dead,
And that the Trunke may be difcharg'd of breath,
As violently, as baffle powder fift'd
Doth hurry from the fatal Canons wome.

App. Such mortall drugs I haue, but Mantuas law
Is death to any he, that vtters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchednesse,
And fear thy to die? Famine is in my cheeckes,
Need and oppressiion flarue in thy eyes,
Contemp and beggary hangs upon thy backe:
The world is not thy friend, nor the worlds law:
The world affords no law to make thee rich.
Then be not poor, but brooke it, and take this.

App. My poorety, but not my will confeints.

Rom. I pray thy poorety, and not thy will.

App. Put this in any liquid thing you will
And drink it off, and if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you fraught.

Rom. There's thy Gold,
Worfe poufon to mens foules,
Doing more muther in this loathfome world,
Then thefe poore compounds that thou maineft not fell.
I fell thee poufon, thou haft fold me none,
Farewell, buy food, and get thy pylfe in pleye.

Come Cordiall, and not poufon, go with me
To Julliets grave, for there muft I vfe thee.

Exeunt.

Enter Frier John to Frier Laurence.

John. Holy Francijian Frier, Brother, ho?

Enter Frier Laurence.

Law. This fame fhowd be the voice of Frier John.
Welcome from Mantuas, what fayes Rome?
Or if his mind be wright, give me his Letter.
John. Going to find a bare-foote Brother out,
One of our order to affociate me,
Here in this Citie visiting the fick,
And finding him, the Searchers of the Towne
Sufpeeting that we both were in a howe
Where the infecitious pelfience did raigne,
Seal'd vp the doores, and would not let us forth,
So that my fped to Mantua there was feall.

Law. Who bare my Litter then to Rome?

John. I could not fend it here, it is againe,
Nor get a meffenger to bring it thee,
So fairefull were they of infection.

Law. Unhappy Fortune: by my Brotherhood
The Letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of deare import, and the negleeting it
May do much danger: Frier John go hence,
Get me an Iron Crow, and bring it fraught
Vnto my Celi.

John. Brother Ile go and bring it thee.

Law. Now muft I to the Monument alone,
Within this three hours will faire Julliet wake,
Shee will befawre me much that Rome
Hath had no notice of thefe accidents:
I will write againe to Mantua.

And
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

And keepe her at my Cell till Romeo come,
Poor living Coorie, clow'd in a dead mans Tombe,
Exit.

Enter Paris and his Page.

Par. Glie me thy Torch Boy, hence and fland aloof,
Yet put it out, for I would not be seene:
Vnder yond young Trees lay thee all along,
Holding thy eare cloe to the hollow ground,
So shal no foot upon the Churchyard tread,
Being looke, vnderly with diging vp of Graues,
But thou shalt hauce he: whille then to me,
As signall that thou hearest some thing approach,
Glue me thode flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almost afraid to fland alone
Here in the Churchyard, yet I will aducnture,
Pa.Sweet Flower with flowers thy Bridall bed I frew:
O woe, thy Canopy is dust and stone,
Which with sweet water nightly I will dree,
Or wanting that, with tears defitl'd by mones;
The obdeques that I for thee will keepe,
Nightly shall be, to threw thy grave, and weep.

Whilke Boy.
The Boy glues warning,somethings doth approach,
What curfed foot wanders this wayes to night,
To croffe my obdeques, and true loyes right?
What with a Torch? Muffle me night a while.

Enter Romeo, and Peter.

Rom. Glie me that Mattcocke, & the wenching Iron,
Hold take this Letter, early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my Lord and Father,
Glue me the light: upon thy life I charge thee,
What ere thou hear'st of feed,fland all aloofe,
And do not intermpt me in my courfe.
Why I defend into this bed of death,
Is partly to behold my Ladies face:
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger,
A precious Ring; a Ring that I must vie,
In deare employment,therefore hence be gone:
But if thou ealous dot returne to prie
In what I further shal intend to do,
By heauen I will teare thee loynt by loynt,
And threw this hungry Churchyard with thy limbs:
A Precious Ring a Ring that I must vie,
In deare employment,therefore hence be gone:
But if thou ealous dot returne to prie
In what I further shal intend to do,
By heauen I will teare thee loynt by loynt,

In what I further shal intend to do,
The Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet.

Thy drugs are quickke. Thus with a kiss I die.

Enter Friar with Lanborne, Crewe, and Spade.

Fri. St. Francis be my speeed, how oft to night
Have you old feet flumadis at graves? Who's there?
Man. Here's one, a Friar, and one that knows you well.
Fri. Bliffe be ypon you. Tell me good my Friend
What Torch is yond that vainly lends his light
To grab, and eyleffe Scullers? As I difcerne,
It burneth in the Caپal Monument.

Man. It doth fo holy fy.
And there's my Maifter, one that you loue.
Fri. Who is it?

Man. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he bin there?

Man. Full halfe an houre.
Fri. Go with me to the Vault.

Man. I dace not Sir,
My Maifter knows not but I am gone hence,
And fearefully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to looke on his entents.

Fri. Stay, then I lye alone, fearse comes ypon me.
O much I fere some ill valuable thing.

Man. As I did fleepe vnnder this young tree here,
I dreamt my maifter and another fought,
And that my Maifter flew him.

Fri. Romeo.

Alacke, alacke, what blood is this which flaines
The fonny entrance of this Sepulcher?
What meane thefe Maifterliffe, and goarie Swords
To Ilie difcolour'd by this place of peace?

Romeo, oh pale: who elfe what Parke too?
And fliept in blood? Ah what an vnkind houre
Is guiltie of this lamentable change?

The Lady flies.

Iul. O comfortable Friar, where's my Lord?
I do remember well where I fhould be:
And there I am, where is my Romeo?

Fri. Stay, I hearne some noyse Lady, come from that neft
Of death, contagion, and vnnaturall fleep,
A greater power then we can contradite
Hath thwarted our entents, come, come away,
Thy husband in thy bofte there lyes dead:
And Parke too come Ile difcourage thee,
Among a Siferhood of holy Nuns:
Stay not to queftion, for the watch is comming.
Come, go good Iuliet, I dare no longer stay.

Iul. Go get thee hence, for I will not away.

What's here? A cup close'd in my true lo: e hand!
Poyfon I fee hath bin his timeleff end
O churl,drinke all! and left no friendly drop,
To helpe me after, I will kiffe thy lypes,
Hapflie some poyfon yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a reftrauance.

Thy lypes are warming.

Enter Boy and Watch.

A char. Lead Boy, which way?

Iul. Yea noifte?
Then Ile be briefe. O happy Dagger.
'Tis in thy fheathe, there ruff and let me die Kifs her fheathe.

Boy. This is the place.
There where the Torch doth burne

Watch. The ground is bloody,
Search about the Churchyard.
Go fome of you, who eue you find attach.
Plitfull flight, here lies the Countie fhine,
And Iuliet bleeding, warme and newly deade.

Who here hath laine thefe two days buried.
Go tell the Prince, runne to the Capulets,
Rafie vp the Montague, fome others search,
We fee the ground whereon theye vloes do lye,
But the true ground of all thefe pitifull vwoes,
We cannot without circumfance defcry.

Enter Romeo's man.

Watch. Here's Romeo's man,
We found him in the Churchyard.

Fri, Hold him in safety, till the Prince come hither.

Enter Friar, and an other Watchman.

3. Watch. Here is a Frier that trembles, fighs, and weepes
We tooke this Mattocke and this Spade from him,
As he was comming from this Church-yard fide.

Prince. A great fuppfition, fay the Frier too.

Enter the Prince.

Prin. What mifaduenture is fo early vp,
That calls our perfon from our mornings ret?

Enter Capulet and his Wife.

Cap. What fhould it be that they do thrice abroad?

Wife. O the people in the streets cry Romeo,
Some Iuliet, and some Parke, and all runne
With open outcry toward our Monument,

Fri. What feare is this which fhilles in your ears?

Watch. Here is a Frier, and Slaughter'd Romeo man,
With Infrumments vpon them fit to open
Thefe dead mens Tombes.

Cap. O heauen!
O wife looke how our Daughter bleedes!
This Dagger hath mischaine, for loe his houfe
Is empty on the backe of Montague,
And is mithetted in my Daughters houfe.

Wife. O me, this fight of death, is a Bell
That warns my old age to a Sepulcher.

Enter Montague.

Fri. Come Montague, for thou art early vp
To fee thy Sonne and Heire, now early downe.

Mont. Alas my liege, my wife is dead to night,
Griefe of my Sonnes exile hath loft her breath:
What further woe conffires againft my age?

Prin. Looketh and thou shalt fee.

Mont. O thou varnacht, what manners is in this,
To prufle before thy Father to a grave?

Prin. Scale vp the mouth of outra ge for a while,
Till we can cleare thefe ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true defcent,
And then will I be generall of your woes,
And lead you euen to death, bear me time forbear,
And let milchance be flau to patience,
Bring forth the parties of fufpicion.

Fri. I am the greaftable to doe leaft,
Yet moft fupplaced at the time and place
Doth make againft me of this direfull murther:
And heere I fland both to impace and purge
My felfe condemmed, and my felfe excus'd.

Prin. Then fay at once, what thou doft know in this?

Fri. I will be briefe, for my short date ofcath
Is not fo long as a tedious tale.

Romeo there dead, was husband to that Iuliet,
And the there dead, that's Romes faithfullife:
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet.

I married them; and their sole marriage day
Was Tybalt’s Doomesday: whose vntimely death
Banish’d the new-make Bridgemeate from this Citie:
For whom (and not for Tybalt) Iuliet pined.
You, to remove that siege of Greece from her,
Betroth’d, and would have married her perforce
To Countie Paris. Then comes she to me,
And (with wilde looks) bid me defile some means
To rid her from this second Marriage,
Or in my Cell there would she kill her selfe,
Then gave I her (fo Tutor’d by my Art)
A sleeping Potion, which fo tooke effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The forme of death. Meane time, I write to Rome,
That he should hither come, as this dyre night,
To helpe to take her from her borrowed graue,
Being the time the Potions force should ceafe.
But he which bore my Letter, Frier John,
Was slay’d by accident; and yeernight
Return’d my Letter backe. Then all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her Kindred’s vault,
Meaning to keep her cloe to my Cell,
Till I conueniently could send to Rome.
But when I came (some Minute ere the time
Of her awaking) here she vntimely lay
The Noble Paris, and true Rome dead.
Shee wakes, and I intertreated her come forth,
And beare this worke of Heauen, with patience;
But then, a noyse did scarrer me from the Tombe,
And the (too desperately) would not go with me,
But (as it thenes) did violence on her life.
All this I know, and to the Marriage her Nurse is priuy:
And if ought in this miscarried by my fault,
Let my old life be sacrific’d, some hour before the time,
Vnto the rigour of feuereft Law.

Prin. We two have knewne thee for a Holy man.
Where’s Romeo’s man? What can he say to this?
Boy. I brought my Master newes of Iuliet’s death,
And then in poete he came from Mantua
To this fame place, to this fame Monument.
This Letter he early bid me give his Father,
And threatned me with death, going in the Vault,
If I departed not, and left him there.

Prin. Give me the Letter, I will look on it.
Where is the Countie Page that rais’d the Watch?
Sirr, what made your Master in this place?
Page. He came with flowers to shew his Ladies graue,
And bid me stand aloofe, and so I did:
Anon comes one with light to ope the Tombe,
And by and by my Maifter drew on him,
And then I ran away to call the Watch.

Prin. This Letter doth make good the Friers words,
Their courte of Loue, the tydings of her death:
And here he writes, that he did buy a poyfon
Of a poore Pothecarie, and therewithall
Came to this Vault to dye, and lye with Iuliet.
Where be these Enemies? Capiulet, Montague,
See what a fowre is liade vpon your hate;
That Heauen finds means to kill your loves with Loue;
And I, for winking at your discord too,
Haue loft a brace of Kindmen: All are punisht.

Cap. O Brother Montague, give me thy hand,
This is my Daughters ioyniture, for no more
Can I demand.

Moun. But I can give thee more:
For I will raise her Statue in pure Gold,
That whiles Verone by that name is knowne,
There shall no figure at that Rate be fet,
As that of True and Faithfull Iuliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his Lady ly,
Poore sacrifices of our enmy.

Prin. A glooming peace this morning with it brings,
The Sunne for forrow will not shew his head;
Go home, to have more talkes of these sad things,
Some shall be pardon’d, and some punished.
For never was a Story of more Wo,
Then this of Iuliet, and her Romeo.

FINIS.
Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Mercer, at several doors.

Ood day Sir.

Pain. I am glad ye are well. Let's have not scene you long, how goes the World?

Post. I have not seen the Poet.

Pain. It wearies his spirit, as it grows.

Post. I thank your excellent Lord.

Mew. Nay that's most fixed.

Mrs. A most incomparable man, breath'd as it were, To an unripeable and continue goodmanship:

He passes.

Mew. I have a Jewell here.

Mrs. O pray let's see't. For the Lord Timon sist? I wist If he will touch the estimate. But for that—

Post. When we for recompence have pleas'd the void, It raises the glory in that happy Verfo, Which aptly fings the good.

Mew. 'Tis a good forme.

Pain. And rich: here is a Water looke ye.

Pain. You are rapt fir, in some worke; some Dedication to the great Lord.

Post. A thing flipp'd idly from me,

Our Poet is as a Gowne, which fies From whence 'tis nourish'd; the fire I th Flint

Shews not, till it be strooke: our gentle flame

Prouokes it felle, and like the current fyes

Each bound it chases. What have you there?

Let's see your peeces.

Pain. 'Tis a good Peece.

Post. So 'tis, this comes off well, and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Post. Admirable: How this grace

Speakes his owne flanding: what a mentall power

This eye fhoote forth? How bigge imagination

Moues in this Lip, to th'dumbneffe of the gesture, One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life:

Here is a touch: Is't good?

Post. I will say of it,

It Tutor Nature, Artificiall strife

Lies in thefe touches, liueller then life.

Enter certaine Senators.

Pain. How this Lord is followed.

Post. The Senators of Athens, happy men.

Pain. Looke mee.

Post. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors,

I have in this rough worke, flipt out a man

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and huggle

With amplest entertainment: My free drift

Halt not particularly, but moves it felle

In a wide sea of wax, no leuell'd malice

Infeks one comma in the cours' I hold,

But flies an Eagle flight, bold, and forth on,

Leaving no Track behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Post. I will vouch to you.

You fee how all Conditions, how all Minds,

As well of glibb and flipp'ry Creatures, as

Of Graue and auftere quality, tender downe

Their seruices to Lord Timon: his large Fortune,

Vpon his good and gracious Nature hanging,

Subsides and proporties to his love and tendance

All sorts of hears; yeas, from the glaffe-facd Flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better

Then to aborbe himfelfe; even hee drops downe

The knee before him, and returns in peace

Most rich in Timon nod.

Pain. I saw them speake together.

Post. Sir, I have vpon a high and pleasanft hill

Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd.

The Base o'th Mount

Is rank'd with all deferts, all kines of Natures

That labour on the bosome of this Sphere,

To propagate their states: among' them all,

Whose eyes are on this Soueraigne Lady fixt,

One do I perfonate of Lord Timon name,

Whom Fortune with her Ivory hand wafts to her,

Whose preuent grace, to preuent flaws and erennants

Translates his Rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceyu'd, to scope

This Throne, this Fortune, and this Hill me thinks
Timon of Athens.

With one man becken’d from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy Mount
To climb his happiness, would be well exprest
In our Condition.

Port. Nay Sir, but heare me on:
All thofe which were his Fellowes but of late,
Some better then his vallue; on the moment
Follow his frizdes, his Lobbies fill with tendance,
Raine Sacrificall whirlings in his ear,
Make Sacred euen his Ayrrop, and through him
Drinkke the free Ayre.

Port. I marry, what of these?

Port. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood
Spurnes downe her late beloued; all his Dependents
Which labour’d after him to the Mountains top,
Euen on their knees and hand, let him fit downe,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Poet. Tis common:
A thousand morall Paintings I can shew,
That shall demonstrate thofe: quickue blowes of Fortunes,
More pregnantly then words. Yett do you well,
To shew Lord Timon, that meane eyes have feene
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound.

Enter Lord Timon, adressing himselfe curiously to every Sover.

Tim. Impriphon’d is he, say you?

Mefi. I my good Lord, five Talents is his debt,
His meanes most short, his Creditors most striate:
Your Honourable Letter he desiers
To thofe have flut him vp, which failing,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Pentidictus well:
I am not of that Feather, to shake off
My Friend when he must neede me. I do know him
A Gentleman, that well defures a helpe,
Which he shall have. He pay the debt, and free him.

Mefi. Your Lordship euer fancies him.
Tim. Command me to him, I will fend his ranfome,
And being enfanchiz’d bid him come to me;
’Tis not enough to helpe the Feeble vp,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mefi. All happinesse to your Honor. Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Oldm. Lord Timon, heare me speake.

Tim. Freely good Father.

Oldm. Thou haft a Servant nam’d Lucillus.

Tim. I haue so: What of him?

Oldm. Moft Noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or not Lucillus.

Luc. Heere at your Lordshiphs fervice.

Oldm. This Fellow heere, Lu. Timon, this thy Creature,
By night frequents my house; I am a man
That from my firft haue beene inclin’d to thiefe,
And my eftate defures an Heyre more rain’d,
Then one which holds a Trencher.

Tim. Well: what further?

Old. One onely Daughter haue I, no Kin elfe,
On whom I may conferr what I haue got:
The Maid is faire, s’th’youngest for a Bride,
And I haue bred her at my deereft cost
In Qualities of the beft. This man of thine
Attempts her loue: I pruythee (Noble Lord)

Joyne with me to forbid him her returne,
My selfe haue spoke in vaine.

Tim. The man is honest.

Oldm. Therefore he will be Timon,
His honestly rewards him in it selfe,
It muft not beare my Daughter,

Tim. Does she love him?

Oldm. She is yong and apt:
Our owne precedent passions do infruct vs
What leuries in youth.

Tim. Love you the Maid?

Luc. I my good Lord, and the accepts of it.

Oldm. If in her Marriage my content be missing,
I call the Gods to witnesse, I will choose
Mine Heyre from forth the Beggers of the world,
And dilpoifles her all.

Tim. How shall she be endowed,
If he be mixed with an equal Husband?

Oldm. Three Talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This Gentleman of mine
Hath fend’t me long:
To build his Fortune, I will striaine a little,
For ’tis a Bond in men. Glue him thy Daughter,
What you beftow, in him Ie counterpoize,
And make him weigh with her.

Oldm. Moft Noble Lord,
Pawne me to this your Honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee,
Mine Honour on my proume.

Luc. Humbly I thankke your Lordship, neuer may
That fate or Fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you.

Port. Vouchsafe my Labour,
And long live your Lordship.

Tim. I thankke you, you shall heare from me anon:
Go not away. What haue you there, my Friend?

Pain. A peice of Painting, which I do beseech
Your Lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The Painting is almost the Natural man:
For since Diuonor Traffickes with mans Nature,
He is but out-side: Thofe Penfell’d Figures are Even fuch as they give out. I like your worke,
And you shall finde I like it; Waite attendance
Till you heare further from me.

Tim. Well fare you Gentleman: give me your hand.
We must needs dine together: fir your Jewell
Hath suffered vnnder prafie.

Jewel. What my Lord, disprafie?

Tim. A meere faciety of Commendations,
If I should pay you for’t as ’tis extol’d,
It would vnclaw me quite.

Jewel. My Lord, ’tis rated
As thofe which fell would gleue; but you well know,
Things of like vallue differing in the Owners,
Are prized by their Masters. Believ’t deere Lord,
You mend the Jewell by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock’d.

Enter Apermantus.

Mar. No my good Lord, he speakes I common tooong
Which all men speake with him.

Tim. Looke who comes heere, will you be chide?

Jewel. We’ll bearre with your Lordship.

Mar. Hee’ll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee,
Gente Apermantus.

658 2  Aper.
Enter Ape.

Ape.  Till I be gentle, thy thou for thy good morrow.

When thou art Timon dogge, and these knaues honest.

Tim.  Why doth thou call them knaues, thou know'st they are not?

Ape.  Are they not Athenians?

Tim.  Ye.

Ape.  Then I repent not.

Tim.  You know me, Apemantus?

Ape.  Thou know'rt I do, I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim.  Thou art proud Apemantus?

Ape.  Of nothing so much, as that I am not like Timon

Tim.  Whether art going?

Ape.  To knocke out an honest Athenians brains.

Tim.  Right, if doing nothing be death by th'Law.

Ape.  How lik'lt thou this picture Apemantus?

Tim.  The best, for the innocence.

Tim.  Wrought he not well that painted it.

Ape.  He wrought better that made the Painter, and yet he's but a filthy piece of worke.

Pain.  Y'are a brace.

Ape.  Thy Mothers of my generation: what's she, if I be a Dogge?

Tim.  Wilt dine with me Apemantus?

Ape.  No: I eat not Lords.

Tim.  And thou should'st, thou'dt anger Ladies.

Ape.  O they eat Lords;

So they come by great bellies.

Tim.  That's a lascivious apprehension.

Ape.  So, thou apprehend'st it,

Take it for thy labour.

Tim.  How dost thou like this Jewell, Apemantus?

Ape.  Not so well as plain-dealing, which wilt not caft

a man a Dolt.

Tim.  What dost thou thinke 'tis worth?

Ape.  Not worth my thinking.

How now Poet?

Poe.  How now Philosopher?

Ape.  Thou lyest.

Poe.  Art not one?

Ape.  Ye.

Poe.  Then I lye not.

Ape.  Art not a Poet?

Poe.  Ye.

Ape.  Then thou lyest:

Looke in thy left worke, where thou haft fegin'd him a worthy Fellow.

Poe.  That's not fegin'd, he is so.

Ape.  Yes he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour.

He that loues to be flattered, is worthy o'th flatterer.

Heauens, that I were a Lord.

Tim.  What wouldst thou then Apemantus?

Ape.  I would as Apemantus does, hate a Lord with my heart.

Tim.  What thy selfe?

Ape.  I.

Tim.  Wherefore?

Ape.  That I had no angry wit to be a Lord.

Art not thou a Merchant?

Mr.  I Apemantus.

Ape.  Traffick confound thee, if the Gods will not.

Mr.  If Traffickc do it, the Gods do it.

Ape.  Trafficke thy God, & thy God confound thee,

Trumpets sound.  Enter a Misfireger.

Tim.  What Trumpets that?

Msf.  'Tis Alekbiades, and some twenty Horfe

All of Companionship.

Tim.  Pray entertaine them, glue them guide to vs.

You must needs dine with me: go not you hence

Till I haue thankst you; when dinners done

Shew me this piece, I am joyfull of your fights.

Enter Alekbiades with the rest.

Moft welcome Sir.

Ape.  So, lo; their Aches contrac't, and fterne your supple loyest: that there should bee small loue amongst their sweet Knaues, and all this Curtefe.  The straine of mans bred out into Baboon and Monkey.

Sir, you have faid my longing, and I feed

Moft hungerly on your fight.

Tim.  Right welcome Sir:

Ere we departe, we'll share a bounteous time

In different pleasures.

Pray you let us in.

Exeunt.

Enter two Lords.

1.Lord  What time a day is't Apemantus?

Ape.  Time to be honest.

1. That time teres fih.

Ape.  The moft accurst thou that still omift it.

2. Thou art going to Lord Timon Featt.

Ape.  I, to see mete fll Knaues, and Wine heat foole.

2. Farthee well, farthee well.

Ape.  Thou art a Fools to bid me farewell twice.

2. Why Apemantus?

Ape.  Should'st have kept one to thy selfe, for I meaned to glue thee none.

1 Hang thy felfe.

Ape.  No: I will do nothing at thy bidding:

Make thy requests to thy Friend;

2 Away unpenceaible Dogge,

Or Ile spurne thee hence.

Ape.  I will flye like a dogge, the hecules a'th'Affe.

1 Hee's opposite to humanity.

Comes hall we in,

And take Lord Timons bountie: he out-goes

The verie heart of kindneffe.

2 He powres it out: Pluto the God of Gold

Is but his Steward: no meede but he repayes

Seven-fold abowt it felte: No guilt to him,

But breeds the gratier a returne: exceeding

All vse of quittance.

1 The Noblest mind he carries,

That euer gouern'd man.

2 Long may he live in Fortune. Shall we in?

He kepe you Company.

Exeunt.

Hedleys Playing lord Mufcke.

A great Banquet fersd in and then, Enter Lord Timon, the States, the Athenian Lords, Ventigius which Timon

returneth from prifons. Then comes drooping after all Apemantus difcontentedly like himselfe.

Ventig.  Moft honoured Timon,

It hath pleas'd the Gods to remember my Fathers age,

And call him to long peace:

He is gone happy, and has left me rich:

Then, as in grateful Virtue I am bound

To your free heart, I do returnne those Talents

Doubled with thankes and feruices, from whole helpe

I deu'd libertie.

Tim.  O by no meane,

Honest Ventigius: You mistake my love,

I gue
I gave it freely ever, and ther's none
Can truly say he gives, if he receiv's:
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them: faults that are rich are faire.

Tim. A Noble spirit.

Tim. Nay my Lords, Ceremony was but devil'd at first
To set a glibbe on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown:
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.
Pray fit, more welcome are ye to my Fortunes,
Then to my Fortunes to me.

1. Lord. My Lord, we alwaies have conferred it.

Aper. Ho ho, confer it? Hand'sd' it? Have you not?

Tim. O Aperantus, you are welcome.

Aper. No! You shall not make me welcome:
I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fee, that's a churl, ye've got a humour there
Does not become a man; 'tis much too blame:
They say my Lords, kraft to pull by; or
But young man is very angrie.
Go, let him have a Table by himselfe:
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for't indeed.

Aper. Let me stay at thine apperill Timon,
I come to observe, I glue thee warning on'ts.

Tim. I take no heed of thee! That's an Athenian,
Therefore welcome: I my selfe would have no power,
prythee let me make thee silent.

Aper. I scorne thy meate, 'twould choke me: for I Should were flatter thee. Oh you Gods! What a number
Of men eats Timon, and he fain 'em not? It greeues me to see so
Many die there meate in one man blood,
And all the madnecce is, he beares them vp too.
I wonder men dare trust themselves with men.
Me thinks they should enuite them without kniues,
Good for there meate, and fater for their liues.
There's much example for't, the fellow that fits next him,
Now parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a divided draught: is the readiest man to kill him. 'Tas beene proved, if I was a huge man I should fere to Drink at meales, least they should spie my wind-pipes dangerous noates, great men should drink with harnesse on their throates.

Tim. My Lord in heart & let the health go round.

2. Lord. Let it flow this way my good Lord.

Aper. Flow this way! A braue fellow. He keeps his tides well, those healths will make thee and thy state look good, Timon.
Here's that which is too wesse to be a finner,
Honest water, which were left man 'th'mire
This and my food are equals, there's no ods,
Faits are to proud to gie thanks to the Gods.

Aperantus Grace.

Immortal Gods, I crave no pelf,
I pray for no man but my selfs,
Grant I may never prove so fond,
To trust man on his Oath or Bond.
Or a Harlot for her wapping,
Or a Dugge that femes before,
Or a keeper with my frendes,
Or my friends if I should need 'em.

Tim. & fall too's:
Richmen fin, and I eat root.
Much good dich thy good heart, Aperantus Tim. Captain,

Alcibiades, your hearts in the field now.

Alc. My heart is ever at your seruice, my Lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfaist of Enemies, then a dinner of Friends.

Alc. So they were bleeding new my Lord, there's no meat like 'em, I could wish my best friend at such a Feast.

Aper. Would all those Flatterers were thine Enemies
then, that then thou mightst kill 'em: & bid me to 'em.

1. Lord. Might we but haue that happinesse my Lord, that you would once vse our hearts, whereby we might expresse some part of our zeales, we should think our selues for ever perfect.

Timon. Oh no doubt my good Friends, but the, Gods themselues have prouided that I shall haue much helpe from you: how had you beene my Friends else. Why have you that charitable title from thousand? Did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to my selfe, then you can with modestie speake in your owne behalfe. And thus farre I confirme you. Oh you Gods(thinke I), what need we have any Friends; if we should were need of 'em? They were the most needlesse Creatures living: Should we were need vse for ' em? And would most yeatable sweete Instruments hung vp in Cafes, that keeps there soundes to themselfes.
Why I have often wift my selfe poorer, that I might come nearer to you: we are borne to do benefs.
And what better or properer can we call our owne, then the riches of our Friends? Oh what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many like Brothers commanding one anothers Fortunes. Oh loyes, e he made away er't be borne: mine eies cannot hold out waterme thinks, to forget their Faits. I drink to you.

Aper. Thou weep't to make them drinke, Timon.

2. Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eies,
And at that infant, like a babe sprung vp.

Aper. Ho, ho; I laugh to thinke that babe a bafhard.

3. Lord. I promife you my Lord you mow'd me much.

Aper. Much.

Sound Tucket. Enter the Maskers of Amazons with Lutes in their hands, daunting and playing.

Tim. What means that Trumpe? How now?

Enter Servants.

Ser. Please you my Lord, there are certaine Ladies
Most defious of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? what is their wils?

Ser. There comes with them a fore-runner my Lord, which bears that office, to dignifie their pleasures.

Tim. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid with the Mask of Ladies.

Cup. Hail to thee worthy Timon and to all that of his Bounty's tafes: the fiue beft Seneeas eknowledge thee their Patron, and come freely to gratulate thine plentiful bounteous.

There taft, touch all, please'd from thy Table rife:
They onely now come but to Feast thine eies.

Tim. They're welcome all, let 'em have kind admis-
tance. Muficke make their welcome.

Laut. You see my Lord, how ample y're below'd.

Aper. Hoyday,
What a sweepee of vanitie comes this way.
They daunce? They are madwomen,
Like Madneffe is the glory of this life,
As this Pompey heweth to a little oyle and roote.
We make our felues Foole's, to dilpoyr our felues,
And spend our Flatteries, to drink those men,
Vpon whose Age we voyde it vp aget
With poysonous Spight and Enuy.
Who liues, that's not deprayed, or depraes;
Who dyes, that bears not one spurrie to their graves
Of their Friends guilt:
I shoulde feare, that those that dance before me now,
Would one day flappe vpon me: 'Tas bese done, now,
Men that their doores against a setting Sunne,

The Lords rise from Table, with much adoring of Timon, and to fiew their leaves, each alone out an Amazon, and all Dance, men with women; a lefte fransie or two to the Hedges, and cafe.

Tim. You have done our pleasures
Much grace (Sirr, Ladies)
Set a faire fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not halfo so beautifull, and kinde:
You have added worth vntoo', and lutter,
And entertain'd me with mine owne deuite.
I am to thank ye for't.
1 Lord. My Lord you take vs euon at the best.
Aper. Faith for the word is filthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me.
Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you,
Please you to dipofe your felues.
All La. Moft thankfully, my Lord. Exeunt.
Tim. Flavius.
Fla. My Lord.
Tim. The little Casket bring me hither.
Fla. Yes, my Lord. More Jewels yet?
There is no crolling him in's humor,
Else I should tell him well, y'faith I shoul'd;
When all's spent, he'll be croft then, and he could:
'Tis pity Bounty had not eyes behinde,
That man might ne're be wretched for his minde. Exit.
1 Lord. Where be our men?
Ser. Here, my Lord, in readiness.
2 Lord. Our Forces.
Tim. O my Friends:
I have one word to say to you: Lookie you, my good L.
I must intreat you honour me so much,
As to advance this Jewell, accept it, and wear it,
Kinde my Lord.
1 Lord. I am so faire already in your guifs.
All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord, there are certaine Nobles of the Senate newly alighted, and come to visit you.
Tim. They are fairely welcome.

Enter Flavius.

Fla. I beseach your Honor, vouchsafe me a word, it does concern you neere.

Tim. Neere? Why then another time Ile hearre thee.
I pythsee let's be prouided to shew them entertainment.
Fla. I scarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

Ser. May it please your Honor, Lord Lucius.
(Out of his free issue) hath presented to you
 Foole Milke-white Horses, trapped in Siluer.
Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the Prefents
Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.

How now? What newes?
3 Ser. Please you my Lord, that honourable Gentleman Lord Lucullus, entertains your company to morrow, to hunt with him, and he's sent your Honour two brace of Grey-hounds.
Tim. Ile hunt with him,
And let them be recei'd, not without faire Reward.
Fla. What will this come to?
He commands vs to prouide, and glue great guifts, and all out of an empty Coffe:
Nor will he know his Purfe, or yeeld me this,
To shew him what a Beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good.
His promists flye fo beyond his flate,
That what he speaks is all in debt, he ows for e'ry word:
He is so kinde, that he now pays intereft for't;
His Land's put to their Bookes. Well, would I were Gently put out of Office, before I were forc'd out
Hapier he is that has no friend to feede,
Then such that do e'ne Enemies succeed.
I blest inwardly for my Lord. Exit.
Tim. You do your felues much wrong,
You bate too much of your owne merits.
Here, my Lord, a trifte of our Lone.
2 Lord. With more then common thanks
I will receyve it.

3 Lord. O he's the very soule of Bounty.
Tim. And now I remember my Lord, you gaued good words the other day of a Bay Courier I rod on. 'Tis yours
because you like'd it.
1 L.OH. I beseech you pardon mee, my Lord, in that.
Tim. You may take my word my Lord: I know no man can juftly praiue, but what he does affeect.
I waige my Friends affecion with mine owne: Ile tell you true,
Ile call to you.
All Lor. O none fo welcome.
Tim. I take all, and your severall visitations
So kinde to heart, 'tis not enough to gue:
Me thinkes, I could deale Kingdomes to my Friends,
And here be wearie. Alichides,
Thou art a Soldier, therefore finde some rich,
It comes in Charitie to thee: for all thy living
Is mong't the deads: and all the Lands thou haft
Lyce in a pitch field.
All. I, defi'd Land, my Lord.
1 Lord. We are fo vertouusly bound.
Tim. And fo am I to you.
2 Lord. So infinitely eende're'd.
Tim. All to you. Lights, more Lights.
1 Lord. The best of Happines, Honor, and Fortune
Keepes with you Lord Timon.
Tim. Ready for his Friends.

Exeunt Lords

Aper. What a coiles heere, scrufing of beckes, and jutting out of busses. I doubt whether their Legges be worth the summes that are gien for 'em.

Friendships full of drogges,
Me thinkes false hearts, shold never have found legges.
Thus honest Foole lay out their wealth on Curtises.
Tim. Now Aper'mantius (if thouwert not fallen)
I would be good to thee.
Aper. No, Ile nothing; for if I should be brib'd too, there would be none left to balle vpon thee, and then would you leffe the fatteres. Thou gav'st so long Timon (I fear me) thou wilt give away thy felle in paper shortly.
What needs theree Feasts, pompes, and Vaine-glories?

Tim.
Tim. Nay, and you begin to rail on Societie once, I am sworn to not to give regard to you. Farewell, & come with better Munkie.

Exit.

Aper. So: Thou wilt not hear mee now, thou shalt not then. He locke thy heaven from thee: Oh that mens ears should be to Counsel deafe, but not to Flatterie.

Exit.

Enter a Senator.

Sen. And late five thousand: to Varro and to Ifidore. He owes nine thousand, besides my former summe. Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion

Of raging wafe? It cannot hold, it will not. If I want Gold, stale but a beggers Dogge, And give it Timon, why the Dogge coines Gold. If I would sell my House, and buy twenty more Better then he: why glue my Horle to Timon. Ask nothing, give it him, it Foles me straight

And able Horfes: No Porter at his gate, But rather one that smiles, and full imagines All that paffe by. It cannot hold, no reason Can found his flute in safety. Capito boa.

Capito I say.

Enter Capito.

Ca. Heere sir, what is your pleasure. Sen. Get on your cloake, & haft to Lord Timon. Imporntune him for my Moneys, be not cait

With flight deniall; nor then finc'd, when Command me to your Mafter, and the Cap Plays in the right hand, thus: but tell him, My Vies cry to me; I must ferue my turne Out of mine owne, his days and times are paft, And my reliances on his fratted dates Hau e finit my credit. I love, and honour him, But mutt not breake my backe, to hesel his finger. Immediate are my needs, and my releafe Muft not be toft and turn'd to me in words, But finde fuppy immediate. Get you gone, Put on a moll importunate aspect,

A vilage of demand: for I do fear When every Feather finckes in his owne wing, Lord Timon will be left a naked gull; Which fmalhes now a Phoenix, get you gone.

Enter Steward, with many kife in his hand.

Stew. No care, no flup, fo fencelfe of expeence, That he will neither know how to maintaine it, Nor ceafe his Rife of flight. Takes no accoompl How things go from him, nor refume no care Of what is to continue: neuer minde, Was to be fo vnwife, to be fo kinde.

What full be done, he will not heare, till feele: I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.

Fye, fie, fie, fie, fie.

Enter Capito, Ifidore, and Varro.

Cap. Would we were all diicharg'd.

Var. I feare it.

Cap. Heere comes the Lord.

Enter Timon, and his Traine.

Tim. So foone as dinners done, we'le forth againe

My Alcibiades. With me, what is your will? Cap. My Lord, heere is a note of certaine dues.

To the succession of new days this moneth:

My Mafter is awak'd by great Occasion,

To call vnpon his owne, and humbly prays you,

That with your other noble parts, you'ltuife,

In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honett Friend, I prythee but repaire to me next morning.

Cap. If you did know my Lord, my Masters wants. Var. 'Twas due on fortyturre my Lord, fixe weeks, and paft.

If. Your Steward puts me off my Lord, and I Am fenf expressly to your Lordship.

Tim. Give me breath:

I do befeech you good my Lords keepe on,

He wate upon you infancy. Come hither: pray you How goes the world, that I am thus encountered

With clamorous demands of debt, broken Bonds,

And the detention of long fince due debts

Against my Honor?

Sen. Pray fee you Gentlemen,

The time is vaageable to this buifiefe:

Your importunacie ceafe, till after dinner, That I may make his Lordship understand

Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do to my Fathers, fee them well entertain'd.

Enter Apemantus and Foole.

Capito. Stay, stay, here comes the Foole with Ape-manus, let's ha some sport with 'em.

Var. Hang him, he'll abuse us.

Ifid. A plague upon him dogge.

Var. How doft Foole?

Ape. Doft Dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. I speake not to thee.

Ape. No 'ts to thy felfe. Come away.

If. There's the Foole hangs on your backe already.

Ape. No thou fland'ft finge, th'art not on him yet.

Cap. Where's the Foole now?

Ape. He latk ask'd the question. Poore Rogues, and Vlurses men, Bauds betweene Gold and want.

Ali. What are we Apemantus?

Ape. Alles.

Ali. Why?

Ape. That you ask me what you are, & do not know your felues. Speake to'em Foole.

Foole. How do you Gentlemen?

Ali. Gramercies good Foole:

How does your Miftref?
Timon of Athens.

Foole. She's e'er fett'ng on water to fcat'd such Chickens as you are. Would we could fee you at Corinth.

Ape. Good, Gramercy.

Enter Page.

Foole. Looke you, heere comes my Masters Page.

Page. Why how now Captaine? what do you in this company. How doe thou Apemantus?

Ape. Would I had a Rod in my mouth, that I might anfwer thee profitably.

Boy. Prythee Apemantus read me the supercifcripti on of thefe Letters, I know not which is which.

Ape. Cant not read?

Page. No.

Ape. There will little Learning dye then that day thou art hang'd. This is to Lord Timon, this to Alcibiades. Go thou was't borne a Baffard, and thou'rt dye a Bawd.

Page. Thou was't whelp a Dogge, and thou fhalt famih a Dogges death.

Anfwer not, I am gone.

Ape. E'ne fo thou out-runt Grace,

Foole I will go with you to Lord Timons.

Foole. Will you leave me there?

Ape. If Timon flay at home.

You three ferue three Vifurers?

All. I would they feru'd vs.

Ape. So would I.

As good a tricke as euer Hangman fenu'd Theefe.

Foole. Are you three Vifurers men?

All. I Foole.

Foole. I thynke no Vifurer, but ha's a Foole to his Servant. My Mihtis is one, and I am her Foole: when men come to borrow of your Masters, they approach fadly, and go away merry: but they enter my Masters howel merrily, and go away fadly. The reafon of this?

Var. I could render one.

Ape. Do it then, that we may account thee a Whoremafter, and a Knaue, which notwithstanding thou fhalt be no leffe effecmed.

Furte. What is a Whoremafter Foole?

Foole. A Foole in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit, sometime t'appears like a Lord, fometime like a Lawyer, sometime like a Philofopher, with two fones moe then's artificall one. Hee is verie often like a Knight; and generally, in all shapes that man goes vp andowne in, from fourtfre to thirteen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Thou art not altogether a Foole.

Foole. Nor thou altogether a Wife man, As much foolerie as I have, fo much wit thou lack'rt.

Ape. That anfwer might have become Apemantus.

All. Alas, alas, heere comes Lord Timon.

Enter Timon and Seward.

Ape. Come with me (Foole) come.

Foole. I do not always folow Louver, elder Brother, and Woman, sometime the Philofopher.

Seward. Pray you walk encre, Ile speake with you anon.

Exeunt.

Tim. You make me meruell wherefore ere this time Had you not fully laide my flate before me, That I might fo have rated my expence As I had laue of meanes.

Seward. You would not heare me:

At many lefures I propofe.

Tim. Go too:

Purchance some fingle vantages you tooke,
When my indiffipation put you backe,
And that you paffed all your minifter
Thus to excute your felfe.

Seward. O my good Lord,
At many times I brought in my accomplis,
Laid them before you, you would throw them off,
And fay you found them in mine honeftie,
When for fome trifling prentent you hauve bid me
Returne fo much, I haue fhoake my head, and wept:
Yea gainft th'Authoritie of manners,pray'd you to hold your hand more clofe: I did indulge
Not fildome, nor no flight checkes, when I hauie
Prompted you in the ebe of your eftate,
And your great flow of debts; my lou'd Lord,
Though you heare now (too late) yet nowes a time,
The greated of your hauing, laces a halfe,
To pay your prentent debts.

Tim. Let all my Land be fold.

Seward. 'Tis all engag'd, fome forfeited and gone,
And what remaines will hardly flop the mouth
Of prentent dues; the future comes space:
What ball defend the interim, and at length
How goes our reck'ning?

Tim. To Lacedemon did my Land extend.

Seward. O my good Lord, the world is but a word,
Were it all yours, to give it in a breath,
How quickely were it gone.

Tim. You tell me true.

Seward. If you fufequeft your Husbandry or Falthood,
Call me before th'exacted Auidors,
And fet me on the profe. So the Gods bleffe me,
When all our Offices have beene oppreft
With riotous Feeders, when our Vaults have wept
With drunken fplith of Wine; when every roome
Hath blaz'd with Lights, and braid with Miniftrelfe,
I haue retyr'd me to a waffel full locke,
And fet mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prythee no more.

Seward. Heauens, haue I faid, the bounty of this Lord:
How many prodigall blts hauie Slaves and Peanzs
This night enligluted: who is not Timon,
What heart, head, word, force, meanes, but is L. Timon:
Great Timon, Noble, Worthy, Royall Timon:
Ah, when the meanes are gone, that buy this praife,
The breath is gone, whereof this praife is made:
Faiit won, faiit looft; one cloud of Winter snowres,
These flyes are couught.

Tim. Come fermon me no further.

No villanous bounty yet hath paff my heart;
Vverifie, not ignoble have I gwen.
Why doft thou weepes, canst thou the confience lacke,
To thinke I shall lacke friends; secure thy heart,
If I would broach the veffels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts, by borrowing,
Men, and mens fortunes could I Frankely yfe
As I can bid thee speake.

Seward. Affurance bleffe your thoughts.

Tim. And in fome fort thefe wants of mine are crown'd,
That I account them bleslings. For by thefe
Shall I trie Friends. You shall perceiue
How you may flake my Fortunes:
I am wealthie in my Friends.
Within there, Flavius, Serullius?
Timon of Athens.

Enter three Servants.

Ser. My Lord, my Lord.

Tim. I will dispatch you feuerally.

You to Lord Lucas, to Lord Lucullus you, I hunted with his Honor to day; you to Sempronius; commend me to their loves; and I am proud say, that my occasions have found time to vfe 'em toward a supply of mony; let the requent be fifty Talents.

Flam. As you have faid, my Lord.

Sem. Lord Lucas and Lucullus! Humph. Time. Go you fir to the Senators;

Of whom, even to the States best health; I have deferu'd this Hearing; bid 'em fend o'ffinstant

A thousand Talents to me.

Ser. I have beene bold

(For that I knew it the more generall way)

To them, to vfe your Signet, and your Name,

But they do flake their heads, and I am here

No richer in returne.

Tim. Is't true? Can't be?

Sew. They answer in a joynt and corporal voice,

That now they are at fall, want Treasure cannot

Do what they would, are forrie: you are Honourable,

But yet they could have wifh, they know not,

Something hath beene amisse; a Noble Nature

May catch a wrench; would all were well; its pity,

And fo intending other ferior matters,

After diffaflate full looks: and then hard Fratrons

With certaine half-caps, and cold mowing rods,

They froze me into Silence.

Tim. You Gods reward them.

Prythee man looke cheerily. Their old Fellowes

Have their ingratitude in them Hereditary:

Their blood is cack'd, 's cold, it fiddle fowles,

'Tis lacke of kindly warmth, they are not kinde;

And Nature, as it growes againe toward earth,

Is fadtion for the journey, dull and heavy.

Go to Venutius (prythee be not fad),

Thou art true, and honest; Ingeniously I fpeake,

No blame belongs to thee: Venutius lately

Buried his Father, by whole death hee's ftepp'd

Into a great estate: When he was poor,

Imprison'd, and in fcarlity of Friends,

I cleere'd him with five Talents: Greet him from me,

Bid him fupper, some good necifity

Touches his Friend, which craves to be remembered

With choofe five Talents; that had, guess thefle Fellowes

To whom 's infant due. Ne'er fpeake, or thinke,

That Timons fortunes mong his Friends can fink.

Sew. I would I could not think it:

That thought is Bounties Foe;

Being fre in felfe, it thinkes all others fo.

Exeunt

Flaminius waiting to fpeake with a Lord from his Mafter, enters a fervant to him.

Ser. I have told my Lord of you, he is comming down to you.

Flam. I thank you Sir. Enter Lucullus.

Ser. Heere's my Lord.

Why this his right: I dreampt of a Silver Bafon & Exwe to night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very reperctuallly welcome sir. Fill me fome Wine. And how does that Honourable, Compleat, Free-hearted Gentleman of Athens, thy very bountifull good Lord and Mayfter?

Flam. His health is well fir.

Luc. I am right glad that his health is well fir: and what haft thou there under thy Cloake, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box Sir, which in my Lords behalfe, I come to intrest your Honor to supply: who having great and infant occasion to vfe fiftie Talents, hath fent to your Lordship to furnish him: nothing doubting your prefent affifiance therein.

Luc. La, la, la! Nothing doubting fays hee? Alas good Lord, a Noble Gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep fo good a houfe. Many a time and often I ha din'd with him, and told him on't, and come againe to fupper to him of purpofe, to have him spend leffe, and yet he wold embrace no coundel, take no warning by my comming, evcry man has his fault, and honeftly is his. I ha told him on't, but I could nere get him from't.

Enter Servants with Wine.

Ser. Pleafe your Lordship, here is the Wine.

Luc. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wife.

Heere's to thee.

Flam. Your Lordship fpokens your pleasure.

Luc. I have obferued thee always for a towardlie prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reafon, and can't vfe the time well, if the time vfe thee well. Good parts in thee; get you gone far-

rah. Draw neerer honett Flaminius. Thy Lords a bountiful Gentleman, but thou art wife, and thou know'st well enough (although thou com'st to me) that this is no time to lend mony, especially upon bare ffrainhippe without fcurfure. Here's three Solidares for thee, good Boy winke at me, and lay thou faw'st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't poiffible the world should fo much differ,

And we alife that liued! Fly dammed balenelle

To him that worships thee.

Luc. Ha! Now I fee thou art a Foolie, and fit for thy Mafter.

Exit L.

Flam May there add to the number 1 may scald thee:

Let motten Coine be thy damnation,

Thou difafe of a friend, and himfelle:

Has ffriendfhip fuch a fiant and milkie heart,

It turns in leffe then two nights? O you Gods!

I feele my Mafter's passion. This Slawe vnto his Honor,

Has my Lords meate in him:

Why should it thrive, and turne to Nutriment,

When he is turn'd to{'s drawne out?

O may Difafe only worke upon't:

And when he's fickle to death,let not that part of Nature

Which my Lord pay'd for, be of any power

To expell fickneffe, but prolong his hower.

Exit.

Enter Lucius with three Strangers.

Luc. Who the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend and an Honourable Gentleman.

1 We know him for no leffe, though we are but ffrangers to him. But I can tel you one thing my Lord, and which I hear from common rumours, now Lord Timon happie howres are done and paft, and his eftate shrinks from him.

Lucius. Fye no, doe not beleue it: hee cannot want for money.

2 But beleue you this my Lord, that not long aге,

one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow fo

many Talents, nay vrg'd extreemly for't, and shewed

what what necessity belong'd too't, and yet was deny'd.

Luci. How?

2 I tell you, deny'd my Lord.

Luci. What a strange face was that? Now before the Gods I am affirm'd on't. Denied that honourable man! There was very little Honour there in't. For my owne part, I must needs confess, I have receiv'd some small kindnesse from him, as Money, Plate, Jewels, and such like Trifles; nothing comparing to his: yet had hee miftook him, and sent to me; I should ne'er have denied his Occasion so many Talents.

Enter Seruillus.

Seruill. See, by good hap yonders my Lord, I have fweet to fee his Honor. My Honorable Lord.

Luci. Seruillus? You are kindly met sir. Farthewell, commend me to thy Honourable vertuous Lord, my very exquisite Sir.

Seruill. May it please your Honour, my Lord hath fent me.

Luci. Has what? what's he sent? I am so much eneered to that Lord; he's ever fending me; how fhall I think him think it thou? And what has he fent now?

Seruill. Has only fent his prefent Occasion now my Lord: requifting your Lordship to supply his infant fife with fo many Talents.

Luci. I know his Lordship is but merry with me, He cannot want fifty five hundred Talents.

Seruill. But in the mean time he wants ifte my Lord.

If his occafion were not vertuous, I should not urge it hateful to faithfully.

Luci. Doft thou fpake ferioufly Seruillus?

Seruill. Upon my foule 'tis true Sir.

Luci. What a wicked Effay was I to disfurnish my felf against fuch a good time, when I might ha shewn my felfe Honourable? How vnluckily it hapned, that I fhould purchase the day before for a little part, and vno a great dace of Honour? Seruillus, now before the Gods I am not able to do (the more bees I fay) I was fending to vfe Lord Timon my felfe, thefe Gentlemen can witneffe; but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had don't now.

Commend me bountifully to his good Lordship, and I hope his Honor will concile the faireft of me, becaufe I have no power to be kind. And tell him this from me, I count it one of my great affifions, that I cannot pleure fuch an Honourable Gentleman. Good Seruillus, will you befriend mee to farre, as to vfe mine owne words to him?

Luci. Hee looke you out a good turne Seruillus.

True as you faid, Timon is frunkne indeed, And he that's once deny'de, will hardly spreede. Exit.

1 Do you obferue this Hiftilius?

2 I, to well.

1 Why this is the worlds foule, And luft of the fame precio-

Is euery Flatterers fport: who can call him his Friend
That dips in the fame dill? For in my knowing
Timon has bin this Lords Father,
And kept his credit with his purfe:
Supported his eftate, pay Timon money
Has paid his men their wages. He ne're drinks,
But Timons Siluer treads upon his Lip,
And yet, oh fee the monifterneffe of man,
Where he looks out in an vgroterfull shape;
He does deny him (in refpect of his)

What charitable men afford to Beggers.

3 Religion grozes at it.

1 For mine owne part, I never tafted Timon in my life
Nour care any of his bounles ouer me,
To marke me for his friend. Yet I proteft,
For his right Noble minde, illuflrous Vertue,
And Honourable Carriage,
Had his neceflity made fife of me,
I would have put my wealth into Donations,
And the beft halfe: should have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart: But I perceiue,
Men muft learn now with pitty to difpence,
For Policy fits above Confience.

Enter a third servant with Sympronius, another
Of Timons Friends.

Sympl. Muft he needs trouble me in't? Hum.

'Bouse all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus,
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prifon; All thefe
Owes their eftates unto him.

Sir. My Lord,

They have all bin touch'd, and found Bafe-Mettle,
For they have all denied him.

Sympl. How? Have they deny'de him?

Has Ventidius and Lucullus deny'de him,
And does he fend to me? Three? Humph?

It shews but little love, or judgement in him.

Muft I be his late Refuge? His Friends (like Phyficians)
Thrice, glue him over: Muft I take th'Care upon me?
Has much difgree'd me in't, I'me angry at him,
That might have knownde my place. I fee no fene for't,
But his Occafions might have woode mee fift:
For in my confience, I was the first man
That ere received gift from him.

And does he thinke fo backwardly of me now,
That Ile requite it laf? No:
So it may prove an Argument of Laughter
To th'rich, and 'mong't Lords be thought a Fool:
I'd rather then the worth of thrice the fumme,
Had fent to me &t, but for my minde false:
I'd fuch a courage to do him good. But now returne,
And with their faint reply, this anwer loyne:
Who bates mine Honor, hall not know my Coyne. Exit

Sir. Excellent: Your Lordships a goody Villain: the duell knew not what he did, when hee made man Politticke; he daffed himfelfe by me and I cannot thinke, but in the end, the Villanies of man will fet him cleere.

How fairly this Lord thrues to appear foole? Takes Vertuous Copes to be wicked: like thofe, thot vnder hotte ardent zeale, would fet whole Realmes on fire, offuch a nature is his politike love.

This was my Lords belt hope, now all are fled
Sawe onely the Gods. Now his Friends are dead,
Dores that were ne're acquainted with their Wards
Many a bounteous yeere, muft be impoy'd
Now to guard sure their Matter:
And this is all a liberall coufe allows,
Who cannot keepe his wealth, muft keep his house.Exit.

Enter Parre's man, meeting others. All Timons Creditors to wait for his comung out. Then enter Lucius and Hortensius.

Uar. man. Well met, goodmorning Titus & Hortensius
Titos & Hortensius

684
Tit. The like to you kindle Varro.
Hort. Lucius, what do we meet together?
Luc. I, and I think one businesse do's command vs all.
For mine is money.
Tit. So is theirs, and ours.
Varro. Enter Philotus.
Luci. And sir Philemon too.
Phil. Good day at once.
Luci. Welcome good Brother.
What do you think the hour?
Phil. Labouring for Nine.
Luc. So much?
Phil. Is not my Lord scene yet?
Luc. Not yet.
Phil. I wonder on't, he was wont to shine at feasten.
Luci. I, but the days are want shorter with him.
You must eate, what a soft digest course?
Is like the Sunnes, but not like his recoverable, I fear:
'Tis deepest Winter in Lord Timons purse, that is: One may reach deeper and deeper, and yet finde little.
Phil. I am of your feares, for that.
Tit. He shew you how to obferue a strange event:
Your Lord pays now for Money?
Hort. Most true, he do's.
Tit. And he weares jewels now of Timons guilt,
For which I wait for money.
Hort. It is against my heart.
Luc. Marke how his face doth owes,
...'Tis from this tosh should pay more then he owes:
And e're as your Lord should weare rich Jewels,
And fend for money for 'em.
Hort. 'Tis very weary of this Charge,
The Gods can witnesse:
I know my Lord hath sent of Timons wealth,
And now ingratitude, makes it worse then theft.
Varro. Yes, mine's three thousand Crownes:
What's yours?
Luc. Five thousand mine.
Varro. 'Tis much deeper, and it should seem by th'ium:
Your Masters confidence was abuse mine,
Else surely his had equall'd.

Enter Flamininus,
Tit. One of Lord Timons men.
Luc. Flaminus? Sir, a word: Pray is my Lord ready to come forth?
Flam. No, indeed he is not.
Tit. We attend this Lordship: pray signifie so much.
Flam. I need not tell him that, he knowes you are too
Enter Steward in a Cloath, muffled (diligent).
Luci. Hal: is not that his Steward muffled fo?
He goes away in a Cloath: Call him, call him.
Tit. Do you hear, sir?
Stew. What do ye ak of me, my Friend.
Tit. We wait for certaine Money here, sir.
Stew. I, if Money were as certaine as your waiting,
'Twere sure enough.
Why then prefer'd you not your summes and Billes
When your false Masters eate of my Lords meat?
Then they could smile, and fume upon his debts,
And take downe th'intrest into their glutinous Maws,
You do your felues but wrong, to fume me vp,
Let me paffe quietly:
Believe't, my Lord and I have made an end,
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.
Luci. I, but this answer will not serue.

Stew. If'twill not serue, 'tis not so base as you,
For you serue Knaues.
1. Varro. How? What does his caffheer'd Worship
mutter?
2. Varro. No matter what, he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speake broader, then hee that has no house to put his head in? Such may rayle against great buildings.

Enter Serullius.
Tit. Oh here's Serullius: now wee shall know some answer.
Seru. If I might befeech you Gentlemen, to repaye some other hour, I should derive much from't. For tak't of my soule, my Lord leaves wondrouslie to diccontent:
His comfortable temper has forooke him, he's much out of health, and keepe his Chamber.
Luci. Many do keep their Chambers, are not sicke:
And if it be so farre beyond his health,
Me thinkes he should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a cleere way to the Gods.
Serull. Good Gods.
Titus. We cannot take this for answer, sir,
Flamininus withine. Serullius helps, my Lord, my Lord.

Enter Timon in a rage.
Tim. What, are my dores oppos'd against my paffige?
Hau you bin euer free, and muft my house
Be my retentst Enemy? My God?
The place which I have feated, does it now
(like all Mankind) fiew me an Iron heart?
Luci. Put in now Titus,
Tim. My Lord, heere is my Bill.
Luci. Here's mine.
1. Far. And mine, my Lord,
2. Far. And ours, my Lord.
Philip. All our Bills.
Tim. Knocke me downe with 'em, cleaue mee to the Girdle.
Luc. Alias, my Lord.
Tim. Cut my heart in fumes.
Tit. Mine, fifty Talents.
Tim. Tell out my blood.
Luc. Five thousand Crownes, my Lord.
Tim. Five thousand drops payes that.
What yours? and yours?
1. Far. My Lord.
2. Far. My Lord.
Tim. Tearre me, take me, and the Gods fall ypon you.

Exit Timon.
Hort. Faith I perceivall our Masters may throwe their caps at theirc money, thefe debts may well be cal'd deprecate ones, for a madman owes 'em.

Exeunt.

Enter Timon.
Timon. They have e'en put my breath from mee the Stew. My dere Lord.
Tim. What if it shoulde be so?
Stew. My Lord.
Tim. Ile haue it fo. My Steward?
Stew. Heere my Lord.
Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my Friends againe,
Lucius, Lucullus, and Summervinos Vlæo: All,
ile once more feath the Ruffels.
Stew. O my Lord, you only speake from your disfraded soule; there's not so much left to, furnish out a moderate Table.

Timon.
Enter three Senators at one door, Alcibiades meeting them, with Attendants.

1. Sen. My Lord, you have my voyce, too';
   The faults Bloody:
   'Tis necessary he should dye:
   Nothing imboldens sinne to much, as Mercy.
   2. Moft true; the Law fhall bruife 'em.

Alec. Honor, health, and compaffion to the Senate.

1 Now Captaine.

Alec. I am an humble Sutor to your Vertues;
For pitty is the vertue of the Law,
And none but Tyrants vfe it cruelly.
It pleases time and Fortune to lye heauie
Vpon a Friend of mine, who in hot blood
Hath fept into the Law: which is pait depth
To chafe that (without heare) do plundge inroo't.
He is a Man (letting his Fate afide) of comely Vertues,
Nor did he foyle the fact with Cowardice,
(And Honour in him, which buyes out his fault)
But with a Noble Fury, and faire Spirit,
Seeing his Repuation to'd to death,
He did oppofe his Foes:
And with fuch fober and vnoated passion
He did behoove his anger ere 'twas fpent,
As if he had but prou'd an Argument.

1. Sen. You vndergo too brib't a Paradox,
Striving to make an vile dead looke faire:
Your words have tooke fuch paines, as if they laboured
To bring Man-flaughter into forme, and fet Quarrelures
Vpon the head of Valour; which indeede
Is Valour mif-begot, and came into the world,
When Scels, and Ftclions were newly borne.
Here's truly Valiant, that can wisely fuffer
The wroth that man can breath,
And make his Wrongs, his Out-fides,
To wearre them like his Rayment, careleffly,
And ne're preferre his inuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If Wrongs be euilles, and Inforce vs kill,
What Folly 'tis, to hazard life for Ill.

Alec. My Lord.

1. Sen. You cannot make groffe finnes looke cleare,
To engage is no Valour, but to heare.

Alec. My Lords, then vnder favour, pardon me,
If I speake like a Captaine.

Why do fond men expofe themfelves to Battell,
And not endure all threats? Sleeepe vpon't,
And let the Foes quietely cut their Throats
Without repugnancy? If there be Such Valour in the bearing, what make wee Abroad? Why then, Women are more valiant
That fay at home, if Bearing carry it:
And the Allies, more Captaine then the Lyon?
The fellow laden with Iron, wifer then the Jufde?
If Wifedome be in fuffering, Oh my Lords,
As you are great, be pittifull Good,
Who cannot commend raffe neffe in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is finnes extremelt Guft,
But in defence, by Mercy, 'tis molt Juit.
To be in Anger, is impofte:
But who is Man, that is not Angrie.
Weigh but the Crime with this.

Alec. In vaine?

His fervice done at Lacedemon, and Bifantio
Were a fufficient bribe for his life.

1 What's that?

Alec. Why say my Lords ha's done faire fervice,
And faine in fight many of your enemies:
How full of valour did he beare himfelfe
In the laft Conflit, and made plentiful wounds?
2 He has made too much plenty with him:
He's a worme Rior, he has a finne.
That often drownes him, and takes his valour prisoner.
If there were no Foes, that were enough
To overcome him. In that Beafly furie,
He has bin knowne to commit outrages,
And cherrifh Factions. 'Tis infer'd to vs,
His days are foule, and his drinke dangerous.

1 He dies.

Alec. Fear not: he might have dyed in warre.
My Lords, if not for any parts in him,
Though his right arme might purchase his owne time,
And be in debt to none: yet more to moove you,
Take my deferts to his, and lyone'em both.
And for I know, your reverend Ages loue Security,
Ile pawne my Victories, all my Honour to you
Vpon his good returns.
If by this Crime, he owes the Law his life,
Why let the Warre receiue'nt in valiant gore,
For Law is frit, and Warre is nothing more.

1 We are for Law, he dyes, vrg no more
On height of our difpleafure: Friend, or Brother,
He forfeits his owne blood, that fillies another.

Alec. Muft it be fo? It muft not bee:
My Lords, I do beseech you know mee.

2 How?

Alec. Call me to your remembrances.

3 What.

Alec. I cannot think but your Age has forgot me,
It could not elfe be, I should prove to bace,
To fue and be defky'd fuch common Grace.
My wounds ake at you.
1 Do you dare our anger?
'Tis in few words, but fpacious in effe{:}
We banifh thee for euer.

Alec. Banifh me?

Banifh your dotage, banifh vufurie,
That maketh the Senate wry.

1 If after two daies fhine, Athens containe thee,
Attend our weightier Judgement.
And not to swell our Spirit,
He fhall be executed prefently.

Alec. Now the Gods keep you old enough,
That you may live
One in bone, that none may looke on you.
I'm worfe then mad: I haue kept backe their Foes
While they haue told their Money, and let out
Their Coine vpon large intereft. I my felie,
Rich only in large hurts. All thofe, for this?
Is it this the Balfome, that the furling Senat
Powres into Captaines wounds? Banifhment.
It comes not ill: I hate not to be banifht,
It is a caufe worthy my Splene and Furie,
That I may strike at Athens. Ile cheere vp
My discommited Troopes, and lay for hearts;
'Tis Honour with molt Lands to be at ois,
Souldiers fhould brooke as little wrongs as Gods.
Enter divers Friends at severall dores.

1. The good time of day to you, Sir.
2. I alfo with it to you: I thinke this Honorable Lord did but tryst you this other day.

Tim. Each man to his flothe, with that purre as hee would to the lip of his Miistris; your dyct shall bee in all places alike. Make not a Citee Feaftt of it, to let the meat coole, ere we can agree upon the firft place. Sir, Sir.

The Gods require our Thankes.

You great Benefactors, sprinkle our Society with Thankfulness. For your own gifts, make your fires prou'd: But referve flill to give, leaff your Duties be defpir'd. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another. For were your Godheads to borrow of men, men would forfake the Gods. Make the Meate be belou'd, more then the Man that gives it. Let no Assembly of Twenty, be without a fcore of Villaines. If there fit twelve Women at the Table, let a dozen of them bee as they are. The Reft of your Feests, O Gods, the Senators of Athens, together with the common legge of People, what is amisse in them, you Gods, make futable for defcription. For those my present Friends, as they are to mee nothing, fo in nothing bleffe them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Vncouer Dugges, and lap.

Some fhock. What do's his Lordship meanes?

Some other. I know not.

Timon. May you a better Feaft never be hold.

You knot of Mouth-Friends: Smoke, & lukewarm water is your perfection. This is Timons laft, Who fuckle and spangeled you with Flatteries, Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces.

You reeking villany. Blue loath'd, and long Moft fmingling, smooth, defteated Parafites, Curteous Deftrayers, affable Wolves, meeke Beares: You Fools of Fortune, Trencher-friends, Times Flyes, Cap and knee-Slaues, vapours, and Minute Jackes. Of Man and Beast, the infinite Maladie

Cruft you quite o're. What do'th thou go? Soft, take thy Phycife firft; thou too,and thou:

Stay I will lend thee money, borrow none.

What! All in Motion? Henceforth be no Feaft, Whereat a Villaine's not a welcome Gueft.

Borne house, finke A thens, henceforth hated be

Of Timon Man, and all Humanity.

Enter the Senators, with other Lords.

1. How now, my Lords?
2. Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury?
3. Puffs, did you fee my Cap?
4. I have loft my Gowne.
5. He's but a mad Lord, & nothit but humors foakes him. He gave me a Jewell th'other day, and now hee has beate it out of my hand.
6. Did you fee my Jewell?
7. Did you fee my Cap.
8. Heere'tis.
10. Let's make no fay.
11. Lord Timon mad.
12. I feel'ton my bones.
13. One day he gies vs Diamonds, next day ftones.

Exit the Senators.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me looke backe upon thee. O thou Wall That girdles in those Wolves, due in the earth, And hence not Athens. Matrons, brew out of incontinent, Obedience fayle in Children: Slaues and Fools.

Timon of Athens.

This yellow Stale,
Will knitt and breake Religions, bleffe th'accurst,
Make the hoare Leprofe ador'd, place Theeues,
And give them Title, Knee,and approbation
With Senators on the Bench : This is That
That makes the wappen'd Widdow wed againe;
Shee, whom the Spittle-house, and vilerous forces,
Would caft the gare at. This Embalme and Spices
To' thy Aprill day againe. Come damn'd Earth,
Thou common whore of Mankinde, that puttes oddes
Among the rout of Nations, I will make thee
Do thy right Nature. March smerge off.
Ha! A Drumme? Th'art quicke,
But yet I Ieury thee: Thou'lt go (strong Theefe)
When Gowty keepers of thee cannot stand:
May fay thou out for earntch.

Enter Alcibiades with Drumme and Fifis in warlike manner,, and Phrynia and Timandra.

Tim. A Beast as thou art. The Maker gnaw thy hart
For fheewing me against the eyes of Man.
Alc. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee,
That art thy felie a Man?
Tim. I am Miftreps, and hate Aankinde.
For thy part, I do with thou wert a dogge,
That I might loue thee something.
Alc. I know thee well:
But in thy Fortunes am voleard, and strange.
Tim. I know thee too, and more then that I know thee
I not desire to know. Follow thy Drumme,
With man blood paint the ground Gules, Gules:
Religious Cannons, cull Lavees are cruel,
Then what should warre be? This fell whore of thine,
Hath in her more destruction then thy Sword,
For all her Cherubin looks.
Phreis. Thy lips rot off.
Tim. I will not kiffe thee, then the rot returns
To thine owne lips againe.
Alc. How came the Noble Timon to this change?
Tim. As the Mooone do's, by wanting light to give:
But then renew I cou'd not like the Mooone,
There were no Sunnes to borrow of.
Alc. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?
Tim. None, but to maintaine my opinion.
Alc. What is it Timon?
Tim. Promife me Friendship, but performe none.
If thou wilt not promife the Gods plague thee, for thou art a man: if thou do'ft performe, confound thee, for thou art a man.
Alc. I have heare in some fort of thy Miseries.
Tim. Thou faw'ft them when I had prosperity.
Alc. I fee them now, then was a bleffed time.
Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of Harlots.
Timon. Is this th'Athenian Mifion, whom the world
Voic'd fo faroffully?
Tim. Art thou Timandra?
Timon. Yes.
Tim. Be a where fill, they lose thee not that vie thee, give them difeases, leaving with thee their Luft. Make vie of thy 15th hours, feafon the flaves for Tubbes and Bathes, bring downe Rope-cheek'd youth to the Fubfaff, and the Diet.
Timon. Hang thee Monster.
Alc. Pardin him sweet Timandra, for his wits
Are drown'd and loft in his Calaminies.

I have but little Gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof, doth dayly make resolt
In my penurious Band. I have heard and green'd
How curfed Athens, mindeflefe of thy worth,
Forgetting thy great deeds, when Neighbour rates
But for thy Sword and Fortune tread upon them.
Tim. I prythee beate thy Drum, and get thee gone.
Alc. I am thy Friend, and pitty thee deere Timon.
Tim. How doeft thou pitty him whom' doft trouble,
I had rather be alone.
Alc. Why fare thee well:
Here is some Gold for thee.
Tim. Keeps it, I cannot eate it.
Alc. When I have laid proud Athens on a heape.
Tim. Warr'ft thou 'gainst Athens.
Alc. I Timon, and have caufe.
Tim. The Gods confound them all in thy Conqueft,
And thee after, when thou haft Conqueft'd.
Alc. Why me, Timon?
Tim. That by killing of Villaines
Thou wast borne to conquer my Country.
Put vp thy Gold. God, heeres Gold, go on;
Be as a Planetary plague, when Iose
Will o're some high-Vic'd City, hang his poysen
In the fickie ayre: let not thy sword skip one:
Pitty not honour'd Age for his white Beard,
He is an Villure. Strike me the counterfit Matron,
It is her habite onely, that is honest,
Her felie's a Bawd. Let not the Virgins cheecke
Make soft thy trenchant Sword: for chofe Milke pappes
That through the window Barne bore at mens eyes,
Are not within the Lease of pitty writ,
But fet them downe horrible Traitors.Spare not the Babe
Whose dried smalies from Fooles exhaust their mercy;
Thinke it a Dallard, whom the Oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounced, the throat shall cut,
And mine it fans remorie. Sware against Obeles,
Put Armour on thine eares, and on thine eyes,
Whose pride, nor yells of Mothers, Maides, nor Babes,
Nor sight of Priests in holy Vefiments bleeding,
Shall pierce a iot. There's Gold to pay thy Souldiers,
Make large confufion: and thy fury ipent,
Confounded be thy felie. Speake not, be gone.
Alc. Haft thou Gold yet, lie take the Gold thou giv'-
eft me, not all thy Counsell.
Tim. Doft thou or doft thou not, Heauens curfe upon thee.

Both. Guse vs some Gold good Timon, haft y' more?
Tim. Enough to make a Whore forewear her Trade,
And to make Whores, a Bawd. Hold vp you Stufs
Your Aprons mountant; you are not Othable,
Although I know you'll fware, terribly fware
Into strong flufhers, and to heavenly Agues
Th'immortal Gods that heare you.Spare your Oathes:
Ie truft to your Conditions, he whores fill.
And he whose pious breath feekes to conuer you,
Be strong in Whore, allure him, burne him vp,
Let your clefie fire predominate his smoke,
And be no turne-couts: yet may your paines six months
Be quite contrary, and Thatch
Your poor thin Rooches with burthenes of the dead,
(Some that were hang'd no matter :)
Wear'e them, betray with them, Whore fill,
Paint till a hore may myre upon your face:
A pox of wrinkles.

Both. Well, more Gold, what then?

h 2

Believe't
Beleevst that we'l do any thing for Gold.

Tim. Consumptions fowe
In hollow bones of man, shrive their shapte dinnes,
And marre men's purring, Cracke the Lawyers voyce,
That he may never more falle Title plesse,
Nor found his Quillets thrilly: Hoare the Flamens,
That foold' against the quality of flesh,
And not beleevus himfelfe. Downe with the Nofe,
Downe with it flat, take the Bridge quite away
Of him, that his particular to forest.

Smells from the generall weake. Make card'pate Ruffians
And let the vnfcarr'd Braggets of the Warre
Derife fome paine from you. Plague all,
That your Ablivity may defeate and quell
The fourfe of all Erechon. There's more Gold.
Do you damnse others, and let this damnse you,
And ditches graue you all.

Both. More counfell with more Money, bounteous

Tim. More whore, more Mifcheefe firft, I have gi-uen you earnet.

Ape. Strike vp the Drum towards Athenes, farewel

Timon: if I thriue well, Ile vift thee againe.

Tim. If I hope well, Ile neuer fee thee more.

Ape. I. neuer did thee harme.

Tim. Yes, thou fpokeft well of me.

Ape. Call'ft thou that harme?

Tim. Men dayly finde it, Get thee away,
And take thy Beagles with thee.

Ape. We but offend him, trike.

Tim. That Nature being fecke of mans vnkindneffe
Should yet be hungry: Common Mother, thou
Whose wombe vnmeasurable, and infinite breft
Teemes and feeds all: whole felfe fame Mettle
Whereof thy proud Childe (arrogant man)is poff,
Engenders the blacke Toad, and Ader blee,
The gilded Newt, and eyeflue venom'd Worme,
With all th'abhorred Births below Crife Hauen,
Whereon Hyperions quicke fire doth fhone :
Yield him, who all the humane Sonnes do hate,
From fourth thy plentiful boforme, one poore roote:
Enfeare thy Fertile and Concepcion wombe,
Let it no more bring out ingratefull man.
Goe great with Tygers, Dragons, Wolves, and Beares,
Teeme with new Moniters, whom thy vpward face
Hath to the Marbled Manion all about
Neuer prefent. Ga, a Root, deare thankes :
Dry vp thy Marrowes, Wines, and Flough'torne Lees,
Whereof ingratefull man with Licourif draughts
And Morfels Vnfoious, grefses his pure minde,
That from it all Confeideration fliptes

Enter Apcamut.

More man? Plague, plague

Ape. I was direcd lither. Men report,
Thou doft affeft my Manners, and doft vie them.

Tim. 'Tis then, because thou doft not keepe a dogge
Whom I would imitate. Consumption catch thee.

Ape. This is in thee a Nature but Infected,
A poore vnmanly Melanchoily sprung
From change of fortune. Why this Spade? this place?
This Slave-like Habit, and thefe lookes of Care?
Thy Flatterer yet ware Silke, drinke Wine,lye soft,
Hugge their difeas'd Perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not thefF Woods,
By putting on the cunning of a Carper.
Be thou a Flatterer now, and feek to thrive

By that which ha's vndone thee; hinde thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou it orfuer
Blow off thy Cap; praife his moft vicioys traine,
And call it excellent; thou waft told thus:
Thou gau't thine ears (like Tapperts, that bad welcom)
To Knaues, and all approchers: 'Tis moft liue
That thou tune Rafcall, had't thou wealth againe,
Rafcals should haue't. Do not affume my likenefse.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'de throw away my felfe.

Ape. Thou haft caft away thy felfe, being like thy felf
A Madman fo long, now a Foole: what think'st
That the blacke ayre, thy boyfherous Chamberlaine
Will put thy fhit on warme? Will thef moft Trees,
That have out-liue'd the Eagle, pay thy fheles
And skip when thou point'ft out? Will the cold brooke
Candled with Ice, Cawdle thy Morning taffe
To cure thy o're-nights furfeit? Call the Creatures,
Whole naked Natues live in all the fught
Of weckefull Hauen, whole bare vnhaued Trunke.
To the confiding Elements expos'd
Anfwer meere Nature: bid them flatter thee.
O thou falt finde.

Tim. A Foole of thee : depart,

Ape. I love thee better now, then ere I did.

Tim. I hate thee worfe.

Ape. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'ft meflying.

Ape. I flatter not, but fay thou art a Careife.

Tim. Why do'ft thou fecke me out?

Ape. To vext thee.

Tim. Always a Villaines Office, or a Foole.

Dift pleafe thy felfe in't?

Ape. 1.

Tim. What, a Knau too?

Ape. If thou did'ft put this fowre cold habit on
To calligfhe thy pride, twere well; but thou
Doft it enforcefly: Thou'did Courfier be againe
Wert thou not Beggar: willing meflying
Out-plies: incertaine pompe, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, neuer compleat:
The other, at high with beat face Contentleffe,
Hath a distracted and moft wretched being,
Worfe then the worft, Content.

Thou fould'ft defire to dye, being miferable.

Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miferable.

Thou art a Slave, whom Fortunes tender arme
With favour neuer claf't: but bred a Dogge.
Had'ft thou like vs from our firft work proceed
The swet degrees that this breefe world affords,
To fuch as may the paffiu drugs of it
Freely command't: thou would'ft have plung'd thy felf
In generall Riot, meltet downe thy youth
In different beds of Luft, and never learn'd
The I cle precepts of repect, but followed
The Sugred game before thee. But my felfe,
Who had the world as my Confecutionaire,
The mouthes, the tongues, the eyes, and heartes of men,
At duty more then I could fame employment;
That numberleffe vpon me bucke, as leaes
Do on the Oake, have with one Winters bruith
Fell from their boughes, and left me open, bare,
For every ftorrne that blowes, I to beare this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:
Thy Nature, did commence in fufference, Time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why fhould'ft thou hate Men?
They never flatter'd thee. What haft thou guen?
If thou wilt curfe; thy Father (that poore ragge)
May be thy fubjecl, who in fpite put flufhe
To come thee-Beggcr, and compound thee
Poore Rogue, hereditary. Hence, be gone,
If thou hadst not borne the word of men,
Thou hadft bene a Kaane and Flatterer.
Ape. Art thou proud yet?
Tim. I, that I am not thee.
Ape. I, that I was no Prodiggall.
Tim. I, that I am one now.
Were all the wealth I have that vp in thee,
I'd glue thee leaue to hang it. Get thee gone:
That the whole life of Athenes were in this,
Thou would eate it.
Ape. Heree, I will mend thy Beaff.
Tim. First mend thy company, take away thy Selve.
Ape. So I shall mend mine owne, by th' lacke of thine
Tim. 'Tis not well mended fo, it is but botchit
If not, I would it were.
Ape. What would't thou have to Athenes?
Tim. There is another in a whilewind: if thou wilt,
Tell them there I have Gold, looke, so I have.
Ape. Heree is no vfe for Gold.
Tim. The belft, and troeft:
For heree It fpeeces, and do's no hyred harne.
Ape. Where lievt a nights Timon?
Tim. Vnder that's above me.
Where feed'st thou s-days Apemantus?
Ape. Where my fomacke finds meate, or rather where I eate it.
Tim. Would paylon were obedienc, & knew my mind
Ape. Where would't thou fend it?
Tim. To fawce thy difes.
Ape. The middle of Humanitty thou never kneweft, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wait in thy Gilt, and thy Perfume, they mocke thee for too much Curiosity: in thy Ragges thou know'lt none, but art de-fpeis'd for the contrary. There's a mediocr for thee, eate it.
Ape. Do'ft hate a Medier?
Tim. I, though it looke like thee.
Ape. And th'hadft hated Mediers sooner, I shd'lt have hate thy felfe better nowe. What man didn't thou euer know vntrith, that was beloued after his meenes?
Tim. Who without thofe meenes thou talkeft of, dideft etuuer know belou'd?
Ape. My felfe.
Tim. I understand thee: thou hadft fome meanes to keepe a Dogge.
Apen. What things in the world canft thou neeret compare to thy Flatterers?
Tim. Women neeret, but men: men are the things themselves. What would'thou do with the world Ap-emantus, if it lay in thy power?
Ape. Give it the Beaffs, to be rul of the men.
Tim. Would thou have thy felle fall in the confu-fon of men, and remaining a Beaff with the Beaffs.
Ape. I Timon.
Tim. A beeffy Ambition, which the Goddes grant thee tattell to. If thou went the Lyon, the Fox would beguiue thee: if thou went the Lambe, the Foxe would eate thee: if thou went the Fox, the Lion would fufpecit thee, when penduerenture thou went accus'd by the Affe:
If thou went the Ape, thy dulterfe would torment thee;
and till thou bu'did but as a Breakefaft to the Wolfe. If thou went the Wolfe, thy greedinessfe would affift thee,
To euerie purpose: O thou touch of hearts,
Thinke thy flave-man rebels, and by thy virtue
Set them into confounding oddes, that Beasts
May have the world in Empire.

Ape. Would twere fo,
But not till I am dead. He ey th'haft Gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd too shortly.

Tim. Throng'd too?

Ape. I.

Tim. Thy backe I prythee.

Ape. Line, and love thy misery.

Tim. Long line fo, and fo dye. I am quit.

Ape. Mo things like men,

Exit Timon, and abhorre then.

Enter the Bandetti.

1 Where should he have this Gold? It is some poore Fragment, some flender Ora of his remainder: the meer want of Gold, and the falling from of his Frendes, drowe him into this Melancholy.

2 It is nois'd
He hath a maiffe of Treasure.

3 Let vs make the alacr vpon him, if he care not for't, he will supply vs easily: if he courteously referre it, how shall's get it?

2 True: for he bares it not about him:

'Tis hid.

1 Is not this hee?

All. Where?

2 'Tis his description.

3 He! I know him.

All. Save thee Timon.

Tim. Now Theeues, All. Soldiers, not Theeues.

Tim. Both too, and womens Sonnes.

All. We are not Theeues, but men

That much do want.

Tim. Your greatesst want is, you want much of meat:

Why should you want? Behold, the Earth hath Rootes:
Within this Milie breake forth a hundred Springs:
The Oakes bear Maff, the Briars Scarlet Heps,
The bounteous Huwife Nature, on every bough,
Layes her full Meffe before you. Want? why Want?

1 We cannot live on Graffe, on Berries, Water,
As Beasts, and Birds, and Fishes.

2. Nor on the Beasts themselves, the Birds & Fishes,
You must eate men. Yet thanks I mutt you con,
That you are Theeues profess: that you worke not
In hollow shaffes: For there is boundleffe Theft
In limited Province. Refcall Theeues
Heere's Gold. Go, fucke the subtle blood o'ch'Grape,
Till the high Feauor sweat his blood to froth,
And so shape hanging. Truf't not the Phythian,

His Antidotes are poyon, and he flaves
Moe then you Rob: Take wealth, and lives together,
Do. Vllent or the de, since you profess to doo's.
Like Workemen, He example you with Theruery:
The Sunnes a Theefe, and with his great attraction
Robbet the vaste Sea. The Moones an arrant Theefe,
And her pale fire, the snatches from the Sunne.
The Seas a Theefe, whose liquid Surge, refoloves
The Moone into Salt teares. The Earth's a Theefe,
That feedes and breeds by a compoture foine
From gen'rall excrement: each thing's a Theefe.
The Lawes, your curbe and whip, in their rough power

Ha's vncheck'd Theft. Lose not yet sches, away,
Rob one another, there's more Gold, cut throates,
All that you meete are Theeues: to Athens go,
Breake open Shoppes, nothing can you fsteale
But Theeues do loufe it: fsteale leffe, for this I glue you,
And Gold confound you howloere: Amen.

3 Has almoft charme'd me from my Profession, by perfusing me to it.

1 'Tis in the malice of mankinde, that he thus aduies vs not to haue vs thriue in our mystery.

2 Ile beleeue him as an Enemy,

And glue ouer my Trade.

1 Let vs firste fee peace in Athens, there is no time so miferable, but a man may be true.

Exit Theeues.

Enter the Steward to Timon.

Stew. Oh you Gods!

1 Is you'd defp.ed and Ruminous mame my Lord?

2 Full of decay and sayling? Oh Monument

3 And wonder of good deeds, euly beftow'd:

4 What an alteration of Honor has defp'rate want made?

5 What viler thing vpon the earth, then Friends,

6 Who can being Noblest mindes, to bafeft ends.

7 How rarely does it meete with this times guilt,

8 When man was wilth to loue his Enemies:

9 Grant I may ever lour, and rather woo

10 Thofe that would milchee me, then thoefe that too.

11 Has caught me in his eye, I will present my honeft grieve

12 unto him; and as my Lord, still ferue him with my life.

13 My dearft Master.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Stew. Have you forgot me, Sir?

Tim. Why doft aske that? I have forgot all men.

Then, if you grunt't, th'art a man.

I have forgot thee.

Stew. An honeft poor feruant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not: I never had honeft man about me, I all

I kept were Knaves, to ferue in meate to Villaines.

Stew. The Gods are witnesses,

Nene's did pioe Steward weare a truer greefe

For his/vndone Lord, then mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, doft thou wepe?

Come nearer, then I loue thee

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'ft

Flinty mankinde: whole eyes do never gree,

But thorow Luft and Laughter: pitie's sleeping:

Strange times ye wepe with laughing, not with weeping.

Stew. I begge of you to know me, good my Lord,

'Taccept my greefe, and whil't this poore wealth lafts,

To entertaine me as your Steward full.

Tim. Had I a Steward

So true, so luft, and now so comfortable?

It almoft turns me my dangerus Nature wide.

Let me behold thy face: Surely, this man

Was borne of woman.

Forgue my generall, and exceptleffe rafhneffe

You perpetuall Sober Gods. I do proclame

One honeft man: MiTake me not, but one:

No more I pray, and hee's a Steward.

How ifone would I have hate'd all mankinde,

And thou redeem't thy felle. But all faxe thee,

I fell with Curse,

Me thinkes thou art more honeft now, then wife:

For, by opprefing and betraying mee,
Timon of Athens.

95

Thou might'st have sooner got another Service:
For many go arrive at second Masters,
Vpon their first Lords necke. But tell me true,
(For I must ever doubt, though men are so sure)
Is not thy kindneffe subtle, couetous,
If not a Vifiting kindneffe, and as rich men deale Gifts,
Expecting in returne twenty for one?

Strew. No my moft worthy Master, in whose breede
Doubt, and suspect (as alfo) are plac'd too late:
You should have fear'd falle times, when you reft.
Suspect till comes, where an effate is leafe.
That which I fliew, Heaven knowes, is meerely Love,
Dutie, and Zeale, to your unmatch'd minde;
Care of your Food and Luing, and beleue it,
My moft Honour'd Lord,
For any benefit that points to mee,
Ere I can hope, or pretend, I'de exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and wealth
To requisite me, by making rich your felle.

Tim. Looke thee, 'tis fo: thou singly honest man,
Hereat take: the Gods out of my miferie
Ha's lent thee Treasure. Go, live rich and happy,
But thus condition'd: Thou shalt build from men:
Hate all, curfe all, chew Charity to none,
But let the famifht fleale flide from the Bone,
Ere thou releafe the Beggar. Glue to dogges
What thou denyest to men. Let Prifons swallow'em,
Debauch wither'em to nothing, be men like baffled woods
And Difafres lick'em vp their fyale bloods,
And so farewell, and thrive.

Strew. O let me flay, and comfort you, my Mafter.
Tim. If thou hast it Curfes
Stay not: why, wilt thou art bleffed and free:
Ne'er fee thou man, and let me ne'er fee thee.

Exit

Enter Poet, and Painter.

Pain. As I took no note of the place, it cannot be farre where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him?
Does the Rumor hold for true,
That hee's fo full of Gold?

Painter. Certaine.

Alcibades reports it: Plerina and Timandyo
Had Gold of him. He Likewise enrich'd
Poor stragling Souldiers, with great quantity.
'Tis faide, he gave vnto his Steward
A mighty fume.

Poet. Then this breaking of his,
Ha's beene but a Try for his Friends?

Painter. Nothing else:
You shall fee him a Palme in Athens againe,
And flourith with the higheft:
Therefore, 'tis not amifie, we tender our louses
To him, in this fuppofed dilteffe of his:
It will floe honestly in vs,
And is very likely, to load us purposes
With what they trasaille for,
If it be a fucht and true report, that goes
Of his hauling.

Poet. What have you now
To prefent vnto him?

Painter. Nothing at this time
But my Vifitation: onely I will promife him
An excellent Pecce.

Poet. I must ferue him fo too;
Tell him of an intent that's comming toward him.
Why how shall I require you?
Can you este Roots, and drink cold water, no?
Both. What we can do,
We'll do to do you service.
Tim. Y'are honest men,
Y'haue heard that I haue Gold,
I am sure you haue, speake truth, y'are honest men.
Pain. So is it said my Noble Lord, but therefore Came not my Friend, nor I.
Tim. Good honest men; Thou draw'st a counterfeit
Beft in all Athens, th'art indeed the best,
Thou counterfeit'st most liuely.
Pain. So, fo, my Lord.
Tim. Ene fo far as I say. And for thy fiction,
Why thy Vertue twells with fluffs so fine and smooth,
That thou art euen Naturlle in thine Art.
But for all this (my honest Natur'd friends)
I muft needs say you have a little fault,
Marry 'tis not monftrous in you, neither with I
You take much pains to mend.
Both. Befeech your Honour
To make it knowne to vs.
Tim. Thou'lt take it ill.
Both. Molt thankfully, my Lord.
Tim. Will you indeed?
Both. Doubt it not worthy Lord.
Tim. There's neuer a one of you but trufts a Knave,
That mightily deceales you.
Both. Do we, my Lord?
Tim. I, and you hear he cogg,
See him diftempe,
Know his grosse patchery, love him, feede him,
Kepee in your boforme, yet remaine affor'd
That he's a made-va Villaine.
Pain. I know none fuch, my Lord.
Pain. Nor I.
Tim. Looke you,
I love you well, Ie glue you Gold
Rid me thefe Villaines from your companies;
Hang them, or Slaue them, drowne them in a draught,
Confound them by some course, and come to me,
Ie glue you Gold enough.
Both. Name them my Lord, let's know them.
Tim. You that way, and you this:
But two in Company:
Each man a part, all singe, and alone,
Yet an arch Villaine keeps him company:
If where thou art, two Villaines shall not be,
Come not neere him. If thou would'lt not recide
But where one Villaine is, then him abandon.
Hence, packe, there's Gold, you came for Gold ye flauers:
You haue worke for me; there's payment, hence,
You are an Alchymist, make Gold of that:
Out Raffacal dogges.

Exeunt

Enter Steward, and two Senators.

Stew. It is vaine that you would speake with Timon;
For he is set fo onely to himselfe,
That nothing but himselfe, which looks like man,
is friendly with him.

1. Sen. Bring vs to his Cauze.
It is our part and promise to th'Athenians
To speake with Timon.
2. Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: twas Time and Greefes.
Timon of Athens.

In pitty of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him that I care not,
And let him tak't at worst : For their Knives care not,
While you have thorns to answer. For my felfe,
There's not a whirle, in th'vntruly Camp,
But I do prize it at my loure, before
The reuerends Throut in Athens. So I leave you
To the proteccion of the proferous Gods,
As Theeues to Keepers.

Sow. Stay not, all's in vaine.

Tim. Why I was writing of my Epitaph,
It will be feene to morrow. My long sicknesse
Of Health, and Luing, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still,
Be Alcibiades your plague; you hit,
And laft fo long enough.

1. We speake in vaine.

Tim. But yet I loose my Country, and am not
One that rejoices in the common wracke,
As common brute doth put it.

1. That's well spoke.

Tim. Command me to my louing Countrymen.
1. These words become your Lippes as they passe thro' them.

2. And enter in our ears, like great Triumphers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Command me to them,
And tell them, that to ease them of their greese,
Their fear of Hoffle strokes, their Aches loffes,
Their pangs of Love, with other incident throwes
That Natures fragile Veffell doth suftaine
In lites vnctertaine voyage, I will some kindnes do them,
Ile teach them to present wilde Alcibiades wrath.

1. I like this well, he will returne againe.

Tim. I have a Tree which grows heere in my Clofe,
That mine owne owne imprize me to cut downe,
And shortly must I fell it. Tell my Friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to lowe throughout, that who so pleaze
To stop Affiction, let him take his haffe ;
Come hither ere my Tree hath felt the Axe,
And hang himselfe, I pray you do my greeting.
Stew. Trouble him no further, thus you shall Finde him.

Tim. Come not to me agayne, but bate to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlafting Mansion
Upon the Beached Verge of the Salt Flood,
Who once a day with his embossed Froth
The turbulent Surfge shall couer ; thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your Oracle :
Lippes, let foure words go by, and Language end :
What is amisse, Plague and Infection mend.
Graues onely be mens worke, and Death their gaine ;
Sonne, hide thy Beames, Timon hath done his Raigne.

Exit Timon.

1 His discontentes are vncourageously couplid to Nature.

2 Our hope in him is dead : let vs returne,
And fraine what other meanes is left vnto vs
In our deere perill.

1 It requires swift foot.

Enter two other Senators, with a Messinger.

1 Thou haft painfully discouer'd: are his Files
As full as thy report?

Msey. I haue spoke the leaf.
Besides his expedition promiseth present approach.
2 We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Msey. I met a Currier, one mine ancient Friend,
Whom though in general part we were oppo'd,
Yet our old louse made a particular force,
And made vs speake like Friends. This man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timons Caze,
With Letters of intrety, which imported
His Fellowship the caufe against your City,
In part for his fake mou'd.

Enter the other Senators.

1 Heere come our Brothers.

2 No talke of Timon, nothing of him expect.
The Enemies Drumme is heard, and fearfull loouring
Doth chouke the ayre with duft : In, and prepare,
Ours is the fall I feare, our Foes the Snare.

Exit.

Enter a Saddler in the Woods, seeking Timon.

Sol. By all description this shou'd be the place.
Whoeve heere? Speake ho. No anwer? What is this?

Timon is dead, who hath out-brech't his fan,
Some Beast read the; There do's not liue a Man.
Dead flare, and this his Graue, what's on this Tomb,
I cannot read : the Charafter Ie take with wax,
Our Captaine hath in euerly Figure skil;
An ag'd Interpreter, though yong in dayes :
Before proud Athens hee's set downe by this,
Whole fell the marke of his Ambition is.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades with his Powers before Athens.

Alc. Sound to this Coward, and laflcuflous Towne,
Our terrible approach.

Sounds a Party.

The Senators appear upon the walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all Licentious meaure, making your willes
The scope of Juflice. Till now, my felie and fuch
As flep within the shadow of your power
Have wander'd with our trauert Armes, and breath'd;
Our fuffrance vainly : Now the time is fubf,
When crowching Marrow in the bearer ftrong
Cries (of it felfe) no more : Now breathlesse wrong,
Shall lift and pant in your great Chairs of exile,
And purfe Infolence fhall break his winde
With fcare and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble, and young;
When thy fliff greeses were but a meere conceit,
Ere thou had it power, or we had caufe of fear.
We fent to thee, to give thy rage Balme,
To wipe out our Ingratitude, with Loues
Above their quantifie.

2 So did we woe
Transformed Timon, to our Cities love
By humble Meffenge, and by promifh meane :
We were not all vnkindes, nor all defene
The common stroke of warre.

1 These wailes of ours,
Were not ered by their hands, from whom
You haue receiv'd your greese: Nor are they fuch,
That thee great Townes, Trophees, & Schools fliold fall
For priate faults in them.

2 Nor are they lying

Who
Who were the motives that you first went out,
(Shame that they wanted, cunning in exercise)
Hath broke their hearts. March, Noble Lord,
Into our City with thy Banners spread,
By declamation and a tyed death;
If thy Resenages hunger for that Food
Which Nature loathes, take thou the deflin'd tenth,
And by the hazard of the spotted dye,
Let dye the spotted.

1 All hate not offended:
For those that were, it is not square to take
On those that are, Revenge: Crimes, like Lands
Are not inherited, then deere Countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but issue without thy rage,
Spare thy Athenian Cradle, and those Kin
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended, like a Shepheard,
Approach the Fold, and call th'infected forth,
But kill not altogether.

2 What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Then hew too's, with thy Sword.

So thou wilt fend thy gentle heart before,
To say thou'rt enter Friendly.

2 Throw thy Gloue,
Or any Token of thine Honour else,
That thou wilt vis the warres as thy redresse,
And not as our Confusion: All thy Powers
Shall make their harbour in our Towne, till wee
Have seal'd thy full desire.

Aec. Then there's my Gloue,
Defend and open your vncharged Ports,

Those Enemies of Timon, and mine owne
Whom you your forces shall set out for reproofe,
Fall and no more; and to attone your feares
With my more Noble meaning, not a man
Shall passe his quarter, or offend the streete
Of Regular Juydice in your Citties bounds,
But shall be remedied to your publique Lawes
At heuurlid answer.

'Let. 'Tis most Nobly spoken.
Aec. Defend, and keepe your words.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Noble Generall, Timon is dead,
Enterb'd upon the very hemme o'th Sea,
And on his Grauestone, this Inskulpture which
With wax I brought away: whose soft Impression
Interprets for my poore ignorance.

Aecibades reads the Epitaph.

Here lies a wretched Cittie, of wretched Soule bereft,
Seek not my name: A Plague consume you, wicked Catiffs! left:
Here lies I Timon, who above all living men did hate,
Paffe by and curse thy fill, but passe and stay not here thy gate.
These well expresse in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorred it in vs our humane griefes,
Scord'll our Brains flow, and thole our dropplets, which
From niggard Nature fall, yet Rich Conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low Graue, on faults forgiv'n. Dead
Is Noble Timon, of whose Memory
Hereafter more. Bring me into your Gait,
And I will vis the Olives, with my Sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace flint war, make each
Prefcribe to other, as each others Leach,
Let our Drummes strike.

THE TRAGFDEIE OF IVLIVS CÆSAR.

ACTUS PRIMUS. SCENA PRIMA.

Enter Flavius, Murellus, and certain Commons over the Stage.

Flavius,

Hence: home ye idle Creatures, get you home: Is this a Holiday? What, know you not Being Mechanick) you ought not walke Upon a labouring day, without the signe Of your Profession? Speake, what Trade art thou? Car. Why Sir, a Carpenter. Mur. Where is thy Leather Apron, and thy Rule? What doft thou with thy beft Apparell on? You sir, what Trade are you? Cob. Truly Sir, in respect of a fine Workman, I am but as you would say, a Cobler. Mur. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly. Cob. A Trade Sir, that I hope I may vie, with a safe Confidence, which is indeed Sir, a Mender of bad Soles. Fla. What trade thou knowe? Thou naughte naughte, what trade? Cob. Nay I beseech you Sir, be not out with me; yet if you be out Sir, I can mend you. Mur. What meanst thou by that? Mend mee, thou Savvy Fellow? Cob. Why sir, Cobble you. Fla. Thou art a Cobler, art thou? Cob. Truly sir, all that I live by, is with the Aule: I meddle with no Tradesmen matters, nor womens matters; but wthall I am indeed Sir, a Surgeon to old Soles: when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod vpvn Neats Leather, have gone vp on my handy-worke. Fla. But wherefore art not in thy Shop to day? Why do't thou lead these men about the streets? Cob. Truly sir, to wear out their shoes, to get my selfe into more worke. But indeede sir, we make Holyday to see Cæsar, and to rejoynce in his Triumph. Mur. Wherefore rejoynce? What Conquest brings he home? What Tributaries follow him to Rome, To grace in Captive bonds his Chariot Wheeles? You Blockes, you stones, you worse than fenfleffe things: O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey many a time and oft? Have you climb'd vp to Walls and Battlements, To Towers and Windows? Yea, to Chimney tops, Your infants in your Armes, and there haue fate The like-long day, with patient expectation, To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome: And when you saw his Chariot but appear, Haue you not made an Vnierfall thou, That Tyber trembled vnderneath her banke To heare the replication of your sounds, Made in her Concaue Shores? And do you now put on your best attire? And do you now call out a Holyday? And do you now throw Flowers in his way, That comes in Triumph over Pompeys blood? Be gone, Runne to your houses, fall vpvn your knees, Pray to the Gods to intermit the plague That needs must light on this Ingratitude. Fla. Go, go, good Countrymen, and for this fault Affembles all the poore men of your fort; Draw them to Tyber banke, and wepe your teares Into the Channell, till the lowest Dreams Do kiffe the most exalted Shores of all. Exeunt all the Commons. See where their baseft mettle be not mord'? They vanish tongue-tyed in their gullineffe: Go you downe that way towards the Capitol, This way will I: Diisrobe the Images, If you do finde them deckt with Ceremonies. Mur. May we do so? You know it is the Feast of Lupercall. Fla. It is no matter, let no images Be hung with Cæsars Trophees: Ile about, And drive away the Vulgar from the streets: So do you too, where you perceive them thicke. These growing Feathers, pluckt from Cæsars wing, Will make him fye an ordinary pitch, Who else would loose about the view of men, And keep vs all in feruile fearfulness.

The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

The Barren touched in this holy chace,
Shake off their sterile curse.

Act. I shall remember,
When Cæsar layes, Do this, it is perform’d.
Cæf. Set on, and leave no Ceremony out.
Sooth. Cæfar.
Cæf. Ha! Who calles?
Cæs. Bid every noyse be still: peace yet againe.
Cæf. Who is it in the preffe, that calles on me?
I heare a Tongue thriller then all the Musicke
Cry, Cæsar! Cæsar is turn’d to heare,
Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.
Cæf. What man is that?
Br. A Soother-fayer bids you beware the Ides of March
Cæf. Set him before me, let me see his face.
Caff. Fellow, come from the throng, look vpon Cæsar.
Cæf. What say’st thou to me now? Speak once againe.
Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.
Cæf. He is a Dreamer, let vs leaue him : Paufe,
Caff. Will you go fee the order of the courte?
Brut. Not I.
Caff. I pray you do.
Brut. I am not Gameform: I do lacke some part
Of that quicke Spirit that is in Actium:
Let me not hinder Caffus your defines ;
Ile leave you.
Caff. Brutus, I do observe you now of late :
I have not from your eyes, that gentlieffe
And faire of Loue, as I was wont to have u.
You bare too rubborne, and too strange a hand
Ouer your Friend, that loues you.
Brut. Caffus,
Be not deceu’d: If I have ey’d you looke,
I turne the trouble of my Countenance
Meerely vpon my selfe. Vexed I am
Of late, with passions of some difference,
Conceptions overly proper to my selfe,
Which glue some soyle (perhaps) to my Behaviours :
But let not therefore my good Friends be gree’d
(Among which number Caffus be you one)
Nor contrue any further my neglect,
Then that poore Brutus with himselfe at warre,
Forgets the fhewes of Loue to other men.
Caff. Then Brutus, I have much mittook your passioun,
By means whereof, this Breff of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy Cogitations.
Tell me good Brutus, Can you vsee your face?
Brutus. No Caffus;
For the eye sees not it selfe but by reflection,
By some other things.
Caffus. ’Tis iuft,
And it is very much lamented Brutus,
That you have no such Mirrors, as will turne
Your hidden worthinesse into your eye,
That you might see your shadow:
I haue heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortall Cæsar) speaking of Brutus,
And granuing underneath this Ages yeoke,
Hauingh’d, that Noble Brutus had his eyes.
Brut. Into what dangers, would you
Leade me Caffus?
That you would have me feeke into my selfe,
For that which is not in me?
Cæf. Therefore good Brutus, be prepar’d to heare:
And since you know, you cannot see your selfe
So well as by Reflection; I your Glasse,
Will modestly discouer to your selfe
That of your selfe, which you yet know not of.
And be not leauing on me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common Laughter, or did vie
To faire with ordinary Oathes my loue
To every new Protefter: if you know,
That I do fawe on men, and hugge them hard,
And after f-land them: Or if you know,
That I professe my felse in Banqueting
To all the Rout, then hold me dangerous.

Flourishing, and Stout.

Brut. What means this Showring?
I do feare, the People chuse Cæsar
For their King.
Caff. Do you feare it?
Then muft I thinke you would not have it so.
Brut. I would not Caffus, yet I loue him well:
But wherefore do you hold me here & long?
What is it, that you would impart to me?
If it be ought toward the generall good,
Set Honor in one eye, and Death i’th other,
And I will looke on both indifferently:
For let the Gods fo fpeed me, as I loue
The name of Honor, more then I feare death.
Caff. I know that vertue to be in you Brutus,
As well as do I know your outward favour.
Well, Honor is the subiect of my Story:
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Thinke of this life: But for my fingle felse,
I had as lief be not, as to live to be
In awe of fuch a Thing, as I my felse.
I was borne free as Cæsar, fo were you,
We both have fed as well, and we can both
Endure the Winters cold, as well as hee.
For once, vpon a Rawe and Gullie day,
The troubled Tyber, chafing with her Shores,
Cæfar faide to me, Dar’t thou Caffus now
Leape in with me into this angry Flood,
And Grim to vnderstand The Point I vpon the word,
Accoutted as I was, I plung’d in,
And bad him follow: I fo indeed he did.
The Torrent roa’d, and we did bufet it
With lufy Shewes, throwing it aside,
And fenning it with hearts of Controuersie.
But ere we could arrive the Point prop’d,
Cæfar cried, Helpe me Caffus, or I finke.
I (as execut, our great Ancestor,
Did from the Flames of Troy, vpon his shoulder
The old Anchises bearre) E. from the waues of Tyber
Did I the tyred Cæsar: And this Man,
Is now become a God, and Cæfus is
A wretched Creature, and muft bend his body,
If Cæfar carelesly but nod on him.
He had a Feauer when he was in Spaine,
And when the Fit was on him, I make marke
How he did flake: ’Tis true, this God did flake,
His Coward lippes did from their colour flye,
And that fame Eye, whose bend doth awe the World,
Did looke his Lutfe: I did heare him grone:
I, and that Tongue of his, that bad the Romans
Marked him, and write his Speeches in their Bookes,
Alas, it cried, Give me some drinke Titiantial

700
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

As a licks a Girle: Ye Gods, it doth amaze me, A man of such a feeble temper should So get the start of the Maiestickke world, And bear the Palme alone.

Shout.   Flourish.

Brut. Another generall shout? I do beleue, that these applauses are For some new Honours, that are heasp’d on Cæsar.

Cæf. Why man, he doth bestride the narrow world Like a Colossus, and we petty men Walk vnder his huge legges, and peep about To finde our selves dishonourable Graues. Men at sometime, are Masters of their Fates. The fault (Deere Brutus) is not in our Starres, But in our Selues, that we are vnderlings.

Brutus and Cæf. What should be in that Cæsar? Why should that name be founded more then yours? Write them together: Yours, is as faire a Name: Sound them, it doth become the mount aswell: Weigh them, it is as heavy: Coniure with ‘em, Brutus will that a Spirit as soone as Cæsar.

Now in the names of all the Gods at once, Upon what meate dost this our Cæsar feede, That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham’d. Rome, thou haft lost the brend of Noble Bloods. When went there by an Age, since the great Flood, But it was fam’d with more then with one man? When could they say (ill now) that talk’d of Rome, That her wide Walkes incompaft but one man? Now is’t Rome indeed, and Romee enough When there is in it but one onely man. Of you and I, haue heard our Fathers say, There was a Brutus once, that would have brooke’d To eternal Diuell to keipe his State in Rome, As caufly as a King.

Brut. That you do louse me, I am nothing jealous: What you would worke me too, I haue some ayme: How I haue thought of this, and of these times I shall recont hereafter. For this prefent, I would not fo (with loue I might intrest you) Be any further mou’d: What you have faid, I will confider: what you have to say I will with patience heare, and finde a time Both mette to heare, and anfwer fuch high things. Till then, my Noble Friend, chow vpon this: Brutus had rather be a Villager, Then to repue himselfe a Sonne of Rome Vnder thee hard Conditions, as this time Is like to lay vpon vs.

Cæf. I am glad that my weake words Haue brucke but this much fiew of fire from Brutus.

Enter Cæsar and his Traines.

Brut. The Games are done, And Cæsar is returning.

Cæf. As they paufe by,

Plucke Cæfis by the Sleeue,

And he will (after his fowre fathion) tell you What hath proceeded worthy note to day.

Brut. I will do it: but looke you Cæfis,
The angry (for doth glor on Cæfars brow, And all the reft, looke like a chidden Traine; Cæfar’s Countenance is pale, and Gierro Lookes with fuch Ferret, and fuch fiery eyes) As we haue seene him in the Capitoll

Being crost in Conference, by some Senators.

Cæfis. Cæfis will tell vs what the matter is.

Cæf. Antonio.

Ant. Cæs.

Cæf. Let me haue men about me, that are fat,

Sleeke-headed men, and fuch as fleep e-s-nights:

Yond Cæfis hath a leane and hungry looke,

He chinkes too much: fuch men are dangerous.

Ant. Feare him not Cæs, he’s not dangerous,

He is a Noble Roman, and well gisen.

Cæf. Would he were fatter; But I feare him not:

Yet if my name were lyable to feare, I do not knowe the man I should acuoyd

So foonie as that fpars Cæfis. He reades much,

He is a great Obfieruer, and he lookes

Quite through the Deeds of men. He loues no Playes,

As thou doft Antoine: he heares no Muficke;

Seldom he smiles, and purlieth by a fuch:

As if he mock’d himfelfe, and corm’d his spirit

That could be moft to smile at any thing.

Such men as he, be neuer at hearts eafe,

Whiles they behold a greater then themfelves,

And therefore are they very dangerous.

I rather tell thee what is to be feare’d,

Then what I feare: for alwayes I am Cæsar.

Come on my right hand, for this care is deafe,

And tell me truely, what thou thinke’st of him.

Senec. Execute Cæs and his Traines.

Cæfis. You pull’d me by the cloke, would you speake with me?

Brut. I Cæs, tell vs what hath chanc’d to day

That Cæsar lookes fo fad.

Cæf. Why you were with him, were you not?

Brut. I should not then ask Cæs what had chanc’d.

Cæfis. Why there was a Crowne offer’d him; & being offer’d him, he put it by with the backe of his hand thus, and then the people fell a flouting.

Cæf. What was the second noyle for?

Cæfis. They flouted thirce: what was the laft cry for?

Cæf. Why for that too.

Cæf. Was the Crowne offer’d him thirce?

Cæfis. I marry was’t, and hee put it by thirce, euerie time gentler then other; and at every putting by, mine honest Neighbours flowted.

Cæfis. Who offer’d him the Crowne?

Cæf. Why Antony.

Brut. Tell vs the manner of it, gentle Cæs.

Cæfis. I can as well bee hang’d as tell the manner of it: It was mee Foleerie, I did not marke it. I sawe Antony offer him a Crowne, yet was not a Crowne neyther, ‘twas one of thefe Coronets: and as I told you, hee put it by once: but for all that, to my thinkeing, he would fame haue had it. Then hee offered it to him againe: then hee put it by again; but to my thinkeing, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; hee put it the third time by, and fill hee refus’d it, the rabblement howtet, and clappe’d their chopt hands, and threw ype their sweatie Night-cappes, and vittered fuch a dalee of flinking breath, because Cæs refus’d the Crowne, that he had (almoft) choaked Cæsar: for hee swooned, and fell downe at it: And for mine owne part, I durft not laugh, for feare of opening my Lippes, and receyuing the bad Ayre.
The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

Cai. But soft I pray you, what, did Cæsar swound? Cask. He fell downe in the Market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speachlesse.

Brut. To very like he hath the Falling sicknesse. Cai. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I, and honest Cassius, we have the Falling sicknesse.

Cask. I know not what you meane by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell downe. If the rag-tagge people did not clap him, and hiffe him, according as he pleas'd, and dis-please'd them, as they vfe to doe the Players in the Theatre, I am no true man.

Brut. What said he, when he came vnto himselfe?

Cask. Marry, before he fell downe, when he perceiued the common Hear'd was glad he refus'd the Crowne, he pluckt me ope his Doublet, and offer'd them his Throat to cut: and I had beene a man of any Occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might goe to Hell among the Rogues, and fo hee fell. When he came to himselfe againe, hee said, If hee had done, or faid any thing amiffe, he defir'd their Worships to think it was his incontinence. Three or foure Wrenches where I stood, cried, Alaffe good Soule, and forgeu him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had flab'd their Mothers, they would have done no leffe.

Brut. And after that, he came thus sad away.

Cai. 1.

Cai. Did Cicero say any thing?

Cai. I, he spokke Greekke.

Cai. To what effect?

Cai. Nay, and I tell you that, hee were looke you i' th' face againe. But those that underthood him, smil'd at one another, and fooke their heads: but for mine owne part, it was Greekke to me. I could tell you more newes too: Murrellus and Flavius, for pulling Scarfes off Cæfars Images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more Footerie yet, if I could remembrance.

Cai. Will you uppe with me to Night, Caius?

Cai. No, I am promis'd forth.

Cai. Will you Dine with me to morrow?

Cai. If I be alie, and your minde hold, and your Dinner worth the eating.

Cai. Good, I will expect you.

Cai. Doe fo: farewell both. Exit.

Brut. What a blunt fellow is this groke to be? He was quick Mettle, when he went to Schoole.

Cai. So is he now, in execution of any bold, or Noble Enterprize, How-euer he puts on this tarrie forme: This Rudenesse is a Sawce to his good Wit, Which gives men flamocke to difgust his words With better Appetit.

Brut. And fo it is: For this time I will leave you. To morrow, if you please to speake with me, I will come home to you: or if you will, Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cai. I will doe fo: till then, thinkes of the World.

Exit Brutus.

Well Brutus, thou art Noble: yet I fee, Thy Honorable Mettle may be wrought
From that it is dispoud: therefore it is meet,
That Noble mindes kepe ever with their likes:
For who fo firme, that cannot be fedu'd?
Cæfar doth beare me hard, but he loues Brutus.

If I were Brutus now, and he were Caius,
He should not humor me. I will this Night,
In feuerall Hands, in at his Windows throw,
As if they came from feuerall Citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his Name: wherein obscurely
Cæfars Ambition shall be glanced at.
And after this, let Cæfar feit him fure,
For wee will shake him, or worse dayes endure.

Exit.

Thunder, and Lightning. Enter Cassius, and Cicero.

Cic. Good even, Cassius: brought you Caius home?

Why are you breathlesse, and why flare you fo?

Cic. Are not you mou'd, when all the sway of Earth Shakes, like a thing vnfrme? O Cicero,
I haue feene Tempefts, when the fcoiling Winds Have riu'd the knotte Oakes, and I haue feene Th'ambiguous Ocean, fwell, and rage, and foam'd,
To be exaltet with the threatening Clouds:
But neuer till to Night, neuer till now,
Did I goe through a Tempeft-dropping-fire.
Eythere there is a Cuiull of ffie in Heaven,
Or eile the World, too faweie with the Gods,
Incenfes them to fend deftruction.

Cic. Why, faw you any thing more wonderfull?

Cic. A common flue, you know him well by fight,
Held vp his left Hand, which did flame and burne
Like twente Torches loyn'd: and yet his Hand,
Not fenfible of fire, remaund vnscorch'd.
Besides, I ha'nt fince put vp my Sword,
Against the Capitoll I met a Lyon,
Who glaz'd upon me, and went furly by,
Without annoying me. And there were drowne
Upon a heape, a hundred gaffly Women,
Transformed with their fears, who fware, they faw
Men, all in fire, walke vp and downe the ftreetes.
And yesterday, the Bird of Night did fitt,
Euen at Noone-day, upon the Market place,
Howling, and fcreaeting. When thefe Prodigies
Doe fo conjoyntly meet, let not men fay,
Thefe are their Reafons, they are Natural:
For I beleue, they are portentous things
Vnto the Clymate, that they point vpou.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-difpofed time:
But men may confire things after their fation,
Cleanse from the purpose of the things themselues.
Comes Cæfars to the Capitoll to morrow?

Cic. He doth: for he did bid Antonio
Send word to you, he would be there to morrow.

Cic. Good-night then, Cassius:
This disturbed Skie is not to walke in.

Enter Caius.

Cai. Who's there?

Cai. A Roman.

Cai. Caius, by your Voyce.

Cai. Your Eare is good.

Caius, what Night is this?

Cai. A very pleaing Night to honof men.

Cai. Who euer knew the Heauens menace fo?

Cai. Thofe that have knowne the Earth fo full of faults.
The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me into the perillous Night;
And thus unbraez'd, I see you, free,
Hasten to Bormone to the Thunder-stone:
And when the croffe blow'd, Lightnings seem'd to open
The Breit of Heaven, I did pretend my felie
Even in the aynde, and very flash of it.

Cæs. But wherefore did you so much tempt the Heavens? It is the part of men, to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty Gods, by tokens send Such dreadful Heralds, to afflict us.

Cæs. You are dull, Cæs.:
And those sparks of Light, that should be in a Roman,
You doe want, or else you vile not.
You look pale, and gaze, and put on fear,
And call your felfe in wonder,
To see the strange impiety of the Heavens:
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these Fires, why all these gliding Ghosts,
Why Birds and Beasts, from quality and kinde,
Why Old Men, Fools, and Children calculating,
Why all these things change from their Ordinance,
Their Natures, and pre-formed Faculties,
To monstrous quality; why you shall finde,
That Heauen hath infused them with these Spirits,
To make them instruments of fear, and warning,
Into some monstros State.

Now could I (Cæs.) name to thee a man,
Most like this dreadful Night,
That Thunders, Lightnings, opens Graues, and roares,
As doth the Lyon in the Capitol:
A man no mightier then thy selfe, or me,
In personal action; yet prodigious grown
And fearfull, as these strange eruptions are.

Cæs. This Cæsar that you mean?
Is it not, Cæs.?
Cæs. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Haue Thieves, and Limbes, like to their Ancestors;
But woe the whiles, our Fathers minds are dead,
And we are governed with our Mothers spirits,
Our yoke, and suffrance, their vs Womanish.

Cæs. Indeed, they say, the Senators to morrow
Meane to establish Cæsar as a King:
And he shall wear his Crown by Sea, and Land,
In every place, faue here in Italy.

Cæs. I know where I will weare this Dagger then;
Cæs. From Bondage will deliver Cæs.:
Therein, yee Gods, you make the weake most strong;
Therein, yee Gods, you Tyrants doe defeat.
Nor Stone Tower, nor Walls of beaten Brass,
Nor ayre-leffe Dungeon, nor strong Linkes of Iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit:
But Life being wearie of these worldly Barres,
Neuer lacks power to dimifhe it selfe.
If I know this, know all the World besides,
That part of Tyrannie that I doe bare,
I can shake of at pleasure.

Thunder still.

Cæs. So can I.

Cæs. And why shold Cæsar be a Tyrant then?
Poor man, I know he would not be a Wolfe,
But that he sees the Romans are but Sheepe:
He were no Lyon, were be Romans Hindees.
Those that with hille will make a mightie fire,
Begin in with weake Strawes. What trash is Rome?

What Rubbish, and what Offall? when it serues
For the base matter, to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cæsar. But oh Griefe,
Where haue thou lost me? I (perhaps) speake this Before a willing Bond-man: then I know
My answer must be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Cæs. You speake to Cæs., and to such a man,
That is no fearling Tell-tale. Holde, my hand:
Be feulous for reftree of all these Griefes,
And I will set this foot of mine as erect,
As who goes farthest.

Cæs. There's a Bargaine made.
Now know you, Cæs., I haué mou'd already
Some certaine of the Noblest minded Romans
To vnder-go, with me, an Enterprize,
Of Honorable dangerous confequence;
And I doe know by this, they stay for me
In Pompeyes Porch: for now this fearfull Night,
There is no fire, or walking in the freetes;
And the Complexion of them,
Is f brush, like the Worke we haué in hand,
Moft bloodie, fierle, and most terrible.

Enter Cinna.

Cinna. Stand close a while, for here comes one in haste.

Cæs. "This Cinna, I doe know him by his Gate,
He is a friend. Cinna, where haue you to go?
Cinna. To finde out you: Who's that, Metellus Cynber?
Cinna. No, it is Cæs., one incorporate
To our Attempts. Am I not fay'd for, Cinna?

Cinna. Yes, you are. O Cæs.,
If you could but winne the Noble Brutus
To our party—

Cæs. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this Paper,
And looke you ley it in the Pretons Charey,
Where Brutus may but finde it: and throw this
In at his Window; let this vp with Waxe
Vpon old Brutus Statue: all this done,
Repare to Pompeyes Porch, where you shall finde vs.
Is Doctor Brutus and Trebonius there?

Cinna. All, but Metellus Cynber, and hee's gone
To seeke you at your hauſe. Well, I will hie,
And so befow these Papers as you bad me.

Cæs. That done, repair to Pompeyes Theater.

Exit Cinna.

Come Cæs., you and I will yet, ere day,
See Brutus at his hauſe: three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire
Vpon the next encounter, yields him ours.

Cæs. O, he fits high in all the Peoples hearts:
And that which would appeare Offence in vs,
His Countenance, like richeft Alchymie,
Will change to Vertue, and to Worthineffe.

Cæs. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him,
You have right well conceived: let vs goe,
For it is after Mid-night, and ere day,
We will awake him, and be sure of him.

Exeunt.
Enter _Brutus_ in his Orchard.

Brut. What _Lucius_, ho? I cannot, by the progrefse of the Starres, Glue guelle how neere to day—_Lucius_, I say? I would it were my fault to feepe fo foundy. When _Lucius_, when? awake, I say; what _Lucius_? Enter _Lucius_.

Luc. Call'd you, my Lord? _Brut._ Get me a Toper in my Study, _Lucius_: When it is lighted, come and call me here. _Luc._ I will, my Lord. _Exit._

Brut. It muft be by his death: and for my part, I know no perfonall caufe, to spurne at him, But for the generall, He would be crown'd: How that might change his nature, there's the quefion; It is the bright day, that brings forth the Adder, And that caues ware walking: _Crowne_ him that, And then I graunt we put a Sting in him, That at his will he may doe danger with. The juice of _Greatnife_, is, when it dis-loynes Remorse from Power: And to feake true truth of _Cafar_, I haue not knowne, when his Alfections fway'd More then his Reafon. But 'tis a common prooffe, That _Lowlyneffe_ is young _Ambitions_ Ladder, Whereby the Climber vpward turns his Face: But when he once attains the fpotted Round, He then vnto the Ladder turns his Bucke, Lookes in the Clouds, formong the base degrees By which he did fecnd: fo _Cafar_ may; Then leaf that he may, preuent. And fince the _Quirrell_ Will bear no colour, for the thing he is, Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented, Would runne to thefe, and thefe extremities: And therefore thinke him as a Serpents egg, Which hath'd, would as his kinde grow mishievous; And kill him in the f yell. Enter _Lucius_.

Luc. The Taper burneth in your Cloafe, Sir; Searching the Window for a Flint, I found This paper, thus fay'd vp, and I am sure It did not lye there when I went to Bed. Gives _him_ the Letter. _Brut._ Get you to Bed againe, it is not day: Is it not to morrow (Boy) the firft of March? _Luc._ I know not, Sir. _Brut._ Looke in the Calender, and bring me word. _Luc._ I will, Sir. _Brut._ The exhalations, whizzing in the ayre, Giue fo much light, that I may reade by them. Opens the Letter, and reades.

Brutus thou fleep'st? awake, and fee thy felfe:

_Shall Romeo, &c._ Speake, strike, redreffe.

Brutus, thou fleep'st? awake.

Such infligfions haue beene oftehrop, Where I haue tooke them vp:

_Shall Romeo, &c._ Thus muft I piece it out; Shall _Romeo_ fland vnder one mans awe? What _Romeo_? My Ancestors di'd from the streets of _Rome_ The _Tarquin_ drivne, when he was call'd a King. Speake, strike, redreffe. Am I entreated

To speake, and strike? _O Rome_, I make thee promise, If the redreffe will follow, thou receiueft Thy full Petition at the hand of _Brutus_. Enter _Lucius_.

Luc. Sir, March is wafted fiftenee daies. _Knock within._

Brut._ 'Tis good. Go to the Gate, _some body_ knocks: Since _Caffines_ firft did whet me againft _Cafar_, I have not lept. Betweene the felling of a dreadfull thing, And the firft motion, all the _Interim_ is Like a _Pointefnae_, or a hideous _Dreame:_ The _Genius_, and the mortall _Infruments_ Are then in councell, and the fate of a man, Like to a little _Kingdom_, fuffer then The nature of an _Infurrection_.

Enter _Lucius_.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your Brother _Caffines_ at the Doore, Who doth defire to fee you. _Brut._ Is he alone? _Luc._ No, Sir, there are me with him. _Brut._ Do you know them? _Luc._ No, Sir, their Hats are pluckt about their Eares, And halfe their Faces buried in their Cloakes, That by no meanes I may difcouver them, By any mark of favour. _Brut._ Let 'em enter: They are the _Faction_. _O Conspiracie_, Sham't thou to fewe thy dang'rous _Brow_ by Night, When euills are moft free? _O_ then, by day, Where wilt thou finde a _Cauerne_ darke enough, To make thy monftrous _Vifage?_ Seek none _Conspiracie_, Hide it in _Smiles_, and _Affability_:

For if thou path thy natuie fembiance on, Not _Erebus_ it felde were dimme enough, To hide thee from preuention.

Enter the _Conspirators_, _Caffines_, _Cauk_, _Decius_, _Cinna_, _Metellus_, and _Tribunius_.

Caff._ I thinke we are too bold vpon your Reft:

_Good morrow_ _Brutus_, doe we trouble you? _Brut._ I haue beene vp this howre, awake all Night: Know I thefe men, that come along with you? _Caff._ Yes, euery man of them; and no man here But honors you: and euery one doth with, You had but that opinion of your felfe, Which euery Noble _Roman_ beares of you. _This is Tribunius_.

Brut._ He is welcome hither.

_Caff._ This, _Decius_ _Brutus_. _Brut._ He is welcome too. _Caff._ This, _Cauk_; this, _Cinna_; and this, _Metellus_; _Cymber_.

Brut._ They are all welcome.

What watchfull _Cares_ doe interpoce themfelves Betwixt your Eyes, and Night? _Caff._ Shall I entreat a word? They _whifper_. _Decius_. Here lyes the _Eiat_ : doth not the Day breake here? _Cauk._ No. _Cin._ O pardon, Sir, it doth; and you grey _Lines_, That fret the _Clouds_, are _Meifengers_ of _Day_. _Cauk._ You shall confefte, that you are both _decei'd_:

_Here, as I point my Sword, the _Sunne_ arifes_, Which is a great way growing on the South,
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

Weighing the youthful Seacosm of the yeares,
Some two moons thereupon, vp higher toward the North
He first presents his fire, and the high East
Stands as the Capitol, directly here.

'Brut. Glue me your hands all ouer, one by one.
Cai. And let vs fwear our Resolution.
Brut. No, not an Oath; if not the Face of men,
The sufferance of our Soules, the times Aboye;
If these be Motives weak, breake off betimes,
And every man hence, to his idle bed:
So let highghtred-Tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by Lottery. But if these
(As I am fure they do) bear fire enough
To kindle Cowards, and to steele with valour
The melting Spirits of women. Then Countrymen,
That need we all ype, but our owne caule,
To prickle vs to redreffe? What other Bond,
That cupre our Romans, that have fpoke the word,
And will not pater? And what other Oath,
Then Honefly to Honefly ingog'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it.

Sware Priests and Cowards, and men Caustelous
Old feeble Carrions, and fuch fuffering Soules
That welcome wrongs: Vnto bad caules, fwear
Such Creatures as men doubt; but do not flaine
The euyn vertue of our Enterprise,
Nor thinfupprefFed Mettle of our Spirits,
To thinke, that or our Caufe, or our Performance
Did neede an Oath. When every drop of blood
That every Roman beares, and Nobly beares
It guilty of a feuerrall Batardie,
If he do breake the smalllest Particle
Of any promife that hath paff from him.
Cai. But what of Cares? Shall we found him?
I think he will fland very strong with vs.

Cai. Let vs not leave him out.

Cyn. No, by noe meanes.
Metel. O let vs haue him, for his Siluer haires
Will purchase vs a good opinion.
And buy mens voyces, to commend our deeds:
It shall be faid, his judgement rule our hands,
Our youths, and wildenes, shall no whit appeare,
But all be buried in his Grauty.

Brut. O name him not, let vs not breake with him,
For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.

Cai. Then leave him out.

Cai. Indeed, he is not fit.

Decius. Shall no man else be toucht, but onely Caesar?
Cai. Decius well urg'd: I think it is not meet,
Mark Antony, so well belou'd of Caesar,
Should out-live Caius, we shall finde of him
A shrew'd Contriver. And you know, his meanes
If he imprue them, may well stretche to farre
As to annoy vs all: which to prevent,
Let Antony and Caius fall together.

Brut. Our course will feme too bloody, Caius Caius,
To cut the Head off, and then hacke the Limbes:
Like Wrath in death, and Enuy afterwards:
For Antony, is but a Limbe of Caius.
Let's be Sacrificers, but not Butchers Caius:
We all stand vp against the Spirit of Caius,
And in the Spirit of men, there is no blood:
O that we then could come by Caius Caius,
And not dismember Caius! But (als)
Caius must blie for it. And gentle Friends,

Let's kill him Boldly, but not Wrathfully:
Let's carve him, as a Dift fit for the Gods,
And not hew him as a Carciffe fit for Hounds:
And let our Hearts, as subtile Masters do,
Stirre vp their Servants to an acte of Rage,
And after feme to chide 'em. This shall make
Our purpofe Necessary, and not Emotions.
Which fo appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd Purgeins, not Murderers.

And for Mark Antony, thinke not of him:
For he can do no more then Caius Armes,
When Caius head is off.

Cai. Yet I fear him,
For in the ingrained love he beares to Caius.

Brut. Alas, good Caius, do not thinke of him:
If he loue Caius, all that he can do
Is to himselfe; take thought, and dye for Caius,
And that were much he should do; for he is given
To sports, to wildenes, and much company.

Treb. There is no feare in him; let him not dye,
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

Clock strikes.

Cai. Peace, count the Clocke.

Cai. The Clocke hath striken three.
Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Cai. But it is doubltful yet,
Whether Caius will come forth to day, or no:
For he is Superflitious grounded of late,
Quite from the malne Opinion he held once,
Of Fantasie, of Dreams, and Ceremonies:
It may be, these apparant Prodigies,
The vnsacultom'd Terror of this night,
And the perfusion of his Augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to day.

Decius. Neuer feare that: If he be fo reflex'd, I can one-way him: For he loues to hear,
That Vnicornes may be betray'd with Trees,
And Beares with Gloaffes, Elephants with Holes,
Lyons with Toples, and men with Flatterers.
But, when I tell him, he hates Flatterers,
He fayes, he does; being then most flattered.

Cai. Let me worke:
For I can give his humour the true bent;
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cai. Nay, we will all of vs, be there to fetch him.

Brut. By the eighth houres, is that the vtermost?

Cai. Be that the vtermost, and sole not then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth beare Caius hard,
Who ratted him for speaking well of Pompsey;
I wonder none of you have thought of him.

Brut. Now good Metellus go along by him:
He loues me well, and I have gien him Reafons,
Send him but hither, and Ie fashion him.

Cai. The morning comes vpon's:
We'll leave you Brutus,
And Friends diuerfe your felues; but all remember
What you have faid, and shew your felues true Romans.

Brut. Good Gentlemen, looke freh and merrily,
Let not our looks put on our purpofes,
But beare it as our Roman Actors do,
With vntyp'd Spirits, and formall Complaine,
And so good morrow to you every one.

Exeunt.

M Martian Brutus.

Boy: Lucia: Fait asleep? It is no matter,
Enjoy the hone-handy-Dew of Slumber:
Thou haft no Figures, nor no Fantasies,
The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

Which bute care drawes, in the braines of men;
Therefore thou sleepe'llt be sound.

Enter Portia.

Per. Brutus, my Lord.

Bru. Portia: What meanst thou WHEREfore rife you now?

Per. Not for yours neither. Y'haue vngently Brutus
Stole from my bed: and yetneither at Supper
You sodainly rofed, and walk'd about,
Mufing, and fighing, with your armes a-croffe:
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You fay'd vpon me, with vngente lookes.
I urg'd you further, then you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently flumpt with your ftoote:
Yet I infolded, yet you answer'd not;
But with an angry wafer of your hand
Gave figne to me to leue you: So I did,
Fearing to ftrengthen that impatience
Which feem'd too much inkinded; and withall,
Hating it was but an act of fomor,
Which fometime hath his houre with every man.
It will not let you eate, nor talk, nor fleep;
And could it worke fo much vpon your fhape,
As it hath much preus'd you on your Condition,
I fhou'd not know you Brutus. Deere my Lord,
Make me acquainted with your caufe of griefe.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Per. Brutus is wife, and were he not in health,
He would embrace the meanes to come by it.

Bru. Why fo I do: good Portia go to bed.

Per. Is Brutus fick? And is it Phyfical
To walke vnbraed, and fucce vp the humors
Of the danke Morning? What, is Brutus fick?
And will he fteale out of his wholefome bed
To dare the vile contagion of the Night?
And tempt the Rheumy, and vapurged Ayre,
To add vsto hit ficknefe? No my Brutus,
You have some fickne ficknefe within your minde,
Which by the Right and Vertue of my place
I ought to know of: And vpon my knees,
I farme you, by my once commended Beauty,
By all your vows of Loue, and that great Vow
Which did incorporate and make vs one,
That you vnmold to me, your felfe: your halfe
Why you are heeue: and what men to night
Haue had reft to you: for heeue haue beene
Some fane or frenue, who did hide their faces
Euen from darkneffe.

Bru. Kneele not gentle Portia.

Per. I should not neede, if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the Bond of Marriage, tell me Brutus,
Is it excepted, I shou'd know no Secrets
That appertaine to you? Am I your Selve,
But as it were in fort, or limitation?
To keepe with you at Meales, comfort your Bed,
And talke to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the Suburbs
Of your good pleafure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus Harlot, not his Wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable Wife,
As deere to me, as are the ruddy droppes
That vfit my fad heart.

Per. If this were true, then fhou'd I know this fecret.
I grant I am a Woman; but withall,
A Woman that Lord Brutus tooke to Wife;
I grant I am a Woman; but withall,
A Woman well reputed : Cato's Daughter.
Think ye, I am no stronger then my Sex
Being fo Father'd, and fo Husband'd?
Tell me your Counfel, I will not difcover 'em:
I haue made strong proffe of my Confiunce,
Giving my felfe a voluntary wound
Here, in the Thigh: Can I beare that with patience,
And not my Husbands Secrets?

Bru. O ye Gods!
Render me worthy of this Noble Wife.

Per. Bute, here is a ficker man that would speake with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus fpake of.

Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius, how?

Cai. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Bru. O what a time haue you chofe out braue Caius
To waere a Kerchief? Would you were not ficker.

Cai. I am not ficker, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of Honor.

Bru. Such an exploit haue I in hand Ligarius,
Had you a healthfull eare to heare of it.

Cai. By all the Gods that Romans bow before,
I heere dilcard my ficknefe. Soule of Rome,
Braue Sonne, deri'd from Honourable Loines,
Thou like an Exorcift, haft cour'd vp
My mortified Spirit. Now bid me runne,
And I will drue with things imposfible,
Yea get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A peace of worke,
That will make ficker men whole.

Cai. But are not some whole, that we muft make ficker?

Bru. That muft we alfo. What is it my Caius,
I shal unfold to thee, as we are going,
To whom it muft be done.

Cai. Set on your ftoote,
And with a heart new-fir'd, I follow you,
To do I know not what: but it fufficeth
That Brutus leads me on.

Thunder.

Bru. Follow me then.

Thunder & Lightning. Enter Julius Cæsar in his Night-gown.

Cæsar. Nor Hauean, nor Earth,
Have beene at peace to night:

Threee hath Calpurnia, in her feepe cryed out,
Help, ho! They murther Cæsar. Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord.

Cæs. Go bid the Priests do preuent Sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of Successe.

Ser. I will my Lord.

Enter Calpurnia.

Cæs. What mean you Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?
You shal not flirre out of your house to day.

Cæs. Cæsar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me,
We're look'd on my backe: When they shall fee
The face of Cæsar, they are vanifh'd.

Cæs.
Calp. Caesar, I never flood on Cerimonies, Yet now they fight me: There is one within, Besides the things that we have heard and seen, Recounts most horrid sights seen by the Watch. A Lioness hath whelped in the streets, And Granes have yawn'd, and yelded vp their dead; Fierce fiery Warriours fight vp the Clouds In Rankes and Squadrons, and right forme of Warre Which drizzel'd blood upon the Capitoll: The noife of Battall hurried in the Ayre: Hories do neigh, and dying men did groane, And Ghoosts did shriake and squeale about the streets, O Caesar, th'oods are beyond all vse, And I do feare them.

Cef. What can be avoyded Whole end is purpoe'd by the mighty Gods? Yet Caesar shall go forth: for thehe Predicions Are to the world in generall, as to Caesar. Calp. When Beggars dye, there are no Comets seen, The Heauens themselfes flaire forth the death of Princes Cef. Cowards dye many times before their deaths, The valiant neuer talle of death but once: Of all the Wonders that I yet have heard, It seems to me most strange, that men should feare, Seeing that death, a necessary end. Will come, when it will come. Enter a Servant.

What fate the Augurers? Ser. They would not have you to dire forth to day. Plucking the intrails of an Offering forth, They could not finde a heart within the beast. Cef. The Gods do this in shame of Cowardice: Caesar should be a Beath without a heart If he should stay at home to day for feare. No Caesar shall not: Danger knowes full well That Caesar is more dangerous then he. We heare two Lyons litter'd in one day, And I the elder and more terrible, And Caesar shall go forth. Calp. Alas my Lord, Your wifedome is consum'd in confidence: Do not go forth to day: Call it my feare, That keeps you in the house, and not your owne. We'll fend Mark Antony to the Senate houfe, And he shall say, you are not well to day: Let me vp my knee preualie in this. Cef. Mark Antony tell I am not well, And for thy humor, I will stay at home. Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so. Deci. Caesar, all hail: Good morrow worthy Caesar, I come to fetch you to the Senate house. Cef. And you are come in very happy time, To bear my greeting to the Senators, And tell them that I will not come to day: Cannot, is fole: and that I dare not,fuller: I will not come to day, tell them so Decius. Calp. Say he is fike. Cef. Shall Caesar fend a Lye? Have I in Conquett stretcht mine Arme fo farre, To be afraid to tell Gray-heards the truth: Decius, go tell them, Caesar will not come. Deci. Moft mighty Caesar, let me know some caufe, Left I be laught at when I tell them so, Caesar. The caufe is in my Will, I will not come, That is enough to satysfe the Senate.

But for your private satisfaction, Because I love you, I will to you know. Calpurnia here, my wife, flays me at home: She dreamt to night, she saw my Statue, Which like a Fountaine, with an hundred spouts Did run pure blood and many fully Romans Came smiling, & did bathe their hands in it: And thefe does the apply, for warnings and portents, And euils imminent; and on her knee Hath begg'd, that I will stay at home to day. Deci. This Drame is all amifs interpreted, It was a vilion, faire and fortunate: Your Stane spouting blood in many pipes, In which so many fulling Romans bath'd, Signifies, that from you great Rome shall fucke Reuiling blood, and that great man shall preffe For Tinctures, Staines, Reliques, and Cognifance. This by Calpurnia's Drame is ignifign. Cef. And this way youe well expounded it. Deci. I haue, when you have heard what I can fay: And know it now, the Senate have concluded To give this day, a Crowne to mighty Caesar, If you shall fend them word you will not come, Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mocke Afp to be render'd, for some one to fay, Breake vp the Senate, till another time: When Caesars wife shall meete with better Dremes. If Caesar hide himfelfe, hall they not whiper Lou Caesar is affraid? Pardon me Caesar, for my deere deere love To your proceeding, bids me tell you this: And reason to my love is liable. Cef. How foolish do you fears feeme now Calpurnia? I am shamead I did yeeld to them. Give me my Robe, for I will go. Enter Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Calph, Trebonius, Cyma, and Publius. And looke where Publius is come to fetch me. Pub. Good morrow Caesar. Cef. Welcome Publius. What Brutus are you thir'd so Carey too? Good morrow Calph: Come Ligarius, Caesar was ne're so much your enemy, As that fame Ague which hath made you leane. What's a Clocke? Brut. Caesar's tis strucken eight. Cef. I thank you for your pains and courtefe. Enter Antony. See, Antony that Reels long a-nights is notwithstanding vp: Good morrow Antony. Ant. So to moft Noble Caesar Caesar. Bid them prepare within: I am too blame to be thus waited for. Now Cyma, now Metellus: what Trebonius, I have an hours taleke in store for you: Remember that you call on me to day: Be neere me, that I may remember you. Treb. Caesar I will: and fo neere will I be, That your belte Friends shall with I had beene further. Caesar, Good Friends go in, and take some wine with me And we (like Friends) will straight way go together. Brut. That eyry like is not the same, O Caesar, The heart of Brutus carnes to thinke vpon. Execut, Enter Artemidorus. Caesar, beware of Brutus, take heed of Caius; come not neer.
The Tragedie of Cæsar.

Say I am merry; Come to me againe,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

Actus Tertius.

Fleurish.

Enter Cæsar, Brutus, Cassius, Cæcina, Decius, Metellus, Trebonius, Cymber, Antony, Lepidus, Artimedorus, Publius, and the Southayer.

Cæs. The Ides of March are come.

South. I Cæsar, but not gone.

Art. Haile Cæsar! Read this Sceudole.

Deci. Trebonius doth desire you to ore-read
(At your best leve) this his humble suite.

Art. Cæsar, reade mine fierce: for mine's a suite
That touches Cæsar nearer. Read it. I say Cæsar.

Cæs. What touches ye our family, shall be let frist.

Art. Delay not Cæsar, read it instantly.

Cæs. What's the, fellow mad?
Pub. Sire, glue place.

Cæs. What's this you have to Petition in the street?

Come to the Capitol.

Pepil. I wish you your enterprize to day may thrive.

Cæs. What enterprize Peplius?

Pepil. Fare you well.

Bru. What said Peplius Lena?

Cæs. He will to day our enterprize might thrive:
I fear our purpose is discouered.

Bru. Looke how he makes to Cæsar mark him,

Brutus what shall be done? If this be knowne,
Pepil. Cassius or Cæsar neuer shall turne backe,

For I will fly my felle.

Peplius Lena speaks not of our purposes,
For looke he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change.

Cæs. Trebonius knowes his time: for look you Brutus.

He draws Mark Anthony out of the way.

Deci. Where is Metellus Cymbre, let him go,
And prefently preferrre his suite to Cæsar.

Bru. He is adreft: preffe meer, and fcond him.

Cas. Cæs. Cæs. Cæs. are you the firft that reares your hand.

Cæs. Are we all ready! What is now amiffe,
That Cæsar and his Senate putte reftreffe?

Metel. Mofh high, moft mighty, and moft puifant Cæsar.

Metellus Cymbre throwes before thys State
An humble heart.

Cæs. I muft prevent thee Cymbre:

These couchnings, and these lowly courteyes
Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
And tune pre-Ordinance, and firft Decree.

Into the lane of Childre. Be not fond,
To thinke that Cæsar beareth such Rebell blood
That will be thow'd from the true quality
With that which melteth Fools, I mean sweet words,
Low-crooked-curtieys, and base Spaniel fawning:

Thy Brother by decree is banifhed:
If thoue dost bend, and pray, and fawne for him,
I purue thee like a Currre out of my way:

Know, Cæsar doth not wrong, nor without caufe

Will he be fatisfied.

Metel. Is there no voyce more worthy then my owne,
The Tragedy of Julius Caesar.

To found more sweetly in great Cæfar's care,
For the repealing of my banish'd brother?
  Brus. I kiffe thy hand, but not in flattery Cæfar:
Defining thee, that Publicus Cymber may
Have an immediate freedome of repeale.
  Cæf. What Brutus?
  Caffi. Pardon Cæfar; Cæfar pardon;
As lowe as to thy foot doth Caffiost fall,
To begge infranchisement for Publicus Cymber.
  Cæf. I could be well moud, if I were as you,
If I could pray to moose, Prayers would move me:
But I am constant as the Northern Starre,
Of whole true fast, and refting quality,
There is no fellow in the Firmament.
The Skies are painted with vnnumberd starkes,
They are All Fire, and every one doth shine:
But, there's but one in all doth hold his place.
So, in the World; "Tis furnish'd well with Men,
And Men are Fleth and Blood, and apprehenfue:
Yet in the number, I do know but One
That vnflaybleable holds on his Ranke,
Vnsa'd of Motion : and that is hee, I
Let me a little shew it, even in this:
That I was constant Cymber should be banish'd,
And constant do remaine to keepe him fo.

Camma. O Cæfar.
Cæf. Caffi. Hence: Wilt thou lift vp Olympus?
  Ducus. Great Cæfar.
  Cæf. Doth not Brutus bootflee kneele?
Caffi. Speake hands for me.
The yelph Cæfar.
  Cæf. Et Tu'Brutus?—Then fall Cæfar.
Dyes
  Cæs. Liberty, Freedome; Tyranny is dead,
Run hence, proclaime, cry it about the Streets.
  Caffi. Same to the common Pulpit, and cry out
Liberty, Freedome, and Enfranchisement.
  Brus. People and Senators, be not affrighted:
Fly not, stand still: Ambitions deit is paid.
  Caffi. Go to the Pulpit Brutus,
  Ducus. And Caffiost too,
  Cæf. Where's Publius?
  Cæs. Heere, quite confounded with this mutiny.
  Mect. Stand fall togeth, leaft some Friend of Cæfars
Should chance.—
  Brus. Talkle not of flanding. Publicus good cheerre,
There is no harme intende to your person,
Nor to no Roman elfe: fo tell them Publicus.
  Caffi. And leaue vs Brutus, leaft that the people
Ruffling on vs, should do your Age some mischiefe.
  Brus. Do so, and let no man abide this deede,
But we the Deors.

Enter Trebonius.
  Caffi. Where is Antony?
  TREB. Fled to his Houle amaz'd:
Men, Wives, and Children, flars, cry out, and run,
As it were Doomsday.
  Cæs. Fates, we will know your pleasures:
That we shall dye we know, 'tis but the time
And drawing days out, that men stand upon.
  Cæf. Why he that cuts off twenty years of life,
Cuts off so many yeares of fearfull death.
  Brus. Grant that, and then is Death a Benefite:
So are we Cæfars Friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death. Stoope Romans, stoop,
And let vs bathe our hands in Cæfars blood
To the Elbowes, and befmeare our Swords:

Then walke we forth, even to the Market place,
And waunting our red Weapons o'erte our heads,
Let's all cry Peace, Freedome, and Liberty.
  Caffi. Stoop then, and waht. How many Ages hence
Shall this our lofty Scene be act'd ouer,
In State vnborn, and Accents yet vnknowne?
  Brus. How many times shali Cæfar bleed in fport,
That now on Pompey Baifs lyce along,
No worther then the dust?
  Caffi. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of vs be call'd,
The Men that gave their Country liberty.

"Do. What, shall we forth?
  Caffi. I, every man away,
  Brutus shall leade, and we will grace his heelees
With the most bolded, and beft hearts of Rome.

Enter a Seruant.

Ser. Thus Brutus did my Master bid me kneele;
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall downe,
And being proflate, thus he bad me lay:

Brus is Noble, Wife, Valiant, and Honest;
Cæfar was Mighty, Bold, Royall, and Louing:
Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him;
Say, I fear Cæfar, honour'd him, and lou'd him.
If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony
May safely come to him, and be receiv'd,
How Cæfar hath deffer'd to lie in death,
Mark Antony, shall not loue Cæfar dead
So well as Brutus living: but will follow
The Fortunes and Affayres of Noble Brutus:
Thorougb the hazards of this vntrod State,
With all true Faith. So layes my Master Antony.

Brus. Thy Master is a Wife and Valiant Romane,
I never thought him worke:
Tell him, so pleafe him come vnto this place
He shall be satisfied: and by my Honor
Depart vn toch'd.

Ser. Ile fetch him prefently.
Exit Seruant.
  Brus. I know that we shall haue him well to Friend.
  Caffi. I wish we may: But yet haue I a minde
That feares him much: and my misgueuing ffull
Falles thready to the purpole.

Enter Antony.

Brus. But heere comes Antony:
Welcome Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæfar! Doft thou lye so lowe?
Are all thy Conquests, Glories, Triumphes, Spoiles,
Shrunke to this little Meafeure! Fare thee well.
I know not Gentlemen what you intend,
Who elfe must be let blood, who elfe is ranke:
If I my felfe, there is no houre fo fit
As Cæfars deaths horfe: nor no Infrument
Of halfe that worth, as thole your Swords: made rich
With the moft Noble blood of all this World.
I do befeech you, if you beare me hard,
Now, whilft your purpled hands doe recke and fmoake,
Fulfill your pleafure. Lice a thousand yeares,
I shall not finde my felfe fo apt to dye.
No place will me fo, no meane of death,
As heere by Cæfar, and by you cut off,
The Choice and Mafier Spirits of this Age.

Brus. O Antony! Begge not your death of vs:
Though now we must appeare bloody and cruel,
As by our hands, and this our present ADe
You see we do: Yet freue you but our hands,
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

And this, the bleeding businesse they have done:
Our hearts you sees not, they are pitifull:
And pitty to the generall wrong of Rome,
As fire drives out fire, fo pitty, pitty
Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part,
To you, our Swords have leaen points Mark Antony:
Our Armes in strength of malice, and our Hearts
Of Brothers temper, do receuie you in,
With all kinde love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Caius. Your voyce shall be as strong as any man's,
In the disposing of new Dignities.
By. Oneley be patient, till we haue appear'd
The Multitude, before themselves with feare,
And then, we will deliver you the caufe,
Why I, that did loue Caesar when I brooke him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your Wilidome:
Let each man render me his bloody hand.
First, Marcus Brutus will I shakke with you,
Next Caius Cassius do I take your hand;
Now Decius Brutus yours; now yours Masellus;
Yours Cloeas; and my valiant Cloeas, yours;
Though left, not least in love, yours good Tribonius,
Gentlemen all: Alas, what shall I say,
My credit now stands on such frivolous ground,
That one of two bad wayes you must conceit me,
Either a Coward, or a Flatterer.

Ant. That I did loue thee Caesar, O 'tis true:
If then thy Spirit looke upon vs now,
Shall it not greue thee deere then thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy Foes?
Most Noble, in the prefence of thy Coarfe,
Had I as many eyes, as thou haue wounds,
Weeping as fast as they flame forth thy blood,
It would become me better, then to clofe
In teares of Friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me Julius, heere was not thou by'd brave Hart,
Heree didst thou fall, and here thy Hunters fland
Sign'd in thy Spoyle, and Crimfon'd in thy Lethee.
O World! thou waft the Forreft to this Hart,
And this indeed, O World, the Hart of thee.
How like a Deere, brooken by many Princes,
Dost thou heere lye?

Caius. Mark Antony.

Ant. Pardon me Caius Cassius:
The Enemies of Caesar, shall lye this:
Then, in a Friend, it is cold Modellie.

Caius. I blame you not for prailing Caesar to,
But what compact means you to haue with vs?
Will you be prick'd in number of our Friends,
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I tookee your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point, by looking downe on Caesar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you shall give me Restorons,
Why, and wherein, Caesar was dangerous.

By. Or else were this a faunge Spectacle:
Our Restorons are fo full of good regard,
That were you Antony, the Sonne of Caesar,
You should be resolv'd.

Ant. That's all I feeeke,
And am moreouer futor, that I may
Produce his body to the Market-place,
And in the Pulpit as becomes a Friend,
Speake in the Order of his Funerall.

Brus. You shall Mark Antony,
Caius. Brutus, a word with you:
You know not what you do; Do not confent
That Antony speake in his Funerall:
Know you how much the people may be mou'd
By that which he will utter.

By. By your pardon:
I will my felfe into the Pulpit first,
And shew the realon of our Ceasars death.
What Antony shalle speake, I will protest
He speakes by leaue, and by permifion:
And that we are contented Caesar shall
Have all true Rites, and lawfull Ceremonies,
It shall advantage more, then do us wrong.

Caius. I know not what may fall, I like it not.

Brus. Mark Antony, heere take you Ceasars body:
You shalle not in your Funerall speach blame vs,
But speake all good you can deuife of Caesar,
And say you not by our permifion:
Else shalle you not haue any hand at all
About his Funerall. And you shall speake
In the fame Pulpit whereeto I am going,
After my fpeech is ended.

Ant. Be it fo:
I do desire no more.

Brus. Prepare the body then, and follow vs.

Marius Antony.

O pardon me, thou bleeding piece of Earth:
That I am meke and gentle with thofe Butchers.
Thou art the Ruines of the Noble man
That euer liued in the Tide of Times.
Woe to the hand that fed this cutty Blood.
Ouer thy wounds, now do I Prophete,
(Which like dumbe mouthes do ope their Ruby lips,
To begge the voyce and vterance of my Tongue)
A Curfe shall light vpon the limbs of men;
Domnefticke Fury, and fierce Ciull[r]ire,
Shall cumbe all the parts of Italy:
Blood and deſtruction shall be fo in vfe,
And dreadful Object[s] fo familiar,
That Mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their Infants quartered with the hands of Warre:
All pitty chow'd with cufome of fell deeds,
And Ceasars Spirit ranging for Revenge,
With haste by his fide, come hot from Hell,
Shall in thofe Confines, with a Monarkes voyce,
Cry hauecke, and let flip the Dogges of Warre,
That this foule decea, shall smelle above the earth,
With Carrion men, groaning for Buriall.

Enter Octavius's Servant.

You ferue Octavius Ceasar, do you not?

Ser. I do Marke Antony.

Ant. Ceasar did write for him to come to Rome.

Ser. He did receive his Letters, and is comming,
And bid me fay to you by word of mouth——

O Ceasar!

Ant. Thy heart is bigge: get thee a-part and wepe:
Pasion I fee is catching from mine eyes,
Seeing thofe Beads of forrow fland in thine,
Began to water. Is thy Mifer comming?

Ser. He lies to night within feven Leagues of Rome.

Ant. Poit backe with speede,
And tell him what hath chanc'd:
Heere is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet,
He hence, and tell him fo. Yet flay a-while,

Thou
The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

I.ου thou shalt not backe, till I have borne this course Into the Market place: There shall I try In my Oration, how the People take The cruele issue of these bloody men, According to the which, thou shalt discourse To young Octavius, of the state of things. Lend me your hand. Exit.

Enter Brutus and goes into the Pulpit, and Cæsius, with the Plebeians.

Ple. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied
Brut. Then follow me, and give me Audience friends. Cæsius go you into the other fummary, And part the Numbers: Thofe that will hear me speake, let 'em stay here; Thofe that will follow Cæsius, go with him, And publike Reasons shall be rendred of Cæsars death.

1. Ple. I will hear Brutus speake.
2. I will hear Cæsius, and compare their Reasons, When feuerally we hear them rendred.
3. The Noble Brutus is ascended: Silence.

Brut. Be patient till the last. Romans, Country-men, and Louers, heare mee for my caufe, and be filent, that you may heare. Cenfure me in your Wifedom, and Mourn your Senfes, that you may the better Judge. If there bee any in this Assemblies, any deere Friend of Cæsars, to him I fay, that Brutus love to Cæsar, was no leffe then his. If then, that Friend demand, why Brutus rofe against Cæsars, this is my answer: Not that I lou'd Cæsar leffe, but that I lou'd Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were liuing, and dye all Slaves; then that Cæsar were dead, to liue all Free-men? As Cæsar lou'd mee, I wepe for him; as he was Fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was Valiant, I honour him: But, as he was Ambitious, I flew him. There is Teares, for his Loue: Joy, for his Fortune: Honour, for his Valour: and Death, for his Ambition. Who is heere fo safe, that would be a Bondman? If any, speake for him, haue I offended. Who is heere fo rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speake for him, haue I offended. Who is heere fo vile, that will not loue his Countrye? If any, speake for him, haue I offended. I paufe for a Reply. All. None Brutus, none.

Brutus. Then none haue I offended. I haue done no more to Cæsar, than you all doe to Brutus. The Question of his death, is inrol'd in the Capitoll: his Glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffred death.

Enter Mark Antony, with Cæsars body.

Heere comes his Body, mourn'd by Mark Antony, who though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the Commonwealth, as which of you shall not. With this I depart, that as I flowed my bell Louer for the good of Rome, I hace the fame Dagger for my selfe, when it shall pleafe my Country to need my death.

All. Lived Brutus, live, live.
1. Bring him with Triumph home unto his house.
2. Glue him a Statute with his Ancestors.
3. Let him be Cæsar.
4. Cæsars better parts.

Shall be Crown'd in Brutus.
1. We'll bring him to his House, With Shows and Celebrations.
2. Peace, silence, Brutus speaks.
1. Peace ho.
Brut. Good Countrymen, let me depart alone, And (for my false)I heare with Antony: Do grace to Cæsars Corpses, and grace his Speech Tending to Cæsars Glories, which Mark Antony (By our permission) is allow'd to make. I do inrat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony haue spoke.

1. Stay ho, and let vs heare Mark Antony.
2. Let him go vp into the pullike Chaire.

We'll heare him: Noble Antony go vp.
Ant. For Brutus fakes, I am beholding to you.
4. What does he say of Brutus?
3. He says, for Brutus sake.
He finds himfelfe beholding to vs all.
4. Twere bet he speake no harme of Brutus here?
1. This Cæsar was a Tyrant.
3. Nay that's certaine:
We are blest that Rome is rid of him.
2. Peace, let vs heare what Antony can fay.
Ant. You gentle Romans.
All. Peace hoe, let vs heare him.

Ant. Romans, Country-men, lend me your ears: I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him: The null that men do, liues after them, The good is oft entered with their bones, So let it be with Cæsar. The Noble Brutus, Hath told you Cæsar was Ambitious:
If it were fo, it was a greuous Fault, And greuously hath Cæsar answer'd it. Heere, vnder leaue of Brutus, and the reft (For Brutus is an Honourable man, So are they all; all Honourable men) Come I to speake in Cæsars Funerall. He was my Friend, faithfull, and liue to me; But Brutus fays, he was Ambitious, And Brutus is an Honourable man.
He hath brought many Captives home to Rome, Whole Ranfomes, did the generall Cofiers fill: Did this in Cæsar seeme Ambitious? When that the poor haue cry'd, Cæsar hath wept: Ambition should be made of fitter fluffe, Yet Brutus fays, he was Ambitious: And Brutus is an Honourable man.
You all did fee, that on the Lepidus, I thrice prefented him a Kingly Crownes, Which he did thrice refuse. Was this Ambition? Yet Brutus fays, he was Ambitious: And sure he is an Honourable man. I speake not to difprove what Brutus spoke, But heare I am, to speake what I do know; You all did loue him once, not without caufe, What caufe with-holds you then, to mourne for him? O judgement! thou are feld to brutifh Beef, And Men haue loft their Reason. Bære with me, My heart is in the Coffin there with Cæsar, And I must pauze, till it come bace to me.

1. Me thinkes there is much reaon in his sayings.
2. If thou confider rightly of the matter, Cæsar ha's had great wrong.
3. Ha's hee Mafters? I heare there will a worfe come in
4. Marke
The Tragedie of Julius Cesar.

4. Mark'd ye his words? he would not take ʃ Crown,
   Therefore 'tis certaine, he was not Ambitious.
   1. If he be found so, tom shall deride abide it.
   2. If poor foule, his eyes are red as fire with weeping.
   3. There's not a Noble man in Rome then Antony.
   4. Now marke him, he begins againe to speake.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Cesar might:
   Haue flood against the World: Now lies he there,
   And none so poore to do him reverence.

O Mailers! If I were diffr'd to filtre
   Your hearts and minDES to Mutiny and Rage,
   I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong:
   Who (you all know) are Honourable men.
   I will not do them wrong: I rather choos
   To wrong the dead, to wrong my selfe and you,
   Then I will wrong such Honourable men.

But here's a Parchment, with the Seale of Cesar,
   I found it in his Cloffes, 'tis his Will:
   Let but the Commons heare this Teflament:
   (Which pardon me) I do not meane to reade,
   And they would goe and knife dead Cearsers wounds,
   And dip their Napkins in his Sacred Blood.
   Yea, begge a haire of him for Memory,
   And dyuing, mention it within their Willes,
   Bequeathing it as a rich Legacie
   Unto their issue.

We'll hear the Will, reade it Mark Antony.

All. The Will, the Will; we will heare Cajar Will.

Ant. Haue patience gentle Friends, I must not read it.
   It is not meete you know how Cesar lou'd you:
   You are not Wood, you are not Stones, but men:
   And being men, hearing the Will of Cesar,
   It will inflame you, it will make you mad;
   'Tis good you know not that you are his Heires,
   For if you should, O what would come of it?

4. Read the Will, wee'le hear it Antony:
   You shall reade vs the Will, Cesar's Will.

Ant. Will you be Patient? Will you stay a-while?
   I haue o're-flott my selfe to tell you of it,
   I feare I wrong the Honourable men,
   Whose Daggers haue flabb'd Cesar: I do feare it.
   4. They were Traitors: Honourable men?

All. The Will, the Teflament.

They were Villaines, Murderersthe Will, read the Will.

Ant. You will compell me then to read the Will:
   Then make a Ring about the Corpses of Cesar,
   And let me shew you him that made the Will:
   Shall I defend? And will you give me leave?

All. Come down.

2. Defend.

3. You shhall haue leave.

4. A Ring, fland round.

1. Stand from the Hearse, fland from the Body.

3. Roomes for Antony, most Noble Antony.

Ant. Nay preffe not fo vpon me, fland farre off.
All. Stand backe: roome, beare backe.

Ant. If you have teares, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this Mantle, I remember
   The first time ever Cesar put it on.
'Twas on a Summers Evening in his Tent,
   That day he overcame the Neruus.

Looke, in this place ran Cassius Dagger through:
   See what a rent the enuisous Cassa made:
   Through this, the well-beloved Brutus flabb'd,
   And as he pluck'd his curled Steele away:

Marke how the blood of Cesar followed it,
   As ruinging out of doorees, to be refoluid.
If Brutus vs vknieldly knock'd, or no:
   For Brutus, as you know, was Cearsers Angel.
   Judge, O you Gods, how dearly Cesar lou'd him:
   This was the most vsknedfit cut of all.

For when the Noble Cesar saw him flab,
   Ingratitude, more strong then Traitors armes,
   Quite vanguard'd him, then burst his Mighty heart,
   And in his Mantle, muffling vp his face,
Even at the Bafe of Pompeius Statue.
   (Which all the while ran blood) great Cesar fell.
   O what a fall was there, my Countrysmen?

Then I land you, and all of us fell downes,
   Will's bloody Treason flourished ouer vs.
   O now you weep, and I perceive you feel.
   The dint of pitty: These are gracious droppes.

Kinde Soules, what weepe you, when you but behold
   Our Cesar's Vefure wounded? Looke you heere,
   Heere is Himelfe, marr'd as you see with Traitors.

1. O piteous spectacle!

2. O Noble Cesar!

3. O wofull day!

4. O Traitors, Villaines!

1. O moft bloody fight!

2. We will be reueng'd: Reuenge
   About, feakes, burns, fire, kill, flay,
   Let not a Traitor live.

Ant. Stay Countrysmen.

1. Peace there, heare the Noble Antony.

2. We'll heare him, wee'll follow him, wee'll dy with him.

Ant. Good Friends, sweet Friends, let me not flirre
   To such a folaide Flood of Mutiny:
   They that have done this Deede, are honourable,
   That private greefes they haue, alas I know not,
   That made them do it: They are Wife, and Honourable,
   And will no doubt with Reaons answer you.
I come not (Friends) to teale away your hearts,
   I am no Orator, as Brutus is;
   But (as you know me all) a plaine bluent man
   That loue my Friend, and that they know full well,
   That gue me publike leave to speake of him:
   For I have neither wrt nor words, nor worth,
   Action, nor Vterance, nor the power of Speech,
   To flirre mens Blood. I onely speake right on:
   I tell you that, which you your Selues do know,
   Shew you sweet Cesar's wounds, poor poor dum mouths
   And bid them speake for me: But were I Brutus,
   And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
   Would ruffle vp your Spirits, and put a Tongue
   In euery Wound of Cesar, that should moue
   The Ilones of Rome, to rife and Mutiny.

All. We'll Mutiny.

1. We'll burne the house of Brutus.

2. Away then, come, feake the Conspirators.

Ant. Yet heare me Countrysmen, yet heare me speake
   All. Peace ho, heare Antony, most Noble Antony.

Ant. Why Friends, you go to do you know not what:
   Wherein hath Cesar thus defend'd your loues?
   Alas you know not, I must teell you then:
   You have forgot the Will I told you of.

All. Moft true, the Will, let's flay and heare the Will.

Ant. Heere is the Will, and under Cesar Seale:
   To euery Roman Citizen he gives,

To euery foull man, sentence flue Drachmaes.

2. Ph.
The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

2. Pl. Moft Noble Cæfar, we'll reuenge his death.

Ant. Hear me with patience.

Ant. Peace be.

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his Walkes, His private Arbors, and new-planted Orchards, On this side Tyber, he hath left them you, And to your hearets for ever: common pleasures To walke abroad, and recreat your selves. Hereas was a Cæsar: when comes such another?

1. Pl. Neuer, neuer: come, away, away: We'll burne his body in the holy place, And with the Brandes fire the Traitors houes.

Take vp the body.

2. Pl. Go fetch fire.

Exit Plebeians.

Ant. Now let it worke: Mischeafe thou art a-foot, Take thou what course thou wilt, How now Fellow?

Serv. Sir, Ostellius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is hee?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæfars houfe.

Ant. And thither will I straight, to visit him: He comes upon a vp. Fortune is merry, And in this mood will glue vs any thing.

Serv. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius Are rid like Madmen through the Gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Ostellius. Exit

Enter Cinna the Poet, and after him the Plebeians.

Cinna. I dreamt to night, that I did feast with Cæfar, And things vnluckily charge my Fantasie: I hau'e no will to wander forth of doores, Yet something leads me forth.

1. What is your name?

2. Where are you going?

3. Where do you dwell?

4. Are you a married man, or a Batchelor?

5. Answear every man directly.

1. I, and brefely.

4. I, and wisely.

2. I, and truly, you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whether am I going? What do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a Batchelor? Then to answear every man, directly and brefely, wisely and truly: wisely I say, I am a Batchelor.

Cinna. That's as much as to say, they are foolest that marrie: you'll beare me a bang for that I spake: I procee directly.

Cinna. Directly I am going to Cæfars Funerall.

1. As a Friend, or an Enemy?

Cinna. As a friend.

2. That matter is anwered directly.

4. For your dwelling: brefely.

Cinna. Brefely, I dwell by the Capitol.

3. Your name sir, truly.

Cinna. Truly, my name is Cinna.

1. Teare him to percease, he's a Conspirator.

Cinna 1 am Cinna the Poet, I am Cinna the Poet.

4. Teare for his bad verfes, teare for his bad Verfes.

Cin. I am not Cinna the Conspirator.

4. It is no matter, his name's Cinna, plucke but his name out of his heart, and turne him going.

2. Teare him, tear him; Come Branda ho, Firebrands; to Brutus, to Cassius, burne all. Some to Decius Housé, and some to Calp's; some to Ligarius: Away, go.

Exit all the Plebeians.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Antony, Ouellius, and Lepidus.

Ant. These many then shall die, their names are prickt.

Oell. Your Brother too much dyeconfect you Lepidus?

Lep. I do content.

Oell. Prickke him downe Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live.

Ant. He shall not live; lookes, with a fpot I dam him.

But Lepidus, go you to Cæfars house:

Fetch the Will hither, and we shall determine

How to cut off some charge in Legacies.

Lep. What shall I finde you heere?

Oell. Or heere, or at the Capitol.

Exit Lepidus.

Ant. This is a flight vnmeritable man, Meet to be sent on Errands: is it fit The three-fold World diuided, he should stand, One of the three to share it?

Oell. So you thought him,

And tooke his voyce who should be prickt to dye In our blacke Sentence and Propriction.

Ant. Ostellius, I have seene more dayes then you, And though we lay thee Honourous on this man, To cace our felues of diuers fland'rous loads, He shall but beare them, as the Affe beares Gold, To groane and sweate under the Burndesse, Either led or druen, as we point the way:

And having brought our Treasure, where we will,

Then take we downe his Load, and turne him off (Like to the empty Affe) to shake his ears, And graze in Commons.

Oell. You may do your will:

But hee's a tried, and valiant Soul'dier.

Ant. So is my Hortie Ostellius, and for that I do appoint him fote of Prouerude.

It is a Creature that I teach to fight,

To winde, to flope, to run directly on:

His corporall Motion, gouern'd by my Spirit, And in some tale, is Lepidus but lo:

He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth:

A barren spiritned Fellow; one that feeds

On Obiects, Arts, and Imitations.

Which out of vse, and False'd by other men Begin his fasion. Do not talke of him,

But as a property , and now Ostellius,

Lift up great things. Brutus and Cassius

Are leaving Power, We must straight make head:

Therefore let our Alliance be combind,

Our best Friends made, our means fretchet,

And let vs presently go fit in Counsal,

How couert matters may be best disclos'd,

And open Perils forsett anwered.

Oell. Let vs do so: for we are at the Stake,
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

And bayed about with many Enemies,
And some that smile haue in their hearts I feare
Millions of Mifcheeses.
Exeunt

'Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucullus, and the Army. Titinius and Pindarus meet them.'

'Brut. Stand ho.'

Lucullus. 'Grievous and Stand.'

'Brut. What now Lucullus, is Caffins seere?'

Lucullus. 'He is at hand, and Pindarus is come to do you faturation from his Mafter.'

'Brut. He greets me well. Your Mafter Pindarus
In his owne change, or by ill Officers,
Hath given me some worthy caufe to with Things done, vndone : But if he be at hand
I shal be satisfied.'

'Finis. I do not doubt
But that my Noble Mafter will appeare
Such as he is, full of regard, and Honour.'

'Brut. He is not doubted. A word Lucullus
How he receiued you : let me be resolu'd.'

Lucullus. 'With courtesie, and with respect enough,
But not with such familiar instanccs,
Nor with such free and friendly Conference
As he hath v'd of old.'

'Brut. Thou haft describ'd
A hot Friend, cooling: Euer note Lucullus,
When Loue begins to ficken and decay
It vth an enforced Ceremony.
There are no tricks, in plaine and fimple Faith:
But hollow men, like Horfes hot at hand,
Make gallant fheus, and promise of their Mettle :
But when they should endure the bloody Spurre,
They fall their Creefs, and like deceitfull Iades
Sinke in the Trial. Comes his Army on?'

Lucullus. 'They mete this night in Sardis to be quarter'd:
The greater part, the Horfe in generall
Are come with Caffins. Enter Caffins and his Ponders.'

'Brut. Hearke, he is arin'd:
March gently on to meete him.'

Caffins. 'Stand ho.'

'Brut. Stand ho, speake the ward along.'

Stand.

Stand.

Caffins. 'Moft Noble Brother, you have done me wrong.'

'Brut. Judge me, you Gods; wrong I mine Enemies?
And if not fo, how shal I wrong a Brother.'

Caffins. 'Brutus, this fober forme of yours, hides wrongs,
And when you do them——

'Brut. Caffins, be content,
Speake your griefes fofily, I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our Armies here
(Which shal perceiue nothing but Loue from vs)
Let vs not wrangle. Bid them moue away:
Then in my Tent Caffins enlarge your Grefces,
And I will give you Audience.'

Caffins. 'Pindarus.'

Pindarus. 'Bid our Commanders leade their Charges off
A little from this ground.'

'Brut. Lucullus, do you the like, and let no man
Come to our Tent, till we have done our Conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.'

Exeunt

'Brutus and Caffins.'

Caffins. 'That you have wrong'd me, doth appear in this:
You haue condemn'd, and noted Luciuns Pella
For taking Bribe here of the Sardians;
Wherein my Letters, praying on his fide,
Because I knew the man was flighted off.

'Brut. You wrong'd your felle to write in such a cafe.

Caffins. 'In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice offence should beare his Comment.'

'Brut. Let me tell you Caffins, you your felle
Are much condemn'd to have an itching Palme,
To fell, and Mari your Offices for Gold
To Vnleuerers.'

Caffins. 'I, an itching Palme?'

You know that you are Brutus that speaks this,
Or by the Gods, this speech was effe your left.'

'Brut. The name of Caffins Honors this corruption,
And Chafficisme doth therefore hide his head.'

Caffins. 'Chafficism?'

'Brut. Remember March, the Ides of March remeber:
Did not great Lucius bleed for Justice fake?'

What Villaine touchd his body, that did flab,
And not for Justice? What Shall one of Vs:
That frunk the Formoft man of all this World,
But for supporting Robbers: shall we now,
Contaminate our fingers, with base Bribes?
And fell the mighty fpance of our large Honors
For so much trach, as may be grasped thus:
I had rather be a Dogge, and bay the Moone,
Then such a Roman.'

Caffins. 'Brutus, bate not me,
He not induce it: you forget your felle
To hedge me in. I am a Soldier, I,
Older in prattles, Ahier then your felle
To make Conditions.'

'Brut. Go too ; you are not Caffins.'

Caffins. 'I am.'

'Brut. I fay, you are not.'

Caffins. 'Vrghe me no more, I shall forget my felle:
Huge minde upon your health: Tempt me no farther.'

'Brut. Away flight man.'

Caffins. 'Is't possible?'

'Brut. Heare me, for I will speake.'

Must I glue way, and roome to your rash Choller?
Shall I be frighted, when a Madman flares?

Caffins. 'O ye Gods, ye Gods, Must I endure all this?'

'Brut. All this I more: Fret till your proud hart break.
Go shew your Shanles how Chollerick you are,
And make your Bondmen tremble. Must I bogge?
Must I obferve you? Must I flame and crouch
Vnder your Teflie Humour? By the Gods,
You shall digge the Venom of your Spleene
Though it do Splt you. For, from this day forth,
Ile vfe you for my Mirth, yea for my Laughter
When you are Wafplie.'

Caffins. 'Is it come to this?'

'Brut. You fay, you are a better Souldier:
Let it appeare f: make your vaunting true,
And it shall pleafe me well. For mine owne part,
I shall be glad to learn of Noble men.'

Caffins. 'You wrong me every way:
You wrong me Brutus:
I glide, an Elder Souldier, not a Better.
Did I fay Better?'

'Brut. If you did, I care not.'

Caffins. 'When Caesar lid'd, he durft not thus have mou'd
That Peace, peace, you durft not to have tempted him.'

Caffins.

714
Caff. Have not you loue enough to beare with me,
When that such humour which my Mother gave me
Makes me forget full.
Bru. Yes Caffius, and from henceforth
When you are ouer-carest with your Brutus,
He'll thinke your Mother chides, and leave you so.

Enter a Poet.

Poet. Let me go in to see the Generals,
There is some grudge betwixt them, 'tis not meete
They be alone.

Lucil. You shall not come to them.
Poet. Nothing but death shall stay me.
Caff. How now? What's the matter?
Poet. For shame you Generals; what do you mean?
Louv, and be Friends, as two such men should bee,
For I have seene more yeeres I'me sure then yee.
Caff. Ha, ha, how wildly doth this Cynicke rime?
Brut. Get you hence Sirr: Sauey Fellow, hence.
Caff. Beare with him Brutus,'tis his fashion.
Brut. Ile know his humor, when he knowes his time:
What should the Warres do with these flegge Folles?
Companion, hence.

Caff. Away, away be gone. Exit Poet

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius bid the Commanders
Prepare to lodge their Companies to night.
Caff. And come your felves, & bring Meffala with you
Immediately to vs.

Bru. Lucilius, a bowl of Wine.
Caff. I did not thinke you could have bin so angry.
Bru. O Caffius, I am sick of many greeves.
Caff. Of your Philosophy you make no vfe,
If you giue place to accidental enuis.
Bru. No man beares forbore better. Partie is dead.
Caff. Ho? Portia?
Bru. She is dead.
Caff. How scap'd I killing, when I croft you fo?
O insupportable, and touching loffe!
Vpon what sickneffe?

Bru. Impatient of my abence,
And greedye, that yong Otho was with Mark Antony
Hauing made them selues to strong : For with her death
That tydings came. With this the fell diueritie,
And (her Attendants absent) swallow'd fire.
Caff. And dy'd so?
Bru. Even so.
Caff. O ye immortal Gods!

Enter Boy with Wine, and Tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her:Gius me a bowl of wine,
In this I bury all vnkindneffe Caffius. Drinks
Caff. My heart is thirsty for that Noble pledge.
Fill Lucius, till the Wine over-fall the Cup:
I cannot drinke too much of Brutus love.

Enter Titinius and Meffala.

Bru. Come in Titinius:
Welcome good Meffala
Now fit we cloze about this Taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Caff. Portia, art thou gone?
Bru. No more I pray you.
Meffala, I have here receivd Letters,
That yong Otho was, and Mark Antony
Come downe upon vs with a mighty power,
Bending their Expedition toward Philippis.
The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

Moff. My selfe haue Letters of the felle-fame Tenure.

Bru. With what Addition.

Moff. That by proscription, and bills of Outlawrie, Othoians, Antony, and Lepidus,

Haue put to death, an hundred Senators.

Bru. Therein our Letters do not well agree:

Mine speake of seventy Senators, that dy'de

By their proscriptio, Cicero being one.

Coffi. Cicero one?

Moff. Cicero is dead, and by that order of proscription

Had you your Letters from your wife, my Lord?

Bru. No Moffala.

Moff. Nor nothing in your Letters writ of her?

Bru. Nothing Moffala.

Moff. That me thinks is strange.

Bru. Why ask ye?

Heare you ought of her, in yours?

Moff. No my Lord.

Bru. Now as you are a Roman tell me true.

Moff. Then like a Roman, beare the truth I tell,

For certaine she is dead, and by rainge manner.

Bru. Why farewell Portia We must die Moffala:

With meditating that she dye once,

I haue the patience to endure it now.

Moff. Even so great men, great losyes hold inure.

Coffi. I haue as much of this in Art as you,

But yet my Nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our worke alio. What do you thinke

Of matching to Philippi presently.

Coffi. I do not thinke it good.

Bru. Your reason?

Coffi. This it is:

'Tis better that the Enemy seeke us,

So shall he waite his meanes, weary his Souldiers,

Doing himselfe offence, whil'st we lying still,

Are full of reth, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must of force glue place to better:

The people 'twixt Philippi, and this ground

Do stand but in a forc'd affection:

For they haue grudg'd vs Contribution.

The Enemy, marching along by them,

By them shall make a fuller number vp,

Come on refreth, new added, and encourag'd:

From which advantage shall we cut him off.

If at Philippi we do face him there,

Thee people at our backe.

Coffi. Hearre me good Brother.

Bru. Under your pardon. You must note befide,

That we haue tride the vmoot of our Friends:

Our Legions are brim full, our caufe is ripe,

The Enemy encreseth euy day,

We at the height, are ready to decline.

There is a Tide in the affyres of men,

Which taken at the Flood, leads on to Fortune:

Omitted, all the voyage of their life,

Is bound in Shallows, and in Milieries.

On such a full Sea are we now a-loat,

And we must take the current when it ferues,

Or loose our Ventures.

Coffi. Then with your will go on; we'll along

Our felues, and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deepes of night is crept vp on our tale,

And Nature muft obey Neceffity,

Which we will niggard with a little reft:

There is no more to fay.

Coffi. No more, good night,

Early to morrow will we rife, and hence.

Enter Lucius.

Bru. Lucius my Gowne: farewell good Moffala,

Good night Titinius: Noble, Noble Cafulis,

Good night, and good repofe.

Coffi. O my deere Brother:

This was an ill beginning of the night:

Never come fuch Shiution 'tweene our foules:

Let it not Brutus.

Enter Lucius with the Gowne.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Coffi. Good night my Lord.

Bru. Good night good Brother.

Tit. Moffa. Good night Lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell euery one.

Exeunt.

Gie me the Gowne. Where is thy Instrument?

Luc. Heree in the Tent.

Bru. What, thou speake't drowelly?

Poor know I blame thee not, thou art ore-watch'd.

Call Claudio, and some other of my men,

Ile haue them sleepe on Cuflions in my Tent.

Luc. Varrus, and Claudio.

Var. Call my Lord?

Bru. I pray you first, lye in my Tent and sleepe,

It may be I shall raise you by and by

On butknesse to my Brother Cafulis.

Var. So please you, we will stand,

And watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will it not have it so: Lye downe good Sirs,

It may be I shall otherwise bethinke me.

Looke Lucius, here's the booke I fought for so:

I put it in the pocket of my Gowne.

Luc. I was fare your Lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Beare with me good Boy, I am much forgetfull.

Call thou hold vp thy hauele eyes a-while,

And touch thy Instrument a ftraine or two.

Luc. I my Lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does my Boy?

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty Sir.

Bru. I should not vrg thee duty past thy might,

I know young bloods looke for a time of rest.

Luc. I haue slept my Lord already.

Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleepe againe:

I will not hold thee long. If I do lye,

I will be good to thee.

Muicke, and a Song.

This is a sloopie Tune: O Mur'drous slumberer!

Layeth thou thy Leaden Mace vp on my Boy,

That plays thee Muicke? Gentle knawe good night:

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee:

If thou doe'n nod, thou break'rt thy Instrument.

He take it from thee, and (good Boy) good night.

Let me fee, let me fee, is not the Leafe turn'd downe

Where I left reading? Heree it is I thinkes.

Enter the Ghost of Cæsar.

How ill this Taper burnes. Ha! Who comes here?

I thinke it is the weakesnesse of mine eyes

That shapes this monftrous Apparition.

It comes vpon me: Art thou any thing?

Art thou some God, some Angel, or some Djuell?

That mak'st my blood cold, and my hale to thame?

Speake to me, what thou art.

Ghost. Thy eul! Spirit Brutus?

Bru. Why com'th thou?
The Tragedy of Julius Caesar.

Glo. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.
Brut. Well, then I shall see thee again?
Glo. At Philippi.

Brut. Why will you see me at Philippi then?
Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest.
Ill spirits, I would hold more talk with thee.

Claud. Luc. The springs my Lord, are false.
Brut. He thinks he fills it at his instrument.

Lucius, awake.
Luc. My Lord.
Brut. Didst thou dreame Lucius, that thou so criedst out?
Luc. My Lord, I do not know that I did cry.
Brut. Yes that thou didst! Didst thou see any thing?
Luc. Nothing my Lord.
Brut. Sleepe against Lucius: Sire Claudius, Fellow,
Thou: Awake.

Var. My Lord.
Clau. My Lord.
Brut. Why did you so cry out first, in your sleep?
Bibb. Did we my Lord?
Brut. I say any thing.
Var. No my Lord, I say nothing.
Clau. Nor my Lord.
Brut. Go, and command me to my Brother Cassius:
Bid him set on his Powres betimes before,
And we will follow.

Bibb. It shall be done my Lord. Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.
Octa. Now Antony, our hopes are answerd.
You said the Enemy would not come downe,
But keep the Hills and upper Regions:
It proves not so: their battales are at hand.
They mean to warne vs at Philippi here.
Answering before we do demand of them.
Ant. Tut, I am in their bodomes, and I know
Wherefore they do it: They could be content
To visit other places, and come downe.
With fearless bravery: thinking by this face
To soften in our thoughts that they have Courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.
Mes. Prepare you Generals,
The Enemy comes on in gallant shew.
Their bloody signe of Battel is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.
Ant. Octavius, lead your Battale softly on
Upon the left hand of the even Field.
Octa. Upon the right hand I, keep thee the left.
Ant. Why do you croffe me in this exigent.
Octa. I do not croffe you; but I will do so.

*Drum, Enter Brutus, Cassius, & their Army.
Brut. They stand, and would have parley.
Cass. Stand fast Titinius, we must out and talke.
Octa. Mark Antony, shall we give signe of Battale?
Ant. No Cæsar, we will answer on their Charge.

Make forth, the Generals would have some words.
Oct. Stirre not untill the Signall.
Brut. Words before blowes: Is it so Crounymen?
Octa. Not that we lose words better, as you do.
Brut. Good words are better then bad strokes Octavius.
Ant. In your bad strokes Brutus, you give good words
Witnesse the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,
Crying long fine, Halie Cæsar.
Cass. Antony,
The pofture of your blowes are yet vnknowne;
But for your words, they rob the Hylia Bees,
And leave them Hony-leefe.
Ant. Not stinglife too.
Brut. O yes, and soundlife too:
For you have flome their buzzing Antony,
And very wildly threat before you fling.
Ant. Villains; you did not so, when your vile daggars
Hackt one another in the sides of Cæsar:
You fllew their teethes like Aes,
And fawn'd like Hounds,
And bow'd like Bondmen, killing Cæsar's feetes;
Whilst'd dammed Cæsarc, like a Curee, behind
Strooke Cæsar on the necke. O you Flatterers.
Cass. Flatterers? Now Brutus thankes your selfe,
This tongue had not offended so to day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.
Octa. Come, come, the caufe. If arguing make vs swet,
The proofe of it will turne to redder drops:
Looke, I draw a Sword against Conspirators,
When thinke you that the Sword goes vp againe?
Neuer till Cæsar three and thirtie wounds
Be well aueug'd: or till another Cæsar
Haue added slaughter to the Sword of Traitors.
Brut. Cæsar, thou canst not dye by Traitors hands,
Vnlife thou bring'st them with thee.
Octa. So I hope:
I was not borne to dye on Brutus Sword.
Brut. O if thou were't the Nobleft of thy Straine,
Yong-man, thou couldst not dye more honourable.
Cass. A peccull School-boy, worthles of such Honor
Ioynd with a Masker, and a Renceller.
Ant. Old Cassius tall.
Octa. Come Antony; away:
Defance Traitors, hurle we in your teeth.
If you dare fight to day, come to the Field;
If not, when you have flamockes.

Exit Octavius, Antony, and Army
Cass. Why now blow winde, Swell Billow,
And swimme Barke:
The Storme is vp, and all is on the hazard.

Brut. Ho Lucillius, hearken, a word with you.

Luc. My Lord.

Cass. Messal.

Messil. What says me General?
Cass. Messal, this is my Birth-day; as this very day
Was Cassius borne. Glue me thy hand Messal:
Be thou my witnesse, that against my will
(As Pompey was) am I commell'd to let Upon one Battel all our Liberties.
You know, that I held Epicurus strong,
And his Opinion: Now I change my minde,
And partly credit things that do preface.
Comming from Sardis, on our former Enigne
Two mighty Eagles fell, and there they pearch'd
Gorging and feeding from our Soldiers hands,
Who to Philippi here comforted we:
This Morning are they fled away, and gone,
And in their steads, do Ravaens, Crowes, and Kites
Fly ere our heads, and downward looke on vs
As we were fickely pre; their shadowes seene
A Canopy most fallat, vnder which
Our Army lies, ready to give vp the Ghost.
Meffa. Beleeue not so.
Caffe. I but beleue it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit, and refolvd'd
To meete all perils, very constantfly.
Bru. Euen so Lucullus.
Caffe. Now most Noble Brutus,
The Gods to day hand friendly, that we may
Louter in peace, leale on our days to age.
But since the affayres of men reeds still uncertaine,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this Battale, then is this
The very last time we shall speake together:
What are you then determined to do?
Bru. Euen by the rule of that Philosophy,
By which I did blame Cato, for the death
Which he did give himselfe, I know not how:
But I do finde it Cowardly, and vile,
For feare of what might fall, fo to prevent
The time of life, arming my selfe with patience,
To fay the prouidence of some high Powers,
That gouerne vs below.
Caffe. Then, if we loose this Battale,
You are contented to be led in Triumph
Throw the streets of Rome.
Bru. No Caffe, no:
Thinke not thou Noble Romane,
That euer Brutus will go bound to Rome,
He beares too great a minde. But this fame day
Mufet end that worke, the Ides of March begun.
And whether we shall meete againe, I know not:
Therefore our everlafting farewell take:
For euer, and for euer, farewell Caffe,
If we do meete againe, why we shall milde;
If not, why then this parting was well made.
Caffe. For euer, and for euer, farewell Brutus:
If we do meete againe, we'll milde hence;
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.
Bru. Why then leade on. O that a man might know
The end of this days buifie, ere it come:
But it selfelotht, that the day will end,
And then the end is knowne. Come ho, away.
Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messalula.

Bru. Ride, ride Messalula, ride and glue thefe Billes
Vnto the Legions, on the other fide.
Lord Alarum.
Let them fet on at once: for I perciue
But cold de menoar in Oclauis's wing:
And fomaine pufh glues them the overthrow:
Ride, ride Messalula, let them all come downe.
Exeunt Alarums. Enter Caffeus and Titinius.

Caffe. O looke Titinius, looke, the Villaines flye:
My selfe haue to mine owne turn'd Enemy:
This Indigene heare of mine was turning backe,
I flew the Coward, and did take it from him.
Titin. O Caffe, Brutus gave the word too early,
So in his red blood Cæsius day is set.
The Sunne of Rome is set. Our day is gone,
Clouds, Dewes, and Dangers come; our deeds are done:
Mirthfruit of my successe hath done this deed.
Meffia. Mirthruit of good successe hath done this deed.
O hatefull Error, Melancholie Childe:
Why do't thou shew to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O Error soone concey'd,
Thou neuer com'st vnto a happy byrth,
But kill'rt the Mother that engendered thee.

Tr. What Pindarus? Where art thou Pindarus?

* Meffia. Seekhe him Titinius, whilst I go to meet

The Noble Brutus, thruting this report
Into his ears; I may say thruting it:
For piercing Steele, and Darts inunomend,
Shall be as welcome to the eares of Brutus,
As tydings of this fight.

Tr. Hyo you Meflfa,
And I will seeke for Pindarus the while:
Why did'thou send mee forth braue Cæsius?
Did I not meet thy Friends, and did not they Put on my Browe this wretche of Vitchorie,
And bid me glue it thee? Did'thou not hear their
Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing.
(tho'wos) But hold thee, take this Girdans on thy Brow,
Thy Brutus bid me glue it thee, and I
Will do his bidding. Brutus, come space,
And see how I regarded Catus Cæsius:
By your leave Gods: This is a Romans part,
Come Cæsius Sword, and finde Titinius hart.

Dies

Alarum. Enter Brutus, Meflfa, yong Cato,
Srace, Volumnius, and Lucillius.

Br. Where, where Meflfa, doth his body lie?
Meflfa. Loe yonder, and Titinius mourning it.

Br. Titinius love is vaulted.
Cato. He is flaine.

Br. O Cænius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet,
Thy Spirit walks abroad, and turns our Swords
In our owne proper Entrails.

Cato. Braue Titinius,
Looke where he hauent crown'd dead Cæsius.

Br. Are ye yet two Romans liuing fach as thee?
The laft of all the Romans, far thee well:
It is imposible, that euer Rome
Should breede thy fellow. Friends I owe me tears
To this dead man; then you shall see me pay.
I shall finde time, Cæsius: I shall finde time.

Come therefore, and to Thamus fend his body,
His Funerals shall not be in our Campe,
Leat it discomfort vs. Lucillius come,
And come yong Cato, let vs to the Field,
Latin and Flavius let our Battales on:
'Tis three a clocke, and Romans yet ere night,
We shall try Fortune in a fecdont fight.

Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Brutus, Meflfa, Cato, Lucillius,

Br. Yet Country-men: O yet, hold vp your heads.
Cato. What Battard doth not? Who will go with me?
I will proclame my name about the Field.

I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, ho.
A Foe to Tyrants, and my Countries Friend.
I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, ho.
Enter Soldiers, and fght.
And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I,
The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

Cly. Fly, flye my Lord, there is no tarrying here.
Bru. Farewell to you, and you, and you, Tullianus.
Strat. thou hast bin all this while asleep.
Farewell to thee, to Sra.to, Countrymen:
My heart doth joy, that yet in all my life,
I found no man, but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this looking day
More then Othoian, and Mark Antony,
By this vile Conquest shall attaine to.
So fare you well at once, for Brutus tongue
Hath almost ended his life's History.
Night hangs upon mine eyes, my Bones would rest,
That have but labour'd, to attaine this hour.

Alarum. Cry within, flye, flye, flye.
Cly. Flye my Lord, flye.
Bru. Hence, I will follow:
I pray thee, Strat., fly thou by thy Lord,
Thou art a Fellow of a good respect:
Thy life hath had some smack of Honor in it,
Hold then my Sword, and turne away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou Strat.?
Sra. Give me your hand first. Fare you well my Lord.
Bru. Farewell good Strat.,—Cesar, now be still,
I kill'd not thee with halfe so good a will.

Dier. Alarum. Retreat. Enter Antony, Othoianus, Mejfa.,
Lucullis, and the Army.
Otho. What man is that?

Mejfa. My Master man. Sra.to, where is thy Master?
Sra. Free from the Bondage you are in Mejfa.,
The Conquerors can but make a fire of him:
For Brutus onely overcame himselfe,
And no man else hath Honor by his death.
Luc. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee Brutus
That thou hast prov'd Lucullus saying true,
Otho. All that Ieru'd Brutus, I will entreate them.
Fellow, wilt thou beflow thy time with me?
Sra. I, if Mejfa will preferre me to you.
Otho. Do so, good Mejfa.
Mejfa. How dyed my Master Strat.?
Sra. I held the Sword, and he did run on it.
Mejfa. Othoianus, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest ferulte to my Master.
Ant. This was the Noblest Roman of them all:
All the Conspirators faue onely here,
Did that they did, in enuy of great Cæsar:
He, onely in a generall honeft thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle, and the Elements
So mixt in him, that Nature might stand vp,
And say to all the world, This was a man.
Otho. According to his Virtue, let vs vfe him
Withall Repeale, and Rites of Buriall.
Within my Tent his bones to night shall ly,
Most like a Souldier ordered Honourably:
So call the Field to rest, and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day.

Enter King Malcolm, Donald- bain, Lenox, with attendants, meeting a bleeding Captain.

King. What bloody man is that? he can report, As feemeth by his plights, of the Reuolt The newest flate.

Mal. This is the Serleant, Who like a good and hardie Soullier sought 'Gainft my Captailtes: Halle brave friend; Say to the King, the knowledge of the Broyle," As thou didst leave it.

Cap. Doubtful it ffood, As two fpen Swimmers, that doe cling together, And choake their Art: The merciflfe Macdonwald (Worthie to be a Rebells, fcr to that The multiplie Villanies of Nature Doe (warne vpon him) from the Wetterne Iles Of Kernes and Gallowgroffes is supply'd, And Fortune on his damnd Quarre smiling, Show'd like a Rebells Whore; but all's too weake; For braue Macthe (well hee defereues that Name) Diflaying Fortune, with his brandifht Steele, Which fmoak'd with bloody execution (Like Valours Minion) cau'd out his paffage, Till hee fac'd the Slace: Which neu'r fwooke hands, nor bad farwell to him, Till he vnzcam'd him from the Naue toth'Chops, And fix'd his Head vpon our Battlemes,

King. O valiant Cousin, worthy Gentleman. Cap. King. Dismay'd not this our Captaines, Macbeth and Banquoth? Cap. Yes, as Sparrows, Eagles; Or the Hare, the Lyon: If I fay footh, I muft report they were As Cannons ouer-charg'd with double Cracks, So they douly redoubled stroakes vpon the Foe: Except they meant to bufe in reking Wounds, Or memorize another Colgeetha, I cannot tell: but I am fain, My Gaffes cry for helpe.

King. So welthy thy words become thee, as thy wounds, They imack of Honor both: Goe get him Surgeons.

Enter Roffe and Angus.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy Thane of Roffe, Lenox. What a haft lookes through his eyes? So though he looke, that leemes to speake things strange. Roffe. God faue the King, King. Whence can't thou, worthy Thane? Roffe. From Fifie, great King, Where the Norwegian Banners Rowt the Skie, And fann our people cold. Norway himfelfe, with terrible numbers, Aflifted by that moft defloyall Traytor, The Thane of Cadowr, began a difmall Conflit, Till that Bellone's Bridesgroome, laft in prooue, Confronted him with felle-comparifons, Point againft Point, rebellious Arme 'gainft Arme, Curfing his laudit spirit: and to conclude, The Victoria fell on vs.

King. Great happineffe. Roffe. That now, Sweno, the Norways King, Craues composition: Nor would we deigne him burial of his men, Till he disbursed, at Saint Croft ync, Ten thoufand Dollars, to our general vie.

The Tragedie of Macbeth.

King. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive
Our Bosome interest: Goe pronounce his present death,
And with his former Title greet Macbeth.
Riff. Ile see it done.
King. What he hath loth,Noble Macbeth hath wonne.

Scena Tertia.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1. Where haft thou beene, Sifter?
2. Killing Swine.
3. Sifter, where thou?
1. A Sylors Wife had Chechnuts in her Lappe,
And mosaic, & mounchit, and mouncht:
Give me, quoth I. Aroynt thee, Witch, the rumpe-fed Ronyon cries.
Her Husband's to Allepo gone, Mifter o'th' Tiger:
But in a Syue Ille thilther sayle, and like a Rat without a tyle,
Ile doe, Ile doe, and Ile doe.
2. Ile give thee a Winde.
1. Th'art kind.: And I another.
1. I my felle have all the other,
And the very Ports they blow,
All the Quarters that they know,
I' th' Ship-mans Card.
Ile dreyn he drie as Hat:
Siceps shall nether Night nor Day
Hang vpon his Pent-houfe Lid:
He shall live a man forbidd:
Wearie Sea'nights, nine times nine,
Shall he dwindle, peake, and pine:
Though his Barke cannot be loft,
Yet it shall be Tempert-tott.
Looke what I haue.
2. Shew me, shew me.
1. Here I haue a Pilots Thumbe, Wrack't, as homeward he did come. Drum within.
3. A Drumme, a Drumme: Macbeth doth come.
All. The wepyard Sifters, hand in hand,
Poetts of the Sea and Land,
Thus doe goe, about, about,
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice againe, to make vp nine.
Peace, the Charnes wound vp.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foule and faire a day I haue not seen.
Banq. How farre ha't call'd to Soria? What are these,
So witherd, and so wilde in their aye,
That looke not like th'o'Inhabitants o'th'Earth,
And yet are on't? Lie you, or are you aught
That man may question? you seeme to vnderstand me,
By each at once her choppe finger laying
Vpon her kinnee Lipes: you should be Women,
And yet your Beards forbaid me to interprete
That you are fo.
The Tragedy of Macbeth.

Scena Quarta.

Flourish. Enter King, Lenox, Malcolm, Donalbain, and Attendants.

King. Is execution done on Cawdor?
Or not those in Commission yet return'd?
Mal. My Liege, they are not yet come back.
But I have spoke with one that faw him die:
Who did report, that very frankly hee
Confess'd his Treasons, implor'd your Highneffe Pardon,
And 'tis forth a deep Repentance:
Nothing in his Life became him,
Like the leaving it. Hee dy'de,
As one that had beene studi'd in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As twere a careless thought.

King. There's no Art,
To finde the Minde's confudution in the Face:
He was a Gentleman, on whom I built
An absolute Trust.

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Ross, and Angus.
O worthy Councillor,
The finne of my Ingratitude even now
Was haune on me. Thou art so farre before,
That swiftest Wing of Recompence is slow,
To ouertake thee. Would thou hadst lefte deferu'd,
That the proportion both of thanks and payment,
Might have beene mine: onely I haue left to say,
More is thy due, then more then all can pay.

Macb. The feruice, and the loyaltie I owe,
In doing it, pays it felife.
Your Highneffe part, is to receive our Duties:
And our Duties are to your Throne, and State,
Children, and Servants; which doe but what they shou'd,
By doing every thing safe toward your Loue
And Honor.

King. Welcome hither:
I haue begin to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That haft no leffe deferu'd, nor must be knowne
No leffe to haue done fo: Let me enfold thee,
And hold thee to my Heart.

Banq. There, if I grow,
The Harueft is youe's owne.

King. My plenteous Joyses,
Wanton in fulnoffe, seek to hide themselues
In drops of sorrow. Sonnes, Kinffmen, Thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will eftablifh our Eftate vpon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter,
The Prince of Cumberland: which Honor muft
Not ymprocketed, inuext him onely,
But ifines of Nobleno-vife, like Starres, shall shine
On all our Servants, from hence to Evereness,
And binde vs further to you.

Macb. The Reft is Labor, which is not vs'd for you:
Ile be my felfe the Heribenge, and make joyfull
The hearing of my Wife, with your approvall:
So humbly take my leave.

King. My worthy Cawdor.

Macb. The Prince of Cumberland: that is a step,
On which I muft fall downe, or else o're-leape,
Scena Quinta.

Enter Macbeth's Wife alone with a Letter.

Lady. They met me in the day of sacrifice: and I have heard by the perfect report, they have more in them, than mortal knowledge. When I burnt in defer to quaff them further, they made themstiles Ayres, into which you'dt. While I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came Miffsers from the King, who all and me Thane of Cawder, by which Title before, theye myward Stfers saluted me, and refer'd me to the comming on of time, with hale King thas shall be. The hauve I thought good to deler the (my dearest Partner of Greatness) that thou mightst not lose the dune of rejoycing by being ignorant of what Greatness is promis'd thus. Lay it to thy hearts, and farewell.

 Glamys thou art, and Cawder, and that be What thou art promis'd yet do I fear thy Nature, It is too full o' th' Milke of humane kindnesse, To catch the neerest way. Thou wouldst be great, Art not without Ambition, but without The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly, That wouldst thou hourly wouldst not play false, And yet wouldst wrongly winne. Thou'dt have great Glamys, that which eyes, Thus thou must doe, if thou hauie it; And that which rather thou do'tt fear to doe, Then withet should be vndone. High thee hither, That I may powre my Spirits in thine Ear, And chaflife with the valour of my Tongue All that impide thee from the Golden Round, Which Fate and Metaphysicall ayde doth feeme To have thee crown'd withall. Enter Miffinger. What is your tidings? Miff. The King comes here to Night. Lady. Thou'rt mad to fay it. Is not thy Matter with him? who, weren't so, Would have infrom'd for preparation. Miffs. So pleafe you, it is true: our Thane is comming: One of my fellows had the heed of him; Who almost dead for breath, had scarcely more Then would make vp his Message. Lady. Give him tending, He brings great newes. Exit Miffinger. The Rauen himselfe is hoarse, That croakes the fatal entrance of Duncan Vnder my Battlements. Come you Spirits, That tend on mortal thoughts, vex me here, And fill me from the Crowne to the Toe, top-full Of direft Crueltie: make thicker my blood, Stop vp th' accedence, and passage to Remorse, That no compauncious viilings of Nature Shake my fell purpose, nor keepe peace betweene Th'effeet, and hit. Come to my Womans Breifs, And takke my Milke for Gall, you marth' ring Miifters, Where-uer, in your fightlefe substancces, You wait on Natures Milchfe. Come thick Night, And pull thee in the dunnef fmoake of Hel, That my keene Knife fee not the Wound it makes, Nor Heauen peep through the Blanket of the darke, To cry, hold, hold. Great Glamys, worthy Cawdor, Greater then both, by the all-halie hereafter, Thy Letters haue transported me beyond This ignorant present, and I feele now The future in the infant. Macb. My dearest Loue, Duncan comes here to Night. Lady. And when goes hence? Macb. To morrow, as he purposeth. Lady. O neuer, Shall Sunne that Morrow fee. Your Face, my Thane, is as a Booke, where men May reade strange matters, to beguile the time. Louke like the time, beare welcome in your Eye, Your Hand, your Tongue looke like th'innocent flower, But be the Serpent vnder't. He that's comming, Must be prouud for: and you shall put This Nights great Bunesse into my dispatch, Which shall to all our Nights, and Days to come, Guee solely foueraigne sway, and Mafterdome. Macb. We will speake further. Lady. Oneyse louke vp cleare: To alter favor, ever is to feare: Leave all the rest to me. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Hobbes, and Torches. Enter King, Malcolm, Donalbaine, Banqu, Lenox, Macduff, Roffe, Angus, and Attendants.

King. This Cattle hath a pleasant feed, The ayre nimblly and sweetly recommends it elfe Vnto our gentle fences. Ban. This Guett of Weare, The Temple-haunting Barlet does approwe, By his loved Monfonyr,that the Heauens breath Smells wooyingly here: no luttie frizee, Buttrice, nor Coigne of Vantage, but this Bird Hath made his pendant Bed, and procrant Cradle, Where they must breed, and haunt, I have obserued The ayre is delicate. Enter Lady. King. See, fee, our honor'd Hofteffe: The Loue that follows vs, sometime is our trouble, Which fell we thanke as Loue. Herein I teach you, How you shall bid God-eayd vs for your paines, And thanke vs for your trouble. Lady. All our seruice, In every point twice done, and then done double, Were poore, and fingle Bunesse, to contend AGAINST thofe Honor deep, and broad, Wherewith your Majefte loads our House: For thofe of old, and the late Dignifies, His'd vp to them, we rest your Ermites.

King. Where's
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Scena Septima.

Enter H.Boy. Torches.

Enter a Seuer, and divers Servants with Difhes and Servise over the Stage. Then enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere well, It were done quickly: if 'tis Affaination Could trammel vp the Conquifition, and catch With his furieafe, Succife that but this blow Might be the be all, and the end all. Heree, But heree, vpon this Banke and Schoole of time, We'e'd lume the life to come. But in the Cafes, We still haue judgement heere, that we but teach Bloody Inftuctions, which being taught, returne To plague th'Innenter, This even-ended Juftice Commends th'Ingredience of our pofter'd Challice To our owne lips. Hee's heere in double truft; Firt, as I am his Kinman, and his Subieft, Strong both againft the Deed: Then, as his Hoff, Who should againft his Mufterher fhut the doore, Not bore the knife my felle. Beftides, this Duncan Hath borne his Faculties fo meafe ; hath bin So cleere in his great Office, that his Vertues Will pleade like Angels, Trumpet-tongue against The deepe damnation of his taking off: And Pitty, like a naked New-born-Babe, Striking the blush, or Heauen Cherubin, hons'd Vpon the fignet of the Ayre, Shall blow the horrid deed in euer eye, That teares fhall drowne the winde. I have no Spurre To pricke the fides of my intent, but onely Vaulting Ambition, which o're-leapes it felle, And falls on th'other. Enter Lady. How now? What News?

La. He has almoft fupp: why haue you left the chamber? Mac. Hath he ask'd for me;

La. Know you not, he ha's ?

Mac. We will proceed no further in this Bufineffe: He hath Honour'd me of late, and I haue bought Golden Opinions from all forts of people, Which would be wore now in their newefl goffe, Not caf affide fo foon.

Was the horfe drunke, Wherein you dreft your felle? Hath it fleep fince? And wakes it now to looke fo greene, and pale, At what it did fo freely? From this time, Such I account thy loye. Art thou after'd To be the fame in thine owne Act, and Valour, As thou art in defire? Would't thou haue that Which thou eftim'rt the Ornament of Life, And live a Coward in thine owne Efteeme? Letting I dare not, wait vpon I would, Like the poore Cat Il'handage.

Macb. Pr'ythee peace: I dare do all that may become a man, Who dares no more, it none.

La. What Beast was then That made you brooke this enterprize to me? When you durft do it, then you were a man: And to be more then what you were, you Would be fo much more the man. Nor time, nor place Did then adhere, and yet you would make both: They haue made themfelves, and that their fitnesse now Do's vmake you. I haue gwen Suckes, and know How tender 'tis to loue the Babe that milkes me, I would, while it was fhinyng in my Face, Have pluckt my Nipple from his Bonellie Gummies, And daft the Braines out, had I fo sworne

As you have done to this.

Macb. If we should faile!

Lady. We faile? But fcrew your courage to the flicking place, And we're not fayle: when Duncan is affeepe, (Whereeto the rather shall his dayes hard Journey Soundly inuite him) his two Chamberlaines Will I with Wine, and Wasfell, fo convince, That Memorie, the Watcher of the Braine, Shall be a Fume, and the Recall of Reason A Lymbecke onely: when in Sthinke deep, Their drenched Natures lies as in a Death, What cannot you and I perforne vpon Th'vguardned Duncan? What not put vpon His {prungle Officers? who fhall beare the guilt Of our great quell.

Macb. Bring forth Men-Children onely: For thy vnftarved Mettle fhould compofe Nothing but Males. Will it not be receiu'd, When we haue mark'd with blood thofe {plrie two Of his owne Chamber, and vs their very Daggers, That they haue don't?

Lady. Who dares receive it other,

As we shall make our Griefes and Clamor rore, Vpon his Death?

Macb. I am fettled, and bend vp. Each corporall Agent to this terrible Feat, Away, and mock the time with faireft show, Fafle Face muff hide what the faile Heart doit know.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Banquo, and Fleance, with a Torch before him.

Banq. How goes the Night, Boy?

Fleance. The Moone is downe: I haue not heard the Clock.

Banq. And she goes downe at Twelve.

Fleance. I take't, 'tis later, Sir.

Banq. Hold, take my Sword: There's Husbandry in Heauen, Their Candles are all out; take thee that too.

m m 2 A
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

A haue Summons yses like Lead vpon me,
And yet I would not sleepe:
Mercifull Powers, restrain me in the cursed thoughts
That Nature giues way to in repose.

Enter Macbeth, and a Servant with a Torch.

Glie me my Sword : who's there ?
Macb. A Friend.
Banq. What Sir, not yet at ref? the King's a bed.
He hath beene in vnufull Pleasure,
And fent forth great Largeffe to your Offices,
This Diamond he gegetes your Wife withall,
By the name of molt kind Hoftefe,
And that vp in meafeurleffe content.
Mac. Being vnprepar'd,
Our wel became the fervant to deftef,
Which else shoulde free have wrought.
Banq. All's well.
I dreamt last Night of the three wayward Sifters :
To you they have shew'd some truth.
Macb. I thinke not of them:
Yet when we can entreat an houre to fere,
We would fpend it in fome words vpon that Bufinffe,
If you would graunt the time.
Banq. At your kind it leyure.
Macb. Ifyou fhall cleafe to my confent,
When 'tis, it fhall make Honor for you.
Banq. So I lofe none,
In feeking to augment it, but fll keepe
My Bofome childr'd,and Allegance clere,
I shall be confull'd.
Macb. Good repone the while.
Banq. Thankes Sir; the like to you. Exit Banquo.
Macb. Goe bid thy Miftrife, when my drinke is ready,
She strike vpon the Bell. Get thee to bed. Exit.
Is this a Dagger which I fee before me,
The Handle toward my Hand?Come,let me clutch thee:
I haue thee not, and yet I fee thee fll.
Art thou not fatall Vfion, fensible
To feelings, as to fight? or art thou but
A Dagger of the Minde, a falle Creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppreffed Braine?
I fee thee yet, in forme as palpable,
As this which now I draw.
Thou marfhal'd me the way that I was going,
And fuch an Instrument I was to vie.
Mine Eyes are made the foles o'th other Senes,
Or elfe worth all the reft: I fee thee fll;
And on thy Blade, and Dudgeon, Gouts of Blood,
Which was not fo before. There's no fuch thing:
It is the bloody Bufinffe, which informs
Thus to mine Eyes. Now o're the one half World
Nature femees dead, and wicked Dreams abuse
The Curtain's fpee: Witchcraft celebrateth
Pale Heccats Offringes: and wither'd Morther,
Alarum'd by his Centinell, the Wolfe,
Whofe howle's his Watch,thus with his healthly pace,
With Tarquins raufling fides, towards his delicate
Moues like a Ghoft. Thou fowe and firme-set Earth
Heare not my Reps, which they may walke, for feare
Thy very fones prate of my where-about,
And take the pretent horror from the time,
Which now fates with it, Whiles I threat, he lives:
Words to the heat of deedes too cold breath giues.
A Bell rings.

I goe, and it is done: the Bell inuiter me.
Heare it not,Duncan, for it is a Knell.
That summons thee to Heauen, or to Hell. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lady.
Lu. That which hath made the drunk, hath made me bold:
What hath quench'd them, hath given me fire.
Hearke, peace: it was the Owle that thriek'd,
The fatal Bell-man, which giues the Item'nt good-night.
He is about it, the Doores are open:
And the furnited Groomes doe mock their charge
With Snores. I have drugg'd their Poffets,
That Death and Nature doe contend about them,
Whether they live, or dye.
Enter Macbeth.
Macb. Who's there? what haue?
Lady. Alack, I am afraid they have awk'd,
And 'tis not done: they attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds vs: hearke: I lay'd their Daggers ready,
He could not milfe 'em. Had he not reembled
My Father as he slept, I had not.
My Husband !
Macb. I have done the deed:
Didd not thou hear a noyfe?
Lady. I heard the Owle fchreames, and the Crickets cry.
Did not you speake?
Macb. When?
Lady. Now.
Macb. As I defended?
Lady. 1.
Macb. Hearke, who lyes 'th'second Chamber?
Lady. Downhaine.
Mac. This is a forry fight.
Lady. A foolifh thought, to fay a forry fight.
Macb. There's one did laugh in's fleepe,
And one cry'd Murther, that they did wake each other:
I fwoon, and heard them: But they did fay their Prayers,
And addreft them againe to feep.
Lady. There are two lodg'd together.
Macb. One cry'd God bifie vs, and Amer the other
As they had fene me with thefe Hangmans hands:
Liftening their fears, I could not fay Amer,
When they did fay God bifie vs.
Lady. Confer'd it not fo deeply.
Mac. But wherefore could not I pronounce Amer?
I had moft need of Befleeinge, and Amer ftruck in my throat.
Lady. Thefe deeds muft not be thought
After their wayes: fo, it will make vs mad.
Macb. Me thought I heard a voyce cry, Sleep no more:
Macbeth does murther Slepe, the innocent Slepe,
Sleepe that knits vp the racuel'd Sleeeve of Care,
The death of each dayes Life,fore Labors Bath,
Balmre of hurt Minde, great Natures second Courfe,
Chiefs nourther in Life's Faith.
Lady. What doe you mean?
Macb. Still it cry'd, Sleeepe no more to all the Houfe:
Glamis hath murther'd Sleeepe, and therefore Candour
Shall sleepe no more: Macbeth shall sleepe no more.
Lady. Who was it, that thus cry'd? why worthy Thane?
You doe vnbend your Noble strength, to thinke
So braine-fickly of things: Goe get fome Water,

And
And wash this filthy Witness from your Hand.
Why did you bring these Daggers from the place?
They must lye there; goe carry them, and smear
The sleepy Grooms with blood.

Macb. Ile goe no more:
I am afraid, to think what I have done:
Looke on't againe, I dare not.

Lady. Informe of purpose:
Give me the Daggers; the sleeping and the dead,
Are but as Pictures: 'tis the Eye of Child-hood,
That fears a painted Deuil. If he doe bleed,
Ile gild the Faces of the Grooms withall,
For it must seene their Guilt.

Macb. Whence is that knocking?
How is't with me, when every noyse appells me?
What Hands are here? ha! they pluck out mine Eyes.
Will all great Neptune Ocean wash this blood
Cleane from my Hand? no; this my Hand will rather
The multitudinous Seas incarnadine,
Making the Greene one, Red.

Enter Lady.
Lady. My Hands are of your colour: but I thame
To weare a Heart so white.

Macb. To knock a knocking at the South entry:
Retrewe we to our Chamber:
A little Water cleans vs of this deed.
How easie is it then? your Contagion
Hath left you vnsatied.

Heare, more knocking.
On get your Night-Gowne, leaft occasion call vs,
And thrw vs to be Watchers: be not loth
So poorely in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deede, Knock.
'Twere beft not know my felfe.
Wake Duncan with thy knocking:
I would thou couldst.

Enter Macduff, and Lenox.

Macb. Was it fo late, friend, ere you went to Bed,
That you doe lye fo late?
Port. Faith Sir, we were carowing till the second Cock:
And Drink, Sir, is a great prouoker of three things.

Macb. What three things does Drink, especiallie prouoke?
Port. Marty, Sir, Nose-painting, Sleepe, and Veine.
Lecherie; Sir, it prouokes, and vnprouokes: it prouokes the defire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much Drinkbe may be faid to be an Equivoocator with Lecherie: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on,
and it takes him off; it perfwades him, and difl-heartens him; makes him fland too, and not fland too: in conclusion, equivoicates him in a sleepe, and giving him the Lye, leaves him.

Macb. I beleue, Drinkbe gaueth the Lye last Night.
Port. That it did, Sir; ithe very Threaton on me: but I requited him for his Lye, and (I think?) being too strong for him, though he took vp my Legges sometime, yet I made a Shift to call him.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. Is thy Matter flirring?
Our knockynge ha's awak'd him: here he comes.
Lenox. Good morrow both.

Macb. Is the King flirring, worthy Thane?

Macb. Not yet.

Macb. He did command me to call timely on him,
I have almoft fipt the houre,
Ma b. Ile bring you to him.

Macb. I know this is a joyfull trouble to you
But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in, Physicks paine:
This is the Doore.

Macb. He make fo bold to call, for 'tis my limitted

Enter Macduff.
Lenox. Goes the King hence to day?

Macb. He does; he did appoint so.
Lenox. The Night ha's been vnruly:
Where we lay, our Chimneys were blowne downe,
And (as they ly) lamentings heard by the Ayre
Strange Screamings of Death,
And Prophectings, with Accents terrible,
Of dyre Combution, and confus'd Euenets,
New hatch'd toth woffull time
The obfure Bird clamor'd the lufe-long Night.
Some fay, the Earth was fweares,
And did flake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough Night.
Lenox. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Enter Macduff.
Macb. O horror, horror, horror,
Tongue nor Heart cannot conceuie, nor name thee.

Macb. and Lenox. What's the matter?

Macb. Confusion now hath made his Mafter-peece:
Most Discreet, and Murther hath brake ope
The Lords anointed Temple, and ftole thence
The Life o'th Building.

Macb. What is't you fay, the Li'e?
Lenox. Meane you him Macbeth?

Macb. Approch the Chamber, and destroy your fight
With a new Gorgon. Doe not bid me speake:

Enter Macduff, and Lenox.

Macb. Was it fo late, friend, ere you went to Bed,
That you doe lye fo late?
Port. Faith Sir, we were carowing till the second Cock:

Macb. What is't you fay, the Li'e?
Lenox. Meane you him Macbeth?

Macb. Approch the Chamber, and destroy your fight
With a new Gorgon. Doe not bid me speake:
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

See, and then speake your felves: awake, awake,

Ring the Alarum Bell: Murder, and Treason,
Banquo, and Donalbain: Malcolm awake,
Shake off this Downy Sleave, Deaths counterfeit,
And looke on Death it self: vp, vp, and see

The great Doomes Image: Malcolm, Banquo,
As from your Graves rife vp, and wake like Sprights,
To countenance this horror. Ring the Bell.
Bell rings. Enter Lady.

Lady. What's the Buineffe? That such a hideous Trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the Houfe? speake, speake.

Macb. O gentle Lady,
'Tis not for you to heare what I can speake:
The repetition in a Womans eare,
Would murther as it fell.

Enter Banquo.
O Banquo, Banquo, Our Royall Mafter's murther'd.
Lady. Woe, alas:
What, in our Houfe?
Banq. Too cruelly, any where.
Deare Duff, I prythee contradict thy felfe,
And fay, it is not fo.

Enter Macbeth, Lenox, and Raff.

Macb. Had I but dy'd an houre before this chance,
I had liu'd a bleffed time: for from this infant,
There's nothing ferial in Mortalitie:
All is but Toys: Renowne and Grace is dead,
The Wine of Life is dranke, and the moree Lees
Is left this Vault, to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain.

Donal. What is amifs?
Macb. You are, and doe not know't;
The Spring, the Head, the Fountaine of your Blood
Is fit, the very Source of it is fit.

Macb. Your Royall Father's murther'd.
Lenox. The Prince of his Chamber, as it feem'd, had don't;
Their Hands and Faces were all bag'd with blood,
So were their Daggers, which vnwrap'd, we found
Upon their Pillowes: they flar'd, and were diftrafted,
No mans Life was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O, why do I repent me of my furie,
That I did kill them.

Macb. Wherefore did you fo?
Macb. Who can be wife, pure, and fweet, & furious,
Loyall, and Neitral, in a moment? No man:

The expedition of my violent Love
Out-run the pawer, Reafon. Here lies Duncan,
His Siluer skinne, lac'd with his Golden Blood,
And his gold Stabs, look'd like a Breach in Nature,
For Runes waffull entrance: there the Murtherers,
Stood in the Colours of their Trade: their Daggers
Vnmanerly broach'd with gore: who could refraine,
That had a heart to love: and in that heart,
Courage, to make's loue knowne?

Lady. Help me hence, hoa.

Macb. Look to the Lady,

Why doe we hold our tongues,
That moft may clame this argument for ours?

Donal. What should be fpoken here,

Where our Fate hid in an augre hole,
May ruish, and feize vs? Let's away,
Our Tears are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our Bonges Sorrow
Upon the foot of Motion.

Banq. Looke to the Lady:
And when we haue our naked Frailties hid,
That fuffer in expofure; let vs meet,
And question this mott bloody piece of worke,
To know it further. Feares and Scrupels flake vs:

In the great Hand of God I fland, and thence,
Against the undivul'd pretence, I fight
Of Trefonous Mallice.

Macb. And to doe I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefely put on manly readiness,
And meet i'th'Hall together.

All. Well contented.

Macb. What will you doe?

Let's not with comfort:
To shew an vnfeft Sorrow, is an Office
Which the fälle man do's eafe.

Ile to England.

Don. To Ireland, I:

Our seperated fortune shall keepe vs both the lafer:
Where we are, there's Daggers in mens Smiles;
The meer in blood, the meerer bloody.

Macb. This murtherous Shaft that's shot,
Hath not yet lighted and our faftest way,
Is to avoall the Syme. Therefore to Horle,
And let vs not be danifie of laue-taking,
But flift away: there's warrant in that Theft,
Which feales it felfe, when there's no mercke left.

Enter Macbeth, Lenox, and Raff.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Raff, with an Old man.

Old man. Threecorde and ten I can remember well,
Within the Volume of which Time, I have feene
Hours dreadfulfull, and things strange: but this fore Night
Hath tir'd formerly knowners.

Raff. Ha! good Father,
Thou feest the Heauens, as troubled with mans Ager,
Threatens his bloody Stage: by th' Clock 'tis Day,
And yet darke Night frangles the travailing Lamp:
It's Night's predominance, or the Days fame,
That Darknefe does the face of Earth incombe,
When liuing Light fhould kiffe it?

Old man. 'Tis unstarr'd,
Even like the deed that's done: On Tuesday laft,
A Faulcon towring in her pride of place,
Was by a Mowling Owle hawk't at, and kill'd.

Raff. And Duncans Horles,

(A thing moft strange, and certaine)
Besuteous, and swift, the Minions of their Race,
Turn'd wilde in natur: broke their flalls, flung out,
Contending' ganfht Obedience, as they would Make Wars with Mankind.

Old man. 'Tis faid, they eate each other.

Raff. They did fo:

To

728
To th'amazement of mine eyes that look'd vpon't. Enter Macduffs.

Here cometh the good Macduffs.

How goes the world Sir, now?

Macd. Why see you not?

Roff. Is't known who did this more then bloody deed?

Macd. Tho' he that Macbeth hath shane. Roff. Alas the day, What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborned, Makalme, and Donalthane the Kings two Sonnes Are done away and fled, which puts vpon them Sustution of the deed. Roff. 'Gainst Nature full, Thriftleffie Ambition, that will rauen vp Thine owne lies meanes: Then 'tis most like, The Sovereignty will fall vpon Macbeth. Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone To be inuested. Roff. Where is Duncaun body? Macd. Carried to Colmekill, The Sacred Store-house of his Predecessors, And Guardian of their Bones. Roff. Will you to Scone? Macd. No Confin, Ile to Fife. Roff. Well, I will thither. Macd. Well may you see things well done there: Adieu Left our old Robes fit easier than our new. Roff. Farewell, Father. Old M. Gods benfyon go with you, and with those That would make good of bad, and Friends of Foes. Exeunt omnes.

 Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Banquo.

Ban. Thou haft it now, King, Cawdor, Glamis, all, As the weyard Women promis'd, and I feare Thou play'dst it mock fowly for't; yet it was fide It should not fland in thy Pofterity, But that my felfe should be the Roote, and Father Of many Kings. If there come truth from them, As vpon thee Macbeth, their Speeches shine, Why by the verities on thee made good, May they not be my Oracles as well, And fet me vp in hope- But hufff, no more.

Senti founc'd. Enter Macbeth at King, Lady Lenox, Roff, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chiefes Gueft.

La. If he ha' haft beene forgotten, It had beene a gap in our great Fesst, And all-thing vabecoming.

Macb. To night we hold a folemne Supper fir, And Ile require your preſence. Ban. Let your Highneffe Command vpon me, to the which my duties Are with a molt indiffoluble tye For euer knitt. Macb. Ride you this afternoone?

Ban. 1, my good Lord. Macb. We shoulde have elfe defir'd your good aduice (Which fill hath been both graue, and properous) In this days Councell: but we'e take to morrow. Is't farre you ride?

Ban. As farre, my Lord, as will fill vp the time 'Twixt this, and Supper. Goe not my Horfe the better, I must become a borrower of the Night, For a darke houre, or twaine. Macb. Faile not our Feaft. Ban. My Lord, I will not.

Macb. We heare our bloody Cozenes are beflow'd In England, and in Ireland, not confeding Their cruel Parricide, filling their hurers With frange invention. But of that to morrow, When therewithall, we hall have caufe of State, Cruizing vs ioynfully. Hye you to Horfe: Adieu, till you returne at Night. Goes Flances with you?

Ban. 1, my good Lord: our time does call vpon's. Macb. I with your Horfes swift, and fue of foot: And fo I doe commend you to their backs. Farewel. Exit Banquo.

Let every man be master of his time, Till feuers at Night, to make focietie The sweeter welcome: We will keepe our felfe till Supper time alone: While then, God be with you. Exeunt Lords. Sirmas, a word with you! Attend those men Our plefure?

Servant. They are, my Lord, without the Palace Gate. Macb. Bring them before vs. Exit Servant. To be thus, is nothing, but to be falsely thus: Our feares in Banquo Riche deep, And in his Royaltye of Nature reignes that Which would be feard. 'Tis much he dares, And to that dauntleffe temper of his Minde, He hath a Wildome, that doth guide his Valour, To act in focietie. There is none but he, Whos being I doe feare: and vnder him, My Genius is rebuk'd, as it is faid Mark Antonies was by Caesar. He chid the Sifters, When first they put the Name of King vpon me, And bad them speake to him. Then Prophet-like, They hayl'd him Father to a Line of Kings. Vpon my Head they plac'd a fruitleffe Crowne, And put a barren Scepter in my Gripes, Thence to be wrencht with an vlineall Hand, No Sonne of mine succeding: it's be fo, For Banquo's offue haue I fill'd my Minde, For them, the gracious Duncan haue I murther'd, Put Runcours in the Vefell of my Peace Onely for them, and mine eternall Jewell Given to the common Enemye of Man, To make them Kings, the Seedes of Banquo Kings. Rather then fo, come Fate into the Lyf, And champion me to th'vterrancce. Who's there?

Enter Servants, and two Murthurers.

Now goe to the Doore, and stay there till we call. Exit Servant.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

Murth. It was, I plaie your Highneffe. Macb. Well then, Now haue you consider'd of my speeches?

Know,
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Know that it was he, in the times past,
Which held you fo vnder fortune,
Which you thought had been our innocent selfs.
This I made good to you, in our last conference,
Put in probation with you:
How you were borne in hand, how croft :
The Instrumets: who wrought with them:
And all things elfe, that might
To haffe a Soule, and to a Nation craz'd, Say, Thus did Banquo.

1. Marth. You made it knowne to vs.

2. Macb. I did so:
And went further, which is now
Our point of second meeting.
Do you finde your patience fo predominant,
In your nature, that you can let this goe?
Are you fo Gospel'd, to pray for this good man,
And for his life, whose banie hand
Hath bow'd you to the Graue, and begger'd
Yours for ever?

1. Marth. We are men, my Liege.

Macb. I, in the Catalogue ye goe for men,
As Hounds, and Greyhounds, Mengrels, Spaniels, Cures, Cures, Showhese, Water-Rugs, and Demy-Wolves are cipt
All by the Name of Dogs : the valued file,
Distinguishs the twifl, the flow, the subtle,
The House-keeper, the Hunter, every one
According to the gift, which bounteous Nature
Hath in him clos'd whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the Bills,
That writes them all alike : and so of men.
Now, if you have a faction in the file,
Not i'th' word ranke of Manhood, lay't,
And I will put that Butnells in your Bonomes,
Whose execution takes your Enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart, and loose of vs,
Who ware our Health but sickly in his Life,
Which in his Death were perfect.

2. Marth. I am one, my Liege,
Whom the vile Blowses and Buffets of the World
Hath to incend'd, that I am reckelide what I doe,
To opight the World.

1. Marth. And I another,
So wearie with Difasters, tugg'd with Fortune,
That I would let my Life on any Chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you know Banquo was your Enemy.

Marth. True, my Lord.

Macb. So is he mine: and in such bloody distance,
That euyr minute of his being, thruffs
Against my neer'lt of Life: and though I could
With bare'ld factower speech him from my fight,
And bid my will awouch it; yet I must not,
For certaine friends that are both his, and mine,
Whose lous I may not drop, but wayle his fall,
Who I my selfe struck downe: and thence it is,
That I to your affittion doe make lorn,
Marking the Butnells from the common Eye,
For fundry weightie Reasons.

2. Marth. We shall, my Lord,
Performe what you command vs.

1. Marth. Though our Lives--

Macb. Your Spirits shine through you.

Within this house, at morn,
I will aduise you where to plant your felves,
Acquaint you with the perfect Spy o'th'time,
The moment on't, for't must be done to Night,
And something from the Pallace: always thought,
That I require a clave rentere ; and with him,
To leave no Ruba nor Boches in the Worke:
Plains, his Sonne, that keeps him company,
Whose abidence is no lefe materuall to me,
Then is his Fathers, must embrace the fate
Of that darke hour: resolute your felves apart,
He come to you anon.

Marth. We are resolu'd, my Lord.

Macb. He call upon you straignt: abide within,
It is concluded: Banquo, thy Soules flight,
If it finde Heauen, must finde it out to Night. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macbeths Lady, and a Servant.

Lady. Is Banquo gone from Court?

Servant. 1, Madame, but returns againe to Night.

Lady. Do you to the King, I would attend his leuyres,
For a few words.

Servant. Madame, I will. Exit.

Lady. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our defire is got without content:
'Tis fatter, to be that which we destroy,
Then by deftruction dwell in doubfull joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my Lord, why doo you keep alone?
Of forreyt Fancies your Companions making,
Ving those Thoughts, which should indeed have dy'd
With them they thinke on'things without all remedie
Should be without regard what's undone, is done.

Macb. We have forcht'd the Snake, not kill'd it:
Shee'le clofe, and be her selfe, whilst our poor Mallice
Remaines in danger of her former Tooth.

But let the frame of things dif-loyn,
Both the Worlds suffer.

Ere we will eare our Meale in feare, and skippe
In the affildion of these terribl Dreames,
That shake vs Nightly: Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gyane our peace, have fent to peace,
Then on'th the torture of the Minde to lie
In reftlesse extatique.

Dumare is in his Graue:
After Lifs fitfull Feuer, he skippe well,
Treaton ha's done his work: nor Steele,nor Poyfon,
Mallice donellique, foraine Leue, nothing,
Can touch him further.

Lady. Come on:
Gente my Lord, flecke o're your rugged Lookes,
Be bright and Tonyall among your Gueells to Night.

Macb. So shall I Lose, and fo I pray be you:
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo,
Presert him Eminence, both with Eye and Tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we muft lase
Our Honors in thee flattering framnes,
And make our Faces Vizards to our Hearts,
Difguising what they are.

Lady. You must let me this.

Macb. O, full of Scorpions is my Minde, deare Wife:
Thou know'lt, that Banquo and his Plains live.

Lady. But
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Lady. But in them, Natures Copple's not eterne.
Macb. There's comforts yet, they are affable,
Then be thou locand: ere the Bat hath flowne
His Cloyfer'd flight, ere to black Hecats summons
The thred-born Beetle, with his drowzie hums,
Hath rung Nights yawning Peale,
There shall be done a deed of dreadfull note.
Lady. What's to be done?
Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, deareft Chuck,
Till thou applaud the deed: Come, feeling Night,
Skarfe vp the tender Eye of pittifull Day,
And with thy bloody and invisible Hand
Cancell and tear to pieces that great Bond,
Which keeps me pale. Light thicken,
And the Crow makes Wing toth' Rookie Wood:
Good things of Day begin to droope, and drowfe,
Whiles Nights black Agents to their Prey's doe rowfe.
Thou maruell'st at my words: but hold thee still,
Things had begun, make strong themselfes by ill:
So prystee goe with me.

Scena Tertia.

Enter three Marthurers.

1. But who did bid thee ioyne with vs?
Macb.
2. He needs not our miftrust, since he delivers
Our Offices, and what we have to doe,
To the direction hift.
1. Then stand with us:
The Weft yet glimmers with loose flakes of Day,
Now spurre the latest Traveller space,
To gaze the timely Inner, end neere approaches
The subject of our Watch.
3. Hearke, I hear Horfes.
Banquo within: Glue vs a Light there, hea.
2. Then 'tis hee:
The reft, that are within the note of expedition,
Already are 'th' Court.
1. His Horfes goe about.
3. Almoft a mile: but he does visially,
So all men doe, from hence toth' Pallasce Gate
Make it their Walke.

Enter Banquo and Fleams, with a Torch.

2. A Light, a Light.
3. 'Tis hee.
1. Stand too't.
Ban. It will be Rayne to Night.
3. Let it come downe,
Things are Tire!
Fyxe good Fleams, flye, frye, flye,
Thou may'st reuenge. O Slauie!
3. Who did strike out the Light?
1. Was't not the way?
3. There's but one downe: the Sonne is fled.
2. We haue loft
Best hallie of our Affaire.
1. Well, let's away, and say how much is done.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Banquus prepar'd. Enter Macbeth, Lady, Ross, Lenox,
Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your owne degrees, fit downe:
At first and laft, the hearty welcome.
Lords. Thankes to your Malefity.
Macb. Our felfes will mingle with Society,
And play the humble Huft:
Our Hothffe keeps her State, but in butt time
We will require her welcome.
La. Pronounce it for me Sir, to all our Friends,
For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Enter fibr Murdochers.

Macb.See they encounter thee with their harts thanks
Both fides are eu'en: here Ie fit i'th'midft,
Be large in mirth, anon we'll drinke a Meafure
The Table round. There's blood vpon thy face.
Macb. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Macb. 'Tis better thee without, then he be within.
Is he dispatch'd?
Macb. My Lord his throat is cut, that I did for him.
Mac. Thou art the beft o' the Cut-throats,
Yet hee's good that did the like for Fleams:
If thou did't, thou art the Non-priell.
Mac. Moft Royall Sir
Fleams is flap'd.
Macb. Then comes my Fit againe:
I had clese beene perfect;
Whole as the Marble, founfed as the Rocke,
As broad, and generall, as the cauing Ayre;
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confined, bound in"
To fawcy doubts, and fears. But Banquo's fafe?
Mac. I, my good Lord: fafe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trench'd gardens on his head;
The leaff a Death to Nature.
Macb. Thankes for that time.
There the growne Serpent lyes, the worme that's fled
Hath Nature that in time will Venom breed,
No teeth for th'present. Get thee gone, to morrow
We'll heare our felues againe.

Exit Murderer.
Lady. My Royall Lord,
You do not give the Cheere, the Feath is fold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a making:
'Tis gien, with welcome: to feele we beft at home:
From thence, the fawce to meate is Ceremony,
Meeting were bare without it.

Enter the Ghost of Banquo, and flit in Macbeths place.

Macb. Sweet Remembrandancer:
Now good digestion, write on Appetite,
And health on both.
Lenox. May't please your Highneffe fit.
Macb. Here had we now our Countries Honor,roof'd,
Were the grant'd perfon of our Banquo pretent:
Who, may I rather challenge for vaunkindneffe,
Then pitty for Milchance.
Ross. His abfencc (Sir)
Layes blame vpon his promife. Pleeat your Highneffe
To grace vs with your Royall Company?

Macb.
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

1.42

Macb. The Table's full.
Lenox. Here is a place refer'd Sir.
Macb. Where?
Lenox. Here my good Lord.

What is't that moves your Highness now?
Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good Lord?
Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake Thy gory locks at me.

Ruff. Gentlemen rise, his Highness is not well.

Lady. Sit worthy Friends: my Lord is often thus, and hath beene from his youth. Pray you keep Seate, The fit is momentary, upon a thought He will againe be well. If much you note him You shall offend him, and extend his Passion, Feed, and regard him not. Are you a man?

Macb. I, and a bold one, that dare looke on that Which might appale the Dinell.

La. O proper stuffe:
This is the very painting of your faire:
This is the Ayre-drawne-Dagger which youaid
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaves and flarts (Impfortors Led) will well become
A womens flory, at a Winters fire
Authoriz'd by her Grandam: shame it selfe,
Why do you make such faces? When all's done
You looke but on a folly.

Macb. Prythee see there:
Behold, looke, loc, how fay you:
Why what care I, if thou canst nod, speake too.
If Channel houles, and our Graues must fende
That we bury, bocke; our Monuments
Shall be the Mawes of Kytes.

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

La. Tie for shame.

Macb. Blood hath bene shed ere now, 'tis'olden time
Ere humane Statute purg'd the gentle Weale:
I, and since too, Murthers have bene perform'd
Too terrible for the eare. The times has bene,
That when the Brains were out, the man would dye,
And there an end: But now they rise againe
With twenty million Murthers on their crownes,
And pull vs from our foules. This is more strange
Then fuch a murther is.

La. My worthy Lord
Your Noble Friends do lacke you.

Do not mufe at me my most worthy Friends,
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, loose and health to all,
Then let fit downe: Glue me some Wine, fill full:

Enter Groom.

I drink to th'generall joy o'th'whole Table,
And to our deere Friend Banquo, whom we mifle:
Would he were here: to all, and him we thirst,
And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Macb. Since I am not, & quit my sight, let the earth hide thee:
Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold:
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with.

La. Thinkes of this good Peeres!

But as a thing of Cuftome: 'Tis no other,
Oneyt it doth give the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:

Approach thou like the rugged Russian Bear,
The arm's Rhinoceros, or th'Hircan Tiger,
Take any shape but that, and my firme Nerues
Shall never tremble. Or be alue agane,
And dare me to the Dearth with thy Sword:
If trembling I inhabit them, protest mee
The Baby of a Girlc. Hence horrible shadow,
Vnreal mock'ry hence. Why fie, being gone
I am a man againe, pray you fit self.

La. You have displaide the mirth,
Broke the good meeting, with moft admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome vs like a Summers Cloud,
Without our speicall wonder? You make me strange
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I thinke you can behold such fights,
And keepe the natural Rubie of your Cheekes,
When mine is blanch'd with fear.

Ruff. What fights, my Lord?

I prays you speake: he grows worfe & worfe
Question enrages him: at once, goodnight.
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

Len. Good night, and better health
Attend his Maiesty.

La. A kinde goodnight to all. Exit Lords.

Macb. It will have blood they say:
Blood will have Blood:
Stones have beene knowne to mowe,& Trees to speake:
Augures, and vnderflood Relations, have
By Maggot Pyes, & Choughes, & Rookes brought forth
The secret't man of Blood. What is the night?

La. Almoft at oddes with morning, which is which.

Macb. & how say'thou that Macduff denies his perfon
At our great bidding.

La. Did you fend to him Sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way: But I will send:
There's not a one of them but in his house
I keepe a Seruants Feed. I will to morrow
(And betimes I will) to the weyward Sithers.
More shall they speake: for now I am bent to know
By the word menes, the word, for mine owne good,
All caues shall fall in waye, I am in Blood
Stempt in fo farre, that should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go ore:
Strange things I have in head, that will to hand,
Which must be acied, ere they may be seacd.

Macb. Ie will take the scannah of all Nature, sleepe.

Macb. Come, wee'll to sleepe: My stranje & self-abuse
Is the initiate feare, that wants hard vfe:
We are yet but yong indeed.

Exeunt.

Seena Quinta.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting Hecat.

1. Why how now Hecat, you looke angrily?
Hec. Haue I not reaon (belsams) as you are?
Saweys, and ouer-bold, how did you dare
To Trade, and Trailecck with Macbeth,
In Riddles, and Affairs of death;

And
And I the Mirth of your Charms,
The close contrivier of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
Or shew the glory of our Art?
And which is worse, all you have done
Hath bene but for a wayward Sonne,
Spirittful, and wrathfull, who (as others do)
Looke for his owne ends, not for you.
But make amends now: Get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meete me i'th' Morning: thither he
Will come, to know his Definitio.
Your Vefels, and your Spells proude,
Your Charms, and every thing before;
I am for th' Ayre: This night Ile spend
Vato a dismall, and a Fatall end.
Great businesse must he wrought ere Noone.
Vpon the Cheefe of the Makke.
There hangs a vapp'rous drop, profound,
Ile catch it ere it come to ground;
And that dihitl'd by Magickle flights,
Shall raise such Artificall Sprights,
As by the strength of their Illusion,
Shall draw him on to his Confusion.
He shall spurne Fate, forrme Death, and bear
His hopes lose Wifedome,Grace, and Fear:
And you all know, Security
Is Mortals chearefull Ensime.

Muficke, and a Song.
Hearke, I am call'd my little Spirit fee
Situ in a Foggy cloud, and stays for me.
Song within. Come away, come away, &c.

1 Come, let's make hali, thee'foone be Backe again.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Lenox, and another Lord.

Lenox. My former Speeches,
Hue but hit your Thoughts
Which can interpret farther: Only I say
Things haue bin strangely borne. The gracious Duncan
Was pitted of Macbeth: marry he was dead:
And the right valiant Banquo walk'd too late,
Whom you may tie (f't plea you) Fieans kill'd;
For Fieans fled: Men must not walke too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbane
To kill their gracious Father? Damned Fie,
How it doe grewe Macbeth? Did he not straight
In pious rage, the two deliquents tearce,
That were the Slaues of drink, and thralles of sleepe?
Was not that Nobly done? I, and widely too:
For 'twould haue anger'd any heart alioue
To hear the men deny. So that I say,
He ha's borne all things well, and I do think,
That had he Duncans Sonnes under his Key,
(As, and't plea Heaven he shall not) they shou'd finde
What 'twere to kill a Father: So shou'd Fieans.
But peace; for from broad word, and cause he say'd
His presence at the Tyrants Feast, I hear
Macduffs lives in danger. Sir, can you tell

Where he betowes himselfe?

Lord. The Sonnes of Duncan
(From whom this Tyrant holds the due of Birth)
Lives in the English Court, and is recey'd
Of the most Pious Edward, with such grace,
That the mal desert of Fortune, nothing
Takes from his high respect. Then is Macduff
Is gone, to pray the Holy King, vpon his ayd
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Seyward,
That by the helpe of thele (with him above)
To ratifie the Worke) we may againe
Glie to our Table meate, sleepe to our Nights:
Free from our Fears, and Banquets bloody kniues;
Do faithful Homage, and receive free Honors,
All which we pine for now. And this report
Hath io exasperate their King, that hee
Prepares for some attempt of Warre.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute Sir, not I
The coldly Meffenger turns me his backe,
And huns; as who should say, you'll rues the time
That clogges me with this Anwer.

Lenox. And that well might
Aduise him to a Caution, hold what distance
His wifedome can prouide. Some holy Angel
Flye to the Court of England, and unford
His Message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May soone returne to this our suffering Country,
Vnder a hand accur'd.

Lord. He send my Prayers with him.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Thrice the brinded Cat hath mew'd.
2 Thrice, and once the Hedge-Pigge whin'd.
3 Harpie cries, 'tis time, 'tis time.

1 Round about the Cauldron go:
In the poyrfond Entrails throw
Toad, that vnder cold stone,
Dayes and Nights, he's thirty one:
Swelefed Venom sleeping got,
Boyle thou first i'th'charmed pot.

All. Double, double, toil and trouble;
Fire burnes, and Cauldron bubble.
2 Fillet of a Fenny Snake,
In the Cauldron boyle and bake:
Eye of Newt, and Toe of Frogge,
Wool of Bat, and Tongue of Dogge:
Adders Forke, and Blinde-wormes Sting,
Lizards legge, and Hooles wing:
For a Charme of powerfull trouble,
Like a Hell-broth, Boyle and bubble.

All. Double, double, toyle and trouble,
Fire burnes, and Cauldron bubble.
3 Scale of Dragon, Tooth of Wolfe,
Witches Mummey, Maw, and Gulfe
Of the rauin'd falt Sea starke:
Roote of Hemlocke, digg'd i'th'darke:
Liser of Blaspheming Jew,
Gall of Gooze, and Slipe's of Yew,
Silver'd in the Moones Eclipse.
Note of Turke, and Tartars lips:
Finger of Birth-frangled Babe,
Ditch-deliver'd by a Ditch,
Make the Grewell thickic, and flab.
Add thereto a Tigers Chawdron,
For th'Indigence of our Cawdron.
All. Double, double, toic and trouble,
Fire borne, and Cauldron bubble.
2. Coole it with a Baboons blood,
Then the Charme is firme and good.

Enter Hecat, and the other three Witches.

Hec. O well done: I commend your pains,
And every one shall have their gaines:
And now about the Cauldron fing.
Like Elves and Fairies in a Ring,
Inchanting all that you put in.

Musick and a Song. Blacke Spirits, &c.

2. By the prickings of my Thumblies,
Something wicked this way comes:
Open Lockes, who ever knockes.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. How now you secret, black, & midnight Hags?
What is't you do?
All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess,
(How ere you come to know it) answer me:
Though you venture the Windes, and let them fight
Against the Churches: Though the yeasty Waffles
Confound and swallow Navigation vp:
Though blazed Corne be solige'd, & Trees blowne downe,
Though Caffles topple on their Warders heads:
Though Pallaces, and Pyramis do slope
Their heads to their Foundations: Though the treasure
Of Natures Germaine, tumble altogether,
Euen till destruction stike: Answer me
To what I aske you.

1. Speake.
2. Demand.
3. Weel answere.

Say, if thou hadst rather hear it from our mouthes,
Or from our Mallets.

Macb. Call'em: let me fee 'em.

1. Powre in Sowes blood, that hath eaten
Her nine Farrow: Grease that's sweaten
From the Murderers Gibbet, throw
Into the Flame.

All. Come high or low:
Thy Selfe and Office dearest shou.

\textit{Thunder.}

\textbf{1. Apparition, an Armed Head.}

\textbf{Macb.} Tell me, thou unknowne power.

He knowes thy thought:

Heares his speecch, but say thou nought.

\textbf{1. Appar.} Macbeth, Macbeth, Macbeth:

Beware Macdoffs,

Beware the Thome of Fice: distimme me, Enough.

\textbf{Macb.} What ere thou art, for thy good caution, thanks
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright. But one word more.

1. He will not be commanded: heere's another

More potent then the first.

\textbf{Thunder.}

\textbf{2. Apparition, a Bloodly Child.}

\textbf{Macb.} Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

2. \textbf{Appar.} Be bloody, bold, & resolute:

Laugh to fcorne.

The powre of man: For none of woman borne
Shall harme Macbeth.

\textit{Defends.}

\textbf{Macb.} Then lue Macduffe:what need I fear of thee?

But yet Ie make assurance: double sure,
And take a Bond of Fate: thou shalt not live,
That I may tell pale-hearted Feare, it lies;
And sleepe in fright of Thunder.

\textit{Thunder.}

3. \textbf{Apparition, a Child, Crowned, with a Tree in his hand.}

What is this, that rises like the life of a King,
And weares upon his Baby-brow, the round
And top of Souerainy?

\textit{All.} Lifen, but speake not too.

\textbf{All.} Appar. Be Lyon meyled, proud, and take no care:
Who chaetes, who freys, or where Conspirers are:

Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, untill
Great Bynarn Wood, to high Dunsmarche Hill
Shall come against him.

\textit{Defend.}

\textbf{Macb.} That will never bee:

Who can intemple the Forrest, bid the Tree
Vnfixe his earth-bound Root? Sweet badments, good:
Rebellious dead, rife never till the Wood
Of Bynarn rife, and our high plac'd Macbeth
Shall lye the Leafe of Nature,pay his breath
To time, and mortall Cause:
Yet my Hart
Throbs to know one thing: Tell me, if your Art
Can tell to much: Shall Banque's issue ever
Reigne in this Kingdome?

\textit{All.} Seeke to know no more.

\textbf{Macb.} I will be satisfied. Denye me this,
And an eternal Curse fall on you: Let me know,

Why finking that Caldon? & what name is this? Hobeyes

1. Shew.
2. Shew.
3. Shew.

\textbf{All.} Shew his Eyes, and greeue his Hart,
Come like shadows, to depart.

A \textit{fliew of eight Kings}, and \textit{Banque left with a glasse in his hand.}

\textbf{Macb.} Thou art too like the Spirit of Bangus Down:
Thy Crowne do's scarce mine Eye-bals. And thy haire
Thou other Gold-bound-brow, is like the first:
A third, is like the former. Filthy Haggis,

Why do you shew me this?—A fourth? Start eyes!
What will the Line stretch out to'th'cracke of Doome?
Another yet? A femeuent? Ie fee no more:
Yet and the eight appears, who bears a glasse,
Which shewes me many more: and some I fee,
That two-fold Balles, and treble Scepters carry.

Horrible flight: Now I fee 'tis true,
For the Blood-bolter'd \textit{Bangus} tilmes upon me,
And points at them for his. What is this to I
1. I Str, all this is fo. But why

Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come Sifters, cheere we vp his firtres,
And shew the best of our delights.
Ie Charme the Ayre to give a found,
While you performe your Antique round:
That this great King may kindly lay,
Our duties, did his welcome pay.

\textit{Musick.}

\textit{The Witches Dance, and vanish.

\textbf{Macb.} Where are they? Gone?}

Let this pernicious houre,
Stand ye accured in the Kalender.
Come in, without there.

\textit{Enter Lenox.}

\textbf{Lenox.} What's your Graces will.

\textit{Macb.}
The Tragedie of Macbeth. 145

Macb. Saw you the Weyard Sistars?
Len. No my Lord.
Macb. Came they not by you?
Len. No indeed my Lord.
Macb. Infeche be the Ayre whereon they ride, And dam’d all those that truth there. I did heare The gallopping of Horse. Who was’t came by?
Len. ‘Tis two or three my Lord, that bring you word:
Macduff is fled to England.
Macb. Fled to England?
Len. I, my good Lord.
Macb. Time, thou anticipeft my dread expost: The flighty purpose never is o’re-toke Vnlife the deed go with it. From this moment,
The very flirtiments of my heart shall be
The flirtiments of my hand. And even now
To Crowne my thoughts with Aths: be it thought & done:
The Cattle of Macdaff, I will surprize.
Seize upon Fitz, guie to the edge o’th’sword
His Wife, his Babes, and all unfortunat Soules
That trace him in his Line. No boating like a Poole,
This deed I do, before this purpose cooke,
But no more fights. Where are these Gentlemen?
Come bring me where they are.

Exeunt

\--- Scena Secunda. ---\n
Enter Macduff, His Wife, her Son, and Ruff.

\--- Wife. What had he done, to make him fly the Land?
Ruff. You must have patience Madam.
Wife. He had none:
His flight was madnifie: when our Actions do not,
Our fears do make vs Traitors.
Ruff. You know not
Whether it was his wifedome, or his fear.
Wife. Wiledge? to leave his wife, to leave his Babes,
His Manion, and his Titles, in a place
From whence himselfe do’s flye? He loves vs not,
He wants the naturall touch. For the poore Wren
(The most diminihtue of birds) will fight,
Her yong ones in her Neck, against the Owlem;
All is the Fearce, and nothing is the Loue;
As little is the Wiledge, where the flight.
So runnes against all reason.
Ruff. My deere Cooze,
I pray you chove your felles. But for your Husbands,
He is Noble, Wife, Judicious, and best knowes
The fitt o’th’Seaon. I dare not speake much further,
But cruel are the times, when we are Traitors
And do not know our felues: when we hold Rumar
From what we thowght, yet know not what we feare,
But flatts vpon a vile and violent Sea
Each way, and moue. I take my leave of you:
Shall not be long but Ile be heere againe:
Things at the worit will centre, or else cline vpward,
To what they were before. My pretty Cooze,
Bleffing vpon you.
Wife. Father’d he is,
And yet hee’s Father-leffe.
Riff. I am fo much a Poole, should I stay longer
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort.
I take my leave at once.

Exit Riff.

Wife. Sirre, your Fathers dead,
And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As Birds do Mother.
Wife. What with Wormes, and Flies?
Son. With what I get I vanes, and fo do they.
Wife. Poore Bird.
Though neuer Peare the Net, nor Lime,
The Pitfall, nor the Gin.
Son. Why shold I Mother?
Poore Birds they are not fit for:
My Father is not dead for all your saying.
Wife. Yes, he is dead:
How wilt thou do for a Father?
Son. Nay how will you do for a Husband?
Wife. Why I can buy me twenty at any Market.
Son. Then you’ll by ’em to tell againe.
Wife. Thou speake’st withall thy wit,
And yet I halth with wit enough for thee.
Son. Was, my Father a Traitor, Mother?.
Wife. I, that he was.
Son. What is a Traitor?
Wife. Why one that sweareth, and lyes.
Son. And be all Traitors, that do so.
Wife. Every one that do’s fo, is a Traitor,
And must be hang’d.
Son. And must they all be hang’d, that swear and ly?
Wife. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them?
Wife. Why, the honest men.
Son. Then the Liars and Swearees are Fools: for there are Yanrs and Swearees now’, to beate the honest men, and hang vp them.
Wife. Now God helpe thee, poore Monkie:
But how wilt thou do for a Father?
Son. If he were dead, youl’d weape for him: if you would not, it was a good signe, that I should quickly have a new Father.
Wife. Poore pratler, how thou talk’st?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bleffe you faire Dame: I am not to you known,
Though in your state of Honor I am perfect;
I doubt some danger do’s approach you neerly.
If you will take a homely mans advice,
Be not found heere: Hence with your little ones
To fright you thus. Me thinke I am too launge:
To doe wors to you, were fell Cruelty,
Which is too nie your perfon. Heaven prefere you,
I dare abide no longer.

Exit Messenger.

Wife. Whether should I flye?
I have done no harme. But I remember now
I am in this earthy world: where to do harme
Is often laudable, to do good sometyme
Accouted dangerous folly. Why then (alas)
Do I put vp that womanly defence,
To try I haue done no harme?
What are these sexes?

Enter Macduffers.

Mar. Where is your Husband?
Wife. I hope in no place so vanishted,
Where fuch as thou mayst finde him.
Mar. He’s a Traitor.
Son. Thou ly’st thou thgage-ear’d Villaine.
Mar. What you Egge?
Yong fry of Trachery ?
Son. He ha’s kill’d me Mother,
Run away I pray you.

Exit crying Marth.

--- Scena ---

715
'Scena Tertia.'

Enter Macduff and Macbeth.

Mac. Let vs seeke out some defolate shade, & there Weepe our sad bodomes empty.

Mac. Let vs rather
Hold faft the mortall Sword: and like good men, Befride our downfall Birthdome: each new Morne, New Widdowes bowle, new Orphans cry, new forowes Strike heaven on the face, that it refounds As if It felt with Scotland, and yell’d out Like Syllable of Dolour.

Mac. What I beleue, He waile;
What know, beleue; and what I can redrefle, As I shall finde the time to friend: I wil.

What you have fpoke, it may be fo perchance. This Tyrant, whole fole name blifters our tongues, Was once thought honeft: you haue lou’d him well, He hath not touch’d you yet. I yong, but foeme You may differne of him through me, and wifedome To offer vp a weake, poore innocent Lambe T’appeafe an angry God.

Mac. I am not treacherous.

Mac. But Macbeth is.

A good and vertuous Nature may recolly
In an Imperiall charge. But I fhall crave your pardon:
That which you are, my thoughts cannot tranfcape; Angels are bright fill, though the brighteft fell. Though all things soule, would wear the brows of grace Yet Grace muft fill looke to.

Mac. I have loft my Hopes.

Mac. Perchance even there
Where I did finde my doubts.

Why in that rawneffe left you Wife, and Childse?
Thofe precious Motives, thofe strong knots of Love,
Without leane-taking. I pray you,
Let not my leafeoues, be your Dihonors, But mine owne Saffons: you may be rightly laft, What ever I shall thinke.

Mac. Bleed, bleed poore Country,
Great Tyrany, lay thou thy basr fure,
For goodniffe dare not check thee: wear y thy wrongs,
The Tife, is affcnd. Far thee well Lord,
I would not be the Villaine that thou think’st,
For the whole Space that’s in the Tyrants Garpe,
And the rich Eaf to boot.

Mac. Be not offended:
I speake not as in abolute feare of you:
I thinke our Country fakes beneath the yoke,
It weeps, it bleeds, and each new day a gaff
Is added to her wounds. I thinke withall,
There would be hands uplifted in my right:
And heere from gracious England haue I offer
Of goodly thousands. But for all this,
When I shall trade upon the Tyrants head,
Or weare it on my Sword; yet my poore Country
Shall have more vices then it had before,
More fuffer, and more fundry ways then euer,
By him that shall succeede.

Mac. What should he be?

Mac. It is my felo I meane: in whom I know All the particulars of Vice fo grafted,

That when they hall be open’d, blacke Macbeth Will feeme as pure as Snow, and the poore State Edemne him as a Lambe, being compar’d With my confineleffe harms.

Mac. Not in the Legions
Of horrid Hell, can come a Diuell more damn’d
In euils, to top Macbeth.

Mac. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, Avaricious, Falfe, Decriffull,
Sodaine, Malicous, fmacking of euery finne
That has a name. But there’s no bottome, none
In my Voluptuousneffe: Your Wives, your Daughters,
Your Matrons, and your Maides, could not fill vp
The Cellerne of my Laie, and my Defire
All continent Impediments would ore-bear
That did oppofe my will. Better Macbeth,
Then fuch an one to reigne.

Mac. Boundleffe intemperance
In Nature is a Tyranny: It hath beene
Th’impatient pleaing of the happy Throne,
And fall of many Kings. But feare not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey your pleafures in a fancious plenty,
And yet feme cold. The time you may fo hoodwinkne:
We have willing Daies enough: there cannot be
That Vatlure in you, to denoure fo many
As will to Greatneffe dedicate themfelves,
Finding it fo inclinde.

Mac. With this, there grows
In my molt ill-compoud Affection, fuch
A rawneffe Ararice, that were I King,
I fhould cut off the Nobles for their Lands,
Defire his Jefu, and this others Houfe,
And my more-hauing, would be as a Sauce
To make me hunger more, that I fhould forge
Quarrels vaft against the Good and Loyall,
Difroying them for wealth.

Mac. This Ararice
flickes deeper: grows with more pennisous roote
Then Summer-leming Luft: and it hath bin
The Sword of our faine Kings: yet do not feare,
Scotland hath foynes, to fill vp your will
Of your meare Owne. All thefe are portable,
With other Graces weigh’d.

Mac. But I have none. The King-becoming Graces,
As Iuffice, Verity, Temperance, Steheneffe,
Bountey, Fidelity, Mercy, Lawinette,
Deception, Patience, Courage, Forlaude,
I haue no rellieth of them, but abound
In the diuifion of each feueral Crime,
Acting it many waies. Nay, had I powre, I fhould
Poure the sweet Milke of Concord, into Hell,
Ypore the winfertfull peace, confound
All vaity on earth.

Mac. O Scotland, Scotland.

Mac. If such a one be fit to gouerne, speake:
I am as I haue spoken.

Mac. Fit to gouerne? No not to luele. O Natio miferable!
With an vnitied Tyrant, bloody Sceptred,
When fhalt thou fee thy wholesome days againe?
Since that the trueft Iffue of thy Throne
By his owne Interdiicion bands affcut,
And do’s blaspheyme his brede? Thy Royall Father
Was a molt Sainted-King: the Queene bore thee,
Ofteron upon her knees, then on her feet,
Dye’de every day the list’d. Fare thee well,
The Tragedy of Macbeth.

I

These Evils thou repeat'st upon thy selfe,
Hast banish'd me from Scotland. O my Breif,
Thy hope ends here.

Mal. Macduff, this Noble passion
Child of Integrity, hath from my soule
Wip'd the blacke Scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good Truth, and Honor. Duellish Macbeth,
By many of these tyrants, hath fought to win me
Into his power: and modest Wifedom placeth me
From one-credulous haft : but God aboue
Deale betweene thee and me; For even now
I put my felfe to thy Direction, and Vnspake mine owne detraction. Heere aboue
The talents, and blaming I laide upon my felfe,
For strangers to my Nature. I am yet
Unknowne to Woman, neuer was forsworne,
Scarcely haue couted what was mine owne.
At no time broke my Faith, would not betray
The Demall to his Fellow, and delight
No leffe in truth then life. My first falf speaking
Was this upon my felfe. What I am truly
Is thine, and my poore Countries to command :
Whither indeed, before they heere approach
Old Seyward with ten thousand warlike men
Already at a point, was sitting forth :
Now wee'lt together, and the chance of goodnesse
Be like our warranted Quarrell. Why are you silent?

Mal. Such welcome, and vnwelcome things at once
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well, more anon. Comes the King forth
I pray you?

Doct. I Sir: there are a crew of wretched Soules
That pay his Cure; their malady consulates
The great affay of Art. But at his touch,
Such fanflity hath Heauen gien his hand,
They presently amend. Exit.

Mal. I thank you Doctor.

Mal. What's the Difease he means?

Mal. 'Tis call'd the Tull.

A moft myraculous worke In this good King,
Which often since my hearne remaine in England,
I haue feene him do : How he feliciates heauen
Himselfe beft knowen: but strangely vilified people
All fwoone and Vlcerous, pitifull to the eye,
The meere difpare of Surgery, he cures,
Hanging a golden flame about their neckes,
Put on with holy Prayers, and 'tis spoken
To the following Royalty he leaus
The healing Benediction. With this strange vertue,
He hath a heavely guilt of Prophecie,
And fundry Blessings hang about his Throne,
That speake him full of Grace.

Enter Raffel.

Mal. See who comes heere.

Mal. My Countryman; but yet I know him nor.

Mal. My ever gentle Cozen, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God betimes remove
The meanes that makes vs Strangers.

Raffel. Sir, Amen.

Mal. Stands Scotland where it did?

Raffel. Als poore Countrey.

Mal. Almost afraid to know it selfe. It cannot Be call'd our Mother, but our Graue; where nothing
But who knowes nothing, is once feene to smile:
Where fighes, and groans, and thricks that rent the ayre

Are made, not mark'd: Where violent forrow feemes
A Moderne extatic! The Deadmans knell,
Is there scarce ask'd for who, and good mens lyes
Expire before the Flowers in their Caps,
Dying, or ere they ficken.

Mal. Oh Relation; too nice, and yet too true.

Mal. What's the neweft griefe?

Raffel. That of an hours age, doth hiffe the speaker,
Each minute teemes a new one.

Mal. How do's my Wife?

Raffel. Why well.

Mal. And all my Children?

Raffel. Well too.

Mal. The Tyrant ha's not batter'd at their peace?

Raffel. No, they were well at peace, when I did leafe 'em
Mal. Be not a niggard of your speecch! How go'st?

Raffel. When I came hither to transport the Tydings
Which I have beautifull borne, there ran a Rumour
Of many worthy Fellowes, that were out,
Which was to my beleefe witnefe the rather,
For that I saw the Tyrants Power a-foot.
Now is the time of helpe; your eye in Scotland
Would create Soldiours, make our women fight,
To doffe their direiftresses:

Mal. Bee; their comfort
We are comming thither! Gracious England hath Lent vs good Seyward, and ten thousand men,
An other, and a better Soulier, none
That Christendome gruws out.

Raffel. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like. But I have words
That would be howell'd out in the defert ayre,
Where hearing should not latch them.

Mal. What concernes they,
The generall caufe, or is it a Peec-griefe
Due to some ifngle breft?

Raffel. No minde that's honest
But in it shares fome woe, though the maine part
Pertaines to you alone.

Mal. If it be mine
Keep it not from me, quickly let me haue it.

Raffel. Let not your cares difpife my tongue for ever,
Which shall poftife them with the heaviest found
That euer yet they heard.

Mal. Humh! I gueffe at it.

Raffel. Your Cattle is purpl'd: your Wife, and Babes
Sanguely daughter'd: To relate the manner
Were on the Querry of these mother'd Deere
To adde the death of you.

Mal. Merciful Heauen:

What man, we're pull your hat upon your brows:
Give forrow words; the griefe that do's not speake,
Whispers the o're-fraught heart, and bids it breake.

Mal. My Children too?

Ro. Wife, Children, Servants, all that could be found,

Mal. And I must be from thence! My wife kill'd too.

Raffel. I have feld.

Mal. Be comforted.

Let's make vs Med'cines of our great Revenge,
To cure this deadly greese.

Mal. He has no Children. All my pretty ones?

Mal. Did you fay All? Oh Hell-Kite! All?

What, All my pretty Chickens, and their Damme
At one fell swoope!

Mal. Difpute it like a man.

Mal. I shall do so:
Adictus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Doctor of Physick, and a Waving Gentlewoman.

Doctor. I have too Nights watch'd with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it thee left walk'd?

Gent. Since his Majesty went into the Field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her Night-Gown vp upon her, vnlock her Clofet, take forth paper, feele it, write upon't, read it, afterwards Seal'd it, and againe return'd to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleepe.

Doctor. A great perturbation in Nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching. In this fumbrous agitation, besides her walking, and other actual performances, what (at any time) have you heard her say?

Gent. That Sir, which I will not report after her.

Doctor. You may to me, and 'tis most meet you should. Gent. Neither to you, nor any one, having no witnesse to confirm my speech. Enter Lady, with a Taper. Lo you, heere she comes: This is her very guile, and vp on my life fast asleep; obferve her, fland close.

Doctor. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why it flowed by her: the ha's light by her continually, 'tis her command.

Doctor. You fee her eyes are open.

Gent. But their fenfe are shut.

Doctor. What is it she do's now? Lookke how she rubes her hands.

Gent. It is an accustom'd affion with her, to feme thus wash her hands: I have knowne her c-utime in this a quarter of an houre.

Lady. Yet here's a spot.

Doctor. Hearke, she speakes, I will let downe what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady. Out damned spot: out I say. One : Two : Why then 'tis time to doon't: Hell is murky. Fye, my Lord, fie, a Scouldier, and affir'd what need we fcare? who knows it, when none can call our powre to accompt: yet who would have thought the olde man to have had so much blood in him.

Doctor. Do you make that?

Lady. Thane of Fife, had a wife: where is she now? What will these hands ne're be cleane? No more o'that my Lord, no more o'that: you marre all with this starting.

Doctor. Go too, go too: You have knowne what you should not.

Gent. She ha's spoke what thee shou'd not, I am sure of that: Heauen knowes what the ha's knowne.

Lady. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh.

Doctor. What a figh is there? The hart is forely charg'd.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosome, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doctor. Well, well, well.

Gent. Pray God it be fin.

Doctor. This disease is beyond my praficie: yet I have knowne thofe which have walkt in their sleepe, who haue dyed holly in their beds.

Lady. Wash your hands, put on your Night-Gowne, looke not to pale: I tell you yet againe Banquo's burial; he cannot come out on's grave.

Doctor. Even so?

Lady. To bed, to bed: there's knockeing at the gate: Come, come, come, come, give me your hand: What's done, cannot be vndone. To bed, to bed, to bed.

Doctor. Will the go now to bed?

Gent. Direcly.

Doctor. Foule whifperings are abroad: vnnatural deeds Do brede vnnatural troubles: infected minde Is the deede pillowes will discharge their Secrets: More needs the the Divine, then the Physitian: God, God forgive us all. Looke after her, Remoue from her the meanes of all annoyance, And till keepe eyen upon her: So goodnight, My minde the ha's mated, and amaz'd my fight. I thinkes, but dare not speake.

Gent. Good night good Doctor.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Drum and Colours. Enter Macbeth, Cathnes, Angus, Lenox, Soldiers.

Mont. The English powre is neere, led on by Malcolm, His Vnkle Seyward, and the good Macduff, Reuenges burne in them: for their deere causse Would to the bleeding, and the grim Alarme Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Neere Byrran wood Shall we well meet them, that way are they comming.

Cath. Who knowes if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certaine Sir, he is not: I haue a File Of all the Gentry; there is Seyward Sonne, And many vrnurse youths, that euuen now Protest their part of Manhood.

Mont. What do's the Tyrant.

Cath. Great Dunfinane he strongly Fortifies: Some say he's mad: Others, that leffer hate him, Do call it valiant Fury, but for certaine
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

He cannot buckle his diatemper'd cause
Within the belt of Rule.

Age. Now do's he feele
His secret Murthers dicking on his hands,
Now minute Revolts vpbraid his Faith-breach:
Thofe he commands, moue onely in command,
Nothing in love : Now do's he feele his Title
Hang loofe about him, like a Giants Robe
Upon a dwarfish Theofe.

Ment. Who then shall blame
His pester'd Senes to recoyle, and start,
When all that is within him, do's condemne
It felle, for being there.

Card. Well, march we on,
To glue Obedience, where 'tis truly ow'd :
Meet we the Med'cine of theickly Weale,
And with him poure we in our Countries purge,
Each drop of vs.

Lemor. Or fo much as it needes,
To dew the Soueraigne Flower, and drown the Weeds:
Make we our March towards Birnane. Exeunt marching.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more Reports, let them fly all :
Till Byrnane wood remove to Dunfinane,
I cannot taint with Fear. What's the Boy Malcolm ?
Was he not borne of woman ? The Spirits that know
All mortall Conferences, have pronounce'd me thus: Fear not Macbeth, no man that's borne of woman
Shall ere have power upon thee. Then fly fast Thanes,
And mingle with the English Epicures,
The minde I sway by, and the heart I bear,
Shall steuer gage with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter Servant.
The duller damne thee blacke, thou cream-fac'd Loone :
Where got'th thou that Goofe-looke.

Ser. There is ten thousand.

Macb. Go all Villaine ?

Ser. Scoldien Sir.

Macb. Go pricke thy face, and ouer-red thy feare
Thou Lilly-liver'd Boy. What Soldiers, Patch ?
Death of thy Soule, thoue Linnen cheekes of thine
Are Counsellors to feare. What Soldiers Whay-face ?

Ser. The English Force, to pleafe you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. Sept. I am sick at hart,
When I behold : Septum, I say, this puth
Will cheer me euers, or dif-cate me now.
I have lu'd long enough : my way of life
Is false into the Searc, the yellow Leafes,
And that which should accompany Old-Age,
As Honor, Love, Obedience, Troopes of Friends,
I must not looke to hauie : but in their need,
Curdes, not lowd but steepes, Mouth-honor, breath
Which the poore heart would faime deny, and dare not.

Septum ?

Enter Septum.

Ser. What's your gracious pleafure ?

Macb. What Newes more ?

Ser. All is confirm'd my Lord, which was reported.

Macb. He fight, till from my bones, my flesh be hackt.

Glue me my Armor.

Sept. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. He put it on:
Send out more Horaces, skirre the Country round,
Hang thofe that talke of Place. Glue me mine Armor:
How do's your Patient, Doctor ?

Doctor. Not fo ficke my Lord,
As the is troubled with thicke-comming Fancies
That keeps him from her rest.

Macb. Cure of that :
Can't thou not Minifter to a minde difeas'd,
Plucke from the Memory a rooted Sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the Braine,
And with some sweet Oblulous Antidote
Cleanfe the stufft bosome, of that perillus fluffe
Which weighe upon the heart?

Doctor. Therien the Patient
Must minifter to himselfe.

Macb. Throw Phyftick to the Dogs, Ile none of it.

Come, put mine Armour on : give me my Staffe :

Septum. Send out : Doctor, the Thanes fly from me:
Come fit, dispatch. If thou coul'd Doctor, call
The Water of my Land, finde her Difeafe,
And purge it to a sound and prifitue Health,
I would applaud thee to the very Eccho,
That should applaud again. Pull it off I say,
What Rubarbe, Cyme, or what Purgatius druge
Would cowre these English hence : hear it ? of them ?

Doctor. I my good Lord : your Royall Preparation
Makes vs heare something.

Macb. Bring it after me :
I will not be afraid of Death and Bane,
Till Birnane Forrest come to Dunfinane.

Doctor. Were I from Dunfinane away, and chere,
Profit againe should hardly draw me here.

Scena Quarta.

Drum and Colours. Enter Malcolm, Seyward, Macduffs, Seywards, Scone, Mentebs, Cathines, Angus, and Soldiers Marching.

Malcolm. Cofins, I hope the days are neere at hand
That Chambers will be safe.

Men. We doubt it nothing.

Seyward. What wood is this before vs ?

Men. The wood of Birnane.

Male. Let evry Scoldier hew him downe a Bough,
And beare't before him, thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our Hothe, and make discovery,
Err in report of vs.

Sold. It shall be done.

Seyward. We leare no other, but the confident Tyrant
Keeps hold in Dunfinane, and will indure
Our fetting downe befor't.

Male. 'Tis his maine hope :
For where there is advantage to be gien,
Both more and leffe have gien him the Resolt,
And none forse with him, but constrained things,
Whole hearts are abften too.

Seyward. Let our lufh Cenfures
Attend the true event, and put we on nn3

Industrious
Industrious Souldiery.

Sey. The time approaches,
That will with due decision make vs know
What we shall fy we have, and what we owe:
Thoughts speculatue, their vntrue hopes relate,
But certaine ifue, frowakes mult arbitrue,
Towards which, advance the warre.

Exeunt marching

Scena Quinta.

Enter Macbeth, Seyton, & Souldiery, with Drum and Colours.

Macb. Hang out our Banners on the outward walls,
The Cry is still, they come: our Citie's strength,
Will laugh a Sledge to fume: Here let them lye,
Till Famine and the Ague eate them vp:
Were they not for'd with those that should be ours,
We might have met them darefull, heard to beard,
And beate them backward home.  What is that noyse?

A Cry within of Women.

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good Lord.

Macb. I have almost forgot the tale of Fears:
The time ha's beene, my fences haue cool'd
To heare a Night-shriek, and my Fell of haire
Would at a dimmall Trestle rows, and hirre
As life were in't.  I have fapt full with horrors,
Direnfe familiar to my slumberous thoughts
Cannot once flart me.  Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The Queene (my Lord) is dead.

Macb. She should haue dy'd hereafter;
There would haue beene a time for such a word:
To morrow, and to morrow, and to morrow,
Creepes in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last Syllable of Recorded time:
And all our yesterdays, have lighted Footes
The way to dustry death.  Out, out, breve Candle,
Life's but a walking Shadow, a poore Player,
That struts and frets his houre upon the Stage,
And then is heard no more.  It is a Tale
Told by an Idiot, full of found and fury
Signifying nothing.  Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to vie thy Tongue: thy Story quickly.

Msf. Gracious my Lord,
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do't.

Macb. Well, say fir.

Msf. As I did stand my watch upon the Hill
I look'd toward Eyrnane, and anon me thought
The Wood began to move.

Macb. Lyar, and Slave.

Msf. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not so:
Within this three Mile you may fee it coming.
I say, a moving Group.

Macb. If thou speakeft thine,
Upon the next Tree shall thou hang alien
Till Famine clench thee: If thy speech be footh,
I care not if thou doft for me as much.
I pull in Refolution, and begin
To doubt th'Equivoocation of the Fiend,
That lies like truth.  Fear not, till Byrmane Wood
Do come to Dunfinane, and now a Wood

Comes toward Dunfinane.  Arme, Arme, and out,
If this which he ausouches, do's appeare,
There is no flying hence, nor tarrying here.
I 'ginne to be a+weary of the Sun,
And will to the state o'th'world were now vndon.
Ring the Alarum Bell, blow Winde, come warcke,
At least wee'll dye with Harnelle on our backe.

Exeunt

Scena Sexta.

Drumme and Colours.

Enter Malcolm, Seyward, Macduff, and their Army, with Boughes.

Mal. Now neere enough:
Your leavy Skreenes throw downe,
And shew like thofe you are: You (worthy Vnkle)
Shall with my Cofin your right Noble Sonne
Lead our first Battell.  Worthy Macduff, and wee Shall take vpons what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Sey. Fare you well:
Do we but finde the Tyrants power to night,
Let vs be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our Trumpets speake, the all breath
Thofe clamorous Harbingers of Blood, & Death.
Exeunt

Alarums continued.

Scena Septima.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake, I cannot dye,
But Beare-like I must fight the coure.
What's he
That was not borne of Woman? Such a one
Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young Seyward.

T. Sey. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to heare it.

T. Sey. No: though thou call'd thy felfe a hoiter name
Then any is in bell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

T. Sey. The dwell himfelfe could not pronounce a Title
More hatefull to mine care.

Macb. No: nor more fearfull.

T. Sey. Thou lift abhorred Tyrant, with my Sword
He proue the lye thou speakeft.

Fight, and young Seyward slaine.

Macb. Thou was't borne of woman;
But Swords I smite at, Weapons laugh to scorn.
Brandish'd by man that's of a Woman borne.

Exeunt

Alarums.

Enter Macduff.

Macd. That way the noife is: Tyrant thrw thy face,
If thou beest flaine, and with no froke of mine,
My Wife and Children Gooffs will haunt me
I cannot fight at wretched Kerne, whose arms
Are by'r to heare their Stauce: either thou Macbeth,
Or else my Sword with an unbattered edge
I bath againe verdade.  There thou shoul'lt be,
By this great clatter, one of greatest note

The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Seemes bruited. Let me finde him Fortune, And more I begge not. Exit. Alarums.

Enter Maculme and Seyward.

Sy. This way my Lord, the Cattles gently rendred: The Tyrants people, on both sides do fight, The Noble Thanes do brauly in the Warre, The day almoost it felle prophesies yours, And little is to do.

Mai. We haue met with Foes That strike befoe vs.

Sy. Enter Sir, the Cattle. Exeunt. Alarum. Enter Macbeth.

Mach. Why shoule I play the Roman Foulke, and dye On mine owne sword? whilst I fee liues, the gashes Do better vpon them.

Enter Macduff.

Mach. I haue no words, My voice is in my Sword, thou bloodier Villaine Then tearmes can gee thee out. Fight & Alarum

Mach. Thou lauffeft labour, As easie may't thou the Intrenchant Ayre With thy keene Sword imprefse, as make me bleed: Let fall thy blade on vulnerable Crefts, I beare a charmed Life, which muft not yeld To one of woman borne.

Mach. Difpaire thy Charme, And let the Angell whom thou full haft fern'd Tell thee, Macduff was from his Mothers womb Unlimely ript.

Mach. Accursed be that tongue that tells mee so; For it hath Cow'd my better part of man: And be thefe Juggling Fiends no more beleu'd, That palter with vs in a double fench, That keep the word of promife to our eare, And breake it to our hope. Ie not fight with thee.

Mach. Then yeeld thee Coward, And liue to be the shew, and gase o'th'time. We'le haue thee, as our rarer Monsters are Painted vpon a poie, and vnder-writ, Heere may you fee the Tyrant.

Mach. I will not yeeld To kill the ground before young Maleulmes feet, And to be baied with the Rabbles curfe. Though Byrnan wood be come to Dunfrance, And thou oppo'd, being of no woman borne, Yet I will try the Iuff. Before my body, I throw my warlike Shield; Lay on Macduff, And damn'd be him, that first cries hold, enough. Exeunt fighting. Alarums.

Enter Fighting, and Macbeth slaine.

Retreat, and Flouris. Enter with Drumme and Colours, Malcolm, Seyward, Riff, Thanes, & Soldiers.

Mal. I would the Friends we miffte, were safe arriu'd: Sy. Some muft go off; and yet by thefe I fee, So great a day as this is cheapely bought. Mal. Macduff is miffing, and your Noble Sonne. Riff. Your Son my Lord, he's paid a fouldiers debt, He onely liu'd but till he was a man, The which no sooner had his Prowesse confirme'd In the vnshrinking fation where he fought, But like a man he dy'd.

Sy. Then he is dead? Riff.1 and brought off the field; your caufe of sorrow Muft not be meafur'd by his worth, for then It hath no end.

Sy. Had he his hurts before? Riff. 1, on the Front. Sy. Why then, Gods Soldier be he: Had I as many Sonnes, as I haue haires, I would not with them to a fairer death: And so his Knell is knoll'd.

Mal. Hee's worth more sorrow, And that I fee spend for him.

Sy. Hee's worth no more, They lay him parte well, and paid his fcore, And so God be with him. Here comes newer comfort. Enter Macduff with Macbeths head.

Mach. Halle King, for tho thou art. Behold where stands Th'Vlurpers curfed head : the time is free: I see thee compait with thy Kingdomes Pearle, That speake my faltuation in their minds: Whole voyces I define alowe with mine. Halle King of Scotland.

ell. Halle King of Scotland. Flouris.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expence of time, Before we reckon with your feareall loues, And make vs even with you. My Thanes and Kinffmen Henceforth be Earles, the firth that euer Scotland In fuch an Honor nam'd: What's more to do, Which would be planted newly with the time, As calling home our exil'd Friends abroad, That fled the Snare of watchfull Tyranny, Producing forth the cruell Minifters Of this dead Butcher, and his Fiend-like Oyeone; Who(as'is thought) by felfe and violent hands, Tooke off her life. This, and what needfull elfe That call's vpon vs, by the Grace of Grace, We will performe in meaure, time, and place: So thankes to all at once, and to each one, Whom we invite, to fee vs Crown'd at Scone. Flouris. Exeunt Omnes.

FINIS.
THE TRAGEDIE OF
HAMLET, Prince of Denmarke.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Barnardo and Francisco two Centinels.

Barnado.

'Stis I, Enter Barnardo and Francisco two Centinels.

Bar. Long live the King.

Fran. Barnardo?

Bar. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Bar. 'Tis now two o'clock, get thee to bed Francisco.

Fran. For this relieve much thanks: 'Tis bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Bar. Have you had quiet Guard?

Fran. Not a Mouke stirring.

Bar. Well, goodnight. If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, the Rivals of my Watch, bid them make halt.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand: who's there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And Leige-men to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O farwell honest Soldier, who hath relied'th'you?

Fran. Barnardo ha's my place: give you goodnight.

Exit Fran.

Bar. Say, what is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Bar. Welcome Horatio, welcome good Marcellus.

Mar. What, has this thing appear'd againe to night?

Bar. I have scene nothing.

Mar. Horatio tells, 'tis but our Fantasie,

And will not let bellespe take hold of him

Touching this drested sight, twice scene of vs,

Therefore I have intreated him along

With vs, to watch the minutes of this Night,

That if againe this Apparition come,

He may approve our eyes, and speake to it.

Hor. Tis, tis, 'twill not appear.

Bar. Sit downe a while,

And let vs once againe affirm your cares,

That are so fortified against our Story,

What we two Nightes late scene.

Hor. Well, fit we downe,

And let vs heare Barnardo speake of this.

Bar. Late night of all,

When yond fame Starre that's Westward from the Pole

Had made his course v'lume that part of Heauen

Where now it burnes, Marcellus and my selfe,

The Bell then botting one.

Mar. Peace, break thee off: Enter the Ghost.

Look where it comes againe.

Bar. In the fame figure, like the King that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a Scholler; speake to it Horatio.

Bar. Lookes it not like the King? Mark it Horatio.

Hor. Mott like: It harrowes me with fear & wonder

Bar. It would be spoke too.

Mar. Question it Horatio.

Hor. What art thou that viurpt this time of night,

Together with that Faire and Warlike forme

In which the Maledy of buried Denmarke

Did sometimes march: By Heaven I charge thee speake.

Mar. It is offended.

Bar. See, it flarkes away.

Exit the Ghost.

Bar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Hor. How now Horatio? You tremble & look pale?

Is not this something more then Fantasie?

What thinke you on't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this beleue

Without the fenible and true anouch

Of mine owne eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the King?

Hor. As thou art to thy selfe,

Such was the very Armour he had on,

When th'Ambitious Norway combatted:

So frown'd he once, when in an angry parle

He imn the fleded Polax on the Ice.

'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus twice before, and last at this dead hour,

With Marsillialt talke, hath he gone by our Watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not:

But in the groffe and scope of my Opinion,

This hoades some strange errupcion to our State.

Mar. Good now sit downe, tell me he that knowes

Why this fame strift and most obseruant Watch,

So noitely toyes the subiect of the Land,

And why fuch dayly Calt of Brazon Cannon

And Foraigne Mart for Implementes of warre:

Why fuch imprerfe of Ship-wrights, whose fore Tastke

Do's not diuide the Sunday from the wecke,

What might be toward, that this fwesty hait

Doth make the Night ioyn-Labourer with the day:

Who is't that can informe me?

Hor. That can I,
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

At last the whifer goes fo: Our late King, Whose Image euery but now appeare'd to vs, Was (as you know) by Fortinbras of Norway, (Therto prick'd on by a molt emulat'd Pride) Dar'd to the Combat, in which, our Valiant Hamlet, (For so this fide of our knowne world esteem'd him) Did play this Fortinbras: who by a Seal'd Compact, Well ratify'd by Law, and Heraldrie, Did forfeit (with his life) all thofe his Lands Which he fliould on, to the Conqueror: Against the which, a Moity competetent Was gaged by our King: which had return'd To the Inheritance of Fortinbras, Had he bin Vanquifer, as by the fame Cou'nant And carriage of the Article defigne, His fell to Hamlet. Now fir, young Fortinbras, Of vnimprov'd Meat, and hot full, Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there, Shark'd vp a Lift of Landliffe Refolutes, For Foodie and Diet, to fome Enterprise That hath a fhameake in't: which is no other (And doth well appeare vnto our State) But to recover of vs by strong hand And terms of Complaiſe, thofe forefald Lands So by his Father loft: and this (I take it) Is the maine Motive of our Preparations, The Sourc of this our Watch, and the cheefe Head Of this part-hall, and Romage in the Land. Enter Glofti againe, But loth, behold: Loe, where it comes againe: It croffe it, though it flait me. Stay Illufion: If thou haft any found, or vie of Voice, Speake to me. If there be any good thing to be done, That may to thee do eafe, and grace to me; speake to me. If thou art privy to thy Countries Fate (Which happily foreknowing may ayowd) Oh speake. Or, if thou haft vp-hopred in thy life Extorted Treafeure in the worme of Earth, (For which, they fay, you Spirits oft walke in death.) Speake of it. Stay, and speake. Stop it Marcellus. Mar. Shall I strike at ir with my Pardian? Hor. Do, if it will not fland. Barn. 'Tis heere. Hor. 'Tis heere. Barn. 'Tis gone. We do it wrong, being fo Maiestical To offer it the Shew of Violence, For it is as the Ayre, invulnerabile, And our vaine blowes, malicious Mockery. Barn. It was about to speake, when the Cocke crew. Hor. And then it flart, like a guilty thing Upon a fearfull Summons. I haue heard, The Cocke that is the Trumpet to the day, Doth with his lofty and thrill-foundeing Throat Awake the God of Day: and at his warning, Whether in Sea, or Fire, in Earth, or Ayre, Th'extravagant, and erring Spirit, hyes To his Confine. And of the truth heeretin, This prefent Object made probation. Mar. It flioud on the crowing of the Cocke. Some fayes, that ever gaineft that Seafon comes Wherein our Saviours Birth is celebrated, Th'Bird of Dawning fliould not myght long: And then (they fay) no Spirit can walke abroad, The nights are wholesome, then no Planets drive, No Faery talkes, nor Witch hath power to Charme: So hallow'd, and fo gracious is the time. Hor. So haue I heard, and do in part beleue it. But looke, the Morne in Ruffet mantie clad, Walkes o're the dew of you high Eternere Hill, Breaks we our Watch vp, and by my advice Let vs impart what we haue feene to night Vnto yong Hamlet. For vpon my life, This Spirit dumbe to vs, will speake to him: Do you content we shall acquaint him with it, As needfull in our Laos, fitting our Duty? Mar. Let do't I pray, and I this mornig know Where we shall finde him most conveniently. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Claudius King of Denmark, Gertrude the Queene, Hamlet, Polonia, Laertes, and his Sister Ophelia, Lords & Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our deere Brothers death The memory be greene: and that it vs befitted To beware our hearts in greefe, and our whole Kingdom To be condemed in one blow of woe. Yet to fare hath Difcretion fought with Nature, That we with wisefull forrow thinke on him, Together with remembrance of our felues. Therefore our sometime Sifer, now our Queene, Th HttpResponseRedirect of this warlike State, Have we, a twiere, with a defeated joy, With one Aufpicious, and one Dropping eye, With mirth in Funerall, and with Dirge in Marriage, In equal Scale weighing Delight and Dole Taken to Wife; nor have we herein bar'd Your better Wiledomes, which have freely gone With this affaire along, for all our Thankes. Now followes, that you know young Fortinbras, Holding a weake fuppoft of our worth; Or thinking by our late deere Brothers death, Our State to be difroynt, and out of Frame, Colleagued with the dreams of his Advantage; He hath not fay'd to peifer vs with Meffege, Importing the surrender of thofe Lands Loft by his Father: with all Bonds of Law To our moft valiant Brother. So much for him. Enter Voltemand and Cornelius. Now for our felfe, and for this time of meeting Thus much the bufeeneffe is. We have heere writ To Norway, Uncle of young Fortinbras, Who Impotent and Bedrid, fearefully heares Of this his Nephews purpofe, to fuppreffe His further gate herein. In that the Leues, The Lifts, and full proportions are all made Out of his fubflicte: and we heere difpatch You good Cornelius, and you Voltemand, For hearing of this greeting to old Norway, Giving to you no further personall power To bufeeneffe with the King, more then the scope Of thofe dilated Articles allow: Farewell and let your hafte commend your duty. Vol. In that, and all things, will we fhew our duty. King. We doubt it nothing, heartily farewell. Exit Voltemand and Cornelius. And now Laertes, what's the newes with you? You
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

You told vs of some fuite. What is't Laertes? You cannot speake of Reasoon to the Dane, And looke your voyce. What would'thou beg Laertes, That shall not be my Offer, not thy Asking? The Head is not more Newtie to the Heart, The Hand more Instrumentall to the Mouth, Then is the Throne of Denmarke to thy Father. What would'thou haue Laertes? Laert. Dread my Lord, Your lease and favour to returne to France, From whence, though willingly I came to Denmarke To shew my duty in your Coronation, Yet now I must confesse, that duty done, My thoughts and wilhes bend againe towards France, And bow them to your gracious lease and pardon. King. Hate you your Fathers leane? What says Polonius? Pol. He hath my Lord: I do beseech you grant him leaue to go. King. Take thy faire houre Laertes, time be thine, And by thy best graces spend it at thy will: But now my Czn Hamlet, and my Sonne? Ham. A little more then kin, and leffe then kinde. King. How is it that the Clouds still hang on you? Ham. Not so my Lord, I am too much i'th'Sun. Queen. Good Hamlet cast thy nightly colour off, And let thine eye looke like a Friend on Denmarke. Do not for ever with thy voyed list Secke for thy Noble Father in the duft; Thou know'rt 'tis common, all that live must dye, Paffing through Nature, to Eternity. Ham. I Madam, it is common. Queen. If it be; Why seemes it so particular with thee. Ham. Seemes Madam? Nay, is it: I know not seemes: 'Tis not alone my Inky Cloake (good Mother) Nor Customary futes of Soleme Blacke, Nor wanty sipuration of forc'd breath, No, nor the fruitfull Riber in the Eye, Nor the defected hauour of the Vifage, Together with all Formes, Moodes, shewes of Griefe, That can denote me truly. Thefe indeed Seeme, For they are actions that a man might play: But I have that Within, which paffeth show; These, but the Trappings, and the Suites of woe. King. 'Tis sweet and commendable In your Nature Hamlet, To give these mourning duties to your Father: But you must know, your Father lovd a Father, That Father lovd, lovd his, and the Suruivour bound In filial Obligation, for some terme To do obsequious Sorrow: But to perfuer In obfinate Condomement, is a courfe Of impious ribburnes. 'Tis vnmanly greefe, It shews a will most incorrece to Heaven, A Heart vnfortified, a Minde Impatient, An Vnderstanding fimple, and vanshool'd: For, what we know must be, and is as common As any the moft vulgar thing to fence, Why shou'd we in our peeuish Opposition Take it to heart? Fye, 'tis a fault to Heaven, A fault against the Dead, a fault to Nature, To Reasoon moft absurd, whose common Thesme Is death of Fathers, and who fill hath cried, From the firft Corrie, till he that dyed to day, This must be fo. We pray you throw to earth This vnpreuaying woe, and thinke of vs As of a Father; For let the world take note, You are the moft immediate to our Throne, And with no leffe Nobility of Loue, Then that which deereft Father beares his Sonne, Do I impart towards you. For your intent In going backe to Schoole in Wittenberg, It is moft retrograde to our define: And we beseech you, bend you to remaine Here in the cheere and comfort of our eye, Our cheerefull Courtier Czn, and our Sonne. Laet. Let not thy Mother lose her Prayers Hamlet: I priyche fly with vs, go not to Wittenberg. Ham. I shall in all my bet Obey you Madam. King. Why is a loving, and a faire Reply, Be as our felle in Denmarke. Madam come, This gentle and vnforfe accord of Hamlet Sits smiling to my heart; in grace whereof, No locond health that Denmarke drinks to day, But the great Cannon to the Clows shall tell, And the Kings Rose, the Heauens shall bruite againe, Respeaking earthly Thunder. Come away. Exeunt "Hamlet. Ham. Oh that this too too solid Fleth, would melt, Thaw, and refolve it felfe into a Dew: Or that the Euerlafting had not fixt His Cannon 'gainst Selfe-daughter. O God, O God! How weary, bafe, flat, and vnprofitable Seemes to me all the vses of this world? Fie on't? Oh fie, fie, 'tis an vnweeded Garden That growes to Seed: Things rank, and groffe in Nature Poffefse it merelie. That it should come to this: But two months dead: Nay, not so much; not two, So excellent a King, that was to this Hyperion to a Satyre: fo louing to my Mother, That he might not betenee the winde of heauen Visit her face too roughly. Heauen and Earth Muft I remember? why the would hang on him, As if encreafe of Appiite had growne By what it fed on; and yet within a month? Let me not thinke on't: Fraelty, thy name is woman. A little Month, or ere those shoes were old, With which the followed my poore Fathers body Like Niobe, all tears. Why fie, even fie. (O Heauen! A bealt that wants discouerse of Reasoon Would have mournd longer) married with mine Vnkle, My Fathers Brother: but no more like my Father, Then I to Hercules. Within a Moneth? Ere ye the falt of moft vnrighteous Teares Had left the flushing of her gaulted eyes, She married. O moft wicked fpeece, to poet With fuch dexterity to Inecetuous flrees: It is not, nor it cannot come to good. But breake my heart, for I must hold my tongue. Enter Horatio, Barnard, and Marcellus. Hor. Haile to your Lordship. Ham. So glad to fee you well: Horatio, or do I forget my felie. Hor. The fame my Lord, And your poore Servant ever. Ham. Sir my good friend, Ile change that name with you: And what make you from Wittenberg Horatio?
Hold you the watch to Night?
Bob. We doe my Lord.
All. Longer, longer. Hor. Not when I spake. Ham. His Beard was grizly? no. Hor. It was, as I have feeene in his life, A Sable Siluer’d. (gaine. Ham. Ile watch to Night; perchance ‘twill wake a-
Hor. I warrant you it will. Ham. If it affume my noble Fathers person, Ie speake to it,though Hell it felte shoule gape And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all, If you have hither concord this fight; Let it bee treble in your silence still; And whatsoeuer els shall hap to night, Glue it an underftanding but no tongue; I will requite your louses; fo, fare ye well: Upon the Platforme twixt eleuen and twelve, Ie wit you. All. Our duty to your Honour. Exeunt. Ham. Your loue, as mine to you: farewell. My Fathers Spirit in Armes? All is not well: I doubt some foule play: would the Night were come; Till then fit fill my soule; foule deeds will rife, Though all the earth overwelm them to mens cles. Exit,

Scena Tertia.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laet. My necessaries are imbarke’t; Farewell : And Sifter, as the Winds glue Benefit, And Conuoy is affilant; doe not sleepe, But let me hirare from you.

Ophel. Do you doubt that?

Laet. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favours, Hold it a fashion and a toy in Bloud; A Violet in the youth of Primity Nature; Froward, not permanent; sweet not lating The fuppallance of a minute? No more. Ophel. No more but fo.

Laet. Think he it no more:
For nature creffant does not grow alone, In thewes and Bulke: but as his Temple waxes, The inward turvle of the Minde and Soule Grown wide withall. Perhaps he loues you now, And now no foyle nor cautell both befmerch The vertue of his feare: but you muft feare

His
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

His greatneffe weigh'd, his will is not his owne; For hee himselfe is suffic'd to his Birth: Hee may not, as vnnailed perons doe, Carve for himselfe; for, on his choyce depends The sandrity and health of the woole State. And therefore muft his choyce be circumfo'd Unto the voyce and yeelding of that Body, Whereas he is the Head. Then if he fayes he loues you, It fits your wildefome to farre to beleue it; As hee in his peculiar art and force May glue his faying deede: which is no further, Then the maine voyce of Denmark goes withall. Then weigh what loffe your Honour may fufiane, If with too credent care you lift his Songs; Or lofe your Heart, or your chaff Treasure open To his vnmadred impertinency. Faire it Ophelia, fare it my deare Sifer, And keepe within the reare of your Affection: Out of the shot and danger of Defere. The chariift Maid is Prodiggall enough, If shee will make her beauty to the Moone: Vertue if felle feapes not calumnious brokes, The Canker Galls, the Infants of the Spring Too off before the buttons be difclo'd, And in the Morne and liquid dew of Youth, Contagious blaiments are moft imminent. Be wary then, beft fayles in fea, Youth to ifte rebells, though none elfe neere. Ophel. I shall the effect of this good Leffon keepe, As watchmen to my heart: but good my Brother Doe not as some vngravelous Patrons doe, Shew me the fpeece and thorny way to Heaven; Whilft like a puff and recklesfe Linferine Himselfe, the Primrofe path of dalliance treads, And reaks not his owne reade.

Ler. Oh, feare me not.

Enter Polonius.

I flay too long; but here my Father comes: A double blessing is a double grace; Occation smiles upon a second leave. Polon. Yet heere Laertes? Aboard, aboard for shame, The winde fits in the fhouder of your faile, And you are flaid for there: my bleffing with you; And thefe few Precepts in thy memory, See thou Character. Glue thy thoughts no tongue, Nor any vapportion'd thought his Act: Be thou familiar; but by no meanees vulgar: The friends thou haft, and their adoption tride, Grapple them to thy Soule, with hoopes of Steele: But doe not dull thy palme, with entertainment Of each vnhatch't, vnfeild'd Comrade. Beware Entrance of an quarrill: but being in Bear's that th'o'po'ded may beware of thee. Glue every man thine carefull but few thy voyce: Take each mans confent but reforme thy judgement; Coily thy habit as thy pursue can buy; But not expref't in fancy; rich, not gawle: For the Apparel oft proclaims the man. And they in France of the beft rank and stature, Are of a moft folemn and generous cheif in that. Neither a borrower, nor a lender be; For lone oft loes both it felle and friend: And borrowing duls the edge of Husbandry. This abuse all; to thine owne felle be true: And it muft follow, as the Night the Day, Thou canst not then be felle to any man.

Tis told me he hath very oft of late Given priuate time to you; and you your felle Have of your audience beene moft free and bounteous. If it be fo, as fo tis put on me; And that in way of caution: I muft tell you, You doe not vnderfand your felle fo cleerely, As it behoves my Daughter, and your Honour. What is betweene you, give me vp the truth? Ophel. He hath my Lord of late, made many tenders Of his affection to me.

Polon. Affection, puh. You speake like a greene Girle, Vnfin'd in fuch perillous Circumfance. Doe you beleue his tenders, as you call them? Ophel. I do not know, my Lord, what I should thinke. Polon. Marry Ile teech you; thinke your felle a Baby, That you have tane his tenders for true pay, Which are not flaring. Tender your felle more dearly; Or not to crack the winde of the poore Phrafe, Roaming it thus, you 'll tendre me a foole.

Ophel. My Lord, he hath importun'd me with love, In honourible fashion. Polon. I, faithon you may call it, go to, go to. Ophel. And hath gien countenance to his speech, My Lord, with all the vowes of Heauen. Polon. I Springes to catch Woodcocks. I doe know When the Blood burns, how Prodiggill the Soule Grauls the tongue vowes: there be blaze, Daughter, Gluing more light then heat: extinct in both, Even in their promife, as it is a making; You muft not take for fire. For this time Daughtier, Be from what fencer of your Malfen prefence; Set your entertainments at a higher rate, Then a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet, Beleeue fo much in him, that he is young, And with a larger tether may he walke, Then may be gien you. In few, Ophelia, Doe not beleue his vowes; for they are Broakers, Not of the eye, which their Inuinations show: But moere implorators of vnholie Sutes, Breathing like fancified and pious bonds, The better to beguile. This is for all: I would not, in plaine tearmes, from this time forth, Have you to fander any moment leffe, As to glue words or talke with the Lord Hamlet: Louke too't, I charge you; come your wayes.

Ophel. I shall obeie my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet, Hecato, Marcellus. Ham. The Ayre bites throughly: is it very cold? Hor. It is a nipping and an eager ayre. Ham. What hower now? Hor. I thinke it lacks of twelve. Mar. No, it is frooke. (feason.

Hor. Indeed I heard it not: then it draws neere the Wherein the Spirit held his wont to walke, What
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

What does this meane my Lord? (roufe, Ham. The King doth wake to night, and takes his Keeps waufics and the waugcring vpring reale,
As he draws his draughts of Renish downe,
The kettle Drum and Trumpet thus braue out
The triumph of his Pledge.
Horat. Is it a cuftome?
Ham. I marry lift.
And to my mind, though I am nathe here,
And to the manner borne: It is a Cuflome:
More honour'd in the breach, then the obserue:
Enter Ghost.
Hor. Looke my Lord, it comes,
Ham. Angels and Minifhers of Grace defend vs:
Be thou a Spofe of health, or Goblin dam'd,
Bring with thee ayres from Heauen,or blasts from Hell,
Be thy cuuks wicked or charitable,
Thou com'st in fuch a queftionable fhape
That I will speake to thee. Ile call thee Hamlet,
King Claud, Reuenge, Oo,ho,answer me,
Let me not burft in Ignorance]; but tell
Why thy Cano'z'd bones Hearted in death,
Haue buft their cerments, why the Sepulcher
Wherein we faw thee quietly enu'm'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and Marble tawes,
To caeft thee vp againe? What may this meanes?
That thou dead Coarfe againe in compleat fleee,
Reuifts thus the glimpses of the Moon,
Making Night hidious? And we foole of Nature,
So horribly to make our dispoftion,
With thoughts beyond them, reaches of our Soules,
Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we doe?
Ghost becogns Hamlet.
Hor. It becokes you to goe away with it,
As if it fome impoition did defire
To you alone.
Mar. Looke with what courteous fession
It waftes you to a more removed ground:
But doe not goe with it.
Hor. No,by no meanes.
Ham. It will not speake: then will I follow it.
Hor. Doe not my Lord.
Ham. Why, what fhould be the fear?
I doe not fet my life at a pins fee;
And for my Soule,what can it doe to that?
Being a thing immortall it felfee:
It waues me forth againe: Ile follow it.
Hor. What if it tempt you towards the Floud my Lord?
Or to the dreafefull Sonnet of the Cliffe,
That beetles o're his bafe into the Sea,
And there affumes fome other horrifh forme,
Which might deprifie your Sovereignty of Reason,
And draw you into madneffe thinke of it?
Ham. It wafts me fiIIe: goe on, Ile follow thee.
Mar. You fhall not goe my Lord.
Ham. Hold off your hand.
Hor. Be ru'd, you fhall not goe.
Ham. My fate criest out.
And makes each petty Artire in this body,
As hardy as the Nemian Liones nere:
Still am I cal'd? Vhand me Gentlemen:
By Heau'n, I lea a Ghost of him that lets me:
I fay away, goe on, Ile follow thee.
Exeunt Ghost & Hamlet.
Hor. He waues desperate with imagination.
Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.

Hor. Haue after, to what ifitue will this come?
Mar. Something is rotten in the State of Denmarke.
Hor. Heauen will direct it.
Exeunt.
Ham. Where wilt thou lead me? speake; Ile go no fur-
Ghoft. Marke me.
Ham. I will.
Ghoft. My hower is almost come,
When I to fulphurous and tormenting Flames
Mufet render vp my felfe.
Ham. Alas poore Ghoft.
Ghoft. Pitty me not, but lend thy ferial hearing
To what I fhall vnfold.
Ham. Speake, I am bound to heare.
Ghoft. So art thou to reuenge, when thou haft heare.
Ham. What?
Ghoft. I am thy Fathers Spirit,
Doom'd for a certaine terme to wake the night;
And for the day coming to fift his Fiers,
Till the foules crimes done in my dayes of Nature
Are burnt and purg'd away? But that I am forbid
To tell the fecrets of my Prifon-Houfe;
I could a Tale vnfold, whose lighteft word
Would howre vp thy foule, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes like Starres, flart from them Spheres,
Thy knotty and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to fland an end,
Like Quilles vpohn the fretfull Porpentine :
But this eternall blazon muft not be
To eares of flesh and blood; lift Hamlet, oh lift,
If thou didt euer thy deare Father love.
Ham. Oh Heauen!
Ghoft. Renenge his foule and moft vnnatural Murther.
Ham. Murther?
Ghoft. Murther moft foule, as in the beft it is;
But this moft foule, strange, and vnnatural.
Ham. Haft, haft me to know it,
That with wings as swift
As meditation, or the thoughts of Loue,
May Sweepe to my Renenge.
Ghoft. I finde thee apt,
And dueller should'ft thou be then the fat weede
That rots it felfe in cafe, on Lethe Wharfe,
Would'ft thou not firre in this. Now Hamlet heare:
It's given out, that fleeing in mine Orchard,
A Serpent flung me: to the whole care of Denmarke,
It by a forfog proceffe of my death
Rancly abus'd: But know thou Noble youth,
The Serpent that did fling thy Fathers life,
Now weares his Crowne.
Ham. O my Prophefick foule: mine Uncle?
Ghoft. I that inculcuous, that adorant Peal
With witchcraft of his wits, hath Traitorous guilts.
Oh wicked Wit, and Gifts, that haue the power
So to deduce? Won to to this flamefull Luft
The will of my moft fearning vertuous Quene:
Oh Hamlet, what a falling off was there,
From me, whose loue was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand, even with the Vow
I made to her in Marriage: and to decline
Vpon a wretch, whose Naturall gifts were poore
To those of mine. But Vrue, as it never will be housed,
Though Lewdneffe court the in a shape of Heauen:
So Luft, though to a radiant Angell link'd,
Will fate it felfe in a Celltfull bed, & pray on Garbage.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

But soft, me thinkes I sent the Mornings Ayre;
Briefe let me be: Sleeping within mine Orchard,
My custome alwayes in the afternoone;
Upon my secreter howe thy Uncle foile
With hyues of cured Helicon in a Viole,
And in the Porches of mine eares did pour
The leesperous Difliments, whose effect
Holds such an enmyty with bloud of Man,
That swift as quick-fluer, it courseth through
The natural Gates and Allies of the Body;
And with a fastaine vigour it doth perfet
And cure, like Ayre droppings into Milke,
The thin and wholome blood: so did it mine;
And a most infant Tetter bak'd about,
Moff Laxity-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth Body.
Thus was I, sleeping, by a Brothers hand,
Of Life, of Crowne, and Queene at once difpatcht;
Cut off even in the Blossomes of my Sinne,
Vnhouzled, dispointed, vnnameled,
No reckoning made, but feare to my account
With all my imperfections on my head;
Oh horrible, Oh horrible, most horrible:
If thou hast nature in thee beare it not;
Let not the Royall Bed of Denmark be
A Couch for Luxury and damned Incest.
But howsoever thou purfeth this QG,
Taint not thy mind; nor let thy Soule continue
Against thy Mother ought; leave her to heaven,
And to those Thores that in her boforme lodge,
To pricke and fling her. Fare thee well at once;
The Glove-worne thores the Matine to be unread,
And gins to pale his vnaffectual Fire.
Adue,adue, Hamlet: remember me.
Exit.
Ham. Oh all you hoist of Haueun! Oh Earth; what chas
And shall I couple Hell? Oh heare; hold my heart;
And you my finnewes grow not infant Old;
But beare me fflifely vp: Remember thee?
I, thou poore Ghost, while memory holds a feate
In this distraeted Globe: Remember thee?
Yes, from the Table of my Memory,
Ie wipe away all triall Fond Records,
All faces of Bookes, all forms, all proffes past,
That youth and obsercation coppied there;
And thy Commandment all alone shall live
Within the Booke and Volume of my Braine,
Vnmit with baleer matter; yes, by Haueun:
Oh most perficius woman!
Oh Villaine, Villaine, smilling damned Villaine!
My Tables, my Table; meet it I set it downe,
That one may smyle, and smile and be a Villaine;
At least I fure it may be fo in Denmark;
So Vuckle there you are: now to my word;
It In, Adue, Adue, Remember me: I have fwarent.

Her. & Mar. within. My Lord, my Lord,
Enter Horatio and Marcellus.
Mar. Lord Hamlet.
Hor. Haueuen fecure him.
Mar. So be it.

Her. Illa, ho, ho, my Lord.

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy, come bird, come.
Mar. How lift't my Noble Lord?
Her. What newes, my Lord?
Ham. Oh wonderfull!
Her. Good my Lord tell it.
Ham. No you'lt reacall it.

Her. Not I, my Lord, by Haueun.
Mar. Nor I, my Lord. (think it)
Ham. How fay you then, would heart of man once
But you'll be secret?
"Eck, I, by Haueun', my Lord.
Ham. There's nere a villaine dwelling in all Denmrake
But he's an arrant knaue.
Hor. There needs no Ghost my Lord, come from the Grace, to tell vs this.
Ham. Why right, you are I' th' right;
And fo, without more circumference at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands, and part:
You, as your busines and defires shall point you:
For every man has his business and defire,
Such as it is: and for mine owne poore part,
Lookke you, I lege pray.
Hor. These are but wild and hurling words, my Lord.
Ham. I'm sorry they offend you hearty:
Yes faith, heartily.
Hor. There's no offence my Lord.
Ham. Yes, by Saint Patent, but there is my Lord,
And much offence too, touching this VSSION heere:
It is an honest Ghost, that let me tell you:
For your defire to know what is betweene vs,
O'ermartert as you may. And now good friends,
As you are Friends, Schollers and Soldiers,
Give me one poore request.
Her. What is't my Lord? we will.
Ham. Neuer make known what you have seen to night.
But. My Lord, we will not.
Ham. Nay, but weare't.
Hor. Inhale my Lord, not I.
Mar. Nor I my Lord: in faith.
Ham. Vpon my fword.
Marcell. We have fwarene my Lord already.
Ham. Indeed, vpon my fword, Indeed.
Glo. Swere,
Glaphers under the Stage.
Ham. Ah ha boy, fayest thou fo. Art thou there true-penny? Come one you here this fellow in the fellerede
Content to fware.
Hor. Propose the Oath my Lord.
Ham. Neuer to speake of this that you have feene,
Sware by my fword.
Glo. Swere,
Ham. His & orbique? Then weele thirft for grownd,
Come hither Gentlemen,
And lay your hands againe vpon my fword,
Neuer to speake of this that you have heard:
Sware by my Sword.
Glo. Swere,
Ham. (flaft)
Well faid old Mole, can't worke i'th' ground fo
A worthy Planer, once more remoue good friends.
Hor. Oh day and nightbut this is wondrous strange.
Ham. And therefore as a stranger glue it welcome.
There are more things in Heaven and Earth, Horatius,
Then are dreamt of in our Philosophy But come,
Here as before, neuer fo helpe you mercy,
How strange or oddo so ere I beare my selfe;
(As I perchance hereafter shall thinke mee
To put an Anticke disposition on)
That you at fuch time feeing me, never shal
With Armes encumberd thus, or thus, head shake;
Or by pronouncing of some doubtfull Phrases;
As well, we know, or we could and if we would,
Or if we to speake; or there be and if there might,
Or fuch ambiguous gling out to note,
That
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

That you know ought of me; this not to doe:
So grace and mercy at your most neede helpe you:
Sware.

Gloef. Sware.

Ham. Reit, reit perturbed Spirit: so Gentlemen,
With all my loue I doe commend me to you;
And what fo poore a man as Hamlet is,
May doe you expresse his loue and friendly to you,
God willing shal not lacke: let vs goe in together,
And fyll your fingers on your lippes I pray,
The time is out of joynt: Oh curfed night,
That euer I was borne to fet it right.
Nay,come let's goe together.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Polonius, and Reynold.

Polon. Glue him his money, and thefe notes Reynolds.

Reynol. I will my Lord.

Polon. You fhall doe maruells wifely: good Reynolds,
Before he vife him you make inquiry
Of his behauiour.

Reynol. My Lord, I did intend it.

Polon. Marry, well fald;

Very well fald. Looke you Sir,
Enquire me first what Danskern are in Paris;
And how, and whom what meanes; and where they keepe:
What company, at what experience and finding
By this encompiatement and drift of question,
That they doe know my fonne: Come you more neerer
Then your particular demandis will touch it,
Take you as t'were some diiftant knowledge of him,
And thus I know his father and his friends,
And in part him. Doe you marke this Reynolds?

Reynol. I, very well my Lord.

Polon. And in part him, but you may fay not well;
But it's be hee I meane, hees very well;
Addicted fo and fo, and there put on him
What forgeries you pleafe: marry, none fo ranke,
As may diſhonour him; take heed of that:
But Sir, fuch wanton, wild, and vifuall flies,
As are Companions noted and moft knowne
To youth and liberty.

Reynol. As gaming my Lord,

Polon. I, or drinking, fencing, fwearng, quarrelling, drauſing. You may goe to farre.

Reynol. My Lord that would diſhonour him.

Polon. Faith no, as you may feaon it in the charge;
You must not put another scandal on him,
That hee is open to Incontinentes,
That's not my meaning: but his faults fo quaintly,
That they may feme the taints of liberty;
The ruff and out-breake of a fiery minde,
A fanguene in vaſcram'd blood of generall affault.

Reynol. But my good Lord.

Polon. Wherefore should you doe this?

Reynol. I my Lord, I would know that.

Polon. Marry Sir, here's my drift,
And I believe it is a fetch of warrant;
You laying these light fullyes on my Sonne,
As 'were a thing a little foild it' th' working:
(found,
Mark you your party in conuerfe; him you would Hauling euers feene. In the prenominate crimes,
The youth you breath of guile, be affur'd
He clofes with you in this conqueſcense:
Good fir, or fo,friend, or Gentleman.
According to the Phraie and the Addition,
Of man and Country.

Reynol. Very good my Lord.

Polon. And then Sir does he this?
He does what I am about to fay?
I was about to fay fomethings where did I leaue?

Reynol. At clofes in the conqueſcense:
At friend, or fo, and Gentleman.

Polon. At clofes in the conqueſcense, I marry,
He clofes with you thus. I know the Gentleman,
I faw him yesterday, or tother day;
Or then or then, with fuch and fuch; and as you fay,
There was he gaming, there o'rewoke in a Round,
There falling out at Tennis; or perchance,
I faw him enter fuch a houfe of idle;
Fideſte, a Brothell, or fo forth. See you now;
Your bair of falhood, takes this Cape of truth;
And thus doe we of what done and of which
With windlifes, and with affaires of Bias,
By indirectiones finde directions out:
So by my former Lecture and advice
Shall you my Sonne you have me, have you not?

Reynol. My Lord I have.

Polon. God buy you, fare you well.

Reynol. Good my Lord.

Polon. Obferue his inclination in your felfe.

Reynol. I thall my Lord.

Polon. And let him plye his Mufick.

Reynol. Well, my Lord. Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Polon. Farewell:
How now Ophelia, what's the matter?

Ophe. Alas my Lord, I have beene fo affrighted.

Polon. With what, in the name of Heauen?

Ophe. My Lord, as I was fowing in my Chamber,
Lord Hamlet with his doublet all vnblinde'd,
No hat vpon his head, his flocks foon'd,
Vnharleed, and downe glued to his Ankle,
Falc as his fhirft, his knees knocking each other,
And with a looke fo pitious in purport,
As if he had been looed out of hell,
To Ipeake of horrors: he comes before me.

Polon. Mad for thy Loue?

Ophe. My Lord, I do not know: but truly I do fear it.

Polon. What fayd he?

Ophe. He tooke me by the wrift, and held me hard;
Then goes he to the length of all his armes;
And with his other hand thus o're his brow,
He fals to fuch perfall of my face,
As he would draw it. Long fald he fo,
At laft, a little faking of mine Arme:
And thirc his head thus waung vp and downe;
He rafe'd a figh, fo pittious and profound,
That it did feme to flatter all his bulke,
And end his being. That done, he lets me goe,
And with his head ouer his shoulders turn'd,
He feem'd to finde his way without his eyes,
For out adores he went without their helpe;
And to the laft, bended their light on me.

Polon. Goe with me, I will goe feele the King,
This is the very eftaque of Loue,
Whose violent property foredoes it felle,

And
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

And leads the will to desperate Undertakings,
As oft as any passion vnder Heauen,
That does afflict our Natures. I am forie,
What have you given him any hard words of late?
Opes. No my good Lord: but as you did command,
I did repell his Letters, and deny'd
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am forie that with better speed and judgement
I had not quoted him. I fear he will be trife,
And meant to wracke thee: but before my jealousy;
It seems it is as proper to our Age,
To caft beyond our sensual in our Opinions,
As it is common for the young fort
To lacke discretion. Come, go we to the King,
This must be knowne, w being kept clofe might move
More greefe to hide, then hate to vter loue.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guilden-stern Companys.

King. Welcome deere Rosencrantz and Guilden-stern.
Moreover, that we much did long to fee you,
The neede we have to vfe you, did prouoke
Our halle fending. Something haue you heard
Of Hamlets transformation: so I call it,
Since not the exterior, nor the inward man
Refembles that it was. What it should bee
More then his Fathers death, that thus hath put him
So much from th'understanding of himselfe,
I cannot deeme of. I intreat you both,
That being of fo young dayes brought vp with him:
And since fo Neighbour'd to his youth, and humour,
That you vouchsafe your reit here in our Court
Some little time: so by your Companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather
So much as from Occasions you may gleane,
That open'd lies within our remedie.

Que. Good Gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you,
And fare I am two men there are not fuing,
To whom he more adheres. If it will pleafe you
To shew vs fo much Gentrie, and good will,
As to expend your time with vs a-while,
For the supply and profit of our Hope,
Your Vifitation shall receive fo much thanks
As fits a Kings remembrance.

Ros. Both your Maiesties
Might by the Souerainetie power you haue of vs,
Put your dread pleasures more into Command
Then to Entretie.

Gai. We both obey,
And here giue vp our felues, in the full bent,
To lay our Seruices freely at your feetes,
To be commanded.

King. Thankes Rosencrantz, and gentle Guilden-stern.

Gai. Thankes Guilden-stern and gentle Rosencrantz.
And I befeech you instantly to visit
My too much changed Sonne.
Go fome of ye,
And bring the Gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Gai. Heauen make our preffence and our prefalies
Pleasant and helpful to him.

Exit.

Queen. Amen.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Th' Ambaffadors from Norway, my good Lord,
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still haft bin the Father of good Newes.
Pol. Haue I, my Lord? Affure you, my good Liege,
I hold my dutie, as I hold my Soule,
Both to my God, one to my gracious King:
And I do thinke, or elfe this braine of mine
Hunts not the traitle of Policie, fo fure
As I haue vud to do: that I haue found
The very caufc of Hamlers Lunacie.

King. Oh speake of that, that I do long to heare.

Pol. Glue firft admittance to th' Ambaffadors,
My Newes shall be the Newes to that great Peaft.

King. Thy felfe do grace to them, and bring them in.

Pol. He tels me my sweet Queene, that he hath found
The head and foure of all your Sonnes difterm.

Que. I doubt it is no other, but the maine,
His Fathers death, and our o' re-hafty Marriage.

Enter Polonius, Volunum, and Cornelia.

King. Well, we shall fit him. Welcome good Friends:
Say Volunum, what from our Brother Norway?

Felt. Moft faire returne of Greetings, and Defires.

Pol. Upon our firft, he went out to suppreffe
His Nephewes Leudies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainft the Polesk:
But better look'd into, he truly found
It was againft your Highneffe, whereat greu'd,
That fo his Sickneffe, Age, and Impotence
Was falsely borne in hand, fends out Arrefts
On Fortuneas, which he (in breefe) obeyes,
Receives rebuke from Norwey: and in fine,
Makes Vow before his Vnkle, neuer more
To glue th'affay of Armes againft your Maiestie
Whereon old Norway, overcom'e with joy,
Gives him three thousand Crownes in Annuall Fee,
And his Commandion to imploie thofe Soldiers
So leued as before, againft the Polesk:
With an intreaty herein further fwayne,
That it might pleafe you to glue quiet paife
Through your Dominions, for his Enterprize,
On fuch regards of fafety and allowance,
As therein are fet down.

King. It likes vs well:
And at our more confider'd time we'ld read,
Anwer, and thinke vpon this Bufineffe.

Que. Meane time we thank you, for your well-tooke Labour.
Go to your ret, at night we'll Peaff together.

Moft welcome home.

Exit Ambaff.

Pol. This bufineffe is very well ended.

My Liege, and Madam, to expouphate
What Maleffe should be, what Dutie is,
Why day is day; night, night; and time is time.
Were nothing but to waife Night, Day, and Time.

Therefore, fince Breuitt is the Soule of Wit,
And tediousffe, the limbes and outward flourifhes,
I will be breefe. Your Noble Sonne is mad:
Mad call I it; for to define true Madneffe,
What it is, but to be nothing elfe but mad.
But let that go.

Que. More matter, with lefte Art.

Pol. Madam, I liewe I vie no Art at all:
That he is mad, 'tis true: 'Tis true 'us pittie,
And pittie it is true: A foolifh figure.
But favell me: for I will vfe no Art.

Mad
To the Celfhi:t, and my Soule Lisl., the moft beautiful Ophelia.

That's an ill Phrafe, a wilde Phrafe, beautified is a wilde Phrafe: but you shall heare thefe in her excellent white bofome, thefere.

_Qu._ Came this from _Hamlet_ to her.

_Pol._ Good Madam fav'v awhile, I will be faithfull.

_Doubt thou, the Starres are fire, Doubt, that the Sonne doth mone: Doubt: Truth to be a Lie, But in Doubt, Do, or Do not, O decre Ophelia, I am ill at these Numbers: I have not Art to reckon my grones; but that I love thee kis, oh moft Beij belle-leave it. Adieu._

_Thine earuermore moft deere Lady, whilft this eMachine is to him, Hamlet._

This in Obedience hath my daughter thow'd me: And more aboue hath his folliciting,
As they fell out by Time, by Meanes, and Place,
All guen to mine ear.

_King._ But how hath the receiv'd his Loue? _Pol._ What do you thinke of me? _King._ As of a man, faithfull and Honourable.

_Pol._ I wold feane profe so:But what might you thinke? When I had feene this hot loue on the wing, As I perceived it, I must tell you that Before my Daughter told me, what might you Or my deere Madifell your Queene heere, think, If I had playd the Deske or Table-book, Or guen my heart a winking, mute and dumbe, Or look'd upon this Loue, with idle fight, What might you thinke? I, No, I went round to worke, And (my yong Misfit) thus I did beipleare

_Lord Hamlet_ is a Prince out of thy Starre,
This muft not be: and then, I Precepts gaue her, That she should locke her selfe from his Refort, Admit no Meifengers, receive no Tokens: Which done, the twike the Fruits of my Advices, And he repuls'd. A short Tale to make,
Fall into a Sadneffe, then into a Faft,
Thence to a Watch, thence into a Weakenne,
Thence to a Lightneffe, and by this declenlion
Into the Madneffe whereon now he raves, And all we walle for.

_King._ Do you thinke 'tis this?

_Qu._ It may be very likly.

_Pol._ Hath there bene sau some fuch a time, I'de fain know that,
That I have poffiftely faid, 'tis fo,
When it prof'd otherwife?

_King._ Not that I know.

_Pol._ Take this from this; if this be otherwife,
If Circumstances leade me, I will finde
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeede
Within the Center.

_King._ How may we try it further? _Pol._ You know sometimes
He walke foure houres together, heere

In the Lobby,

_Qu._ So he ha's indeed.

_Pol._ At fuch a time Ile loofe my Daughter to him, Be you and I behinde an Arras then, Marke the encounter: If he lave her not, And be not from his reafon faine thereon; Let me be no Affiitant for a State, And keep a Farne and Carters.

_King._ We will try it.

Enter _Hamlet_ reading on a Booke.

_Qu._ But looke where fadly the poore wretch Comes reading.

_Pol._ Away I do befeech you, both away, Ile boord him prettily._

_Exit King & Queen._

Oh give me leave. How does my good Lord _Hamlet_? _Ham._ Well, God-a-mercy. _Pol._ Do you know me, my Lord?

_Ham._ Excellent, excellent well: y'are a Fishmonger._

_Pol._ Not I my Lord._

_Ham._ Then I would you were fo honeft a man. _Pol._ Honett, my Lord? _Ham._ I fir, to be honeft as this world goes, is to bee one man pick'd out of two thousand.

_Pol._ That's very true, my Lord._

_Ham._ For if the Sun breed Magots in a dead dogge, being a good kifing Carlion——

_Have you a daughter? _Pol._ I have my Lord._

_Ham._ Let her not walke I'th'Sonne: Conception is a blefing, but not as your daughter may conceiue. Friend looke too't._

_Pol._ How fay you by that? Still harping on my daugther: yet he knew me not at first; he faid I was a Fishmonger: he is farre gone, farre gone: and truly in my youth, I fuffered much extremity for loue: very neere this: He speake to him againe. What do you read my Lord? _Ham._ Words, words, words._

_Pol._ What is the matter, my Lord?

_Ham._ Betweene who? _Pol._ I mean the matter you meane, my Lord.

_Ham._ Slanders Sir: for the Satyrical flue fales here, that old men haue gray Beards; that their faces are wrinkle: their eyes purging thicke Amber, or Plum-Tree Gumme: and that they have a plentiful locke of Wit, together with weake Hammes. All which Sir, though I moft powerfully, and potently beleue: yet I holde it not Honettie to haue it thus fet downe: For you your felfe Sir, should be old as I am, if like a Crab you could go backward.

_Pol._ Though this be madneffe, Yet there is Method in't: will you walke Out of the ayre my Lord? _Ham._ Into my Graue? _Pol._ Indeed that is out o'th'Ayre:

_How pregnant (sometimes)his Replies are? A happineffe, That often Madneffe hits on, Which Reafon and Sanitive could not So shorely be deliu'r'd of.

I will leaue him, And sodainely conteinue the meanings of meeting Betweene him, and my daughter.

My Honourable Lord, I will most humbly
Take my leaue of you.
Ham. You cannot Sir take from me any thing, that I will more willingly part withall, except my life, my life.

Pol. Fare you well my Lord.

Ham. Th'ce tedious old foolus.

Pol. You go to seeke my Lord Hamlet; there hee is.

Enter Rosin-gun and Guildenstern.

Ros. God face you Sir.

Gild. Mine honour'd Lord?

Ros. My most deare Lord?

Ham. My excellent good friends! How do'th thou?

Guildenstern? Oh, Rosin-gun; good Laus: How doe ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent Children of the earth.

Gild. Happy, in that we are not ouer-happy: on Fortunes Cap, we are not the very Button.

Ham. Nor the Soales of her Shoe?

Ros. Neither my Lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waife, or in the middle of her favour?

Gild. Faith, her privates, we.

Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? Oh, most true: the is a Strumpet. What's the newes?

Ros. None my Lord; but that the World's grown worse.

Ham. Then is Doome day nearer: But your newes is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you my good friends, deferred at the hands of Fortune, that the lends you to Prifon hither?

Gild. Prifon, my Lord.

Ham. Denmark's a Prifon.

Ros. Then is the World one.

Ham. A goodly one, in which there are many Con- fines, Wars, and Dungeons; Denmark being one o' th' wort.

Ros. We thinke not so my Lord.

Ham. Why then 'tis none to you for, there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prifon.

Ros. Why then your Ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count my selfe a King of infinite space; were it not that I have bad dreams.

Gild. Which dreams indeed are Ambition: for the very substance of the Ambitious, is meerely the shadow of a Dreaome.

Ham. A dreame it selfe is but a shadow.

Ros. Truely, and I hold Ambition of so ayry and light a quality, that it is but a shadowes shadow.

Ham. Then are our Beggers bodies; and our Monarchs and out-fretch Heroes the Beggers Shadowes: shall wee to th' Court: fort, by my fey I cannot rea-

*Back. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter. I will not fort you with the rest of my fervants: so for to speake to you like an honest man: I am most dreadfully attended; but in the beaten way of friendship. What make you at Elysonmer?

Ros. To visit you my Lord, no other occasion.

Ham. Begger that I am, I am even poore in thankes; but I thanke you: and fure deare friends my thanks are too deare a halfepeeny; were you not fent for? Is it your owne inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, dealde luftly with me: come, come; nay speake.

Gild. What should we say my Lord?

Ham. Why any thing. But to the purpose; you were sent for; and there is a kinde confedion in your looke: which your modeles have not craft enough to color, I know the good King & Queene have sent for you.

Ros. To what end my Lord?

Ham. That you must teach me: but let mee conuire you by the rights of our fellowship, by the conformed of our youth, by the Obligation of our eucl-prefered love, and by what more deare, a better prosperer could charge you withall; be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no.

Ros. What say you?

Ham. Nay then I have an eye of you if you loue me hold not off.

Gild. My Lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation present your discernie of your securite to the King and Queeneinout no feather, I haste of late, but wherefore I know not, loft all my mirth, forgone all custome of exercte; and indeed, it goes so heavenly with my disposition; that this goodly frame the Earth, feemes to me a fer-

rill Promontory; this most excellent Canopy the Ayre, look you, this braue ore-hanging, this Maelicall Roofe, fretted with golden fire: why, it appears no other thing to mee, then a foule and peliuent congregation of vapours. What a piece of worke is a man! how Noble in Rea-son? how infinite in faculty? in forme and moving how expresse and admirable? in Action, how like an Angel? in apprehension, how like a God? the beauty of the world, the Pargason of Animals; and yet to me, what is this Quintellence of Dust? Man delights not me; no, nor Woman neither; though by your smiling you seeme to say fo.

Ros. My Lord, there was no such flufhe in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, when I said, Man delights not me?

Ros. To thinke, my Lord, if you delight not in Man, what Lenten entertainment the Players shall receiue from you: wee coated them on the way, and hither are they comming to offer you Service.

Ham. He that plays the King shall be welcome; his Mielesly shall haue Tribute of mee: the aduenturous Knight shal vfe his Foyle and Target: the Louer shall not fight grante, the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the Cloone shall make those laugh whole louns are tickled a'th' fere: and the Lady shall fay her mind free: or the blanke Verse shall halt fore: what Players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in the Tragedians of the City.

Ham. How chances it they trauaile? their residence both in reputation and profitt was better both ways.

Ros. I thinke their Inhibition comes by the means of the late Innovation?

Ham. Do they hold the fame estimation they did when I was in the City? Are they so follow'd?

Ros. No indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? doe they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their indeauour keeps in the woned place; But there is Sir an ayrie of Children, little Yales, that cry out on the top of question; and are most tyrannically clipt fore: there are now the i:hi-
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

The which he loued paffing well.
Pol. Still on my Daughter.
Ham. Am I not Thirftie old Iphbo?
Pol. If you call me Iphbo my Lord, I haue a daughter that I loue paffing well.
Ham. Nay that followes not.
Pol. What followes then, my Lord?
Ham. Why, As by Iot, God wot: and then you know, It came to paff, as mod like it was: The first rowe of the Pons Chafanion will shew you more. For looke where my Abridgements come.

Enter fure or fute Players.
Y'are welcome Masters, welcome all. I am glad to fee thee well: Welcome good Friends. O my ole Friend? Thy face is valiant since I faw thee laft: Com'th thou to bearde me in Denmarke? What, my yong Lady and Miftis? Bylady your Ladyship is nearer Hauen then when I faw you laft, by the altitude of a Choppine. Pray God your voice like a peac. of vnconceivable Gold be not crack'd within the ring. Masters, you are all welcomeweel'ne to't like French Faulconers, fie at any thing we feet we'll have a Speech fraught. Come giue vs a taft of your quality: come, a passionate speech.

1. Play. What speech, my Lord?
Ham. I haue not fpeak me a speech once, but it was neuer Afded: or if it was, not aboue once, for the Play I remember pleasd not the Million, 'twas Cauaric to the Generall: but it was (as I receu'd it, and others, whole judgement in fuch matters, cried in the top of mine) an excellent Play; well digested in the Scenes, fet downe with as much moderate, as cunning. I remember one faid, there was no Sallets in the lines, to make the matter fauoury; nor no matter in the phrafe, that might indite the Author of affectionation, but cal'd it an honest method. One cheere Speech in it, I cheerefully loud, 'twas Seene Tale to Dido, and thereabout of it especially, where he fpeaks of Priams flaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this Line, let me fee, let me fee: The rugged Pyrrhus like th'Hyrcanian Beat. It is not fo it begins with Pyrrhus.
The rugged Pyrrhus, he where Sable Armes Blacke as his purpoe, did the night refemble When he lay couched in the Ominous Horfes, Hath now this dread and blacke Complexion fmeard With Heroidry more difmal: Head to foote Now is he to take Geules, horribly Trick'd With blood of Fathers, Mothers, Daughters, Sonnes, Baked' and impafi'd with the parching frofts, That lend a tyrannous, and dammed light To their vile Murthers, roaffd in wrath and fire, And thus o're-fiz'd with coagulate gore, VWith eyes like Carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old Grandifie Priam fleeks.
Pol. Fore God,my Lord, well fpoken, with good accent, and good difcretion.

1. Player. Anon he finds him,
Striking too fhort at Grecnes. His attache Sword, Rebellious to his Arme, where it falles Repugnant to command: unequall match, Pyrrhus at Priam drivius, in Rage strikes wide: But with the whife and windes of his fell Sword, Th'vnnered Father falts. Then fenefalefle illum, Seeming to feele his blow, with flaming top Stoopes to his Bace, and with a hideous crush Takes prifoner Pyrrhus eare. For loe, his Sword Which was declining on the Milkie head Of Reuerend Priam, feem'd I'th'Ayre to flieke:

733
So as a painted Tyrant Pyrrhus flood,
And like a Newtrall to his will and matter, did nothing.
But as we often see against some formes,
A silence in the Heauens, the Racks & flamplull,
The bold windes speechleffe, and the Orbe below
As hush as death : Anon the dreadful Thunder
Doth rend the Region. So after Pyrrhus paufe,
A royled Vengeance fets him new a-works,
And neuer did the Cyclops hammers fall.
On Mars his Armours, forg'd for proofe Eterne,
With leftes remotre then Pyrrhus bleeding sword
Now falles on Proiam.
Out, out, thou Strumpet-Fortune, all you Gods,
In general Synod take away her power :-
Braoke all the Spakes and Fallies from her wheele,
And boole the round Naue downe the hill of Heauen,
As low as to the Fiends.

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. I shall to'th Barbars, with your beard. Pri-they say on: He's for a ligge, or a tale of Baudry, or hee feepes. Say on; come to Hecuba.
1 Play. But who, O who, had seen the inobled Queen.

Ham. The inobled Queene?

Pol. That's good: Inobled Queene is good.

1 Play. Run bare-foot vp and downe,
Threatning the flame
With Biffon Rheeume: A clout about that head,
Where late the Diadem flood, and for a Robe
About her lanke and all ore-temed Loines,
A blanket in th'Alarum of feare caught vp.
Who this had feene, with tongue in Vencome feep'd,
'Gainft Fortunes State, would Treascon pronounce?
But if the Gods themselues did fee her then,
When the faw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mining with his Sword her Husbands limbes,
The infant Burft of Glamour that she made
(Vulnere things mortall moue them not at all)
Wou'd have made milche the Burning eyes of Heauen,
And fation in the Gods.

Pol. Looke where he ha's not turn'd his colour, and ha's teares in'ye eyes. Pray you no more.

Ham. Til well, Ie haue thefe speake out the reft, foone. Good my Lord, will you feee the Players well brow'd. Do ye hear, let them be well v'd: for they are the Abbreftes and breefe Chronicles of the time.
After your death, you were better have a bad Epitaph, then their ill report while you liued.

Pol. My Lord, I will vfe them according to their de-fart.

Ham. Gods bodlykes man, better. Vfe eucrie man after his defart, and who should scape whipping: vfe them after your own Honor and Dignity. The lefte they deferve, the more merit is in your bountie. Take them in.

Pol. Come fir.

Ham. Follow him Friends:we'll hear a play to morrow. Doft thou heare me old Friend, can you play the murther of Gironage?

Play. I my Lord.

Ham. We'll ha't to morrow night. You could for a need study a speech of some dofen or sixtene lines, which I would set downe, and infrert in't? Could ye not?

Play. I my Lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that Lord, and looke you mock him not. My good Friends, Ie leave you til night you are welcome to Elopenhower.

Rofin. Good my Lord.

Mant. Hamlet.

Ham. I fo, God buy ye: Now I am alone.
Oh what a Rogue and Pefant fay am I?
Is it not monftrous that this Player heere,
But in a Fixion, in a dreame of Paffion,
Could force his foule fo to his whole conceit,
That from her working, all his vifage warm'd;
Teares in his eyes, defraction in's fected,
A broken voicke, and his whole Puffion fuiting
With Formes, to his Conceit? And all for nothing?
For Hecuba?

What's Hecuba to him,or he to Hecuba,
That he should wepe for her? What would he doe,
Had he the Mothe and the Cue fo fuchion
That I have? He would drown the Stage with teares,
And cleue the general ear with horrid speech:
Make mad the guilty, and apale the free,
Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed,
The very facul of Eyes and Eares. Yet I,
A dull and muddely-melted Raphael, peake
Like John a-dreames, vnpregnant of my caufe,
And can fay nothing: No, not for a King,
Vpon whole property, and moft deere life,
A damnd defeate was made. Am I a Cauord?
Who calleth me Villaine? breaks my pate a-croffe?
Pluckes off my Beard, and blowes it in my face?
Twekes me by'th'Nofe? giveth me the Lye I'th'Trourte,
As deepe as to the Lungs? Who does this me?
Ha! Why I should take it: for it cannot be,
But I am Pigeon-Liuer'd, and lacke Gall
To make opprefion bitter, or eee this,
I should have fatted all the Region Kites
With this Slaurs Offall, bloodly: a Bawdy villaine,
Remorfeleffe, Treacherous, Letercherous, kindles villaine!
Oh Vengeance!

Who? What an Affe am I? I fure, this is moft brave,
That I, the Sonne of the Deere murthered,
Prompted to my Revenge by Heauen, and Hell,
Muff (like a Whoare) vpmake my heart with words,
And fill a Curling like a very Draught,
A Scullion? Eye vpon't: Foh. About my Braine,
I haue heard, that guilty Creatures sittting at a Play,
Haue by the very cunning of the Scene,
Bene strooke fo to the foule, that prefently
They haue proclaim'd their Malefictions.
For Murther, though it haue no tongue, will fpeak
With mouth of maraculous Organ. Ie haue thefe Players,
Play fomthing like the murder of my Father,
Before mine Vnkele. Ie obfervs his lookes,
Ie tent him to the quicke: If he but brench
I know my courfe. The Spirit that I haue feene
May be the Druell, and the Druel bath power
Taffume a feeding flape, yea and perhapps
Out of my Weakneffe, and my Melancholly,
As he is very potente with fuch Spirits,
Abuses me to damne me. Ie haue grounds
More Relatian then this: The Play's the thing
Wherein Ie catch the Confience of the King.

Enter King, Queene, Polonius, Ophelia, Re-simaries, Guildenfier, and Lords.

King. And can yon by no drift of circumftance
Get from him why he puts on this Confusion:
Grating fo hardly all his dyues of quiet

With

754
With turbulent and dangerous Lunacy.

They. They do confess he feeleth himselfe distracted, but from what caufe he will by no means speake.

Gui. Nor do we finde him forward to be founded, but with a crafty Maffine keeps aloofe:

When we would bring him on to some Confession

Of his true state.

Qu. Did he receiue you well?

Rof. Most like a Gentleman.

Gui. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Rof. Niggard of question, but of our demands

Most free in his reply.

Qu. Did you affay him to any paletime?

Rof. Madam, it fo fell out, that certaine Players

We are-wrought on the way: of these we told him,

And there did freame in him a kinde of joy

To hear of it: They are about the Court,

And (as I thinkes) they have already order

This night to play before him.

Pul. 'Tis most true:

And he before did me to intreate your Maiesties

To heare, and see the matter.

King. With all my heart, and it doth much content me

To hear him so inclin'd. Good Gentleman,

Glue him a further edge, and drive his purpose on

To their delights.

Rof. We shall my Lord.

Exc. quit.

King. Sweet Gertrude leaue vs too,

For we have cloesly lent for Hamlet bither,

That he, as'twere by accident, may there

Affront Ophelia. Her Father and my selfe(lawfull ephaias)

Will fo bewow our felues, that seeing vnseene

We may of their encounter frankly judge,

And gather by him, as he is behaued,

Ift be chaffication of his loue, or no.

That thus he sufferes for!

Qu. I shall obey you,

And for your part Ophelia, I do with

That your good Beauties be the happy caufe

Of Hamlets wildenesse: so shall I hope your Vertues

Will bring him to his wonted way againe,

To both your Honours.

Oph. Madam, I with it may.

Pul. Ophelia, walke you heere. Gracious fo please ye

We will betrow our selues: Reade on this booke,

That shew of such an exercice may colour

Your loneliness. We are oft too blame in this,

"It was much more proud, that with Desotions village,

And pious Action, we do purge ore

The disuell himselfe.

King. Oh 'tis true:

How smart a lash that speech doth give my Confidence?

The Harlots Cheeke beautified with plaitting Art

Is not more vly to the thing that helps it,

Then is my decency, to my most painted word.

Oh heauie burthen!

Pul. I heare him comming, let's withdraw my Lord.

Exc. quit.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the Quelion?

Whether 'ts Nobler in the minde to suffer

The Slings and Arrows of outrageous Fortune, Or to take Arms against a Sea of troubles, And by opposing end them: to die, to sleepe No more; and by a sleepe, to lay we end

The Heart-ake, and the thousand Naturall shocks

That Flesh is heyre too? 'Tis a confummatation

Deco'utly to be with'd. To dye to sleepe,

To sleepe, per chance to Dream; I, there's the rub,

For in that sleepe of death, what dreams may come,

When we have thoffled'd off this mortal coil,

Muft sleepe vs pawfe. There's the respect

That makes Calamity of so long life:

For who would heare the Whips and Scornes of time,

The Oppreffors wrong, the poor mans Contumely,

The pangs of diuife'd Lone, the Laues delay,

The inffolence of Office, and the Spurres

That patient merit of the vnworthy takes,

When he himselfe might his Quietus make

With a bare Bodkin? Who would thefe Fardles beare

To grunt and sweat under a weary life,

But that the dread of something after death,

The vndivifed Country, from whose Borne

No Trueler returns, Purzels the will,

And makes vs rather beare those illes we haue,

Then flye to others that we know not of.

Thus Confidence does make Cowards of us all,

And thus the Nature hew of Resolution

Is fickled o're, with the pale cafe of Thought,

And enterprizes of great pith and moment,

With this regard their Currents turne away,

And looke the name of Action. Soft you now,

The faire Ophelia? Nymph, in thy Orions

Be all my finnes remembred.

Oph. Good my Lord,

How does your Honor for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you: well, well, well.

Oph. My Lord, I haue Remembrances of yours,

That I have longed long to re-deliver.

I pray you now, receive them.

Ham. No, no, I never gave you ought.

Oph. My honor'd Lord, I know right well you did,

And with them words of fo sweet breath compoud'd,

As made the things more rich, then perfume left:

Take these againe, for to the Noble minde

Rich gifts wax poore, when givers prove vnkinde.

There my Lord.

Ham. Ha, ha: Are you honest?

Oph. My Lord.

Ham. Are you faire?

Oph. What means your Lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest and faire, your Honesty should admit no discourse to your Beautie.

Oph. Could these my Lord, have better Comerce

then your Honettie?

Ham. I trullie: for the power of Beautie, will sooner transforme Honettie from what it is, to a Bawd, then the force of Honettie can translate Beautie into his likenesse.

This was sometime a Paradox, but now the time gives it proofe. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed my Lord, you made me beleue fo.

Ham. You should not have beleued me. For vertue cannot fo innoculate our old stocke, but we fally relish of it. I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a Nunnerie. Why would't thou be a breeder of Sinners? I am my selfe indifferent honett, but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were bette

my Mother had not borne me. I am very proud, revengeful, Ambitious, with more offences at my brecke, then I have thoughts to put them in imagination, to give them shape, or time to acte them in. What should fuch

Fel-
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Fellows as I do, crawling betwixt Heaven and Earth.
We are arrant Knaves all, beleune none of vs.
Goe thy ways to a Nunnery.
Where's your Father?

Ophe. At home, my Lord.

Ham. Let the doores be shut vpon him, that he may play the Fool no way, but in owne house.

Ophe. O help him, you sweet Heauens
Ham. If thou donst Marry, I lye geue thee this Plague for thy Dowrie. Be thou as chaste as Ice, as pure as Snow, thou fhalt not escape Calumny.

Get thee to a Nunnery. Go, Farewell.

Ophe. Or if thou wilt needs Marry, marry a fool:
for Wife men know well enough, what monstren you
To a Nunnery go, and quickly too. Fare well.

Ophe. O heavenly Powers, restore him.
Ham. I have heard of your pratlings too well enough.
Gods have given you one peace, and you make your felic another. I allay'd vomit, yonder, I do not like life, and nickname
Gods creatures, and make your Wantonneffe, your Ignorance.
Go too, Ile no more on't, it hath made me mad.
I fay, we have no more Marriages. Tho'te that are married already, all but one shall flue, the ref flue keep as they are. To a Nunnery go.

Ophe. O what a Noble minde is heere o're-throwne?
The Courtiers, Soldiers, Schollers: Eye, tongue, fword,
Th'expel fantie and Rofe of the faire State,
The glaffe of Fashion, and the mould of Forme,
Th'obfer'd of all Obferuers, quite,quite downe.
Hauie I of Ladies mol'd deified and wretched,
That fuch't the Homie of his Mus trickle Voves:
Now fee that Noble, and moft Soueraine Reafon,
Like fweet Belsiang outanged of tune, and harfs,
That vnmatch'd Forme and Feature of blome youth,
Blaited with extrafe. Oh woe is me,
Thafe feene what I have feene: fee what I fee.

Enter King, and Polonius.

King. Loue? His affections do not that way tend,
Nor what he fpake, though it lack'd Forme a little,
Was not like Madneffe. There's fomething in his foule:
O're which his Melanchollie fits on brood,
And I do doubt the hatch, and the difclore
Will be fome danger, which to prevent
I hace in quickc determination.
Thus to his home. He fhall with speed to England
For the demand of our neglected Tribute:
Haply the Seas and Countries different
With variable Obiects, shall expell
This fomething fetted matter in his heart:
W'hen on his Brawnes flill burning, put him thus
From fashion of himfelf. What think you on't?

Pet. It fhall do well. But yet do I belieue
The Origin and Commencement of this greene
Sprung from neglepeted loue. How now Ophe? You
Need not tell vs, what Lord Hamlet lode,
We heard it all. My Lord, do you pleafe,
But if you hold it firft after the Play,
Let his Queene Mother all alone intreat him
To fhew his Grecfe: let her be rounded with him,
And I he pleace'd fo, pleasfe you in the care
Of all their Conference. If he finde him not,
To England fend him: Or confine him where
Your wifedom beft bllt thinkke.

King. It fhall be fo:
Madneffe in great Ones, muft not vnwatch'd go.

Exeunt.
To feed & cloath thee. Why should the poor be flatter'd? No, let the Candled tongue, like aburd pompe, And crooke the pregnant Hindges of the knee, Where thurf may follow failing? Doo thou hearre, Since my deere Soule was Mithris of my choyce, And cou'd of men diufpight, her election Hath feal'd thee for her felte. For thou haft bene As one in suffering all, that suffers nothing, A man that Fortunes buffetts, and Rewards Hath 'taine with equal Thankes. And bief are those, Whole Blood and Judgement are fo well co-mingled, That they are not a Pipe for Fortunes finger, To found what flip the pleafes. Give me that man, That is not Paffions Slave, and I will weare him In my hearts Core: I, in my Heart of heart, As I do thee. Something too much of this.

There is a Play to night before the King, One Scene of it comes neere the Circumstance Which I have told thee, of my Fathers death, I prythee, when thou feel'st that Aete a-foot, Even with the varie Comment of my Soule Odberne mine Yakke: If his occulted guilt, Do not it felte vnkennell in one speech, It is a damned Ghoft that we have feene: And my Imaginations are as foule As Vulcans Stythe. Gue him needfull note, For I mine eyes will riuete to his Face: And after we will both our judgements joyn, To cenure of his feeming.

Hor. Well my Lord, If he feale ought the whil'mt this Play is Playing, And lape deteting, I will pay the Theft.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrance, Guidenfrenr, and othor Lords attendant, with bis Guard carrying Torches. Danjib March. Sound a Flourish.

Ham. They are comming to the Play: I must be idle. Get you a place.

King. How fares our Cofan Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent Haft, of the Camelions dith: I este the Ayre promiffe-crammed, you cannot feed Capons fo. King. I have nothing with this anwser Hamlet, these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine. Now my Lord, you plaid once I t'h'Vnuerift, you say? Polon. That I did my Lord, and was accounted a good Actor.

Ham. And what did you enaet? Pol. I did enaet Iras Coler, I was kill'd? t'h' Capitol: Brutus kill'd me.

Ham. Do you thinke I meant Country matters? Oph. I thinke nothing, my Lord. Ham. That's a faire thought to ly between Maids legs Oph. What is my Lord?

Ham. Oh God, your onely rigge-makers what should a man do, but he merrie. For looke you how cheerfully my Mother lookes, and my Father dyed within's two Hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two moneths, my Lord. Ham. So long? Nay then let the Duet weary blackes, for Ile have a suit of Sibles. Oh Helens dye two moneths ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great mans Memorie, may out-lie his life halfe a yere: but byladye he must bulde Churches then: or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the Hob-y-horse, whose Epitaph is, For 0, 0, the Hob-y-horse is forgot.

Hoboyes play. The dumbes play enter.

Enter a King and Queens, very beauteely, the Queens embrac- ing him. She kneels, and makes flow of Prostatation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck. Lays him downe vpon a Bank of Flowers. She facing him a-flote, leaves him. Ann comes in a Fellow, takes off his Crowne, kisses it, and poweres peyon in the Kings ears, and Exits. The Queen returns, finds the King dead, and makes passionate Action. The Popeyne, with some two or three Males comes in againes, feeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away: The Popeyne Wears the Queens with Gifts, she seems loath and unwilling ambile, but in the end, accepts his love.

Exeunt

Oph. What means this, my Lord? Ham. Marry this is Misching Malicho, that means Mischeefe.

Oph. Belike this shew imports the Argument of the Play?

Ham. We shall know by these Fellowes: the Players cannot keepe counsell, they'll tell all.

Oph. Will they tell vs what this shew meant? Ham. I, or any shew that you'll shew him. Bee not you ahumd't to shew, he'll not thame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught, Ile marke the Play.

Enter Prologue. For vs, and for our Tragedie: Here shewing to your Clementie: We beghe your hearing Pervincente.

Ham. Is this a Prologue, or the Poete of a Ring? Oph. 'Tis briefe my Lord.

Ham. As Womans loue.

Enter King and his Queens. King. Full thirtie times hath Phbucus Cart gon round, Nephtes falt Waif, and Tellus Orbed ground: And thirtie dozen Moones with borrowed theene, About the World have times twelve thirties beene, Since loue our hearts, and Hymen did our hands Wile comutual, in most sacred Bandes. Tipt, So many journeys may the Sunne and Moone Make vs againe count o're, ere loue be done. But woe is me, you are so fickle of late, So farre from cheere, and from your forme flate, That I disfriuf te you: yet though I disfriuf, Discomfort you (my Lord) It nothing muft: For womens Feare and Loue, holds quantitle, In
In neither ought, or in extremity:
Now what my love is, prove hath made you know,
And as my Loue is fird, my Fear is fo.

King. Faith I must leave thee Loue, and shortly too:
My operant Powers my Functions leaue to do:
And thou shalt live in this faire world behinde,
Honour'd, belon'd, and happy, one as kinde.
For Husband shalt thou—

Bap. Oh confound the rest:
Such Loue, mult needs be Treason in my brest:
In second Husband, let me be accurst,
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. Wormwood, Wormwood.
Bap. The Infrances that second Marriage moue,
Are base refpects of Thrift, but none of Loue.
A second time, I kill my Husband dead,
Who second Husband kifft me in Bed.

King. I do beleue you. Think what now you speake:
But what we do determine, oft we breake:
Purpose is but the flauce to Memorie,
Of violent Birth, but poore validity:
Which now like Fruitre vnripe flickes on the Tree,
But fall vnhaften, when they mellow bee.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget
To pay our felves, what to our felves is debt:
What to our felves in passion we propofe,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lofe.
The violence of other Greefe or Joy,
Their owne ennemors with themfelves defroy:
Where Joy moft Reuels, Greefe doth moft lament;
Greefe loyes, Joy greeues on flender accident.
This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange
That eu'n our Loues should with our Fortunes change.
For 'tis a queftion left vs yet to prove,
Whether Loue lead Fortune, or else Fortune Loue.
The great man downe, you marke his favourites flies,
The poore advanc'd, makes Friends of Enemies:
And hitherto doth Loue on Fortune tend,
For who not needs, shall neuer lacke a Friend:
And who in want a hollow Friend doth try,
Direcly feafts him his Enemy,
But orderly to end, where I begun,
Our Willes and Fates do fo contrary run,
That our Deuices fill are overthrowne,
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our owne.
So thinke thou wilt no fcond Husband wed.
But die thy thoughts, when thy firt Lord is dead.

Bap. Nor Earth to give me food, nor Heauen light,
Sport and repofe locke from me day and night:
Each oppofite that blankes the face of Joy,
Meet what I would haue well, and it defroy:
Both here, and hence, perfue me lafting ftrife,
If once a Widdow, euer I be Wife.

Ham. If thef should brake it now.

King. 'Ts deeply fave you
Sweet, leave me here a while,
My spirits grow dull, and faine I would beguile
The tedious day with fleep.

Qu. Sleepe rocke thy Braine,

And never come midwife betweene vs twaine.

Ham. Madam, how like you this Play?

Qu. The Lady protest to much me thinke.

Ham. Oh but fieue'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the Argument, is there no Offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but left, poftyon in left, no Offence i'th'world.

King. What do you call the Play?

Ham. The Moufe-trap: Marry how? Tropically:
This Play is the Image of a murd're done in Vienna: Gen-age is the Dukes name, his wife Baptifta: you shall fee anon: 'tis a knauish piece of worke: But what o'that?
Your Maeftrice, and wee that have free foules, it touches vs not: let the gall'd iade whch our withers are vnrgun.

Enter Lucianna.

This is one Lucianna nephew to the King.

Opé. You are a good Chorus, my Lord.

Ham. I could interpret betweene you and your Loue:
if I could fee the Puppets dallying.

Opé. You are keene my Lord, you are keene.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Opé. Still better and wors.

Ham. So you miftake Husband.

Begin Murderer. Pox, leafe thy damnable Faces, and begin.
Come, the croaking Rauen doth bellow for Revenge.

Lucian. Thoughts blanke, hands apt,
Drugges fit, and Time agreeing:
Confederate fefon, elfe, no Creature feeing:
Thou mixture ranke, of Midnight Weeds collected,
With Hecats Ban, thriue blatted, thriue infected,
Thy naturall Magicke, and dire property,
On whomlife of, vfarpe immediately.

Pompe the pofton in his cares.

Ham. He poynson him i'th'Garden for's eftate: His name's Genage: the Story is extant and writ in choype Italian. You shal fee anon how the Murtherer gets the loue of Genage's wife.

Opé. The King rifes.

Ham. What, frighted with falle fire.

Qu. How fares my Lord?

Pol. Glue o're the Play.

King. Glue me some Light. A way.

All. Lights, Lights, Lights.

Ham. Why let the strucken Deere go wepe,
The Hart vngalled play:
For some muit watch, while some muit fleep;
So runnes the world away.
Would not this Sir, and a Forrest of Feathers, if the reft of my Fortunes turne Turke with me; with two Prouinciall Rifes on my rac'd Shooses, get me a Fellowship in a crie of Players fir.

Her. Halfe a share.

Ham. A whole one I.

For thou doft know: Oh Donan deere,
This Realme dimantted was of Loue himfelfe,
And now reignes here.

A vere vere Paleoke.

Her. You might haue Rim'd.

Ham. Oh good Horatius, Ile take the Ghosts word for a thousand pound. Did'tt perceiue?

Her. Verie well my Lord.

Ham. Vpon the talk of the poftyon?

Her. I did verie well note him.

Ham. Enter Reuerence and Guildenfenne.

Ham. Oh, ha? Come fome Multick. Come I Recorderes:
For if the King like not the Comedie,
Why then belike he fikes it not perdie.
Come fome Multick.

Guld. Good my Lord, vouche safe me a word with you.

Ham.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ham. Sir, a whole History.

GUILD. The King, Sir.

Ham. Sir, what of him?

GUILD. Is in his retirement, marvellous discompos'd.

Ham. With drinke Sir?

GUILD. No my Lord, rather with choller.

Ham. Your wisedome should shew it felt more richer, to dignifie this to his Doctor; for for me to put him to his Purgation, would perhaps plunge him into farre more Choller.

GUILD. Good my Lord put your discours into some frame, and start not so widly from my affayre.

Ham. I am tame Sir, pronounce.

GUILD. The Queene your Mother, in most great affiliation of spirits, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

GUILD. Nay, good my Lord, this courtsey is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will doe your Mothers command'ment: if not, your pardon, and my returne shall bee the end of my Buonefte.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

GUILD. What, my Lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer: my wits disjoint.

GUILD. But, Sir, such answers as I can make, you shall command or rather you fay, my Mother: therefore no more but to the matter. My Mother you fay.

ROYIN. Then thus she fayes: your behavior hath stroke her into amazement, and admiration.

Ham. Oh wonderfull Sonne, that can so affonish a Mother. But is there no fquell at the heales of this Mothers admiration?

ROYIN. She defires to speake with you in her Clofett, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were the ten times our Mother.

Have you any further Trade with vs?

ROYIN. My Lord, you once did love me.

Ham. So I do still, by thefe pickers and fealers.

ROYIN. Good my Lord, what is your caufe of diftemper? You do freely barre the door of your owne Liberti, if you deny your grees to your Friend.

Ham. Sir I lacke Advancement.

ROYIN. How can that be, when you haue the voyage of the King himselfe, for your Sucception in Denmarke?

Ham. I, but while the grave growes, the Proverbe is something muty.

Enter one with a Recorder.

O the Recorder. Let me fee, to withdraw with you, why do you go about to recover the winde of me, as if you would drive me into a toyle?

GUILD. O my Lord, if my Duke be too bold, my lose is too vnnatural.

Ham. I do not well understan that. Will you play upon this Pipe?

GUILD. My Lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

GUILD. Beleeue me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beleeue you.

GUILD. I know no touch of it, my Lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easie as lyning: governe thefe Vntights with your finger and thumbe, glue it breath with your mouth, and it will discouer most excellent Musick.

Looke you, these are the stopes.

GUILD. But these cannot I command to any vterance of harmony, I have not the skill.

Ham. Why looke you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me: you would play vpon me; you would seeme to know my flops: you would pluck out the heart of my Mysterie; you would find mee from my lowest Nooto, to the top of my Compasse and there is much Musick, excellent voice, in this little Organe, yet cannot you make it. Why do you thinke, that I am easer to bee plaid on, then a Pipe? Call me what Instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play vpon me. God bleffe you Sir.

Enter Polonius.

POLONIUS. My Lord; the Queene would speake with you, and prefently.

Ham. Do you see that Clowd? that's almost in shape like a Camell.

POLONIUS. By'th'Miffes, and it's like a Camell indeed.

Ham. Me thinkes it is like a Weasell.

POLONIUS. It is back'd like a Weasell.

Ham. Or like a Whale?

POLONIUS. Verie like a Whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my Mother, by and by: They foole me to the top of my bent.

I will come by and by.

POLON. I will say fo. Exit.

Ham. By and by, is eaily fai'd. Leave me Friends: 'Tis now the vertue witching time of night, When Churchyards yawn, and Hell it felde breathes out Contagion to this world. Now could I drink hot blood, And do such bitter buonefte as the day Would quake to looke on. Soft now, to my Mother: Oh Heart, looke not thy Nature; let not euuer The Soule of Nere, enter this firme bonde: Let me be cruel, not vnnatuall, I will speake Daggers to her, but vs none:

My Tongue and Soule in this be Hypocrizes. How in my words formeuere he be fent, To glue them Scales, neuer my Soule contend.

Enter King, ROYIN, and GUILDENSTERN.

KING. I like him not, nor flands it fafe with vs, To let his madnesse range. Therefore prepare you, I your Commiffion will forth with dispatch, And he to England shall along with you: The termes of our ceafe, may not endure Hazard fo dangerous as doth hourley grow Out of his Luminous.

GUILD. We will our fules provide: Most holie and Religious feare it is To keepe thofe many many bodies fafe That lye and feeke vpon your Maieftie.

ROYIN. The fingle

And peculier life is bound
With all the strengt and Armour of the minde,
To keepe it fale from noyance: but much more, That Spirit, vpon whole fpirit depends and refts
The lives of many, the ceafe of Maieftie
Dies not alone: but like a Guife doth draw
What's neere it, with it. It is a maffe wheel.
Fixt on the Sommet of the higheft Mount,
To whose huge Spokes, ten thousand lffe for things
Are mortis'd and adioyn'd: which when it falles,
Each small annexement, petty confeguence
Attends the boybour Ruine. Neuer alone
Did the King fliege, but with a general grone.

KING. Arme you, I pray you to this speedie Voyage; For we will Fetters put vpon this fears,
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Which now goes too free-footed.

Botb. We will haste vs.

Exit Polonius.

Pol. My Lord, he's going to his Mothers Closet:
Below the Arras Ile conuey my felle
To hear the Proceffe. Ile warrant thee'll tax him home,
And as you faid, and wisely was it faid,
'Tis meeete that some more audience then a Mother,
Since Nature makes them partiall, should o're-heare
The speech of vantoge. Fare you well my Liege,
Ile call vpoun you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know.

Kings. Thankes deere my Lord,
Oh my offence is rankes, it fmelis to heauen,
It hath the primall elder cutt vpoun't,
A Brothers murther. Pray can I not,
This inclination be my lord,
My stronger guilt, defeats my ftrong intent,
And like a man to double buineffe bound,
I f tand in Paige where I fhall firft begin,
And both neglect ; what if this curfed hand
Were once their glift, then it fell with lefs free blood,
Is there not Raine enough in the sweet Heauens
To wash it white as Snowe? Wereto feres mercy,
But to confront the vifage of Offence?
And what's in Prayer, but this two-fold force,
To be fore-falied ere we come to fall, Or pardon'd being downe? Then Ile looke vp,
My fault is paff, But oh, what formes of Prayer
Can ferue my turne? Forgifie me my foul Murther:
That cannot be, fince I am still poufed
Of thofe effe$$ for which I did the Murther.
My Crowne, mine owne Ambition, and my Queene:
May one be pardon'd, and retaine th'offence?
In the corrupted currants of this world,
Offences gilded hand may thieve by Justice,
And oft'tis feene, the wicked prize it felle
Buyes out the Law; but 'tis not fo above,
There is no fludding, there the Afoil leyed
In his true Nature, and we ouer feules compell'd
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To glue in evidence. What then? What refts?
Try what Repentance can. What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent?
Oh wretched fate! Oh boforme, blace as death!
Oh limed foule, that flufing to be free,
Art more ingag'd: Helpe Angels, make affay:
Bow ribborne knees, and heart with fringes of Steele,
Be loft as finewes of the new-born Babe,
All may be well.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now he is praying,
And now lie doot, and fo he goes to Heauen,
And fo am I reueng'd: that would be feam'd,
A Villaine kills my Father, and for that
I his foule Sonne, do this fame Villaine fend
To heauen. Oh this is hyre and Sallery, not Reuenge.
He tooke his Father groffely, full of bread,
With all his Crimes broad blowne, as fresh as May,
And how his Audite bands, who knowes, face Heauen:
But in our circumstance and course of thought
'Tis hezie with him: and am I then reueng'd,
To take him in the purging of his Soule,
When he is fit and fation'd for his pilaffe? No.
Vp Sword, and know thou a more horrid bent
When he is drunke alleepe: or in his Rage,
Or in ch'incendius pleasure of his bed,
At gaming, fweating, or about some alete
That he's no reliu of Saluation in't,
Then trip him, that his heeleys may kicke at Heauen,
And that his Soule may be as damn'd and blacke
As Hell, whereeto it goes. My Mother stayes,
This Phyfick but prolongs thy fickly dayes.

Kings. My words flye vp, my thoughts remain below,
Words without thoughts, never to Heauen go.

Exit.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come ftraight:
Looke you lay home to him,
Tell him his prankees have been too broad to beare with,
And that your Grace hath fere't, and ftoode betweene
Much heat betweene him. Ile firft meete e're heere
Pray you be round with him.

Ham. Now Mother, what's the matter?

Qu. Hamlet, thou haft thy Father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my Father much offended.

Qu. Come, come, you anfwier with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you queftion with an idle tongue.

Qu. Why now Hamlet?

Ham. What's the matter now?

Qu. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No by the Roof, not fo:
You are the Queene, your Husbands Brothers wife,
But would you were not fo. You are my Mother.

Qu. Nay, then Ile fet thro' you to that you can speake.

Ham. Come, come, and fit you downe, you shall not budge:
You go not till I fet you vp a glaffe,
Where may you fee the Inmoft part of you?

Qu. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murther me?

Help, helpe, hoa.

Pol. What hoa, helpe, helpe, helpe.

Ham. How now, a Rat? dead for a Ducate, dead.

Pol. Oh I am faine.

Qu. Oh me, what haft thou done?

Ham. Nay I know not, is it the King?

Qu. Oh what a rath, and bloody deed is this?

Ham. A bloody deed, almoft as bad good Mother,
As kill a King, and marrie with his Brother.

Qu. As kill a King?

Ham. I Lady, 'twas my word.

Thou wretched, rath, intruding foofe farewell,
I tooke thee for thy Betters, take thy Fortune,
Thou find'lt to be too buifie, is some danger.
Leave wringing of your hands, peace, if you downe,
And let me weare your heart, for I shall
If it be made of penetrable fuffs;
If damned Custome have not braiz'd it fo,
That it is proffe and bulwark againef Senfe.

Qu. What have I done, that thou dar'ft wag thy tong,
In noife to rude againef Hamlet?

Ham. Such an Act
That bruises the grace and blouf of Modefie,
Cals Vertue Hypocrife, takes off the Rofe
From the faire forehead of an innocent love,
And makes a blifer there. Makes marriage vowes
As faile as Biers Oatthes. Oh such a deed,
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

As from the body of Contradiction pluckes
The very soule, and sweete Religion makes
A rapitie of words. Haueans face doth glow,
Yet, this folidity and compound maffe,
With trifflill visage as against the doome,
Is thought-ticke at the ad.

Qy. Aye me; what ad, that roares so loud, & thunders in the Index.

Ham. Looke here upon this Picture, and on this,
The counterfeitt pretentment of two Brothers:
See what a grace was feated on his Brow,
Hyperions curles, the front of Loue himselfe,
An eye like Mars, to threaten or command
A Station, like the Herald Mercure.
New lighted on a heauen-kindling hill:
A Combination, and a forme indeed,
Where every God did seeme to fit his Seale,
To give the world assurance of a man.
This was your Husband. Looke you now what follows.
Here is your Husband, like a Mildew’d care
Blasphemos his whole breath. Have you eyes?
Could you on this faire Mountain ease to feed,
And batten on this Moore? Ha? Have you eyes?
You cannot call it Loue: For at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it’s humble,
And waies upon the Judgement: and what Judgement
Would flip from this, to this? What diuell was’t,
That thus hath confeyd you to hoouman-bline?
O Shame! where is thy Bluff? Rebellious Hell,
If thou canst mutine in a Matrons bones,
To flaming youth, let Vertue be as waxe,
And melt in her owne fire. Proclamation no flame,
When the compulscue Ardure gues the charge,
Soone Froft it felle, as euelly doth burne,
As Reaon panders Will.

Qy. O Hamlet, speake no more.

Thou turn’t mine eyes into my very foule,
And there I fsee fuch blacke and grained spots,
As will not leave their Tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to liue
In the ranke fweet of an enledme bed,
Slew’d in Corruption; honying and making loue
Ouer the naddy Styre.

Qy. Oh speake to me, no more,
These words like Daggers enter in mine eares.
No more sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A Murderer, and a Villaine:
A Slaine, that is not twentie paff the tythe
Of your precedent Lord. A vice of Kings,
A Cutpurer of the Empire and the Rule.
That from a fhelle, the precious Diadem foile,
And put it in his Pocket.

Qy. No more.

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A King of threds and patches.
Sawe me; and houer o’re me with your wings
You heauenly Guards, What would you gracious figure?

Qy. Alas he’s mad.

Do you come your tardy Sonne to chide,
That laps’t in Time and Paffion, lets go by Th’important aking of your dread command? Oh fay.

Ghost. Do not forget: this Vifitation
Is but to whet thy almost blinded purpofe.
But looke, Amazement on thy Mother firs;
O Rep between her, and her fighting Soules,
Conceit in weakest bodies, strengeth worke.

Speake to her Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you Lady?

Qy. Alas, how isn’t with you?
That you bend your eye on vacancie,
And with their corporall ayre do hold diuoure.
Forth at your eyes, your spirits wildly pece,
And as the sleepeing Soldiours in th’Alarime,
Your bedded haires, like life in excrements,
Start vp, and fland an end. Oh gentle Sonne,
Upon the heate and flame of thy diftemper
Sprinkle coole patience. Whereon do you looke?

Ham. On him, on him: look you how pale he glares,
His forme and caufe conioyn’d, preaching to fones,
Would make them capable. Do not looke upo me,
Leaff with this piteous action you convent,
My ferue effeds: then what I have to do,
Will want true colour; teares perchance for blood.

Qy. To who do you speake this?

Ham. Do you fee nothing there?

Qy. Nothing at all; yet all that is I fee.

Ham. Nor did you nothing here?

Qy. No, nothing but our felues.

Ham. Why look you therer: looke how it flates away:
My Father in his habite, as he lined,
Looke where he goes euem now out at the Portall. Esit.

Qy. This is the very coynage of your Braine,
This bodiliffe Creation extant is very cunning in.

Ham. Extatiks.

My Pule as your doth temperatly keepe time,
And makes as healthfull Muficke. It is not madneffe
That I have vitered; bring me to the Tuff.
And I the matter will re-word: which madneffe
Would gamball from. Mother, for love of Grace,
Lay not a flattering Vaction to your foule,
That not your trelafite, but my madneffe speakes:
It will but skin and filme the Vicereous place,
While it ranke Corruption mining all within,
Infeds vnfeene. Conffe your felfe to Heauen,
Repent what’s patl, auouy what is to come,
And do not spred the Compott or the Weedes,
To make them ranke. Forgive me this my Vertue,
For in the fanneffe of this purtie times,
Vertue it felle, or Vice mult pardon bege,
Yes court, and whe, for leauue to do him good.

Qy. Oh Hamlet,

Thou haft clef your heart in twaine.

Ham. O throw away the worier part of it,
And liue the purer with the other hale.

Good night, but go not to mine Vnkle’s bed,
Affume a Vertue, if you have it not, refraine to night,
And that shall lend a kind of eatneffe
To the next abstinence. Once more goodnight,
And when you are defirous to be blest,
He blefing begge of you. For this fame Lord,
I do repent: but heauen hath pleas’d it fo,
To punifh me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their Scourge and Minifter.
I will befoow him, and will anfwer well,
The death I gave him: fo againe, good night.
I muft be cruel, onely to be kinde;
Thus bad begins, and worfe remains behinde.

Qy. What fhall I do?

Ham. Not this by no meanes that I bid you do:
Let the blunt King tempt you againe to bed,
Finch Wanton on your witherke, call you his Moufe,
And let him for a pair of reechie kiffes,
Or padding in your necke with his damn'd Fingers,
Make you to rauelle all this matter out,
That I offentially am not in madneffe,
But made in craft. "Twere good you let him know,
For who that's but a Queene, faire, faber, wife,
Would from a Paddocke, from a Bat, a Gibbe,
Such deere concernsments hide, Who would do fo,
No in despithe of Senle and Secretes,
Vprceeg the Basket on the houfe top:
Let the Birds fye, and like the famous Ape
To try Conclusions in the Basket, crepe
And breake your owne necke downe.

Qu. Be thou affur'd, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life : I have no life to breath
What thou haft faide to me.
Ham. I muft to England, you know that?
Qu. Alacke I had forgot: 'Tis fo concluded on.
Ham. This man shall fet me packing:
I le fuge the Outs into the Neighbor roomme,
Mother goodnight. Indeede this Counsellor
Is of moft fill, moft fecret, and moft graue,
Who was in life, a foolifh prating Knaue.
Come fir, to draw toward an end with you.
Good night Mother.

Exit Hamlet tugging in Polonius.
Enter King.
King. There's matters in these fighes.
Thefe profound heaues
You muft tranlate; 'Tis fit we vnderftand them.
Where is your Sonne?
Qu. As my good Lord, what have I feene to night?
King. What Gertrude? How do's Hamlet?
Qu. Mad as the Seas, and winde, when both contend
Which is the Mightier, in his lawfle fit
Behinde the Arras, hearing something firre,
He whips his Rapier out, and cries a Rat, a Rat,
And in his brauith apprehenfion killles
The vanifhne good old man.
King. Oh heavy deed:
It had fin fo with vs had we beene there:
His Liberty is full of threats to all,
To you your felfe, to vs, to every one.
Alas, how fhall this bloody deed be anfwered?
It will be laide to vs, whole prudence
Should haue kept fhort, refrain'd, and out of haunt,
This mad yong man. But fo much was our loue,
We would not vnderftand what was moft fit,
But like the Owner of a foule difcere,
To keep it from divulging, let it fcele
Euen on the pith of life. Where is he gone?
Qu. To draw apart the body he hath kild,
O're whom his very madneffe like fome Oare
Among a Minerall of Metteis befce,
Sheues it felle pure. He weepes for what is done.
King. Oh Gertrude, come away:
The Sun no sooner shall the Mountains touch,
But we will fhip him hence, and this vilde deed,
We muft with all our Maftey and Skill
Both countermane, and exauce.
Ho Goldenfemble:
Friends both go loyne you with fome further ayde:
Hamlet in madneffe hath Polonius flaine,
And from his Mother Cotton, he'd drag'd him.
Go fecake him out, fpeak faire, and bring the body
Into the Chappell. I praye you haft in this.
Exit Gent.
Come Gertrude, we'll caufe our wilde friends,
To let them know both what we meane to do,
And what's untime did done. Oh come away,
My foule is full of difcord and difmay.

Ham. Safely flower'd.
Gentlemen within. Hamlet, Lord Hamlet.
Ham. What noife! Who calls on Hamlet?
Ohe here they come.
Enter Ref. and Guildenfemble.
Re. What haue you done my Lord with the dead body?
Ham. Compounded it with dulf, where to 'tis Kinne.
Reff. Tell vs where 'tis, that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the Chappell.
Ham. Do not beleue it.
Reff. Beleue what?
Ham. That I can kepe your counfell, and not mine owne.
Besides, to be demanded of a Spungde, what re-
pliation should be made by the Sonne of a King.
Reff. Take you me for a Spungde, my Lord?
Ham. I fir, that fokes vp the Kings Countenance, his Rewards, his Authorities (but fuch Officers do the King beft ferrue in the end. He keeps them like an Ape in the corner of his law, firft mouth'd to be left swallowed, when he needs what you have gleen'd, it is but fqueez-
ing you, and Spungde you fhall be ary againe.
Reff. I vnderftand you not my Lord.
Ham. I am glad of it: a knauffh speech fleeps in a foolifh ear.
Reff. Your My Lord, you muft tell vs where the body is,
and go vs to the King.
Ham. The body is with the King, but the King is not with the body. The King, is a thing——
Guild. A thing my Lord?
Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him, hide Fox, and all after.

Enter King.
King. I have fent to fecke him, and to find the bodie:
How dangerous is it that this man goes loffe:
Yet muft not we put the strong Law on him:
Hec's loved of the diftraeted multitude,
Who like not in their judgement, but their eyes:
And where 'tis fo, th'Offenders fource is weigh'd:
But neerer the offence; to beare all smooth, and even,
This fudden fending him away, muft feme
Deliberate paffe, dileafe desperate groymes,
By deliberat appliance are relieved,
Or not at all.
Enter Reffcramer.
How now? What hath befaine?
Reff. Where the dead body is bellow'd my Lord,
We cannot get from him.
King. But where is he?
Reff. Without my Lord, guard'd to know your pleasure.
King. Bring him before vs.
Reff. Hoi, Guildenfemble! Bring in my Lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenfemble.
King. Now Hamlet, where's Polonius?
Ham. At Supper.
King. At Supper? Where?
Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten, a certaine convocation of worms are e'ne at him. Your worm is your onely Emperor for diet. We fat all creatures elfe to fat vs, and we fat our felle for Magots. Your fat King, and your leane Begger is but variable fervice to difhes,
but to one Table that's the end.
King. What doth thou meane by this?

Ham.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ham. Nothing but to shew you how a King may go to Progreffe through the guts of a Beggar.

King. Where is Polonius.

Ham. In heauen, fend thither to fee. If your Meffenger finde him not there, fecke him I' the other place your felfe: but indeed, if you finde him not this moneth, you shall note him as you go vp the flaire into the Lobby.

King. Go seck him there.

Ham. He will thy till ye come.

K. Hamlet, this deed of chine, for thine efeclusive safety Which we do tender, as we do tender greene. For that which thou haft done, muft tend thee hence With fierie Quickkneffe. Therefore prepare thy felfe, The Barke is readie, and the winde at helpe, Th'Associates tend, and eyry thing at bent.

For England.

Ham. For England ?

King. 1 Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou know'rt our purpoſe.

Ham. I fee a Cherube that fee's him : but come, for England, Farewell dear Mother.

King. Thy looking Father Hamlet.

Hamlet. My Mother, Father and Mother is man and wife: man & wife is one flesh, and fo my mother.

Come, for England.

Exit King.

King. Follow him at foote, Tempt him with speed aboard: Delay it not, Ile have him hence to night. Away, for eyry thing is Seal'd and done That eſfe leanes on th'affaire: pray you make hiftt. And England, if my loue thou holde at ought, As my great power thereof may glue thee felfe, Since yet thy Cleftice lookez lookes and red After the Danish Sword, and thy ftee awe Payes homage to vs; thou maile not coldly fet Our Soureraine Proceffe, which importz at full By Letters conuring to that effect. The prefent death of Hamlet. Do it England, For like the Heftkie in my blode heages, And thou muft cure me: Till I know 'tis done, How ere my happes, my loyes were ne're begun.

Exit Enter Fortinbras with an Army.

For. Go Captaine, from me greet the Danish King, Tell him that by his licenfe, Fortinbras Claims the conuoyance of a promis'd March Over his Kingsdome. You know the Rendeous: If that his Malegift would ought with vs, We shall exprefse our dutie in his eye, And let him know fo.

Capt. I will doo't, my Lord.

For. Go faydly on. Exit.

Sail. I will not speake with her.

Her. She is inportante, indeed diftrust, her moode will needs be pittied.

Sail. What would the hauze?

Her. She speaks much of her Father; fakes the heares There's trickles in her world, and herms, and bears her heart, Sparues enouzouly at Strawes, speakes things in doubt, That carry but halfe fencé: Her speech is nothing, Yet the vnshaped vie of it doth moue The heares to Collection; they syme at it, And by the words vp fit to their owne thoughts, Which as her winkes, and nod, and gheures yeild them, Indeed would make one think there would be thought, Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Qu. Twere good the were spokenes with, For the may f powering dangerous coniectures In ill breeding minds. Let her come in. To my ficke foule(as finnes true Nature is) Each toy fenees Prologue, to some great amiffe, So full of Arteffe ieluouie is guilt, It fpill's it felfe, in fearing to be fpill.

Enter Ophelia diftrust.

Ophe. Where is the beauteous Malefi of Denmark.

Qu. How now Ophelia?

Ophe. How fhould I your true love know from another one? By his Cockle bat and flaffe, and his Sandal fhoone.

Qu. Alas sweet Lady: what imports this Song?

Ophe. Say you Nay pray you marke. He is dead and gone Lady, he is dead and gone, As he head a greffe-greene Turfe, at his heales a thone.

Enter King.

Qu Nay but Ophelia.

Ophe. Pray you marke.

White his Sherw in the Mountain Snow.

Qu. Alas, looke heere my Lord.

Ophe. Larded with fweet flowers:

Which bemp to the ground did not go,

With true-love fhoones.

King. How do ye, pretty Lady?

Ophe. Well, God dill you. They fay the Owle was a Bakers daughter. Lord, wee know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your Table.

King. Conceit upon her Father.

Ophe. Pray you let's haue no words of this: but when they take you what it means, fay you this: To morrow & S. Valentines day, all in the morning bosome, And I a Maid at your Window, to be your Valentine.

Then up be ripe, & don't his clothes, & cut the chamber dore, Let in the Maid, that out a Maid, never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia.

Ophe. Indeed is? without an oath Ile make an end on. By gu, and by S. Charty, Alack, and fit for fhoone: Tong men will do' it, if they come too, By Cocke they are too blame. Quoth he before you tumbled me, You promis'd me to Wed: So would I ha done by ynder Sunne, And thus had I come to my bed.

King. How long hath the bin this?

Ophe. I hope all will be well. We muft bee patient, but I cannot choose but weepe, to thinke they should lay him i'th'cold ground: My brother hall knowe of it, and fo I thank you for your good counsell. Come, my Coach: Goodnight Ladies: Goodnight sweet Ladies: Goodnight, goodnight. Exit.

King. Follow her clofe,

Glue her good watch I pray you: Oh this is the poyfon of deepe greifes, it fpringes All from her Fathers death. Oh Gertrude, Gertrude, When forrowes comes, they come not fingle fipes, But in Battalions. First, in FATHER FRANES, Next your Sonne gone, and he most violent Author Of his owne iuft remove: the people muddied, Thicke and vnwholome in their thoughts, and whifpers For good Polonius death; and we haue done but greenly In hugger muffler to inter heem. Poore Ophelia Dividt from her felie, and her faire judgement,
The Tragedy of Hamlet.

Without the which we are Pictures, or meere Beasts.
Left, and as much containing as all these,
Her Brother is in secret come from France,
Keeps on his wonder, keeps himselfe in clouds,
And wants not Buzzezz to infect his ear
With pestillent Speeches of his Fathers death,
Where in necessitie of matter Beggard,
Will nothing dicke our perfons to Arraigne
In ear and ear. O my deere Gertrude, this,
Like to a murdering Piece in many places,
Gives me superfluous death. A Noife within.

Enter a Messinger.
Qu. Alacke, what noife is this? King. Where are my Swinners?
Let them guard the doore. What is the matter? Mes. Save your felie, my Lord.
The Gossan (flower-peering of his lid)
Eates not the Flats with more impitious hate
Then young Laeretis, in a Riotous head,
Ore-bears your Officers, the rabble call him Lord,
And as the world were now but to begin,
Anxiety forgot, Custome not knownue,
The Rabiffers and props of every word,
They cry chooze we? Laeretis shall be King,
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
Laeretis shall be King, Laeretis King.
Qu. How cheerfully on the falle Traile they cry,
Oh this is Counter you falle Difhonest Dogges.
Noife within. Enter Laeretis.
King. The doores are broke.
Laer. Where is the King, firs? Stand you all without.
All. No, let's come in.
Laer. I pray you give me leave.
All. We will, we will.
Laer. I thank you; I keepe the doore.
Oh thou wilde King, give me my Father.
Qu. Calmely good Laeretis.
Laer. That drop of blood, that calmes
Proclaims me Baffard:
Cries Cackold to my Father, brands the Harlot
Even here betweene the chaffe vnfinchered brow
Of my true Mother.
King. What is the cuife Laeretis,
That this Rebellion looks fo Gvant-like?
Let him go Gertrude: Do not feare our perfons:
There's fuch Diuinity doth hedge a King,
That Treffon can but peape to what it would,
As a little of his will. Tell me Laeretis,
Why thou art thus Incefed? Let him go Gertrude.
Spreake man.
Laer. Where's my Father? King. Dead.
Qu. But not by him.
King. Let him demand his fill.
Proclaims me Baffard:
Cries Cackold to my Father, brands the Harlot
Even here betweene the chaffe vnfinchered brow
Of my true Mother.
King. Good Laeretis:
If you defire to know the certaine
Of your deere Fathers death, if writ in youryne,
That Soup-flake you will draw both Friend and Foe,
Winner and Loser.
Laer. None but his Enemies.
King. Will you know them then.
La. To his good Friends, thus wide Ie ope my Armes:
And like the kinde Life-rend'ing Politician,
Repair them with my blood.
King. Why now you speake,
Like a good Child, and a true Gentleman.
That I am guiltiufe of your Fathers death;
And am most fenible in greefe for it;
It shall as leuell to your judgement pierce
As day do's to your eye.
A noife within. Let her come in.
Enter Ophelia.
Laer. How now? what noife is that?
Oh hate dri ye my Brains, tears feuen times falls,
Burne out the Sence and Vertue of mine eye.
By Heauen, thy madnese shall be payed by wight,
Till our Tongues the beame. Oh Rofe of May,
Deere Maid, kinde Siter, sweet Ophelia:
Oh Heauen, is not posibill, a yong Maids wits,
Should be as mortall as an old mans life:
Nature is fine in Loue, and where tis fine,
It fends some precious infinence of it felle
After the thing it loues.
Opbe. They bore him bare fac'd on the Beer,
Hey nony nony, hoy nony:
And on his graue raine many a teare,
Fare well my Dose.
Laer. Had't thou thy wits, and didn't perfwade Reuenge,
it could not move thee.
Opbe. You muft finge downe a-downe, and you call him a-downe-a. Oh, how the wheel be comes it?
It is the faffe Steward that ftole his matters daughter.
Laer. This a things more then matter.
Opbe. There's Reparmony, that's for Remembrance.
Pray loue remembrace; and there is Paconies, that's for Thoughts.
Laer. A document in madnese, thoughts & remembrance fitt.
Opbe. Thou's Fennell for you, and Columbines: thefis'Rew for you, and here's fome for me. Wee may call it
Herbe-Grace a Sundates: Oh you muft weare your Rew with a difference. There's a Dayfe, I would give you fome Violets, but they wither'd all when my Father dy'd:
They fay, he made a good end;
For honeify sweet Robin is all my joy.
Laer. Thoughts, and Affiliation, Paflion, Hell it felle:
She turns to Faour, and to prettinesse.
Opbe. And will be not come againe,
And will be not come againe:
Now come he is dead, go to thy Deatbed,
He wou'd wou'd come againe.
Houf'ed as white as Snow,
All Flaxen wais his Pole:
He is gone, he is gone, and we caufed away money,
Gramercy on his Soul.
And of all Christian Soules, I pray God.
Exeunt Ophelia.
Laer. Do you fee this, you Gods?
King. Laeretis, I must common with your greefe,
Or you deny me right; go but apart,

[Make]
The Tragedy of Hamlet.

Mak'st choice of whom your wifet Friends you will,
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me;
If by direct or by Colaterall hand
They finde vs touch'd, we will our Kingdome gue,
Our Crowne, our Life, and all that we call Ours
To you in satisfaction. But if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to vs,
And we shall loyantly labour with your soule
To glue it due content.

Larr. Let this be so:
His meane is death, his obscure burial,
No Trophee, Sword, nor Hatchment o're his bones,
No Noble rite, nor formall ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 'wreere from Heaven to Earth,
That I must call in question.

King. So you shall:
And where th'o'tence is, let the great Axe fall.
I pray you go with me.

Exeunt

Enter Horatio, with an Attendant.

Hor. What are they that would speake with me?
Sir. Saylors fyr, they say they have Letters for you.
Hor. Let them come in,
I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Saylor.

Say. God bleffe you Sir,
Hor. Let him bleffe thee too.
Say. Hee shall Sir, and 'tis pleafe. There's a Letter for you Sir: It comes from th'Ambaftadours that was bound for England, If your name be Horatie, as I am let to know it is,

Reads the Letter.

Orratio, When thou shalt have overlook'd this, give these Fellows some meane to the King: They have Letters for him. Ere we were two daies old at Sea, a Pyrate of every Warlike appointment gave us Choice. Finding our felues too few of Sailers we put on a compell'd Valor. In the Gappel, I boarded them: On the Inflant they get cleare of our Shippe, so I alone became their Preymer. They have dealt with mee, like Theoses of Mery, but they know what they did. I am to doe a good turn for them...

Let the King have the Letters I have sent, and repair thou to me with as much ha't as thou wouldest fifty deaths. I have words to speake in your eare, will make thee demne, yet are they much too light for the bore of the Matter.

These good Fellows will bring thee where I am. Rofincrance and Gildofrome, bold their course for England. Of them I have much to tell thee, Farewell.

He that thou knowest thine, Hamlet.

Come, I will gue you way for thef the Letters, And do't the speedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your confidence my acquittance feale,
And you must put me in your heart for Friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he which hath your Noble Father slaine,
Purued my life.

Lear. It well appears. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against thef feates,
So crimefull, and so Capital in Nature,
As by your safety, Wieldome, all things else,

You mainly were flirt'd vp?

King. Of two speciall Reason,
Which may to you (perhaps) seeme much vnknowne,
And yet to me they are strong. The Queen his Mother,
Lives almoft by his lookes: and for my felfe,
My Vertue or my Plague, be it either which,
She's so coniunctue to my life and foule;
That as the Starre moves not but in his Sphere,
I could not but by her. The other Motive,
Why to a publike count I might not 904,
Is the great love the general gender heare him,
Who dipping all his Faults in their affection,
Would like the Spring that turneth Wood to Stone,
Conuerst his Gyues to Graces. So that my Arrowes
Too flightly timbred for so loud a Winde,
Would have return'd to my Bow againe,
And not where I had slipt'd them.

Larr. And so haue I Noble Father loft,
A Sifter druen into dangerous torments,
Who wou'd (if praifes may goe backe againe)
Stood Challenger on mount of all the Age
For her perditions. But my revenge will come.

King. Breake not your sleeues for that,
You must not think
That we are made of stuffed, so flat, and dull,
That we can let our Beard be shooke with danger,
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more,
I lou'd your Father, and we loue our Selfe,
And that I hope will teach you to imagine.

Enter a Messinger.

How now? What News?

Mef. Letters my Lord from Hamlet. This to your Majesty: this to the Queen.

King. From Hamlet? Who brought them?

Mef. Saylors my Lord they say, I saw them not:
They were given me by Claudius, he receiued them.

King. Laertes you shall hear them.

Leave vs.

Exit Messinger.

High and Mighty, you shall know I am yet naked on your Kingdome. To morrow shall I begge leave to see your Kingly Eyes. When I shall (first asking your Pardon thereunto) recount the Occasions of my Sodaine, and more strange returns.

Hamlet.

What should this means? Are all the rest come backe?
Or is it some abuse? Or no such thing?

Larr. Know you the hand?

Kin. This Hamlet Charater, naked and in a Postscript here he feyes alone: Can you aduise me?

Larr. I'm loth in it my Lord, but let him come,
It warmes the very fickneffe in my heart,
That I shall fleue and tell him to his teeth;
Thus didst thou.

Kin. If it be fo Laertes, as how should it be so:
How otherwise will you be rule'd by me?

Larr. If you will not o'rerule me to a peace.

Kin. To thine owne peace: if he be now return'd,
As checking at his Voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it: I will worke him
To an exploit now rife in my Deuite,
Vnder the which he shall not choose but fall;
And for his death no winde of blame shall breath,
But euen his Mother shall vncharge the practise,
And call it accident: Some two Monthes hence
Here was a Gentleman of Normandy,
Due sene my felfe, and then'd against the French,
And they ran well on Horfbacke; but this Gallant

Hal
Had witchcraft in't; he grew into his Seat,
And to such wondrous doing brought his Horne,
As had he beene enterpris'd and demy-Natur'd
With the braue Beat'o forre he paft my thought,
That I in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't?
Kin. A Norman.
Laer. Upon my life Lanswand.
Kin. The very fame.
Laer. I know him well, he is the Brooch indeed,
And lemme of all our Nation.
Kin. Hee mad confession of you,
And gauie you such a Matterly report,
For Art and exercisc in your defence ;
And for your Rapier most especially,
That he withoute a triaing, or triaing indeed,
If one could match you Sir. This report of his
Did Hamlet to envenom with his Envy,
That he could nothing doe but with and begge,
Your fodeaine comming o're to play with him;
Now out of this.
Laer. Why out of this, my Lord?
Kin. Laerets was your Father deare to you?
Or are you like the painting of a forrow,
A face without a heart?
Laer. Why ask ye this?
Kin. Not that I thinke you did not love your Father,
But that I know Loue is begun by Time:
And that I fee in paffages of prove,
Time qualifies the sparke and fire of it:
Hamlet comes backe: what would you undertake,
To show your felle your Fathers fone indeed,
More then in words?
Laer. To cut his throat 'tis Church.
Kin. No place indeed should murder Sancturize;
Reuenge should no haue bounds: but good Laerets
Will you doe this, keepe close within your Chamber,
Hamlet return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'e put on thofe shall praife your excellence,
And fet a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman guey you, bring you in fine together,
And wager on your hesh, he being remiffe,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not perfute the Fofies? So that with eas,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choife
A Sword vnbaited, and in a paffe of praifice,
Requitt him for your Father.
Laer. I will doe,
And for that purpofe Ile annoint my Sword:
I bought an Vncion of a Mountebanke
So mortall, I but dip't a knife in it,
Where it draws blood, no Cataplasme fo rare,
Collected from all Simples that have Vertue
Vnder the Moone, can fave the thing from death,
That is but fraught withall: Ile touch my point,
With this contagion, that if I call him flightly,
I may be death.
Kin Let's further think of this,
Weigh what convenience both of time and meanes
May fit vs to our deare, if this should falle;
And that our drift looke through our bad performance,
'Twere better not affaie; therefore this Proiect
Should have a backe or fcond, that might hold,
If this should blift in proofe: Soft, let me fee
We'll make a follemne wager on your commings,

I ha't: when in your motion you are hot and dry,
As make your bowes more violent to the end,
And that he call for drink; Ile have prepar'd him
A Chalice for the none; whereon but fliping,
If he by chance ecape your vem'd ftruck,
Our purpofe may hold there; how sweet Queene.

Enter Queene.

Queen. One woe doth tred upon another heele,
So feft they'll follow your Siffers drown'd Laerets.
Laer. Drown'd? O where?
Queen. There is a Willow growes aslant a Brooke,
That Iheses his hore leues in the glaffe flareme:
There with fantaflcie Garlands did he come,
Of Crow-flowers, Nettles, Daylies, and long Purples,
That liberrall Shepheards give a groffer name;
But our cold Moids doe Deed Mem Fingers call them:
There on the pendant boughes, her Coronet weeds
Clambrng to hang; an enious fluer broke,
When downe the weedy Trophies, and her felfe,
Fell in the weeping Brooke, her cloathes fred wide,
And Mermaid-like, a while they bore her vp,
Which time the chaunted fnaiches of old tunes,
As one incapable of her owne dittrefles,
Or like a creature Naffe, and indued
Vpto that Element: but long it could not be,
Till that her garments, heauy with her drinks,
Pul'd the poore wretch from her melodieus boy,
To mudy death.

Laer. Alas then, is she drown'd?
Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.
Laer. Too much of water haft thou poore Ophelia,
And therefore I forbaid my teares: but yet
It is our tricke, Nature her cuftome holds,
Let fame fay what it will; when thefe are gone
The woman will be out: Adue my Lord,
I have a speech of fire, that faire would blaze,
But that this folly doubts it.

Kin. Let's fow, Gertrude:
How much I had to doe to calme his rage?
Now fear I this will glue it fart againe;
Therefore let's follow.

Expul.

Enter two Clownes.

Clown. Is she to bee buried in Chriftian buriall, that wilfully fEEKes her owne faluation?

Other. I tell thee she is, and therefore make her Graue straight, the Crownrer hath fete on her, and finds it Chriftian burial.

Clown. How can that be, vnlesfe she drowned her felie in her owne defence?

Other. Why 'tis found fo.

Clown. It muft be & offending, it cannot bee elfe: for heere lies the point: If I drowne my felie wittingly, it argues an Act & an Act hath three branches. It is an Act to doe and to performe; argall she drown'd her felie wittingly.

Other. Nay but heare you Goodman Deluer.

Clown. Glue me leaue; heere lies the water; good: heere flands the man; good: If the man goe to this water and drowne himfelfe; it is wilie he'll he, he goes; mark ye that? But if the water come to him & drowne him; hee drownes not himfelfe. Argall, hee that is not guilty of his owne death, shortens not his owne life.

Other. But is this law?

Clown. I marry it's, Crowners Queft Law.
The Tragedie of Hamlet. 277

[Dialogue text begins here...]

Other. Will you ha the truth on't? if this had not beene a Gentlewoman, shee should have beene buried out of Christian Buriall.

Clo. Why there thou say'st. And the more pitty that great folke should have countenance in this world to drowne or hang themselues, more then their even Christian. Come, my Spade there is no ancient Gentlemen, but Gardiners, Ditchers and Graue-makers; they hold vp Adams Profeflion.

Other. Was he a Gentleman?

Clo. What, art a Heathen? how doft thou under-stand the Scripture? the Scripture sayes Adam dig'd; could hee digge without Armes? Ie put another que-tion to thee; if thou anfwered me not to the purpose, con-

feffe thy fellon —

Other. Go too.

Clo. What is he that builds stronger then either the Mafon, the Shipwright, or the Carpenter?

Other. The Gallows maker; for that Frame outlines a thousand Tenants.

Clo. I like thy wit well in good faith, the Gallows does well; but how does it well? It does well to thoe that doe ill: now, thou doft ill to say the Gallows is built stronger then the Church: Agayn, the Gallows may doe well to thee. Too't againe, Come.

Other. Who builds stronger then a Mafon, a Ship-

wright, or a Carpenter?

Clo. I tell me that, and vnyoake.

Other. Marry, now I can tell.

Clo. Too't.

Other. Maffe, I cannot tell.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio a farre off.

Clo. Cudgell thy brains no more about it; for your dull Affe will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are ask'd this question next, say a Graue-maker: the Houfe that he makes, lafts till Doomesday: go, get thee to Taugban, fetch me a roupe of Liquor.

Sings.

In youth when I did love, did love,
I thought it was very sweet;
To contrail O the time for a my bellow,
O me thought there was nothing meete.

Ham. His this fellow no feeling of his busynesse, that he sings at Graue-making?

Hor. Custome hath made it in him a property of ex-sneffe.

Ham. 'Tis ee'n fo; the hand of little Imployment hath the daintier fenfe.

Clo. Sings.

But Age with his fading lights
bath caught me in his cluch:
And bath flapp'd me in till the Land,
as if I had never beene fuch.

Ham. That Scull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knaue bowes it to th' ground, as if it were Calum Taw-bone, that did the first murder: It might be the Pate of a Polititian which this Affe o're Officesone that could circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my Lord.

Ham. Or of a Courtier, which could say, Good Morrow, Sweet Lord: how doft thou, good Lord? this might be my Lord Such a one, that praifd my Lord Such a ones Horfe, when he meant to begge it; might it not?

Hor. I, my Lord.

Ham. Why ee'n fo: and now my Lady Wormes, Chapliffe, and knockt about the Mazarad with a Sextons Spade; here's fine Resolution, if wee had the tricke to feet. Did thirbe bones cock no more the breeding, but to play at Loggetts with 'em? mine ake to thinke on't.

Clowne sings.

A Pickaxe and a Spade, a Spade.
for and a fornning- Sheet:
O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
for such a Graufi is meete.

Ham. There's another: why might not that bee the Scull of a Lawyer? where be his Quillits now? his Qullits? his Cafes? his Tenures, and his Tricks? why doe's he suffer this rude knaue now to knocke him about the Sconce with a dirty Shouell, and will not tell him of his Action of Battery? hum. This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of Land, with his Statutes, his Recognisances, his Fines, his double Vouchers, his Recoveries: is this the fine of his Fines, and the recovery of his Recoveries, to have his fine Pate full of fine Dirt? will his Vouchers vouch him no more of his Purchases, and dou-

table ones too, then the length and breadth of a paire of Indentures? the very Conveyances of his Lands will hardly lye in this Boxe; and mult the Inherent himselfe have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a lot more, my Lord.

Ham. Is not Parchment made of Sheep-skines?

Hor. I my Lord, and of Calue-skines too.

Ham. They be Sheepe and Calues that seek out affu-rance in that. I will speake to this fellow: whose Graue's this Sir?

Clo. Mine Sir:

O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
for such a Graufi is meete.

Ham. I thinke it be thine indeedfor thou liest in't.

Clo. You lye out on't Sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I doe not lye in't; and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou doft lye in't, to be in't and say 'tis thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quicke, therefore thou lyest.

Clo. 'Tis a quicke lye Sir, 'twill away againe from me to you.

Ham. What man doft thou digge it for?

Clo. For no man Sir.

Ham. What woman then?

Clo. For none noth.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

Clo. One that was a woman Sir; but reft her Soule, she's dead.

Ham. How abolutle the knaue is? wee must speake by the Carde, or equiulocation will vnlooe vs: by the Lord Horatio, these three yeares I have taken note of it, the Age is growne fo picked, that the toe of the Pesant comes fo neere the heele of our Courier, hee galls his Kibe. How long haft thou been a Graue-maker?

Clo. Of all the days i'th'year, I came too'that day that our lad King Hamlet o'recame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

Clo. Cannot you tell that? every soule can tell that: It was the very day, that young Hamlet was borne, hee that was mad, and went into England.

Ham. I marry, why was he sent into England?

Clo. Why, because he was mad: hee thall recover his wits there; or if he do not, it's no great matter there.

Ham.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ham. Why?

Clo. 'Twill not be seene in him, there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

Clo. Very strangely they say.

Ham. How strangely?

Clo. Faith, it seems he has lost his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

Clo. Why heere in Denmarkke; I have bin fixedethque here, man and boy thirty yeares.

Ham. How long will a man lie 'lth' earth ere he rot?

Clo. If he be not seen before he die (as we have many pokey Coares now adies, that will scarce hold the laying in) he will let you some eight yeares, or nine yeares. A Tanner will let you nine yeare.

Ham. Why he, more then another?

Clo. Why Sir, his hide is so tan'd with his Trade, that he will keepe out water a great while. And your water, is a fore Decayer of your heron dead body. Here is a Scull now; the Scull has laine in the earth three or twenty years.

Ham. Whole was it?

Clo. A wherof man Fellowes it was; What doe you thinke it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

Clo. A peffiance on him for a mad Rogue, a pou'td a Flaggon of Rennif on my head once. This fame Scull Sir, this fame Scull Sir, was Yorick Scull, the Kings Jester.

Ham. This?

Clo. Eene that.

Ham. Let me fee. Alas poore Yorick, I knew him Horatio, a fellow of infinite lef, of most excellent fancy, he hath borne me on his backe a thousand times; And how abhorred my Imagination is, my gorge rifes at it. Here he hung those lipps, that I have kift I know not how oft. Where be your liues now? Your Gambals? Your Songs? Your flashes of Merriment that were wont to set the Table on a Rore? No one now to mock your own leer. Quite chopafane? Now get you to my Ladies Chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thicker, to this fav'our the mift come. Make her laugh at that: pray thee Horatio tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that my Lord?

Ham. Doft thou thinke Alexander lookt o'this fashion 'lth' earth?

Hor. Eene fo.

Ham. And smelt so? Puh.

Hor. Eene fo, my Lord.

Ham. To what base vses we may returne Horatio. Why may not Imagination trace the Noble duft of Alexander, till he find it flapping a bunghole.

Hor. 'Twere to consider: to curiously to consider so.

Ham. No faith, not a lot. But to follow him thether with modelle enough, & likelihood to lead it; as thus. Alexander died: Alexander was buried: Alexander returneth into duft: the duft is earth; of earth we make Lome, and why of that Lome (whereo he was convert'd) might they not flapp a Berre-barrell? Imperial Cephar,dead and turn'd to clay, Might flop a hole to kepe the winde away. Oh, that that earth, which kept the world in awe, Should patch a Wall, to expell the winters faile. But tost, but tost, afeatured here comes the King.

Enter King, Queens, Laertes, and a Coffin, with Lords attendant.

The Queen,e the Courtiers. Who is that they follow, And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken The Coaftie they follow, did with despare hand, Fore do it owne life; 'twas some Estate. Couch we a while, and mark.

Lair. What Cerimony else?

Ham. That is Laertes, a very Noble youth: Marke.

Lair. What Cerimony else?

Priest. Her Obsequies have bin as farre inlarg'd, As we have warrants, her death was doubtfull, And but that great Command, o're-swaies the order, She should in ground vnmark'dhase haue lodg'd, Till the last Trumpet. For charitable prayer, Shards, Flintes, and Prelles, should be there wne on her: Yet heere she is allowed her Virgin Rites, Her Maidens strewnements, and the bringing home Of Bell and Burial.

Lair. Muft there no more be done?

Priest. No more be done:

We should prophane the turicie of the dead, To sing fage Reqiuem, and such reft to her As to peace-parted Soules.

Lair. Lay her 'lth' earth,

And from her fure and inappolluted fith, May Violets fpering. I tell thee(Churchfri.)

A Miniftring Angell shall my Sifer be,

When thou liest howling?

Ham. What, the faire Ophelia?

Queen. Sweete, to the sweet farewell.

I hop'd thou should hast bin my Hamlets wife: I thought thy Bride-bed to have deckt(fweet Maid) And not thau'e fwear'd thy Graue.

Lair. Oh terrible woe,

Fall ten times trebble, on that cursed head Whose wicked deeds, thy most Ingenious fence Depriev'd thee of. Hold off the earth a while,

Till I have caught her once more in mine armes:

Leaps in the graue.

Now pile thy duft, upon the quicke, and dead,

Till of this flat a Mountaine you have made,

To o'ere top Old Pelion, or the skylf head

Of blew Olympe.

Ham. What is he, whose grieues

Bears such an Emphasis? whose phrafe of Sorrow

Coniure the wandring Starres, and makes them stand

Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I,

Hamlet the Dane.

Lair. The deuil take thy soule.

Ham. Thou praif't not well.

I prythee take thy fingers from my throat;

Sir though I am not Spleanet, and rath,

Yet haue I something in me dangerous,

Which let thy wifenesse feare. Away thy hand.

King. Pluck them afunder.

Qu. Hamlet, Hamlet.

Gen. Good my Lord be quiet.

Ham. Why I will fight with him vpon this Theme,

Vntill my cildens will no longer wag.

Qu. Oh my Sonne, what Theame?

Ham. 1 lou'd Ophelia fortie thousand Brothers

Could not(with all there quantitie of Love)

Make vp my fumme. What wilt thou do for her

King. Oh he is mad Laertes,

Qu. For loue of God forbearre him.

Ham. Come show me what thou'lt doe.

Woo't weep? Woo't fight? Woe'teare thy fife?

Woo'drinke vp fife, eate a Crocodile!
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ham. Well, shall we go now to the play?

Hor. I, good my Lord.

Ham. An earnest Complimation from the King,
As England was his faithful Tributary,
As lowe betweene them, as the Prome should flouriish,
As Peace should fill her wheaten Garland weare,
And stand a Comma 'twixt their amities,
And many such like Aflis of great charge,
That on the view and know of these Contents,
Without debate more, or more, more or leffe,
He should the bourns put to sodaine death,
Not thriving time allowed.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was Heauen ordinate;
I had my fathers Signet in my Purse,
Which was the Modell of that Danilish Scale:
Folded the Writ vp in forme of the other,
Subscrib'd it, gau'th impression, plac't it safely,
The changeling never knowne: Now, the next day
Was our Sea Fight, and what to this was fement,
Thou know't it already.

Hor. So Giuldenformes and Bogunaronas, go too't.

Ham. Who man, they did make love to this employment
They are neere my Confidences, their debate
Both by their owne intimation grow:
'Tis dangerous, when the bafier nature comes
Betweene the paffic, and fell incendled points
Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a King is this?

Ham. Does it not, thinkst thee, stand now vp
He that hath kil'd my King, and who'd my Mother,
Popt in betweene their election and my hopes,
Throwne out his Angle for my proper life,
And with fuch cooronges it's not perfect confience,
To quict him with this arme? And is't not to be damnd
To let this Canker of our nature come
In further eui.

Hor. It must be shortly knowne to him from England
What is the like of the butinext here.

Ham. It will be short,
The interim's mine, and a mans life's no more
Then to say one: but I am very forry good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forget my felie;
For by the image of my Caze, I see
The Portraiture of his; Ie count his favours
But fure the brayoure of his griefe did put me
Into a Towing passion.

Hor. Peace, who comes here?

Enter young Ofrige, (mark.)

Ofr. Your Lordship is right welcome back to Den.

Ham. I humbly thank you Sir, do't know this waterde?

Hor. No my good Lord,

Ham. Thy flate is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him; he hath much Land, and fertile; let a Beast be Lord of Beasts, and his Crib that stand at the Kings Meffe; 'tis a Chowgh; but as I saw pascual in the polfession of dirt.

Ofr. Sweet Lord, if your friendship were at leysure,
I should impart a thing to you from his Maiesty.

Ham. I will receive it with all diligence of spirit, put your Bonet to his right vfc, 'tis for the head.

Ofr. I thank your Lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe mee 'tis very cold, the winde is Northerly.

Ofr. It is indifferent cold my Lord indeed.

Ham. Mee thinks it is very fouthy, and hot for my Complexion.

Ofrige.
Ofr. Exceedingly, my Lord, it is very soulely, 'twere I cannot tell how; but my Lord, his Majeity bad me signifie to you, that he's laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter.

Ham. I beseech you remember.

Ofr. Nay, in good faith, for mine estate in good faith: Sir, you are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is at his weapon.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Ofr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but well.

Ofr. The fixe King ha's wad's with him fix Barbary Horses, against the which he impon'd as I take it, fixe French Rapers and Poniards, with their Affignes, as Girdle, Hangers or fo: three of the Carriages infaith are very dear to fancy, very reposnificant to the hills, most delicate carriages, and of very liberall conluet.

Ham. What call you the Carriages?

Ofr. The Carriages Sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phraie would bee more Germaine to the matter: If we could carry Cannon by our forces I would it might be Hangers till then; but on fixe Barbary Horses against fixe French Swords: their Affignes, and three liberall concealed Carriages, that's the French but against the Danifh; why is this impon'd as you call it?

Ofr. The King Sir, hath laid that in a dozen paffes betweene you and him, he will not exceed you three hits; he hath one twelue for mine, and that would come to imeslate tryall, if your Lordship would vouchsafe the Answere.

Ham. How if I answere no?

Ofr. I mean my Lord, the oppofition of your perfon in tryall.

Ham. Sir, I will walke heere in the Hall: If it please his Majeftie, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the Foyles bee brought, the Gentleman willing, and the King hold his purpofe: I will win for him if I can: if not, he gaineth nothing but my fame, and the odd hits. Ofr. Shall I redeliver you eat's fo?

Ham. To this effect Sir, after what flourifh your nature will.

Ofr. I commend my duty to your Lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours hee does well to commend it himfelfe, there are no tongues elfe for's tongue.

Hor. This Lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did Compile with his Dugge before hee fuck't it: thus had he and mine more of the fame Beuty that I know the drolie age dores on; only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter, a kind of of yefty collection, which carries them through & through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and doe but blow them to their tryalla: The Bubbles are out.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my Lord.

Ham. I doe not thinke fo, since he went into France, I have bee in continuall praftice; I flall winne at the oddes: but thou wouldest not thinke how all heere about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my Lord.

Ham. It is but fooleery: but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your minde dislike any thing, obey. I will forflall their repaire hither, and fay you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defe Augury; there's a specall Providence in the fall of a sparrows. If it be now, 'tis not to come: if it bee not to come, it will bee now: if it be not now; yet it will come; the readinesse is all, fince no man ha's ought of what he leues. What is't to leue becomes?

Enter King, Queens, Laertes and Lords, with other Attendants with Foyles, and Gauntlets, a Table and Flagons of Wine on it.

Kin. Come Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me. Ham. Give me your pardon Sir, I've done you wrong, But pardon as you are a Gentleman. This presence knowes, And you must needs have heard how I am punifh'd With fore diftraction? What I have done That might your nature honour, and exception Roughly awakes, I heare proclamation was madenfell. Won't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Neuer Hamlet. If Hamlet from himselfe be tane away: And when he's not himselfe, do's wrong Laertes, Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it: Who does it then? His Madenfell? It's be fo, Hamlet is of the Franch that is wrong'd, His madenfell is poore Hamlet's Enemy, Sir, in this Audience, Let me dischiming from a purpoe'd euill, Free me to farre in your moft generous thoughts, That I haue flab mine Arrow a're the houfe, And hurt my Mother.

Laer. I am satisfied in Nature, Whole modue in this cafe should firre me moft To my Reuenge. But in my terms of Honor I fland aloofe, and will no reconcilement, Till by some elder Maffers of knowne Honor, I have a voyage, and preffent of peace To kepe my name vnghord. But till that time, I do receiue your offer'd love like love, And will not wrong it. Ham. I do embrace it freely, And will this Brothers wager frankly play. Glue vs the Foyles: Come on.

Laer. Come one for me.

Ham. He be your fowle Laertes, in mine ignorance, Your Skill shall like a Starre i'th' darkest night, Stike there off indeede.

Laer. You mocke me Sir.

Ham. No by this hand.

King. Glue them the Foyles yong Ofrick, Conlen Hamlet, you know the wager.

Ham. Verie well my Lord, Your Grace hath laide the oddes s'th'weaker side.

King. I do not feare it, I haue fene you both:
But fince he is better'd, we have therefore oddes.

Laer. This is too heacy, Let me fee another, Ham. This likes me well, Thes Foyles hauve a length. Prepare to play. Ofrick, I my good Lord, King. Set me the Stopes of wine upon that Table: If Hamlet glue the firft, or fcond hit, Or quit in answere of the third exchange, Let all the Battlements their Ordinance fire, The King that drinkne to Hamlet better breath, And in the Cup an vnion flall he throw Richer then that, which foure faucellue Kings In Danmarks Crowne hauue wore.
Glue me the Cups,
And let the Kettle to the Trumpets speak,
The Trumpet to the Cannoner without,
The Cannons to the Heauen, the Heauen to Earth,
Now the King drinks to Hamlet. Come, begin,
And you the Judges bear a wary eye.
\[Ham.\] Come on fir.
\[Larr.\] Come on fir.
\[Ham.\] One.
\[Larr.\] No.
\[Ham.\] Judgement.
\[Ofr.\] A hit, a very palpable hit.
\[Larr.\] Well: so again.
\[King.\] Stay, give me drink.
\[Hamlet, this Pearle is thine,
Here's to thy health. Glue him the cup,
\[Trumpeets found, and stop goes off.\]
\[Ham.\] Ile play this bout firft, let by a-while.
Come: Another hit; what say you?
\[Larr.\] A touch, a touch, I do confefe.
\[King.\] Our Sonne shall win.
\[Qa.\] He's fat, and feant of breath.
Here's a Napkin, rub thy browes,
The Queene Carowles to thy fortune, Hamlet.
\[Ham.\] Good Madam.
\[King.\] Gertrude, do not drink.
\[Qa.\] I will my Lord;
I pray you pardon me.
\[King.\] It is the poyfon'd Cup, it is too late.
\[Ham.\] I dare not drink yet Madam,
By and by.
\[Qa.\] Come, let me wipe thy face.
\[Larr.\] My Lord, Ile hit him now.
\[King.\] I do not thinke't.
\[Larr.\] And yet 'tis almost 'gainst my confidence.
\[Ham.\] Come for the third.
\[Larr.\] Let the young Page, I pray you, to the drink.
I am affraid you make a wanton of me.
\[Larr.\] Say you so? Come on.
\[Ofr.\] Nothing neither way.
\[Larr.\] Have at you now.
\[In fuffling they change Rapiers.\]
\[King.\] Part them, they are incens'd.
\[Ham.\] Nay come, again.
\[Ofr.\] Look to the Queene there now.
\[Hor.\] They bleed on both sides. How is't my Lord?
\[Ofr.\] How is't Laertes?
\[Larr.\] Why as a Woodcocke
To mine Sprinche, Ofrice, I am lustly kill'd with mine owne Treacherie.
\[Ham.\] How does the Queene?
\[King.\] She foulds to fee them bleede.
\[Qa.\] No, no, the drinkes, the drinkes.
Oh my deere Hamlet, the drinkes, the drinkes,
I am poyfon'd.
\[Ham.\] Oh Villain! How? Let the doore be lock'd.
Treacherie, fecke it out.
\[Larr.\] It is heere Hamlet.
\[Hamlet, thou art flaine,
No Medicine in the world can do thee good.
In thee, there is not halfe an hour of life: \[The Treacherous Infrument is in thy hand,\]
Vnhated and envenom'd: the foulc prouifie
Hath turn'd it felle on me. Loe, heere I lye,
Neuer to rife againe: Thy Mothers poyfon'd:
I can no more, the King, the King's too blame.
\[Ham.\] The point envenom'd too,
Then venome to thy worke.
\[Hunts the King.\]
\[All.\] Treason, Treason.
\[King.\] O yet defend me Friends, I am but hurt.
\[Ham.\] Heere thou inceffuant, murdrous,
Damen Dane,
Drink off this Potion: Is thy Vnion here?
Follow my Mother.
\[King Dyers.\]
\[Larr.\] He is lustly feru'd,
It is a poyfon temp'd by himselfe:
Exchange forsakenesse with me, Noble Hamlet;
Mine and my Fathers death come not vpon thee,
Nor thine on me.
\[Dyes.\]
\[Ham.\] Heauen make thee free of it, I follow thee.
I am dead Horatius, wretched Queene adiew,
You that looke pale, and tremble at this chance,
That are but Mutes or audience to this act:
Had I but time (as this fell Sergeant death
Is fricte'd in his Arreit) oh I could tell you.
But let it be: Horatius, I am dead,
Theu li'st, report me and my caufes right
To the vnfatished.
\[Hor.\] Neuer beleive it.
I am more an Antike Roman then a Dane:
Heere's yet some Liquor left.
\[Ham.\] As th'art a man, give me the Cup.
Let go, by Heauen Ile haue't.
Oh good Horatius, what a wounded name,
(Things standing thus unknowne) shall lie behind me.
If thou di'dst euer hold me in thy heart,
Abfent thee from felicitie awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in paine,
To tell my Storie.
\[March afarre off, and shout within.\]
What warlike noys is this?
\[Enter Ofricke.\]
\[Ofr.\] Yong Fortinbras, with conquest come fro Poland
To th'Ambusclades of England giues this warlike volly.
\[Ham.\] O I dye Horatius?
The potent poysn quite o're-crowes my spirit,
I cannot live to hear the Newes from England,
But I do prophese th'elecution lights
On Fortinbras, he ha's my dyng voyce,
So tell him with the occurrents more and leffe,
Which have follicted. The reft is silence. O I o o o
\[Dyes.\]
\[Hora.\] Now cracke a Noble heart:
Goodnight sweet Prince,
And flights of Angels fing thee to thy reft,
Why do's the Drumme come hither?
\[Enter Fortinbras and English Ambassadors, with Drumme, Colours, and Attendants.\]
\[Fortin.\] Where is this fight?
\[Hor.\] What is it ye would see?
If ought of woe, or wonder, caste thy search.
\[For.\] For, his quarry cries on haueocke. Oh proud death,
What feaft is toward in thine eternall Cell.
That thou to many Princes, at a shote,
So bloodyly haft froooke.
\[And.\] The fight is dimm'd,
And our affaires from England come too late,
The eares are senfelesse that shoulde giue vs hearing,
To tell him his commandement is fill'd,
\[That.\]
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:
Where should we have our thankes?
Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it th'ability of life to thanke you:
He never gave command'ment for their death.
But since so lume upon this bloodie question,
You from the Polake warres, and you from England
Are here arrived. Give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view,
And let me speake to this unknowing world,
How these things came about. So shall you hear
Of carnall, bloudie, and unnaturall acts,
Of accidentall judgements, casuall slaughters
Of death's put on by cunning, and forc'd cause,
And in this vsphot, purposes mistooke,
Falne on the Inventors heads. All this can I Truly deliver.
For. Let vs haue to heare it,
And call the Noble to the Audience.
For me, with sorrow, I embrace my Fortune,
I haue some Rites of memory in this Kingdome,
Which are ro claim, my vantage doth
Invite me,
Hor. Of that I shall have always cause to speake,
And from his mouth
Whose voyce will draw on more:
But let this fame be presently perform'd,
Euen whiles mens mindes are wilde,
Left more mischance
On plots, and errors happen.
For. Let four Captaines
Bear Hamlet like a Soldier to the Stage,
For he was likely, had he beene put on
To haue prou'd most royally:
And for his passage,
The Souldiers Musick, and the rites of Warre
Speake lowdly for him.
Take vp the body; Such a sight as this Becomes the Field, but here shewes much amis.
Go, bid the Souldiers shoote.
Exeunt Marching: after the which, a Peale of Ordenance are shot off.
FINIS.
THE TRAGDIE OF KING LEAR.

Enter Kent, Gloucester, and Edmund.

Kent.

Thought the King had more affected the Duke of Albany, then Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seeme so to vs : But now in the diuision of the Kingdome, it appears not which of the Dukes he vales mos; for qualities are to weigth'd, that curiosity in neither, can make choice of either moity.

Kent. Is not this thy Son, my Lord?

Glo. His breeding Sir, hath bin at my charge. I have so often blusht to acknowledge him, that now I am braz'd too.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this yong Fellowes mother could; whereupon she grew round womb'd, and had indeede (Sir) a Sonne for her Cradle, ere she had a Husband for her Bed.

Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot with the fault vndone, the ifue of it, being fo proper.

Glo. But I have a Sonne, Sir, by order of Law, some yere elder then this; who, yet is no deere in my account, though this Knaue came somthing fawcily to the world before he was ﬁst for ; yet was his Mother fayre, there was good fport at his making, and the horfon muft be acknowledged. Doe you know this Noble Gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my Lord.

Kent. Remember him hereafter, as my Honourable Friend.

Edm. My fervices to your Lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and fue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall fuddy deferving.

Glo. He hath bin out nine yeares, and away he shall againe. The King is comming.

Senec. Enter King Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Cordelia, and attendants.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France & Burgundy, Gloster.

Glo. I shall, my Lord.

Lear. Meane time we shall exprefse our darker purpofe.

Give me the Map there. Know, that we have diuided In three our Kingdome : and 's our fall intent, To fackle all Carees and Buineffe from our Age, Confering them on younger strengths, while we Vnburthen'd crawle toward death. Our fon of Cornwall, And you our no leffe loving Sonne of Albany, Mifcreant.
Exit.

From The I

You According My
Let Obey The
Thou fin'ft thy Gods in vaine.

The true blanke of thine eie.
Kear. Now by Apollo,
Kent. Now by Apollo, King
Thou sweart thy Gods in vaine.

The brave Sycian,
Or he that makes his generation meanes
To gorg his appetite, shall to my bosome
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and releued',
As thou my sometime Daughter.

Kent. Good my Liege.
Lear. Peace Kent,
Come not betweene the Dragon and his wrath,
I lou'd her mont, and thought to set my reele
On her kind nursery. Hence and avoid my fight:
So be my grave my peace, as here I glue
Her Fathers heart from her; call France, who sire's?
Call Burgundy, Cornwall, and Albaniæ,
With my two Daughters Dowres, digest the third,
Let pride, which the call plainsesse, marry her:
I doe inuest you loyntly with my power,
Preeminence, and all the large effects
That troope with Maiesty. Our selfe by Moneth course,
With refueration of an hundred Knights,
By you to be suffain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turne, onely we shall remaine
The name, and all th'addition to a King: the Sway,
Renewenew, Execution of the reele,
Beloved Sonnes be yours, which to confirme,
This Coronet part betweene you.
Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honor'd as my King,
Lou'd as my Father, as my Mater follow'd,
As my great Patron thought on in my prayers.
Le. The bow is bent & drawne, make from the shaft.
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the forke invade
The region of my heart, be Lear unmannedly,
When Lear is mad, what wouldst thou do old man?
Thinkst thou that dutie shall have dreed to speake,
When power to flattery bowes?
To plainsesse honour's bound,
When Maiesty falls to folly, referue thy flate,
And in thy best consideration checke

This hideous rudeines do answer my life, my judgement:
Thy yongest Daughter do's not loue thee least,
Nor are those empty hearted, whose low founds
Reuerbe no hollownesse.

Lear. Kent, on thy life no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as a powne
To wage against thine enemies, mere fear to lose it,
Thy safety being motive.
Lear. Out of my sight.
Kent. See better Lear, and let me fill remaine
To the true blanke of thine eie.

Flourish. Enter Gloster with France, and Burgundy, Attendants.

Cor. Heere's France and Burgundy,my Noble Lord.
Lear. My Lord of Burgundy,
We first addressse toward you, who with this King
Hath g odd for our Daughter what in the least
Will you require in present Dower with her,
Or canse your quest of Loue?

Bur. Most Royall Maiesty,
I crave no more then hath your Highness offer'd,
Nor will you tender leefe?

Lear. Right Noble Burgundy,
When she was deare to vs, we did hold her so,
But now her price is fallen: Sir, there she stands,
If ought within that little seeming substance,
Or all of it with our displeasure piec'd,
And nothing more may fitly like your Grace,
She's thers, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answere.
Lear. Will you with those inoffintries fee owes,
Unfriend'd, new adopted to our hate,
Dow'd with our cursed, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take her or, leave her.
Come Noble Burgundie, Flourish. Exeunt.
Fra. Bid farewell to your Sisters.
Cor. The Jewels of our Father, with waft’d eie s
Cardelia leaves you, I know you what you are,
And like a Sister am most loth to call
Your faults as they are named. Loose well our Father:
To your professed bodies I commit him,
But yet alas, I saw within his Grace,
I would prefer him to a better place,
So farewell to you both.
Regn. Prefcribe not vs our duty.
Gen. Let your study
Be to content your Lord, who hath receu’d you
At Fortunes alms, you have obedience scant,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.
Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides,
Who covers faults, in his white flame derides:
Well may you prosper.
Fra. Come my faire Cardelia. Exit France and Cor.
Gen. Sifter, it is not little I have to say,
Of what most neereley appertaines to vs both,
I thinkke our Father will hence to night.
(with vs.
Reg. That’s most certaine, and with your next moneth
Gen. You see how full of changes his age is, the observation we have made of it hath beene little;he alwaies lou’d our Sitter moft, and with what poore judgement he hath now call’d her off, appeares too grossely.
Reg. ’Ts the infirmity of his age, yet he hath ever but shylyer knowne himselfe.
Gen. The beet and soundefl of his time hath bin but raff, then muste we looke from his age, to receive not a alone the imperfections of long ingraffed condition, but therewithall the vnruely way-wardneffe, that infrme and cholerick yeares bring with them.
Reg. Such Vnconflant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kents banishment.
Gen. There is further complement of leave-taking be-twene France and him, pray you let vs fit together, if our Father carry authority with such disposition as he heares
this left furrender of his will but offend vs.
Reg. We shall further thinks of it.
Gen. We must do something, and Ith’ heate. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Burgard.
Burg. Thou Nature art my Goddesse, to thy Law
My servis are bound, wherefore should I
Stand in the plague of custome, and permit
The curiositie of Nations, to deprize me?
For that I am some twelve, or fourteeene Moonshines
Lag of a Brother? Why Burgard? Wherefore base?
When my Dimensions are as well compleat,
My minde as generous, and my shape as true
As honest Madam Olde? Why brand they vs
With Base? With basenes Barfadie? Base, Base?
Who in the juffie health of Nature, take
More composition, and fierce qualities,
Then doth within a dull stilly bed
Goe to th’creating a whole tribe of Fops
Got’tweene a sleepe, and wake? Well then,
Legitmate Edgar, I must have your land,
Our Fathers loose, is to the Burgard Sire,
As to th’ legitimate: fine word: Legitmate.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Well, my Legitimate, if this Letter speed,
And my intention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall toth' Legitimate : I grow, I prosper:
Now Gods, stand vp for Bailiffs.

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! and France in choller part'd?
And the King gone to night? Preferch'd his powre,
Confin'd to exhibition? All this done
Vpon the gad : Edmund, how now? What newes?

Baft. So please your Lordship, none.

Glo. Why so carnefully seekes you to put vp y Letter? I know no newes, my Lord.

Glo. What Paper were you reading?

Baft. Nothing my Lord.

Glo. No? what needeth then that terrible dispatch of it into your Pocket? The quality of nothing, hath not such needes to hide it feele. Let's fee: come, if it be noothing, I shall not neede Spectacles.

Baft. I beeche you Sir, pardon mee; it is a Letter from my Brother, that I haue not all ore-read; and for so much as I haue perus'd, I finde it not fit for your ore-looking.

Glo. Glue me the Letter, Sir.

Baft. I shall offend, either to detain, or give it:
The Contents, as in part I understand them, Are too blame.

Glo. Let's fee, let's fee.

Baft. I hope for my Brothers justification, hee wrote this but as an errly, or tale of my Verue.

Glo. feared. This politic, and reverence of Age, makes the world bitter to the bitt' of our times: keepes us from vs till our oldnesse cannot relieth them. I begin to finde an idle and sad bondage, in the appression of aged tyrannyes, who preyes not as it hath power, but as it is suffer'd. Come to mee, that of this I may speakke more. If our Father would sleepe till I wake'd him, you should enioy baffe the Reuennew ever for ever, and live the belov'd of your Brother. Edgar.

Hum? Conspiracy? Sleepe till I wake him, you should enioy halfe his Reuennew: my Sonne Edgar, bad bee a hand to write this? A heart and braine to breedie it in? When came you to this? Who brought it?

Baft. It was not brought mee, my Lord; there's the cunning of it. I found it throwne in at the Cæment of my Clofet.

Glo. You know the character to be your Brothers?

Baft. If the matter were good my Lord, I durst swear it were his: but in respect of that, I would faine thinke it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Baft. It is his hand, my Lord: but I hope his heart is not in the Contenent.

Glo. Has he never before founded you in this bufines?

Baft. Neuer my Lord. But I have heard him oft main-taine it to be fitt, that Sonnes at perfect age, and Fathers declin'd, the Father should bee as Ward to the Son, and the Sonne should be Reuensnew.

Glo. O Villain, villain: his very opinion in the Letter. Abhorred Villainne, vnnatural, detested, brutish Villainne; worre then brutish: Go firrah, seekes him: ile apprehend him. Abominable Villainne, where is he?

Baft. I do not well know my L. If it shall pleafe you to suspend your indignation against my Brother, fil you can derive from him better testimonie of his intent, you shoul run a certaine course: where, if you violently proceed againt him, misfaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your owne Honor, and shake in pieces, the heart of his obedience. I dare pawnes downe my life for him, that he hath writ this to feele my affection to your Honor, & to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Thinke you fo?

Baft. If your Honor judge it meete, I will place you where you shall heare vs conferre of this, and by an Auricular assurance have your satisfaction, and that without any further delay, then this very Euening.

Glo. He cannot bee such a Moniter. Edmund secke him out: winde me into him, I pray you: frame the Business after your owne wisdome. I would vnlace my felte, to be in a due resolution.

Baft. I will fecke him Sir, preffently: conuey the Business as I shall find meanes, and acquaint you withall.

Glo. These late Eclipes in the Sun and Moone pertain no good to vs: though the widsome of Nature can reason it thus, and thus, yet Nature finds it selfe soured by the frequent effects. Loue cooles, friendship falls off, Brothers divide. In Cities, mutinies; in Countries, discord; in Pallaces, Treason; and the Bond crack'd, 'twixt Sonne and Father. This villainne of mine comes vnder the prediction; there's Son against Father, the King falleth from by of Nature, there's Father against Child(e). We haue feene the bell of our time. Machinations, hollownesse, treacherie, and all ruinous disorders follow vs diversly to our Graues. Find out this Villain Edmund, it shall lofe theer nothing, do it carefull: and the Noble & true-harte(d) Kent banish'd: his offence, honesty. 'Ts strange. Exit Baft.

Baft. This is the excellent folly of the world, that when we are sicke in fortune, often the卉urfs of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our difficulties, the Sun, the Moone, and Starres, as if we were villains on necessitie, Fodes by hauefully compulsion, Knaues, Theues, and Treachers by Spherically predominance. Drunkards, Lyars, and Adulterers by an infir'd obedience of Planetary influence; and all that we are cull'd in, by a divine thrufing on. An admirable evasion of Whore-maker-man, to lay his Goatish disposition on the charge of a Starre, My father compounded with my mother vnder the Drag ons tail(s), and my Nativitie was vnder Vrfe Maior, so that it followes, I am rough and Leacheros. I should haue bin that I am, had the maidenleft Starre in the Firmament twinkeld on my battardizing.

Enter Edgar.

Pat he comes like the Catastrophe of the old Comedie; my Cye is villanous Melancholy, with a fighke like Ten o'Bedlam. O these Eclipes do portend these disjions. Fa, Sol, La, Me.

Edg. How now Brother Edmund, what serius contemplation are you in?

Baft. I am thinking Brothor of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these Eclipses.

Edg. Do you bluse your felte with that?

Baft. I promife you, the effects he writes of, succede unhapily.

When saw you my Father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Baft. Spake you with him?

Edg. 1, two hours together.

Baft. Parted you in good termes? Found you no dis-pleasure in him, by word, nor countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Baft. Benthink your felte wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his prense, vntill some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this inftant so rageth in him, that with the mif-chief chief of your person, 'tis would fearfully slay.

Edg. Some Villains hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear, I pray you have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes flower: and as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fittingly bring you to hear me Lord speak: pray ye goe, there's my key: if you do thire abroad, goe arm'd.

Edg. Arm'd, Brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best, I am no honest man, if ther be any good meaning toward you, I have told you what I have seene, and heard: But faintly, Nothing like the image, and horror of it, pray you away.

Edg. Shah! I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do forbear you in these busines: A Credulous Father, and a Brother Noble, Whose nature is so farre from doing harms, That he suppos'd none: on whose foolish honesty My pracies ride exile: I fee the businesse.

Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit, All with me's mecte, that I can fashion fit.

Enter Generill, and Seward.

Gen. Did my Father strike my Gentleman for chiding of his Fool's?

Sre. 1 Madam.

Gen. By day and night, he wrongs me, every howre He flashes into one greate crime, or other, That setts vs all at odds: I neate endure it; His Knights grow riotous, and himselfe vpbraides vs On every triffe. When he returns from hunting, I will not speake with him, fay I am sicke, If you come slacks of former servises, You shall do well, the fault of it I lye anfwer.

Sre. He's comming Madam, I hear him.

Gen. Put on what weary negligence you please, You and your Fellowes, I'de haue it come to question; If he diftaste it, let him to my Sifter, Whole mind and mine I know in that are one, Remember what I haue fayd.

Sre. Well Madam.

Gen. And let his Knights have colder looks among you: what grows of it no matter, advise your fellows fo, I lye write straight to my Sifter to hold my course prepare for dinner.

Exit.

Enter Kent.

Kent. If but as will I other accents borrow, That can my speech defual my good intent May carry through it felle to that tull illude For which I raise my likenesse. Now banish Kent, If thou canst serue where thou doft stand condemn'd, So may it come, thy Matter whom thou lou'st, Shall find thee full of labours.

Enter Lear and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a lot for dinner, go get it ready hownow, what art thou?

Kent. A man Sir.

Lear. What doth thou professe? What wouldst thou with vs?

Kent. I do professe to be no lefe then I feemeto serue him truely that will put me in trust, to loue him that is honest, to concure with him that is wife and fakes little, to feare judgement, to fight when I cannot choofe, and to eate no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest hearted Fellow, and as poore as the King.

Lear. If thou be't as poore for a subiect, as hee's for a King, thou art poore enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Seruice.

Lear. Who wouldft thou serue?

Kent. You.

Lear. Do't thou know me fellow?

Kent. No Sir, but you have that in your countenance, which I would faine call Mafter.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What seruices canst thou do?

Kent. I can keepe honest counfaile, ride, run, marte a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plaine meffe bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the beft of me, is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young Sir to loue a woman for finging, nor so old to dore on her for any thing. I haue yeares on my backe forty eight.

Lear. Follow me, thou shalt serue me, if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner ho, dinner, where's my knaue? my Foele? Go you and call my Foele hither. You you Sirrah, where's my Daughter?

Enter Seward.

Sre. So pleafe you --

Lear. What faies the Fellow there? Call the Clotpole backe : wher's my Foele? Ho, I think the world's allepe, how now? Where's that Mungrell?

Knigbt. He faies my Lord, your Daughters is not well.

Lear. Why came not the flae backe to me when I called him?

Knigbt. Sir, he answered me in the roundell manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not?

Knigbt. My Lord, I know not what the matter is, but to my judgement your Highness is not entertain'd with that Ceremonious affections as you were wont, ther's a great abatements of kindnesse appears as well in the generall dependants, as in the Duke himselfe also, and your Daughter.

Lear. Ha! Sait thou fo?

Knigbt. I bifeech you pardon me your Lord, if I bee mistaken, for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your Highness wrong'd.

Lear. Thou but remembreth me of mine owne Conception, I have perceiv'd a most faint neglect of late, which I have rather blamed as mine owne zealous curiosities, then as a very pretence and purpofe of vnkindnesse: I will looke further into't : but where's my Foele? i have not feene him this two daies.

Knigbt. Since my young Ladies going into France
Sir, the Foole hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that. I have noted it well, goo you and tell my Daughter, I would speake with her. Goe you call hither my Foole; Oh you Sir, you, come you hither Sirs who am I Sir?

Enter Seward.

Ste. My Ladies Father.

Lear. My Ladies Father? my Lords knaue, you whorson dog, you blace, you curre.

Ste. I am none of thefe my Lord, I bleeche your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you Rafcall?

Ste. I le not be thrucken my Lord.

Kent. Nor tripe neither, you bafe Foot-ball plaiser.

Lear. I thanke thee fellow.

Thou seur't me, and I lese thee.

Kent. Come fir, arife, away, Ile teach you differences:

away, away, if you will measure your lopper length againe, tarry, but away, goo too, have you wiledome, fo.

Lear. Now my friendly knaue I thanke thee, there's earnest of thy servise.

Enter Foole.

Foole. Let me hire him too, here's my Coxcomb.

Lear. How now my pretty knaue, how doft thou?

Foole. Sirrah, you were blett take my Coxcomb.

Lear. Why my Boy?

Foole. Why? for taking ones part that's out of favour, nay, & thou canst not smile as the wind fits, thou'lt catch cold shortly, there take my Coxcomb; why this fellow he's banish'd two on his Daughters, and did the third a blesling against his will, if thou follow him, thou must needs weare my Coxcomb. How now Nunckle? would I had two Coxcombes and two Daughters.

Lear. Why my Boy?

Foole. If I gue them all my luing, I'll keepe my Cox-

combes my felle, there's mine, beg another of thy Daughters.

Lear. Take heed Sirrah, the whip.

Foole. Truth's a dog must to kennell, hee must bee whipt out, when the Lady Brach may fland by'thir and blinke.

Lear. A penfifull gall to me.

Foole. Sirha, Ile teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Foole. Marke it Nunclle;

Hau more then thou howeft,

So take leffe then thou howeft,

Lend leffe then thou oweft,

Ride more then thou goeft,

Leare more then thou troweft,

Set leffe then thou howeft;

Leave thy drinke and thy whyre,

And kepee in a dore,

And thou shalt haue more,

Then two tens to a fcore.

Kent. This is nothing Foole.

Foole. Then 'tis like the breath of an vnfeed Lawyer, you gave me nothing for's, can you make no vie of nothing Nunclle?

Lear. Why no Boy,

Nothing can be made out of nothing.

Foole. Prythee tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to he will not belece a Foole.

Lear. A bitter Foole.

Foole. Do's thou know the dfference my Boy, betweene a bitter Foole, and a sweet one.

Lear. No Lad, teach me.

Foole. Nunckle, glue me an egge, and Ile glue thee

two Crownes.

Lear. What two Crownes shall they be?

Foole. Why after I haue cut the egge i'th'middle and eate vp the mate, the two Crownes of the egge: when thou cloueft thy Crownes i'th'middle, and gau'rt away both parts, thou boar'th thine Asie on thy backe o're the dart, thou had'lt little wit in thy bald crowne, when thou gau'lt thy golden one away; if I speake like my felfe in this, let him be whipt that first finds it fo.

Foole had nere leffe grace in a yeere,

For willemen are growne poppli,

And know not how their wits to weare,

Their manners are fo aphel.

La. When were you wont to be fo full of Songs sirrah?

Foole. I have vled it Nunckle, ere since thou mad'lt thy Daughters thy Mothers, for when thou gau'lt them the rod, and put'lt downe thine owne breeches, then they For lodaine toy did weep, And I for sorrow fang,

That such a King should play bo-pepe,

And goe the Foole among.

Prty thy Nunckle keeps a Schoolemafter that can teach thy Foole to lie, I would faine learn to lie.

Lear. And you lie sirrah, we'll haue you whipt.

Foole. I maruell what kin thou and thy daughters are, they'll haue me whipt for speaking true: thou'll haue me whipt for lying, and sometimes I am whipt for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing then a foole, and yet I would not be thee Nunckle, thou haft pared thy wit o'both fides, and left nothing i'th'middle, heere comes one o'the parings.

Enter Gonerill.

Lear. How now Daughter? what makes that Frontlet on? You are too much of late Ilybrown.

Foole. Thou want a pretty fellow when thou hast no need to care for her frowning, now thou art an O without a figure, I am better then thou art now, I am a Foole, thou art nothing. Yes forfooth I will hold my tongue, fo your face bids me, though you lay nothing.

Mum, mum, he that keeps nor crust, not crum,

Weary of all, shall want fome. That's a sheld Pefco.

Gar. Not only Sir this, your all-lycenc'd Foole,

But other of your infolent reitune

Do hourly Carpe and Quarrell, breaking forth

In ranks, (and not to be endur'd) not Sir.

I had thought by making this well knowne vnto you,

To have found a faire redreffe, but now grow fearefull

By what your felle too late haue spoke and done,

That you protect this courfe, and put it on

By your allowance, which if you should, the fault

Would not exce fentre, nor the redifles flpeepe,

Which in the tender of a wholesome weale,

Might in their working do you that offence,

Which elie were fhame, that then needlettie

Will call dijfert proceding.

Foole. For you know Nunckle, the Hedge-Sparrow fed the Cuckoo so long, that it's had head bit off by it young, so out went the Candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our Daughter? (dome

Gar. I would you would make vie of your good wife-

(Whereof I know you are fraught), and put away

These dispositions, which of late transport you

From what you rightly are.

Foole. May
The Tragedie of King Lear

289

Fools. May not an Allie know, when the Cart draws the Horse?
Woop lugge I lone thee.

Lear. Do's any heere know me?
This is not Lear:
Do's Lear walke thus? Speake thus? Where are his eies?
Either his Notion weakens, his Dicernings Are Lethargied. Ha! Waking? 'Tis not so?
Who is it that can tell me who I am?

Fools. Lear's shadow.

Lear. Your name, faire Gentlewoman?

Gen. This admiration Sir, is much oth'faour
Of other your new pranks. I do beceech you
To vnderfand my purpoures aight:
As you are Old, and Ruerened, should be Wife.
Here do you keepe a hundred Knights and Squires, Men fo disorder'd, fo debooth'd, and bold,
That this our Court infected with their manners,
Shews like a riotous Inne; Epicurifme and Luft
Makes it more like a Tauerne, or a Brothell,
The neer'd Pallace. The blame it felle doth speake
For infant remedy. Be then defir'd
By her, that elfe will take the thing the beggs,
A little to difquanti your Traine,
And the remaners that shall fill depend,
To be fuch men as may befert your Age,
Which know themselves, and you.

Lear. Darkneffe, and Dulle.
Saddle my horffes: call my Traine together.
Degenerate Battard, Ie not trouble thee;
Yet have I left a daughter.

Gen. You strike my people, and your disorder'd table, make Servants of their Better.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repeats:
Is it your will, Speake Sir? Prepare my Horfes.
Ingrauntide! thou Marble-hearted Fiend,
More hideous when thou fiue'ft thee in a Child,
Then the Sea-monfter.

Ab. Pray Sir be patient.

Lear. Detefted Kite, thou lyeft.
My Traine are men of choice, and rarest parts,
That all particulars of dutie know,
And in the moft exact regard, support
The worshipes of their name. O moft small fault,
How vgly did it thou in Cordella thew?
Which like an Engine, wearfht my frame of Nature
From the first place: drew from my heart all love,
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beate at this gate that let thy Folly in,
And thy deere Judgement out. Go, go, my people.

Ab. My Lord, I am guiltifte, as I am ignorant
Of what hath mov'd you.

Lear. It may be fo, my Lord.

Heare Nature, heare deere Goddefe, heare:
Suspend thy purpofe, if thou did'tt intend
To make this Creature fruitful:
Into her Womb coney flarity
Drie vp in her the Organs of increafe,
And from her derogate body, neuer spring
A Babe to honor her. If the muft terme,
Create her childe of Spleene, that it may lye
And be a thwart difnatural torment to her.
Let it flame wrinkles in her brow of youth,
With cadent Teares fret Channels in her cheekes,
Turne all her Mothers paines, and benefits
To laughter, and contempt: That she may feele,
How sharper then a Serpents tooth it is,
To have a thanklesse Childife. Away, away.

Ab. Now Gods that we adore,
Whereof comes this?

Gen. Neuer affift thy felle to know more of it:
But let his disposition haue that scope
As dotage giues it.

Enter Lear.

Lear. What fiftle of my Followers at a clap?
Within a fort night?

Ab. What's the matter, Sir?

Lear. Ile tell thee:
Life and death, I am affham'd
That thou haft power to thalke my manhood thus,
That thefe hot teares, which breake from me perfufe
Should make thee worth them.

Blafes and Foggles upon thee:
Th'ninted woundinges of a Fathers curfe
Pierce euerie feme about thee. Old fond eyes,
Beweep this caufe againe, Ile plucke ye out,
And caft you with the waters that you looke
To temper Clay. Ha? Let it be fo.
I have another daughter,
Who I am fure is kinde and comfortable:
When the all hearre this of thee, with her naires
She'e flex thy Woulhifh village. Thou haft finde,
That Ile refume the shape which thou doft thinke
I hauce cait off for ever.

Gen. Do you make that?

Ab. I cannot be fo partiall Generill,
To the great Ioue I beare you.

Gen. Pray you content. What Ofwald, hoa?
You Sir, more Knaue then Foole, after your Master.

Fools. Nunkle Lear, Nunkle Lear,
Tarry, take the Foole with thee:
A Fox, when one has caught her,
And fuch a Daughter,
Should fure to the Slaughter,
If my Cap would buy a Halter,
So the Foole follows after.

Gen. This man hath good Counfell,
A hundred Knights?
'Tis politike, and safe to let him keep
At point a hundred Knights: yes, that on euerie dreame,
Each bus, each fiancile, each complaint; difflike,
He may enguage his digone with their powers,
And hold our lines in mercy. Ofwald, I fay.

Ab. Well, you may fear too farre.
Gen. Safer then truft too farre;
Let me fill take away the harms i feare,
Not fear all to be taken. I know his heart,
What he hath vter'd I have writ my Sifer:
If the fuffaine him, and his hundred Knights
When I hauce shew'd th'wiftffe.

Enter Steward.

How now Ofwald?
What have you writ that Letter to my Sifer?

Stew. I Madam.

Gen. Take you fome company, and away to horffe,
Informe her full of my particular feare,
And thereto adde fuch readeons of your owne,
As may compact it more. Get you gone,
The Tragedie of King Lear.

And haften your returne; no, no, my Lord,
This milky gentlenesse, and courfe of yours
Though I connemne not, yet vnder pardon
Your are much more at task for want of wifedom,
Then prai'd for harmefull misdemean.
Afb. How fare your elen may pierce I cannot tell;
Striving to better, oft we marre what's well.
Gen. Nay then —
Afb. Well, well, the'uent.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Lear, Kent, Gentleman, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gliifer with these Letters;
acquaint my Daughter no further with any thing you know; then comes from her demand out of the Letter, if your Diligence be not fpeedie, I shall be there afore
you.

Kent. I will not sleepe my Lord, till I have delivered your Letter.

Fool. If a mans braines were in's heele, what not in danger of kybes?

Lear. 1 Boy.

Fool. Then I pythee be merry, thy wilt shall not go flip-hod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha.

Fool. Shalt fee thy other Daughter will ufe thee kindly, for though she's as like this, as a Crabbe's like an Apple,yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What can't tell Boy?

Fool. She will take as like this as, a Crabbe do's to a Crab: thou canst tell why ones note stands 'Th'middle on's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why to keepe ones eyes of either fide's note, that what a man cannot smell out, he may fpy into.

Lear. 1 did her wrong.

Fool. Can't tell how an Oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a Snaille ha's a hone.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why to put's head in, not to glue it away to his daughters, and leave his hornes without a cafe.

Lear. I will forget my Nature, to kind a Father? Be my Horfes ready?

Fool. Thy Affes are gone about 'em; the reason why the feuen Starres are no mo then fouen, is a pretty reaon.

Lear. Because they are not eight.

Fool. Yes indeed, thou wouldst make a good Foole.

Lear. To talk againe perforce; Moniter Ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my Foole Numdick, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not haue bin old, till thou hadst bin wife.

Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad sweet Heauen:
keep me in temper, I would not be mad. How now are the Horfes ready?

Gen. Ready my Lord.

Lear. Come Boy.

Fool. She that's a Maid now, & laughs at my departu're,
Shall not be a Maid long, vnleffe things be cut shorter.

Acbtus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Roard, and Care, generally.

Baft. Saw thee Caran.

Car. And your Sir, I have bin
With your Father, and given him notice
That the Duke of Cornwall, and Regan his Duchefly
Will be here with him this night.

Fool. How comes that?

Car. Nay I know not, you have heard of the newes abroad, I mean the whisper'd ones, for they are yet but care-killing arguments.

Baft. Not I: pray you what are they?

Car. Have you heard of no likely Warnes toward,
"Twixt the Dukes of Cornwall, and Albany ?

Fool. Not a word.

Car. You may do then in time,
Fare you well Sir.

Baft. The Duke be here to night? The better be;
This weazes it ifle perforne into my businesse,
My Father hath fet guard to take my Brother,
And I have one thing of a queasie queftion
Which I must act, Briefenesse, and Fortune worke.

Enter Edgar.

Brother, a word, difcend; Brother I fay,
My Father watches: O Sir, fly this place,
Intelligence is given where you are hid;
You have now the good advantage of the night,
Have you not spoken 'gainft the Duke of Cornwall?
Here's comming bither, now it's night, it's hafe,
And Regan with him, have you nothing laid
Upon his parte 'gainft the Duke of Albany?

Adulfe your felke.

Edg. I am fure on't, not a word.

Baft. I hear my Father comming, pardon me:
In cunning, I must draw my Sword vpon you:

Draw, feme to defend your felke,
Now quit you well.

Yeeld, come before my Father, light hoa, here,
Fly Brother, Torches, Torches, to farewell.

Exit Edgar.

Some blood drawnne on me, would beget opinion
Of my more fierce endeavoure. I have feme drunkards
Do more then this in sport; Father, Father,
Stop, stop, no helpe?

Enter Gliifer, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now Edmund, where's the villaines?

Baft. Here flod he in the dark, his harfe Sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charmes, conjuring the Moone
To hafe auspicious Mithrift.

Glo. But where is he?

Baft. Lookle Sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Baft. Fledd this way Sir, when by no means he could.

Glo. Perfuade him, he go after. By no means, what?

Baft. Perfwade me to the muther of your Lordhip, But
But that I told him the revenging Gods,
*Gainst Paricles did all the thunder bend,
Spoke with how manifold, and strong a Bond
The Child was bound to th' Father: Sir in fine,
Seeing how lustily opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion
With his prepared Sword, he charges home
My vnprov'd body, latch'd mine arm:
And when he saw my beet alarum'd spirits
Bold in the quarrels right, rous'd to th' encounter,
Or whether gat't by the noyse I made,
Full fadaneously he fled.

Ghis. Let him fly pairwise:
Not in this Land shall he remaine vncaught
And found; dispatch, the Noble Duke my Matter,
My worthy Arch and Patron comes to night,
By his authority I will proclaime it,
That he which finds him shall secure our thanks,
Bringing the murderous Coward to the stake:
He that conceals him death.

Thrift. When I diffus'd him from his intent,
And found him plight to doe it, with curt speech
I threaten'd to discover him; he replied,
Thou vpoffessing Battard, doft thou thinke,
If I would stand against thee, would the repolf
Of any truth, verue, or worth in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No, what should I deny,
(As this I would, though thou didst produce
My very Character) I'd turne it all
To thy fuggiflion, plot, and damm'd praflice:
And thou must make a duality of the world,
If they not thought the good of my death
Were very pregnant and potentall spirits
To make thee feeke it.

Glo. O strange and fainted Villaine,
Would he deny his Letter, fay he?
Harke, the Dukes Trumers, I know not wher he comes;
All Ports I be bare, the villaine shall not escap'e,
The Duke muft grant me that: befides, his picture
I will fend farre and neere, that all the kingdom
May haue note of him, and of my land,
(Loiall and naturall Boy) He worke the meanes
To make thee capaile.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now my Noble friend, since I came hither
(Which I can call but now,) I have heard strange gifts.
Reg. If it be true, ill vengeance comes too short
Which can pursue th'offender; how soft my Lord?
Glo. O Madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.
Reg. What did my Fathers Godfanne feeke your life?
He whom my Father nam'd, your Edgar?
Glo. O Lady, Lady, shame would haue it hid.
Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous Knights
That tended upon my Father?
Glo. I know not Madam, 'tis too bad, too bad.
Buft. Yes Madam, he was of that comfort.
Reg. No maruauele then, though he were ill afficted,
'Tis they have put him on the old mans death,
To have th'opecence and waft of his Revenues:
I haue this present evening from my Sifer
Beene well inform'd of them, and with such cautions,
That if they come to coloures at my house,
Ile not be there.
Cor. Nor I, affaie thee Regan.

Edmund, I heare that you have shewne yout Father
A Child-like Office.
Buft. It was my duty Sir.
Glo. He did beare his praflice, and receiv'd
This hurt you fe.'true, refusing to apprehend him.
Cor. Is he pursu'd?
Glo. I my good Lord.
Cor. If he be taken, he shall neuer more
Be fear'd of doing harme, make your owne purpose,
How in my strength you pleafe: for you Edmund,
Whose vertue and obedience doth this Iflant:
So much commend it fife, you shall be ours,
Nature's of such deede trueth, we shall much need:
You we firft fize on.
Buft. I shall fure you Sir truely, how euer efe.
Glo. For him I thank your Grace.
Cor. You know not why we came to visit you?
Reg. Thus out of fefion, threatning darke ey'd night,
Occations Noble Gliﬅer of home prize,
Wherein we muft haue vit of your aduife.
Our Father he hath wil'd to bath our Sifter,
Of differences, which I beft thought it fit
To anfwer frome our home: the furious Meffengers
From hence attend dispatch, our good ol Friend,
Lay comforts to your bolome, and befow
Your needfull confolations to our busineses,
Which caues the infant vit.
Glo. I ferue you Madam,
Your Gracees are right welcome.

Exeunt. Flourish.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Kent, and Steward secretly.

Stew. Good downun to thee Friend, art of this house?
Kent. I.
Stew. Where may we fet our horses?
Kent. I'th' myre.
Stew. Prythee, if thou lou'ft me, tell me.
Kent. I loue thee not.
Stew. Why then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in Lipbary Pinfold, I would make thee care for me.
Stew. Why do'lt thou vfe me thus? I know thee not.
Kent. Fellow I know thee.
Stew. What do'lt thou know me for?
Kent. A Knaue, a Raifcall, an eater of broken meate, a wife, proud, shallow, beggerly, three-fuitted hundred pound, filthy woodd-robbing knave, a Lilly-livered, aflion-taking, whoreon glaffe-gazing fluper-flereable finnicall Rogue, one Trunke-inherent flue, one that would't be a Baud in way of good ferveice, and art nothing but the compollition of a Knaue, Beggar, Coward, Pandar, and the Sonne and Heire of a Mungrell Bitch, one whom I will bene into clamours whining, if thou deny't the least fillable of thy addition.
Stew. Why, what a monftrous Fellow art thou, thus to raile on one, that is neither knowne of thee, nor knowes thee?
Kent. What a brazen-fac'd Varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me? Is it two dayes since I tript vp thy heelees, and beate thee before the King? Draw you rogue, for
The Tragedie of King Lear.

for though it be night,yet the Moone shines, Ile make a top of'th Moonshine of you, you whoreson Culleny Barber-monger,drew.

Ster. Away, I have nothing to do with thee.
Kent. Draw you Raffall, you come with Letters against the King, and take Vanite the puppets part, against the Royalties of her Father; draw you Rogue, or Ile so carbonado your flankes, draw you Raffall, come your wales.
Str. Helpe, ho, murther, helpe.
K. Kent. Strike you flaine; fland you next flawe, flrike.
Ster. Helpe hoa,murther,murther.

Enter Baguard, Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, Servants.

Bag. How now, what's the matter Part.
Kent. With you goodman Boy, if you please, come, Ile flee ye, come on youg Rafter.
Glo. Weapons, Armes? what's the matter here?
K. Kent. Keep peace vpon your bluees, he dies that strikes againe, what is the knave?
Reg. The Messengers from our Sifter, and the King?
Cor. What is your difference, speake?
Ster. I am fearse in breath my Lord.
Kent. No Marvell, you have to beafl'd your valour, you cowardly Raffall, nature displeantes in thee, Taylor made thee.
Cor. Thou art a strange fellow, a Taylor make a man?
K. Kent. A Taylor Sir, a Stone-cutter, or a Painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had bin bin but two years oth trade.
Cor. Speake yet, how grew your quarrell?
Str. This ancient Ruffian Sir, whose life I have fpar'd at fuce of his grey-beard.
K. Kent. Thou whereon Zed, thou vnneceffary letter: my Lord, if you will give me leenu, I will tread this vnbounded villain into morter, and daube the wall of a lakes with him. Spare my grey-beard, you wogatalle.
Cor. Peace firafl,
You bafity knave, know you no revouence?
K. Kent. Yes Sir, but anger hath a priliblode.
Cor. Sir, why art thou angry?
K. Kent. That fuch a flase as this fhould weare a Sword, Who weares no honesty: fuch flilling royles as thef, Like Rats oft bite the holy cordsa twine,
Which are tintrance, tin'sloodo: smooth evey paflion
That in the natures of their Gods rebel,
Being able to bite, flnow to the colder mooves,
Revenge, affirms, and turne their Halcion bakes
With evey gall, and wary of their Masters,
Knowing naught (like dogges) but following:
A plague vpon your Eilepitude village,
Smole you my speeches, as I were a Foole?
Glofe, if I had you vpon Sarus Paine,
I'd friue ye cackling home to Camelot.
Cor. What art thou mad old Fellow?
Glof. How fell you out, fay that?
K. Kent. No contraries hold more anipathy,
Then I, and fuch a knave.
Cor. Why do'th thou call him Knave?
What is his fault?
K. Kent. His countenance likes me not.
Cor. No more perchance do's mine, nor his,nor hers,
Then I, and fuch a knave.
I have fene better faces in my time,

Then bands on any shoulder that I fee
Before me,at this infant.
Cor. This is some Fellow,
Who hauing beene praid'd for blunncelle,both auffect
A faucy roughe, and contamnes the garb
Quite from his Nature. He cannot flatter he,
An honett mind and plaine, he mutt fpake true,
And they will take it so,if not, he's plaine.
These kind of Knaves I know, which in this plaine
Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends,
Then twenty filly-ducking felonoues,
That fretched their duties nicey.
K. Kent. Sir, in good faith, in financer verity,
Ynder th'allowance of your great auffect,
Who the influence like the wreath of radiant fire
On flicking Palment front.
Cor. What mean'd by this?
K. Kent. To go out of my diacle, which you dicommend fo much; I know Sir, I am no flatterer, he that be guil'd you in a plaine accent, was a plaine Knawe, which for my part I will not be, though I Should win your difpleasure to entreat me too.
Cor. What was th'ooffence you gave him?
Str. I never gave him any:
It pleas'd the King his Matter very late
To strike at me vpon his misconfection,
When he compact, and flattering his difpleasure
Tript me behinding downe, infalted, rail'd,
And put upon him fuch a deale of Man,
That worthied him, got prates of the King,
For him attempting, who was felle-fubbed,
And in the fhemment of this dead exploit,
Drew on me here again.
K. Kent. None of these Rofhees, and Cowards
But Afax is there Foole.
Cor. Fetch forth the Stocks?
You fubborne ancient Knawe, you recernt Bragart,
We'll teach you.
K. Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:
Call not your Stocks for me, I ferue the King.
On whose imployment I was fen to you,
You fhall doe fmall refpacts, how too bold malice
Against the Grace, and Perfon of my Matter,
Stocking his Messenfer.
Cor. Fetch forth the Stocks;
As I haue life and Honour, there fhall he fit till Noone.
K. Kent. Till noone fell till night my Lord, and all night too.
K. Kent. Why Madam, if I were your Fathers dog,
You should not yle me fo.
Reg. Sir, being his Knave, I will. Stocky brought our.
Cor. This is a Fellow of the felle fame colour,
Our Sitter speakes of. Come, bring away the Stocks.
Glof. Let me befeech your Grace, not to do fo,
The King his Matter, needs must take it ill
That he flightly valued in his Messenfer,
Should have him thus restrained.
Cor. Ile anfwer that.
Reg. My Sifer may recieve it much more worfe,
To have her Gentleman abus'd, affaulted.
Cor. Come my Lord, away. Exit.
Glof. I am sorry for thee friend, 'tis the Duke pleafure,
Whole difpofition all the world well knowes
Will not be rub'd nor flop't, ile entreat for thee.
K. Kent. Pray do not Sir, I haue watch'd and travaill'd hard,
Some time I fhall divine out, the refl lie whiffle:
A good mans fortune may grow out at heelest.

Act II, Scene I

> Kent. By law, I sware I.

> Lear. They durt not do't.

They could not, would not do't: 'tis worse then murther,

To do upon respect such violent outrage:

Refuse me with all modest haufe, which way

Thou might'rt defend, or they impose this viage,

Comming from vs.

Kent. My Lord, when at their home

I did commend your Highness Letters to them,

Ere I was rifen from the place, that shewed

My dutie kneeling, came there a recking Poole,

Stew'd in his haufe, halfe breathlesse, painting forth

From Generall his Misfris, Falstations;

Deluer'd Letters spight of intermission,

Which prefectly they read on those contents

They hummon'd vp their meiney, straight tooke Horfe,

Commanded me to follow, and attend

The leisur of their answer, gave me cold looks,

And meeting heere the other Meffengers,

Whose welcome I perceiv'd had poifon'd mine,

Being the very fellow which of late

Displaid so fawely against your Highness,

Faining more man then wit about me, drew

He rais'd the houfe, with loud and coward cries,

Your Sonne and Daughter found this trefpaffe worth

The shame which heere it suffers.

Fool. Winters not gon yet, if the wil'd Greese fly that Fathers that weare rags, do make their Children blind,

But Fathers that bare bags, shall fee their children kind.

Fortune that arrant whore, nere turns the key to'th poore,

But for all this thou shalt haue as many Dolors for thy Daughters, as thou canst tell in a yeare.

Lear. Oh how this Mother fweas vp toward my heart!

Fool. Hisfories, dowe thou climing Sorrow,

Thy Elements below where is this Daughter?

Kent. With the Earle Sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not, flay here.

Gen. Made you no more offence,

But what you spake of?

Kent. None:

How chance the the King comes with so small a number?

Fool. And thou haft beene fet 1' th'Stockes for that question, shou'd it well deferu'd it.

Kent. Why Foole?

Fool. We'l fet thee, to schoole to an Ant, to teach thee ther' no labouring, 1' th' winter. All that follow their nozes, are led by their eyes, but blinde men, and there's not a nofe among twenty, but can smell him that's flinking;

let go thy hold, when a greatwheele runs downe a hilly, left it brake thy necke with following. But the great one that goes vpward, let him drawthee after:

when a wifesman giues thee better counsell giue me mine

againe, I would hauue none but knaues follow it, since a

Foole giues it.

That Sir, which sarses and feakes for gaine,

And fowles, but for forme;

Will packe, when it begins to raine,

And leve thee in the fomere,

But I will tarry, the Foole will flay,

And let the wifesman flie.

The knaue turns Foole that runnes away,

The Foole noknaue perdie.

Enter Lear, and Gloster:

Kent. Where learn'd you this Foole?

Fool. Not 1' th' Stocks Foole.

---

Exit.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Lear. Deny to speake with me?
They are ficker, they are weary.
They have travailed all the night? meece fetches,
The images of revolt and flying off.
Fetch me a better answer.
Glo. My deere Lord,
You know the fiery quality of the Duke,
How vnremouable and fixt he is
In his owne course.

Lear. Vengeance, Plague, Death, Confusion:
Fiery? What quality? Why Gloifer, Gloifer,
I'd speake with the Duke of Cornwall, and his wife.
Glo. Well my good Lord, I haue inform'd them fo.
Lear. Inform'd them? Do'ft thou understand me man.
Glo. I my good Lord.

Lear. The King would speake with Cornwall,
The deere Father.
Would with his Daughter speake, commands, tend, fer
Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood: (suic.
Fiery? The fiery Duke, tell the hot Duke that
No, but not yet, may be he is not well,
Infirmity doth fill neglect all office,
Wherein our healt is bound, we are not our felves,
When Nature being oppriff, commands the mind
To suffer with the body; Ilfe forbear,
And am fallen out with my more headier will,
To take the indispos'd and fickly fit,
For the found man, Death on my rate: wherefore
Should be fit here? This act pervertes me,
That this remotion of the Duke and her
Is prufle only. Give me my Servant forth;
Goe tell the Duke, and's wife, Il'd speake with them:
Now, prefently: bid them come forth and heare me,
Or at their Chamber doore Ille beat the Drum,
Till it cry fiefe to death.
Glo. I would have all well betwixt you. Exit.

Lear. Oh me my heart! My rying heart! But downe.
Fode. Cry to it Nunckle, as the Cockney did to the Ecles, when the put 'em Phe Phefle alive, the knap 'em o'th coxcombes with a fickle, and cryed downe wantons, downe; 'twas her Brother, that in pure kindneffe to his Horfe buttered his Hay.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloifer, Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.
Corn. Haile to your Grace. Kent here fet at liberty.
Reg. I am glad to fee your Highneffe.

Lear. Regan, I thinke your are: I know what reafon
I have to thinke fo, if thou shoul'd not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy Mother Tombe,
Sepulchring an Adultrefte: O are you free?
Some other time for that. Beloved Regan,
Thy Sifters naught: oh Regan, she hath tied
Sharpe-tooth'd vulkenende, like a vulture heere,
I can scarce speake to thee, thou'lt not beleue
With how depraid a quality. Oh Regan.
Reg. I pray you Sir, take patience, I haue hope
You leffe know how to value her defert,
Then fhe to fcant her dutie.
Lear. Say? How is that?
Reg. I cannot thinke my Siffer in the leaft
Would falee her Obligation. If Sir perchance
She have restrained the Riots of your Followes,
"Tis on fuch ground, and to fuch wholesome end,
As cleerees from all blame.
Lear. My curtes on her.

Reg. O Sir, you are old,
Nature in you flonds on the very Verge
Of his confine: you shoul'd be rul'd, and led
By some difterence, that difcernes your rate
Better then you your felle: therefore I pray you,
That to our Siffer, you do make returne,
Say you were wrong'd her.

Lear. Ask ye her forgiveffe.
Do you but mark how this becomes the house?
Deere daughter, I confesse that I am old;
Age is vnnecefsary: on my knees I begge,
That you vouchsafe me Raymmet, Bed, and Food.
Reg. Good Sir, no more: there are vnafightly trickes:
Returne you to my Siffer.

Lear. Neuer Regan:
She hath abated me of halfe my Traine;
Look'd blanke upon me, flocke me with her Tongue
Moft Serpent-like, upon the very Heart.
All the for'd Vengeances of Heauen, fall
On her ingratefull top: strike her yong bones
You taking Ayres, with Lamentaffe.
Corn. Fye farr, he.
Le. You nimble Lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her cornfull eyes: Infect her Beauty,
You Fen-fuck'd Fogges, drawne by the powfull Sunne,
To fall, and bitter.
Reg. O the bleef Gods!
So will you with on me, when the rafh mood is on.

Lear. No Regan, thou fhal not have my curfe:
Thy tender-hefted Nature shall not give
Thee o're to harneffe: Her eyes are fierce, but thinne
Do comfort, and not burne. "Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my Traine,
To bandy haffy words, to fcant my fiftes,
And in conclusion, to oppofe the bolt
Againft my comming in. Thou better know't,
The Offices of Nature, bond of Childhood,
Eftacs of Cureffe, dues of Gratitute:
Thy halfe o'th'Kingdome halfo thou not forget,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good Sir, to'th'purpofe.

Lear. Who put my man i' th'Stockes?
Enter Seward.

Corn. What Trumpeter's that?
Reg. I know't, my Siffer: this approhes her Letter,
That he foone be here. Is you Lady come?

Lear. This is a Slauze, wholefafe borrowed pride
Dwels in the fickly grace of her he follows.
Out Varet, from my fight.
Corn. What means your Grace?
Enter Generell.

Lear. Who flocket my Servant Regan, I have good hope
Thou did not know on't.
Who comes here? O Heauens!
If you do love old men; if your fweet way
Allow Obedience; if you your felves are old,
Make it your caufe: Send downe, and take my part.
Art not alfo me to looke vpon this Beard?
O Regan, will you take her by the hand?
Glo. Why not by'th'hand Sir? How have I offended?
All's not offence that indifcretion finds,
And dotage termes fo.

Lear. O fides, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?
How came my man i' th'Stockes?
Corn. I fet him there, Sir: but his owne Diforders
Deferv'd
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Defen'd much leffe advancement.
Lear. You? Did you?
Reg. I pray you Father being weake, feeme fo.
If till the expiration of your Moneth
You will returne and solourne with my Sifer,
Dissimul halfe your traine, come then to me,
I am now from home, and out of that preouision
Which shall be needful for your entertainement.
Lear. Returne to her! and fifty men dissimul'd?
No, rather I abjure all rooves, and chuse
To wage against the enmitye oth'yers,
To be a Comrade with the Wolfe, and Owle,
Necellibes harpe pinch. Returne with her?
Why the hot-blooded France, that dowerkife tooke
Our pongs'ted borne, I could as well be brought To knee his Throne,and Squire-like pension beg,
To keepe base life a foote; returne with her?
Perfwade me rather to be flue and fumpter
To this detrefed groome.
Gon. At your choyce Sir.
Lear. I prythee Daughter do not make me mad,
I will not trouble thee my Child:farewell:
We'll no more meeze, no more fee one another.
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my Daughter,
Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine. Thou art a Byle,
A plague fore, or impos'd Carbulance
In my corrupted blood. But Ile not chide thee,
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it,
I do not bid the Thunder-bearer howte,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-Judging Ies.
Mend when thou canst, be better at thy lefse,
I can be patient, I can flay with Regan,
And my hundred Knights.
Reg. Not altogether fo,
I look'd not for you yet, nor am proued
For your fit welcome, give ear Sir to my Sifer,
For thofe that mingle reason with your passion,
Must be content to thinke you old, and fo,
But the knowes what the doe's.
Lear. Is this well spoken?
Reg. Other things Sir, what Fifty Followers?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yes, or fo many? Sith that both charge and danger,
Speakst gainft to great a number? How in one house
Should many people, under two commands
Hold amity? 'Tis hard, almoft impossible.
Gen. Why might not you fee my Lord, receive attendance
From thofe that call thee Servants, or from mine?
Reg. Why not my Lord?
If then they chanc'd to flacke ye,
We could comproule them; if you will come to me,
(For now I fea a danger,) I entreate you
To bring but flue and twentie, to no more
Will I give place or notice.
Lear. I gauze you all.
Reg. And in good time you gave it.
Den. I declare you my Guardians, my Depositories,
But kept a reformation to be followed
With such a number? What, muft I come to you
With flue and twentie? Regan, fayd you fo?
Reg. And fpeak't againe my Lord, no more with me.
Lear. Thofe wicked Creatures yet do look wel favour'd
When others are more wicked, not being the word.
Stands in fome ranke of praffe, Ile goe with thee,
Thy fifty yet doth double flue and twentie,
And thou art twice her Loue.
Gen. Hear me my Lord;
What need you flue and twentie? Ten? Or flue?
To follow in a house, where twice fo many
Have a command to tend you?
Reg. What need one?
Lear. O reason not the need: our cafe Beggars
Are in the pooreft thing superfluous,
Allow not Nature, more then Nature needs:
Mans life is cheaper as Beafa. Thou art a Lady;
If onely to go warme were gorgeous,
Why Nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keepes thee warme, but for true needes:
You Heauens, give me that patience, patience I need,
You fee me here (you Gods) a poore old man,
As full of griefe as age, wretched in both,
If it be you that fillers thefe Daughters hearts
Against their Father, foole me not fo much,
To bear it tamely:touch me with Noble anger,
And let not womans weapons, water drops,
Staine my mans cheeks. No you vnnatural Hags,
I will have fuch reuenges on you both,
That all the world fhal——I will do fuch things,
What they are yet, I know not, but they fhalbe
The terrors of the earth! you thinke Ile wepe,
No, Ile not wepe, I have full caufe of weeping.
Stormes and Tempeft.
But this heart fhal break into a hundred thousand flaws
Or ere Ile wepe; O Fools, I shall go mad.

Exeunt.

Corn. Let vs withdraw, 'twill be a Storme.
Reg. This house is little, the old man an'ts people,
Cannot be well bellow'd.
Gen. 'Tis his owne blame hath put himselfe from reft,
And muft needs taffe his folly.
Reg. For his particular, Ile receive him gladly,
But not one follower.
Gen. So am I purpof'd.
Where is my Lord of Glofter?
Enter Glofter.
Corn. Followed the old man forth, he is return'd.
Glo. The King is in high rage.
Corn. Whether is he going?
Glo. He cales to Horfe, but will I know not whether.
Corn. 'Tis bent to give him way, he leads himselfe.
Gen. My Lord, entreate him by no means to flay.
Glo. Alaske the night comes on, and the high winde
Do fiercely ruffle, for many Miles about
There's fearce a Bush.
Reg. O Sir, to wilfull men,
The injuries that they themefelues procure,
Must be their Schoole-Matters: fhat vp your doores,
He is attended with a desperate traine,
And what they may incence him too, being apt,
To haue his care abus'd, wildefome bids fear.
Corn. Shut vp your doores my Lord, 'tis a wil'd night,
My Regan counells well; come out oth'Torne.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Storms still. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, fearfully.
Kent. Who's there besides foole weather?
Gen. One minded like the weather, moft vnquiedy.

r 2
Kent.
So old, and white as this. O, ho! 'tis foule.

Fool. He that has a house to put's head in, has a good Head-piece.

The Codpiece that will house, before the head has any;
The Head, and he shall Lowfe: to Beggars marry many.

The man ' makes his Toe, what he has Hair, build make,
Shall of a Corne cry woes, and turne his heape to wake,
For there was never yet faire woman, but thee made mouthes in a glaife.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience, I will say nothing.
Kent. Who's there?
Fool. Marry here's Grace, and a Codpiece, that's a Wifeman, and a Fool.
Kent. Alas Sir are you here? Things that love night,
Lose not such nights as thefe: The watchfull Skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the darke
And make them keepe their Caves: Since I was man,
Such heeles of Fire, such burfs of horrid Thunder,
Such groanes of roaring Windes, and Raine, I neuer
Remember to have heard. Mams Nature cannot carry Thifflefinn, nor the faire.

Lear. Let the great Goddes
That keepes this dreadfull pudder o're our heads,
Finde out their enemies now. Tremble thou Wretch,
That haft within thee vndivulged Crimes
Wawhip of Juflice. Hide thee, thou Boudy hand;
Thou Periur'd, and thou Similar of Vrfe
That art Inceflous. Catiffes, to peeces shake
That vnder couer, and convenient feeming
Ha's prefis'd on mans life. Clofe pent-vp guiltes,
Rise your concealing Continents, and cry
Thefe dreadfull Summoners grace. I am a man,
More finn'd againft, then finning.
Kent. Alacke, bare-headed!
Gracious my Lord, hard by here is a Houell,
Some friendfhip will it lend you 'gainft the Tempeft:
Repefe you there, while I to this hard house,
[More harder then the bones whereof 'tis rain'd,
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Demy 'd me to come in] returne, and force
Their famed curtiffe.

Lear. My wits begin to turne.
Come on my boy. How dofl my boy? Art cold?
I am cold my felife. Where is this frayv, my Fellow?
The Art of our Neceffities is flrange,
And can make wilde things precious. Come, your Houell;
Poor Foolie, and Knaue, I have one part in my heart
That's farty yet for thee.
Foolie. He that has and a little-tyne wit,
With heigh-ho, the Windie and the Raine,
Muff make content with his Fortunes fit,
Though the Raine it raineth every day.

Le. True Boy: Come bring vs to this Houell. Exit. Fools.

Foolie. This is a brave night to coole a Curritian:
He fpake a Prophesie ere I go: When
When Prieffes are more in word, then matter; When When Brevers marre their Malt with water; When
When Nobles are their Taylors Tutors, No
Heretiques burn'd, but wench's Sutors; When
When every Cafe in Law, is right; When
When Squires in debt, nor no poore Knight; When
When Sladders do not live in Tongues; Nor Cut-purfes come not to thrones; When
When Fivors tell their Gold in the Field,

Scene Secunda.

Storme fill. Enter Lear and Fools.

Lear. Blow winde, & crack your cheekes, Rage blow
You Catafalts, and Hyricano's fpoft,
Till you have drench'd our Steeples, drown the Cockes.
You Sulph'rous and Thouft-executing Fires,
Vaunt-curriers of Oake-cleaning Thunder-bolts,
Singe my white head. And thou all-flaking Thunder,
Strike flat the thickes Rounduity o'th world,
Cracke Natures moulds, all garnines fpill at once
That makes ingratitude Man.

Fools. O Nunklie, Court holy-water in a dry house, is to better this Rain-water out o' doore. Good Nunkle, in, ask the Daughters bleeding, here's a night pitties neither Wifemen, nor Fools.

Lear. Rumble thy belly full: fit Fire, fpowt Raine:
Nor Raine, Winde, Thunder, Fire are my Daughters;
I taxe not you, you Elements with vnkindnesse.
I neuer gave you Kingsdome, call'd you Children;
You owe me no Subfcription. Then let fall
Your horrible pleffeure. Here I fland your Slave,
A poore, infirme, weake, and difpuft old man:
But yet I call you Srullie Minifters,
That will with two perrnicous Daughters loyne
Your high-engender'd Battles, gaine a head.
To shut me out? Pour on, I will endure:
In such a night as this? O Regan, Goneril,
Your old kind Father, whose frank heart gae all,
O that way madneffe lies, let me flan that:
No more of that.
Kent. Good my Lord enter here.
Lear. Prythee go in thy selfe, feake thine owne cafe,
This temptl will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more, but Ie goe in,
In Boy, goe first. You houfleffe poverrie,
Nay get thee in; Ie pray, and then Ile sleepe.
Poore naked wretches, where fo ere you are
That hide the pelting of this pitiflfe forme,
How shal your House-leffe heads, and vnfed futes,
Your lop'd, and window'd raggedlfe defend you
From feasions such as thele? O I have tane
Too little care of this: Take Phyftcke, Pump,
Expofe thy felfe to feel what wretches feele,
That thou maifft shake the superflux to them,
And shew the Heauens more iuft.

Enter Edgar, and Foole.
Edg. Fathom, and halfe, Fathom and halfe; poore Tom.
Foole. Come not in heere Nuncle, here's a spirit, he help me, heepe me.
Kent. Give me thy hand, who's there?
Foole. A spiritte, a spiritte, he fayes his name's poore
Tom.
Kent. What art thou that doft grumble there 'tis throw? Come forth.
Edg. Away, the foule Fiend follows me, through the charpe Hawthorne blow the winde. Humbe, goo to thy bed and warme thee.
Lear. Did't thou glee all to thy Daughters? And art thou come to this?
Edgar. Who gives any thing to poore Tom? Whom the foule fiend hath led thourgh Fire, and through Flame, through Sword, and Whirle-Poole, o're Bog, and Quagmire, that hath laid Knives under his Pillow, and Halters in his Puc, fet Rats-bane by his Porridge, made him Proud of heart, to ride on a Band troting Horse, over four locht Bridges, to courfe his owne Shaddow for a Traitor.
Bliffe thy fine Wite, Tom a cold. O do, do, do, do de, bliffe thee from Whirle-Winces, Starre-blafing, and tal-kling, do poore Tom some charite, whom the foule Fiend veres. There could I have him now, and there, and there and ai ne, and there.
Storme fill.
Lear. Ha's his Daughters brought him to this paffe
Could't thou fave nothing? Would'thou gue 'em all?
Foole. Nay, he refer'da a Blanket, elle we had bin all sham'd.
Lea. Now all the plauges that in the pendulous ayre
Hang fated o're mens faults, light on thy Daughters.
Kent. He hath no Daughters Sir.
Lear. Death Traitor, nothing could have fob'du'd
To fuch a lownesse, but his vnkind Daughters. (Nature is it the faction, that difcarded Fathers,
Should have thus little mercy on their fleth:
ludicrous punishment, 'twas this fleth begot
Thofe Pelican Daughters.
Edg. Pilkcock fat on Pilkcock hill, slowellow, loo, loo.
Foole. This cold night will turne vs all to Fools, and Maimen.
Edgar. Take heed o'pthoule Fiend, obey thy Pa-rnts, keepe thy words lafitice, swere not, commit not,
it with
with mans sworne Spoufe ; set not thy Sweet-heart on proud array. Tom's a cold.

Lear. What haft thou bin ?

Edg. A Seruingman? Proud in heart, and minde; that curld my hairre, wore Ghoeses in my cap ; fen'd the Luft of my Miftrns heart, and did the acte of darkneffe with her. Swore as many Oathes, as I spake words, & broke them in the sweet face of Heauen. One, that livest in the contingul of Luft, and wak'd to doe it. Wine lou'd I dreerely, Dice dreerely ; in Woman, out-Paramour'd the Turke. Falle of heart, light of eare, bloody of hand ; Hog in floth, Foe in stealth, Wolfe in greendinefe, Dog in madnes, Lyon in prey. Let not the creaking of fhooes, Nor the ruffling of Silkes, betray thoy poore heart to woman. Kepe thoy foute out of Brothels, thy hand out of Plackets, thy wits from Lenders Books, and defy the foule Fiend. Still through the Hauthorne blowes the cold winde : Sayas faumu, mun, nonny, Dolphin my Boy, Boy Seifj let him trot by.

Lear. Thou went better in a Grauc, then to infinere with thy owners body, this extremeittie of the Skies. Is man no more then this? Consider him well. Thou owl'd the Womme no Silke ; the Beat, no Hide ; the Sheepe, no Wooll ; the Cat, no perfume. Ha? Here's three 'on's are sophisticated. Thou art the thing it felle ; vnaccomodated man, is no more but foche a poore, bare, forked Animmal as thou art. Off, off you Lendings : Com, vn-button heere.

Enter Gloucefter, with a Torch.

Foole. Pythre Nuncle be contented, 'tis a naughtie night to swimme in. Now a little fire in a wildfe Field, were like an old Leachers heart, a fmall spark, all the reft on's body, cold : Looke, heere comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foule Flibbertygibbet; hee begins at Curfew, and walks at firft Coke : Hee gues the Web and the Pin, fipoints the eye, and makes the Harce-lippe ; Mildewes the white Wheetes, and burts the poore Creature of earth.

Switbold footed thrice the old, He met the Night-Mare,and her nine-fold ; Bid her a-light, and her troth-plight, And arroyt thee Witch, arroyt thee. Kent. How fares your Grace? Lear. What's he? Kent. Who's there? What's'thou feelest? Gloz. What are you there? Your Names?

Edg. Poore Tom, that estes the Swimming Frog, the Toad, the Tod-pole, the wall-Neut, and the water : that in the furte of his heart, when the foule Fiend rages, eats Cow-dung for Sallets; swallowes the old Rat, and the ditch-Dogge; drinks the green Mantle of the flanding Poole : who is whipt from Tything to Tything, and ftock, punished, and imprison'd : he hath three Suites to his backs, fire firis to his body : Horfe to ride, and weapon to weare :

Tobey in all your daughters hard commands: Though their Injunction be to barre thy doore, And let this Tyrannous night take hold vpon you, Yet have I ventured to come feeke you out, And bring you where both fire, and food is ready. Lear. Firft let me talke with this Philosopher, What is the caufe of Thunder?
Kent. Good my Lord take his offer, Go into th'Houfe. Lear. Ile talke a word with this fame lernd Theban: What is thy study?

Edg. How to prevent the Fiend, and to kill Vermine. Lear. Let me aske you one word in priuate. Kent. Importune him once more to go my Lord, His wits begin t'vnsettle. Gloz. Canst thou blame him? Learn. His Daughters feeke his death: Ah, that good Kent, He faid it would be thus: poore banifh'd man : Thou fayet the King growes mad, Ile tell thee Friend I am almoft mad my felfe. I had a Sonne, Now out-law'd from my blood ; he fought my life But lately : very late : I lou'd him (Friend) No Father his Sonne deerer: true to tell thee, The greefe hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this? I do befiech your grace.

Lear. O cry you mercy, Sir : Noble Philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a cold.

Gloz. In fellow there, into th'Houle; keep thee warm. Lear. Come, let's in all. Kent. This way, my Lord.

Lear. With him ;

I will keepe still with my Philosopher. Kent. Good my Lord, looth him: Let him take the Fellow.

Gloz. No words, no words, huff.

Edg. Childe Rowlend to the darke Tower came, His word was still, fic, fic, and fumme,
I smell the blood of a Britifh man.

Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cornwall, and Edmund.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his houfe.

Boft. How my Lord, I may be cenfur'd, that Nature thus gues way to Loyalitie, something feares mee to thinke

Corn. I now perceiue, it was not altogether your Brother enuill difposition made him feeke his death : but a prowouling merit fet a-work by a reproouable badnefe in himfelfe.

Boft. How malicious is my fortune, that I muft re- pent to be luft? This is the Letter which hee spoake of ; which approveth him an intelligent partie to the advanta- ges of France. O Heauen! that this Trefon were not ; nor I the detector.

Corn. Go with me to the Dutchoffe.

Boft. If the matter of this Paper be certin, you have mighty buffnesse in hand.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Corn. True or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester: seek out where thy Father is; that hee may bee ready for our apprehension.

Bail. If I find him comforting the King, it will suffuse his fulmination more fully. I will peruse in my course of Loyalty, though the conflict be fore betweene that, and my blood.

Corn. I will lay truth upon thee: and thou shalt finde a deere Father in my louse.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Kent, and Gloucester.

Glow. How good friend, I pray thee take him in thy arms; I have ore-heard a plot of death vpon him: There is a Litter ready, lay him in, And drive toward Douter friend, where thou shalt meete Both welcome, and protection. Take vp thy Mafter, If thou shoul'dst daily halfe an houre, his life With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in affured hope. Take vp, take vp, And follow me, that will to some prouision Glue thee quicke conduct. Come, come, away. Exeunt.

Glou. Good friend, I pray thee take him in thy arms; I have ore-heard a plot of death vpon him:
There is a Litter ready, lay him in;
And drive toward Douter friend, where thou shalt meete Both welcome, and protection. Take vp thy Maister,
If thou shouldst daily half an houre, his life
With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in assured hope. Take vp, take vp,
And follow me, that will to some provision
Glue thee quicke conduct. Come, come, away. Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Custroph, Bofhard, and Servants.

Corn. Poste speedily to my Lord your husband, shew him this Letter, the Army of France is landed: seek out the Traitor Glofier.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Glow. Prucke out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edward, keep our Sifer company: the revenges wee be bound to take vpon your Traitorous Father, are not fit for your beholding. Advise the Duke where you are going, to a moift felicite preparation: we are bound to the like. Our Postes shall be swift, and intelligent betwixt vs. Farewell deere Sifer, farewell my Lord of Glofier.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the King?

Stew. My Lord of Glofier hath conuey'd him hence
Some fine or fix and thirty of his Knights
Hot Queftrants after him, met him at gate,
Who, with some other of the Lords, dependants,
Are gone with him toward Douver, where they boast
To have well armed Friends.

Corn. Get horses for your Miftris.

Glow. Farewell sweet Lord, and Sifer.

Exit Corn. Edward farewell; go seek the Traitor Glofier,
Plauntion him like a Theefe, bring him before vs:
Though well we may not paffe vpon his life
Without the forme of Iutus: yet our power
Shall do a curteys to our wrath, which men
May blame, but not controll.

Enter Glofier, and Servants.

Who's there? the Traitor?

Reg. Ingratefull Fox, 'tis he.

Corn. Binde fatt his corky arms.

Glow. What means your Grace?

Good my Friends consider you are my Ghefts:
Do me no foul play, Friends.

Corn. Binde him I say.

Glow. Vamercifull Lady, as you are, I'me none.

Corn. To this Chaire binde him,

Villaine, thou shalt finde.

Glow. By the kinde Gods, 'tis most ignobly done
To plucke me by the Beard.

Reg. So white, and such a Traitor?

Glow. Naughty Ladie.

These hairs which thou dost plucke from my chin
Will quicken and accuse thee. I am your Hoft,
With Robbers hands, my hospitable fames

You
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come Sir.

What Letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacie have you with the Traitors, late footed in the Kingdom?

Reg. To whole hands

You have sent the Lunaticke King : Speake.

Glu. I have a Letter goeingly let downe

Which came from one that's of a newzull heart,

And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And faire.

Corn. Where haue thout fent the King?

Glu. To Douer.

Reg. Wherefore to Douer?

Wast thou not charg'd at peril.

Corn. Wherefore to Douer? Let him answr that.

Glu. I am tayed to th't Stake,

And I must stand the Courie.

Reg. Wherefore Enter Glauder ?

Glu. Because I would not fee thy cruel Nailes

Plackle out his poor old eyes : nor thy fierce Sifter,

In his Anointed stell, fickle boorish phans.

The Sea, with fuch a forme as his bare head,

In Hell-blacke-night indur'd, would have buoy'd vp

And quench'd the Stell'd fires :

Yet poor old heart, he holpe the Heauens to raine.

If Wolues had at thy Gate how'd that fhine time,

Thou shoul'dt haue faid, good Porter turne the Key :

All Cruels elfe subcribe : but I shall fee

The winged Vengeance ouertake fuch Children.

Corn. See't shalt thou never.Fellowes hold y Chaire,

Vpon thofe eyes of thine, Ile fet my foot.

Glu. He that will thinke to live, till he be old,

Give me fome helpe.——O cruel! O you Gods.

Reg. One fife will mocke another : Th'other too.

Corn. If you fee vengeance.

Seru. Hold your hand, my Lord :

I haue feru'd you ever since I was a Child:

But better feruice haue I neuer done you,

Then now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dogge?

Ser. If you did weare a beard upon your chin,

I'll make it on this quarrrel. What do you mean?

Corn. My Villaine?

Seru. Nay then come on, and take the chance of anger.

Reg. Giue me thy Sword. A peazant hand vp thus?

Killes him.

Ser. Oh I am flaine : my Lord,you have one eye left

To fee fome milchefe on him. Oh.

Corn. Left it fee more, preuent it ; Out vilde gelly : Where is thy latuer now?

Glu. All darke and comfortelesse ?

Where's my Sonne Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparke of Nature
To quit this horrid acte.

Reg. Out treacherous Villaine,

Thou call'd on him, that hates thee. It was he

That made the ouerture of thy Treafons to vs:

Who is too good to pitty thee.

Glu. O my Follies ! then Edgar was abad,

Kinde Gods, forgive me that,and proff er him.

Reg. Go thrull him out at gates, and let him smell

His way to Douer. Exit with Glauder.

How is't my Lord? How looke you ?

Corn. I haue recei'd a hurt : Follow me Lady ;

Turne out that eyeille Villaine : throw this SlauE

Upon the Dunghill : Regan, I bleed space,

Vntimely comes this hurt. Giue me your arme. Exeunt.

Aeitus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus,and knowne to be contemn'd,

Then fill contemn'd and flatter'd, to be worth:

The lowed, and moft delectid thing of Fortune,

Stand in eiperance, lyes not in feare,

The last abole change is from the hell,

The worft returns to laughter. Welcome then,

Thou unfubstantiall ayre that I embrase :

The Wretch that thou haft blowne vnto the worft,

Owes nothing to thy blifs.

Enter Glauder, and an Oldman.

But who comes here? My Father poorly led?

World, World, O world!

But that thy strange mutations make vs hate thee,

Life would not yeeld to age.

Oldm. O my good Lord, I haue bene your Tenant,

And your Fathers Tenant, thofe fourecores yeares.

Glu. Away, get thee away : good Friend be gone,

Thy comforts can do me no good at all,

Thee, they may hurt.

Oldm. You cannot see your way.

Glu. I haue no way, and therefore want no eyes : I fumbled when I faw. Full oft 'ts fene,

Our meanes feure vs, and our meere defects

Proue our Commodities. Oh deere Sonne Edgar,

The food of thy anfwerd Fathers wrath :

Might I but live to fee thee in my touch,

Fid fay I had eyes again.

Oldm. How now? who's there ?

Edg. O Gods! Who is't can fay I am at the worft?

I am worfe then ere I was.

Old. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. And worfe I may be yet : the worft is not,

So long as we can fay this is the worft.

Oldm. Fellow, where goeff ?

Glu. Is it a Beggar-man?

Oldm. Madman, and beggar too.

Glu. He has fome reafon, elfe he could not beg.

I'ts laft nights fome, I fuch a fellow faw;

Which made me thinke a Man, a Worme. My Sonne

Came then into my minde, and yet my minde

Was then scare Friends with him.

I haue heard more fince :

As Flies to wanton Boyes, are we to th'Gods,

They kill vs for their sport.

Edg. How should this be?

Bad is the Trade that muft play Foole to forrow,

Ang'ring it felfe, and others. Bifie thee Mafter.

Glu. Is that the naked Fellow?

Oldm. I, my Lord.

Glu. Get thee away: If for my fake

Thou wilt ore-take vs hence a mile or twaine

I'fh'way toward Douer, do it for ancient loue,

And bring fome couering for this naked Soule,

Which Be in foore need to haue me.

Old. Alacke sir, he is mad.

Glu.
Glou. 'Tis the times plague, When Madmen lead the blind: Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure: Above the rest, be gone.

Oldm. He bring him the best Parrell that I have Come on's, what will.

Exit.

Glou. Sirrah, naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a cold. I cannot daub it further.

Glou. Come hither fellow.

Edg. And yet I must: Bleffe thy sweete eyes, they bleed.

Glou. Know'st thou the way to Douer?

Edg. Both fyle, and gate; Horfeway, and foot-path: poor Tom hath bin fear'd out of his good wits, Bleffe thee good mans fonne, from the foule Fiend.

Glou. Here take this purle, y whom the heau'n's plagued Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched

Makes thee the happier: Heauens deale fo still

To the fuperfluous, and Luft-dieted man,

That flues your ordinance, that will not see

Because he do'nt feel, feele your powre quickly:

So distribution should vndoo excelle,

And each man have enough. Doff thou know Douer?

Edg. 1 Mafter.

Glou. There is a Cliffe, whose high and bending head

Lookes fearfully in the confined Deepe:

Bring me to but the very brimme of it,

And lie repayre the milery thou do't hear

With something rich about me: from that place,

I fall no leading neede.

Edg. Gloue me thy arme;

Poor Tom shall leade thee.

---

Scena Secunda.

Enter Gonerill, Bauffard, and Steward.

Gen. Welcome my Lord: a meruell our mild husband

Not met vs on the way. Now, where's your Mafter?

Stew. Madam within, but neuer man so chang'd:

I told him of the Army that was Landed:

He smit at it. I told him you were comming,

His answere was, the worfe. Of Gloffer Treachery,

And of the loftall Service of his Sonne

When I inform'd him, then he call'd me Sot,

And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out:

What moft he should dislike, feemes plesant to him,

What like, offenfue.

Gen. Then shall you go no further.

It is the Cowith terror of his spirit

That dares not vndertake: Heel' not feele wrongs

Which eie him to an answere: our wishes on the way

May prove effeects. Backe Edmund to my Brother,

Hath his Mutters, and conduct his powes.

I must change names at home, and glue the Difaffe

Into my Husbands hands. This truftie Servant

Shall passe betweene vs: ere long you are like to hearse

(If you dare venture in your owne behalfe)

A Miftreffe command. Wearie this spare speech,

Decline your head. This kiff, if it durt spake

Would fretch thy Spirits vp into the ayre:

Conceive, and fare thee well.

Baff. Yours, in the rankes of death.

Gen. My moult yeare Gloffer.

---

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Cordelia, Gentlemen, and Souliuers.

Car. Alacke, 'tis he: why he was met eu'n now

As mad as the west Sea, singeing aloud,

Crown'd with ranke Fenitar, and furrow weedes,

With Hardokes, Hemlocke, Nettles, Cuckoo flowers,

Darnell
Scena Quarta.

Enter Regan, and Steward.

Reg. But are my Brothers Powres fet forth?
Stew. I Madam.
Reg. Himselfe in perfon there!
Stew. Madam with much ado:
Your Sifer is the better Souldier.
Reg. Lord Edmund speake not with your Lord at home?
Stew. No Madam.
Reg. What might import my Sifers Letter to him?
Stew. I know not, Lady.
Reg. Faith he is poached hence on ferious matter:
It was great ignorance, Glousters eyes being out
To let him lie. Where he arrives, he mouses
All hearts against vs: Edmund, I thinke is gone
In pitty of his misfory, to dispath
His nighted life: Moreover to defory
The strength o'th'Enemy.
Stew. I must needs after him, Madam, with my Letter.
Reg. Our troopes fet forth to morrow, fly with vs:
The wayes are dangerous.
Stew. I may not Madam:
Reg. My Lady charg'd my dutie in this busines.
Reg. Why should the write to Edmund?
Might not you transport her purposse by word? Belike,
Some things, I know not what. Ile loose thee much
Let me violece the Letter.
Stew. Madam, I had rather
Reg. I know your Lady do's not lose her Husband,
I am sure of that: and at her late being here,
She gave strange Elisis, and most speaking lookes
To that Edmund. I know you are of her bosome.
Stew. I, Madam?
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fail
To quarrel with your great oppoſeſſe willes,
My snuffs, and loathed part of Nature should Burne it felfe out. If Edgar liue, O beffe him:
Now Fellow, fare thee well.

Edg. Gone Sir, farewell:
And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The Treasury of life, when life it felfe
Yields to the Theft. Had he bin where he thought,
By this had thought bin paff. Alas, or dead!
HOU, you Sir! Friend, hear ye Sir, Speake:
Thus might he passe Indeed; yet he reuiles.

What are you Sir?

Glu. Away, and let me dye.

Edg. Had'lt thou beene ought
But Mafter tho Feathers, Ayre,
(So many fathom downe precipitating)
Thou'ft fliuer'd like an Řege: but thou do'lt breath:
Haft heavy Subftance, bleed'lt not, speak'lt not, art found,
Ten Maffes at each, make not the altitude
Which thou haft perpendicularly fell'd,
Thy life's a Myracle. Speake yet againe,
Glu. But haue I faine, or no?

Edg. From the dread Sommet of this Chalkie Bourne
Looke vp a height, the thrill-gord Larke fo farre
Cannot be fene, or heard: Do but looke vp.
Glu. Alacke, I have no eyes:
Is wretchednedde depe'd that benefit
To end it felfe by death? Twas yet fome comfort,
When mifery could beguile the Tyrrans rage,
And frustrate his prou'd will.

Edg. Give me your arme.

Vp, 6: o How is't? Fece you your Legges? You f tand.
Glu. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all ftrangeffe,
Vpon the crowne o'th'Ccliffe. What thing was that
Which parted from you?

Glu. A poore vnofortunate Beggar.

Edg. As I rood heere belowe, me thought his eyes
Were two full Moones: he had a thouand Noles,
Hornes weak'd, and waued like the enraged Sea.
It was fome Fiend: Therefore thou happy Father,
Thinke that the cleareft Gods, who make them Honors
Of mens Imperfibilitie, have preferued thee.

Glu. I do remember now: henceforth Ie beare
Affiliation, till it do cry out it felle:
Enough, enough, and dye. That thing you speake of,
I tooke it for a man; often'twould say
The Fiend, the Fiend, he led me to that place.

Edgar. Beare free and patient thoughts.

Enter Lear.

But who cometh heere?

The faier fenfe will ne're accommodate
His blemenlife.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for crying. I am the King himſelfe.

Edg. O thou fide-piercing light!

Glu. Sweet Mariorum,
The Tragedie of King Lear.

rough tatter'd clothes great Vices do appeare: Robes, and Furr'd gownes hide all. Place finnes with Gold, and the throng Lance of Justice, hurtleth breakes: Arme it in ragges, a Pigmies straw do's pierce it. None do's offend, none, I say none, Ile able 'em, take that of me my Friend, who haue the power to seale th'acculpers lips. Get thee glasse-eyes, and like a furious Politician, seeume to see the things thou dost not. Now, now, now, now. Pull off my Bootes: harder, harder, so.

Edg. O matter, and impertinency mixt, Reafon in Madneffe.

Lear. If thou wilt wepe my Fortunes, take my eyes. I know thee well enough, thy name is Gloueter: Thou muft be patient; we came crying hither: Thou know'st, the first time that we smelt the Ayre We wawle, and cry, I will preache to thee: Marke.

Glou. Alacke, alacke the day.

Lear. When we are borne, we cry that we are come To the great stage of Fools. This a good blocke: It were a delicate fraategem to fhew A Troope of Horfe with Felt: Ile put in proofs, And when I have fhone vpon thee Son in Lawes, Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Oh heere he is: lay hand vpon him, Sir. Your moft deere Daughter—

Lear. No refuge? What, a Prisoner? I am euen The Natural Fool of Fortune. Vie me well, You fhall have ranfome. Let me have Surgeons, I am cut to'th' Brains.

Gent. You fhall have any thing. Lear. No Seconds? All my felf? Why, this would make a man, a man of Salt To vie his eyes for Garden water-pots. I wil die bravely, Like a fmagge Bridgroome. What? I will be louall: Come, come, I am a King, Maters, know you that? Gent. You are a Royall one, and we obey you. Lear. Then there's life in't. Come, and you get it, You fhall get it by running: Sa, fa, fa, fa. Exit.

Gent. A fight moft pittifull in the meaneft wretch, Paft speaking of a King. Thou haft a Daughter Who redeemes Nature from the general caufe Which twain haue brought her to.

Edg. Haile gentle Sir.

Gent. Sir, fpeed you? what's your will?

Edg. Do you heare ought (Sir) of a Battell toward.

Gent. Moft fiue, and vulger:

Every one heares that, which can distingui{h found.

Edg. But by your favour:

How neere's the other Army?

Gent. Neere, and on feedy foot: the maine defcry

Stands on the naturally thought.

Edg. I thank you Sir, that's all.

Gent. Though that the Queen on special caufe is here

Her Army is mou'd on. Exit.

Edg. I thank you Sir.

Glou. You ever gentle Gods, take my breath from me, Let not my wounds Spirit tempe me againe

To dye before you please.

Edg. Well pray you Father.

Glou. Now good Sir, what are you?

Edg. A moft poore man, made tame to Fortunes blows Who, by the Art of knowing, and feeling forowrse, Am pregnant to good pity. Glue me your hand, Ile leade you to some biding.

Glou. Hearde thanks.

The bountie, and the benzon of Heaven
To boot, and boot. Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize: moft happie That eyelesse head of thine, was fift fram'd flesh To raife my forunces. Thou old, unhappy Traitor, Briefely thy felfe remember: the Sword is out That muft deftroy thee.

Glou. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough root.

Stew. Wherefore, bold Pzeant,

Dar't thou fupport a publi'h'd Traitor? Hence, Leafe th'inflection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his arme.

Edg. Chiff not let go Zere,

Without vurther cafon.

Stew. Let go Slaue, or thou dy't.

Edg. Good Gentleman goe your gaites, and let poore volke paffe: and chud ha'bin swaggered out of my life, 'twould not ha'bin so long as 'tis, by a wghtonne. Nay, come not neere th'old man: keep out the vor'ye, or ice try whither your Coftard, or my Ballow be the harder; chiff be plaine with you.

Stew. Our Dunghill.

Edg. Chiff picke your teeth Zir: come, no matter for your foynes.

Stew. Slaue thou haft flaine me:Villain, take my purfe; If eu'r thou wilt thrifie, bury my bodie, And glue the Letters which thou fin'd it about me, To Edmund Earle of Gloueter: fecke him out Vpon the English party. Oh vntimely death, death. Edg. I know thee well. A feruiceable Villaine, As duteous to the vices of thy Misfiris, As badneffe would defire.

Glou. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you downe Father: refte you.

Let's fee these Pocketes; the Letters that he speaks of May be my Friends: hee's dead; I am only forry He had no other Deathman. Let vs fee:

Leave gentle waxe, and manners: blame vs not To know our enemies minde, we rip their hearts, Their Papers is more lawfull.

Reads the Letter.

Let our reciprocal owes be remembred. You haue manie oppurtunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be frutfullly offer'd. There is nothing done. If bee returns the Conqueror, then am I the prisoner, and he leads my Gaule, from the boasted warmth whereof, deliver me, and app- ply the place for your Labour.

Your Wifh, so I would say) effectiu-e

Governon.

Oh indigul'd spake of Womans will,

A plot upon her vertuous Husbandes life,

And the exchange my Brother: heere, in the fands

Thee Ile rake vp, the poife unfaftified

Of murtherous Letchers: and in the mature time,

With this vngracious paperrike the fght

Of the death-prac'd Duke; for him 'tis well,

That of thy death, and bufinesse, I can tell.

Glou. The King is mad:

How fiffle is my vile fene

That I fland vp, and haue ingenuous feeling

Of my huge Sorrows? Better I were diftrifte,

So thould my thoughts be feuer'd from my greeues,

Dram afarre off.

And woes, by wrong imaginations looef

The
Scena Septima.

Enter Cordelia, Kent, and Gentleman.

Cor. O thou good Kent,
How shall I live and work?
To match thy goodness?
My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg’d Madam is ore-pi’d,
All my reports go with the modest truth,
Nor more, nor clip, but so,
Be better suited.
These weeds are memories of those worser hours:
I pritty put them off.

Kent. Pardon deere Madam,
Yet to be knowne shortened my made intent,
My boone I make it, that you know me not,
Till time, and I, thinke meet.

Cor. Then be’t to my good Lord:
How do’s the King?

Gent. Madam sleepest still.

Cor. O you kind Gods!
Sure this great breach in his abused Nature,
Th’untun’d and iarring fences, O winde vp,
Of this childe-changed Father.

Gent. So please your Maiesty,
That we may wake the King, he hath slept long.
Cor. Be govern’d by your knowledge, and proceede,
I’th’way of your owne will: is he array’d?

Enter Lear in a chair carried by Servants:

Gent. I Madam: in the headnesse of sleepe,
We put freh garments on him.
Be by good Madam when we do awake him,
I doubt of his Temperance.
Cor. O my deere Father, restoration hang
Thy face in my lippe, and let this kiffe
Repair the violence harms, that my two Sistres
Have in your Reuerence made.

Kent. Kind and deere Prince.
Cor. Had you not bin their Father, these white flakkes
Did challenge pitty of them. Was this a face
To be oppress’d against the iarring wondes?
Mine Enemies dogge, though he had bit me,
Should have flood that night against my fire,
Andwas’t thou faire (poore Father)
To houcild thee with Swine and Rogues forborne,
In short, and musty straw? Alacke, alacke,
’Tis wonder that thy life and wits, at once
Had not concluded all. He wakes, speake to him.

Gen. Madam do you, ’tis fittest.
Cor. How does my Royall Lord?
How fares your Maiestye?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o’th’grave,
Thou art a Soule in bliffe, but I am bound

Vpon a wheele of fire, that mine owne tears
Do fcal’d, like molten Lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit I know, where did you dye?

Cor. Still, still, farre wide.

Gen. He’s scarfe awake,
Let him alone a while.

Lear. Where haue I bin?
Where am I? Faire day light?
I am mightily abus’d; I should eu’n dye with pitty
To see another thus. I know not what to say:
I will not swears these are my hands: let’s see,
I feele this pin pricke, would I were affur’d
Of my condition.

Cor. O looke vpon me Sir,
And hold your hand in benediction o’re me,
You must not kneele.

Lear. Pray do not mocke me:
I am a very foolifh fond old man,
Fourerecore and upward,
Not an houre more, nor lette:
And to deale plainly,
I feare I am not in my perfect mind.
Me thinkes I should know you, and know this man,
Yet I am doubtfull: for I am mainly ignorant
What place this isand all the skill I have Remembers not these garments: nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me,
For (as I am a man) I think this Lady
To be my childe Cordelia.

Cor. And lo I am I am.

Lear. Be your teares wet?
Yes faith I pray wepe not,
If you have poyfon for me, I will drink it:
I know you do not loue me, for your Sistres
Have (as I do remember) done me wrong.
You have some cause, they haue not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your owne kingdome Sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Gent. Be comforted good Madam, the great rage
You see is kill’d in him; he felfe him to go in,
Trouble him no more till further setting.

Cor. Wilt please your Highnesse walke?
Lear. You must beare with me:
Pray you now forget, and forgive,
I am old and foolish.

Exit.

Aeages Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter with Drumme and Corders, Edmund, Regan.
Gentlemen and Soldiers.

Bfbl. Know of the Duke if his last pu’pose hold,
Or whether since he is adult’ed by ought
To change the court, he’s full of alteration,
And selfe-reproving, bring his constant pleasure.

Reg. Our Sistres man is certainly miskarried.
Bfbl. ’Tis to be doubted Madam.
Reg. Now sweet Lord,

You
You know the goodness I intend upon you:
Tell me but truly, and then speak the truth,
Do you not love my Sifer?

Baft. In honour'd Loue.

Reg. But have you never found my Brothers way,
To the fore-fended place?

Baft. No by mine honour, Madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her, deare my Lord
Be not familiar with her.

Baft. Fear not she, and the Duke her husband.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Albany, Gonerill, Soldiers.

Alb. Our very louing Sifer, well be-met:
Sir, this I heard, the King is come to his Daughter
With others, whom the rigour of our State
For'd to cry out.

Rogn. Why is this resound?

Gen. Combine together gainst the Enemie:
For these domestick and particular broyles,
Are not the question here.

Alb. Let's then determine with th'ancient of warre
On our proceeding.

Reg. Sifer you'll go with vs?

Gen. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient, pray go with vs.

Gen. Oh ho, I know the Riddle, I will goe.

Exeunt both the Armies.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. If ere your Grace had speech with man so poore,
Hear me one word.

Alb. Ile overtake you, speake.

Edg. Before you fight the Battalle, ope this Letter,
If you have vidory, let the Trumpet sound
For him that brought it;wrenched though I see me,
I can produce a Champion, that will proove
What is ausouched there. If you miscarry,
Your buffnelle of the world hath to an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune loues you.

Alb. Stay till I have read the Letter.

Edg. I was forbid it:
When time shall ferue, let but the Herald cry,
And Ile appear again.

Alb. Why fare thee well, I will o're-looke thy paper.

Enter Edmund.

Baft. The Enemy's in view, draw vp your powers,
Here is the gueesse of their true strenght and Forces,
By dilligent difcouerie, but your haft
Is now wagg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time.

Baft. To both these Sifers have I sworn my louse:
Each lesious of the other, as the flung
Are of the Adder. Which of them shall I take?
Both? One? Or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd
If both remaine alive: To take the Widow,
Exasperates, makes mad her Sifer Gonerill,
And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll vfe
His countenance for the Battalle, which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him, devises
His speedy taking off. As for the mercie
Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia,
The Battalle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon: for my state,
Stands on me to defend, not to debate.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Alarum with bin. Enter with Drummes and Colours, Lear, Cordelia, and Soldiers, over the Stage, and Exeunt.

Enter Edgar, and Gloster.

Edg. Here the Father, take the shadow of this Tree
For your good haft: pray that the right may thrive:
If ever I returne to you again,
Ie bring you comfort.

Glo. Grace go with you Sir.

Edg. No further Sir, a man may rot even here.

Edg. What in ill thoughts again a

Men must endure
Their being hence, even as their comming hither,
Ripenesse is all come on.

Glo. And that's true too.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter in conquest with Drum and Colours, Edmund, Lear, and Cordelia, as prisoners, Soldiers, Captaine.

Baft. Some Officers take them away: good guard,
Vastill their greater pleasures first be knowne
That are to enquire them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who with beft meaning haue incurr'd the worth:
For thee oppressed King I am cast downe,
My felle could eft out-frowne falle Fortunes frowne.
Shall we not fee thee Daughters, and th' Sifers?

Lear. No, no, no, no: I come let's away to prifon,
We two alone will finge like Birds th' Cage:
When thou doft ask me bleffing, Ile kneele downe
And aske of thee forgiveneffe: So we'll live,
And pray, and fin, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded Butterflies: and here (poore Rognes)
Talke of Court newes, and we'll talke with them too,
Who loofes, and who wins; who's in, who's out;
And take vpon the mystery of things,
As if we were Gods fipes: And we'll weare out
In a wall'd prifon, packs and feet of great ones;
That ebe and flow by th' Moone.

Baft. Take them away.

Lear. Vpon such sacrifices my Cordelia,
The Gods themselves throw Incence.

Hence I caught thee?
He that parts vs, shall bring a Brand from Heauen,
And fire vs hence, like Foxes: wipe thine eyes,
The good yeares shall devour them, flesh and fell,

Ere
The Tragedie of King Lear.

797

Ere they shall make vs weep?
Weele see e'm fam'd frift : come.
Exit.
Baf. Come hither Captaine, hearke.
Take thou this note, go follow them to prizon,
One reepe I have aduanc'd thee, if thou do't
As this instrufts thee, thou doul make thy way
To Noble Fortunes: know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender minded
Do's not become a Sword, thy great employment
Will not bear questionnever lay thou'll do't,
Or thrive by other meanes.
Capt. He do't my Lord.
Baf. About it, and write happy, when th'haft done,
Markke I say infaftly, and carry it fo
As I have let it done. Exit Captaine.

Flouris. Enter Albany, Generill, Regan, Soldiers.

Alb. Sir, you haue shew'd to day your valiant straine
And Fortune led you well: you haue the Captuues
Who were the opposites of this dayes strife:
I do require them of you so to vfe them,
As we hall find their merites, and our safety
May equally determine.
Baf. Sir, I thought it fit,
To send the old and miferable King to some retention,
Whose age had Charmes in it, whose Title more,
To plucke the common boime on his face,
And turne our impreft Launces in our eies
Which do command them. With him I sent the Queen:
My reaon all the fame, and they are ready
To morrow, or at further space, t'appearre
Where you shall hold your Seiflion.
Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a fubiect of this Warre,
Not as a Brother.
Reg. That's as we lift to grace him.
Methinks our pleasure might have bin demanded
Ere you had spake fo farre. He led our Powers,
Bore the Commination of my place and perfon,
The which immediate may well stand vp,
And call it felfe your Brother.
Gen. Not so hot:
In his owne grace he doth exalt himselfe,
More then in your addition.
Reg. In my rights,
By me inuetted, he compeares the beet.
Alb. That were the moost, if he should husband you.
Gen. Hola, hola,
That eye that told you fo, look'd but a fquint.
Rega. Lady I am not well, elfe I shou'd anfwerre
From a full flowing stomack, Generall,
Take thou my Souldiers, prifoners, patrimony,
Dispoze of them, of me, the walls is thine;
Winneff the world, that I create thee here
My Lord, and Matfer.
Gen. Meane you to enjoy him?
Alb. The let alone lies not in your good will.
Baf. Nor in thine Lord.
Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.
Reg. Let the Drumrike, and prove my title thine.
Alb. Stay yet, heare reason: Edmund, I arret thee
On captaine Treafon; and in thy arret,
This guided Serpentine: for your clame faine Sifters,
I bare it in the intereft of my wife,
"Tis the is sub-contrafted to this Lord,
And I her husband contradict your Banes.
If you will marry, make your loves to me,
My Lady is bespoke.
Gen. An enterlude.
Alb. Thou art armed Glofier,
Let the Treafor found:
If none appeare to prove vpon thy perfon,
Thy heynous, manifett, and many Treafons,
There is my pledge: I leake it on thy heart
Ere I take bread, thou art in nothing lefte
Then I have here proclaim'd thee.
Reg. Sicke, O sicke.
Gen. If not, I leare truth medicine.
Baf. There's my exchange, what in the world hes
That names me? Traitor, villain-like he lies,
Call by the Trumpet: he that dares approach
On him, on you, who not, I will maintaine
My truth and honor firmly.

Enter a Herald.

Truth to thy angle vertue, for thy Soullers
All leued in my name, haue in my name
Tooke their discharge.
Regan. My fickleffe grows vpon me.
Alb. She is not well, conuey her to my Tent.
Come hither Herald, let the Treafer found,
And read out this. A Trumpet sounds.

Herald reads.

If any man of qualitie or degree, within thelifts of the Arm.
my, will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Glofier, that he is a manifold Traitor, let him appeare by the third found of the Trumpet: he be in bold in his defence. Trumpet
Her. Againe.
Trumpet. Her. Againe.
Trumpet. Trumpet.

Enter Edgar armed.

Alb. Aske him his purpos, why he appears
Vpon this Call o'th Trumpet.
Her. What are you?
Your name,your quality, and why you answer
This present Summons?
Edg. Know my name is lost
By Treafons tooth: bare-gruwne, and Canker-bit,
Yet am I Noble as the Aduerfary
I come to copace.
Alb. Which is that Aduerfary?
Edg. What's he that fpeakes for Edmund Earl of Glo.
Baf. Himfelfe, what fallet thou to him? (fer?
Edg. Draw thy Sword,
That if my fpeech offend a Noble heart,
Thy arme may doe the Juflice, here is mine:
Behold it is my privilege,
The privilege of mine Honours,
My oath, and my profeflion. I prouef,
Mongre thy strength, place, youth, and eminence,
Defpife thy victor-Sword, and fire new Fortune,
Thy valor, and thy heart, thou art a Traitor:
Falfe to thy Gods, thy Brother, and thy Father,
Conspirats' gainst this high hillufiours Prince,
And from th'extremefly upward of thy head,
To the difcent and deth below thy feet,

ft 2
The Tragedie of King Lear.

A most Toad-spotted Traitor. Say thou no,
This Sword, this arme, and my belt spirits be bent
To prove upon thy heart, wherefore I spake,
Thou lyest.

Bafli. In widowsome I should ask thy name,
But since thy out-side looks so faire and Warlike,
And that thy tongue(some faire) of breathing breathes,
What safe, and nicely I might well delay,
By rule of Knight-hood, I disdain'd and spurn'd
Backe do I toffe these Treadions to thy head,
With the helle-hated Lye, are-welthme thy heart,
Which for they yet glance by, and fearly bruife,
This Sword of mine shall give them infant way,
Where they shall rest for euer. Trumpets speake.

Alb. Save him, save him.

Alarums. Fights.

Gen. This is my proude yesr Glorin.

By th'law of Warre, thou waft not bound to anfwer
An vnknowne oppofiter: thu art not vanquish'd,
But cozen'd, and be gull'd.

Alb. Shut thy mouth Dame,
Or with this paper H'll I flop it: hold Sir,
Thou worfe then any name, reade thine owne euill;
No tearing Lady, I perceiue you know it.

Gen. Say if I do, the I awes are mine not thine,
Who can araigne me for't?

Exit. Alb. Maff monfhous! O, know'st thou this paper?
Bafli. Aske me not what I know.

Alb. Go after her, she's defperate, gourener her.
Bafli. What you have charg'd me with,
That have I done,
And more, much more, the time will bring it out.
'Tis praff, and so am I: but what art thou
That haft this Fortune on me? if thou'rt Noble,
I do fcrue thee.

Edg. This exchange charity,
I am no lefe in blood then thou art Edmund,
If more, the more th' haft wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar and thy Father Sonne,
The Gods are Iuft, and of our plentiful vices
Make infirmes to plague vs:
The darke and vittious place where thee he got,
Coff him his eyes.
Bafli. Th' haft spoken right, 'tis true,
The Wheel is come full circle, I am heere.
Alb. Me thought thy very gate did prophafe
A Royall Noblenfie: I muft embrace thee,
Let forrow split my heart, if euer I
Did hate thee, or thy Father,

Edg. Worthy Prince I know's.
Alb. Where haue you hid your felfe?
How haue you knowne the miseries of your Father?

Edg. By nurfing them my Lord. Lift a briefe tale,
And when 'tis told, O that my heart would burn.
The bloody proclamation to escape
That follow'd me to neere,(O our liues sweetneffe,
That we the paine of death would hourly dye,
Rather then die at once) taught me to fift
Into a mad-mans rage, t'affime a femeance
That very Dogges difdaun'd: and in this habit
Mer I my Father with his bleeding Rings,
Their precious Stones new loft: became his guide,
Led him, begg'd for him, faw'd him from difpair.
Neuer(O fault) jeauzel'd my felfe vnfo him,
Vntill some halfe houre past when I was arm'd,
Not fare, though hoping of this good fucciff,
I ask'd his bleffing, and from firft to laft
Told him our pilgrimage. But his faw'd heart
(Alacke too weake the conflict to fupport)
Twixt two extremes of pathion, joy and grefs.
Burft fmillingly.
Bafli. This speech of yours hath mou'd me,
And shall perhance do good, but speake you on,
You looke as you had something more to fay.

Alb. If there be more, more wofull, hold it in,
For I am almost to diffolve,
Hearing of this.

Enter a Gentleman.

Edg. What kinde of helpe?

Alb. Speake man.

Edg. What means this bloody Knife?

Gen. 'Tis hot, it fmoakes, it came even from the heart
Of—O she's dead.

Gen. Your Lady Sir,your Lady: and her Sifter
By her is poifon'd i' the confedius it.
Bafli. I was contradd to them both, all three
Now marrie in an infant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Enter Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead: Gonerill and Regan bodysbrought out.

This judgement of the Heauens that makes vs tremble.

Touches vs not with pity: O, is this he?
The time will not allow the complement

Which very manners vrges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my King and Mutter aye good night.
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of vs forgot,
Speake Edmund, where's the King? and where's, Cordelia?
Seet thou this obieft Kent?

Kent. Alacke, why thus?
Bafli. Yet Edmund was belou'd:
The one the other poiffond for my fake,
And after flew herfelf.

Alb. Euen forcer their faces.

Bafli. I pant for life: some good I meane to do
Defiue of mine owne Nature. Quickly fend,
(To briefe in it) to th'Caffe, for my Writ
Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia:

Nay, fend in time.

Alb. Run, run, O run.

Edg. To who my Lord? Who ha's the Office?
Send thy token of repreufe.

Bafli. Well thought on, take my Sword,
Glue it the Captaine.

Edg. Haft thee for thy life.

Bafli. He hath Commifion from thy Wife and me,
To hang Cordelia in the prifon, and
To lay the blame upon her owne difpair,
That the for-did her felfe.

Alb. The Gods defend her, beare him hence a while.

Enter Lear with Cordelia in his arms.

Lear. Howle, howle, howle: O your are men of stones,
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd vfe them fo,
That Heauens vault should crack: she's gone for euer.
I know when one is dead, and when one liues,
She's dead as earth: I fend me a Looking-glafe,
The Tragedie of King Lear.

If that her breath will mist of stone, Why then she lyes.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?
Edg. Or image of that horror.

Alb. Tall and cear.

Lear. This matter flits, the lies; it is he so,
It is a chance which do's redeem all sorrowes
That euer I have felt.

Kent. O my good Master.

Lear. Prythee away.

Edg. 'Tis Noble Kent your Friend.

Lear. A plague upon you Murderers, Traitors all,
I might have saud her, now she's gone for euer:

Cordelia, Cordelia, flay a little. Ha:
What is't thou faid? Her voice was euer soft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.
I kill'd the Slue that was a hanging thee.

Gent. 'Tis true (my Lords) he did.

Lear. Did I not follow?
I haue feene the day, with my good biting Faulchion
I would have made him skip: I am old now,
And thefe same croffes spoile me. Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o'th'beft, Ie tell you shaft.

Kent. If Fortune brag of two, the lou'd and hated,
One of them we beheld.

Lear. This is a dull fight, are you not Kent?

Kent. The fame: you Seruant Kent,
Where is your Seruant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that,
He'll strike and quickly too, he's dead and rotten.

Kent. No my good Lord, I am the very man.

Lear. Ille see that shaft.

Kent. That from your fift of difference and decay,
Hauue follow'd your fad steps.

Lear. Your are welcome hither.

Kent. Nor no man elle:
All your chearleffe, darke, and deadly,
your eldeft Daughters have fore-done themselves,
And desperately are dead

Lear. I fo I think.

Alb. He knowes not what he faies, and vaine is it

That we present vs to him.

Enter a Messenger.

Edg. Very bootleffe.

Meff. Edmund is dead my Lord.

Alb. That's but a trifle here:
You Lords and Noble Friends, know our intent,
What comfort to this great decay may come,
Shall be appli'd. For vs we will refraine,
During the life of this old Maiesty
To him, our absolute power, you to your rights,
With boote, and fuch addition as your Honour.
Have more then merited, All Friends shall
Tate the wages of their vertue, and all Foes
The cup of their defervings: O fee, fee

Lear. And my poore Poose is hung'd: no, no, no life?
Why should a Dog, a Horfe, a Rat have life,
And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more,
Neuer, neuer, neuer, neuer, neuer.

Pray you vndo this Button. Thanke you Sir,
Do you see this? Looke on her? Looke her lips,
Looke there, looke there.

Edg. He faints, my Lord, my Lord.

Kent. Breake heart, I prythee breake.

Edg. Looke vp my Lord.

Kent. Vex not his ghost, O let him paife, he hates him,
That would upon the wreak of this tough world
Strecth him out longer.

Edg. He is gon indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd fo long,
He but vforp his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence, our preuent businesse
Is generall woe: Friends of my foule, you twaine,
Rule in this Realm, and the gor'd fate sustaine.

Kent. I haue a journey Sir, shortly to go,
My Matter calls me, I must not fay no.

Edg. The weight of this sad time we must obey,
Speake what we feele, not what we ought to fay:
The olden hath borne moift, we that are yong,
Shall never fee fo much, nor live fo long.

FINIS.
Enter Rodrigo, and Iago.

Rodrigg.

Enter tell me, I take it much vnkindly
That thou (Iago) who haft had my purfe,
As if th'off'ring were thine, should'lt know of this.
Is. But you'l not hear me. If ever I did dream
Of such a matter, abhorre me.

Rod. Thou told'lt me,
Thou didst hold him in thy hate.
Iago. Defpife me
If I do not. Three Great-ones of the Cittie,
(In personall fuit to make his Lieutenant)
Off-capt to him: and by the flight of man
I know my price, I am worth no worfe a place.
But he (as losing his owne pride, and purpofe)
Exades them, with a buffaft Circumfance,
Horribly Stufft with Epithets of warre,
Non-futes my Mediators. For certes, fakes he,
I have already chofe my Officer. And what was he?
For-footh, a great Arithmatician,
One Michell Caffe, a Fiorentine,
(A Fellow almost damn'd in a faire Wife)
That neuer fet a Squadron in the Field,
Nor the defeiuion of a Battle knowes
More then a Spinster. Valeiffe the Bookish Theoricke:
Wherein the Tongued Confufs can propofe
As Matterly as he. Meere prattle (without prafice)
Is all his Souldierhip. But he (Sir) had th'elec{tion;
And I (of whom his eies had feene the proofe
At Rhoden, at Cyprus, and on others grounds
Chriftion, and Heathen) must be he-cled, and calm'd
By Debitor, and Creditor. This Counter-caller,
He (in good time) muft his Lieutenant be,
And I (bleffe the marke) his Moorships Auntient.

Red. By heauen, I rather would have bin his hangman.

Iago. Why; there's no remedie.
'Tis the curfe of Service; Pretender goeth by Letter, and affe{tion,
And not by old gradation, where each fcond
Stood Heire to th'th'fire. Now Sir, be judge your felfe,
Whether I in any full terme am Affin'd
To loue the Moors?

Red. I would not follow him then.

Iago. O Sir content you.
I follow him, to ferue my turne upon him.
We cannot all be Maffers, nor all Maffers
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall marke
Many a dutious and knee-crooking knaue;
That (doting on his owne obfequious bondage)
Weares out his time, much like his Maffers Alle,
For naught but humans, & when he's old Cuffer'd.

Whip me fuch honest knaues. Others there are
Who try'md in Formes, and vilages of Dutie,
Keeps yet their hearts attending on themselues,
And throwing but thowes of Service on their Lords
Doe well thrive by them.

And when they have linden their Coates
Doe themfelves Homage.

Thefe Fellowes have fome foule,
And fuch a one do I proffe the felfe. For (Sir)
It is as fure as you are Rodrigo,
Were I the Moore, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but my felfe.

Heauen is my Judge, not I for loue and dutie,
But foming fo, for my peculiar end
For when my outward Aktion doth demonstrate
The native act, and figure of my heart
In Compliment externe, 'tis not long after
But I will weare my heart upon my fleecue
For Dawes to pecke at; I am not what I am.

Rod. What a fall Fortune do's the Thicks-hips owe
If he can carry't thus?

Iago. Call vp her Father:
Rofle him, make after him, payfon his delight,
Proclaime him in the Streets. Incenfe her kin{men,
And though he in a fertile Cylmate dwell,
Plague him with Flies: though that his loy be Louy,
Yet throw fuch chances of vexation on't,
As it may looke fome colour.

Red. Here is her Fathers Houfe, Ile call aloud.

Iago. Doe, with like timerous accent, and dire yell,
As when (by Night and Negligence) the Fire
Is fied in populous Citties.

Lookes to your Houfe, your daughter, and your Baggs,
Theues, Theues.

Bra. Above. What is the reafon of this terrible
Summons? What is the matter there?

Red. Signior is all your Familie within?

Iago. Are your Doores lock'd?

Bra. Why? Wherefore ask you this?

Iago. Sir, y'are rob'd, for shame put on your Gowne,
the Moor of Venice.

Your heart is burst, you have loft half your soul
Even now, now, very now, an old blacke Ram
Is tuppung your white Ewe. Arise, arise,
Awake the forting Citizens with the Bell,
Or else the duell will make a Grand-fire of you.
Arise I say.

Brad. What, haue you loft your wits?
Rod. Mofi reuerent Signior, do you know my voice?
Brad. Not I: what are you?
Rod. My name is Roderigo.
Brad. The worfter welcome:
I haue charg'd thee not to haunt about my doores:
In honest plainenesse thou hast heard me say,
My Daughter is not for thee. And now in madneffe
(Being full of Supper, and diltemping draughtes)
Upon milhitious knauerie, doft thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, Sir, Sir.

Brad. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirits and my place haue in their power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience good Sir.

Brad. What tell'lt thou me of Robbing ?
This is Venice : my house is not a Grange.

Rod. Most graue Bradanico,
In simple and pure soule, I come to you.

Sir: If you are one of them that will not serue God,
if the duell bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you think we are Ruffians,you haue your Daughter couer'd with a Barbary horse, you haue your Nephewes neigh to you, you haue Couriers for Cozens :
and Genneris for Germanies.

Brad. What prophane wretch art thou?
Is. I am one Sir, that comes to tell you, your Daughter and the Moore, are making the Beaff with two backs.

Brad. Thou art a Villaine.

Is. You are a Senator.

Brad. This thou shalt answere: I know thee Roderigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answere any thing. But I believe you
is't be your pleasure, and most wise comfort,
(As partly I find it is) that your faire Daughter,
At this odde Even and dull watch o'th'night
Transported with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knawe of common hire, a Gundeller,
To the groffe claifes of a Lasciuious Moore :
If this be knowne to you, and your Allowance,
We then have done you bold, and faulce wrongs.
But if you know not this, my Manners tell me,
We haue your wrong rebuke. Do not beleue
That from the fence of all Cuiiltie,
I thus would play and trifle with your Resuerence.
Your Daughter (If you haue not gien her leave)
I say againe,hath made a groffe result,
Tying her Dutie, Beautie, Wit, and Fortunes
In an estraung, and wheeling Stranger,
Of here, and every where: slighte satisfie your selfe.
If she be in her Chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the Julice of the State
For thus deluding you.

Brad. Strike on the Tinder, hoa :
Glue me a Taper: call vp all my people,
This Accident is not vnlike my dreame,
Beliefe of it oppresses me already.
Light, I say, light.

Is. Farewell: for I must leave you.
It seemes not meete, nor wholeforme to my place
To be produc'd, (as if I slay, I shall,
Against the Moore. For I do know the State,
(How euer this may gall him with some checke)
Cannot with faterde call-him. For he's embrark'd
With fuch loud eason to the Cyprus Warres,
(Which even now standis in Act) that for their foules
Another of his Fadome, they haue none,
To lead their Busynesse. In which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell spines,
Yet, for necessitie of present life,
I must throw out a Flag, and signe of Love,
(Which is indeed but signe)that you shal fully find him
Lead to the Sagitary the railed Search:
And there will I be with him. So farewell. Exit.

Enter Bradanico,with Servants and Torches.

Brad. It is too true an cuill. Gone she is,
And what's to come of my desped time,
Is sucht but bitterness. Now Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her ? (Oh vnhappy Girls)
With the Moore fald the Patie ? Who would be a Father ?
How didst thou know 'twas she ? (Oh she deceaues me Paft thoughts) what fald fhe to you? Get moe Tapers:
Raife all my Kindred. Are they married think ye?

Rod. Truely I thinke they are.

Brad. Oh Hecauen : how got the out ?
Oh trefion of the blood.

Father,from hence truift not your Daughters minds
By what you see them act. Is there not Charmes,
By which the property of Youth, and Maidhood
May be ab'd ? Have you not read Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes Sir : I haue indeed.

Brad. Call vp my Brother : oh would you had her.
Some one way, some another. Doe you know
Where we may apprehend her, and the Moore ?

Rod. I thinke I can difficuer him, if you please
To get good Guard, and go along with me.

Brad. Pray you lead on. At every house Ie call,
(I may command at moft) get Weapons (hoa)
And raife some speall Officers of might:
On good Roderigo, I will deferve your paines. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello,Lage, Attendants,with Torches.

Is. Though in the trade of Warre I have faigne men,
Yet do I hold it very fuffe o'th'confience
To do no contriv'd Murder : I lacke Iniquitie
Sometyme to do me fcrute. Nine, or ten times
I had thought t'hau'e yerke'd him here vnder the Ribbes.

Othello. 'Ts better as it is.

Lage. Nay but he prated,
And spoke fuch fcury, and prosouking terms
Against your Honor, that with the little godlinesse I haue
I did full hard forbeare him. But I pray you Sir,
Are you fat married ? Be affur'd of this,
That the Magnusco is much belo'd,
And hath in his effect a voice potentill
As double as the Dukes : He will divorce you.
Or put vpon you, what refraint or greenese,

The
The Law (with all his might, to enforce it on)
Will give him Cable.

Oth. Let him do his rights;
My Service, which I have done the Signior
Shall out-tongue his Complaints. "Tis yet to know,
Which when I know, that boating is an Honour,
I shall promulgate, I fetch my life and being,
From Men of Royall Seige. And my denomi
May a speake (unbonneted) so as proud a Fortune
As this that I have reach'd. For know Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my vnhoufed free condition
Put into Circumcision, and Confine,
For the Seas worth. But looke, what Lights come yond?

Enter Iago, with Torches.

Iago. Tho' be the raised Father, and his Friends:
You were best go in.

Oth. Not I : I must be found.
My Parts, my Title, and my perfect Soule
Shall manifest me rightly, is it they?

Iago. By Iunu, I think no.

Oth. The Seruants of the Dukes?
And my Lieutenant?
The goodneffe of the Night vnpon you (Friends)
What is the News?

Caff. The Duke do's greet you (Generall)
And he requireth your hafe, Pot-hafe appearance,
Enen on the intant.

Othello. What is the matter, thinke you?

Coff. Something from Cyprus, as I may divin:
It is a banifie of some heste. The Gallics
Have sent a dozen sequent Meffengers
This very night, at one another heele,
And many of the Conuls, raf'd and met,
Are at the Dukes already. You have bin hastily call'd for,
When being not at your Lodging to be found,
The Senate hath sent about three feuerall Oueff,
To search you out.

Oth. "Tis well I am found by you:
I will but spend a word here in the houfe,
And goe with you.

Caff. Auncient, what makes he heere?

Iago. Faith, he to night hath boarded a Land Carret,
If it prove lawfull prize, he's made for euere.

Coff. I do not underhand.

Iago. He's married.

Coff. To who?

Iago. Marry to——— Come Captaine, will you go?

Oth. Haue with you.

Coff. Here come another Troope to feele for you.

Enter Brahamie, Roderige, with Officers, and Torches.

Iago. It is Brahamies Generall be advis'd,
He comes to bad intent.

Othello. Holla, stand there.

Rude. Signior, it is the Moore.

Iago. Downe with him, Theefe.

Iago. You, Roderige, come Sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keep vpon your bright Swords for thedeu will ruff them. Good Signior, you shallmore command with yeares, then with your Weapons.

"Bra. Oh thou foule Theeue,
What haue haft thou foule my Daughter?

Damn'd as thou art, thou haft enchanted her

For Ile referre me to all things of fente,
(If he in Chains of Magick we re not bound )
Whether a Mai, so tender,Faire, and Happie,
So opposite to Marriage, that the thou'd
The wealthy curled Deareling of our Nation,
Would ever hare (Tencurce a generall mocke)
Run from her Guardago the footie boforme,
Of such a thing as thou; to feare, not to delight?
Insige the world, if'ho is not groffe in fente,
That thou haft pra'dis'd her with foale Charmes,
Abus'd her delicate Youth, with Drugs or Minerals,

That weakens Morion. Ile haue disputed on,
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking;
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,
For an abuser of the World, a palfifier
Of Arts inhibited, and out of warrant;
Lay hold vpon him, if he do refit
Subdue him, at his perill.

Oth. Hold your hands
Both you of my inclination, and the rest.
Were it my Cue to fight, I should have knowne it
Without a Prompter. Whether will you that I goe
To anfwer this your charge?

Bra. To Prifon,till fit time
Of Law,and course of direct Seffion
Call thee to anfwer.

Oth. What if do obey?
How may the Duke be therewith fatish'd,
Whole Meffengers are here about my fide,
Vpon fome prefent bufineffe of the State,
To bring me to him.

Officer. 'Tis true moft worthy Signior,
The Dukes in Counsell, and your Noble felfe,
I am fure is fent for.

Bra. How? The Duke in Counfell?
In this time of the night? Bring him away?
Mine's not an idle Canfe. The Duke himfelfe,
Or any of my Brothers of the State,
Cannot but feele this wrong, as 'twere their owne:
For if fuch Actions may have paffage free,
Bond-haues, and Pagans fhall our Statesmen be.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke, Senators, and Officers.

Duck. There's no compofition in this Newes,
That gives them Credit.

1. Sen. Indeed, they are disproportionately;
My Letters fay, a Hundred and feuen Gallies.

Duck. And mine a Hundred fourtie.

2. Sena. And mine two Hundred:
But though they Jumpe not on a luft accompt,
(As in thefe Cafes where the ayme reports,
'Tis oft with difference yet do they all confirme
A Turkish Fleete, and bearing vp to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is poiffible enough to judgement:
I do not to secure me in the Error,
But the maine Article I do approce
In deafe Vanite.

Sayer within, What hoa, what hoa, what hoa.

Enter Sayer.

Officer. A
The Moor of Venice.

Officer. A Msellng er from the Gallies.

Duke. Now? What's the buffneffe?

Sailor. The Turkish Preparation makes for Rhodes,
So was I bid report here to the State,
By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1. Sen. This cannot be
By no aylay of reason. 'Tis a Pageant
To keepe vs in faire gaze, when we confider
Th'importance of Cyprus to the Turk;
And let our felues againe but vnderstand,
That as it more concerns the Turk then Rhodes,
So may he with more facile queation bear be,
For that it stands not in such Warrelike brace,
But altogether lacks th'abilities
That Rhodes is drefled in. If we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so vwockiffull,
To leue that latelie, which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of eafe, and gaine
To wake, and wage a danger profilese.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence he's not for Rhodes.

Officer. Here is more Newsse.

Enter a Msellenger.

Maffen. The Ottamites, Reuener'd, and Gracious,
Steering with due courfe toward the Ile of Rhodes,
Have there intenied them with an after Fleece.

1. Sen. I do I thought: how many, as you goffe?

Maff. Of thirtie Saile: and now they do re-item
Their backward courfe, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your truie and most Valiant Seruitor,
With his free dorte, recommends you thus,
And graces you to beleevse him.

Duke. 'Tis certaine then for Cyprus:

Marcus Lucieus, is not he in Towne?

1. Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from vs,
To him, Post, Post-haste, dispaeth,

1. Sen. Here comes Brabantine, and the Valiant Moore.

Enter Brabantine, Othello, Caffo, Lago, Redorigo, and Officer.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straitly employ you,
Against the general Enemy Ottoman.
I did not see you; welcome gentle Signior,
We lack't your Counsaile, and your helpe to night.

Br. So did I yours: Good your Grace pardon me.
Neither my place, nor ought I heard of buffneffe
Hath rain'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care
Take hold on me. For my perticular griefe
Is of so flood-gate, and ore-bearing Nature,
That it engulfs, and swallowes other forrowes,
And it is fill it sall.

Duke. Why? What's the matter?

Br. My Daughter: oh my Daughter!

1. Sen. Dead?

Br. I, to me.
She is abus'd, done from me, and corrupted
By Spels, and Medicines, bought of Mountebanks;
For Nature, so proprofly to erre,
(Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sence,)
Sans witch-craft could not.

Duke. Who ere he be, that in this foule proceeding
Hath thus beguil'd your Daughter of her selle,

And you of her; the bloodie Booke of Law,
You shall your selle read, in the better letter,
After you owne sence: yea, though our proper Son
Stood in your Action.

Br. Humbly I thankse your Grace,
Here is the man; this Moore, whom now it seems
Your speciall Mandate, for the State affairs
Hath hither brought.

All. We are verie sorry for't.

Duke. What in your owne part, can you say to this?

Br. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most Potent, Grace, and Revener'd Signiors,
My very Noble, and approv'd good Masters;
That I have tane away this old mans Daughter,
It is most true: true I have married her;
The verie head, and front of my offending,
Hath this extent; no more. But am I, in my speech,
And little blest'd with the soft phrafe of Peace;
For since these Armes of mine, had seuen yeares pith
Till now, some nine Moones wafted, they haue vs'd
Their deereft actio, in the Tentd Field:
And little of this great world can I speake,
More then pertaines to Peas of Brooles, and Battaille,
And therefore little shall I grace my couse,
In speaking for my selle. Yet, (by your gratious patience)
I will a round vn-varnithd Tale deliever,
Of my whole course of Loue.
What Drugs, what Charmes,
What Confiration, and what mighty Magicke,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withall)
I won his Daughter.

Br. A Maiden, newer bold:
Of Spirit to fill, and quiet, that her Motion
Blush'd at her selle, and she, in sight of Nature,
Of Yeares, of Country, Credite, evry thing
To fall in Loue, with what she fear'd to looke on,
It is a judgement main'd, and most imperfect.
That will confelle Perfection so could erre
Against all rules of Nature, and must be drunk
To find out pracfties of cunning hell
Why this should be. I therefore vouch againe,
That with some Mixtures, powrefull o're the blood,
Or with some Drame, (conur'd to this effect?)
He wrought vp on her.
To vouch this, is no proofe,
Without more wider, and more over Teft
Then these thin habes, and poore likly-hoods
Of moderne feeming, do prefer against him.
1. Sen. But Othello, speake,
Did you, by indirect, and forced courses
Subdue, and payson this yong Maides affections?
Or came it by request, and such faire question
As foule, to foule affordeth?

Oth. I do bethesa you,
Send for the Lady to the Wary.
And let her speake of me before her Father;
If you doe finde me foule, in her report,
The Tryth, the Office, I do hold of you,
Not onely take away, but let your Sentence
Even full on my life.

Duke. Fetch Delphine hither.

Oth. Aunciant, conduct them:
You beft know the place,
And tell she come, as truly as to heauen,
I do confesse the vices of my blood,
So tuflly to your Graue cares, Ie present

How
The Tragedie of Othello

How I did thriue in this faire Ladies love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it Otello.

Oth. Her Father lou'd me, oft invited me:
Still question'd me the Storie of my life,
From yere to yere: the Battell, Sieges, Fortune,
That I have paff.

I ran it through, even from my boyth daies,
Told very moment that he bad me tell it.
Wherein I spoke of most diffifrous chances:
Of mowing Accidents by Flood and Field,
Of haire-breath scapes i'th'immittent deadly breach;
Of being taken by the Infolent Foe,
And fold to hisury. Of my redemption thence,
And portance in my Travellsart hilfeuse.
When of Aunts, vass, and Defarts idle,
Rough Quaries, Rocks, Hills, whose head touch heauen,
It was my hint to speake. Such was my Procee,
And of the Canibals that eaches eate,
The Astrologer, and men whole heads
Grew hent off their shoulders. Thefe things to hear,
Would Dfademna fervorously incline:
But fill the house Affaires would draw her hence:
Which ever as she could with haste dispach,
She'd come againe, and with a greesse ear
Deceoure vp my difcourfe. Which I offerung,
Tooke once a plant hour, and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earneft heart,
That I would all my Pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcel she had something heard,
But not ininitidue: I did confent,
And often did beguile her of her teares,
When I did speake of some direftrefull stroke
That my youth fuffer'd: My Storie being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of kifles
She swore in faith twas strange: twas paffing strange,
'Twas pittifull: twas wondrous pittifull.
She would she had not heard it, yet the with'd
That Heauen had made her fuch a man. She thank'd me,
And bad me, if I had a Friend that lou'd her,
I shoul but teach him how to tell my Story,
And that would wooe her. Upon this hint I speake,
She lou'd me for the danger I had paff,
And I lou'd her,that the did pity them.
This onely is the witch-craft I have voud.
Here comes the Ladie: Let her witneffe it.

Eater Dfademna, Lege, Attendants.

Duke. I thinkke this tale would win my Daughter too,
Good Brabantio, take vp this mangled matter at the ball:
Men do their broken Weapons rather vfe,
Then their bare hands.

Br. I pray you hear her speake?
If she confesse that she was halfe the wooer,
Deftruction on my head,if my bad blame
Light on the man. Come hither gentle Miftris,
Do you perceive in all this Noble Companie,
Where most you owe obedience?
Def. My Noble Father,
I do perceive heere a divided duty,
To you I am bound for life, and education:
My life and education both do learne me,
How to respect you. You are the Lord of duty,
I am hither your Daughter. But here's my Husband;
And so much dutie, as my Mother they'd

To you, preferring you before her Father:
So much I challenge, that I may profess
Due to the Moore my Lord.

Bra. God be with you: I have done.
Please it your Grace, on to the State Affaires;
I had rather to adopt a Child, then get it.
Come hither Moore;
I here do guie thee that with all my heart,
Which but thou haft already, with all my heart
I would keepe from thee. For your fake (Jewell)
I am glad at loue, I have no other Child,
For thy escape would teach me Tyrannie
To hang coggles on them. I have done my Lord.

Duke. Let me speake like your felle:
And lay a Sentence,
Which as a grate, or any may helpe thee Louen.
When remedia are paff, the griefes are ended
By feeing the worft, which late on hopes depended.
To mourne a Milcheefe that is past and gon,
Is the next way to draw new milchief on.
What can the be preffed, when Fortune takes:
Patience, her Injury a mock'r makes.
The rob'd that smilies, teales something from the Thiefs,
He robs himfelfe, that spends a booteflee griefe.

Bra. So let the Turke of Cyprus vs beguile,
We loue it not to long as we can fmile:
He beares the Sentence well, that nothing beares,
But the free comfort which from thence he heares.
But he beares both the Sentence, and the forrow,
That to pay griefe, must of poor Patience borrow.
Thefe Sentences, to Sugars, or to Gall,
Being strong on both fides, are Equinocall.
But words are words, I never yet did heare';
That the bruized heart was pliere't through the eares.
I humbly before thee you proceed to th'Affaires of State.

Duke. The Turke with a molt mighty Preparation makes for Cyprus: Otello, the Fortitude of the place is beft knowne to you. And though we haue there a Substitu-tute of molt allowed sufficiencie; yet opinion, a more soueraine Miftris of Effects, throwes a more faer voice on you: you must therefore be content to flumber
the glories of your new Fortunes, with this more flub-borne, and boziris expedition.

Orfe. The Tirant Cuftome, molt Graue Senators,
Hath made the flinty and Steele Coach of Warre
My thirce-driuen bed of Downe. I do agnize
A Naturall and prompt Alacarte,
I finde in hardneffe: and do undertake
This preferent Warres against the Orientes:
Moft humbly therefore bending to your State,
I crave ft disposition for my Wife,
Due reference of Place, and Exhibition,
With such Accomodation and beforit
As leuell as her breeding.

Duke. Why at her Fathers?

Bra. I will not hauie it fo.

Orfe. Nor 1.

Def. Nor would I there recide,
To put my Father in impatient thoughts
By being in his eye. Most Gracious Duke,
To my unfolding, lend you properous care,
And let me finde a Charter in your voice
To allifie my simplenee.

Duke. What would you Dfademna?

Def. That I may love the Moore, to live with him,
My downe-right violence, and forme of Fortunes,
May trumpet to the world. My heart's fiabdu'd
Even to the very quality of my Lord;
I saw Othello's viilage in his mind,
And to his Honours and his valliant parts,
Did I my soule and Fortunes confecrate.
So taht (deere Lords) I be left behind
A Moth of Peace, and he go to the Warre,
The Rites for why I lose him, are bereft me:
And I a heauie interim shall support
By his deere abience. Let me go with him.
Obe. Let her have your voice.
Vouch with me Heauen, I therefore beg it not
To pleafe the pallate of my Appetite.
Nor to comply with heat the yong affects
In my deffenci, and proper satisfaction.
But to be free, and bounteous to her minde:
And Heauen defend your good soules, that you thinke
I will your ferious and great buuneffe scant.
When she is with me. No, when light wing'd Toyes
Of feather'd Cupid,feele with wanton dulneffe
My speculatue, and offic'd Instrument:
That my Diportes corrupt, and taint my buuneffe:
Let Hounds-wises make a Skillet of my Helme,
And all indigne, and base aduerfities,
Make head against my Eftimation.
Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her flay, or going th: Affaire cries haft,
And speak must answer it.
Sor. You muft away to night,
Obe. With all my heart.
Duke. At nine I'th'morning, here we'll meete again.
Othello, leave some Officer behind
And he shall our Committion bring to you:
And such things else of qualitie and refpeft
As doth import you.
Obe. So please your Grace, my Ancient,
A man he is of honefthy and truft:
To his conuayance I assigne my wife,
With what else needful, your good Grace shall think
To be sent after me.
Duke. Let it be fo:
Good night to euer one. And Noble Signior,
If Vertue no delighted Beautie lacke,
Your Son-in-law is farre more Fare then Blacke.
Sor. A Jeune brave Moore, the Defdemona well.
Bra. Looke to her (Moore) if thou haft eies to fee:
She ha's decie'd her Father, and may thee.
Exit.
Obe. My life vpon her faith. Honest Iago,
My Defdemona muft I leave to thee:
I prythee let thy wife attend on her,
And bring them after in the beft advantage.
Come Defdemona, I haue but an houre
Of Loue, of worthy matter, and direction
To spend with thee. We must obey thee the time.
Exit.
Iago.
Iago. What falt thou Noble heart?
Red. What will I do, think'fth thou?
Iago. Why go to bed and sleepe.
Red. I will incontinently drowne my felfe.
Iago. Thou falt thou, I shall never love thee after. Why thou Ely Gentfman?
Red. It is fillyneffe to live, when to live is torment:
and then haue we a preffcription to dye, when death is our Phefition.
Iago. Oh villainous: I have looke'd vpon the world for foure times feven yeares, and since I could diftinguith betwixt a Benefit, and an Injurie: I never found man that knew how to lose himfelfe. Ere I would fay, I would drowne my felfe for the loue of a Gunney Hen, I would change my Humanitie with a Baboon.
Red. What fhould I do? I confefs it is my fhame
To fo fond, but it is not in my vertue to amend it.
Lago. Vertue? A figne, 'tis in our fles that we are thus, or thus. Our Bodies are our Gardens, to the which, our Wills are Gardiners. So that if we will plant Net-tels, or fowe Lettice: Set Hifope, and weepe vp Times:
Supplic it with one gender of Hairles, or dirad it with many: either to have it flerill with bil内的efle, or manured with Induftry, why the power, and Corrigable autorithie of this lies in our Wills. If the braine of our liues had not one Scale of Refton, to poize another of Senfufälle, the blood, and bafenlle of our Natures would conduce vs to moft pernicious Conclusions. But we have Refton to coole our raging Motions, our carnall Stings, or unbitted Lufts: whereof I take this, that you call Loue, to be a Sedt, or Seyen.
Red. It cannot be,
Iago. It is meery a Luft of the blood, and a permiffion of the will. Come, be a man: drowne thy felfe? Drown Cats, and blind Puppies. I have profefte me thy Friend, and I confefs me knit to thy delving, with Cables of perdurable toughneffe. I could neuer better fiied thee then now. Put Money in thy purfe: follow thou the Warres, deffece thy felf, with an ufurp'd Beard. I fay, put Money in thy purfe. It cannot be long that Defdemona should continue her loue to the Moore. Put Money in thy purfe nor he his to her. It was a violent Commencement in her, and thou fhalt fee an awnfeeble Sequestration, put but Money in thy purfe. These Moeres are changeable in their wills: fill thy purfe with Money. The Food that to him now is as lusious as Locufts, shall be to him shortly, as bitter as Colooquintida. She muft change for youth: when she is fated with his body she will find the errors of her choice. Therefore, put Money in thy purfe. If thou wilt needs damne thy felfe, do it a more delicate way then drowning. Make all the Money thou canft: If Sanftimone, and a fraile vow, betwixt an erring Barbarian, and fupper-fuble Venetian be not too hard for my wits, and all the Tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her: therefor make Money: a box of drowning thy felfe, it is clean out of the way. Seek thee thou rather to be hang'd in Compafling thy voy, then to be drownd'and go without her.
Red. Wilt thou be falt to my hopes, if I depend on thee?
Iago. Thou art fure of me: Go make Money: I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again, and again, I hate the Moore. My caufe is hearted: thine hath no leffe reason. Let vs be coniunflue in our reuenge, against him. If thou canft Cuckold him, thou doft thy felfe a pleafure, me a fport. There are many Events in the Wombe of Time, which wilbe delivered. Traurer, go, proide thy Money. We will have more of this to morrow. Adieu.
Red. Where fhall we meete I'th'morning?
Iago. At my Lodging.
Red. Ile be with thee betimes.
Iago. Go too, farewell. Do you heare Roderigs?
Red. Ile fell all my Land.
Exit.
Iago. Thus do I euer make my Foole, my purfe:
For I mine owne gain'd knowledge should prophan.
I will time expend with such Sunes,
But for my Sport, and Profit: I hate the Moore,
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets
She's done my Office. I know not if't be true,
But I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do, as if for Surety. He holds me well,
The better shall my purpose work on him:
Caffio's a proper man: Let me see now,
To get his Place, and to plume vp my will
After some time, to abuse Othello's cares,
That he is too familiar with his wife:
He hath a person, and a smooth discourse
To be suspected: fram'd to make women false.
The Moor is of a free, and open Nature,
That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be lead by'th' Nose.
As Afes are:
I hate't: it is engendred: Hell, and Night,
Muf't bring this monstrous Birth, to the worlds light.

Enter Montano, and two Gentlemen.

Mont. What from the Cape, can you discourse at Sea?

Gent. Nothing at all, it is a high wrought Flood:
I cannot 'twixt the Heauen, and the Maine,
Defy a Sallet.

Mont. Me thinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at Land,
A fuller blast ne're shoke our Battlements:
If it hath ruffian'd Vpon the Sea,
What ribbes of Oake, when Mountains melt on them,
Can hold the Mortaries. What shall we hear of this?
2. A Segregation of the Turkish Fleet:
For do but stand upon the Foaming Shore,
The chidden Billow seemes to pelt the Clowds,
The winde-falk'd-Surge, with high & monstrous Maine
Seemes to cast water on the burning Bearre,
And quench the Guards of th'euer-axed Pole;
I never did like mullation view
On the engag'd Flood.

Mont. If that the Turkish Fleet
Be not enhel'd, and empery'd, they are drown'd,
It is impossible to bear it out.

Enter a Gentleman.

3. Newses Ladders: our warres are done:
The desperate Tempell hath fo bang'd the Turkes,
That their deignement halts. A Noble ship of Venice,
Hath seene a generous wracke and suffcrance
On most part of their Fleet.

Mont. How? Is this true?

3. The Ship is heere put in: A Persuasive, Michael Caffio
Lieutenant to the warlike Moore, Orbelo,
Is come on Shore: the Moore himselfe at Sea,
And is in full Commission heere for Cyprus.

Mont. I am glad on't:
'Tis a worthy Governour.

3. But this fame Caffio, though he speak of comfort,
Touching the Turkish kiffe, yet he lookes fally,
And pray the Moore be safe: for they were parted
With loose and violent Tempest.

Mont. Pray Heauens he be:

For I have seru'd him, and the man commands
Like a full Soldier. Let's to the Sea-fide (hoa)
As well to see the Veffell that's come in,
As to throw-out our eyes for brave Othello,
Euen till we make the Maine, and th'Eriea blew,
An indistinct regard.

Gent. Come, let's do so:
For every Minute is expectable
Of more Arrivancie.

Enter Caffio.

Caff. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike Isle,
That so approue the Moore: Oh let the Heauens
Gloe him defence against the Elements,
For I have loit him on a dangerous Sea.

Mont. Is he well ship'd?

Caff. His Barke is stoutly Timber'd, and his Pylot
Of verey expert, and approv'd Allowance;
Therefore my hope's (not furreted to death)
Stand in bold Cure.

Within. A Sallet, a Sallet, a Salle.

Caff. What noise?

Gent. The Towne is empty: on the brow of'th Sea
Stand rankes of People, and they cry, a Salle.

Caff. My hopes do shape him for the Governor.

Gent. They do discharge their Shot of Courteties,
Our Friends, at leaft.

Caff. I pray you Sir, go forth,
And glue vs truth who 'tis that is arriu'd.

Gent. I shall.

Mont. But good Lieutenant, is your General wiu'd?

Caff. Moft fortunately: he hath archiu'd a Maid
That paragons description, and wide Fame:
One that excels the quirks of Blazingon pens,
And in the'th'entail Venture of Creation,
Do's tyre the Ingenious.

Enter Gentlemen.

How now? Who ha's put in?

Gent. 'Tis one Iago, Auncient to the Generall.

Caff. He's had most favurable, and happie speed:
Tempelts themselfes, high Seas, and howling windes,
The gutter'd-Rockes, and Congregated Sands,
Traitors entwip'd, to engloue the guiltefull Kecle,
As hauing fence of Beautie, do omit
Their mortall Nature, letting go safely by
The Divine Deifeliena,

Mont. What is he?

Caff. He that I spake of:
Our great Captains Captaine,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing heere anticipates our thoughts,
A Senights speed. Great Ioue, Othello guard,
And swell his Salle with thine owne powerfull breath,
That he may bliee this Bay with his tall Ship,
Make loves quicke pants in Deifeliena Armes,
Gie renue'd fire to our extinquish'd Spirits.

Enter Deifeliena, Iago, Rodrigo, and Oemilia.

Oh behold,
The Riches of the Ship is come on shore:
You men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.
Haile to thee Ladie: and the grace of Hauean,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand
Enwheele thee round.

Oth. I thank you, Valiant Caffio,
What tydings can you tell of my Lord?

Caff.
Caf. He is not yet arriv'd, nor know I ought
But that he's well, and will be shortly heere.
Def. Oh, but I feare:
How loth you company?
Caffio. The great Contention of Sea, and Skies
Pared our fellowship. But hearke, a Salle.
Within. A Salle, a Salle.
Gen. They give this greeting to the Cittadell:
This likewise is a Friend.
Caffio. See for the Newes:
Good Ancients, you are welcome. Welcome Mift'r:
Let it not galle your patience (good Lago)
That I extend my Manners. 'Tis my breeding,
That gives me this bold thow of Curtezie.
Lago. Sir, would she gave you somuch of her lippes,
As of her tongue she oft behovest on me,
You would have enuio.
Def. Alas: she's no speach.
Lago. Infant too much:
I finde it still, when I have leau to sleepe.
Marry before your Ladyship, I grant,
She pottes her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.
C. Emil. You have little caute to say so.
Lago. Come on, come on: you are Pictures out of doore:
Bells in your Parlours: Wilde-Cats in your Kitchen:
Saints in your Inuries: Deeds being offended:
Players in your Hufwiferie, and Hufwivies in your Bed.
Def. Oh, fie vpon thee, Slanderer.
Lago. Nay, it is true: or else I am a Turke,
You rife to play, and go to bed to worke.
C. Emil. You shall not write my praiue.
Lago. No, let me not.
Def. What would it write of me, if thou shouldst praiue me?
Lago. Oh, gentle Lady, do not put me too, tis
For I am nothing, if not Criticall.
Def. Come on, affay.
There's one gone to the Harbour?
Lago. I Madam.
Def. I am not merry: but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwife.
Come, how wouldst thou praiue me?
Lago. I am about it, but indeed my inuention comes from my pate, as Birdlyme do's from Freeze, it pluckes out Braines and all. But my Mufe labours, and thus she deliver'd.
If she be faire, and wife; fairmuffes, and wit,
The res for wife, the other out she.
Def. Well praiued:
How if the be Blacke and Witry
Lago. If she be blacke, and thereto bawse a wit,
She's fide a white, that faile th' blackmufff fit.
Def. Worfes, and warrie.
C. Emil. How if faire, and Foolish?
Lago. She never yet was fooyish that was faire,
For even her folly helps her to an heire.
Def. Thefe are old fond Paradoxes, to make Fooles laugh. I' the Alcobouch. What miserable praiue haft thou for her that's Foule, and Foolish.
Lago. There's none fo foule and foullifh thereunto,
But doe's foule pranks, which faire, and wife-sane do.
Def. Oh heavy ignorance! thou praiueth the worst bell. But what praiue couldst thou behovest on a defearing woman indeed? One, that is in the authorith of her merit, did luftly put on the vouch of very malice it selfe.

Lago. She that was ever faire, and never proud,
Hath tongue at will, and yet was never loud:
Neuer lack't Gold, and yet was never Gay:
Fled from her wife, and yet feld now I may.
She that being angered, her revenge being nis,
Bad her wrong flays, and her difpleasure fli:
She that in wife-some was fo faire,
'to change the Gods-head for the Solomon saile:
She that could think, and now she diuagre her mind,
See Suitors following, and not looks behond:
She was a night, (if ever such nightes were)
Def. To do what?
Lago. To suckle Fooles, and chronicle smal Beere.

Def. Oh most lame and impotent conclusion. Do not learne of him C. Emil, though he be thy husband.
How say you (Caffio) is he not a mofh prophane, and liberald Counfoller?
Caffio. He speakes home (Madam) you may rellishe him more in the Souldern, then in the Scoller.
Lago. He takes her by the palme: I, well said, whiffper.
With as little a web as this, will I enfare as great a Fly as Caffio. I smiile vpon her, do: I will glue thine in thine owne Courtship. You fay true, 'ts do indeed.
If fuch tricks as these! ftrip you out of your Lieutenant trie, it had beene better you had not kids'd your three fngers fo oft, which now againe you are moft apt to play the Sir, in. Very good: well kids'd, and excellent Curtfe:
'ts do indeed. Yet againe, your fngers to your lippes? Would they were Clufter-pipes for your take.
The Moore I know his Trumpet.
Caffio, 'Tu truly fo.
Def. Let's meete him, and recieuie him.
Caffio. Loc, where he comes.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O, my faire Warriour.
Def. My deere Othello.
Oth. It gives me wonder great, as my content
To see you heere before me.
Oh my Soules Ioy:
If after every Tempeft, come fuch Calmes,
May the windes blow, till they haue waken'd death:
And let the labouring Barke clime hills of Seas
Olympe high, and dunc againe as low,
As hell's from Heauen. If it were now to dye,
"Twere now to be moft happy. For I fear,
My Soule hath her content to absole,
That not another comfort like to this,
Succeeds in unknowne Fate.
Def. The Heauens forbid
But that our Loues
And Comforts should encrease
Euen as our daies do grow.
Oth. Amen to that (Sweet Powers)
I cannot speake enough of this content,
It stoppes me heere: it is too much of loy.
And this, and this the greatest difcorde be
That ere our hearts shall make.
Lago. Oh you are well tun'd now: But Le fet downe the peggs that make this Muficlick, as honest as I am.
Oth.
The Tragedie of Othello

Oth., Come: let vs to the Cafle.
Newes (Friends) our Warres are done:
The Turkes are drown'd.
How do's my old Acquaintance of this life? (Hony) you shall be well defir'd in Cyprus,
I have found great love among'them. Oh my Sweet,
I prattle out of fashion, and I doate
In mine owne comfort: I pythe, good Iago,
Go to the Bay, and difembark me Coffers:
Bring thou the Mafter to the Citadell,
He is a good one, and his worthyneffe.
Do's challenge much reproof. Come Desdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus.

Exit Othello and Desdemona.

Iago. Do thou meet me prefently at the Harbour.
Come thither, if thou behaft Valiantly (as they fay base men being in Love, have then a Nobilitie in their Natures, more then is native to them) hift-me; the Lieutenant to night watches on the Court of Guard. Firit, I must tell thee this; Desdemona, is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him? Why, 'tis not poiffeble.

Iago. Lay up the firft thou thinkest, and let thy foule be infructed. Marke me with what violence the firft lou'd the Moore, but for bragging, and telling her fantaffical lies. To love him still for prating, let not thy difcreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed. And what delight shall she have to looke on the diuell? When the Blood is made dull with the Act of Sport, there fhould be a game to enflame it, and to glue Satiety a freth appetite.
Louelineffe in favour, sympathy in yeares, Manners, and Beauties: all which the Moore is defteotive in. Now for want of their requir'd Conveniences, her delicate tenderneffe will finde it felle abus'd, begin to hewe the, gorge, difeffilith and abborre the Moore, very Nature will infruch her in it, and compel her to some fenc'd choice.
Now Sir, this granted (as it is a moft pregnant and un-forcd opinion) who fhalls fo eminent in the degree of this Forune, as Caffio do's: a knaue very volunt'ble: no further confommable, then in putting on the meer forme of Ciull, and Humaine femeing, for the better compaffe of his falt, and moft hidden loffe Affection? Why none, why none: A fliper, and fubtle knaue, a finder of occa-
flion: that he's an eye can flame, and counterfeit Advantages, though true Advantage never pretiff it felle.
A diuellish knaue: befores, the knaue is handom, young:
and hath all thofe requifites in him, that folly and greene minds looke after. A perfett compleat knaue, and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot beleafe that in her, he's full of moft bife'd condition.

Iago. Bife'd figges-end. The Wine the drinks is made of grapes. If thee had beene bife'd, thee would never haue lou'd the Moore: Bife'd puddin'. Didft thou not fee her pade with the palme of his hand? Didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did: but that was but curtefie.

Iago. Leacherie by this hand: an Index, and obscure prologue to the History of Luft and foule Thoughts.
They met fo neere with their lippe, that their breaths embrac'd together. Villainous thoughts Redepipe, when thee mutabilites fo marchall the way, hard at hand comes the Mafter, and maine exercife, th'incorporate conclusion: Pifh. But Sir, be you rul'd by me. I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to night: for the Command, He layt vpon you. Caffio knowes you not:
I le not be faire from you. Do you finde some occafion to anger Caffio, either by fpeaking too lou'd, or tainting his discipline, or from what other course you pleafe, which the time call all more favourably minifter.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he's raff, and very fodaine in Choller: and happily may alrike at you, provoke him that he may: for even out of that will I caufe thefe of Cyprus to Mutiny.
Whole qualification shall come into no true taffe againe, but by the diplanting of Caffio. So hall you have a fhorter journey to your defires, by the meane I shall then hawe to preferre them. And the impelliment moft proffitably removed, without the which there were no expeffation of our preferitie.

Rod. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meeke me by and by at the Citadell. I muft fetch his Nefe refrs a Shore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

Iago. That Caffio loves her, I do well beleefe:
That the loue does finger fhe apt, and of great Credite.
The Moore (howbeit that I endure him not)
Is of a conflant, loving, Noble Nature,
And I dare thinke, he'll prove to Desdemona
A moft defere husband. Now I do loue her too,
Not out of absolute Luft, (though peraduenture
I hand accountable for as great a fin)
But partly led to dyet my Reuenge,
For that I do fuppeft the loffe Moore
Hath leapt into my Sate. The thought whereof,
Doth (like a poiyfonous Mineral) draw my Inwardes:
And nothing can, or shall content my Soule
Till I am couen'd with him, wife, for wit,
Or faying fo, yet that I put the Moore,
At leaft into a leoluzie fo strong
That judgmeent cannot cure. Which thing to do,
If this poore Trlefh of Venice, whom I trace
For his quicke hunting, fland the putting on,
Ile have our Michael Caffio on the hip,
Abufe him to the Moore, in the right garbe
(For I feare Caffio with my Night-Cape too)
Make the Moore thanke me, loue me, and reward me,
For making him egregiously an Aife,
And praftifing vpon his peace, and quiet,
Euen to madneffe. 'Tis heere: but yet confus'd,
Knaueries plainfe face, is neuer seenhe, till va'd.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello's, Herald with a Proclamation.

Herald. It is Othello's pleafure, our Noble and Valiant Generall. That vpon certaine fydings now arri'd, importing the moere perdition of the Turkifh Fleete:
evry man put himselfe into Triumph. Some to daunce, some to make Bonfires, each man, to what Sport and Reuels his addition leads him. For besides thefe beneficial Newes, it is the Celebration of his Nuptiall. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open, & there is full liberte of Fefting from this

Page 318
Now 'mongst this Flocke of drunkards
Am I put to our Caffe in some Adven
That may offend the Ile. But here they come.

Enter Caffio, Montano, and Gentlemen.

If Consequence do but approve my dreames,
My Boate failes freely, both with winde and Streame.

Caffio. 'Fore heauen, they have gien me a rowse already,

Mon. Good-faith a little one: not past a pint, as I am a Souldier.

Lago. Some Wine hoa.

And let me the Cannaun clink, clinke:

And let me the Cannaun clink;

A Souldiers a man: Oh, man's life's but a span,

Why then let a Souldier drink.

Some Wine Boyes.

Caffio. 'Fore Hauean: an excellent Song.

Lago. I learn'd it in England: where indeed they are most potent in Potting. Your Dane, your Germaine, and your swag-belly'd Hollander, (drink hoa) are nothing to your English.

Caffio. Is your Englishmen so exquisite in his drinking?

Lago. Why, he drinks you with facilitie, your Dane dead drunk. He sweates not to overthrow your Al-maine. He gies your Hollander a vomit, ere the next

Pottle can be fill'd.

Caffio. To the health of our Generall.

Mon. I am for it Lieutenant: and Ile do you luffice.

King Stephen was and--a worthy Peer,

His Brechees coss him but a Crowne,

He hold them She pense all to desire,

With that he call'd the Tailor Lewne:

He was a might of high renowne,

And thou art but of low degree:

'Tis Pride that pulls the Country downe,
And take thy am'd Chair about thee.

Some Wine hoa.

Caffio. Why this is a more exquisite Song then the other.

Lago. Will you heare't againe?

Caffio. No: I hold him to be vnworthy of his Place, that do's those things. Well I heare's all: and there be foules must be made, and there be foules must not be faied.

Lago. It's true, good Lieutenant.

Caffio. For mine owne part, no offence to the General,

nor any man of qulitie: I hope to be faied.

Lago. And so do I too Lieutenant.

Caffio. 'Tis (by your leave) not before me. The Lieutenant is to be faied before the Ancient. Let's have no more of this: let's to our Affaires. Forgive us our finnes: Gentlemen let's looke to our bufineffe. Do not thinke Gentlemen, I am drunke: this is my Ancient, this is my right hand, and this is my left. I am not drunke now I can stand well enough, and I speake well enough.

Genl. Excellent well.

Caffio. Why very well then: you must not thinke then,

that I am drunke.

Exit. Monts. To th'Platfore (Maffets) come, let's set the Watch.

Lago. You see this Fellow, that is gone before,

He 's a Souldier, fit to stand by Caffio,

And glue direction. And do but see his vice,

'Tis to his vertue, a just Equinox,
The Tragedie of Othello

The one as long as th’other. "Tis pittie of him:
I feare the trufe Orbello puts him in,
On some oddie time of his infrimity.
Will thake this Island.

Mont. But is he often thus?
Iago. 'Tis euermore his prologue to his sleepe,
He’ll watch the Horologe a double Set,
If Drinkke rokke not his Cradle.

Mont. It were well
The Generall were put in mind of it:
Perhaps he fees it not, or his good nature
Prizes the vertue that appears in Caffio,
And lookes not on his euliis: is not this true?
Enter Rodrigo.

Iago. How now Rodrigo?
I pray you after the Lieutenant, go.

Mont. And 'tis great pitty, that the Noble Moore
Should hazard fuch a Place, as his owne Second
With one of an ingraft Infrimity.
It were an honeft Action, to fay so
To the Moore.

Iago. Not I, for this faire Island,
I do loue Caffio well: and would do much
To cure him of this euli, But hearke, what noife?
Enter Caffio purfuing Rodrigo.

Caffio. You Rogue: you Rafael.

Mont. What’s the matter Lieutenant?
Caffio. A Knave teach me my dutie? Ile beate the Knave into a ‘Twigg-en-Bottle.

Rod. Bette me?
Caffio. Dooft thou prate, Rogue?

Mont. Nay, good Lieutenant:
I pray you Sir, hold your hand.

Caffio. Let me go (Sir)
Or Ic knocke you o’re the Hazard.

Mont. Come, come! you’re drunkke.

Caffio. Drunkke?

Iago. Away I fay I go out and cry a Munifie.

Nay good Lieutenant. Alas Gentlemen:
Helpe hoa. Lieutenant. Sir Montano:
Helpe Matters. Here’s a goodly Watch indeed.
Who’s that which rings the Bell? Diablo, hoa:
The Towne will rife. Fie, fie Lieutenant,
You’ll be afham’d for ever.

Enter Orbello, and Attendants.

Oth. ‘What is the matter heere?

Mon. I bleue fhill, I am hurt to th’death. He dies.

Oth. Hold for your lues.

Iago. Hold hoa! Lieutenant, Sir Montano, Gentlemen:
Have you forgot all place of fene & dutie?

Hold. The Generall speaks to you: hold for blame.

Oth. Why how now hoa? From whence arife this?
Are we turn’d Turkes? and to our felues do that
Which Heauen hath forbid the Ottomites.

For Christian flame, put by this barbarous Brawlke;
He that firs next, to care for his owne rage,
Holds his foule light. He dies upon his Motion.

Silence that dreadful Bell, it frights the lfe,
From her propiety. What is the matter, Matters?
Honel Iago, that looks dead with greening,
Speake: who began this? On thy loue I charge thee?

Iago. I do not know: Friends all, buttoke, euery now.
In Quartier, and in terms like Bride, and Groome
Deuelop them for Bed: and then, but now:
(As if some Planet had unwittted men)

Swords out, and tilting one at others breastes,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speake
Any beginning to this pefulous oddes.
And would, in Action glorious, I had loft
Thofe legges, that brought me to a part of it.

Oth. How comes it (Michael) you are thus forgot?

Caffio. I pray you pardon me, I cannot speake.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be ciuill:
The grauile, and philantreps of your youth
The world hath noted. And your name is great
In mouths of wisfe Ceniture. What’s the matter
That you vnlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler? Glue me answer to it.

Mont. Worthy Orbello, I am hurt to danger,
Your Officer Iago, can informe you,
While I spare speech which something now offends me.
Of all that I do know, nor know I ought
By me, that’s fad, or done amifle this night,
Valiente fele-charitie he sometimes a vice,
And to defend our felues, it be a finne
When violence affails us.

Oth. Now by Heauen,
My blood begins my fifer Guides to rule,

And paflion (having my belt judgement collid’d)
Affid to lead the way. If I once fir,
Or do but lift this Arme, the belt of you
Shall finke in my rebuke. Glue me to know
How this foule Rout began: Who let it on,
And he that is approu’d in this offence,
Though he had twinn’d with me, both at a birth,
Shall loafe me. What in a Towne of warre,
Yet wilde, the peoples hearts brim-full of feare,
To Manage private, and domestick Quarrell?
In night, and on the Court and Guard of fafete?
‘Tis monftrous: Iago, who began’t?

Mont. If partially Affh’d, or league in office,
Thou doft deliuer more, or leffe then Truth,
Thou art no Souldier.

Iago. Touch me not fo neere,
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Then it shoul’d do offence to Michael Caffio.

Yet I perfwade my self, to speake the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. This it is Generall:
Montano and my felfe being in speech,
There comes a Fellow, crying out for helpe,
And Caffio following him with determin’d Sword
To execute upon him. Sir, this Gentleman,
Streppes in to Caffio, and entreats his paffe:
My felfs, the crying Fellow did purfue,
Leaf by his amour (as it fo fell out)
The Towne might fall in fright. He,(swift of ftocke)
Out-ran my purpose: and I return’d then rather
For that I heard the clinke, and fall of Swords,
And Caffio high in oath: Which till to night
I nere might fay before. When I came backe
(For this was briefe) I found them clofe together
At blow, and thrufh, euery as againe they were
When you your felle did purfue.

More of this matter cannot I report,
But Men are Men: The beft sometimes forget,
Though Caffio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage strike those that with them beft,
Yet surely Caffio I beleue receiv’d
From him that died, some strange Indignities,
Which patience could not paffe.

Oth.
Enter Désdemona attended.

Looke if my gentle Loue be not ral'sd vp : Hee make thee an example.

Duf. What is the matter (Deere ?)

Oth. All's well, Sweeting : Come away to bed. Sir for your hurts, My selfe will be your Surgeon. Lead him off:

Enter Iago.

Iago. Marry Haveuen forbid.

Iago. As I am an honset man I had thought you had receiv'd some bodily wound; there is more fence in that then in Reputation. Reputation is an idle, and most fable imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving. You have left no Reputation at all, vnlesse you repute your selfe such a loofer. What man, there are more ways to recover the Generall againe. You are but now call in his moode, (a punishment more in policie, then in malice) even so as one would beate his of-fencefull dogge, to affright an Imperious Lyon. Sue to him againe, and he's yours.

Caf. I will rather fue to be defpis'd, then to deceiue so good a Commander, with so flight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an Officer. Drunk? And I s'ake Parrat? And fquabbil? Swagger? Swear? And disappoint Fuiian with Jones owne shadow? Oh thou invisible spirit of Wine, if thou haft no name to be knowne by, let vs call thee Duell.

Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your Sword? What had he done to you?

Caf. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Caf. I remember a maffe of things, but nothing distinctly: a Quarrel, but nothing whereof. Oh, that men should put an Enemie in their mouthes, to fleale away their Brains? that we should with joy, pleasance, revell and applause, transforme our felves into Beasts.

Iago. Why? But you are now well enough: how came you thus recovered?

Caf. It hath pleas'd the duell drunkennefse, to glue place to the diuell wrath, one vnperfec'tneffe, fhwews me another to make me frankly depifie my felse.

Iago. Come, you are too fenns a Moraller. As the Time, the Place, & the Condition of this Country flands I could heartily with this had not beafeine iubt since it is, as it is, mend it for your owne good.

Caf. I will ask him for my Place againe, he shall tell me, I am a drunkard: had I as many mouths as Hydra, fuch an anwei rould shut them all. To be now a fen-sible man, by and by a Fool, and prefently a Beatt. Oh strange! Every inordinate cup is vnblef'd, and the Ingredient is a duell.

Iago. Come, come: good wine, is a good familiar Creature, if it be well vs'd: exclame no more against it. And good Lieutenant, I thinke, you thinke I love you.

Caff. I haue well approv'd it, Sir. I drunke?

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunke at a time man. I tell you what you shall do; Our Generall's Wife, is now the Generall. I may say fo, in this refpect, for that he hath deuoted, and gien vp himselfe to the Contemplation, narke: and deuotement of her parts and Grace. Confeffe your felse freely to her: impor-tune her helpe to put you in your place againe. She is of fo free, fo kinde, fo apt, fo bleffed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodneffe, not to do more then she is requited. This broken loyalte betweene you, and her husband, entreat her to splinter. And my Fortune against any losse worth naming, this cracke of your Loue, shall grow honger, then it was before.

Iago. You aduife me well.

Iago. I proeifie in the sinceritie of Loue, and honet kindneffe.

Caff. I thinke it freely: and betimes in the morning, I will breche the vertueus Désdemona to vnclerk for me: I am deperate of my Fortunes if they check me.

Iago. You are in the right: good night Lieutenant, I must to the Watch.

Caff. Good night, honet Iago.

Iago. And what's he then, That faies I play the Villaine? When this aduise is free I gle, and honet, Probll to thinking, and indeed the courfe To win the Moore againe.

For 'tis most cafe Th'inclining Désdemona to subdue In any honset Suite. She's fram'd as fruitful In as the free Elements. And then for her To win the Moore, were to renounce his Baptifm, All Seales, and Simbols of redeemed fin: His Soule is so enfeiter'd to her Loue, That she may make, vnmake, do what she lift, Euen as her Appetite shall play the God, With his weake Function. How am I then a Villaine, To Cousnell Caff to this paralell courfe, Direcly to his good? Diuinitie of hell, When duells will the blackeff finnes put on, They do fuggiet at firft with heavenly fhes, As I do now. For whiles this honet Foole Piles Désdemona, to repaire his Fortune, And the for him, pleades strongly to the Moore, Ilc powre this pedilience into his care: That he repeales him, for her bodies Luft? And by how much he firies to do him good, She shall vndo her Credit with the Moore. So will I turne her vertue into pitch, And out of her owne goodneffe make the Net, That shall en-maft them all. How now Roderigo?

Enter Roderigo.

Roderigo. I do follow herhe in the Chace, not like a Hound that hunts, but one that filleth vp the Crie. My Money is almost fpent; I have bin to night exceedingly well Cudgel'd: And I thinke the Ifue will will bee, I shall have so much experience for my pains; and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience? What wound did ever health but by degrees? Thou know’st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft. And wit depends on ditatorial time:

Do not go well? Caffio hath beaten thee, and thou by that small hurt hast caust’er’d Caffio: Though other things grow fair against the Sun, Yet Fruits that blossom first, will first be ripe: Content thy self, a while, Intoth’tis Morning; Pleasure, and Action, make the hours frame short. Retire there, go where thou art Billited: Away, I say, thou shalt know more hereafter:

Nay get thee gone. Exit Roderigo.

Two things are to be done: My Wife must move for Caffio to her Misforts: He set her on my felfe, a while, he draw the Moor apart, And bring him lumps, when he may Caffio finde Soliciting his wife; I, that’s the way: Dull not Deuice, by coldness, and delay. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Caffio, Musicians, and Clown.

Caffio. Masters, play here, I will content your pains, Something that’s brief: and gentlewoman General. Chor. Why Masters, have your Instruments bin in Naples, that they speake I’h’Nofe thus?

Muf. How Sir? how?

Chor. Are these I pray you, winde Instruments?

Muf. I marry are they fir.

Chor. Oh, thereby hangs a tale.

Muf. Whereby hangs a tale, fir?

Chor. Marry, by many a winde Instrument that I know. But Masters, here’s money for you; and the General fo likes your Musick, that he defires you for louses fake to make no more noise with it.

Muf. Well Sir, we will not.

Chor. If you have any Musick that may not be heard, too’t againe. But (as they say) to heare Musick, the General do’s not greatly care.

Muf. We have none such, fir.

Caffio. Prythee keepe vp thy Quilllets, ther’s a poor piece of Gold for thee; if the gentlewoman that attends the General be stirring, tell her, there’s one Caffio entreats her a little favour of Speech. Will thou do this? Chor. She is stirring fir; if she will stirre hither, I shall frame to notice unto her, Exit Chor.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not bin a-bed then?

Caffio. Why no; the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold (Iago) to send in to your wife: My suitor to her is, that the will to vertuous Desdemona Procure me some acceffe.

Iago. Ile send her to you prefently; And Ile devise a means to draw the Moore Out of the way, that your concourse and businesse May be more free.

Exit Caffio.

Iago. I humbly thank you for’t. I never knew A Florentine more kind, and honest.

Enter Othello.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Othel. These Letters (Iago) to the Pylot, And by him do my duties to the Senate: That done, I will be walking on the Workes, Repire there to me.

Iago. Well, my good Lord, Ile doo’t. Othel. This Fortification (Gentlemen)shall we see’t? Gent. Well waite vpon your Lordship. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Desdemona, Caffio, and Emilia.

Def. Be thou affur’d (good Caffio) I will do All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good Madam do: I warrant it greues my Husband, As if the cuife were his.

Def. Oh that’s an honest Fellow, Do not doubt Caffio But I will have my Lord, and you againe As friendly as you were.

Caffio. Bounteous Madam, What ever shall become of Michael Caffio, He’s neuer anything but your true Servant.

Def. I know’t: I thanke you: you do loue my Lord: You have knowne him long, and be you well affur’d He Shall in strangeteildand no further off, Then in a politque distance.

Caffio. I, but Lady, That policie may either laft fo long, Or feeke vpon fuch nice and waterish diet, Or breede it fell fo out of Circumstances, That I Young abente, and my place supple’d, My Generall will forget my Loue, and Service.

Def. Do not doubt that: before Emilia here,
I give thee warrant of thy place. Affure thee,
If I do vow a friendship, Ilete performe it
To the last Article. My Lord shall never rest,
Ile watch him tame, and tale him out of patience,
His Bed shall be borne a Schoole, his Board a Shift,
Ile intermingle every thing he doth
With Caffio's fate: Therefore be merry Caffio,
For thy Solicitor shall rather dye,
Then giue thy caufe away.

Enter Otello, and Iago.

Oth. Madam, here comes my Lord.
Caffio. Madam, He take my Leave.
Iago. Why stay you, and hearre me speake.
Caffio. Madam, not now; I am very ill at eale,

Vnfit for mine owne purpose.

Oth. Well, do your discretion. Exit Caffio.
Iago. Hallo? I like not that.
Oth. What dost thou say?
Iago. Nothing my Lord; or if—I know not what.
Oth. Was not that Caffio parted from my wife?
Iago. Caffio my Lord? No lare, I cannot thinke it
That he would delate away to guilty-like,
Seeing your comming.

Oth. I do beleue twas he.
Iago. How now my Lord?
I heue bin talking with a Suiuer heere,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you mean?
Iago. Why your Lieutenant Caffio Good my Lord,
If I haue any grace, or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take,
For if he be not one, that truly loves you,
That erre in Ignomance, and not in Cunning,
I have no judgement in an honest face,
I prythee call him backe.

Oth. Went he hence now?
Iago. I tooth: so humbled,
That he hath left part of his greene with mee
To suffer with him. Good Loue, call him backe.

Oth. Not now (sweet Djalmond some other time,
Iago. But shall't be shortly?
Oth. The sooner (Sweet) for you.
Iago. Shall't be to night, at Supper?
Oth. No, not to night.
Iago. To morrow Dinner then.

Oth. I shall not dine at home:
I meete the Captaines at the Cittadell.

Iago. Why then to morrow night, on Tuesday morne,
On Wednesday noone, or night; on Wendday Morn.
I prythee name the time, but let it not Exceed three dayes. Infaith hee's penitent: And yet his Trelspaff, in our common reason (Same that they say the warres must make example)
Out of her heft, is not almost a fruit
T'encurre a prisse cheake. When shall he come?
Tell me Otello. I wonder in my Soule
What you would aske mee, that I should deny,
Or stand to mam'ring on? What? Michael Caffio,
That came a wrothe with you? and so many a time
(When I have spoke of you disparingly)
Hath tane your part, to haue so much to do
To bring him in? Trust me, I could do much.

Oth. Prythee no more; Let him come when he will:
I will deny thee nothing.

Iago. Why, this is not a Boone:

"Tis as I should entreat you were your Gloues,
Or feede on nourishing dites, or keepes you warme,
Or fuc to you, to do a peculiar profit
To your owne perfon. Nay, when I haue a fuite
Wherein I meane to touch your Loue indeed,
It shall be full of poise, and difficult weight,
And fearfull to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing.
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to my felke.

Oth. Farewell my Caffio, Ie come to thee fruit.
Iago. eEmilia come: be as your Fanties teach you:
What ere you be, I am obedient. Exit.

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my Soule
But I doe louse thee: and when I louse thee not,
Chaos is come againe.

Iago. My Noble Lord.
Oth. What doft thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Caffio
When hee wo'd my Lady, know of your loue?
Oth. He did, from frit to frit:
Why doft thou ask?
Iago. But for a Satisfacon of my Thought,
No further harme.

Iago. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not thinke he had bin acquainted with hir.
Oth. O yea, and went betweene vs very oft.
Iago. Indeed?
Iago. Indeed. I indeed. Difcern't thou ought in that?
Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my Lord?
Iago. My Lord, for ought I know.
Oth. What do'ft thou thinke?
Iago. Thinke, my Lord?
Oth. Thinke, my Lord? Alas, thou echost not me;
As if there were some Monster in thy thought
Too hideous to be thewne. Thou dost mean somthing:
I heard thee say even now, thou lik'ft not that;
When Caffio left my wife. What didd'ft not like?
And when I told thee, he was of my Counsil,
Of my whole course of wooing; thou criedst, Indeeede? And didd'ft contrace, and purge thy brow together,
As if thou then hadst' dunt vp in thy Braine
Some horrible Conceit. If thou dost louse mee,
Shew me thy thought.

Iago. My Lord, you know I louse you.

Oth. I thinke thou dost:
And for I know thou'rt full of Loue, and Honestie,
And weig'lt thy words before thou giu'lt them breath,
Therefore these flops of thine, fright me the more:
For such things in a felwe didlyall Knaue
Are tricks of Cusfome: but in a man that's luft,
They're close dilations, working from the heart,
That Pfiffion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Caffio,
I dare be sworn, I thinke that he is honest.
Oth. I thinke so too.

Iago. Men should be what they feme,
Or thole that be not, would they might feme none.
Oth. Certaine, men shoulde be what they feme.
Iago. Why then I thinke Caffio's an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this?

Oth. I prythee speake to me, as to thy thinking,
As thou dost ruminate, and give thy wooff of thoughts The
The Tragedy of Othello

The word of words,

Iago. Good my Lord pardon me,

Though I am bound to every Acte of duty,

I am not bound to that: All Siaues are free:

Von, my Thoughts? Why say, they are wild, and baleful?

As where’ that Palace, whereinto foule things

Sometimes intrude not? Who ha’s that breast so pure,

Wherein uncleanly Apprehensions

Kepe Lettees, and Law-dayes, and in Seiffions fit

With meditations lawfull?

Oth. Thou dost confpire against thy Friend (Iago)

If thou but think’t him wrong’d, and mak’th his care

A stranger to thy Thoughts.

Iago. I do besieue you,

Though I perchance am vicious in my gueffe

(As I confesse it is my Natures plague

To fly into Absurdities, and of my jealousie

Shapes faults that are not) that your wifedome

From one, that so impercipiently conceits,

Would take no notice, nor build your felfe a trouble

Out of his flattering, and vntrue obseruance :

It were not for your loue, nor for your good,

Nor for my Manhood, Honesty, and Weifedom,

To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What doft thou meane?

Iago. Good name in Man, & woman(deere my Lord)

Is the immediate Jewell of their Soules;

Who steales my purfe, steales craft :

‘Tis somethings, nothing; ‘Twas mine, ‘tis his, and has bin flue to thousand:

But he that fatches from me my good Name,

Rols me of that, which not enriches him,

And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. Ile know thy Thoughts.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand,

Nor shall not, whil’t ‘tis in my custodie.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. Oh, beware my Lord, of jealoufie,

It is the greene-ey’d Mouniter, which doth mocke

The meate it feeds on. That Cuckold lies in bliffe,

Who certaine of his Fate, looses not his wronger :

But oh, what dammed minutes tells he ore,

Who does, yet doubts: Suppestea, yet foundly loues?

Oth. O misforune

Iago. Poor, and Content, is rich, and rich enough,

But Riches finelle, is as poor as Winter,

To him that euer feares he shall be poor:

Good Heauen, the Souls of all my Tribe defend

From Jealoufie.

Oth. Why? why is this?

Think’t thou, I’d make a Life of Jealoufie;

To follow fyll the changes of the Moone

With frefh fufpidions? No: to be once in doubt,

Is to be refolu’d: Exchange me for a Goat,

When I hall turne the losse of my Soule

To fuch effufionate, and blow’d Surmifes,

Matching thy inference. ‘Tis not to make me Jealous,

To fay my wife is faire, feeds well, loues company,

Is free of Speech, Sings, Plays, and Dances:

Where Virtue is, thefe are more vertuous.

Nor from mine owne weake merits, will I draw

The finalllefe fears, or doubt of her reloue;

For the had eyes, and chofe me. No Iago,

Ile fee before I doubt ; when I doubt, prove;

And on the prooffs, there is no more but this,

Away at once with Loue, or Jealoufie.

Iago. I am glad of this: For now I hall have reafon

To fiew the Loue and Duty that I bear you

With franker spiritt. Therefore (as I am bound)

Receive it from me. I speake not yet of prooffs :

Looke to your wife, obferv her well with Cafin,

Wear your eyes, thus: I not Jealous, nor Secure:

I would not have you free, and Noble Nature,

Out of felfe-Bounty, he abus’d: I looke too’t:

I know our Country disposition well:

In Venice, they do let Heauen fee the pranke,

They dare not fiew their Husbands.

Their left Conffience,

Is not to leaue’t vndone, but kept vnknowne.

Oth. Doft thou fay fo?

Iago. She did deceife her Father, marrying you,

And when the feem’d to flake, and fear your looke,

She lovd him moft.

Oth. And fo she did.

Iago. Why go too then:

Shee that fo young could glue out fuch a Seeming

To feele her Fathers eyes vp, close as Oake,

He thought her twas Witchcraft.

But I am much too blame:

I humbly do befieue you of your pardon

For too much louing you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for euer.

Iago. I fee this hath a little daft’d your Spirits:

Oth. Not a lot, not a lot.

Iago. Trust me, I fear it has:

I hope you will confider what is spoke

Comes from your Loue.

But I do fee y’are moou’d:

I am to pray you, not to Draine my speeche

To golfer ifues , nor to larger reach,

Then to Sufpition.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do fo(my Lord)

My speeche should fall into fuch wilde facceffe,

Which my Thoughts aym’d not.

Caffin’s worthy Friend:

My Lord, I fee y’are moou’d.

Oth. No, not much moou’d:

I do not thinke but Desdemona’s honest.

Iago. Long live the fo ;

And long liue you to thinke fo.

Oth. And yet how Nature erring from it felfe.

Iago. I, there’s the point:

As (to be bold with you)

Not to affect many propofed Matches

Of her owne Clime, Complexion, and Degree,

Whereeto we fee in all things, Nature tendes:

Foh, one may smel in fuch, a will moft ranke,

Foule disproporions, Thoughts vnnaturall.

But (pardon me) I do not in poiffion

Diftinftly think of her, though I may feare

Her will, recoyling to her better judgement,

May fal to match you with her Country formes,

And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell:

If more thou dost perceiue, let me know more:

Set on thy wife to obferr:

Leave me Iago.

Iago. My Lord, I take my leave.

Oth. Why did I marry?

This honeft Creature (doubteffe)

Sees, and knowes more, much more then he vnoflds.
the Moore of Venice.

Iago. You have a thing for me?

It is a common thing—

eEmil. Hah?

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

eEmil. Oh, is that all? What will you give me now

For that same Handkerchief.

Iago. What Handkerchief?

eEmil. What Handkerchief?

Why that the Moore first gave to DeJemima,

That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Haft thee stolne it from her?

eEmil. No: but thee it drop by negligence,

And to the advantage, I being here, tooke vp:

Looke, heere is this.

Iago. A good wenche, give it me.

eEmil. What will you do with't, that you have bene

so earnest to have me flich it?

Iago. Why, what is that to you?

eEmil. If it be not for some purpose of import,

Giu't me againe. Poor innocent, shee'll run mad

When the hall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknowledge on't:

I have vse for it. Go, leave me.

Exit eEmil.

I will in Caffo's Lodging looke this Napkin,

And let him finde it. Trifles light as ayre,

Are to the jealous, confirmations strong,

As provefofs of holy Writ. This may do something.

The Moor already changes with my poyson:

Dangerous conceits, are in their Natures poysons,

Which at the first are scarce to diftaine:

But with a little aete upon the blood,

Burne like the Mines of Sulphure. I did fay fo.

Enter Otello.

Looke where he comes: Not Poppy, nor Mandragora,

Nor all the drowifie Syrupps of the world

Shall euer medicine thee to that sweete sleepe

Which thou ow'st yesterday.

Oth. Ha, ha, false to mee?

Iago. Why how now Generall? No more of that.

Oth. Avant, be gone! Thou haft fet me on the Rack.

I fwear 'tis better to be much abus'd,

Then but to know't a little.

Iago. How now, my Lord?

Oth. What fine did I, in her fpole hours of Luff?

I faw't not, thought it not: it harm'd not me:

I flep the next night well, fed well, was free, and merrie.

I found not Caffo's kifles on her Lipes:

He that is rob'd, not wanting what is fpole,

Let him not know't, and he's not rob'd at all.

Iago. I am forry to heare this.

Oth. I had beene happy, if the generall Campe,

Pyoners and all, had tafted her fweete Bodie,

So I had nothing knowne. Oh now, for euer

Farewell the Tranquill minde; farewell Content;

Farewell the plumed Troopps, and the bigge Warres,

That makes Ambition, Vertue! Oh farewel! farewell

Farewell the neiglie Steed, and the thrill Troump:

The Spirit-flaring Drum, the Ear-piercing Fife,

The Royall Banner, and all Qualitie,

Pride, Pompe, and Circumftrance of glorious Warre:

And O you mortall Engines, whose rude throates

Th'immortal Loues dread Clamours, counterfeft,

Farewell: Otello's Occupation's gone.

Iago. Is't poiffible, my Lord?

Oth. Villaine, be fure thou proue my Loue a Whore;

Be fure of it: Give me the Occular proofs,

Or
Or by the worth of mine eternall Soule,
Thou hast bin better hauie bin borne a Dog
Then anfwer my wak'd wrath.
Iago. Let's come to this?
Oth. Make me to fee: or (at the leaf) fo prove it,
That the probation beare no Hindge, nor Loope,
To hang a doubt on: Or woe vpon thy life.
Iago. My Noble Lord.
Oth. If thou doft flander her, and torture me,
Never pray more: Abandon all remorfe
On Horrors head, Horrors accumulace:
Do deeds to make Heauen weepes, all Earth amaz'd;
For nothing canth thou to damnation adde,
Greater then that.
Iago. O Grace! O Heauen forgive me!
Are you a Man? Have you a Soule! or Senfe?
God buy you: take mine Office. Oh wretched Foole,
That lou'ft to make thinke Honesty, a Vice!
Oh monftrous world! Take note, take note (O World)
To be direct and honest, is not safe.
I thank you for this profit, and from hence
Ile loue no Friend, fith Loue breeds fuch offence.
Oth. Nay fay: thou should'lt be honest.
Iago. I should be wife; for Honetie's a Foole,
And loofes that it works for.
Iago, By the World.
I think my Wife be honest, and think she is not:
I think that thou art luft, and think thou art not:
Ile have fome prooue. My name that was as freth
As Dills Vifage, is now begrim'd and blacke
As mine owne face. If there be Cords,or Knifes,
Paylon,or Fire, or fuffocating streames,
Ile not induce it. Would I were fatisfied.
Iago. I fee you are eaten vp with Paflion:
I do repent me, that I put it to you.
You would be fatisfied?
Oth. Would! Nay, and I will.
Iago. And may I: but how? How fatisfied, my Lord?
Would you the fuper-vifion grofely gape on?
Behold her top'd?
Oth. Death, and damnation. Oh!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that Propeft: I Damen them then,
If ever mortall eyes do fee them boulfer
More then their owne. What then? How then?
What shall I fay? Where's Satisfacion?
It is impoffible you fhoold fee this,
Were they prime as Goates, as hot as Monkeyes,
As fat as Wolues in pride, and Footes as groff
As Ignorance, made drunke. But yet, I fay,
If imputation, and strong circumftances,
Which leade direcly to the doore of Truth,
Will guue you satisfaction, you might hau't.
Oth. Glue me a luing reafon she's diffoyall.
Iago. I do not like the Office.
But fith I am entred in this caufe fo farre
(Prick'd too't by foolifh Honesty, and Love)
I will go on. I lay with Caffo lately,
And being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not flepe. There are a kindes of men,
So loofe of Soule, that in their flepees will mutter
Their Affayres: one of this Kinde is Caffo:
In flepe I heard him fay, sweet Dyademae,
Let vs be wary, let vs hide our Loues,
And then (Sir) would be griepe, and wring my hand:
Cry, oh sweet Creature: then kiffe me hard,
Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know Sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clow. I dare not say he lies any where.

Des. Why man?

Clow. He's a Soldier, and for me to say a Souldier lies, 'tis stabbing.

Des. Go too : where lodges he?

Clow. To tell you where he lodges, is to tel you where I lye.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Clow. I know not where he lodges, and for mee to dispute a lodging, and say he lies here, or he lies there, were to lye in mine owne throat.

Des. Can you enquire him out? and be edified by report?

Clow. I will Catechize the world for him, that is, make Questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bidde him come hither : tell him, I have moon'd my Lord on his behalfe, and hope all will be well.

Clow. To do this, is within the compasse of mans Wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. Exit Clo.

Des. Where should I looke the Handkercheif, Emilia?

Emilia. I know not Madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of Crusadoes. And but my Noble Moore
Is true of minde, and made of no such bafeheness,
As jealous Creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill-thinking.

Emilia. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who, he? I thinke the Sun where he was borne,
Drew all fuch humors from him.

Emilia. Look where he comes.

Enter Othello.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio be Call'd to him. How it's with you, my Lord?

Oth. Well my good Lady, Oh hardnes to dissemble! How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good Lord.

Oth. Give me your hand.

This hand is moist, my Lady.

Des. It hath felt no age, nor knowne no forrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart;
Hot, hot, and moyt! This hand of yours requires
A fequerer from Liberty: Fasting, and Prayer,
Much Contagion, Exercise deaut.
For here's a yong, and sweating Duelle here
That commonly rebels: 'Tis a good hand,
A fraonee one.

Des. You may (indeed) say so:
For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberall hand. The hearts of old, gau hands:
But our new Heraldry is hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speake of this:

Come, now your promife.

Oth. What promife, Chucke?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speake with you.

Oth. I have a fallt and sorry Rhewme offendes me:
Lend me thy Handkercheif,
The Tragedie of Othello

Def. How now (good Caflio) what's the newes with you?

Caffio. Madam, my former suite, I do beseech you,
That by your vertuous meanes, I may againe
Exeit, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the Office of my heart
Intirely honour, I would not be delayed.
If my offence, be of such mortall kinde,
That nor my Serviice path, nor preuent Sorrows,
Nor purpose merit in futurity,
Can ransome me into his love againe,
But to know fo, must be my benefit:
So shall I cloath me in a forc'd content,
And shut my selfe vp in some other course
To Fortunes Alme.

Def. Alas (thrice-gentle Caflio)
My Aduocation is now not in Tune;
My Lord, is not my Lord; nor shou'd I know him,
Were he in Favour, as in Humour alter'd.
So helpe me every spirit fanctifie,
As I have spokeyn for you all my belth,
And float within the blanke of his displeasure
For my free speach. You must awhile be patient:
What I can do, I will: and more I will
Then for my selfe, I dare. Let that luffice you.

Otho. Is my Lord angry?

Caflio. He went hence but now:
And certainly in strange vauquetneffe.

Caflio. Can he be angry? I have seen the Cannon
When it hath blowne his Rankes into the Ayre,
And like the Driuell from his very Arme
Pul's his owne Brother! And is he angry?
Something of moment then: I will go meet him,
There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry. Exit Def. I prythee do fo. Something lufe of State,
Either from Venice, or 'some whatch'd pradulce
Made demontrable hereee in Cyprus, to him,
Hath pul'd his cleare Spirit: and in such cafes,
Mens Natures wrangle with inferiour things,
Though great ones are their object. 'Tis eu'n fo.
For let our finger ale, and it endues
Our other healthfull members, eu'n to a fene.
Of paine, Nay, we must thinke men are not Gods,
Nor of them looke for such obfervancia
As fis the Bridall. Behew me much, JEmilis.
I was (vnhandome Warrior, as I am)
Arraigning his vnkindneffe with my loue:
But now I finde, I had suborn'd the Witneffe,
And he's Indited falfely.

Dec. Emillia. Pray heauen it bee
State matters, as you thinke, and no Conception,
Nor no iealous Toy, concerning you.

Def. Alas the day, I never gau'e him caufe.

Dec. But iealous foules will not be anwer'd fo;
They are not euer iealous for the caufe,
But iealous, for they're iealous. It is a Monfer
Begot vpou it felle, borne on it felle.

Def. Heauen keeps the Monfter from Othello's mind.

Dec. But iealous foules will not be anwer'd fo;

Def. I will go fickle him, Caflio, walke hereee about:
If I doe finde him fit, Ile moue your suite,
And lecke to eilect it to my vtermoft. Exit Caflio. I humbly thank you your Ladyship.

Enter Bianca.
Bian. "Sue you (Friend Caflio)."

Caflio. What make you from home?

Def. How is't with you, my molt faire Bianca?

Bian. Indeed (sweet Love) I was comming to your house.
Def. And I was going to your Lodging, Caflio.
Caflio. What kepe a wecke away? Seven dayes, and Nights?
Bian. Eight icore eight hours! And Louers abient howres
More tedious then the Diall, eight icore times?
Oh weary reck'ning.

Caflio. Pardon me, Bianca:
I have this while with leden thoughts beene pret,
But I shall in a more continuat time
Strike of this score of abience. Sweet Bianca,
Take me this worke out.

Bianca. Oh Caflio, whence came this?

This is some Token from a newer Friend,
To the felt-Ablence: now I feele a Caufe:
It'se come to this? Well, well.

Caflio. Go to woman:
Throw your wilde geffeis in the Driuell teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous now,
That this is from some Miftris, some remembrance
No, in good trouth Bianca.

Bian. Why, who's is it?

Caflio. I know not neither:
I found it in my Chamber,
I like the worke well; Ere it be demanded
(As like enough it will) I would have it coppyed:
Take it, and doe't, and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you? Wherefore?

Caflio. I do attend hereee on the Generall,
And thinke it no addition nor my wish
To have him fee me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I praty you?

Caflio. Not that I loue you not.

Bian. But that you do not loue me.

I pray you bring me on the way a little,
And say, If I thall fee you foone at night?

Caflio. Tis but a little way that I can bring you,
For I attend hereee: But Ile fee you foone.

Bian. 'Tis very good: I must be circumfanc'd.

Exit omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Othello, and Iago.

Iago. Will you thynke fo?

Otho. Thynke fo, Iago?

Iago. What, to kiffe in priuate?

Otho. An vnauthoriz'd kiffe?

Iago. Or to be naked with her Friend in bed,
An houre, or more, not meaning any harme?

Otho. Naked in bed (Iago) and not meane harme?

It is hypocrisie against the Driuell:
That they meane vertuously, and yet do fo,
The Driuell their vertue tempts, and they tempt Heauen.

Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a Veniall fip:
But if I giue my wife a Handkerchiefe.

Otho. What then?

Iago. Why then 'tis hers(my Lord)and being hers,
She may (I thynke) befofre't on any man.

Otho. She is Protec'tresse of her honor too:
May the glue that?

Iago.
the Moore of Venice.

Iago. Her honor is an Effence that's not seene,
They have it very oft, that have it not.
But for the Handkerchief.

Oth. By heauen, I would most gladly have forgot it:
Thou fals'd (oh, it comes ore my memorie,
As doth the Rauen o're the infectious house:
Boarding to all) he had my Handkerchief.

Iago. 1: what of that?

Oth. That's not so good now.

Iago. What if I had s'd, I had seene him do you wrong?
Or heard him say as Knaun be such abroad,
Who hauing by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some Miftirs,
Convinced or supply'd them, cannot chuse
But they must blub.)

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath (my Lord) but be you well affur'd,
No more then he'll vn-swear.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. Why, that he did: I know not what he did.

Oth. What? What?

Iago. Lye.

Oth. With her?

Oth. Lye with her? Lye on her? We fay lye on her,
when they be-lye-her. Lye with her: that's fullsome:
Handkerchiefe: Confessions: Handkerchiefe. To conseffe, and be hang'd for his labour. Firft, to be hang'd, and then to confesse: I tremble at it. Nature would not inueet her felfe in fuch shadowing paffion, without some Infraction. It is not words that shake me thus, (pifh)
Noifes, Eares, and Lippes: is not possible. Confesse: Hand-kerciefe: O dieuell,

Iago. Workes on,

My Medicine works. Thus credulous Fools are caught,
And many worthy, and chait DAMES even thus,
(Al guiltie) I meete reproach: what ho? My Lord?
My Lord, I fay: Othello.

Enter Caflfio.

How now Caflfio?

Cafl. What's the matter?

Iago. My Lord is faine into an Epilepsie,
This is his second Fit: he had one ytterday.

Cafl. Rub him about the Temples.

Iago. The Lethargie muft have his quyet course:
If not, he fones at mouth: and by and by
Breake out to extreme madness. Looke, he flirres:
Do you withdraw your felfe a little while,
He will recover fraught: when he is gone,
I would on great occation, speake with you.
How is it General? Have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Doft thou mooke me?

Iago. I mooke you not, by Heauen:
Would you beare your Fortune like a Man.

Oth. A Horned man's a Monfter, and a Beaff.

Iago. The's many a Beaff then in a populou City,
And many a CIUIf Monfter.

Oth. Did he confeffe it?

Iago. Good Sir, be a man:
Thinks every bearded fellow that's jovak'd?
May draw with you. There's Millions now alie,
That nightly lye in chofe vnproper beds,
Which they dare vswere peculiar. Your cafe is better.

Oth. 'tis the night of hell, the Fiends Arch-mock,
To lip a wanion in a feare Cowch;
And to fuppose her chait. No, let me know,
And knowing what I am, I know what the fhillibe.

Oth. Oh, thou art wise: 'tis certaine.

Iago. Stand you a while arapt,
Confine your felfe but in a patient Lift,
While you were here, o're-whelmed with your grieue
(A passion moft refulting such a man)

Caflfio came hither. I shifted him away,
And lyd good cufes vpon your Extaffe,
Bad him anon returne: and here speake with me,
The which he promis'd. Do but encaze your felfe,
And marke the Fleeres, the Cybes, and notable Scornes
That dwell in every Region of his face.
For I will make him tell the Tale aneue;
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is againe to cope your wife.
I fay, but mark his gelture: marry Patience,
Or I thall fay ye'are all in all in Spieene,
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Do'ft thou heare, Iago,
I will be found moft cunning in my Patience:
But (do'ft thou heare) I'm not bloody.

Iago. That's not amifs,
But yet keepe time in all: will you withdraw?
Now will I quaffion Caflfio of Blanca,
A Hufwife, that by felling her defires
Buys her felle Breaf, and Cloath. It is a Creature
That dotes on Caflfio, (as 'tis the Strumpets plague
To be-guilie many, and be-beul'd by one)
He, when he heares of her, cannot reftaine
From the excelfe of Laughter. Heere he comes.

Enter Caflfio.

As he shall fmile, Othello shall go mad:
And his vnbookifh leoloufie must conferue
Poore Caflfio's fimes, greatures, and light behauours
Quite in the wrong. How do you Lieutenant?

Cafl. The worker, that you glue me the addition,
Whole want even kills me.

Iago. Pley Defdemona well, and you are sure on't;
Now, if this Sult lay in Blanca's dovre,
How quickely shou'd you speed?

Cafl. Alas poore Caflfio.

Oth. Looke how he laughes already.

Iago. I neuer knew woman loue man fo.

Cafl. Alas poore Rogue, I thinkne indeed she loues me.

Oth. Now he denyes it faintly: and laughes it out.

Iago. Do you heare Caflfio?

Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o're: go too, well faid, well faid.

Iago. She gies it out, that you shall marry her.
Do you intent it?

Cafl. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. Do ye triumph, Romaine? do you triumph?

Cafl. I marry. What? A cuftomer prythee beare
Some Charite to my wit, do not think it
So vnwholefome. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. So, lo, fo, lo: they laugh, that winnes.

Iago. Why the cry goes, that you marry her.

Cafl. Prythee say true.

Iago. I am a very Villaline elfe.

Oth. Have you fcar'd me? Well.

Cafl. This is the Monkeys owne giving out:
She is perfuaded I will marry her.
Out of her owne loue & flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth.
The Tragedie of Othello

Oth. Iago becomes me: now he begins the story.
Caff. She was here even now: she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking with the Sen-banke with certaine Venetians, and thither comes the Bauble, and falls me thus about my neck.

Oth. Crying oh deere Caffio, as it were: his libertum imports it.

Caff. So hangs, and lolls, and weepes vpon me:
So Sakes, and pulls me. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. Now he tells how he pluckt him to my Chamber: oh, I see that nofe of yours, but not that dogges, I shall throw it to.

Caff. Well, I must lease her companie.

Oth. Before me: looke where she comes.

Enter Bianca.

Caff. 'Tis such another Fitchew: marry a perfum'd one?
What do you meane by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the diuell, and his dam haunt you: what did you meane by that fame Handkerchief, you gave me euer new? I was a fine Foole to take it: I must take out the worke? A likely piece of worke, that you should finde it in your Chamber, and know not who left it there. This is some Minxes token, & I must take out the worke?
There, glue it your Hobby-horle, wherefoeuer you had it, that you take out no worke on.

Caff. How now, my sweete Bianca?
How now? How now?

Oth. By Heauen, that should be my Handkerchiefe.
Bian. If you'll come to supper to night you may, if you will not, come when you are next prepar'd for. Exit

Oth. After her tatter her.

Caff. I must, thee! rayle in the streets elte.

Oth. Will you fup there?

Caff. Yes, I intend so.

Oth. Well, I may chance to fee you: for I would very faine freake with you.

Caff. Prythee com: will you?

Oth. Go too: fay no more.

Oth. How shall I murther him, Iago.

Oth. Did you perceive how he laugh'd at his vice?

Oth. Oh, Iago.

Oth. And did you fee the Handkerchiefe?

Oth. Was that mine?

Oth. Yours by this hand: and to fee how he prizs the foolish woman your wife: she gaue it him, and he hath giu'n it his where.

Oth. I would have him nine yeeres a killing:
A fine woman, a faire woman, a sweete woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. I, let her rot and perish, and be damn'd to night, for she shall not live. No, my heart is turn'd to stone: I strike it, and it hurts my hand. Oh, the world hath not a sweeter Creature: the might be by an Emperor's fide, and command him Taskes.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her, I do but say what she is: fo delicate with her Needle: an admirable Muflitan. Oh she will fin the Sausages out of a Beare: or the high and plentiful wit, and invention?

Iago. She's the worke for all this.

Oth. Oh, a thoufand, a thoufand times:
And then of fo gentle a condition?

Iago. I too gentle.

Oth. Nay that's certaine:

But yet the pitty of it, Iago: oh Iago, the pitty of it

Iago. Iago. If you are so fond ouer her iniquite: give her patten to offend, for if it touch not you, it comes necer no body.

Oth. I will chop her into Mefles: Cuckold me?

Iago. Oh, 'tis foule in her.

Oth. With mine Officer?

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poynon, Iago, this night. Ile not expulreate with her: leaff her body and beautie vprovidme my mind againe: this night Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poynon, ftrangle her in her bed, Euen the bed the hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good:

The Juicfe of it pleases: very good.

Iago. And for Caffio, let me be his undertaker:
You shall bære more by midnight.

Enter Lodovics, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Oth. Excellent good: What Trumpe is that fame?

Iago. I warrant something from Venice,

'Tis Lodovics, this comes from the Duke.

See, your wife's with him.

Lod. Saye you worthy Generall.

Oth. With all my heart Sir.

Lod. The Duke, and the Senators of Venice greet you.

Oth. I kiffe the Infrument of their pleasures.

Def. And what's the newes, good cozen Lodovics?

Iago. I am very glad to fee you Signior:

Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you: how do's Lieutenant Caffio?

Iago. Lives Sir,

Dij. Cozen, there's false betweene him, & my Lord,

An vnkind break: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Def. My Lord?

Oth. This falie you not to do, as you will——

Lod. He did not call: he's bufie in the paper,

Is there deuision 'twixt my Lord, and Caffio?

Def. A moft vnhappy one: I would do much

T'attend them, for the lone I beare to Caffio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone.

Def. My Lord.

Oth. Are you wife?

Def. What is he angi?

Lod. May be the Letter mou'd him.

For as I thinkes, they do command him home,

Deputing Cafio in his Government.

Def. Trust me, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed?

Def. My Lord?

Oth. I am glad to fee you mad.

Def. Why, sweete Ottilie?

Oth. Diuell.

Def. I have not deferrd this.

Lod. My Lord, this would not be beleuc'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I saw't. 'Tis very much,

Make her amends: she weepes.

Oth. Oh diuell, diuell:

If that the Earth could teeme with womans teares,
Each drop the falls, would prove a Crocodile:

Out of my fight.

Def. I will not lay to offend you.

Lod. Truly obedient Lady:

I do befeech your Lordship call her back.

Oth.
Orb. Militia.
Def. My Lord.
Orb. What would you with her, Sir?
 Lod. Who is my Lord?
Orb. I, you did wish, that I would make her turne:
Sir, she can turne, and turne: and yet go on
And turne againe. And she can wepe, Sir, wepe.
And she's obedient: as you say obedient.
Very obedient: proceed you in your teares.
Concerning this Sir, (oh well-painted passion)
I am commanded home: get you away:
He fend for you anon. Sir I obey the Mandate,
And will returne to Venice. Hence, assauant:
Coffe shall haunt my Place. And Sir, to night
I do entreat, that we may fup together.
You are welcome Sir to Cyprus.
Gent. and Monkeys. Exeunt.
Exe. Is this the Noble Moore, whom our full Senate
Call all in all sufficient? Is this the Nature
Whom Passion could not shake? Whose fold vertue
The shot of Accident, nor dart of Chance
Could neither graze, nor pierce?
Ings. He is much chang'd.
Lad. Are his wits safe? Is he not light of Braine?
Ings. He's that he is: I may not breath my censure.
What he might be: if what he might, he is not,
I would to heauen he were.
Lad. What? Strike his wife?
Ings. Faith that was not so well: yet would I know
That broke would prove the work.
Lad. Is it his life?
Or did the Letters, worke vpon his blood,
And new create his fault?
Ings. Alas, alas:
It is not honetle in me to speake
What I have seene, and knowne. You shall obserue him,
And his owne courtes will deonte him so,
That I may faue my speche: do but go after
And marke how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiu'd in him. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Desdemona.

Orb. You have seene nothing then?
Des. Nor euery heard: nor euery did suspect.
Orb. Yes, you have seene Caffo, and she together.
Des. But then I saw no harme: and then I heard,
Each syllable that breath made vp betweene them.
Orb. What did they neuer whisper?
Des. Neuer my Lord.
Orb. Nor fent you out o'th' way?
Des. Neuer.
Orb. To fetch her Fan, her Gloues, her Mask, nor no-
Des. Neuer my Lord.
Orb. That's strange.
Des. I durst (my Lord) to wager, she is honeft.
Lay downe my Soule at flake: if you thinke other,
Remoue your thoughte. It doth abuse your bosome;
If any wretch haue put this in your head,
Let Heaven requit it with the Serpents curse,
For if she be not honeft, chaife, and true,
There's no man happy. The pureft of their Wives
Is foule as Slander.
Orb. Bid her come hither: go.
Exit Desdemona.
She fies enough: yet she's a simple Baud.
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle Whore:
A Cloffet Lockeand Key of Villanous Secrets,
And yet she'll keaze, and pray: I have seene her do't.

Enter Defdemona, and Desdemona.

Def. My Lord, what is your will?
Orb. Pray you Chucke come hither.
Def. What is your pleasure?
Orb. Let me see your eyes: looke in my face.
Def. What horrible Fancie's this?
Orb. Some of your Fancies, Sir:
Leave Procreants alone, and shut the doores:
Cough, or cry hemp; in any bod ycompe:
Your Mystery, your Mystery: May dispatch, Exit Desdemona.
Def. Upon my knee, what doth your speech import?
I understand a Fury in your words.
Orb. Why? What art thou?
Def. Your wife my Lord: your true and loyall wife.
Orbello. Come swerke it: damne thy selfe, least Being like one of Heauen, the diuell themselues shold fear to ceaze thee. Therefore be double damned: swerke thou art honeft.
Def. Heauen doth truely know it.
Orb. Heauen truly knows, that thou art false as hell.
Def. To whom my Lord?
With whom? How am I false?
Orb. Ah Defdemona, away, away, away.
Def. Alas the heauy day: why do you wepe?
Am I the motive of these tears my Lord?
If happily you my Father do suspect,
An Infrumet of this your calling backe,
Lay not your blame on me: if you have left him,
I have left him too.
Orb. Had it pleas'd Heauen,
To try me with Affliction, had they raine'd
All kind of Sores, and Shames on my bare-head:
Steeple'd me in poverete to the very lipses,
Glown to Captivitie, me, and my vemont hopes,
I should have found in some place of my Soule
A drop of patience. But alas, to make me
The fixed Figure for the time of Sorne,
To point his blow, and mouing finger at.
Yet could I beare that too, well, very well:
But there where I haue garned vp my heart,
Where either I must lye, or beare no life,
The Fountaine from the which my currant runnes,
Or else dries vp: to be discarded thence,
Or keepes it as a Gfferes, for soule Todes.
To knot and gender in. Turne thy complexion there:
Patience, thou young and Rofe-rip'd Cherubin,
I heere looke grim as hell.
Def. I hope my Noble Lord extemes me honeft.
Orb. Oh I, as Sommer Flyes are in the Shambles,
That quicke ene with blowing. Oh thou weed:
Who art fo lonely faire, and smefit fo sweete,
That the Senfe akes at thee,
Would thou had'ft nouer bin borne.
Def. Alas, what ignorant fin haue I commited?
Orb. Was this faire Paper? This moft goodly Book
Made to write Whore vpon? What commited,

v v 2 Com-
Committed? Oh, thou publicke Commoner,
I should make very Forges of my checkes,
That would to Cyders burne vp Molotie,
Did I but speake thy decees. What commited?
Heaven stoppes the Note at it, and the Moone winks:
The baudy winde that kiffes all it metes,
Is huft'd within the hollow Myne of Earth
And will not he'rt. What commited?
Def. By Heauen you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a Strumpet?
Def. No, as I am a Christian.
If to preefere this vessell for my Lord,
From any other foule vnlawfull touch
Be not to be a Strumpet, I am none.
Oth. What not a Whore?
Def. No, as I shall be sau'd.
Oth. Is't poiffible?
Def. Oh Heauen forgive vs.
Oth. I cry you mercy then.
I tooke you for that cunning Whore of Venice,
That married with Othello Miftris,
Enter Othelio.
That haue the office oppofte to Saint Petes,
And keeps the gate of hell. You, you: I you.
We haue done our courfe:there's money for your paines:
I pray you turne the key, and keep our couftaince.
Exit.
Oth. Als, what do't this Gentleman conceuie?
How do you Madam? how do you my good Lady?
Def. Faith, halfe a fleece.
Oth. Good Madam,
What's the matter with my Lord?
Def. With who?
Oth. Why, with my Lord, Madam?
Def. Who is thy Lord?
Oth. He that is yours, sweet Lady.
Def. I haue none: do not talke to me, Oth.
I cannot weape nor answeres haue I none,
But what should go by water. Prythee to night,
Lay on my bed my wedding theetes, remember,
And call thy husband hither.
Oth. Here's a change indeed.
Def. 'Tis meete I should be vs'd foon: very meete.
How haue I bin behaund, that he might fickes
The small'f opinion on my leaff misfivte?
Enter Iago, and Oth.
Iago. What is your pleafure Madam?
How is't with you?
Def. I cannot tell: thofe that do teach yong Babes
Do it with gentle meanes, and eafe taskes.
He might haue chied me fo: for in good faith
I am a Child to chauing.
Oth. What is the manner Lady?
Iago. Alas, my Lord hath fo bewhor'd her,
Throwne fuch displeafure, and heauen termes upon her
That true hearts cannot bear it.
Def. Am I that name, Iago?
Iago. What name, (faire Lady?)
Def. Such as the oldt my Lord did fay I was.
Oth. He call'd her whore: a Beggar in his drinke:
Could not have laid fuch termes upon his Calfet.
Iago. Why did he fo?
Def. I do not know: I am sure I am none fuch.
Iago. Do not wepe, do not wepe: alas the day.
Oth. Hath the Lord fortooke fo many Noble Matches?
Her Father? And her Country? And her Friends?
To be call'd Whore? Would it not make one wepe?
Def. It is my wretched Fortune.
Iago. Behrew him for't:
How comes this Tricke vpon him?
Def. Nay, Heauen doth know.
Oth. I will be hang'd, if fome eternall Villaine,
Some bufie and infatuating Rogue,
Some cogging, crowning Slace, to get fome Office,
Hawe not deuir'd this Slander? I will be hang'd elfe.
Iago. Fi', there is no fuch man: it is imposfible,
Def. If any fuch there be, Heauen pardon him.
Oth. A halter pardon him:
And hell gnaw his bones.
Why fhou'd he call her Whore?
Who keeps her company?
What Place? What Time?
What Forme? What likelhood?
The Moore's abut'd by fome moft villanous Knawe,
Some base notorious Knawe, fome fcurry Fellow.
Oh Heauens, that fuch companions thou'dt vnfold,
And put in every honest hand a whip
To lafe the Raillacs naked through the world,
Even from the Eaft to th'West.
Iago. Speake within doore.
Oth. Oh he vpon them: fome fuch Squire he was
That turn'd your wit, the feamy-ide without,
And made you to fufpeéct me with the Moore.
Iago. You are a Fool: go too.
Def. Alas Iago,
What fhall I do to win my Lord againe?
Good Friend, go to him: for by this light of Heauen,
I know not how I left him. Here I kneele:
Ifere my will did trefpaft 'gainst his Loue,
Either in difcoure of thought, or actuall deed,
Or that mine Eyes, mine Eares, or any Sence
Delighted them: or any other Forme.
Or that I do not yet, and euer did,
And euer will, (though he do shake me off
To beggerly diuernement) Love him dearly,
Comort forswaie me. Vnkindniffe may do much,
And his vnkindniffe may defeat my life,
But neuer trynt my Loue. I cannot fay Whore,
It do's aburde me now I speake the word,
To do the Act, that might the addition earne,
Not the worldes Maffe of vanitie could make me.
Iago. I pray you be content: 'tis but his humour:
The bufineffe of the State do's him offence.
Def. If there be no other.
Iago. It is but fo, I warrant,
Hearke how thefe Instruments fummon to fupper:
The Meffengers of Venice tayes the meate,
Go in, and wepe not: all things hall be well.
Exit.
Def. Delphinom and Oth.
Enter Roderigo.
How now Roderigo?
Red. I do not finde
That thou dealt't luiftly with me.
Iago. What in the contrarie?
Roder. Every day thou doeft me with fome deuife Iago, and rather, as it feemes to me now, keep't from me all conuenience, then fupplie me with the leaff advantage of hope: I will indeed no longer endure it.
Nor am I yet periwaled to put vp in peace, what already I have fo often refrived.
Iago. Will you hear me Roderigo?
Roder. I.
Rod. I have heard too much: and your words and performances are no kin together.

Leg. You charge me moit vitualliy.

Rod. With naught but truth: I have wafted my selfe out of my meanes. The Jewels you have had from me to deliver Dolphina, would haile have corrupted a Votarie. You have told me the hath receiued them, and returned me expectations and comforts of foudaine
reioyce, and acquaintance, but I finde none.

Leg. Well, too: very well.

Rod. Very well, very good: I cannot go too, (man) nor tis not very well. Nay I think: it is fueray: and begin to finde my selfe footh in it.

Leg. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well: I will make my selfe knowne to Dolphina. If she will returne me my jewels, I will glue ouer my Suit, and repent my knowledge. But if not, affure your selfe, I will seek satisfaccon of you.

Leg. You have faid now.

Rod. I; and said nothing but what I protest intend-ment of doing.

Leg. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee: and euen from this Infant do build on thee a better opinion then ever before: glue me thy hand Rodorigo.
Thou haft taken against me a most luft excepcion-but yet I protest I have dealt most direcdy in thy Affire.

Rod. It hath not appeard.

Leg. I grant indeed it hath not appeard: and your fuposition is not without wit and judgement.
But Rodorigo, if thou haft that in thee indeed, which I haue greater reason to beleue now then ever ( I meane purpose, Courage, and Valour ) this night threw it. If thou re next night following enjoy not Dolphina, take me from this world with Treach-erie, and deuile Engines for my life.

Rod. Well: what is it? Is it within, reaon and compasse?

Leg. Sir, there is especiall Commifion from Venice to deffe Coffee in Ottello's place.

Rod. Is that true? Why then Ottello and Dolphina returne againe to Venice.

Leg. Oh no: he goes into Mauiriand and tucketh away with him the faire Dolphina, vnliefe his abode be lingred heere by some accident. Whereinone can be fo determinate, as the remouing of Coffee.

Rod. How do you mean removing him?

Leg. Why, by making him vncapecable of Ottello's place: knocking out his braines.

Rod. And that you would have me to do.

Leg. I: if you dare do your selfe a profit, and a right. He fups to night with a Harlorry: and thither will I go to him. He knowes not yet of his Honourable Fortune, if you will watch his going thence ( which I will fuffion to fall out betweene twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure. I will be neere to second your Attempt, and I shall fall betweene vs. Come, Rand not amaz'd at it, but go along with me: I will then you such a necellittie in his death, that you shall thinke your selfe bound to put it on him. It is now hight supper time: and the night groves to wait.
About it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Leg. And you halfe fallitt'd.

Exeunt.
The Tragedy of Othello

So get thee gone, good night: mine eyes do itch:
Doth that basead weeping?

Othello. 'Tis neither here, nor there.

Desdemona. If it were here, I would show you.

Othello. Doth thou in conscience think? (tell me, O Emilia.)

There be women do abuse their husbands
In such groffe kindes?

Othello. There be some such, no question.

Desdemona. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Othello. Why, would not you?

Othello. No, by this Heav'nly light. Othello. Nor I neither, by this Heav'nly light:
I might do't, as well it's dark.

Desdemona. Intoth, I think you would't not.

Othello. Yes, a dozen; and as many to'th'vantage, as would fore the world they plaid for.

But I do thinke it is their Husbands faults
If Wives do fall: (Say, that they flacke their duties,
And powre our Treasures into forrage lap's;
Or else break out in peculiar jealousies,
Throwing restraint upon vs: Or say they strike vs,
Or feast our former haung in delight)
Why we have galles; and though we have some Grace,
Yet have we some Reuenge. Let Husbands know,
Their wives have sense like them: They fee, and smell,
And have their Palats both for sweet, and sour,
As Husbands haue. What is it that they do,
When they change vs for others? Is it Sport?
I thinke it is: and doth Affection breed it?
I thinke it doth. Is't Frailty that thus errors?
It is so too. And have not we Affections?
Dread for Sport? and Frailty, as men hau'e?
Then let them vs: or well: else let them know,
The illes we do, their illes instruct vs to.

Good night, good night:
Heauen me such vles send,
Not to picke bad, from bad: but by bad, mend: Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Iago, and Roderigo.

Iago. Heere, stand behinde this Barke,
Straight will he come:
Weare thy good Rapier bare, and put it home:
Quicks, quicks, feare nothing; He be at thy Elbow,
It makes vs, or it mares vs, thinke on that,
And fife moth firme thy Revolution.

Rod. Be neere at hand, I may murrify in't:
Iago. Heere, at thy hand: Be bold, & take thy stand.
Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed,
And yet he hath given me satisfying Reasons:
'Tis but a man gone. Forth my Sword: he dies.
Iago. I have rub'd this yong Qust almost to the sence,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Caffio,
Or Caffio, him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gaine. Lue Roderigo,
He calleth me to a restitution large
Of Gold, and jewels, that I bold'd from him,
As Gifts to Desdemona.

It must not be: If Caffio do remaine,
He hath a dayly beauty in his life,
That makes me vgy: and besides, the Moore
May vnfold me to him: there stand I much peril:
No, he must dye. But so, I heard him coming.

Enter Caffio.

Iago. I know his state; 'tis he: Villaine thou dyeeth.

Caffio. That thrift had beene mine enemy indeed,
But that there Coate is better then thou know'ft:
I will make prooffe of thine.

Rod. Oh, I am flaine.
Caffio. I am maim'd for euer:
Helpe hoa: Mutther, mutther.

Enter Othello.

Oth. The voyage of Caffio, Iago keepes his word.
Rod. O Villaine that I am.

Oth. It is even so.
Caffio. 'Tis he: O brave Iago, honest, and iuft,
That hau'ft such Noble fene of thy Friends wrongs,
Thou teacheft me. Minion, your deere iyes dead,
And your vnblest Fate highe: Strumpet I come:
For of my heart, thofe Charms thine Eyes, are blotted.
Thy Bed luf't,flain's, flall with Luft blood bee spottet.

Exit Othello.

Enter Lodovico and Gratiano.

Caffio. What hauo: no Watch? No passage?

Mutther, Mutther.

Lod. 'Tis some ifhance; the voyage is very direfull.
Caffio. Oh helpe hoa: I Light, a Surgeon.

Lod. That thrift had beene mine enemy indeed,
But that there Coate is better then thou know'ft:
I will make prooffe of thine.

Rod. No body come: and yet I bleed to death.

Enter Iago.

Lod. Hearke.

Gra. Here comes one in his shirt, with Light, and Weapons.

Iago. Who's there?

Who's noyce is this that cries on mutther?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Do not you heare a cry?

Caffio. Heere, heere: for heauen fake helpe me.

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's Ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The fame indeede, a very valiant Fellow.

Iago. What are you heere, that cry so greuously?

Caffio. Oh I am spoyl'd, vndone by Villaines:
Gue me some helpe.

Iago. O mee, Lieutenent!

What Villaines have done this?

Caffio. I thinke that one of them is heereabout,
And cannot make away.

Lago. Oh treacherous Villaines:
What are you there? Come in, and glue some helpe.

Red. O helpe me there.

Caffio. That's one of them.

Lago. Oh murtherous Slaue! O Villaine!
Red. O damnd Lago! O inhumane Dogge!

Lago. Kill men I t' darke?

Where be these bloody Theues?

How silent is this Towne? Hoo, murther, murther.

What may you be? Are you of good, or euill?

Lod. As you shall proue vs, praffe vs.

Lago. Signior Lodovico?

Lod. He Sir.

Lago. I cry you mercy: here's Caffio hurt by Villaines.

Gra. Caffio?

Lago. How is't Brother?

Gra. My Legge is cut in two.

Lago. Marry heauen forbid!

Light Gentlemen, He bide it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter hoo? Who is't that cry'd?

Lago. Who is't that cry'd?

Bian. Oh my deere Caffio,

My sweet Caffio: Oh Caffio, Caffio, Caffio,

Lago. O notable Strumpet. Caffio, may you suffeckt

Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Gef. No.

Gra. I am forry to finde you thus;

I have beene to fecke you.

Lago. Lend me a Garter. So:—Oh for a Chaire
To beare him eaily hence.

Bian. Alas he faints. Oh Caffio, Caffio, Caffio,

Lago. Gentlemen all, I do suffeckt this Thrahe
To be a party in this Inurie,

Patience awhile, good Caffio. Come, come;

Lend me a Light: know we this face, or no?

Alas my Friend, and my deere Countryman

Rodorigo! No? Yes faire? Yes, 'tis Rodorigo.

Gra. What, of Venice?

Lago. Euen he Sir? Did you know him?

Gra. Know him? I.

Lago. Signior Gratiam? I cry your gentle pardon:

These bloody accidents must excite my Manners,

That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Gra. Rodorigo?

Lago. He, he, 'tis he:

Oh that's well fald, the Chaire.

Some good man beare him carefully from hence,

Ile fetch the Generall Surgeon. For you Miftris,

Saue you your labour. He that lies faine heere (Caffio)

Was my deere friend. What malice was between you?

Gef. None in the world: nor do I know the man?

Lago. What looke you pale? Oh beare him o'th' Ayre,

Stay you good Gentlemen. Looke you pale, Miftris?

Do you perceiue the gaftnephe of her eye?

Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.

Behold her well: I pray you looke vpon her:

Do you see Gentlemen? Nay, guiltineffe will speake

Though tongues were out of vie.

Æmil. Alas, what is the matter?

What is the matter, Husband?

Lago. Caffio hath here bin fet on in the darke

By Rodorigo, and Fellowes that are capd:

He's almost slain, and Rodorigo quite dead.

Æmil. Alas good Gentleman: alas good Caffio.

Lago. This is the fruits of whoring. Prythee æmilia,

Go know of Caffio where he was take to night.

What, do you shakke at that?

Bian. He was in my house, but I therefore shakke not.

Lago. O did he so? I charge you go with me.

Æmil. Oh fie vpon thee Strumpet.

Bian. I am no Strumpet, but of life as honeft,

As you that thus abuse me.

Æmil. As I? Fie vpon thee.

Lago. Kinde Gentlemen:

Let's go see poore Caffio dreft,

Come Miftris, you must tel's another Tale.

Æmilia, run you to the Citadell,

And tell my Lord and Lady, what hath happ'd:

Will you go on afore? This is the night

That either makes me, or forelodes me quight. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Defdemona in her bed.

Oth. It is the Caufe, it is the Caufe (my Soule)

Let me not name it to you, you chaffe Starres,

It is the Caufe. Yet Ile not theer her blood,

Nor care that whiter skin of hers, then Snow,

And smooth as Monumentall Alabaster:

Yet thee muft dye, else thee'rt betray more men:

Put out the Light, and then put out the Light:

If I quench thee, thou Raming Minifrer,

I can against thy former light refoure,

Should I repent me. But once put out thy Light,

Thou cunning:ft Patterne of excelling Nature,

I know not where is that Promitthean heste

That can thy Light re-Lume.

When I have pluck'd thy Rose,

I cannot glue it vitall growth againe,

It needs must wither. Ile smel thee on the Tree.

Oh Balmy breath, that doth almost perfude

Juifhe to breakre her Sword. One more, one more:

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,

And lose thee after. One more, and that's the laft.

So sweet, was ne'er so fatall. I muft weepe,

But they are cruel: Tares: This forrow's heavenly,

It strikes, where it doth love. She wakes.

Def. Who's there? Othello?

Othel. I Defdemona.

Def. Will you come to bed, my Lord?

Oth. Have you pres'd to night, Defdemon?

Def. I my Lord.

Oth. If you bethinke your selfe of any Crime

Vereconcil'd as yet to Heauen, and Grace,

Solicite for it straight.

Def. Alacke, my Lord,

What may you meane by that?

Oth. Well, do it, and be breefe, I will walke by:

I would not kill thy unprepared Spirti,

No, (Heaues fore-fend) I would not kill thy Soule.

Def. Take ye of killing?

Oth. I, I do.

Def. Then Heauen haue mercy on mee.

Oth.
The Tragedie of Othello

Oth. Amen, with all my heart.
Def. If you say, I hope you will not kill me.
Oth. Hahm.
Def. And yet I fear you: for you’re fatal then
When your eyes round so.
Why I should fear, I know not,
Since guiltiness I know not: But yet I feel I fear.
Oth. Thinke on thy finnes.
Def. They are Loutes I bear to you.
Oth. I, and for that thou dy’st.
Def. That death’s unnatural, that kills for loving.
Alas, why gazw you so your nether-lip?
Some bloody paffion flakes your very Frame:
There are portents: but yet I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.
Oth. Peace, and be still.
Def. I will fo: What’s the matter?
Oth. That Handkerchief
Which I fo lou’d, and gave thee, thou gau’st to Caffio.
Def. No by my Life, and Soule: fend for the man.
And ask him.
Oth. Sweet Soule, take heed, take heed of Periury,
Thou art on thy death-bed.
Def. I, but not yet to dye.
Oth. Preferit.
Therefore confess thee freely of thy finnes:
For to deny each Article with Oaths,
Cannot remove, nor chance the strong Conception
That I do grone withall. Thou art to dye.
Oth. O Heauen have mercy on me.
Oth. I say, Amen.
Def. And have you mercy too. I never did
Offend you in my life: never lou’d Caffio,
But with such generall warrante of Heauen,
As I might loue. I never gau him Token.
Oth. By Heauen I saw my Handkerchief in’s hand.
O Prefur’d woman, thou do’st done my heart,
And makes me call, what I intend to do,
A Murder, which I thought a Sacrifice.
I saw the Handkerchief.
Def. He found it then:
I never gau it him: Send, for him hither:
Let him confess a truth.
Oth. He hath confess.
Def. What, my Lord?
Oth. That he hath vs’d thee.
Def. How? unlawfully?
Oth. I.
Def. He will not say so,
Oth. No: his mouth is stopp’d:
Honest Iago hath ‘tane order for’t.
’Def. Oh, my foe interprets. What is he dead?
Oth. Had all his haires bin lues, my great Reuenge
Had romacke for them all.
Def. Alas, he is betray’d, and I vndone.
Oth. Out Strumpet: weep’t thou for him to my face?
Def. O banish me, my Lord, but kill me not.
Oth. Downe Strumpet.
Def. Kill me to morrow, let me live to night.
Oth. Nay, if you thrive.
Def. But halfe an houre.
Oth. Being done, there is no pawe.
’Def. But while I say one prayer.
Oth. It is too late.
Smother him.
Def. Emil. My Lord, my Lord? What hoa?
My Lord, my Lord.
Oth. What noise is this? Not dead? not yet quite dead?
I that am cruel, am yet mercifull,
I would not have thee linger in thy paine?
So, lo
Def. Emil. within. What hoa? my Lord, my Lord?
Oth. Who’s there?
Def. Emil. Oh good my Lord, I would speake a word with you.
Oth. It is: *’Tis Emil: by and by, Shee’s dead.
’Tis like she comes to speake of Caffio’s death:
The noise was high. Nah, no more nooosing:
Still as the Graue. Shall she come in? We’t good?
I think she flibbles again. No, what’s beft to do?
If she come in, Shee’s sure speake to my wife;
My wife, my wife: what wife? I have no wife.
Oh insupportable! Oh heavy houre!
Me thinkes, it should be now a huge Eclipfe!
Of Sunne, and Moone; and that th’affrighted Globe
Did yawne at Alteration.
Def. I do befor thee you
That I may speake with you. Oh good my Lord.
Oth. I had forgot thee: oh come in *Emilia.
Soft, by and by, let me the Curtains draw.
Where art thou? What’s the matter with thee now?
Enter *Emilia.
Emil. Oh my good Lord, yonders foule Murtheres done.
Oth. What? now?
Emil. But now, my Lord.
Oth. It is the very error of the Moone,
She comes more nearer Earth then she was wont,
And makes men mad.
Emil. Caffio, my Lord, hath kild’.
A young Venetian, call’d Rodorigo.
Oth. Rodorigo kild’? and Caffio kild’?
Emil. No, Caffio is not kild’.
Oth. Not Caffio kild’? Then Murther’s out of tune,
And sweet Reuenge grows harth.
Def. O falsely, falsely murder’d.
Emil. Alas! what cry is that?
Oth. That What?
Emil. Out, and alas, that was my Ladies voice.
Helpes, helpe hoa, helpe. Oh Ladie speake againe,
Sweet Defension, oh sweet Mirthis, speake.
Def. A guiltlfesse death, I dye.
Emil. Oh who hath done this deed?
Def. No body: i my selfe, farewell.
Commend me to my kinde Lord: oh farewell.
Oth. Why, how shoulde she be murdred?
Emil. Alas: who knowes?
Oth. You heare her say her selfe, it was not I.
Emil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.
Oth. She’s like a liar gone to burning hell,
’Twas I that kild’ her.
Emil. Oh the more Angell she, and you the blacker Diduell.
Oth. She turn’d to folly: and she was a whore.
Emil. Thou do’st bely her, and thou art a diduell.
Oth. She was false as water.
Emil. Thou art rafl as fire, to say
That she was false. Oh she was heavenly true.
Oth. Caffio did top her: Ask thy husband elle.
Oth. I were damn’d beneath all depth in hell:
But that I did proceed upon lust grounds
To this extremity. Thy Husband knew it all.
Emil.
the Moore of Venice.

337

Emil. My Husband?
Oth. Thy Husband.
Emil. That he was false to Wedlocke?
Oth. I, with Caffio: had the bin true,
If Heaven would make me fuch another world,
Of one entry and perfiction Chryfolite,
I'd not have told her for it.
Emil. My Husband?
Oth. I, 'twas he that told me on her first,
An honest man he is, and hates the flame
That flockes on filthy deeds.
Emil. My Husband?
Oth. What needs this tirance, Woman?
I say, thy Husband.
Emil. Oh Miftris,
Villany hath made mockes with love:
My Husband say she was false?
Oth. He, Woman;
I say thy Husband: Do't vnderstand the word?
My Friend, thy Husband; honest, honest Iago.
Emil. If he say fo, may his pernicious Soule
Rot halfe a graine a day: he lyes to'th'heart,
She was too fond of her most filthy Bargaine.
Oth. Hah?
Emil. Do thy wort:
This deed of thine is no more worthy Heaven,
Then thou want'st worthy her.
Oth. Peace, you were bent.
Emil. Thou haft not halfe that powre to do me harm,
As I haue to be hurt. Oh Gull, oh dolot,
As ignorant as durt; thou haue done a deed
(I care not for thy Sword) Ile make thee known,
Though I loft twenty lies Helpe, helpe, hos, helpe:
The Moore hath kill'd my Miftris. Murther, murther.

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter? How now General?
Emil. Oh, are you come, Iago: you have done well,
That men must lay their Mothers on your necke.
Gra. What is the matter?
Emil. Diepray this Villaine, if thou bee't a man:
He fayes, thou told'ft him that his wife was false:
I know thou didst not: thou'rt not such a Villain.
Speake, for my heart is full.
Iago. I told him what I thought,
And told no more.
Then what he found himselfe was apt, and true.
Emil. But did you ever tell him,
She was false?
Iago. I did.
Emil. You told a Lye, an odious damned Lye:
Vpon my Soule, a Lye; a wicked Lye.
Shee falle with Caffio?
Did you say with Caffio?
Iago. With Caffio, Miftris!
Go too, charme your tongue.
Emil. I will not charme my Tongue;
I am bound to speake,
My Miftris heere lyes murthered in her bed.
All. Oh Heauen, fore fend.
Emil. And your reports hauie fet the Murder on.
Oisabella. Nay bare not Mafter,
It is true indeed.
Gra. 'Tis a strange Truth.
Msrn. O monstrous Afte.

Emil. Villany, villany, villany:
I thinke vpon't, I thinke: I fmei't: O Villany:
I thought fo then: Ile kill my felfe for greffe.
O villany! villany!
Iago. What, are you mad?
I charge you get you home.
Emil. Good Gentleman, let me have leave to speake:
'Tis proper I obey him; but not now:
Perchance Iago, I will ne'er go home.
Oth. Oh, oh, oh.
Emil. Nay, lay thee downe, and roare:
For thou haft kill'd the sweeteft innocent,
That ere did lift vp eye.
Oth. Oh she was bowle!
I care did know you Vnkle, there lies your Neece,
Whole breath (indeed) these lands have newly fropp'd:
I know this ache there's horrible and grim.
Gra. Poore Doffem:
I am glad thy Father's dead,
Thy Match was mortall to him: and pure grefs:
Shore his old thread in twaine. Did he live now,
This fight would make him do a deperate turne:
Yes, curfe his better Angell from his side,
And fall to Reprobation.
Oth. 'Tis pittifull: but yet Iago knowes
That she with Caffio, hath the Act of flame,
A thousand times committed. Caffio confett it,
And she did gratifie his amorous works
With that Recognizance and pledge of Loue
Which I firt gave her: I law it in his hand:
It was a Handkerchief, an Antique Token
My Father gave my Mother.
Emil. Oh Heauen! oh heavenly Powres!
Iago. Come, hold your peace.
Emil. Twill out, twill out. I peace?
No, I will speake as liberaall as the North;
Let Heauen, and Men, and Diables, let them all,
All, all, crye shame against me, yet Ile speake.
Iago. Be wife, and get you home.
Emil. I will not.
Gra. Fye, your Sword vpon a Woman.
Emil. Oh thou dull Moore,
That Handkerchief thou speake't of
I found by Fortune, and did glue my Husband:
For often, with a solemn earnestneffe,
(More then indeed belong'd to such a Trifle)
He begg'd me of, to faele't.
Iago. Villainous Whore.
Emil. She glue it Caffio? No, alas I found it;
And I did giu't my Husband.
Iago. Filth, thou lyest.
Emil. By Heauen I do not, I do not Gentleman:
Oh murtherous Coxcombe, what should such a Fool
Do with fo good a wife?
Oth. Are there no stones in Heauen,
But what ferues for the Thunder?
Precious Villaine.
Gra. The woman falles:
Sure he hath kill'd his Wife.
Emil. I, I: oh lay me by my Miftris fide.
Gra. Hee's gone, but his wife's kill'd.
Mon. 'Tis a notorious Villain: take you this weapon
Which I have recover'd from the Moore:
Come guard the doore without, let him not paff,
But kill him rather. Ile after that fame villaine,
For 'tis a dammed Slaue.

Exit.
Oth.
The Tragedie of Othello

Ob. I am not valiant neither:
But every Punie whisperet gets my Sword,
But why should Honor out-live Honesty?
Let it go all.

æmil. What did thy Song bode Lady?
Heark, canst thou hear me? I will play the Swan,
And dye in Mufick: Willough, Willough, Willough.
Moore, she was chaste: She lou'd thee, cruel Moore,
So soon my Soule to blisse, as I speake true:
So speaking is I thinkes, alas, I dye.

Ob. I have another weapon in this Chamber,
It was a Sword of Spaine, the Ice brookes temper:
Oh heere it is: Vnxle I must come forth.

Gra. If thou attempt it, it will cost thee deere;
Thou haft no weapon, and performe mutt fuffer.

Ob. Looke in vpon me then, and speake with me,
Or naked as I am I will affault thee.

Gra. What is the matter?

Obtel. Behold, I have a weapon:
A better never did it fell: fulaine
Vpon a Soldiers Thigh. I have fene the day,
That with this little Arme, and this good Sword,
I haue made my way through more impediments
Then twenty times your flup. But (oh vaine boall)
Who can control his Fate? 'Tis not fo now.
Be not afraid, thou doo see me weapon'd:
Heere is my lournes end, heere is my butt
And verie Sea-marke of my vtmolt Saile.
Do you go backe difmaid? 'Tis a lofty feare:
Man but a Ruth againft Othello's bref,
And he retires. Where should Othello go?
Now: how doth thou look now? Oh Ill-Starr'd wench,
Pale as thy Smocke: when we shall meete at compt,
This looke of thine will hurte my Soule from Heauen,
And Fiends will matnch at it. Cold, cold, my Girle?
Even like thy Chaffity. O curfed, cursed Saule!
Whip me ye Diuell,
From the poffefion of this Heauenly fight:
Blow me about in winde, roft me in Sulphare,
Wash me in theepe-downe gulhs of Liquid fire.
Oh Deflemen! dead Deflemen: dead. Oh! oh!

Enter Lodouio, Caffio, Montano, and Iago, with Officers.

Lod. Where is this rath, and most vnfortunate man?
Ob. That's he that was Othello: heere I am.

Lod. Where is that Viper?

Bring the Wiltaine forth.

Ob. I look down towards his feet; but that's a Fable,
If thou bee't a Diuell, I cannot kill thee.

Lod. Wrench his Sword from him.

Iago. I bleeed Sir, but not kill'd.

Obtel. I am not forry neither, I'd haue thee liue:
For in my lente, 'tis happtene to die.

Lod. Oh Othello, that was once so good,
Falne in the prouctie of a cursed Saule,
What shall be faire to thee.

Ob. Why any thing:
An honouerable Murder, if you will:
For ought I did in hate, but all in Honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confett his Villany:
Did you and he confett in Caffio's death.

Ob. I.

Caff. Deere Generall, I never geue you caufe.
Ob. I do looke on our: and I ask your pardon:
Will you, I pray, demand that demy-Duell,
This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon:
For he was great of heart.

Lod. Oh Sparton Dogge:
More fell then Anguilh, Hunger, or the Sea:
Looke on the Tragicke Loading of this bed:
This is thy worke:
The Object poylons Sight,

Let it be hid. Gratiano, keepe the house,
And seize upon the Fortunes of the Moore,
For they succede on you. To you, Lord Gouernor,
Remaines th eCensure of this hellish villaine:
The Time, the Place, the Torture, oh Infuse it:
My felle will straight aboard, and to the State,
This heauie AE, with heauie heart relate.

FINIS.

The Names of the Actors.

Othello, the Moor.
Brabantio, Father to Desdemona.
Cassio, an Honourable Lieutenant.

Lodouico, Gratiano, two Noble Venetians.

Duke of Venice.

Montano, Gouernour of Cyprus.

Gentlemen of Cyprus.

Saylors.

Clowne.

Desdemona, Wife to Otbella.

Emilia, Wife to Iago.

Bianca, a Curtezan.
Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Philo.

Ay, but this dotage of our Generals
Ore-flowers the meafure; thefe his goody eyes
And with the flreams of good deafe and cures
Are th'only the Flies and Mufhers of the Warre,
And Haue glow'd like plated Mars:
Now bend, now turne
The Office and Devotion of their view
Vpon a Tawny Front. His Captaines heart,
Which in the fculles of great Fights hath burst
The Buckles on his breff, reneges all temper,
And is become the Bellowes and the Fan
To cool a Gypfes Luft.

Flourib. Enter Antony, Cleopatra her Ladies, the Train, with Elums fanning her.

Looke where they come : Take but good note, and you fhall fee in him
(The triple Pillar of the world) transform'd
Into a Strumpets Fole. Behold and fee,
Cles. If it be Loue indeed, tell me how much.
Ant. There's hegerry in the loue that can be reckon'd
Cleo. He fett a bourn how farre to be belou'd.
Ant. Then muft thou needes finde out new Heauen, new Earth.

Enter a Megifter.

Mef. Newes, my good Lord, from Rome.
Ant. Grates me, the fumme.
Cles. Nay hear them Antony.
Fulvia perchance is angry ; Or who knowes,
If the Scarfe-bearded Cefar have not fent
His pow'rful Mandate to you. Do this, or this ;
Take in that Kingdome, and Infranchife that :
Perforn't, or elfe we damne thee.
Ant. How, my Loue ?
Cles. Perchance! Nay, and moft like :
You muft not fay heere longer, your diffimination
Is come from Cefar, therefore hearre it Antony.
Where's Fulvia Proceffe? (Cefar I would fay) both ?
Call in the Megffengers : As I am Egypt's Queene,
Thou fhall fende Antony, and that blood of thine
Is Cefars homager: elfe fo thy cheefe payes fame,
When thrill-corn'd Fulvia Golds. The Megffengers.
Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide Arch
Of the raing'd Empire fall : Here is my pace,
Kingdomes are clay : Our dungie earth alike

Feeds Beafe as Man; the Noblenesse of life
Is to do thus : when fuch a mutuall paire,
And fuch a twaine can doo't, in which I binde
One paine of punishment, the world to weete
We fhand vp Fleeplefe.
Cles. Excellent falhhood :
Why did he marry Fulvia, and not loue her?
Ie feeme the Fole I am not. Antony will be himfelf.
Ant. But fir'd by Cleopatra.
Now for the loue of Loue, and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with Conference harf:
There's not a minute of our lifes fhould stretch
Without fome pleafure now. What fport to night ?
Cles. Heare the Ambaffadors.
Ant. Fye wafting Queene : Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To wepe: who every opinion fully flriues
To make it felfe (in Thee) faire, and admiral'd.
No Megifter but thine, and all alone, to night
We'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come my Queene,
Lift night you did defire it. Speake not to vs.
Exeunt with the Traine.

Dem. Is Cefar with Antonius priz'd fo flight ?
Philo. Sir sometimes when he is not Antony,
He cometh too fhort of that great Property
Which ill fhould go with Anthony.
Dem. I am full forry, that hee approoves the common Lyar, who thus Speakes of him at Rome; but I will hope of better deeds to morrow. Reft you happy.
Exeunt

Enter Enobarbus, Lamprinus, a Southebyer, Rannius, Lucilius,
Charman, Irau, Marfian the Eunuch, and Aelix.

Char. L. Alexas, sweet Alexas, moft any thing Alexas, almost moft absolute Alexas, where's the Southebyer that you prais'd fo with't Queene? Oh that I knewe this Husband, which you fay, muft change his Hornes with Garlands.
Alex. Southebyer.
Scott. Your will ?
Char. Is this the Mat? Is't you fay that know things?
Scott. In Natures infinite booke of Secrecie, a little I
I can read.
Alex. Shew him your hand.

Cleop.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Cleopatra's health to drink.
Char. Good sir, give me good Fortune.
Sooth. I make not, but for thee.
Char. Pray then, forsee me one.
Sooth. You shall be yet faire fairer then you are.
Char. He means in flesh.
Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.
Char. Wrinkles forbid.
Alex. Vex not his princeness, be attendive.
Char. Hush.
Sooth. You shall be more beloving, then beloved.
Char. I had rather hear me Liuer with drinking.
Alex. Nay, hear me.
Char. Good now some excellent Fortune; Let mee be married to three Kings in a forenoon, and Widow them all! Let me have a Child at fifty, to whom Herode of Jewry may do Homage. Find me to marry me with Othelio Cesar, and companion me with my Miftris.
Sooth. You shall out-live the Lady whom you serue.
Char. Oh excellent, I loure long life better then Figs.
Sooth. You have seen and proued a faireer former fortune, that is which is to approach.
Char. Then beleeke my Children shall have no names: Prythee how many Boys and Wenches muft I have.
Sooth. If every of your wishes had a wombe, & foretell every with, a Million.
Char. Our Foole, I forgive thee for a Witch.
Alex. You think none but your fruits are priuile to your wishes.
Char. Nay come, tell Iras hers.
Alex. We'll know all our Fortunes.
Sooth. Mine, and moft of our Fortunes to night, shall be drunken to bed.
Iras. There's a Palme prefages Chaffity, if nothing els.
Char. Ene as the o're-flowing Nylas prefageth Fa-mine.
Iras. Go you wise Bedfellow, you cannot Sootshay.
Char. Nay, if an oyl Palme bee not a fruitfull Propagation, I cannot forscath mine ear. Prythee tell her but a worky day Fortune.
Sooth. Your Fortunes are alike.
Iras. But how, but how, give me particulars.
Sooth. I haue fayd.
Iras. And I not an inch of Fortune better then the?
Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better then I : where would you choafe it.
Iras. Not in my Husbands nere.
Char. Our worfer thoughts Heaven's mend.
Iras. Runs. Come, his Fortune, his Fortune. Oh let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Ifa, I befeech thee, and let her dye too, and give him a worfe, and let worfe follow worfe, till the worft of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a Cuckold. Good Ifa hear me this Prayer, though thou denie me a matter of more wight: good Ifa I befeech thee.
Iras. Amen, deere Goddeffe, heare that prayer of the people. For, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handfome man loafe-Whu'd, so it is a deadly forrow, to beholde a foule Knaue vn cuckold'd: Therefore deere Ifa keep de-carm, and Fortune him accordingly.
Char. Amen.
Alex. Lo now, if it lay in their hands to make mee a Cuckold, they would make themselfes Whores, but they'd don't.

Enter Cleopatra.

Ensb. Hufh, heere comes Anthony.

Char. Not he, the Queene.
Cleo. Saue you, my Lord.
Ensb. No Lady.
Cleo. Was he not heere?
Char. No Madam.
Cleo. He was dipt't to mirch, but on the solaine A Roman thought hath strooke him.
Endebarkus?
Ensb. Madam.
Cleo. Seeke him, and bring him hither: wher's Alexias?
Alex. Here at your service.
My Lord approaches,

Enter Anthony, with a Miffenger.
Cleo. We will not looke vpon him: Go with vs.
Mefien. Fauzia thy Wife,
Firt came into the Field,
Ant. Against my Brother Luctus?
Mefien. I: but soone that Warre had end,
And the times flate
Made friends of them, loyning their force 'gainst Cesar,
Whole better issue in the warre from Italy,
Vpon the first encounter drave them.
Ant. Well, what worke.
Mefien. The Nature of bad newes infects the Teller.
Ant. When it concerns the Foole or Coward: On.
Things that are past, are done, with me. 'Tis thus,
Who tells me true, though in his Tale lye death,
I heare him as he flatter'd.
Mefien. Labiumns (this is fliffe-newnes)
Hath with his Parthian Force
Extended Afa: from Euphrates his conquering
Banner frooke, from Syria to Lydia,
And to Ionia, whil't——
Ant. Anthony thou would'ft say.
Mefien. Oh my Lord.
Ant. Spake to me home,
Mince not the general tongue, name
Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome:
Rakke thou in Fauzia's phrase, and tast my faults
With such fulc Licenc, as both Truth and Malice
Hauw power to vnter:
Oh then we bring forth weeds,
When our quicke windes lye still, and our illis told vs
Is as our caring: fare thee well awhile.
Mefien. At your Noble pleasure. Exit Miffenger.
Enter another Miffenger.
Ant. From Solien how the newes? Speake there.

1. Mefien. The man from Solien,
Is there such an one?
2. Mefien. He stayes vpon your will.
Ant. Let him appeare:
Thefe strong Egyptian Fetters I must breake,
Or loose my felle in dotage.

Enter another Miffenger with a Letter.

What are you?
3. Mefien. Fauzia thy wife is dead.
Ant. Where dyed she.
Mefien. In Sicien, her length of tucknefe,
With what else more serius,
Importeth thee to know, this beares,
Ant. Forbear me
There's a great Spirit gone, thus did I defire it:
What our contemps doth often hurle from vs,
The Tragedie of

We wish it ours againe. The preuent pleasure, By resolution lowring, does become The opposite of it felte: she's good being gon, The hand could plucke her backes, that fhould her on. I must from this enchanting Queene brake off, Ten thousand harms, more then the Illes I know My idlenesse doth hatch.

Enter Eubaces.

How now Eubaces.

Eno. What's your pleasure, Sir?

Ant. I must with hafe from hence.

Eno. Why then we kill all our Women. We fee how mortall an vnkindeffe is to them, if they suffer our departure death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Vnder a compelling occasion, let women die. It were pitty to catt them away for nothing, though betweene them and a great caufe, they should bee effectued nothing. Cleopatra catching but the leaf noyce of this, dies instantly: I have feared her dye twenty times vpon lanade in deed: I do think there is nothing but death, which commits some louing acte upon her, the hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past mans thought.

Eno. Alacke Sir no, her paffions are made of nothing but the finke part of pure Love. We cannot cal her winds and wates, fighes and teares: They are greater flormes and Tempefts then Almanaches can report. This cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a fhower of Raine as well as loue.

Ant. Would I had never feene her.

Eno. Oh fir, you had then left vneene a wonderfull peace of worke, which not to have beene blest withall, would have dircideted your Trauaille.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why fir, glue the Gods a thankfull Sacrifice: when it pleafeth their Delites to take the wife of a man from him, it threves to man the Tailors of the earth confoiting therein, that when olde Robes are out worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more Women but Fulvia, then had you indeede a cut, and the cafe to be lamented: This grece is crown'd with Confolation, your old Smocke brings forth a new Petticoate, and indeed the teares live in an Onion, that should warre this forrow.

Ant. The bufiniffe the hath broach'd in the State, Cannot endure my abfence.

Eno. And the bufiniffe you have broach'd hice cannot be without you, especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light Anfweres:

Let our Officers

Hauce notice what we purpofe. I shall breake

The caufe of our Expedition to the Queene,

And get her loue to part. For not alone

The death of Pulvia, with more vrgent touches

Do strongly speake to vs: but the Letters too

Of many of our contriving Friends in Rome,

Petition vs at home, Sextus Pompeius

Hauing given the dare to Cæsar, and commands

The Empire of the Sea. Our slippery people,

Whose loue is neuer link'd to the defirer,
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Cleo. I would I had thy inches, thou shouldst know There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me Queene: The strong necessity of Time, commands Our Seruices a-while: but my full heart Remains in vfe with you. Our Italy, Shines o're with ciuill Swords: Scarcely Pompeius Makes his approaches to the Port of Rome, Equality of two Domestick powers, Breed scrupulous faction: The hated growne to strength Are newly growne to Loue: The condemn'd Pompey, Rich in his Fathers Honor, creeps appace. Into the hearts of such, as hau'e not thried When the present state, whose Numbers threaten, And quietnesse growne ficker of reft, would purge By any desperate change: My more particular, And that which moist with you should fave my going, Is Fulvius death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom It does from childishnesse. Can Fulvius dye? My Queen's dear: I am a Queen. Looke heere, and at thy Soveraigne legifure read The Garbories the awak'd at the laft, beft, See when, and where feene died.

Cleo. O mort falfes Loue! Where be the Sacred Violles thou should't fill Withorrowfull water? Now I fee, I fee, In Fulvius death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant. Quarrell no more, but be prepar'd to know The purpofes I bear: which are, or ceafe, As you shall glide th'aduice. By the fire That quickens Nylus flame, I go from hence Thy Soul,der, Servants, making Peace or Warre, As thou affects.

Cleo. Cut my Lace, Charmian come, But let it be, I am quickly ill, and well, So Anthony loves.

Ant. My precious Queene forbear, And give true euidence to his Loue, which flands An honourable Trai.f.

Cleo. So Fulvius told me.
I prye thee turne aside, and wepe for her, Then bid aduie to me, and lay the tears Belong to Egypt. Good now, play one Scene Of excellent difumbling, and let it looke Like perfect Honor.

Ant. You'll heat my blood no more? Cleo. You can do better yet: but this is meetly. Ant. Now by Sword.

Cleo. And Target. Still he mends. But this is not the belt. Looke prythee Charmian, How this Herculean Roman do's become The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. Ille leave you Lady.

Cleo. Courteous Lord, one word: Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it: Sir, you and I have lou'd, but there's not it: That you know well, something it is I would: Oh, my Oblition is a very Anthony, And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your Royalty Holds Idlenesse your fubieft, I should take you For Idlenesse it felle.

Cleo. 'Tis swelling Labour,
To beare such Idlenesse no nearer the heart At Cleopatra this. But Sir, forge me, Since my bcommings kill me, when they do not Eye well to you. Your Honor calles you hence, Therefore be deafe to my unhappie Folly, And all the Gods go with you. Von your Sword Sit Lawrell victory, and smooth fuccesse Be ftrewd before your feet.:

Ant. Let vs go.

Come. Our separation so abides and flies, That thou receding heere, goes yet with me; And I hence fleeting, heere remaine with thee. Away.

Enter Octavius reading a Letter, Lepidus, and their Traines.

Caf. You may fee Lepidus, and henceforth know, It is not Cæfars Natural vice, to hate One great Competitor. From Alexandria This is the news: He fishes, drinks, and waftes The Lamps of night in recuell: Is not more manlike Then Cleopatra: nor the Queen of Ptolomy More Womanly then he. Hardly gauie audience Or vouchsafe to think he had Partners. You Shall finde there a man, who is th'abftracks of all faults, That all men follow.

Lep. I must not thinke There are, euis now to darken all his goodnesse His faults in him, feeme as the Spots of Heauen, More fierie by nights Blacknesse: Hereditarie, Rather then purchafe: what he cannot change, Then what he chooseth.

Caf. You are too indulgent. Let's gran't it is not Amilfe to tumble on the bed of Ptolomy, To glue a Kingdom for a Mirth, to fit And keep the turne of Tipling with a Slawe, To reele the streets at noone, and fland the Buffet With knaes that times of Iweate: Say this becomes him (As his compoure must be rare indeed, Whom these things cannot blemife) yet muft Anthony No way excufe his foyles, when we do beare So great weight in his lightnesse. If he fill'd His vacant with his Voluptuousnesse, Full furters, and the drincke of his bones, Call on him for't: But to confound fuch time, That drummes him from his fport, and speakes as lowd As his owne State, and ours, 'tis to be chid: As we rate Boyes, who being mature in knowledge, Pawn their experience to their prefent pleafure, And fo rebell to judgement.

Lep. Heere more news.

Mos. Thy biddings have beene done, & cuerie houre Most Noble Cæfar, shalt thou have report How 'tis abroad. Pompý is strong at Sea, And it appears, he is belou'd of thofe That only have fear'd Cæfar: to the Ports The defections repair, and mens reports Glue him much wrong'd.

Caf. I should have done no leffe,
It hath bin taught vs from the primall flate That he which is was wifth, vntil he were: And the ebb'd man,
Ne're lou'd, till ne're worth loue,
Comes fear'd, by being lack'd. This common bode, Like to a Vagabon Flagge vpon the Streeame, Goes too, and backe, lacking the varying tyde
To rot it fife with motion.

My. Ceas. I bring thee word,
Mammatus and Mars famous Pyrates
Makest the Sea feare them, which they eare and wound
With knees of every kinde. Many hot inroads
They make in Italy, the Borders Maritime
Lacks blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt,
No Vellifh can perpe forth: but 'tis as foone
Taken as feme: for Pompey name strikes more
Then could his Warre refil'd.

Ceaf. Anthony,
Leafe thy lafculous Vaffalles. When thou once
Was beaten from Medea, where thou flew'ft
Herfis, and Paule Confuls, at thy heale
Did Famine follow, whom thou fought'ft againft,
(Though daintily brought vp) with patience more
Then Saugus could fuffer. Thou didft drink
The fale of Horfes, and the gilded Puddle
Which Beasts would cough at: Thy belly thed diue
The rougheft Berry, on the rudeft Hedge.
Yea, like the Stagge, when Snow the Pature flockes,
The barkes of Trees thou bours'd. On the Alps,
It is reported thou didft eate ftrange flee'd,
Which fome did dye to look on: And all this
(If wounds thine Honor that I fpeak it now)
Was borne fo like a Soldier, that thy cheeke
So much as lank'd not.

Left. 'Tis pity of him,

Ceaf. Let his flames quickly
Drife him to Rome, 'tis time we twaine
Did fwear our felves i'th Field, and to that end
Assemble me immediate counfel, Pompey
Thruues in our Idenifee.

Left. To morrow Ceafar,
I fhall be fumifh to informe you rightly
Both what by Sea and Land I can be able
To front this preuent time.

Ceaf. Till which encounter, it is my bufnes too. Farwell.

Left. Farwell my Lord, what you fhall know mean time
Of fires abroad, I fhall befeech you Sir
To let me be partaker.

Ceafar. Doubt not Sir, I knew it for my Bond. Exeunt
Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Ires, & Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian.
Char. Madam,
Cleo. Ha, ha, give me to drinke Mandraegus,
Char. Why Madam?
Cleo. That I might fleep out this great gap of time:
My Anthony is away.

Char. You think of him too much.

Cleo. O! Tis Treafon.
Char. Madam, I truth not fo.
Cleo. Thou, Eumuch Mardian.
Mar. What's your Highneffe pleafure?

Cleo. Not now to heare thee fing. I take no pleafure
In ought an Eumuch ha's Tis well for thee,
That being unfeminard, thy felfe thought
May not fye forth of Egypt. Haft thou Affections?
Cleo. Indeed?
Mar. Not in deed Madam, for I can do nothing
But what in deed is honent to be done:
Yet have I fierce Affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. Oh Charmian:

Where think't thou he is now? Stands he, or fits he?

Or does he walk? Or is he on his Horfe?
Oh happy horfe to bear the weight of Anthony!
Do brauely Horfe, for wor'th thou whom thou moouth,
The denny Altes of this Earth, the Arme
And Burganet of men. Hee's speaking now,
Or murmuring, where's my Serpent of old Nyle,
(For so he cal's me) Now I fee'd my feline
With moft delicious poiyon. Thinkes on me
That am with Phobus amorous pinches blacke,
And wrinkled deepe in time. Broad-fronted Ceafar,
When thou wast heere above the ground, I was
A moreell for a Monarke: and great Pompey
Would fland and make his eyes grow in my brow.
There would he anchor his Alpefi, and dye
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexan from Ceafar.

Alex. Soueraigne of Egypt, haile.
Cleo. Haile. He came like art thou Mark Anthony?
Yet comming from him, that great Med'cine hath
With his Tint gilded thee.

How goes it with my brave Mark Anthony?

Alex. Laft thing he did (deere Qu ene)
He left the laft of many doubted killis
This Orient Pearle, His speech flickes in my heart.

Cleo. Mine eare muft plucke it thence.

Alex. Good Friend, quoth he:

Say the firme Roman to great Egypt fends
This treasurse of an Oyster: at whole foots
To mend the petty prefent, I will piece
Her opulent Throne, with Kingsdomes. All the East,
(Say thou) fhall call her Mitris. So he nodded,
And soberly did mount an Arme-gaunt Steele.
Who neig'd fo bye, that what I would have spoke,
Was beally dumbe by him.

Cleo. What was he faid, or merry?

Alex. Like to the time o'my'yeare, between 'f extremes
Of hot and cold, he was nor fad nor merrie.

Cleo. Oh well diuided dispofition: Note him,
Note him good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him.
He was not fad, for he would smile on them
That make their looks by his. He was not merrie,
Which feem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy, but betweene both.
Oh heavenly mingle! Bee'th thou fad, or merrie,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So do's it no man elle. Mer'th thou my Pofts?

Alex. I Madam, twenty feuerall Mifengers.

Why do you fend fo thickes?

Cleo. Who's borne that day, when I forget to fend
To Anthony, shall dye a Begger. Inke and paper Charmian
Welle we my good Alexan. Did I Charmian, euer loue Ceafar so?

Char. Oh that braue Ceafar!
Cleo. Be choy'd with fuch another Emphatis,
Say the braue Anthony.

Char. The valiant Ceafar.
Cleo. By lea, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Ceafar Parago nagnae:

My man of men.

Char. By your most gracius pardon,
I finge but after you.

Cleo. My Salid dayes,
When I was greene in judgement, cold in blood,
To fay, as I fai'd then. But come,away,
Get me Inke and Paper,
Anthony and Cleopatra.

he shall have every day a funeral greeting, or Ie vpeopeople Egypt.

\begin{verse}
Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas, in marlike manner.
\end{verse}

\begin{verse}
\text{Pom.} If the great Gods be iu, they shall affist
The deeds of list oft men.
\end{verse}

\begin{verse}
\text{Men.} Know worthy Pompey, that what they do delay, they not deny.
\end{verse}

\begin{verse}
\text{Pom.} While we are futors to their Throne, decays the thing we for.
\end{verse}

\begin{verse}
\text{Men.} We ignorant of our selves,
Begge often our owne harmase, which the wise Powres
Deny vs for our good: so finde we profit
By looking of our Prayers.
\end{verse}

\begin{verse}
\text{Pom.} I shall do well:
The people loue me, and the Sea is mine;
My powers are Crefent, and my Auguring hope
Says it will come to th:full. \textit{Mars} \textit{Anthony}
\end{verse}

\begin{verse}
In Egypt fits at dinner, and will make
No warret without doores. \textit{Caesar} gets money where
He loothes hearts: \textit{Lepidus} flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd: but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.
\textit{Men.} \textit{Caesar} and \textit{Lepidus} are in the field,
\text{A mighty strength they carry.}
\text{Pom.} Where haue you this? 'Tis faire.
\text{Men.} From \textit{Silius}, Sir.
\text{Pom.} He dreames: I know they are in Rome together
Looking for \textit{Anthony}: but all the charmes of Loue,
\text{Cleopatra} ashen thy wand lip,
Let Witchcraft joyne with Beauty, Leau with both,
Tye vp the Libedone in a field of Peafe,
Kerce his Braine fuming. Epicurean Cookes,
Sharpen with cloyleffe fawce his Appetite,
That fiefe and feeding may prouoke his Honour,
\text{Even till a Lethled daufine}——
\text{Enter \textit{Varrius}.}
\end{verse}

\begin{verse}
\textbf{How now \textit{Varrius}!}
\textit{Var.} This is moft certaine, that I shall deliver:
\textit{Cleopatra} is evry hour in Rome
\text{Expected. Since he went from Egypt, 'tis}
\text{A fpace for farther Trauail.}
\text{Pom.} I could have given leffe matter
\text{A better care. \textit{Menas}, I did not think
This amorous Surfeter would haue donn'd his Helme
For such a petty Warre \textit{HIs Souldeirship}
Is twice the other twaine: but let vs reare
The higher our Opinion, that our flirring
Can from the lap of Egypt Widdow, plucke
The neere Luft-weared \textit{Anthony}.
\textit{Menas.} I cannot hope,
\textit{Caesar} and \textit{Anthony} shall well greet together;
\text{His Wife that's dead, did trefpaffes to \textit{Caesar},
His Brother wan'd vpon him, although I thinke
Not moud by \textit{Anthony}}
\text{Pom.} I know not \textit{Menas},
\text{How leffer Enmities may give way to greater,
Were't not that we stand vp against them all:
'Twas pregnant they should square between themselues,
\text{For they have enternained caufe enough
To draw their swords: but how the feare of vs
May Ciment their diuisions, and binde vs
The petty difference, we yet not know:
Bee't as our Gods will haue't; it onely stands
Our lines, to vfe our strengthfull hands
\text{Come \textit{Menas}.}
\textbf{Exeunt.}
\end{verse}

\begin{verse}
\textit{Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.}
\textit{Lep.} \textit{Good Enobarbus}, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to intreat your Captain
To soft and gentle speeche.
\textit{Enob.} I shall intreat him
\text{To answer like himslfe: if \textit{Caesar} moue him,
Let \textit{Anthony} looke ouer \textit{Caesar's} head,
And speake as lowd as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of \textit{Anthony's} Beard,
I would not haue't to day.
\textit{Lep.} 'Tis no tyme for private fomackinge.
\text{Eno.} Every time feres for the matter that is then borne in.'t
\textit{Lep.} But small to greater matters muft glue way.
\textit{Eno.} Not if the small come firft.
\textit{Lep.} Your Speeche is paffion: but pray you flire
No Ember vp. Herece comes the Noble \textit{Anthony.}
\textbf{Enter Anthony and \textit{Vendidius,} \textit{Eno.} And yonder \textit{Caesar.}
\textit{Enter \textit{Caesar, Mecenas}, and \textit{Agrippa.}}
\textit{Ant.} If we compole well heere, to Parthia
\textit{Heare} \textit{Vendidius.}
\textit{Caesar.} I do not know \textit{Mecenas}, aske \textit{Agrippa.}
\textit{Lep.} Noble Friends:
That which combin'd vs was most great,and let not
A leafer action rend vs. What's amiffe,
May it be gently heard. When we debate
Our trivall difference loud, we do commit
Murther in healing wounds. Then Noble Partners,
The rather for I earneftly befeech,
Touch you the fowreft points with fweeteft tearmes,
Nor curtnesse grow to'th matter.
\textit{Ant.} 'Tis spoken well:
\text{Were we before our Armies, and to fight,}
I should do thus,
\textit{Caef. Welcome to Rome.}
\textit{Ant.} Thanke you.
\textit{Caef. Sit.}
\textit{Ant.} Sit fir.
\textit{Caef. Nay then.}
\textit{Ant.} I learn, you take things ill, which are not fo:
Or being,concerne you not.
\textit{Caef.} I must be laught at, if or for nothing, or a little, I Should lay my felfe offended, and with you
Chiefely i'th'world. More laught at,that I should Once name you derogaty: when to found your name
It not concern'd me.
\textit{Ant.} My being in Egypt \textit{Caesar,} what was't to you?
\textit{Caef.} No more then my redding here at Rome
Mighte to be you in Egypt yet if you there
Did praife on my State,your being in Egypt
Might be my quefition.
\textit{Ant.} How intend you, praifie'd?
\textit{Caef.} You may be pleade to cauch at mine intent,
By what did heere before me. Your Wife and Brother
Made warres vpon me, and their conftellation
\text{Was Theame for you, you were the word of warre.}
\textit{Ant.} You do mistake your bulines, my Brother never Did wrege me in his \textit{Ae}. I did inquire it,
And haue my Learning from some true reports
That drew their warres with you, did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the warres alike against my flamacke,
Healing alike your caufe. Of this, my Letters
Before did fatisie you. If you'll patch a quarrel,
As matter whole you have to make it with,
It must not be with this.

Ces. You praise your felts, by laying defects of judgement to me: but you patch vp your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so.

I know you could not lacke, I am certaine on't.

Very necessary of this thought, that I
Your Partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with gracefull eyes attend those Warses
Which fronted mine owne peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit, in such another,
The third oth'world is yours, which with a Snaffle,
You may packe easie, but not such a wife.

Enob. We would had all such wives, that the men might goe to Warses with the women.

Ant. So much vncurable, her Garbolles (Cesur)
Made out of her impatience: which not wanted
Shredenuffle of police to: I greuing grant,
Did you too much disquiet, for that you must,
But say I could not helpe it.

Cesur. I wrote to you, when rioting in Alexandria you
Did pocket vp my Letters and with taunts
Did give my Miinue out of audience.

Ant. Siq, he fell vpon me, ere admitted, then:
Three Kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i'th'morning: but next day
I told him of my felte, which was as much
As to have askt him pardon. Let this Fellow
Be nothing of our strife: if we contend
Out of our question wipe him.

Cesur. You have broken the Article of your oath, which you shall never have tongue to charge me with.

Ant. No Lepidus, let him speake,
The Honour is Sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lackt it: but on Cesur,
The Article of my oath.

Cesur. To lend me Armes, and aide when I requir'd them, the which you both denied.

Ant. Neglect'd rather:
And then when dayoned hours had bound me vp
From mine owne knowledge, as neere as I may,
He play the penitent to you. But mine honesty,
Shall not make my greatnesse, nor my power
Workes without it. Truth is, that Fuhis,
To haue me out of Egypt, made Warses heere,
For which my felte, the ignorant motive, do
So farre ask pardon, as befits mine Honour
To shew in such a cafe.

Lep. 'Tis Noble speake.

Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefes betweene you: to forget them quite,
Were to remember: that the present neede,
Speake to the point you.

Lep. Worthily spoken Mecenas.

Enob. Or if you borrow one another Louse for the infant, you may when you heare no more words of Pompey return it againe: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a Souldier, one speake no more.

Enob. That truth should be fakely, I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this prudence, therefore speake no
more.

Enob. Go too then: your Confrater die.

Cesur. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speche: for'nt cannot be,

We shall remaine in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their aets. Yet if I knew,
What Hoope should hold vs from touch from edge to edge
At b'world I would perfie it.

Agri. Glue me leave Cesur.

Cesur. Speake Agrippa.

Agri. Thou haft a Sitter by the Mothers side, admir'd
O Pharma! Great Mark Anthony is now a widower.

Cesur. Say not, say Agrippa, if Cleopater heard you, your proofs were well defended of rathernelfe.

Ant. I am not marryed Cesur: let me heere Agrippa further speake.

Agri. To hold you in perpetuall amitie,
To make you Brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an vn-flipping knot, take Anthony,
O Fenalia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worfe a husband then the best of men: whose Vertue, and whose generall graces, speake
That which none else can vttre. By this marriage,
All little leiuces which now feeme great,
And all great feares, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing. Truth's would be tales,
Where now halfe tales be truth's: her loue to both,
Would each to other, and all loues to both
Draw after her. Pardon what I haue spoke,
For 'tis a fluided not a pretend thought,
By dutie ruminated.

Ant. Will Cesur speake?

Cesur. Not till he heares how Anthony is toucht,
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say Agrippa, be it fo.
To make this good?

Cesur. The power of Cesur,
And his power, vnto Oenalia.

Ant. May I neuer
(To this good purpose, that so fairely thres)
Dremes of impediment: let me haue thy hand
Further this act of Grace: and from this hour,
The heart of Brothers gouerne in our Loues,
And sway our great Deligues.

Cesur. There's my hands:
A Sitter I bequeath you, whom no Brother
Did euer loue so deereely. Let her live
To loyne our kingdomes, and our hearts, and neuer
File off our Loues again.

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst Pompey,
For he hath laid frange courtesies, and great
Of late vpon me. I must thanke him only,
Leaf my remembrance, fuffer ill report:
At heele of that, defie him.

Lep. Time calls vp our,
Of vs must Pompey prefently be sought,
Or else he fecke us vs.

Ant. Where lies he?

Cesur. About the Mount-Mefena.

Ant. What is his strengthe by land?

Cesur. Great, and encreasing:
But by Sea he is an abolute Master.

Ant. So is the Fame,
Would we had spoke together. Haft we for it,
Yet ere we put our felues in Armes, dispatch we
The businesse we have talked of.

Cesur. With most gladsness,
And do invite you to my Sisters view,
Anthony and Cleopatra.

347

Whether outright Ie lead you.

Amb. Let vs Lepidus not lacke your companie.

Lep. Noble Anthony, no ticknesse should detaine me.

Flourish. Exit omnes.

Manip. Enter Enobarbus, Agrippa, Macenas.

Mac. Welcome from Egypt Sir.

Agrip. Good Enobarbus.

Mac. We haue cause to be glad, that matters are so well disjoged: you staid well by in Egypt.

Eno. I Sir, we did sleep each day out of countenonce: and made the night light with drinking.

Mac. Eight Wild-boares rostret whole at a breakfast: and but twelve persons there. Is this true?

Eno. This was but as a Flye by an Eagle:we had much more monstruous matter of Feast, which worthly defender noting.

Manus. She's a most triumphant Lady, if report be true to her.

Eno. When the first met Mark Anthony, she purf vp his heart upon the River of Sidins.

Agrip. There she appear'd indeed: or my reporter deuis'd well for her.

Eno. I will tell you, The Barge she fat in, like a burnight Throne Burnt on the water: the Poope was beaten Gold, Purple the Salies and so perfumed that The Windes were Love-fickes. With them the Owers were Silues, Which to the tune of Flutes kept frotke, and made The water which they beate, to follow faster, As amorous of their frothes. For her owne person, It begger'd all description, she did liye In her Pavillion, cloth of Gold, of Tiffins, O're- picturing that Venus, where we fee The fancie out-worke Nature. On each side her, Stood pretty Dimpled Boyes, like smiling Cupids, With divers couleur'd Fannes whole winde did fieme, To glome the delicate cheekes which they did coole, And what they vndid did.

Agrip. Oh rare for Anthony.

Eno. Her Gentlewoman, like the Nereides, So many Mermaids tended her i'th'eyes, And made their bands adorning. At the Helme, A creening Mermaidsteeres: The Silken Tackle, Swell with the touches of thofe: Flower-soft hands, That yarely frame the office. From the Barge A strange invisible perfume hits the sense Of the adjacent Wharres. The City caft Her people out upon her: and Anthony Entiron'd i'th'Market-place, did fit alone, Whilst huffing to'th'ayre: which but for vacance, Had gone to gaze on Cleopater too, And made a gap in Nature.

Agri. Rare Egyptian.

Eno. Upon her landing, Anthony sent to her, Invited her to Supper: she replyed, It should be better, he became her guest: Which she entreated, our Courteous Anthony, Whom were the word of no woman hard speake, Being harden'd ten times o're, goes to the Feast; And for his ordinary, pales his heart, For what his eyes eate onely.

Agri. Royall Wench:

She made great Cesar lay his Sword to bed, He ploughed her, and the cropt.

Eno. I saw her once.

Hap forty Paces through the publicke streets, And hailing loft her breath, she spake, and parted, That she did make defect, perfection, And breathlesse powre breath forth.

Mac. Now Anthony, must leave her vterly.

Eno. Neuer he will not:

Age cannot wither her, nor custome flake Her infinite variety: other women cloy The appetites they feede, but she makes hungry, Where moft she satisfies. For visdest things Become themselfes in her, that the holy Priests a Bifhef her, when she is Ridg'd.

Mac. If Beauty, Wifedome, Modesty, can fett le The heart of Anthony 60tania is A blemished Lottery to him.

Agrip. Let vs go. Good Enobarbus, make your selfe my guett, whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly Sir I thank you.

Enter Anthony, Cesar, Oetania beween them.

Antb. The world, and my great office, will Sometimes deside me from your boosome.

Oet. All which time, before the Gods my knee shall bowe my poyers to them for you.

Antb. Goodnight Sir. My Oetania

Read not my blemishes in the worlds report: I have not kept my square, but that to come Shall all be done byth'Rule: good night deere Lady: Good night Sir.

Cesar. Goodnight.

Enter Soothsayer.

Antb. Now sirr: you do with your selfe in Egypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither.

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I fee it in my motion shawe it not in my tongue, But yet hie you to Egypt againe.

Antb. Say to me, whose Fortunes shall rise higher Cefars or mine?

Sooth. Cefars. Therefore (oh Anthony)stay not by his side Thy Demon that thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, Courageous, high vnmatchable, Where Cefars is not. But neere him, thy Angell Becomes a feare: as being o're-pow'r'd, therefore Make space enough betwene you.

Antb. Speake this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee no more but: when to thee, If thou dost play with him at any game, Those art fure to looke: And of that Naturall lucke, He beats thee 'gainst the odds. Thy Lutter thickens, When he shines by: I say againe, thy spirit Is all afraid to gouerne thee neere him: But he alway 'ts Noble.

Antb. Get thee gone:

Say to Ventiius I would speake with him. Exit.

He shall to Parthia, be it Art or hap, He hath spoken true. The very Dice obey him, And in our spors my better cunning faile, Yield his chance, if we draw lots he speakes, His Cockes do winne the Battale, full of mine, When it is all to naught: and his Quales cuer Beate mine (in hoopt) at odd's. I will to Egypt:

And
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
The first my pleasure lies. Oh come Ventigius!
Exit Ventigius.
You must to Parthia, your Commissions ready:
Follow me, and recite.

Enter Lepidus, Marcus and Agrrippa.

Lepidus. Trouble your feloves no further; pray you haften your Generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony will e'en but kiffe Octavia, and weele follow.

Lepi. Till I shall fee you in your Souldiers dreffe,
Which will become you both: Farewell.

Ere. We shall i' as concilise the journey, be at Mount before you Lepidus.

Lepi. Your way is shorter, my purpos do draw me much about, you'll win two dayes vpon me.

Bish. Sir good successe.

Lepi. Farewell.

Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iren, and Alcetas.

Cleo. Give me some Musick; Musick, moody foode of vs that trade in Loue.

Omnus. The Musick, hos.

Enter Mardian the Eunuch.

Cleo. Let it alone, let's to Billards: come Charmian.

Char. My armes are fore, best play with Mardian.

Cleopa. As well a woman with an Eunuch plaidse, as with a woman. Come you play with me Sir?

Mardi. As well as I can Madam.

Cleo. And when good will is shewed,
Thought't come to short
The Actor may please pardon. Ile none now,
Give me mine Angle, weeke to'th'Ricer there
My Musick playing faire off. I will betray
Tawny fine finnes, my bended hooke thall pierce
Their finny lawes: and as I draw them vp,
Ie think he them every one an Anthony,
And saies, ah sayse are caught.

Char. 'Twas merry when you wager'd on your Anglings, when your diuer did hang a fait fishe on his hooke which he with feruence drew vp.

Cleo. That time? Oh times:
I laught him out of patience: and that night
I laught him into patience, and next morne,
Ere the ninth hours, I drunke him to his bed:
Then put my Tires and Mantles on him, whilst
I wore his Sword Phillippan. Oh from Italie,

Enter a Messinger.

Ramme thou thy fruitfull tides in mine eares,
That long time have bin barren.

O Mer. Madam, Madam.

Cleo. Anthony's dead,
If thou saie to Villaine, thou kilt thy Mithria:
But well and free, if thou saie yeld him.
There is Gold, and heere
My bleeuen valnes to kiffe: a hand that Kings
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

Mef. Frist Madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why there's more Gold.
But arras markes, we vie
To say, the dead are well; bring it to that,
The Gold I give thee, will I melt and pow'r
Downe thy ill vettering throate.

Mef. Good Madam heare me.

Cleo. Well, go too I will:
But there's no goodneffe in thy face if Anthony
Be free and healthful, so tart a favour.
To trumpet such good tides, if I not well,
Thou shoul'dt come like a Furie crown'd with Snaakes,
Not like a formill man.

Mef. Wilt please you hare me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speakeft:
Yet if thou say Anthony lives, 'tis well,
Or friends with Cæsar, or not Captue to him,
Ile fet thee in a flower of Gold, and haile
Rich Pearles vpon thee.

O Mer. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mef. And Friends with Cæsar.

Cleo. Th'art an honest man.

Mef. Cæsar, and he, are greater Friends then cuer,

Cleo. Make thee a Fortune from me.

Mef. But yet Madam.

Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does alay
The good precedeuce, fie vpon but yet,
Bur yet is as a Taylor to bring forth
Some monstrous Malefactor. Prythee Friend,
Poure out the packe of matter to mine eare,
The good and bad together: he's Friends with Cæsar,
In state of heal th thou faife, and thou faife, free,

Mef. Free Madam, no: I made no fuch report,
He's bound into Octavia.
Cleo. For what good turne?
Mef. For the best turne I th'bed.
Cleo. I am pale Charmian.

Mef. Madam, he's married to Octavia.
Cleo. The most infectious Pestilence vpon thee.

Strikes him downe.

Mef. Good Madam patience.
Cleo. What say you?

Stikes him.

Hence horrible Villaine, or Ile furtle thine eyes
Like balls before me: Ile vnhaire thy head,

She bales him vp and downe.

Thou shalt be whipt with Wyer, and strew'd in brine,
Smearing in lingering pickle.

Mef. Gratious Madam,

I that do bring the newes, made not the match.
Cleo. Say 'ts not so, a Prouince I will give thee,
And make thy Fortunes proud: the blow thou had'lt
Shall make thy peace, for mouing me to rage,
And I will boote thee with what guilt beffe
Thy modestie can begge.

Mef. He's married Madam.
Cleo. Rogh, thou haft liid too long.

Draw a knife.

Mef. Nay then Ile runne:
What meanes you Madam, I haue made no fault.
Exit.

Cleo. Good Madam keepe your felle within your felle,
The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some Innocents feape not the thunderbolt:
Melt Egypt into Nyle: and kindly creatures
Turne all to Serpents. Call the faue againe,
Though I am mad, I will not bite him.

Char. He is afraid to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him,
These hands do lacke Nobility, that they strike
A meaner then my felle: since I my felle
Hau'e given my felle the caufe. Come hither Sir.

Enter the Meffinger againe.

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad newes: give to a grattious Meffige

An
Anthony and Cleopatra.

An hoft of tongues, but let ill tydings tell
Themselfes, when they be felt.
Mef. I have done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worser then I do,
If thou againe say yes.
Mef. He's married Madam.
Cleo. The Gods confound thee,
Dost thou hold there still?
Mef. Should I lye Madame?
Cleo. Oh, I would thou didst
So halfe my Egypt were fumbrigu'd and made
A Ceterne for ica'd Snakes. Go get thee hence,
Had't thou Narcissus in thy face to me,
Thou would't appeare most vgly: He is married?
Mef. I crave your Highniffe pardon.
Cleo. He is married?
Mef. Take no offence, that I would not offended you,
To punnith me for what you make me do
Seemes much vaulell, he's married to Octavia.
Cleo. Oh that his fault should make a knave of thee,
That is not what this fortune of. Get thee hence,
The Marchandize which thou haft brought from Rome
Are all too deere for me
Lye they upon thy hand, and be vndone by em.
Char. Good your Highniffe patience.
Cleo. In praying Anthony, I have difprais'd Cefar.
Char. Many times Madam.
Cleo. I am pay'd for't now:lead me from hence,
I fain,oh Ira,Charmian t'vgl no matter.
Go to the Fellow, good Alexas bid him
Report the feature of Octavia: her yeares,
Her inclination,let him not leave out
The colour of her haire. Bring me word quickly,
Let him for ever go,let him not Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other wayes a Mars. Bid you Alexas
Bring me word,how tall the is: pitty me Charmian,
But do not speake to me. Lead me to my Chamber.

Exeunt.

Flourishes. Enter Pompey, at one dore with Drum and Trom-doat at another Cefar, Lepidus, Anthony, Enobarbus, Me-

tenas, Agrippa, Menus with handful Marching.

Pom. Your Hoftages I have,fo have you mine:
And we shall talke when we fight.
Cefar. Mofe meete that first we come to words,
And therefore haue we
Our written purposes before vs fent,
Which if thou haft consider'd,let vs know,
If'twill vye vp thy discontented Sword,
And carry bace to Cicellie much tall youth,
That elle muft perifh heree.

Pom. To you all three;
The Senators alone of this great world,
Chiefes Facters for the Gods. I do not know,
Wherefore my Father shou'd reuenger want,
Hauling a Sonne and Friends, since Iulius Cefar,
Who at Philiippa the good Brutus ghofted,
There few you labouring for him. What was't
That most pale Caffine to confide? And what Made all-honor'd, honest, Romaine Brutus,
With the arm'd rell, Courtiers of beauteous freedome,
To drench the Capitol, but that they would Hau one man but a man, and that his it
Hath made me rigge my Name. At whom burthen,
The anger'd Ocean fomes, with which I meant
To scourge th'ingratitude, that desightfull Rome
Cift on my Noble Father.
Cefar. Take your time.
Ant. Thou can't not feare vs Pompey with thy falles.
Wole speake with thee at Sea. At land thou know't
How much we do o're-count thee.
Pom. At Land indeed
Thou doft orcount me of my Fathers house:
But since the Cuckoo buildes not for himselfe,
Remaine in't as thou mult.
Lep. Be pleas'd to tell vs,
(For this is from the presend how you take)
The offers we have fent you.
Cefar. There's the point.
Ant. Which do not be entretouced too,
But wagh what it is worth imbrac'd
Cefar. And what may follow to try a larger Fortune.
Pom. You have made me offer
Of Cicellie,Sardinia; and I must Rid all the Sea of Pirats. Then, to send Meaures of Wheate to Rome this greed vpon,
To part with unhacket edges, and beare backe
Our Targes vndinted.

Owen. That's our offer.
Pom. Know then I came before you heere,
A man prepar'd
To take this offer. But Mark Anthony,
Put me to some impatience: though I looke
The praife of it by telling. You must know
When Cefar and your Brother were at blowes,
Your Mother came to Cicellie, and did finde
Her welcome Friendly.
Ant. I have heard it Pompey,
And am well studied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.
Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not thinke Sir, to have met you heere,
Ant. The beds the East are soft, and thanks to you,
That cal'd me timelayer then my purpose hither:
For I have gained by't.
Cefar. Since I saw you laft, ther's a change vpon you.
Pom. Well, I know not,
What counts harsh Fortune ca'ts vpon my face,
But in my lotome shall the newer come,
To make my heart her vaffile.
Lep. Well met heere.
Pom. I hope to Lepidus, thus we are agreed:
I craze our componisme may be written
And feal'd betweene vs.
Cefar. That's the next to do.
Pom. Weele feafe each other, ere we part, and lett's
Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I Pompey.
Pompey. No Anthony take the lot: but firft or laft, your fine Egyptian cookerie shall have the fame, I have heard that Iulius Cefar, grew fat with feasting there.

Anth. You have heard much.
Pom. I have faire meaning Sir.
Ant. And faire words to them.
Pom. Then so much have I heard,
And I have heard Appolodorus carried

End. No more that : he did so.
Pom. What I pray you?
End. A certaine Queene to Cefar in a Matris.
Pom. I know thee now, how far't thou Souldier?
End. Well, and well am like to do, for I perceive

Four,
The Tragedie of

Enter two or three Servants with a Banquet.

1. Here they'll be man: some o'th'other Plants are ill rooted already, the least winde i'th'world will blow them downe.

2. Lepidus is high Conlord.

1. They have made him drinke Almes drinke.

2. As they pinch one another by the disposition, hee cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entreatie, and himselfe to'th'drink.'

1. But it raise the greater warre betweene him & his discretion.

2. Why this it is to have a name in great mens Fellowship: I had as I suue have a Reede that will doe me no service, as a Partizan I could not heaue.

1. To be call'd into a huge Sphere, and not to be feene to moue in't, are the holes where eyes should bee, which pitifully disfalter the cheeks.

A Senet founded.

Enter Cæsar, Anthony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecenas, Enobarbus, Menes, with other Captaines.

Ant. Thus do they Sir: they take the flow o'th'Nyle
By certaine scales i'th'Pyramid: they know By'th'height, the lowneffe, or the meane: If deaeth Or Foison follow. The higher Nius feels,
The more it promiseth: as it ebbes, the Seedman Vpon the ilme and Ooze flatters his graine,
And shortly comes to Harued.

Lep. Y'have frange Serpents there?

Anth. I Lepidus.

Lep. Your Serpent of Egypt, is bred now of your mud by the operation of your Sun: so is your Crocodile.

Ant. They are fo.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be:
But Ile ne're out.

Emb. Not till you have flept: I feare you'll bee in till then.

Lep. Nay certainly, I have heard the Prisomies Pyramids are very goodly things: without contradiction I have heard that.

Menes. Pompey, a word.

Pomp. Say in mine ears, what is't.

Men. Forfake thy scate I do believe thee Captaine,
And heare me speake a word.

Pom. Forbearce me till anon. Wiskiers in't Ear.

This Wine for Lepidus.

Lead. What manner o'thing is your Crocodile?

Ant. It is sharp'd fir like it fell in, and it is as broad as it hath breath; it is soe high as it is, and moues with it owne organs. It liues by that which nourisfheth it, and the Elements once out of it, it Transmigrates.

Lept. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of it owne colour too.

Lept. 'Tis a strange Serpent.

Ant. 'Tis fo, and the tears of it are wet.

Cæf. Will this description false him?

Ant. With the Health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very Epicure.

Pomp. Go hang fir, hang: tell me of that? Away:
Do as I bid you. Where's this Cup I call'd for?

Men. If the fake of Merit thou wile heare mee,

Mysick plays.

Foure Feasts are toward,

Pom. Let me flake thy hand,
I never hated thee: I have feehe thee fight,
When I have enuied thy behaviour.

Emb. Sir, I never lou'd you much, but I ha'prais'd ye,
When you have well defer'd ten times as much,
As I haue fai'd you did,

Pom. Injoy thy plainnesse,
It nothing ill becomes thee:

Aboord my Gally, I intraue you all.
Will you leade Lords?

All. Shew's the way, sir.

Men. Thy Father Pompey would we're have made this Treaty. You, and I haue knowne fir.

Emb. At Sea, I thinke.

Men. We haue Sir.

Emb. You haue done well by water.

Men. And you by Land.

Emb. If I will praife any man that will praife me, thogh it cannot be denied what I haue done by Land.

Men. Nor what I haue done by water.

Emb. Yes some-thing you can deny for your owne safety: you haue bin a great Theefe by Sea,

Men. And you by Land.

Emb. There I deny my Land servise: but glue mee your hand Menas, if our eyes had authority, heere they might take two Theeues kiffing.

Men. All mens faces are true, what more their hands are.

Emb. But there is never a fayre Woman, ha'a true Face.

Men. No fandler, they steale hearts.

Emb. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am forry it is turn'd to a Drink:
Pompey doth this day laugh away his Fortune.

Emb. If he do, sure he cannot weep backe again.

Men. Y'have fai'd Sir, we look'd not for Mark Anthony heere, pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Emb. Cæsar's Sitter is call'd Othania.

Men. True Sir, she was the wife of Cais Marcellus.

Emb. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray'ye Sir.

Emb. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Cæsar and he, for ever knit together.

Emb. If I were bound to Diuine of this vnity, I wold not Prophesy for.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose, made more in the Marriage, then the loue of the partes.

Emb. I thinke fo too. But you shall finde the hand that feemes to yee their friendship together, will bee the very strangler of their Amity: Othania is of a holy, cold, and still convocation.

Men. Who would not haue his wife fo?

Emb. Not he that himselfe is not fo: which is Mark Anthony; he will to his Egyptian dish againe: then shall the fighes of Othania blow the fire vp in Cæsar, and (as I fai'd before) that which is the strenght of their Amity, shall proue the immediate Author of their variances. Anthony will vfe his afflication where it is. Hee married but his occasion heere.

Men. And thus it may be. Come Sir, will you aboord?
I haue a health for you.

Emb. I shall take it fir: we haue vs'd our Throats in Egypt.

Anthony and Cleopatra.

Rise from thy flooe.

\textbf{Pom.} I think th'art mad: the matter?

\textbf{Men.} I have euer held my cap off to thy Fortunes.

\textbf{Pom.} Thou hast serv'd me with much faith: what's \textbf{Men.} His strong fides can volly.

\textbf{Musick Playes.} Enobarbus places them hand in hand.

\textbf{The Song.}

Come thou Monarch of the Pits,

Plumpie Bacchus, with pinte syme:

In thy Fettes our Carees be drown'd,

With thy Grapes our hairs be Crown'd.

Cap ye till the world go round,

Cap ye till the world go round.

\textbf{Ceasar.} What would you more?

\textbf{Pompey} goodnight. Good Brother

Let me requell of you our grauer businesse

Frownes at this louesse. If thou don't, it's part,

You see we have burnt our cheekes. Strong Enobarbus

Is weaker then the Wine, and mine owne tongue

Spleet's what it speakes: the wilde diffique hath almost Antick vs all. What needs more words? goodnight.

\textbf{Good Anthony your hand.}

\textbf{Pom.} Ile try you on no shooe.

\textbf{Anth.} And shall Sir, gives your hand.

\textbf{Pom.} Oh Anthony, you have my Father house.

But what, are we Friends?

Come downe into the Boate.

\textbf{Eno.} Take heed you fall not Menas: Ile not on shore,

No to my Cabin: these Drummes,

Thefe Trumpets, Flutes: what

Let Neptune hear, we bid aloud farewell

To thefe great Fellowes. Sound and be hang'd, found out.

\textbf{Men.} Sound a Flourish with Drummes.

\textbf{Eto.} Hoo styls a there's my Cap.

\textbf{Men.} Hoa, Noble Captaine, come.

\textbf{Exeunt.}

\textbf{Enter} Ventidius as it were in triumph, the dead body of Paciorunt borne before him.

\textbf{Ven.} Now darching Parthy a art thou stroke, and now

Pleas'd Fortune does of Marcus Gratius death

Make me reuenger. Bear the Kings Sonnes body,

Before our Army thy Pacorus Orades,

Pales this for Marcus Gratius.

\textbf{Remains.} Noble Ventidius,

Whil't yet with Parthian blood thy Sword is warme,

The Fugiue Parthians follow. Spreare through Media,

Mesopotamia, and the shelters, whether

The routed fic. So thy grand Captaine Anthony

Shall set thee on triumph Charliots, and Put Garlands on thy head.

\textbf{Ven.} Oh Sillus, Sillus,

I have done enough. Alower place note well

May make too great an aet. For learene this Sillus

Better to leave vndone, then by our deet

Acquire too high a Fame, when him we ferues away,

\textbf{Ceasar} and \textbf{Anthony}, haue euer wonne

More in their officer, then perfen. Sillus

One of my place in Syria, his Lieutenant,

For quicke accumulation of renowne,

Which he sthil'd by th'milme, lovt his fauor.

Who does 1th'Warres more then his Captaine can,

Becomes his Captaines Captaine: and A mission

(The Souldiers vertue)therer makes choifié of loffe

Then gains, which darkens him.

I could do more to do \textit{Antonius} good,

But 'tould offend him. And in his offence,
The Tragedie of

Should my performance perish.

Rom. Thou hast Verdiun that, without the which a Souldier and his Sword granteus feare slaine: thou wilt write to Antony.

Via. Ilc humbly signifie what in his name,
That magicall word of Warre we have effected,
How with his Banners, and his well paid ranks,
The newe-yet beaten Horfe of Parthia,
We have laid out oth Field.

Rom. Where is he now?

Via. He purpofeth to Athens, whither with what haft
The weight we must convey with's, will permit
We shall appear before him. On there,praye along.

Enter Agrippa at one door. Enobarb at another.

Agri. What are the Brothers parted?

Eos. They have difpatcht with Pompey, he is gone.

The other three are Sealing. Octavia weeps
To part from Rome: Caesar is fall, and Lepidus
Since Pompey's ftaft, as Menas fays, is troubled
With the Greene-Sickneffe.

Agri. That a Noble Lepidus,

Eos. A very fine one: oh, how he loves Caesar.

Agri. Nay but how deereely he adores Mark Antony.

Ant. What's Antony, the God of Jupiter?

Eos. Spake you of Caesar? How, the non-pareil?

Agri. Oh Antony, oh thou Arabian Bird!

Eos. Would you praffe Caesar, say Caesarigo no further.

Agri. Indeed he plied them both with excellent praiife,

Eos. But he loves Caesar beft,yet he loves Antony:

Hoo, Hearts, Tongues, Figure,
Scribes, Bards, Poet s,cannot Think speake, calth,write,fig, number: hoo,
His lone to Antony. But as for Caesar,
Kneele downe, kneele downe,and wonder,

Agri. Both he loues.

Eos. They are his Shards, and he their Beetle,fo:
This is to horfe: Adieu, Noble Agrippa.

Agri. Good Fortune worthy Souldeer, and farewell.

Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Ant. No further Sir.

Caesar. You take from me a great part of my felde:
Vfe me well in'. Sifer, proue fuch a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my fartheft Band
Shall proue to thine approves: most Noble Antony,
Let not the peece of Vertup which is fet
Betwixt vs, as the Cyment of our love
To keepe it builded, be the Ramme to batter
The Fortrefse of It:for better might we Have lou'd without this meane, if on both parts
This be not cherifht.

Ant. Make me not offenfod,in your diftruit.

Caesar. I have said.

Ant. You shall not finde,

Though you be therein curious, the left caufe
For what you leave to feare,So the Gods keepe you,
And make the hearts of Romaines versus your ends:
We will heare part.

Caesar. Farewell my deereft Sifer,fare thee well,
The Elements be kind to thee, and make
Thy sprits all of comfort fare thee well.

Oct. My Noble Brother,

Ant. The Apirl's in her eyes, it is Loues spring,
And thefe the fowers to bring it on : be cheerfull.

Octa. Sir, looke well to my Husbands houfe: and——

Caesar. What Octavia?

Octa. This well you in your care.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart informe her tougue.

The Swannes downe feather
That flands upon the Swell at the full of Tide:
And neither way inclines.

Eos. Will Caesar wepe?

Agr. He ha's a cloud in's face.

Eos. He were the worfe for that were he a Horfe,fo is he being alman.

Agr. Why Enobarbus:

When Antony found Iulius Caesar dead,
He cried almoft to roaing: And he wept,
When at Phillippi he found Brutus Blaine.

Eos. That yarrounded, he was troubled with a rheume,
What willingly he did confound, he wall'd,
Believe't till I wepe too.

Caesar. No sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still: the time shall not
Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come Sir, come,
He wrangle with you in my strengh of loue,
Look'e here I have you, thus I let you go,
And give you to the Gods.

Caesar. Adieu, be happy.

Lep. Let all the number of the Starres glue light
To thy faire way.

Caesar. Farewell,farewell.

Kiffis Octavia.

Ant. Farewell. Trumpet found.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexias.

Cleo. Where is the Fellow?

Alex. Halfe afraid to come.

Cleo. Go to, go too: Come hither Sir.

Enters the Messinger as before.

Alex. Good Maleftie: Herod of Iury dare not looke vpon you, but when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head, I heue: but how? When Antony is gone, through whom I might command it:
Come thou nowere.

Mof. Most gratious Maleftie.

Cleo. Did'th thou behold Octavia?

Mof. I dread Queene.

Cleo. Where?

Mof. My selfe in Rome, I lookt her in the face: and saw her fed between her Brother, and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mof. She is not Madam.

Cleo. Didst heare her speake?

Is the thrill tongu'd or low?

Mof. Madam, I heard her speake, she is low voic'd.

Cleo. That's not fo good: he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her? Ob I'fa: 'tis imposible.

Cleo. I thinke to Charmian dull of tongue, & dwarfish
What Maleftie is in her gate, remember
If ever thou lockt on Malefie.

Mof. She creepeth motion, & her fation are as one:
She flaves a body, rather then a life,
A Statue, then a Breather.

Cleo. Is this certaine?

Mof. Or I have no observer.

Cleo. Three in Egypt cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing, I do perceiue,
There's nothing in her yet.

The
The Fellow ha's good judgement.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guelfe at her yeares, I prythee.

Meff. Madam, she was a widower.

Meff. And I do thinke she's thirte.

Cleo. Bear't thou her face in mind? is't long or round?

Meff. Round, even to faultiness.

Cleo. For the most part too, they are foolish that are so. Her hair what color?

Meff. Browne Madam: and her forehead
As low as she would wish it.

Cleo. There's Gold for thee,
Thou must not take my former harpeneffe ill,
I will employ thee backe againe: I finde thee
Most fit for businesse. Go, make thee ready,
Our Letters are prepar'd.

Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed he is so: I repent me much
That so I harried him. Why me think's he by this,
This Createion, too.

Char. Nothing Madam,
Cleo. The man hath seene some Malefty, and shold
know.

Char. Hath he seene Malefity? I'ts elfe defend: and verifying you so long.

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet good Charmian: but 'tis no matter, thou shalt bring him to me where I will write; all may be well enough.

Char. I warrant you Madam.

Char. Enter Anthony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay Oztania, not one that,
That were excusable, that and thousand's more
Of feamebllable import, but he hath wag'd
New Warres'gainst Pompej. Made his will, and read it,
To publicke eye, spoke kantly of me,
When perforce he could not
But pay me treames of Honour: cold and sickly
He vented then most narrow measurespelt,
When the best hint was given him: he not look't,
Or did it from his teeth.

Oztania. Oh my good Lord,
Believe not all, or if you must believe,
Stomacke not all. A more vnhappie Lady,
If this defuion chance, he're flood betwenee
Praying for both parts :
The good Gods wil mocke me presently,
When I shall pray'Oh bleffe my Lord, and Husband,
Vndo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
Oh bleffe my Brother. Husband winne, winne Brother,
Prayes, and destroyes the prayer, no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Oztania,
Let your bite lost draw to that point which seek's
Bett to preferre it: if I loafe mine Honour,
I loose my selfe: better I were not yours
Then your fo branchifie. But as you requested,
Your selfle fall go between, the meane time Lady,
He rife from the preparation of a Warre,
Shall daie your Brother, make your sooneft haft,
So your defires are yours.

Ozt. Thanks to my Lord,
The love of power make me most weake, most weake,
You reconciler: Warres 'twixt you twaine would be,
As if the world should cleane, and that falie men
Should fodder vp the Rift.

Antb. When it appeares to you where this begins,
Turne your diplifure that way, for our faults
Can never be fo equall, that your lose
Can equally moue with them. Provide your going,
Choose your owne company, and command what call
Your heart he's mind too.

Exeunt.

Enter Embarbas, and Eros.

Eros. How now Friend Eros?

Eros. Ther's strange Newses come Sir.

Eros. What man?

Eros. Cesar & Lepidus haue made warres vpom Pompej.

Eros. This is old, what is the succeffe?

Eros. Cesar hauing made vp of him in the warres
'gainst Pompej: preffently denied him rivalry, would not let him partake in the glory of the action, and not refting here, accuses him of Letters he had formerly wrote to Pompej. Upon his owneappeale ftieres him, to the poore third is vp, till death enlarge his Confine.

Eros. Then would thou hadt a paire of chapau more, and throw betweene them all the food thou haft, they'll grinde the other. When Anthony was Eros. He's walking in the garden thus, and spurnes
The rufh that lies before him. Cries Fole Lepidus,
And threatens the throte of that his Officer,
That murdered Pompej.

Eros. Our great Nautes rig'd.

Eros. For Italy and Cesar, more Domitius,
My Lord desires you prefently: my Newses
I might have told hearafter.

Eros. 'Twill be naught, but let it be, bring me to Anthony.

Eros. Come Sir,

Enter Agrippa, Maecenas, and Cesar.

Cesar. Condemning Rome he ha's done all this, & more
In Alexandria: here's the manner of it:
I'th'Market-place on a Tribunall firuer'd,
Cleopatra and himselfe in Chaires of Gold
Were publickly encom'ed: at the feet, fat
Cesarian whom they call my Fathers Sonne,
And all the vnlawfull iuff, that their Luft
Since then hath made betweene them. Vnto her,
He gave the flabishment of Egypt, made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, abolute Queen.

Meces. This in the publike eye?

Cesar. I'th common fiew place, where they exercife,
His Sonnes hither proclaimed the King of Kings,
Great Media, Parthis, and Armenia
He gau to Alexander. To Ptolomye he aflign'd, Syria, Sylcia, and Phcenetia: the
In th'abillments of the Goddesse Isis
That day appeare'd, and oft before gau audience,
As 'tis reported so.

Meces. Let Rome be thus inform'd.

Agr. Who does he accufe?

Cesar. Cesar, and that hauing in Cicilie
Scaurus Pompeius spoile'd, we had not rated him
His part o'th'life. Then does he say, he lent me
Some shipping vnrefor'd. Lastly, he frets
That Lepidus of the Triumpherates, should be depo'd,
And being that, we detain all his Reuencie.

Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd.

Cesar. 'Tis done already, and the Messenger gone:
I have told him Lepidus was grown too cruelly,

That
That he his high Authority abus'd,
And did defence his change: for what I have conquer'd,
I grant him part: but then in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd Kingdoms, I demand the like Cesar. He'ir never yeild to that.
Ces. Nor must not then be yeelded to in this.
Enter Octavius with her Trains.
Cesar. That ever I should call thee Caft-away.
Oct. You have not call'd me so, nor have you caufe.
Ces. Why haue you royn upon vs thus? you come not Like Cesar Sifer, The wife of Anthony
Should have an Army for an Ither, and
The neigbors of Horfe to tell of her approch,
Long ere the did appeare. The trees by'th'way
Should have borne men, and expecation fainted,
Longing for what it had not. Nay, the duff
Should have affcended to the Roofs of Haueum,
Rai'd by your popular Troopers: But you are come
A Market-maid to Rome, and have presented
The omtentation of our love; which left vnfhewne,
Is often left vnlovd: we should have met you
By Sea, and Land, supplying every Stage
With an augmented gretting.
Oct. Good my Lord,
To come thus was I not confrain'd, but did it
On my free-will. My Lord Mark Anthony,
Hearing that you prepare'd for Warre, acquainted
My greeued care withall: whereon I beg'd
His pardon for returne.
Ces. Which come he granted,
Being an abstract 'twixte his Luft, and him.
Oct. Do not say so, my Lord,
Ces. I haue eyes vp on him,
And his affaires come to me on the windwher is he now?
Cesar. No moft wronged Sifer, Cleopatra
Hath nodded him to her. He hath gien his Empire
Vp to a Whore, who now are leuying
The Kings o'th'earth for Warre. He hath affembled,
Both the King of Lybia, Antitam
Of Cappadocia, to Rome, and have presented
Of Paphgigion: the Thracian King Adulas,
King Maucbus of Arabia, of King of Pont,
Herod of Iewry, Mithridates King
Of Comageat, Polemen and Ammitus,
The Kings of Mado, and
With a more larger Lift of Scepters.
Oct. Aye me molt wretched,
That haue my heart partewtixt two Friends,
That does afflift each other. (breaking forth
Ces.Welcom eithe: your Letters did with-holde our Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong led,
And we in negligent danger: cheere your heart,
Be you not troubled with the time, which driues
Or your content, these strong neceffities,
But let determin'd things to deffine
Hold vnbeaw'd their way. Welcome to Rome, nothting more deere to me: You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought: and the high Gods
To do you Inflince, makes his Minifters
Of vs, and those that love you. Belt of comfort,
And euer welcome to vs. Agrip. Welcome Lady,
Ces. Welcome deere Madam,
Each heart in Rome does love and pitty you,
Onely t'Hational Anthony, molt large
In his abominations, turns you oiff,
And giues his potent Regiment to a Trull
That noyes it against vs.
Oct. Is it to fir?
Ces. Moft certaine: Sifer welcome: pray you
Be euer knowne to patience. My deere Sifer. Exeunt
Enter Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.
Cleo. I will be euen with thee, doubt it not.
Eno. But why, why, why?
Cleo. Thou haft forespeake my being in these warres,
And fay't it is not fit.
Eno. Well is it, is it.
Cleo. If not, decoune'd against vs, why should not we bee there in perfon.
Eno. Well, I could reply: if wee should strue with Horfe and Mares together, the Horfe were morely loft:
the Mares would bee a Solidiour and his Horfe.
Cleo. What is't you fay?
Eno. Your prefence needs moft purle Anthony,
Take from his heart, take from his Braine, from'time,
What shou'd not then be fpar'd. He is already Traduc'd for Leuitu, and 'tis faid in Rome,
That Plotinus an Euchuf, and your Maleus
Mannah this warre.
Cleo. Sinke Rome, and their tonges rot
That speake againft vs. A Charge we bee 'th'Warre,
And as the presdant of my Kingdome will Appeare there for a man. Speake not againft it,
I will not fay behinde.
Enter Anthony and Camilidus.
Cleo. Nay I have done, here comes the Emperor,
Ant. Is it not strange Camilidus,
That from Tarrentum, and Brandufum,
He could fo quickly cut the Ionian Sea,
And take in Troine. You have heard on't (Sweet?)
Cleo. Celefrity is neuer more admir'd,
Then by the negligent.
Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom'd the beft of men.
To taunt at flackneffe. Camilidus, wee
Will fight with him by Sea.
Cleo. By Sea, what els?
Cam. Why will my Lord, do so?
Ant. For that he dares vs too.
Eno. So hath my Lord, dar'd him to finge fight.
Cam. I, and to wage this Battell at Pharalla,
Where Caesar fought with Pompey. But these offeres
Which ferue not for his vantage, he fakes off,
And fo fhou'd you.
Eno. Your Shippe are not well mann'd,
Your Marrisens are Miffiers, Reapers, people
Ingroft by twift Imprefl. In Cefar Fleece,
Are thofe, that often have gaine Pompey fought,
Their shipes are yere, yours heauy: no difgrafce
Shall fall you for refuing him at Sea,
Being prepare'd for Land.
Ant. By Sea, by Sea.
Eno. Moft worthy Sir, you therein throw away
The absolute Soldierhip you haue by Land,
Diftraft your Armie, which doth moft confift
Of Warre-markit-footmen, leaue unexecuted
Your owne renowned knowledge, quite forgoe
The way which promifes affurance, and Gleue vs not to fceler mercy to chance and hazard,
From firme Securite.
Ant. Ile fight at Sea.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Ces. I haue fixty Sailes, Ceasar none better.

Ant. Our ouer-plus of shipping will we burne,
And with the rest full mann'd, from th'head of Action
Beate th'approaching Ceasar. But if we faile,
We then can dot at Land. Enter a Messenger.
Thy Bufinnesse?

Msf. The Newses is true, my Lord, he is defi'd,
Ceasar ha'taken Torgan.

Ant. Can he be there in perfon? 'Tis impossible,
Strange, that his power should be. Camillus,
Our nineteen Legions thou shalt hold by Land,
And our twelve thousand Horfe. We'll to our Ship,
Away my Thes. Enter a Soldier.

How now worthy Soulidier?

Soul. Oh Noble Emperor, do not fight by Sea,
Truft not to rotten planks: Do you misdoubt
This Sword, and thefe my Wounds; let th'Egyptians
And the Phcenicians go a ducking: wee
Have vnd'r to combating fland on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well, away. Exit Ant. Ces. & Enob.

Soul. By Hercules I thinke I am 'tibright.

Cam. Soulidier thou art: but his whole action grows
Not in the power on': fo our Leaders leade,
And we are Womens men.

Soul. You keepe by Land the Legions and the Horfe whole, do you not?

Ven. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Iufius,
Publilia, and Celius, are for Sea:
But we keepe whole by Land. This spede of Ceasars
Carries beyond belief.

Soul. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in fuch diffractions,
As beguile all Spies.

Cam. Who's his Lieutenant, hear ye you?
Soul. They say, one Tuvrus.
Cam. Well, I know the man. Enter a Messenger.

Msf. The Emperor calls Camillus.

Cam. With Newes the times with Labour,
And throws forth each minute, fome. Exeunt

Enter Ceasar with his Army, marching.

Ceas. Tuvrus? Enter Tuvrus?

Tuv. My Lord.

Ceas. Strike not by Land,
Keepe whole, prouneke not Battale
Till we have done at Sea. Do not exceede
The Prefcrpt of this Scoule: Our fortune Iyes
Upon this lympe.

Exit Ceasar, and Enobaras.

Ant. Set we our Squadrions on yond fide o' the Hill,
In eye of Ceasars Battale, from which place
We may the number of the Ships behold,
And fo proceed accordingly.

Exeunt.

Camillus Marcheth with his Land Army one way over the stage,
And Tuvrus the Lieutenant of Ceasar the other way: After their going in, is heard the noise of a Sea fight.

Alarum. Enter Enobaras and Scarsus.

Eno. Naught, naught, naught, I can behold no longer:
Thantonius, the Egyptian Admiral,
With all their fixty fye, and turne the Rudder.

To fo't, mine eyes are blinded.

Enter Scaurus.

Scaur. Gods, & Goddeffes, all the whol synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion.

Scaur. The greater of the形成的 world, is loft
With very ignorne, we haue kiff away
Kingdomes, and Prouinces.

Eno. How appears the Fight?

Scaur. On our fide, like the Token'd Petilence,
Where death is fure. Yon ribundant Nagge of Egypt,
(Whom Leprodie o'take) 1st mifd of o'th fight,
When vantage like a payre of Tinnes appear'd
Both as the fame, or rather ours the elder;
(The Breeze vpon her) like a Cow in Inne,
Holts Sailes, and fyes.

Eno. That I beheld:
Mine eyes did ficken at the fight, and could not
Indure a further view.

Scaur. She once being looft,
The Noble ruine of her Magicke Anthony,
Claps on his Sea-wing, and raines mallard
Leaving the Fight in heighth, fyes after her:
I never faw an Action of fuch fame:
Experience, Man-hood, Honor, ne're before,
Did violate fo it felle.

Enob. Alacke, alacke.

Enter Camillus.

Cam. Our Fortune on the Sea is out of breath,
And finks moft lamentably. Had we our Generall
Bin what he knew himfelfe, it had gone well:
Oh his ha'ts gien example for our flight,
Mouf groffly by his owne.

Enob. I, are you thereabouts? Why then goodnight indeede.

Cam. Toward Peloponnesus are they feld.

Scaur. 'Tis cafe too,
And there I will attend what further comes.

Cam. To Ceasar will I render
My Legions and my Horfe, fixe Kings alreadie
Shew me the way of yelding.

Eno. Ite yet follow
The wounded chance of Anthony, though my reason
Sits in the winde againft me.

Enter Anthony with Attendants.

Ant. Hearke, the Land bids me tread no more vpon's,
It is afam'd to beare me. Friends, come hither,
I am fo lated in the world, that I
Have loft my way for ever. I have a shippne,
Laden with Gold, take that, divide it: flye,
And make your peace with Ceasar.

Ant. I have fied my felfe, and have instructed cowards to runne, and flrew their shoulders. Friends be gone,
I have my felfe renel'd vpon a courfe,
Which has no neede of you. Be gone,
My Treasure's in the Harbour. Take it: Oh,
I follow'd that I bluch to looke vpon,
My very haires do mutiny; for the white
Reprof the browne for raffhefie, and they them
For fear, and doting. Friends be gone, you fhall
Have Letters from me to fome Friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you looke not sad,
Nor make replyes of loathneffe, take the hint.
Which my difpaire proclaims. Let them be left
Which leaves it felle, to the Sea-fide fraight way;
I will poffeffe you of that thip and Treafure.

y 2 Leave.
Leave me, I pray a little: pray you now,
Nay do so: for indeed I have loft command,
Therefore I pray you, lie fee you by and by.

Enter Cleopatra led by Charmian and Eros.
Eros. Nay gentle Madam, to him, comfort him.
Iras. Do most doe Queene.
Char. Do, why, what else?
Cleo. Let me fit downe: Oh Juno.
Ant. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you heere, Sir?
Ant. Oh hee, fie, fie, fie.
Char. Madam.
Iras. Madam, oh good Empresse,
Eros. Sir, fr.
Ant. Yes my Lord, yes; he at Philippi kept
His fword e'ne like a dancer, while I froke
The leane and wrinkled Caffius, and 'twas I
That the mad Brute ended: he alone
Dealt on Lieutenantry, and no pradice had
In the braue squares of Warre: yet now: no matter.
Cleo. Ah stand by.
Eros. The Queene my Lord, the Queene.
Iras. Go to him, Madam, fpeak to him,
He's visualled with very flame.
Cleo. Well then, fultaine me: Oh.
Eros. Moft Noble Sir arife, the Queene approaches,
Her head's declin'd, and death will ceafe her, but
Your comfort makes the refuge.
Ant. I have offended Reputation,
A moft vnoble carriage.
Eros. Sir, the Queene.
Ant. Oh whether haft thou lead me Egypt, fee
How I conuey my shame, out of thine eyes,
By looking backe what I have left behind
Stroy'd in difhonor.
Cleo. Oh my Lord, my Lord,
Forgive my fearfull fayles, I little thought
You would have followed.
Ant. Egypt, thou knoweft too well,
My heart was to thy Rudder tyed by'th'frings,
And thou shoul'dft flow me after. O're my spirit
The full supremacie thou knew'st, and that Thy becke, might from the bidding of the Gods Command mee.
Cleo. Oh my pardon.
Ant. Now I muft
To the young man fend humble Treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lownes, who
With halfe the bulke o'th'world plaid as I pleas'd,
Making, and marring Fortunes. You did know
How much you were my Conqueror, and that My Sword, made weake by my affdiction, would Obey it on all caufe.
Cleo. Pardon, pardon.
Ant. Fall not a teare I fay, one of them rates
All that is wonne and loft: Glue me a kidde,
Even this repays me.
We fent our Schoolemaster, is a come backe?
Love I am full of Lead: some Wine
Within there, and our Viands; Fortune knowes,
We fcorne her moft, when moft the offers blowes. Exeunt
Enter Cafer, Agrippa, and Dollabello, with others.
Cafer. Let him appeare that's come from Anthony.
Know you him.

Della. Cafer, 'tis his Schoolemaster,
An argument that he is pluckt, when bither
He fends fo poore a Pinnion of his Wing,
Which had superfluous Kings for Meffengers,
Not many Moones gone by.

Enter Ambassadors from Anthony.
Cafer. Approach, and fpeak.
Amb. Such as I am, I come from Anthony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the Morn-eau on the Mertle leafe
To his grand Sea.
Cafer. Bee't fo, declare thine office.
Amb. Lord of his Fortunes he fatisfies thee, and Requires to liue in Egypt, which not granted
He Leffons his Requests, and to thee fues
To let him breath betwixt the Heavenes and Earth
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confefs thy Greatness,
Submit her to thy might, and of thee caueses
The Circle of the Philomies for her yeres,
Now hazarded to thy Grace.
Cafer. For Anthony,
I have no eares to his requet. The Queene,
Of Audience, nor Desire shall faile, to thee
From Egypt drive her all-difgraced Friend,
Or take his life there. This if fhe performe,
She shall not fue vnheard. So to them both.
Amb. Fortune purfue thee.
Cafer. Bring him through the Bands:
To try thy Eluence, now 'tis time, difpatch,
From Anthony winne Cleopatra, promife
And in our Name, what he requires, add more
From thine inuention, offers. Women are not
In their bit Fortunes strong; but want will pierue
The ne'touch'd Vefall. Try thy cunning Thidias, Make thine owne Edity for thine paines, which we Will anfwer as a Law.
Thid. Cafer, I go.
Cafer. Obferue how Anthony becomes his flaw,
And what thou thinke'st it very folution fpeakes
In every power that moones,
Thid. Cafer, I hall.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, & Iras.
Cleo. What fhall we do, Enobarbus?
Eno. Thinkes, and dye.
Cleo. Is Anthony, or we in fault for this?
Eno. Anthony onely, that would make his will Lord of his Reafon. What though you fled,
From that great face of Warre, whose feuerall ranges
Frighted each other? Why fhoulde he fhowe?
The itch of his Affdiction fhou'd not then
Hau'e nickt his Captain-ship, at fuch a point,
When halfe to halfe the world oppo'd, he being
The meated queftion? 'Twas a flame no leffe
Then was his loft, to courfe your flying Flagges,
And leue his Nury gazing.
Cleo. Pray the peace.

Enter the Ambassadors, with Anthony.
Ant. Is that his anfwer? Amb. I my Lord,
Ant. The Queene shall then haue courtesie,
So the will yeild vs vp.
Amb. He fayes fo.
Ant. Let her know'st. To the Boy Cafer fend this grizled head, and he will fay thine wishes to the brimme,
With Principallities.
Cleo. That head my Lord?
Ant.

The Tragedie of 345

Anthony and Cleopatra.

Act 4. To him againe, tell him he weares the Rofe Of youth upon him: from which, the world should note Something particular: His Coine, Ships, Legions, May be a Cowards, whose Minifter would preuail Vnder the servuce of a Child, as done As It's Command of Cæsar. I dare him therefore To lay his gay Comparisons a-part, And anfwer me declin'd, Sword againft Sword, Our felves alone: He write it: I follow me. Eno. Yes like enough: hie battel'd Cæfar will Vnflate his happineffe, and be Slag'd to'th'beaw Against a Sworder. I fee mens Judgements are A parell of their Fortunes, and things outward Do draw the inward quality after them To fuffer all alike, that he fhould dreame, Knowing all meafures, the full Cæfar will Anfwer his emplinffe; Cæfar thou haft subdu'de His judgement now.

Enter a Servant. Ser. A Meffenger from Cæfar. Cleo. What no more Ceremony? See my Women, Against the blowne Rofe may they flay their nofe, That kneel'd vnto the Gods. Admit him fir. Eno. Mine honor, and, I beginne to fquare, The Loyalty well call'd to Fools, does make Our faith meere folly: yet he that can endure To follow with Allegiance a fake Lord, Does conquer him that did his Mather conquer, And earns a place P'th'Story.

Enter Thidias. Cleo. Cæfar will. Thid. Hearc it apart. Cleo. None but Friends: fay boldly. Thid. So haply are they friends to Anthony. Eno. He needs as many (Sir) as Cæfar ha'v, Or needs not vs. If Cæfar pleas, our Mafter Will leape to be his Friend: For vs you know, Whofe he is, we are, and, that is Cæfar. Thid. So. Thus then thou moft renown'd, Cæfar Intreats, Not to conder in what cafe thou stand'ft Further then he is Cæfar. Cleo. Go on, right Royall. Thid. He knows that you embrace not Anthony As you did loue, but as you feared him. Cleo. Oh. Thid. The carre's vpon your Honor, therefore he Does pity, as conbrained blemifhes, Not as deferved. Cleo. He is a God, And knows what is moft right. Mine Honour Was not yeelded, but conquer'd merelie. Eno. To be fure of that, I will aske Anthony.] Sir, fir, thou art so leakie That we must leafe thee to thy finking, for Thy deareft quitt thee.

Thid. Shall I fay to Cæfar, What you require of him: for he partly begges To be defir'd to glue. It much would pleafe him, That of his Fortunes you should make a baffe To leafe vpon. But it would warne his fpirits To heare from me you had left Anthony, And put your felfe vnder his throwd, the vntherful Land.- Cleo. What's your name? (lord)

Thid. My name is Thidias. Cleo. Most kinde Meffenger, Say to great Cæfar this in dilputation, I kiffe his conqu'ring hand: Tell him, I am prompt To lay my Crowne at'ts feete, and there to kneele. Tell him, from his all-heying breath, I hear The doome of Egypt. Thid. 'Tis your Nobleft course: Wifedom and Fortune combating together, If that the former dare but what it can, No chancę may make it. Give me grace to lay My dutie on your hand. Cleo. Your Cæfars Father of, (When he hath mu'd of taking kingdoms in) Bedow'd his lips on that vnworthy place, As it rain'd kiffes.

Enter Anthony and Enochus. Ant. Fauours? By loue that thunders. What art thou? Thid. One that but performs (Fellow) The bidding of the fullest man, and worthieft To have command obey'd.

Eno. You will be whipt. Ant. Approch there: sh you Kite. Now Gods & diuels Authority melts from me of late. When I cried hoa, Like Boyes vnto a muffe, Kings would fart forth, And cry, your will. Haue you no eares? I am Anthony yet. Take hence this Lack, and whip him.

Enter a Servant. Eno. 'Tis better playing with a Lions whale, Then with an old one dying. Ant. Moone and Starres, Whip him: we'ret twenty of the greatef Tributaries That do acknowledge Cæfar, should I finde them So fawcy with the hand of the heere, what's her name Since she was Cleopatra? Whip him Fellows, Till like a Boy you fee him crinde his face, And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence. Thid. Marly Anthony. Ant. Tugge him away: being whipt Bring him againe, the lacke of Cæfars shall Beare vs an arrant to him.

Enter with Thidius. Ant. I found you as a Morfell, cold vpon Dead Cæfars Trencher: Nay, you were a Fragment Of Glorious Pompyes, besides what hotter hours Unregir'ded in vulgar Fame, you have Luxuriously pickt out. For I am sure, Though you can gaffe what Temperance should be, You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this? Ant. To let a Fellow that will take rewards, And say, God quit you, be familiar with My play-fellow, your hand; this Kingly Smile, And plighter of high hearts. O that I were Vpon the hill of Bafan, to out-roare The horned Heard, for I have faufe caufe, And to proclaim it civilly, were like
A halter'd necke, which do's the Hangman thanke,
For being yare about him. Is he whipt?

Enter a Servant with Titlias.

Ser. Soundly, my Lord.

Ant. Cryed he? and begg'd a Pardon?

Ser. He did aske fauour.

Ant. If that thy Father live, let him repent
Thou wasn't not made his daughter, and be thou forrife
To follow Cæsar in his Triumph, since
Thou haft bin whipt. For following him, henceforth
The white hand of a Lady Feuer thee,
Shake thou to looke on. Get thec backe to Cæsar,
Tell him thy entertainment: looke thou say
He makes me angry with him. For he seemes
Proud and disdainfull, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time moth easie 'tis to dont:
When my good Starres, that were my former guides
Hau eempt left their Orbes, and shut their Fires
Into th'Abifme of hell. If he mislike,
My speech, and what is done, tell him he has Heparchus, my enfranchised Bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like to quite me. Yrge it thou:
Hence with thy stripes, be gone.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alacke our Terrente Moone is now Eclipse,
And it portends alone the fall of Anthony.

Cleo. I must say his time?

Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle eyes
With one that tyes his points.

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah (Deere) if I be so,
From my cold heart let Heauen ingender haile,
And poynon it in the four,f and the first stone
Drop in my necke: as it determines fo
Dislove my life, the next Cæsar filme,
Till by degrees the memory of my wombe,
Together with my braue Egyptians all,
By the disdaining of this pelleated forme,
Lye graueleffe, till the Fille and Gnats of Nyle
Hau e buried them for prey.

Ant. I am satisfied:

Cæsar sets downe in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his Fate. Our force by land,
Hath Nobly held, our seuen'd Naue too
Hau e kn smoothly, and Flete, threatening moft Sea-like.
Where haft thou bin my heart? Doft thou eare Lady?
If from the Field I shall returne once more
To kiffe thef e Lips, I will appeare in Blood,
I, and my Sword, will earne our Chronicle,
There's hau e not yet.

Cleo. That's my braue Lord.

Ant. I will be trebble-fnewed, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ranome lines
Of me for lefts: But now, He fet my teeth,
And tend to darkneffe all that flop me. Come,
Let's hau e one other gawdy night: Call to me
All my fid Captaines, fill our Bowles once more:
Let's mocke the midnight Bell.

Cleo. It is my Birth-day,
I had thought t'haue hold it poore. But since my Lord
Is Anthony againe, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.
Enter Anthony and Cleopatra, with others.

Ant. Eros, mine Armour Eros.
Cleo. Sleepe a little.
Ant. No my Chuckle. Eros, come mine Armor Eros.
    Enter Eros.
Come good Fellow, put thine Iron on,
If Fortune be not ours to day, it is Because we brave her. Come.
What's this for? Ah let be, let be, thou art
The Armourer of my heart: Falle, falle: This, this,
Sooth-law Ie helpe: Thus it must bee.
Ant. Well, well, we shall thrive now.
Seest thou my good Fellow. Go, put on thy defences.
    Eros. Briefely Sir.
Cleo. Is not this buckled well?
Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that unbuckles this, till we do please
To daft for our Repose, shall heare a storme.
Thou fumblest Eros, and my Queens a Squire
More tight at this, then thou: Dispatch. O Loue,
That thou couldft fee my Warres to day, and knewst
The Royal Occupation, thou shouldst fee
A Workeman in't.
    Enter an Armed Soldier.
Good morrow to thee, welcome,
Thou look't like him that knowes a warlike Charge:
To businesse that we love, we rife betime,
And go too't with delight.
Saul. A thousand Sir, early though't be, have on their Riduetd trim, and at the Port expect you.
    Shout.
Trumpets flourish.
    Enter Captains, and Soldiers.
Alex. The Morn is faire: Good morrow General.
All. Good morrow Generall.
Ant. 'Ts well blowne Lads,
This Morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.
So, so; Come give me that, this way well-fed.
Fare thee well Dame, what ere becomes of me,
This is a Soldiers kiffe: rebeckable,
And worthy shamesfull checke it were, to fland
On more Mechanicke Complement, Ile leave thee.
Now like a man of Steele, you that will fight,
Follow me clofe, Ile bring you too't: Adieu.
    Exeunt.
Char. Plesse you retyre to your Chamber?
    Exeunt.
Cleo. Lead me:
He goes forth gallantly: That he and Cefar might Determine this great Warre in single fight;
Then Anthony; but now. Well on.
    Exeunt.
Trumpets sound.
    Enter Anthony, and Eros.
Eros. The Gods make this a happy day to Anthony.
    Exeunt.
Ant. Would thou, & thofe thy fears had once preuaile
To make me fight at Land,
Eros. Had'th thou done so,
The Kings that have reuolte, and the Soldier
That has this morning left thee, would have fill
Followed thy heales.
    Ant. What's gone this morning?
    Eros. Who'! one eu'r neere thee, call fur Enobarbus,
    Hee
He shall not hear thee, or from Caesar Campe,
Say I am none of thine.
Anc. What sayest thou ?
Sold. Sir he is with Caesar.
Eros. Sir, his Chefs and Treasure he has not with him.
Anc. Is he gone ?
Sold. Moft certain.
Anc. Go Eros, lend his Treasure after, do it,
Detaine no lot I charge thee: write to him,
(I will subcribe) gentle adieu's, and greetings
Say, that I wish he never finde more caufe
To change a Master. Oh my Fortunes have Corrupted honest men. Dilipatch Embarkus. Exit

Flourish. Enter Agrippa, Caesar, with Embarkus, and Dollabella.

Caes. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is Anthony be tooke alive:
Make it so knowne.
Agripp. Caesar, I shall.
Caesar. The time of vniofferfull peace is neere :
Prove this a prop'r'ous day, the three nook'd world
Shall beare the Oline freely.
Enter a Majeftier.
Maj. Anthony is come into the Field.
Caes. Go charge Agrippa,
Plant those that have revoked in the Vant,
That Anthony may feeme to spend his Fury
Vpon himselfe.

Emb. Alcetas did revolt, and went to Iewry on Affaires of Anthony, there did diffwade
Great Heros to incline himselfe to Caesar,
And leave his Mafter Anthony. For this paines,
Caesar hath hang'd him : Calimines and the refl
That fell away, hauing entertainment, but
No honourable truth: I have done ill,
Of which I do accuse my felfe so forely,
That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Caesars.

Sol. Embarkus, Anthony
Hath after thee fent all thy Treasure, with
His Bounty over-plus. The Meffenger
Came on my guard, and at thy Tent is now
Unloading of his Mules.

Em. I glue it you.

Antony and Cleopatra.

Which promiseth Royall perill. Trumpeters With brazen dinne blast you the Citie, care, Make mingle with our rating Tabourines, That heaven and earth may strike their founds together, Applauding our approach. Exeunt.

Enter a Centurie, and his Company, Enobarbus follows.

Cent. If we be not releued within this houre, We must returne to'th'Court of Guard ; the night Is shaine, and they, we shall embattale By'th'second houre I th'Morne.
1.Hatch. This last day was a shrewd one too's.
Enob. Oh beare me witnessse night.
2 What man is this ?
1 Stand cloe, and lift him.
Enob. Be witnessse to me (O thou blested Moone) When men must wall upon Ramor.
Beare hatefull memory : poore Enobarbus did Before thy face repent.
Cent. Enobarbus ?
2 Peace : Hearke further.
Enob. Oh Soveraigne Mithris of true Melancholty, The perfonous dampe of night diffungle upon me, That Life, a very Rebell to my will, May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart Against the flint and hardneffe of my fault, Which being dried with grecke, will breake to powder, And smooth all soule thoughts. Oh Antony, Nobler then my resolu is Infamous, Forgive me in thine owne particular, But let the world ranke me in Register A Master leaue, and a fugitiose : Oh Antony ! Oh Antony !
1 Let's speake to him.
Cent. Let's heare him, for the things he speakes May concernes Cesear.
2 Let's do so, but he sleepe.
Cent. Swoonds rather, for so bad a Prayer as his Was never yet for sleepe.
1 Go we to him.
2 Awake sir, awake, speake to vs.
1 Hear ye sir ?
Cent. The hand of death hath raught him.
Drummes aforse off.
Hearke the Drummes demurely wake the sleeplers : Let vs beare him to'th'Court of Guard ; he is of note: Our house is fully out.
2 Come on then, he may recover yet.
Exeunt.
Enter Antony and Scarrus, with their Army.
Ant. Their preparation is to day by Sea, We pleaseth them not by Land.
Scar. For both, my Lord.
Ant. I would they'd fight i'th'Fire, or i' th'Ayre, We'd fight there too. But this it is, our Focste Upon the hilles adjoyning to the City Shall fly with vs. Order for Sea is given, They have put forth the Hauen :
Where their appointment we may yet discouer, And looke on their endeavours.
Exeunt.
Enter Cesear, and his Army.
Ces. But being charg'd, we will be still by Land, Which as I tak't we shall, for his bell force Is forth to Man his Gallies. To the Vales, And hold our bell advantage.
Exeunt.
Cal. Help me my women : Oh hee's more mad Than Telamon for his Shield, the Boare of Thefaly Was never so imboff.
Cles. To'th'Monument, there locke your selfe, And send him word you are dead :
The
The Tragedie

302

The Soule and Body rise not more in parting, Then greatesthe going off.

Cleo. To'th Monument:

Mardian, go tell him I have slain me selfe:

Say, that the last I spake was Anthony,

And word it (prythee) pitieously. Hence Mardian,

And bring me how he takes his death to'th Monument.

Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet beholdest me?

Eros. I Noble Lord.

Ant. Sometimes we see a clown that's Dragonish,

A vapour fometime, like a Beare, or Lyon,

A toward Cittadell, a pendant Rocke,

A forded Mountaine, or blew Promontorie

With Trees vp'n, that nodde vnto the world,

And mocke our eyes with Ayre,

Thou hast seen thee Signes,

They are blacke Veppers Pageants.

Eros. I my Lord.

Ant. The man which is now a Horfe, even with a thought the Racke diuInes, and makes it indiuent

As water is in water.

Eros. It does my Lord.

Ant. My good Knaue Eros, now thy Captain is

Even such a body: Hiee I am Anthony,

Yet cannot hold this visible shape (my Knaue)

I made these warres for Egypt, and the Queene,

Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine:

Which whil't it was mine, had annet vnto't

A Million more, (now loft:) Thee Eros has

Packt Cards with Cefars, and falle plaid my Glory

Vnto an Enemies triumph.

 Nay, wepe not gentle Eros, there is left vs

Our felves to end our felves.

Enter Mardian.

Oh thy wilde Lady, she has robb'd me of my Sword.

Mar. No Anthony,

My Milftia lou'd thee, and her Fortunes mingled

With thine entirely.

Ant. Hencel by fawce Eunuch peace, the hath betraved me,

And shall dye the death.

Mar. Death of one person, can be paid but once,

And that the ha's diuChard. What thou wouldst do

Is done vnto thy hand: the lathe Spake

Was Anthony, most Noble Anthony:

Then in the midd't a tearing grone did breake

The name of Anthony: it was divid'd

Between her heart, and lips: the rendred life

Thy name fo buried in her.

Ant. Dead then?

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Vnarme Eros, the long days take is done,

And we must flepe? That thou depart'st hence safe

Does pay thy labour richly: Go. exit Mardian.

Off, placke off,

The seven-fold shield of Aias cannot kepe

The battery from my heart. Oh cleave my fides.

Heart, once be stronger then thy Continent;

Cracke thy fpine Cafe. Apace Eros, apace;

No more a Soldier: bruisde pieces go,

You have bin Nobly borne. From me awhile. exit Eros

I will o're-take thee Cleopatra, and

Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now

All vnto me. exiit Cleopatra.

Now the Torch is out,

Lye downe and bray no further. Now all labour

Marres what it does: yea, very force entangles

It fell with strength: Sela then, and all is done.

Eros? I come my Queene. Eros? Stay for me,

Where Soules do cooch on Flowers, we'll hand in hand,

And with our brightly Port make the Ghostes gaze:

Dido, and her Eros shall want Troopes,

And all the haunt be ours. Come Eros, Eros.

Enter Eros.

Eros. What would my Lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra dyed,

I have lia'd in such dishonour, that the Gods

Detest my baseffe. I, that with my Sword,

Quarter'd the World, and o're greene Neptuneusbacke

With Ships, made Cities; condemne my felse, to lacke

The Courage of a Woman, leffe Noble minde

Then the which by her death, our Cezar tells

I am Conqueror of my felse. Thou art fworne Eros,

That when the exigent should come, which now

Is come indeed: When I should fee behind me

Thine unfecutive profecution of diligence and horror,

That on thy command, thou then wouldst kill me.

Doo', the time is come: Thou strik'st not me,

'Tis Cezar thou defeat'st. Put colour in thy Cheekes.

Eros. The Gods with-hold me.

Shall I do that which all the Parthian Darres,

(Though Enemy) loft ayme, and could not.

Ant. Eros,

Would'th thou be window'd in great Rome, and fee

Thy Matter thus with pleasch Armes, bending downe

Him corrigible necke, his face fuld'lu'de

To penetrative flame; whil'st the'ldlde feate

Of Excellent Cezar drawne before him, branded

His Baseffe that enfued.

Eros. I would not fee't.

Ant. Come then: for with a wound I must be cur'd.

Draw that thy homfclfe Sword, which thou haft worn

Most vifcull for thy Country.

Eros. Oh fir,pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, fownt'ly not then

To do this when I bad thee? Do it at once,

Or thy precedent Services are all

But accidents vnpurpoe. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turne from me then that Noble countenance,

Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Loo thee.

Eros. My fword is drawne.

Ant. Then let it do at once

The thing why thou haft drawne it.

Eros. My deere Matter,

My Captaine, and my Emperor. Let me fay
Before I strike this bloody stroke, Farewell..

Ant. 'Tis faid man, and farewell.

Eros. Farewell great Chief.e. Shall I strike now?

Ant. Now Eros Killeth himfelfe.

Eros. Why there then?

Thus I do escape the forrow of Antiochus death.

Ant. Thrice-Nobler then my felfe,

Thou teachef met Oh valiant Eros, what

I Should, and thou could'st not, my Queene and Eros

Have by their brave infraction got vp'n me

A Noblenesse in Record. But I will bee

A Bride-grome in my death, and run into't.

As to a Louers bed. Come then, and Eros,

Thy Matter dies thy Scholler: to do thus

I learnt it Fortune: Now, the Torch is out,

The Guard, how? Oh difpatch me.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Enter a Guard.

1. Guard. What's the noise?
Ant. I have done my work; ill Friends:
Oh make an end of what I have begun,
2 The Starre is faire.
And time is at his Period.
All. Alas, and woe:
Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.
1 Not I.
2 Not I.
3 Not any one.

Cle. Oh Sunne,
Burne the great Sphere thou mou'lt in, darkling fand
The varying Shore o'th world. O Antony, Antony
Help me Charmian, help Iris: help me: help Friends
Below, let's draw him thither.
Ant. Peace,
Not Cafars Valour hath o'rethrown. Anthony,
But Anthony's hath Triumpht on it felte,
Cle. So it should be,
That none but Anthony should conquer Anthony,
But woe 'tis so.
Ant. I am dying Egypt, dying; only,
I heere importune death a-while, vntill
Of many thousand kisfes, the poore laft
I lay vpon thy lippes.
Cle. I dare not Deere,
Deere my Lord pardon me dare not,
Left I be taken: not th'imperious fiew
Of the full-Fortune Cafar, euer fhall
Be brood'nd with me, if Knife, Drugges, Serpents haue
Edge, fling, or operation. I am fafe:
Your Wife Otantia, with her modeft eyes,
And fill Confinuation, ftall acquire no Honour
Demuring vpon me; but come, come Anthony,
Help me my women, we must draw thee vp:
Affift good Friends.
Ant. Oh quicke, or I am gone.
Cle. Here's ftort indeede:
How heauy weighs my Lord?
Our strength is all gone into heauenfelle,
That makes the weignt. Had I great June's power,
The strong wing'd Mercury fhould fetch thee vp,
And fet thee by loves fide. Yet come a little,
Wifhers were euer Fools. Oh come, come, come,
They beue Anthony afliet to Cleopatra.
And welcome, welcome. Dye when thou haft liu'd,
Quicklen with kiffing: had my lippes that powr,
Thus would I weare them out.
All: A heauy fight.
Ant. I am dying Egypt, dying,
Glue me fonke Wine, and let me speake a little.
Clo. No, let me speake, and let me rafe fo hys,
That the fale Hufwife Fortune, breake her Wheele,
Prooke'd by my offence.
Ant. One word (sweet Queene)
Of Cafar fееke your Honour, with your fafety. Oh.
Cle. They do not go together.
Ant. Gentle heare me,
None about Cafar truft, but Prasceleus.
Cle. My Refolution, and my hands, Ile truft,
None about Cafar.
Ant. The miserable change now at my end,
Lament nor forrow at: but pleafe your thoughts
In feeding them with thofe my former Fortunes
Wherein I liued. The greaten Prince o'th world,
The Nobleft: and do now not barely dye,
Not Cowardly put off my Helmet to My Countreyman. A Roman, by a Roman Valliantly vanquih'd. Now my Spirit is going,
I can no more.
Cle. Nobleft of men, won't dye?
Haff thou no care of me, Hall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy abfence is No better then a Styre? Oh fee my women:
The Crowne o'th earth doth melt. My Lord?
Oh wither'd is the Garland of the Warre,
The
The Souldiers pole is false: young Boys and Gyrls Are leuell now with men: The oddes is gone, And there is nothing left remarkable Beneath the wittling Moone.
Char. Oh quietnesse, Lady.
Iras. She's dead too, our Soueraigne.
Char. Lady.
Iras. Madam.
Char. Oh Madam, Madam, Madam.
Iras. Royall Egypt: Empreffe.
Char. Peace, peace, Iras.
Cleo. No more but in a Woman, and commanded
By such passe paflion, as the Maid that Milkes,
And doe's the meaneft chares. It were for me,
To throw my Scepter at the injurious Gods,
To tell them that this World did equall theirs,
Till they had holne our Jewell. All's but naught:
Patience is fortifl, and impatience does
Become a Dogge that's mad: Then is it finne,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Erre death dare come to vs. How do you Women?
What, what good cheere? Why how now Charman?
My Noble Gyrls? Ah Women, women! Lookke
Our Lampe is fpent, it's out. Good fins, take heart,
We'll bury him: And then, what's brave, what's Noble,
Let's doe't after the high Roman fashioned,
And make death proud to take vs. Come, away,
This cafe of that huge Spirit now is cold.
Ah Women, Women! Come, we have no Friend But Refolution, and the breffest end.
Exit, hearing of Antebionys body.

Enter Cesar, Agrippa, Dollabella, Mens, with his Counsell of Warre.

Cesar. Go to him Dollabella, bid him yeeld,
Being so frustrate, tell him,
He mockes the pawses that he makes.
Dol. Cesar, I shall.
Enter Decretas with the sword of Anthony.

Cef. Wherefore is that? And what art thou that dar'nt
Appear thus to vs?
Dec. I am call'd Decretas,
Mark Anthony I feru'd, who best was worthie
Best to be feru'd: whil'ft he flood vp, and floked
He was my Mafter, and I wore my life
To flpend upon his haters. If thou pleace
To take me to thee, as I was to him,
Ile be to Cesar: if yt pleafe not, I yeild thee vp my life.
Cesar. What's yt thon say't?
Dec. I say (Oh Cesar) Anthony is dead.
Cesar. The breaking of fo great a thing, should make
A greater crakke. The rood in World
Should have fhouke Lyons into chilli streets,
And Citizens to their dennes. The death of Anthony
Is not a fingle doome, in the name lay
A moity of the world.
Dec. He is dead Cesar,
Not by a publike minifter of Inftice,
Nor by a hyred Knife, but that felfe-hand
Which writ his Honor in the Adonis it did,
Hath with the Couraige which the heart did lend it,
Splittes the heart. This is his Sword,
I robb'd his wound of it; behold it flain'd
With his moft Noble blood.
Cef. Lookke you sad Friends,
The Gods rebuke me, but it is Tydings
To wash the eyes of Kings.
Dol. And strange it is,
That Nature must compell vs to lament
Our moft perfifled deeds.
Mec. His taints and Honours, wag'd equal with him.
Dola. A Rarer spirit neuer
Did flere humanity: but you Gods will giue vs
Some faults to make us men: Cesar is touch'd.
Mec. When fuch a facious Mirror's fet before him,
He needs muft fee him felfe.
Cesar. Oh Anthony,
I have followed thee to this, but we do launch
Difceas in our Bodies. I muft perforce
Have thence to thee fuch a declining day,
Or looke on thine: we could not flall together,
In the whole world. But yet let me lament
With teares as Soueraigne as the blood of hearts,
That thou my Brother, my Competitor,
In top of all defigne; my Mate in Empire,
Friend and Companion in the front of Warre,
The Arme of mine owne Body,and the Heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle; that our Starres
Vnreconcilable, shou'd divide our equalneffe to this.
Heare me good Friends,
But I will tell you at some meeter Season,
The busineffe of this man looks out of him,
We'll hear him what he fayes.
Enter an Egyptian.

Whence are you?
Egypp. A poore Egyptian yet, the Queen my miftris
Confin'd in all, she has her Monument
Of thy intents, defires, inflution,
That she preparedly may frame her felfe
To' th' way fher's forc'd too.
Cesar. Bid her have good heart,
She loone flhall know of vs, by fome of ours,
How honourable, and how kindly Wee
Determine for her. For Cesar cannot leafe to be vangente egypt. So the Gods preferue thee.
Exit.
Cef. Come hither Proculeius. Go and say
We purpole her no fame: give her what comforts
The quality of her piifion fhall require;
Leaft in her greteffe, by fome mortall broke
She do defeate vs. For her life in Rome,
Would be eternall in our Triumph: Go,
And with your fpeciell bring vs what the fayes,
And how you finde of her.
Proc. Cesar I shall.
Exit Proculeius.
Cef. Callus, go you along: where's Dollabella, to fecond Proculeius?
All. Dollabella.
Cef. Let him alone: for I remember now
How hee's impoyled: he fhall in time be ready.
Go with me to my Tent, where you fhall fee
How hardly I was drawne into this Warre,
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my Writings. Go with me, and fee
What I can thow in this.

Exit Cleopatra, Charrman, Iras, and Mardian.
Cleo. My defolation does begin to make
A better life: This paltry to be Cesar:
Not being Fortune, he's but Fortunes knaue,
A minifter of her will: and it is great

To
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackle accords, and without ceasing change;
Which sleepes, and newe pallates more the dunge,
The beggers Nurfe, and Caefer.

Pro. Caefer finds greeting to the Queene of Egypt, And bids thee study on what faire demands
Thou meant't to haue him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?
Pro. My name is Proculeius,

Cleo. Anthony

Dit tell me of you, bid me true you, but
I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd
That haue no vfe for troubling. If your Master
Would haue a Queene his begger, you must tell him,
That Maitely to kepe decorum, mult;
No lefe begge then a Kingdome; If he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my Sonne,
He gives me so much of mine owne, as I
Will kneele to him with thankes.

Pro. Be of good cheere; Y's fall into a Prince's hand, fare nothing,
Make your full reference freely to my Lord,
Who is so full of Grace, that it flows ouer
On all that neede. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependacie, and you shall finde
A Conqueror that will pray in aide for kindnesse,
Where he for grace is kneel'd too.

Cleo. Pray you tell him,
I am his Fortunes Vaillant, and I send him
The Greatnesse he has got. I hourly learne
A Doctrine of Obedience, and would gladly
Looke him 1st Face.

Pro. This Ile report (deere Lady)
Have comfort, for I know your plighe is pittied
Of him that caus'd it.

Pro. You see how easely the may be surpriz'd:
Guard her till Caefer come.

I. Royall Queene,
Char. Oh Cleopatra, thou art taken Queene.
Cleo. Quicke, quicke, good hands.

Pro. Hold worthy Lady, hold:
Doe not your fete fuch wrong, who are in this
Researce, but not betradyd.

Cleo. What of death too that rides our dogs of languish
Pro. Cleopatra, do not abufe my Masters bounty, by Th'vndoing of your felse: Let the World see
Hiss Noblenesse well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou Death?

Pro. Ooh temperance Lady.

Cleo. Sir, I will exte no mistex, Ie not drinke fir,
If idle tale will once be necessary
Ie not sleepe neither. This mortall houfe Ie ruine
Do Caefer what he can. Know fir, that I
Will not waite pinnion'd at your Masters Court,
Nor once be chaftic'd with the fober eye
Of dull Pelasgia. Shall they bowd me vp,
And thee to the dowting Varlotarie
Of cenuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt.
Be gentle graue vno me, rather on Nuyus muddle
Lay me starke-nak'd, and let the water-Fires
Blow me into abhorring: rather make
My Countries high pyramides my Gibbet,

And hang me vp in Chains.

Pro. You do extend
Those thoughts of horror further then you shall Finde caufe in Caefer.

Del. Proculeius,
What thou haft done, thy Master Caefer knowes,
And he hath fent for thee: for the Queene,
Ile take her to my Guard.

Pro. So Delabellis,
It shal content me beft: Be gentle to her,
To Caefer I will speake, what you shall pleafe,
If you'll imploie me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would dye.

Del. Mofl Noble Empresse, you haue heard of me.
Cleo. I cannot tell.

Del. Affuredly you know me.

Cleo. No matter fir, what I haue heard or knowne:
You laugh when Boyes or Women tell their Dreams,
It's not your tricke?

Del. I vnderstand not, Madam.

Cleo. I dreampe there was an Emperor Anthony,
Oh fuch another fleephe, that I might fee
But fuch another man.

Del. If it might pleafe ye.
Cleo. His face was as the Heau'n, and therein fックe
A Sunne and Moone, which kept their coure, & lighted
The little o'th earth.

Del. Mofl Soueraigne Creature.

Cleo. His legges befrid the Ocean, his rear'd arme
Crefted the world: His voyce was propertied
As all the tuned Spheres, and that to Friends:
But when he meant to quelle, and shake the Orbe,
He was as ratling Thunder. For his Bounty,
There was no winter in't. An Anthony it was,
That grew the more by reaping: His delights
Were Dolphin-like, they thowd his bucke above
The Element they lio'd in: In his Litery
Walk'd Crownets and Crownets: Realms & Islands were
As plates dropt from his pocket.

Del. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Think ye there was, or might be fuch a man
As this I dreampt of?

Del. Gentle Madam, no.
Cleo. You Lye vp to the hearing of the Gods:
But if there be, nor euer were one fuch
It's paff the fize of dreaming: Nature wants fuffe
To vie the strange forms with fance, yet i'magine
An Anthony were Nations pece, 'gainst Fance, Condemning shadowes quite.

Del. Hear me, good Madam:
Your liffe is as your felse, great; and you beare it
As answering to the weight, would I might never Ove-take purfuid fuccesse: But I do feele
By the rebound of yours, a greafe that furres
My very heart at roote.

Cleo. I thank you fir:
Know you what Caefer meanes to do with me?

Del. I am loath to tell you what, I would you knew.
Cleo. Nay pray you fir.

Del. Though he be Honourable.

Cleo. Hee'l make me then in Triumph.
Del. Madam he will, I know.

Fleuris:

Enter Proculeius, Caefer, Gallus, Mecenas, and others of his Traine.

All. Make way there Caefer.

Caefer
Ces. Which is the Queene of Egypt.

Del. It is the Emperor Madam.

Ces. knees.

Cesar. Artile, you shall not kneele
I pray you, rife Egypt.

Ces. Sir, the Gods will haue it thus,
My Master and my Lord I must obey,
Cesar. Take to you no hard thoughts,
The Record of what injuries you did vs,
Though written in our fields, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.

Ces. Sole Sir o'th World,
I cannot proiect mine owne caufe so well
To make it cleare, but do confesse I have Bene laden with like fruits, which before
Have often sham'd our Sex.

Cesar. Cleopatra know,
We will extenuate rather then inforce:
If you apply your felle to our intents,
Which towards you are most gentle, you shall finde
A benefit in this change: but if you seeke
To lay on me a Cruelty by taking
Antenous course, you shall bereave your felle
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruccion which I lie guard them from,
If thereon you relie. Ie take my leave.

Ces. And may through all the world: 'ts yours, & we Your Scutcheons, and your Signes of Conquest shall Hang in what place you please. Here my good Lord.

Cesar. You shall aduise me in all for Cleopatra.

Ces. This is the brefs: of Money, Plate, & Jewels
I am poiffed of, 'ts exactly valued,
Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleuc'?

Seleuc. Heere Madam.

Ces. This is my Treasurer, let him speake (my Lord)
Vpon his peril, that I have referu'd
To my felle nothing. Speake the truth Seleuc.'

Seleuc. Madam, I had rather feele my lippes,
Then to my peril speake that which is not.

Ces. What have I kept backe.

Seleuc. Enough to purchase what you have made known
Cesar. Nay blufh not Cleopatra, I approve
Your Wifdomes in the deede.

Ces. See Cesar: Oh behold,
How pompe is followed: Mine will now be yours,
And should we fift eftates, yours would be mine.
The ingratitude of this Seleuc' does
Euen make me wilde. Oh Slaue, of no more truft
They that I love, and that I love; why should you backe, & shalt
Go backe I warrant thee : but Ie catch thine eyes
Though they had wings. Slue, Soule-laffe, Villain, Dog.
O rarely safe!

Cesar. Good Queene, let vs intreat you.

Ces. The Gods must have their will,
A wounding shame is this,
That thou vouchsafeinge here to visit me,
Doing the Honour of thy Lordlineffe.
To one fo meeke, that mine owne Servant shoulde
Parcell the fumme of my difgraces, by Addition of his Envy, Say (good Cesar)
That I some Lady trifts have referu'd,
Immoment toyes, things of fuch Dignite
As we greet moderne Friends withall, and fay
Some Nobler token I have kept apart
For Luis and Ophelia, to induce
Their mediation, muft I be woffled
With one that I have bred: The Gods! it fmites me
Beneath the fall I have. Prythee go hence,

Or I shall drow the Cynder of my spirits
Through th'Aires of my chance: Were thou a man,
Thou would it have mercy on me.

Cesar. Fortunes, Seleuc.

Ces. Be it known, that we the greatest are mis-thought
For things that others do: and when we fall,
We anwer others merites, in our name
Are therefore to be pitied.

Cesar. Cleopatra,
Not what you have referu'd, nor what acknowledg'd
Put we i'th Roll of Conqueft: ill be't yours,
Befow it at your pleafure, and beleue
Of things that Merchants fold. Therefore he cheer'd,
Make not your thoughts your prifons: No deere Queen,
For we intend fo to dispoze you, as
Your felle shall glie vs coufell'd: Fede, and sleepe:
Our care and pitty is fo much upon you,
That we remaine your friend, and fo adieu.

Ces. My Master, and my Lord.

Cesar. Not fo Adieu. Fieurious

Ces. He words me Gyrlies, he words me,
That I should not be Noble to my felle.
But heurke thee Charmiun.

Iras. Finish good Lady, the bright day is done,
And we are for the darke.

Ces. Hye thee again, I haue spoke already, and it is prouided,
Go put it to the haffe.

Char. Madam, I will.

Enter Dolabella.

Del. Where's the Queene?

Char. Behold fir.

Ces. Dolabella.

Del. Madam, as thereto vforme, by your command
(Which my loue makes Religion to obey)
I tell you this: Cesar through Syria
Intends his journey, and within three dayes,
You with your Children will he send before,
Make your best vfe of this. I haue perform'd
Your pleafure, and my promise.

Dolabella, I shall remaine your debtor.

Del. I your Servant?

Adieu good Queene, I must attend on Cesar.

Ces. Farewell, and thankes,

Now Iras, what think't thou?

Iras. Thou, an Egyptian Nurse shall be fhowne
In Rome aswell as I: Mechanice Slaues
With grezie Aprons, Rules, and Hammers fhall
Vplift vs to the view. In their thicke breathes,
Rankes of groffe dyet, shall we be encloowed,
And fore'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The Gods forbid.

Ces. Nay, 'tis moft certaine Iras: Iawcle Lictors
Will catch at vs like Strumpets, and fcald Rimers
Ballads vs out a Tune. The quickie Comedians
Extemporally will flage vs, and prent
Our Alexandrian Reuel's Anthony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall fee
Some fqueaking Cleopatra Boy my greatneffe
I'th poffure of a Whore.

Iras. O the good Gods!

Ces. Nay that's certaine.

Iras. Hee never feet't for I am sure mine Nailes
Are stronger then mine eyes.

Ces.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Cleo. Why that's the way to foole their preparation, And to conquer their most absurd intents.

Enter Charmian.

Now Charmian. Show me my Women like a Queene: Go fetch My best Attyres. I am againe for Cleus, To meete Marks Anthony. Sirra Iras, go (Now Noble Charmian, wee'l dispatch indeed,) And when thou haft done this chare, Ile glue thee leaue To play till Doome-day: bring our Crowne, and all. A noise within.

Wherefore's this noise?

Enter a Guardman.

Gard. Here be a rural Fellow, That will not be deny'd your Highnesse presence, He brings you Figges.

Cleo. Let him come in. Exit Guardman.

What poore an Infrument
May do a Noble deece: he brings me liberty:
My Resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: Now from head to footes
I am Marble constant: now the fleeting Moone
No Planet is of mine.

Enter Guardman, and Cleone.

Guard. This is the man.

Haft thou the pretty worme of Nylus there?
That kills and pains not?

Clov. Truly I have him: but I would not be the partie That should defire you to touch him, for his byring is immortal: though that doe dye of it, doe feldome or never recover.

Clov. Remember'rt thou any that have dyed on't?

Clov. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer then yesterday, a very honest woman, but something given to lyse, as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty, how she dyed of the byring of it, what paine she felt: Truly, she makes a very good report o'th'worm: but he that will beleue all that they say, shall never be faued by halfe that they do: but this is most fallible, the Worme's an odd Worme.

Cleo. Get thee hence, farewell.

Clov. I wish you all joy of the Worme.

Cleo. Farewell.

Clov. You must thinke this (looke you,) that the Worme will do his kinde.

Clov. I, I, farewell.

Clov. Lookke you, the Worme is not to bee trusted, but in the keeping of wife people: for indeed, there is no goodnesse in the Worme.

Clov. Take thou no care, it shall be heeded.

Clov. Very good: glue it nothing I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Clov. Will you see me?

Clov. You must not thinke I am so simple, but I know the diuell himselfe will not eate a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the Gods, if the diuell dreffe her not. But truly, these same whorfon diuels doe the Gods great harme in their women: for in every tenne that they make, the diuels make faire.

Clov. Well, get thee gone, farewell.

Clov. Yes fortooth: I wish you joy o'th'worm. Exit Cleo.

Give me my Robe, put on my Crowne, I have Immortall longings in me. Now no more
The joyce of Egyptes Grape shall mov'd this lip Yare, yare, good Iras: quicke: Me thinkes I hear Anthony call: I see him rowe himselfe
To praiye my Noble Aet, I hear him mock
The lucke of Caesar, which the Gods gleue men
To excufe their after wrath. Husband, I come:
Now to that name, my Courage proue my Title.
I am Fire, and Ayre; my other Elements
I glue to bafer life. So, hauve you done?

Come then, and take the last warmth of my Lippes.
Farewell kinde Charmian, Iras, long farewell.
Hau the I the Aflckie in my lippes? Doit fall?
If thou, and Nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a Louers pinch,
Which hurts, and is defir'd. Doit thou lye fill l?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'ft the world,
It is not worth leaue-taking.

Dye. Diffolve thickke clowd, & Raine, that I may lay The Gods themselfes do weeppe.

Cleo. This proves me base:
If the first meete the Curled Anthony,
Hew'll make demand of her, and spend that kniffe
Which is my heaven to have. Come thou mortal wretch,
With thy tharpe teeth this knot intrincate,
Of life at once vntie: Poore venomous Foe,
Be angry, and dispatc. Oh could't thou speake,
That I might heare thee call great Cæsar Aft, vnpoliced.

Char. Oh Eternere Starre.

Cleo. Peace, peace:
Doft thou not see my Baby at my brest,
That fuckes the Nurse asleep.

Char. O breaie! O breaie!

Cleo. As sweet as Balme, as soft as Ayre, as gentle.

O Anthony! Nay I will take you too.

What should I say?

Dye. Char. In this wilde World? So fare thee well:
Now boast thee Death, in thy poiffion iles
A Laffe vnparredl'd. Downie Windows cloze,
And golden Phoebus, never be beheld
Of eyes againe fo Royall: your Crownes away,
He mend it, and then play-

Enter the Guard ruffling in, and Delabellia.

1 Guard. Where's the Queene?

Char. Speake softly, wake her not.

1 Cæsar hath fent
Char. Too low a Meffenger.

Oh come apace, dispatch, I partly fee thee.

1 Approach ho,

All's not well: Cæsar's beguil'd.
2 There's Delabellia fent from Cæsar: call him.

1 What worke is here Charmian?

Is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a Princeesse
Defended of so many Royall Kings,
Ah Souluer.

Delabellia.

Enter Delabellia.

Dol. How goes it heere?

2 Guard. All dead.

Del. Cæsar, thy thoughts

Touch their effects in this: Thy felfe art comming
To fee perform'd the dreaded Aet which thou
So fought't to hinder.

Enter Cæsar and all hia Traines, marching.

All. A way there, a way for Cæsar.

Dol.
The Tragedie of Anthony and Cleopatra.

Del. Oh sir, you are too sure an Augurer:
That you did feare, is done.

Cæsar. Bruteft at the last,
She leuell'd at our purpofes, and being Royall
Tooke her owne way: the manner of their deaths,
I do not fee them bleed.

Del. Who was laft with them?

1. Guard. A fimple Countryman, that brought her Figs:

Cæsar. Poyfon'd then.

J. Guard. Oh Co:

This was his Basket.

Cæsar. This Charmian liv'd but now, the flood and fpake:
On her dead Miftris tremblingly the flood,
And on the fodaine dropt.

Cæfar. Oh Noble weakenefe:
If they had swallow'd poyfon, 'twould appeare
By externall swelling: but the lookes like sleepe,
As the would catch another Anthony
In her strong toyle of Grace.

Del. Heere on her breff,
There is a vent of Bloud, and something blowne,
The like is on her Arme.

1. Guard. This is an Afpickes traile,
And thofe Figge-leaues haue flime vpon them, fuch
As th'Afpiche leaues vpon the Caues of Nyle.

Cæfar. Moft probable
That fhe dyed: for her Phyfitian tels mee
She hath purfu'de Conclusions infinite
Of eafe ways to dye. Take vp her bed,
And bare her Women from the Monument,
She fhall be buried by her Anthony.

No Graue vpon the earth fhall clip in it
A payre fo famous: high events as thefe
Strike thofe that make them; and their Story is No leffe in pitty, then his Glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our Army fhall
In folemne shew, attend this Funerall,
And then to Rome. Come Doulabella, fee
High Order, in this great Solmennity.

FINIS.
THE TRAGEDY OF CYMBELINE.

ACTUS PRIMUS. SCENA PRIMA.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Oo do not meet a man but Frownes. Our bloods no more obey the Heauens. Then our Courtiers:
   Still seeke, as do's the Kings.
2. Gent. But what's the matter?
1. His daughter, and the heire of's kingdom (whom he purpos'd to his wifes sole Sonne, a Widdow. That late he married) hath refer'd her selfe unto a poore, but worthy Gentleman. She's wedded, Her Husband banish'd; he imprison'd, all is outward forrow, though I thinke the King be touch'd at very heart.
2. None but the King?
1. He that hath loft her too: so is the Queene, That moft desir'd the Match. But not a Courtier, Although they wear their faces to the bent Of the Kings lookses, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they fecowle at.
2. And why so?
1. He that hath mist'd the Princeffe, is a thing Too bad, for bad report: and he that hath her, (I mean, that married her, alacke good man,) And therefore banish'd) is a Creature, such, As to fecke through the Regions of the Earth For one, his like; there would be something failing In him, that should compare. I do not thinke, So faire an Outward, and such ftrife Within Endows a man, but hee.
2. You speake him farre.
1. I do extend him (Sir) within himselfe, Crush him together, rather then vnfold His measure duly.
2. What's his name, and Birth?
1. I cannot delue him to the roote: His Father was call'd Sicilus, who d ioyne his Honor Against the Romans, with Caphtalan,
   But had his Titles by Tamantius, whom He fear'd with Glory, and admir'd Succeffe:
   So gain'd the Sur-addition, Leonatus, And had (besides this Gentleman in question) Two other Sonnes, who in the Warres of'th' time Dy'de with their Swords in hand. For which, their Father then old, and fond of yffue, tooke such forrow That he quit Being; and his gentle Lady

Bigge of this Gentleman (our Theame) deceas
As he was borne. The King he takes the Babe
To his protection, calls him Poskhumus Leonatus,
Bredes him, and makes him of his Bed-chamber, Puts to him all the Learnings that his time
Could make him the receuuer of, which he tooke
As we do ayre, faft as 'twas miniftered,
And in's Spring, became a Haruif't: Lid'd in Court
(Which rare it is to do) moft prais'd, moft lou'd,
A fample to the yongest: to th'more Mature,
A glaffe that feated them: and to the grauer,
A Childde that guided Dotards. To his Miftris,
(For whom he now is banish'd) her owne price
Proclaimes how she the eftenc'd him; and his Vertue
By her eleff'd may be truly read, what kind of man he is.
2. I honor him, even out of your report.
But pray you tell me, is the foile childe to'th King?
1. His only childe:
He had two Sonnes (If this be worth your hearing, Marke it) the eldest of them, at three years old
I'm'iiwathing clothes, the other from their Nursey
Were stolne, and to this houre, no ghee in knowledge
Which way they went.
2. How long is this ago?
1. Some twenty yeres.
2. That a Kings Children shou'd be fo conuey'd,
   So fack'y guarded, and the search fo flow
   That could not trace them.
1. Howfoere, 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laug'd at:
Yet is it true Sir,
2. I do well beleue you.
1. We must forbeare. Heere comes the Gentleman,
The Queene, and Princeffe.

Exeunt

SCENA SECUNDA.

Enter the Queene, Poskhumus, and Imogen.

2s. No, he affir'd you shall not finde me(Daughter)
After the flander of moft Step-Mothers,
Euil-liy'd vaue you. You're my Prisoner, but
Your Gaoler shall deliver you the keys

That
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

That Locke vp your restraint. For you Pothulmus, So foone as I can win th'offended King, I will be knowne your Advocate; marry yet The fire of Rage is in him, and 'twere good You lean'd unto his Sentence, with what patience Your wisdom may informe you.

Poth. 'Please your Highness,
I will from hence to day of Gall.

Q. You know the peril:
Ile fetch a turne about the Garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd Affections, though the King
Hath charg'd you should not speake together. Exit

Imo. O diffembling Carteie! How fine this Tyrant
Can tickle where the wounds? My dearest Husband,
I something fear my Fathers wrath, but nothing
(Alwayes refer'nd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone,
And I shall heare abide the hourly shot
Of myri eyes: not comforted to live,
But that there is this Jewell in the world,
That I may see again.

Poth. My Queene, my Mistris:
O Lady, weep no more, least I glue cause
To be suspeected of more tendernefe
Then doth become a man. I will remaine
The loyalll husband, that did ere plight troth.
My residence in Rome, at one Flora's,
Who, to my Father was a Friend, to me
Knowne but by Letter; thither write (my Queene)
And with mine eye, Ile drinke the words you fend,
Though link be made of Gall.

Enter Queene.

Q. Be brief, I pray you:
If the King come, I shall incure, I know not
How much of his displeasure: yet Ile move him
To walke this way: I never do him wrong,
But he do's buy my Inuries, to be Friends
Payes deere for my offences.

Poth. Should we be taking leaue
As long a terme as yet we have to live,
The loathenfe to depart, would grow: Adieu.

Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to ayre your selfe,
Such parting were too petty. Looke heere (Loue)
This Diamond was my Mothers; take it (Heart)
But keepe it till you woo another Wife,
When Impears in dead.

Poth. How, how? Another?
You gentle Gods, give me but this I haue,
And feare vp my embracements from a next,
With bonds of death. Remaine, remaine thou heere,
While fene can keep it on: And sweetest, fairest,
As I (my poore felfe) did exchange for you
To your to infinite luffe; so in our trilles
I still winne of you. For my fake weare this,
It is a Manscel of Loue, Ile place it
Upon this payret Prifoner,

Poth. O the Gods!
When shall we fee again?

Enter Cymbeline, and Lords.

Poth. Alacke, the King.

Cym. Thou bafelt thing, auyed hence, from my flight:
If after this command thou fraught the Court
With thy vsworthineffe, thou dyeft. Away,
Thou'rt poyson to my blood.

Poth. The Gods protect you,

And bleffe the good Reminders of the Court:
I am gone.

Exit.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharpe then this.

Cym. O dilyoll thing,
That shoul'd repyre my youth, thou heape't
A yeares age on mee.

Imo. I beeche you Sir,
Harne not your selfe with your vexation,
I am fennentleffe of your Wrath; a Touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all feares.

Cym. Paft Grace? Obedience?

Imo. Paft hope, and in difpaire, that way paft Grace.

Cym. That might'nt haue had
The sole Sonne of my Queene.

Imo. O bleseed, that I might not: I chose an Eagle,
And did auyed a Puttocke.

Cym. Thou tooke't a Begger, would'nt haue made my Throne, a Scet for bafeness.

Imo. No, I rather added a lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vide one!

Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I haue lou'd Pothulmus:
You bred him as my Play-fellow, and he is
A man, worth any woman: Queer-bayes mee
Almoft the summe he payes.

Cym. What? art thou mad?

Imo. Almost Sir: Heauen refore m: would I were A Neat-heards Daughter, and my Leonatus
Our Neighbour-Sheheards Sonne.

Enter Queene.

Cym. Thou foolifh thing:
They were againe together: you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her vp.

Q. Beeche your patience: Peace
Decre Lady daughter, peace. Sweet Saueraigne,
Lease vs to our felues, and make your selfe some comfort
Out of your belt aduice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish.
A drop of blood a day, and being aged

Dye of this Folly.

Enter Pifanis.

Q. Fye, you must glue way:
Heere is your Servant. How now Sir? What newes?

Pif. My Lord your Sonne, drew on my Mater.

Q. Hah?
No harme I trull is done?

Pif. There might have beene,
But that my Mater rather plaid, then fought,
And had no helpe of Anger: they were parted
By Gentlemen, at hand.

Q. I am very glad on't.

Imo. Your Son's my Fathers friend, he takes his part
To draw vp an Exile. O braue Sir,
I would they were in Affricke both together,
My felle by with a Needle, that I might pricke
The goe backe. Why came you from your Mater?

Pif. On his command: he would not suffer mee
To bring him to the Haue: left thefe Notes
Of what commands I shoul'd be subiect too,
When'nt pleas'd you to employ me.

Q. This hath beene
Your faithful Servant: I dare lay mine Honour
He will remaine so.

Pif. I humbly thank ye your Highnesse.
Enter Choller, and two Lords.

1. Sir, I would advise you to shift a Shirt; the Violence of Action hath made you reek as a Sacrifice: where ayre comes out, ayre comes in: There's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

2. If my Shirt were bloody, then to shift it. Haue I hurt him?

2. No faith, I thought he had not the least intention of hurting you. It is a thorough fare for small hurts.

2. His Steele was in debt, it went o'th Backside the Towne.

Clot. If I would not stand me.

1. No, but he fled forward still, toward your face.

1. I stand you; you have Land enough of your own; But he added to your having, gave you some ground. It is as many inches, as you have Oceans (Puppies).

Clot. I would they had not come between us.

2. So would I, till you had measured long if a Fool you were upon the ground. And that hee should love this Fellow, and refuse mee.

2. If it be a fin to make a true election, she is damn'd.

1. Sir, as I told you always; her Beauty & her Braine go not together. She's a good signe, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2. She shone not upon Foole, least the reflection should hurt her.

Clot. Come, I to my Chamber: would there had beene some hurt done.

2. I wish not so, vnlesse it had bin the fall of an Afe, which is no great hurt.

Clot. You' go with vs?

2. I'll attend your Lordship.

Clot. Nay' come, let's go together.

2. Well my Lord.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Imogen, and Pifanius.

Pif. I would thou grew'st into the shores o'th' Hauen, And question'd it every Saile: if he should write, And I not have it, werea Paper loft

At oth'er men's miseries: What was the laft That he spoke to thee?

Pif. It was his Queene, his Queene.

Imo. Then was't his Handkerchief?

Pif. And kilt it, Madam.

Imo. Senificlesse Linnen, happier therein then I:

And that was all?

Pif. No Madam: for so long

As he could make me with his eye, or care,

Distinguished him from others, he did keepe

The Decks, with Glove, or Hat, or Handkerchief,

Still waising, as the fixt and filies of his mind

Could best exprefse how low his Soule lay'd on,

How Swift his Ship.

Pio. Thou 'sh'ld haue made him,

As little as a Crow, or leffe, ere left

To after-eye him.

Pif. Madam, fo I did.

Pio. I would haue made mine eye-drings;

Crack'd them, but to looke upon him, till the diminution

Of space, had pointed him sharper as my Needle:

Nay, followed him, till he had melted from

The finalneffe of a Gnat; to ayre i and then

Haueturn'd mine eie, and wept. But good Pifanius,

When shall we hear from him.

Pio. Be affur'd Madam,

With his next vantige.

Pio. I did not take my leve of him, but had

Most pretty things to say: Ere I could tell him

How I would thinke on him at certaine hours,

Such thoughts, and such: Or I could make him weare

The Shees of Italy should not betray

Mine Intereft, and his Honour: or haue charg'd him

At the first hour of Morn, at Noone, at Midnight,

To encounter me with Orifons, for then

I am in Heauen for him: Or ere I could,

Glue him that parting kinfe, which I had left

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my Father,

And like the Tyrannous breathing of the North,

Shakes all our boddes from growing.

Enter a Lady.

La. The Queene (Madam)

Defires your Highnesse Company.

Pio. Those thing I bid you do, 'get then dispatch'd,

I will attend the Queene.

Pio. Madam, I shall.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Piliarias, Iachimo: a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it Sir, I have seene him in Britain; hee was then of a Creffent note, expreted to proi woorthy, as since he hath bene allowed the name of. But I could then have look'd on him, without the help of Admination, though the Catalogue of his endowments had bin tabulated by his fide, and to perufe him by Items.

Phil. You speake of him when he was leffe furnish'd, then now hee is, with that which makes him both without, and within.

French. I have seene him in France: wee had very many there, could behold the Sunne, with as fine eyes as hee.

Iach. This matter of marrying his Kings Daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her valye, then his owne, words him (I doubt not) a great deale from the matter.

French. And then his banishment.

Iach. 1, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorc e vnder her colours, are wonderfully

to extend him, be it but to fortify her judgement, which else an ease battery might lay flat, for taking a Beggar without leafy quality. But how comes it, he is to solourne with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Pofh. His Father and I were Souldiers together, to whom I have bin often bound for no leafy then my life. Enter Tallbusus.

Here comes the Britaine. Let him be so entertained amongst you, as fullen with Gentlemen of your knowing, to a Stranger of his quality. I beseech you all be better knowne to this Gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a Noble Friend of mine. How Worthy he is, I will leaue to appear hereafter, rather then flory him in his owne hearing.

French. Sir, we haue knowne togeth in Orleance.

Pofh. Since when, I have bin debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be euer to pay, and yet pay fill.

French. Sir, you o're-rate my poore kindnesse, I was glad I did atone my Countryman and you: it had beene pitty you should have beene put together, with so mortall a purpofe, as then each borie, vpon importance of so flight and truially a nature.

Pofh. By your pardon Sir, I was then a young Traveller, rather flound'r to go eu'n with what I heard, then in my every action to be guided by others experiences: but vpon my mended judgement (if I offend to lay it is mended) my Quarrell was not altogether flight.

French. Faith yes, to be put to the arbitrement of Swords, and fuch two, that would by all likeliness have confounded one the other, or haue faile both.

Iach. Can we with manners, aske what was the difference?

French. Safely, I thinke, 'twas a contention in publicke, which may (without contradiction) suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of vs fell in praife of our Country-Militesse. This Gentleman, at that time vouching (and vpon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more Faire, Vertuous, Wife, Chaste, Conflant, Qualified, and leffe attemptable then any, the rarest of our Ladies in France.

Iach. That Lady is not now living; or this Gentleman opinion by this, vnorne out.

Pofh. She holds her Vertue fill, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so farre preferre her, 'fore ours of Italy.

Pofh. Being so farre prouok'd as I was in France: I would abate her nothing, though I professe my felie she Adorer, not her Friend.

Iach. As faire, and as good: a kind of hand in hand comparision, had beene something too faire, and too good for any Lady in Britaine: if she went before others. I have (even as that Diamond of yours out-lufers many I have beheld, I could not beleue the excelled many: but I have not seene the most preuious Diamond that is, nor you the Lady.

Pofh. I prai'd her, as I rated her: so do I my Stone.

Iach. What do you extemne it at?

Pofh. More then the world enjoyes.

Iach. Either your vaparagon'd Miftris is dead, or she's out-priz'd by a tripe.

Pofh. You are miftaken: the one may be folde or giuen, or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or mercy for the gulf. The other is not a thing for sale, and onely the gulf of the Gods.

Iach. Which the Gods haue giuen you?
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

so is your Diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have truth in; Shee your Jewell, this your Jewell, and my Gold are yours: prouided, I haue your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Exit if I provided, But doo't, Greater, your fuch opinion, for betwixt: Thou makest my Gold, and have our two Wagers recorded.

Pofi. Agreed.

French. Will this hold, thinke you.

Poli. Signior Iachino will not from it.

Pray let vs follow 'em.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Queens, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Qu. Whiles yet the dew's on ground,
Gather those Flowers,
Make ha'fe. Who ha's the note of them?

Ladys. I Madam.

Queen. Dispatch.

Now Master Doctor, haue you brought those drugges?

Cor. Piesfeth your Highnes, I here they are, Madam:
But I beleef my Grace, without offence
(My Confidence bids me aske) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poynounous Compounds,
Which are the moouers of a languiishing death:
But though flow, deadly.

Qu. I wonder, Doctor,
Thou ask'st me such a Question: Have I not bene
Thy Pupill long? Haft thou not learn'd me how To make Perfumes? Diftill? Prefume? Yea fo,
That our great King himselfe dooth woo me oft
For my Confections? Haung thus farre proceeded,
(Vnleffe thou thinke it me diuellish) it's not meete
That I did ample my Judgement in Other Conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy Compounds, on such Creatures as
We count not worth the burning (but none humane)
To try the vigour of them, and apply
Allayments to their A&z, and by them gather
Their feuerall virtues, and effects.

Cor. Your Highnesse
Shall from this praetifie, but make hard your heart:
Besides, the feeing these effects will be
Both noyseome, and infectious.

Qu. O content thee.

Enter Pisanio.

Heere comes a flattering Raffall, vpon him
Will I first worke: Hee's for his Master,
And enemy to my Sonne. How now Pisanio?

Doctor, your servise for this time is ended,
Take your owne way.

Cor. I do fufpeét you, Madam,
But you shall do no harme.

Qu. Hearke thee, a word.

Cor. I do not like her. She doth thinke she ha's
Strange ling'ring poysons: I do know her spirit,
And will not trufl one of her malice, with
A drague of such damn'd Nature. Tho'fe the ha's,
Will flupifie and dull the Sente a-while,
Which fift (perchance) shee'le proue on Cats and Dogs,
Then afterward vp higher: but there is
No danger in what shee of death it makes,
More then the locking vp the Spirits a time,
To be more freth, resuins. She is fool'd
With a moffe false effect: and 1, the truer,
So to be falfe with her.

Qu. No further servise, Doctor,
Untill I fend for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave.

Qu. Weeps she still (sift thou?)
Dof thou thinke in time
She will not quench, and let instructions enter
Where Folly now poftsfees? Do thou worke:
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my Sonne,
Ile tell thee on the instant, thou art then
As great as is thy Master: Greater, for
His Fortunes all yee speechlesse, and his name
Is at laft gaspe. Returne he cannot, nor Continue where he is: To shift his being,
Is to exchange one misery with another,
And euer day that comes, comes to decay
A dayes worke in him. What shalt thou expect
To be dependere on a thing that leaues?
Who cannot be new buill, nor ha's no Friends
So much, as but to prop him? Thou ts'k't vp
Thou know'ft not what: But take it for thy labour,
It is a thing I made, which hath the King
Fife times releu'm'd from death. I do not know
What is more Cordial. Nay, I prythee take it,
It is an earneef of a farther good
That I meanto thee. Tell thy Miftris how
The cafe standes with her: don't, as from thy selfe;
Thinke what a chance thou changed on, but thinke
Thou haift thy Miftris fill, to boote, my Sonne,
Whom shall take notice of thee. Ile moue the King
To any hape of thy Preferment, such
As thou'tt define: and then my selfe, I cheefly,
That fet thee on to this defert, am bound
To loade thy merit richly. Call my women.

Exit Pisa.

Thinke on my words. A flye, and confant knawe,
Not to be shak'd: the Agent for his Master,
And the Remembrancer of her, to hold
The hand-fall to her Lord. I haue given him that,
Which if he take, shall quite vpopse her
Of Ledgers for her Sweete: and which, the after Except the bend her humor, shall be affur'd
To taste of too.

Enter Pisanio, and Ladies.

So, fo : Well done, well done:
The Violets, Cowflippes, and the Prime-Rofes
Bear to my Clofet: Fare thee well, Pisanio.

Thinke on my words.

Pisa, And shall do:
But when to my good Lord, I proue vtrue,
He choyse my selfe: there's all Ile do for you.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. A Father cruel, and a Stepdame false, A Foolish Tutor to a Wedded-Lady, That hath her Husband banish'd: O, that Husband, My supreme Crown of griefes, and those repeated Vexations of it. Had I bin Thee's-forne, As my two Brothers, happy: but most miserable Is the defires that's glorious. Bleffed be thou How meane fo ere, that haue their bonest wills, Which fensons comfort. Who may this be? Fye.

Enter Pisanio, and Iachimo.

Pis. Madam, a Noble Gentleman of Rome Comes from my Lord with Letters.

Iach. Change you, Madam: The Worthy Leonaus is in safety, And greetes your Highneffe deereely.

Imo. Thanks good Sir, You're kindly well come. Iach. All of her, that is out of doore, most rich: If he be furnish'd with a mind so rare She is alone th'Arabian-Bird; and I Haue loft the wager. Boldneffe be my Friend: Arme me Audacity from head to foot, Orlike the Parthian I shall flay flight, Rather directly fly.

Imogen reads.

He is one of the Noblest note, to whose kindness I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your truth. Leonaus.

So farre I read aloud.

But even the very middle of my heart Is warm'd by th'effeft, and take it thankfully.

You are as welcome (worthy Sir) as I Haue words to bli you, and shall finde it fo In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks fairest Lady: What are men mad? Hath Nature glu'en them eyes To see this vaulted Arch, and the rich Crop Of Sea and Land, which can distinguish 'twixt The fine Orbes aroe, and the twin'd Stones Upon the number'd Beach, and can we not Partition make with Speculae fo precious 'Twixt faire, and foule?

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be th'eye: for Apes, and Monkeys 'Twixt two fuch She's, would chatter this way, and Contemne with moves the other. Nor I' th'Appetite. Sluttery to fuch neate Excellence, oppos'd Should make defire vomit emptineffe, Not fo allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter trow?

Iach. The Cloyed will: That famerate yet vnfitfull'd desire, that Tub Both fill'd and running: Rauening firft the Lambe, Longs after for the Garbage.

Imo. What, deere Sir, Thus rap's you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks Madam well: Befeech you Sir, Defire my Man's abode, where I did leave him: He's strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going Sir,

To give him welcome.

Imo. Continues well my Lord?

Iach. Well, Madam.

Imo. Is he dipos'd of mirth? I hope he is.

Iach. Exceding pleasant: none a stranger there, So merry, and so gamefome: he is call'd The Britaine Reueller.

Imo. When he was heere He did incline to fadneffe, and oft times Not knowing why.

Iach. I neuer faw him fad.

There is a Frenchman his Companion, one An eminent Monfteur, that it feemes much loues A Gallian-Girle at home. He furnaces The thickne fighes from him; whiles the lilly Britaine, (Your Lord I meane) laughs from's free lungs: sories oh, Can my fides hold, to think that man who knowes By Historie, Report, or his owne profe What woman is, yet what she cannot choofe But must be welcom'd with five houre langthift: For affured bondage?

Imo. Will my Lord fay fo?

Iach. I Madam, with his eyes in flood; with laughter, It is a Recreation to be by And heare him mocke the Frenchman:

But Heauen's know fame men are much too blame.

Imo. Not he I hope.

Iach. Not he:

But yet Heauen's bounty towards him, might Be vs'd more thankfull. In himfel: 'tis much; In you, which I account his beyond all Talents. Whil'st I am bound to wonder, I am bound To pitty too.

Imo. What do you pitty Sir?

Iach. Two Creatures heartely.

Imo. Am I one Sir?

You looke on me: what wrack difcerne you in me Defures your pitty?

Iach. Lamentable: what

To hide me from the radiant Sun, and solace Th'Arabian-Bird by a Snuffe.

Imo. I pray you Sir, Deliuer with more openneffe your answeres To my demands. Why do you pitty me?

Iach. That others do,

(I was about to fay) enjoy your —but It is an office of the Gods to venge it, Not mine to speake on't.

Imo. You do feeme to know Something of me, or what concerns mej pray you Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more Then to be true they do. For Certainties Either are past remedies; or timely knowing, The remedy then borne. Difcerne to me What both you pur and flop.

Iach' Had I this cheeke

To bathe my lips vpon: this hand, whole touch, (Whole every touch) would force the Feelers foule To th'outh of loyalty. This obiect, which Takes prifoner the wild motion of mine eye, Fiering it onely heere, should I (damn'd then)

Slaue?
Sauuer with lipps as common as the staves That mount the Capitoll: loyne gripes, with hands Made hard with hourly fallhood (fallhood as With labour) then by peeping in an eye Safe and illusious as the insokie light That's fed with flinking Tallow: it were fit That all the plagues of Hell should at one time Encounter such revolft.

Imo. Let me hear me no more.

Iach. O decreet Soule: your Cauze doth strike my hart With pity, that doth make me fike. A Lady So faire, and fatten'd to an Empirie Which makes the great'ned King's delight, to be partner'd With Tomboyes hyr'd, with that felfe exhibition Which your owne Coiffers yield: with difeas'd ventures That play with all Infirmities for Gold, Which rotteneffe can lend Nature. Such boyld'fluffe As well might payfon Physian. Be reueng'd, Or she that bore you, was no Queene, and you Recolle from your great Stocke.

Imo. Reueng'd:

How shold I be reueng'd? If this be true, (As I have fuch a Heart, that both mine ears Mift not in halfe abobe:) if it be true, How shold I be reueng'd?

Iach. Should he make me Live like 'Diana's Priest, bestwitz cold sheets, Whiles he is vaulting variable Rampes In your deflight, vpon your purfe: reueng it. I dedicate my felfe to your sweet pleasure, More Noble than that runagate to your bed, And will continue falt to your Affection, Still clofe, as fure.

Imo. What how, Pijanis?

Iach. Let me my finice tender on your lippes.

Imo. Away, I do condemne mine cares, that have So long attended thee. If thou wert Honourable Thou woul'dt have told this tale for Verue, not For fuch an end thou feck'ft, as safe, as danger: Thou woul'dt have a Gentleman, who is as free From thy report, as thou from Honors: and Solicites heere a Lady, that difaimes Thee, and the Dulc' alike. What how, Pijanis?

The King my Father shall be made acquainted Of thy Affault: if he shall think it fit, A fav'ry Stranger in his Court, to Mart As in a Romith Stew, and to expend His bestly minde to vs; he hath a Court He little cares for, and a Daughter, who He no refpects at all. What how, Pijanis?

Iach. O happy Lemanis, I may fay, The credit that thy Lady hath of thee Deferes thy truft, and thy moft perfect goodnesse Her affir'd credit. Bleffed flie you long, A Lady to the worthieth Sir, that euer Country call'd his: and you his Miftres, only For the moft worthieth fit. Give me your pardon, I haue spoke this to know if your Affiance Were deeply rooted, and shall make your Lord,

The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

That which he is, new o're; And he is one The truest manner'd: such a holy Witch, That he enchaunts Societies into him: Halfe all men hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.

Iach. He fits 'mongst men, like a defended God; He hath a kind of Honor sets him off, More then a mortall seeming. Be not angrie (Moft mighty Princeffes) that I haue adventure'd To try your taking of a false report, which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great Judgement, In the elecction of a Sir, so rare, Which you know, cannot erre. The loue I bear him, Made me to fan you thus, but the Gods made you (Vnlke all others) chaffelte. Pray your pardon.

Imo. All's well Sir:

Take my powre i'th'Court for yours.

Iach. My humble thankes: I have almoft forgot T'interat your Grace, but in a small requit,

And yet of moment too, for it concernes: Your Lord, my felfe, and other Noble Friends Are partners in the bufineffe.

Imo. Pray what's?

Iach. Some dozen Romaines of vs, and your Lord (The heft Feather of our wing) have mingled fummes To buy a Prefent for the Emperor: Which I (the Facor for the red) haue done In France: 'tis Plate of rare deule, and Jewels Of rich, and exquifite forme, their valewes great, And I am something curious, being frange To have them in fafe fhouage: May it please you To take them in protection.

Imo. Willingly:

And pawne mine Honor for their safety, since My Lord hath interest in them, I will keep them In my Bed-chamber.

Iach. They are in a Trunk

Attended by my men: I will make bold To fend them to you, onely for this night: I muft abord to morrow.

Imo. O no, no.

Iach. Ye, I fendeft: or I shall fhort my word By length'ning my returne. From Gallia, I croft the Seas on purpose, and on promife To fee your Grace.

Imo. I thanke you for your pains:

But not away to morrow.

Iach. O I muft Madam. Therefore I shall fendeft you, if you please To greet your Lord with writing, do't to night, I haue out-flood my time, which is material To'th'ender of our Prefent.

Imo. I will write:

Send your Trunk to me, it shall fafe be kept, And truely yeelded you: you're very welcome.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Cloten, and the two Lords.

Clot. Was there ever man had fuch lucke? when I kift the facke vpon an vp-caft, to be hit away? I had a hundred pound on't: and then a whorfon Jacke-an-Apes, moft
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

must take me vp for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.
1. What got he by that? you have broke his pate with your Bowle.
2. If his wit had bin like him that broke it: it would have run all out.

Clot. When a Gentleman is difpo'd to swear; it is not for any fancies by to curtail his oaths. Ha?
1. No my Lord; nor crop the eares of them.

Clot. Whorfon dog: I gave him satisfaction? would he had bin one of my Ranke.
2. To have smell'd like a Foole.

Clot. I am not vexed more at any thing in th' earth: a pox on't. I had rather not be so Noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, because of the Queene my Mother; every Jacke-Slaue hath his belly full of Fighting, and I must go vp and downe like a Cock, that no body can match.
2. You are Cocke and Capon too, and you crow Cock, with your combe on.

Clot. Sayest thou? I
2. It is not fit you Lordship should vnertextake every Companion, that you give offence too.

Clot. No, I know that: but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.
2. I, it is fit for your Lordship onely.

Clot. Why fo I say.
1. Did you heere of a Stranger that's come to Court night?

Clot. A Stranger, and I not know on't.
2. He's a strange Fellow himselfe, and knowes it not.
1. There's an Italian come, and 'tis thought one of Leonatus Friends.

Clot. Leonatus? A banight Raffall; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this Stranger?
1. One of your Lordships Pages.

Clot. Is it fit I went to looke vpon him? Is there no de'ogation in't?
2. You cannot derogate my Lord.

Clot. Not eaily I think.
2. You are a Foole granted, therefore your issues being foolish do not derogate.

Clot. Come, Ie goe see this Italian: what I have laft to day at Bowles, Ie winne to night of him. Come: go.
2. Ie attend your Lordship. Exit.

Clot. That such a crafite Dwiel as is his Mother should yield the world this Affe: A woman, that Beares all downe with her Braine, and this her Sonne, Cannot take two from twenty for his heart, And leuse eightene. Alas poore Princeff, Thou divine Images, what thou endur'st, Betwixt a Father by thy Step-dame govern'd, A Mother hourly couying plots: A Woer, More hatefull then the foule expulfion is Of thy deere Husband. Then that horrid Aft Of the divorce, herel'd make the Heavens hold firme The walls of thy deere Honour. Keep vnhauld That Temple thy faire mind,that thou mait find Tenioy thy banifh'd Lord: and this great Land. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Imogen, in her Bed, and a Lady.

Ino. Who's there? My woman: Helen?
La. Please you Madam.
Ino. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, Madam.
Ino. I have read three hours then:
Mines eyes are weake,
Fold downe the leafe where I have left: to bed.
Take not away the Taper, leave it burning;
And if thou canst awake by houre o'th clock,
I prythee call me: Sleepe hath ceas'd me wholly.
To your protection I commend me, Gods,
From Fairies, and the Tempers of the night,
Guard me befeech yee.

Sleepes.

Inchioms from the Trunke.

Lach. The Crickets sing, and mans one-labor'd lene Requirs it selfe by rest: Our Tarquins thus
Did fortly preffe the Ruffhes, ere he waketh
The Chaffitie he wounded. Cytheres,
How braly thou becom'th thy Bedfrench Lilly,
And whiter then the Sheetes: that I might touch,
But kiffe, one kiffe. Rubies vnaparagon'd,
How deere they doot: 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the Chamber thus: the Flame o'th Taper
Bows toward her,and would vnder-pepe her lids.
To see thinck'd Lights,now Canopied
Vnder those windows, white and Azure lac'd
With Blew of Heauen owne tinct. But my defigne.
To note the Chamber, I will write all done,
Such, and fuch pictures: There the window, fuch
Th'adornment of her Bed; the Arras, Figures,
Why fuch, and fuch: and the Contents o' th Story.
Ah, but some natural notes about her Body,
Aboue ten thousand meaner Mouchables
Would telleth, te'enrich mine Invention.
O sleepe, thou Ape of death, lye dull upon her,
And be her Senile but as a Monument,
Thus in a Chappell lying. Come off, come off;
As slippery as the Gordian-knot was hard.
'Tis mine, and this will witnesse outwardly,
As strongly as the Conscience do's within:
To'th'madding of her Lord. On her left brest
A mole Cinque-spot'ted: Like the Crimson drops
I'th bottome of a Cowlippe. Here's a Voucher,
Stronger then euer Law could make; this Secret
Will force him thinke I have pick'd the lock, and tane
The treafure of her Honour. No more: to what end?
Why shoul I write this downe, that's riveted,
Screw'd to my memorie. She hath bin reading late,
The Tale of Terent, here the leafe's turn'd downe
Where Philomel gave vp. I have enough,
To'th' Truncke againe, and shut the firing of it,
Swift, swift, you Dragons of the night, that dawning
May bear the Rauens eye: I lodge in feare,
Though this a heavenely Angell is here.

Clocke strikes* Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cloten, and Lords.

1. Your Lordship is the most patient man in liffe, the most coldeth that ever turn'd vp Ake.

Clot. It would make any man cold to looke.

1. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your Lordship; You are most hot, and furious when you winne.

Clot.
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

Winning will put any man into courage: if I could get this foolish Imagery, I should have Gold enough: it's almost morning, let's not?

Day, my Lord.

CLOT I would this Musicke would come: I am aduised to give her Musicke a mornings, they say it will penetrate. Enter Muficians.

Come on, tune; if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so will I try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remaine: but Ie never gave o're. First, a very excellent good concerte thing; after a wonderful sweet aire, with admirable rich words to it, and then let her confider.

SONG.

Hearke, hearke, the Larks at Howens gate sing, and Phoebus gies arife, His Strods to water at those Springs on chali'd Flowers that lies: And mingling Mary-buds begin to ope their Golden eyes With every thing that pretty is, my Ladies sweet arife: Arise, arise.

So, get you gone: if this pen trale, I will consider your Musicke the better: if it do not, it is a voyce in her ears which Horfe-haires, and Calumets, nor the voyce of vapaued Eumuch to boot, can neuer amed. Enter Cymbeline, and Queen.

2 Heere comes the King.

CLOT I am glad I was vp so late, for that's the reason I was vp so early: he cannot choose but take this Service I have done, fatherly. Good morrow to your Ma JJesty, and to my gracious Mother.

Cym. Attend you here the doore of our stern daughter Will she not forth?

CLOT I have affay'd her with Musicke, but the vouchsafe no notice.

Cym. The Exile of her Minion is too new, She hath not yet forgot him, some more time Must weare the print of his remembrance on't, And then she's yours.

Rg. You are most bound to'th' King, Who let's go by no vantages, that may Preferre you to his daughter: Frame your selfe To orderly folly, and be friendly With a suitfle of the season: make denials Encrease your Services to feeme, as if You were inspired to do those duties which You tender to her: that you in all obey her, Save when command to your dissimision tends, And therein you are fenfelefe.

CLOT Senflefe? Not fo.

Mfl. So like you (Sir) Ambassadors from Rome; The one is Caunt Lucius. Cym. A worthy Fellow, Albeit he comes on angry purpose now; But that's no fault of his: we must receive him According to the Honor of his Senders, And towards himselfe, his goods ease fore-spent on vs We must extend our notice: Our deere Sonne, When you have gain good morning to your Milthr, Attend the Queene, and vs, we shall have neede To employ you towards this Romane. Come our Queene.

CLOT If she be vp, Ile speake with her: if not Let her lye still, and dreame: by your leave hox, I know her women are about her: what

If I do line one of their hands, this Gold Which buys admittance (oft it doth) yes, and makes Diana's Rangers falf themselves, yeed vp Their Dore to 'th hand o'th' Stealer: and this Gold Which makes the True-man kill'd, and faues the Theefe: Nay, sometime hangs both Theefe, and True-man: what Can it not do, and vndoe? I will make One of her women Lawyer to me, for I yet not vnderstand the cafe my selfe.

By your leave. Knockes.

Enter a Lady.

La. Who's there that knockes?

CLOT A Gentleman.

La. No more.

CLOT Yes, and a Gentlewoman's Sonne.

La. That's more Then some whole Taylors are as deere as yours, Can lufly boast of: what's your Lordships pleasure?

CLOT Your Ladies perfon, is the ready?

La. I, to keepe her Chamber.

CLOT There is Gold for you, Sell me your good report.

La. How, my good name? or to report of you What I shall thinke is good. The Princeffe.

Enter Imagien.

CLOT Good morrow fairest, Sifter your sweet hand. Imo. Good morrow Sir, you lay out too much pains For purchasing but trouble: the thinkes I glue, Is telling you that I am poore of thankes, And scarce can spare them.

CLOT Still Ieware I loue you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deeppe with me: If you sware still, your recompence is full That I regard it not.

CLOT This is no answere.

Imo. But that you shall not say, I yeeld being silent, I would not speake. I pray you spare me, faith I shall ynfoled discurtoiede To your belt kindleffe: one of your great knoweings Should lerne (being taught) forbearance.

CLOT To leave you in your madneffe, 'twere my fin, I will not.

Imo. Fooleys are not mad Folkes.

CLOT Do you call me Foole?

Imo. As I am mad, I do: If you're patient, Ie no more be mad, That cures vs both. I am much forry (Sir) You put me to forget a Ladies manners By being so boziall and lerne now, for all, That I which know my heart, do here pronounce By th'very truth of it, I care not for you, And am so neere the lacke of Charitie To accuse my selfe, I hate you: which I had rather You felt, then make t my boast.

CLOT You saine against.

Obedience, which you owe your Father, for The Contract you pretend with that base Wretch, One, bred of Almes, and foder'd with cold dishes, With strops o'th' Court: It is no Contract, none; And though it be allowed in meaner parties (Yet who then he more meane) to knit their sooles (On whom there is no more dependance) But Bras and Beggary) in felfe-figur'd knot, Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement, by a a a
The conflation o'th' Crowne, and muft not, foyle
The precious note of it; with a bafe Slaue,
A fhearing for a Liurer, a Squires Cloth,
A Pantler; not fo eminent.

Imo. Prophane Fellow:
Wert thou the Sonne of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art before: thou waft not too bafe,
To be his Groom: thou waft not dignified enough
Euen to the point of Enioe. If 'twere made
Comparative for your Venus, to be fill'd
The vnder Hangman of his Kingdom; and hated
For being prefer'd so well.

Clo. The South-Fog rot him.

Imo. He never can meete more mischance, then come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meaneft Garment
That ever hath but clopt his body; is dearer
In my reprefent, then all the Heires aboue thee,
Were they all made fuch men: How now Piufanius?

Enter Piufanius.

Clo. His Garment? Now the dull.

Imo. To Dorthey my woman hie thee prefently.

Clo. His Garment?

Imo. I am fprighted with a Foole,
Frighted, and angred worfe: Go bid my woman
Search for a Jewell, that too caufally
Hath left mine Arme; it was thy Masters. Shrew me
If I would loafe it for a Reuenew.
Of any Kings in Europe. I do think,
I faw the this morning: Confident I am,
Last night 'twas on mine Arme; I knew'd it,
I hope it be not gone, to tell my Lord
That I knew aught but he.

Piuf. 'Twill not be loafe.

Imo. I hope f o: go and fearch.

Clo. You have abud's me:
His meaneft Garment?

Imo. 1. I faid to Sir,
If you will make't an Action, call witnefe to't.

Clo. I will enforme your Father.

Imo. Your Mother too:
She's my good Lady; and will conceive, I hope
But the worth of me. So leaue your Sir,
To work of different.

Clo. He thereueng'd:
His meaneft Garment? Well.

Poft. Fear it not Sir: I would I were fo sure
To winne the King, as I am bold, her Honour
Will remaine her's.

Philius. What means you do you make to him?

Poft. Not any: but abide the change of Time,
Quide in the preuent winters flate, and with
That warmer dayses would come: In thefe fear'd hope
I barely grattifie your loue they fayling
I muft die much your debtor.

Philius. Your very goodneffe, and your company,
On-pays all I can do: By this your King,
Hat heard of Great Auguffus: Cacus Lucius,
Will do's Comminion thorough: And I think

Hec'lle grant the Tribute: fend th'Arrerages,
Or looke upon your Romaines, whose remembrance
Is yet freth in their griefe.

Poft. I do believe
(Stam'd though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will prove a Wal; and you shall hear
The Legion now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing-Britaine, then haue tydings
Of any penny Tribut paid. Our Countrymen
Are men more order'd, then when Julius Cezar
Smilt at their lacke of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at. Their discipline.
(Now wing-led with their courages) will make knowne
To their Approuers, they are People, fuch
That mend upon the world.

Enter Lachimo.

Phi. See Lachimo.

Poft. The swiftest Harfs, haue pofted you by land;
And Windes of all the Aorners kis'd your Salies,
To make your vehfell amble.

Phi. Welcome Sir.

Poft. I hope the briefneffe of your anfwere, made
The speedineffe of your returne.

Lachimo. Your Lady,
Is one of the Fayref that I haue look'd upon

Poft. And thereby shall the beft, or let her beauty
Looke thorough a Cagemont to allure falle hearts,
And be fälle with them.

Lachimo. Heere are Letters for you.

Poft. Their tenour good I truft.

Lachimo. 'Tis very like.

Poft. Was Caius Lucius in the Britaine Court,
When you were there?

Lachimo. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Poft. All is well yet,
Sparkles this Stone as it was wont, or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Lachimo. If I haue loft it,
I shoule haue loft the worth of it in Gold,
Ie make a journey twice as farre, t'enjoy
A second night of fuch sweet fhortneffe, which
Was mine in Britaine, for the King is wante.

Poft. The Stones too hard to come by.

Lachimo. Not a whit,
Your Lady being so eafy.

Poft. Make note Sir
Your loffe, your Sport: I hope you know that we Muft not continue Friends.

Lachimo. Good Sir, we muft
If you keepe Covenant: had I not brought
The knowledge of your Miftris home, I grant
We were to queffion farther; but I now
Profeffe my faith the winner of her Honor,
Together with your Ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you hauing proceeded but
By both your wills.

Poft. If you can mak't apparent
That you have tafted her in Bed; yon hand,
And Ring is yours. If not, the foule opinion
You had of her pure Honour, gains, or loofes,
Your Sword, or mine, or Matteriefe leave both
To who shall finde them.

Lachimo. Sir, my Circumstances
Being so nere the Truth, as I will make them,
Mufi first induce you to beleue; whose foome
I will confirme with oath, which I doubt not

You'ld
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall finde
You need't it not.

Pff. Proceed.

Lacb. First, her Bed-chamber
(Where I confesse I slept not, but proffe
Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd
With Tapistry of Silke, and Siluer, the Story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Sidrus well'd about the Bankes, or for
The profle of Batte, or Pride. A piece of Worke
So bravely done, so rich, that it did stiriue
In Workmanship, and Value, which I wonder'd
Could be so rare, and exactly wrought
Since the true life on't was ———
Pff. This is true:
And this you might have heard of heere, by me,
Or by some other.

Lacb. More particulars
Must suffifie my knowledge.
Pff. So they must,
Or doe your Honour Inury.

Lacb. The Chimney
Is South the Chamber, and the Chimney-peece
Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves; the Cutter
Was another Nature shrube, out-went her,
Motion, and Breath left out.
Pff. This is a thing
Which you might from Relation likewise respe,
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Lacb. The Rooff o'th Chamber,
With golden Cherubins is fretted. Her Andirons
(I had forgot them) were two winking Cupids
Of Siluer, each on one foote standing, nicely
Depending on their Brands.
Pff. This is her Honor:
Let it be granted you have seene all this (and praise
Be gien to your remembrance) the description
Of what is in her Chamber, nothing saues
The wager you have laide.

Lacb. Then if you can
Be pales, I begge but leave to ays this Irewell: See,
And now 'tis vp againe: it must be married
To that your Diamond, I leake them.
Pff. Iowe——

Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?

Lacb. Sir (I thanke her) that
She stript it from her Arme: I see her yet:
Her pretty Adorn, did out-fell her guife,
And yet enrich'd it too: she gae it me,
And gaid, the priz'd it once.
Pff. May be, the pluck'd it off
To lend it me.

Lacb. She writes so to you? doth she?
Pff. O no, no, no, 'tis true. Heere, take this too,
It is a Ballisake vnto mine eye,
Kille me I begge but leave to ays: Let there be no Honor,
Where there is Beauty: Truth, where semblance: Love,
Where there's another man. The Vowes of Women,
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Then they are to their Vertues, which is nothing:
Oh, howe measure false.

Pff. Have patience Sir,
And take your Ring againe, 'tis not yet wonne:
It may be probable the loft it: or

Who knowes if one her women, being corrupted
Hath stolen it from her.

Pff. Very true,
And so I hope he came by't: backe my Ring,
Render to me some corporall signe about her
More euident then this: for this was stolen.

Lacb. By Jupiter, I had it from her Arme.
Pff. Hearke you, he sweares: by Jupiter he sweares.
'Tis true, may keepe the King; 'tis true: I am sure
She would not looke it: her Attendants are
All sworne, and honourable: they induc'd to steale it?
And by a Stranger? No, he hath enjoy'd her,
The Cognizance of her incontinence
Is this: she hath bought the name of Whore, thus dearly
There, take thy hyre, and all the Fiends of Hell
Divide themselves between you.

Phil. Sir, be patient:
This is not strong enough to be beleue'd
Of one perfwaded well of.
Pff. Neuer take it on:
She hath bin colt by him.

Lacb. If you fekke
For further satisfying, under her Brest
(Worthy her preffing) lyes a Mole, right proud
Of that most delicate Lodging. By my life
I kif it, and it gave me pretent hunger.
To feeds againe, thoughfull. You do remember
This flaine upon her?

Pff. 1. and it doth conforme
Another flaine, as bigge as Hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Lacb. Will you heare more?
Pff. Spare your Arithmaticke,
Neuer count the Tumers: Once, and a Million.

Lacb. Ile be sworn.
Pff. No swearing:
If you will sweare you have not done't, you lyce,
And I will kife thee, if thou do'nt deny
Thou'll made me Cuckold.

Lacb. Ile deny nothing.
Pff. O that I had her heere, to teare her Limb-meale:
I will go there and do't, 'tis Court, before
Her Father. Ile do something.

Phil. Quite besides
The government of Patience. You have wonne:
Let's follow him, and peroust the pretent wrath
He hath against himselfe.

Lacb. With all my heart.

Enter Pffnomus.

Pff. Is there no way for Men to be, but Women
Must be halfe-workers? We are all Baitards,
And that most venerate man, which I
Did call my Father, was, I know not where
When I was ramp. Some Coyner with his Tooles
Made me a counterfeit; yet my Mother feem'd
The Dian of that time: so doth my Wife
The Non-pareil of this. Oh Vengeance, Vengeance!
Me of my lawfull pleasure the refrain'd,
And pray'd me off forbearance: did it with
A pulcency fo Rolfe, the sweet view on't
Might well have warm'd oide Saturne;
That I thought her
As Chas't, as vn-Sunn'd Snow. Oh, all the Diuels!
This yellow Iachino in an houre, was't not?
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Or lefe; at first? Perchance he spoke not, but Like a full Acom’d Boze, a Iarmen on,
Cry’d oh, and mounted: I found no opposition
But what he look’d for, should oppose, and the Should from encounter guard. Could I finde out
The Womans part in me, for there’s no motion
That tends to Vice in man, but I affirme
It is the Womans part: be it lying, note it,
The womans: Flattering, hers; Deceuilng, hers:
Luft, and ranke thoughts, hers; Reuenges hers:
Ambitions, Covetings, change of Prides, Diftaine,
Nice-longing, Slanders, Mutability;
All Faults that name, nay, that Hell knows,
Why hers, in parts, or all: but rather all For euon to Vice
They are not conftant, but are changing fill;
One Vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not hafte so old as that. Ile write against them,
Deteft them, curfe them: yet ’tis greater Skill
In a true Haste, to pray they have their will:
The very Diucla cannot plague them better.

Cym. Now fay, what would Augustus Cæsar with vs?
Luc. When Iulius Cæsar (whose remembrance yet
Lies in men eyes, and will to Eares and Tongues
Be Theame, and hearing euor) was in this Britain,
And conquer’d it, Cæsars thine Vnkle
(Famous in Cæsars pravity, no whil leffe
Then in his Feats deferving it for him,
And his Succeffion, granted Rome a Tribute,
Yeereely throuble poundes; which,(by thee)lately
Is left vntender’d.
Re. And to kill the meruall,
Shall be fo euor.

Cæs. There be many Cæsars,
Ere fuch another Iulius: Britaines a world
By it liefe, and we will nothing pay
For wring our owne nobles.
Re. That opportunity
Which then they had to take from’s, to refume
We have againe. Remember Sir, my Liege,
The Kings your Anceftors, together with
The natural brauery of your Ile, which flands
As Neptunes Parke, ribb’d, and pal’d in
With Oakes vnscalable, and roaring Waters,
With Sands that will not bear your Enemies Boates,
But fucces them vp to’th Top-maift. A kinde of Conquett
Cæsar made heere, but made not heere his bragge
Of Came, and Saw, and Queer-came: with thame
(The firft that ever touch’d him) he was carried
From off our Coaft, twice beaten: and his Shippung
(Poore ignorant Baubles) on our terrible Seas
Like Egge-thels mou’d upon their Surges, crack’d
As eaily ‘gainf our Rocks. For loy whereof,
The fam’d Cæsullian, who was once at point
(Oh gillet Fortune) to mafter Cæsars Sword,
Made Lads-Tonne with reoycing-Fires bright,

And Britaines frut with Courage.

Cæs. Come, there’s no more Tribune to be paid: our Kingsdomes might longer then it was at that time: and (as I said) there is no mo fuch Cæsars, other of them may have crook’d Nobes, but to owe fuch fritante Armes, none.

Cym. Son, let your Mother end.
Cæs. We have yet many among vs, can gripe as hard as Cæsullian, I doe not fay I am one: but I have a hand.
Why Tribune? Why should we pay Tribune? If Cæsar can hide the Sun from vs with a Blanket,or put the Moon in his pocket, we will pay him Tribune for lights: elfe Sir, no more Tribune, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the inferiou Romain, did extort
This Tribune from vs, we were free. Cæsars Ambition,
Which fwell’d fo much, that it did almoft stretch
The fides o’ th’ World, against all colour here,
Did put the yoake upon’s; which to fhake off
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Our felues to be, we do. Say then to Cæfar,
Our Ancefstor was that Mulmuatius, which
Oriand’d our Lawes, whole vfe the Sword of Cæsar
Hath too much mangled; whole repairey, and franchife,
Shall (by the power we hold) be our good deed,
The Rome be therfore angry. Mulmuatius made our lawes
Who was the firft of Britain, which did put
His browes within a golden Crowne,and call’d
Himfelfe a King.

Luc. I am forry Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar
(Cæsars, that hath moe Kings his Sonnes,then Thy felfe Domeflickie Officers) thine Enemy:
Receyve it from me then. Warre, and Confufion
In Cæsars name pronounce I ‘gainf thee: Looke
For fury, not to be refited. Thus defide,
I thank thee for my felfe.

Cym. Thou art welcome Cains,
Thy Cæsar Knighted me; my youth I spent
Much vnder him; of him, I gather’d Honour,
Which he, to feeke of me againe, perforce,
Behoues me keepe at vterance, I am perfect,
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for
Their Liberties are now in Armes: a Preffident
Which not to reade, would thow the Britaines cold:
So Cæsar shall not finde them.

Luc. Let prove speake.

Cæs. His Mallery bides you welcome. Make paftime with vs, a day, or two, or longer: if you feeke vs af-afterwards in other termes, you shall finde vs in our Saltwater-Girdle: if you beate vs out of vs, it is yours: if you fall in the adventure, our Crowes shall fare the better for you: and there’s an end.

Luc. So fir.

Cym. I know your Mafter’s pleasure, and he mine:
All the Remaine, is welcome.

The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

Is faine into thy care? What faile Italian, (As poysonous tong'd, as hand'd) hath preval'd On thy too ready hearing? Difloyall? No. She's punish'd for her Truth; and vndergoes More Godiffe-like, than Wife-like; such Affairs As would take in some Vertue. Oh my Master, Thy mind to her, is now as low as were Thy Fortunes. How? That I should murther her, Upon the Loue, and Truth, and Vowes,which I Have made to thy command! I her? Her blood? If it be so, to do good fenucce, never Let me be counted feruicible. How looke I, That I should feeme to lacke humanity, So much as this Fact comes to? Doo't!'The Letter. That I have first bow'd, by thy owne command, Shall give this opportunity. Oh dam'd paper, Blacke as the Inke that's on'the: fenefeffe bauble, Art thou a Fodariar for this A; and look't So Virgin-like without? Loe here he comes. Enter Imogen.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Pj. Madam, here is a Letter from my Lord.

Im. Who, thy Lord? That is my Lord Leonatus? Oh, learn'd indeed were that Altronomer That know the Stars, as I his Chancellors, He'll lay the Future open. You good Gods, Let what is here cont'd, rellish of Loue, Of my Lords health, of his content; yet not That we two are affuerd, let that grieue him; Some griefes are meauderable, that is one of them, For it doth physicke Loue, of his content, All but in that. Good Wax, thy leaue: blest be You Bees that make thefe Lockets of counaffe. Louers, And men in dangerous Bondes pray not alike, Though Forfeityours you cauf in prifon, yet You clafse young Cypriate Tables: good Newes Gods.

Iffice, and your Fathers wrath (should be take me in his Dominion) could not be fo cruell to me, as you: (wh the de- rett of Creatures)would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria at Milford-Hauen: what your own Loue, will out of th'addles you, follow. So be wise feed, that remains byall to His Pow'r, and your encrea- sing in Loue. Leonatus Pothamus.

Oh for a Horse with wings: here'thou Pijanis? He is at Milford-Hauen; Rea'd, and tell me How farre 'tis thither. If one of meane affaires May plod it in a weake, why may not I Glide thither in a day? Then true Pijanis, Who long't will like me, to fee thy Lord; who long't (Oh let me bate) but not like me; yet long't But in a faultier kinde. Oh not like me; For mine's beyond, beyond: fa'y, and speake thiche (Loues Counfalor should fill the bores of hearing, To'th'interflution of the Senfe)how farre it is To this fame bleffed Milford. And by'th'way Tell me how Wale was made fo happy, as | Titherfe such a Hauen. But firft of all, How wetmay fteale from hence: and for the gap That we shall make in Time, from our hence-going, And our returne, to exclude: but firft, how ger hence. Why should exclude be borne or ere begot? Weele talke of that hereafter. Prythee speake, How many flores of Miles may we well rid Twixt howre, and howre?

Pj. One score 'twixt Sun, and Sun, Madam's enough for you: and too much too.

Im. Why,one that rode to's Execution Man, Could never go so low as I have heari of Riding wagers, Where Horfes have bin nimble then the Sands That run i'th'Clock's behalfe. But this is Foolerie, Go, bid my Woman figna a Sicknelle, fay She's home to her Father; and prouide me presently A Riding Sill: No cufller then would fit A Franklins Hufwife.

Pij. Madam, you're beat consider.

Im. I fee before me (Man) not here, not heere; Nor what enufes but have a Fog in them That I cannot looke through. Away, I prythee, Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say: Accessible is none but Milford way.

The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing:
We are beaftly subtle as the Fox for prey,
Like warlike as the Wolfe, for what we eate:
Our Valour is to chace what flies; Our Cage
We make a Quire, as doth the prifon'd Bird,
And fign our Bondage freely.

Bel. How you speake.
Did you but know the Citties Wuriees,
And felt them knowingly; the Art o'th'Court,
As hard to leave, as keepe: whose top to climbe
Is certaine falling; or fo fliptly, that
The fear'e as bad as falling. The toyle o'th'Walre,
A paine that onely feemes to fqueak out danger
I'th'nome of Fame, and Honor, which dyes I'th'earch,
And hath as oft a flam'rous Eghtaph.
As Record of faire Act. Nay, many times
Doth ill defence, by doing well: what's worfe
Muft cur'tie at the Centure. Oh Boyes, this Storie
The World may read in me: My bodie's mark'd
With Romain Swords; and my report, was once
Firft, with the belt of Note. Cymbeline you'd me,
And when a Soullard was the Theame, my name
Was not farre off: then was I as a Tree
Whole boughs did bend with fruit. But in one night,
A Storme, or Robbery (call it what you will)
Shooke downe my mellow hangings: now my Leaues,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Vncertaine fauour.

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft)
But that two Villaines, whose faltie Oathes presuy'd
Before my perfect Honor, fower to Cymbeline,
I was Confiderate with the Romanes: fo
Followed my Banishment, and this twenty yeares,
This Rocke, and thefe Demefnes, have bene my World,
Where I have liu'd at honeft freedome, payed
More pious debts to Heauen, then in all
The fore-end of my time. But, vp to Mountains,
This is not Hunters Language; he that frikes
The Venifon firft, fhall be the Lord o'th'Feast,
To him the other two shall minifter,
And we will fear no poifon, which attends
In place of greater State:
Ie meete you in the Valleys.

How hard it is to hide the farkes of Nature?
Thfe Boyes know little they are Sonnes to'th'King,
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alie.
They thinke they are mine,
And though trau'd vp that meanely
I'th'Cauze, whereon the Bowe their thoughts do hit,
The Roofes of Palaces, and Nature prompts them
In fimple and lowe things, to Prince it, much
Beyond the tricke of others. This Paladur,
The heyre of Cymbeline and Britaine, who
The King his Father call'd Guidercine. I trowe,
When on my three-foot flooe I fit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirites flye out
Into my Story: fay thus mine Enemy feldi,
And thus I fet my foote on his necke, even then
The Princeely blood flores in his Cheeks, he sweats,
Strains his yong Nerues, and puts himfelfe in pofture
That acts my words. The yonger Brother Cadwall,
Once Arviragus, in as like a figure
Strikes life into my speech, and theews much more
His owne concurring. Hearke, the Game is row'd,
Oh Cymbeline, Heauen and my Confeience knowes
Thou di'dst vniuitly banifh me: whereon

At three, and two yeeres old, I flofe thefe Babes,
Thinking to barre thee of Succifion, as
Thou retu's me of my Landes. Euripibis,
Thou wain't their Nurtie, they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honor to her graue:
My felle Belarius, that am Meargan call'd
They take for Naturall Father. The Game is vp. Exit.

Where is Pthybamus? What is in thy mind
That makes thee fcarce thus? Wherefore breaks that figh
From thin'ward of thee? One, but painted thus
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond felte-explication. Put thy felle
Into a hauour of left fear, ere wildneffe
Vanquish my flaver Senses. What's the matter?
Why tender't thou that Paper to me, with
A looke vntender? It'll be Summer Newes
Smile too't before; if Winterly, thou need'lt
But keepe that count'rance fih. My Husbands hand?
That Drug-diam'd Italy, hath out-craftied him,
And he's-at some hard point. Speake man, thy Tongue
May take off some extremitie, which to reade
Would be cuen mortall to me.

Pij. Pleafre you reader,
And you shall finde me (wretched man) a thing
The most diffain'd of Fortune.

Imogen reader.

Thy efMifrift (Pijianio) bath plaid the Stropmet in my Bed; the Tefimonials wherefores, ye bleeding in me. I feake not out of weake Sermifes, but from profite as strong as my graves, and as certaine as I expet my Romanes. That part, thou (Pijianio) muft affe for me, if my Faith be not tainted with the breach of bes; it's thine owne bands take away her life: I fiall grue thee opportunity at Milford Hauen. See hath my Letter for the purpoze; where, if thou fear to ftrike, and to make me certaine it is done, thou art the Pander to her difhonneur, and equally to me dijloyal.

Pij. What shal I need to draw my Sword, the Paper
Hath cut her throat alreadie? No, 'tis Slander,
Whose edge is sharper then the Sword, whose tongue
Out-venomes all the Wormes of Nyle, whose breath
Rides on the pofting winde, and cloth belye
All corners of the World. Kings, Queenes, and States,
Maides, Matrons, say the Secrets of the Graue
This veprous flander enters. What cheere, Madam?

Imo. Falte to his Bed? What is it to be falte?
To lye in watch there, and to thinke on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? If heep charge Nature,
To breake it with a fearfull dreame of him,
And cry my felle awake? That's falte to's Bed? Is it?

Pij. Alas good Lady,

Imo. I falte? Thy Confeience wittows: Iachimo,
Thou did'lt accufe him of Inconinencie,
Thou then look'd like a Villaine: now, me thinkest

Thy
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

Thy favours good enough. Some lay of Italy
(Whose mother was her painting) hath betrayed him:
Poore I am flate, a Garment out of fashion,
And for I am richer then to hang by th'walles,
I must be Ript: To piece with me? Oh!?
Mens Vowes are womens Traitors. All good seeming
By thy reboul (oh Husband) shall be thought
Put on for Villainy? not borne where'rt growes,
But wore a Bait for Ladies.

Pifi. Good Madam, here me.

Ine. True honest men being heard, like false Accusat,
Were in his time thought false: and Symes weeping
Did Scandal all many a holy teare, tooke pitty
From moost true wretchendevle. So thou, Politianus
Wilt lay the Leaven on all proper men;
Goodly, and gallant, shall be false and peril'd
From thy great false: Come fellow, be thou honest,
Do thou thy Masters bidding. When thou feest him,
A little witness my obedience. Lookke
I draw the Sword my selfe, take it, and hit
The Innocent Mansion of my Loue (my Heart):
Fear not, 'tis empty of all things, but Greefe:
Thy Master is not there, who was indeede
The riches of it. Do his bidding, frieke,
Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou feest'n a Coward.
Pifi. Hence vile Instrumnt, Thou shalt not damme my hand.

Ine. Why, I must dye:
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No Servant of thy Masters. Against Selfe-slaughter,
There is a prohibition fo Divine,
That crauens my weake hand: Come, here's my heart:
Something's a-foot: Soft, soft, woe'lt no defence,
Obedient as the Scabbard. What is here,
The Scriptures of the Lowall Loamus,
All turn'd to Heretic? Away, away
Corrupters of my Faith, thou shall no more
Be Stomachers to my heart: thus may poor Fooles
Believe false Teachers: Though those that be braid
Do feele the Tesfion sharply, yet the Traitor
Stands in worfe cafe of wee. And thou Politianus,
That didst set vp my disobedence gainst the King
My Father, and makes me put into contempt the suits
Of Princely Fellowes, shalt hereafter finde
It is no acte of common paffage, but
A braine of Rarenesse: and I gaine my selfe,
To thinkke, when thou shalt be defied'd by her,
That now thou tryest on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. Pytheye dispacth,
The Lambe entreats the Butcher. Whet's thy knife?
Thou art too low to do thy Masters bidding
When I defect it too.
Pifi. Oh gracious Lady: Since I receu'd command to do this buinnesse,
I haue not flept one winke.

Ine. Dou't, and to bed then.
Pifi. He wake mine eye-balles first.

Ine. Wherefore then
Did'st undertake it? Why haft thou abus'd
So many Miles, with a pretence? This place?
Mine Action? and thine owne? Our Horfes labour?
The Time inquiring thee? The perturb'd Court
For my being absent? wherunto I neuer
Purpose returne. Why haft thou gone so farre
To be vn-bent? when thou haft'take thy fhand,

Th'elected Deere before thee?
Pifi. But to win time
To looke for bad employment, in the which I have consider'd of a coure: good Ladie
Hear me with patience.

Ine. Taleke thy tongue weary, speake:
I haue heard I am a Strumpet, and mine ear
Therein falle froooke, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent, to bottome that. But speake.
Pifi. Then Madam,
I thought you would not backe againe.

Ine. Most like,
Bringing me heere to kill me.
Pifi. Not fo neither:
But if I were as wife, as honest, then
My purpose would prove well: it cannot be,
But that my Master is abus'd. Some Villaine,
I, and angular in his Art, hath done you both
This cur'd infrute.

Ine. Some Roman Curtezean?
Pifi. No, on my life:
Ie gue but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody figne of it. For 'tis commanded
I should fo: you shall be mit at Court,
And that will well confirme it.

Ine. Why good Fellow,
What shall I doe the while? Where bide? How live?
Or in my life, what comfort, when I am
Dead to my Husband?
Pifi. If you'lt backe to th'Court.
Ine. No Court, no Father, nor no more doe
With that harth, noble, simple nothing:
That Glotten, whose Loue-fuite hath bene to me
As fearfull as a Siege.
Pifi. If not at Court,
Then not in Britaine muft you bide.

Ine. Where? Then?
Hath Britaine all the Sunne that shines? Day? Night?
Are they not but in Britaine? In th'worlds Volume
Our Britaine feemes as of it, but not in't
In a great Poole, a Swannes-neft, pytheye thinke
There's liners out of Britaine.
Pifi. I am most glad
You thinkke of other place: 'T'h'Ambsfadior,
Lucius the Romaine comes to Milford-Hauen
To morrow. Now, if you could weare a minde
Darke, as your Fortune is, and but difguife
That which tappere it felle, muft not yet be,
But by felle-danger, you should tread a courfe
Pretty, and full of view: yea, happily, neere
The residence of Politianus; lo nie (at leaft).
That though his Actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truely as he moves.

Ine. Oh for such meanes,
Though peril to my modelle, not death on't
I would adventure.
Pifi. Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a Woman: change
Command, into obedience. Fare, and Niceneffe
(The Handmaids of all Women, or more truly Woman it pretty felle) into a waggish courage,
Ready in gybes, quicke-anfwer'd, favicke, and
As quarrelous as the Weazell: Nay, you must Forget that raref Treasure of your Checke,
Exposing it (but oh the harder heart,

Alacke
Alacke no remedy) to the greedy touch
Of common-killing Time: and forget
Your laboursome and damny Trimmes, wherein
You made great Like angry.

Imo. Nay be breefe?
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pij. First make your selfe but like one,
Fore-thinking this: I have already fit
("Tis in my Cloake-bagge) Doubtelt, Hat, Hote, all
That answer to them: Would you in their seruing,
(And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a feason) Fore Noble Lucius
Presift your selfe, defire his service: tell him
Wherein you're happy; which will make him know,
If that his head haue care in Muficke, doubleffe
With low he will imbrace you: for he's Honourable,
And doubting that, most holy. Your means abroad:
You have my heart, and you will never fall
Beginning, nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The Gods will diet me with. Prythee away,
There's more to be confider'd: but we'll even
All that good time will glue vs. This attempt,
I am Souldier too, and will abide it with,

Pij. Well Madam, we must take a short farewell,
Leaft being mit, I be fullpecked
Of your carriage from the Court. My Noble Mifirs,
Here is a boxe, I had it from the Queenne,
What's in't is precious: If you are sicke at Sea,
Or Stomacke-quail'd at Land, a Dramme of this
Will drive away diftemper. To some fhade,
And fit you to your Manhood: may the Gods
Direct you to the best.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Gym. Thus farre, and to farewell.

Luc. Thanks, Royall Sir: My Emperor hath wrote, I must from hence,
And am right forry, that I must report ye
My Masters Enemy.

Gym. Our Subject's (Sir)
Will not endure your yoke; and for our selfe
To fhew like Soueraignty then they, must needs
Appeare va-Kinglike.

Luc. So Sir: I defire of you
A Conduett over Land, to Milford-Hauen.
Madam, I loue your Grace, and you,
Gym. My Lords, you are appointed for that Office:
The due of Honor, in no point omit:
So farewell Noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my Lord.

Gym. Recieve it friendly: but from this time forth
I weare it as your Enemy.

Luc. Sir, the Euent
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.

Gym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my Lords
Till he haue croft the Severn. Happines, Exit Lucius, &c

Qu. He goes hence frowning: but it honours vs
That we have gluè him caufe.

Clos. 'Tis all the better,
Your valiant Britains have their wishs in it.

Gym. Lucius hath wrote already to the Emperor
How it goes here. It fits vs therefore ripely
Our Chariots, and our Horfemen be in rideffife:
The Powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soone be drawne to head, from whence he mouses
His warre for Britaine.

Qu. 'Tis not sleepe but ifeilfe,
But must be look'd too speedily, and strongly.

Gym. Our expetation that it would be thus Hath made vs forward. But my gentle Queene,
Where is our Daughter? She hath not appeard
Before the Roman, nor to vs hath tender'd
The duty of the day. She looke vs like
A thing more made of malice, then of duty,
We have noted it. Call her before vs, for
We have beene too flight in fufferance.

Qu. Royall Sir,
Since the exile of Pofthamus, most retyr'd
Hath her life bin: the Cure whereof, my Lord,
'Tis time muft do. Beleech your Majestie,
Forbear sharp Teaches to her. She's a Lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are stolke,
And strokes death to her.

Enter a Maffenger.

Gym. Where is the Sir? How
Can her conccpt be answer'd?

Mst. Please you Sir,
Her Chambers are all lock'd, and there's no anwer
That will be gien to 'thlowd of noise, we make.

Qu. My Lord, when I left I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excufe herkeeping close,
Whereby conffain't by her infirmity,
She shoold that duele leau't vpaly to you
Which dayly she was bound to proffer this
She wish'd me to make knowne: but our great Court
Made me too blame in memory.

Gym. Her doores lock'd?
Not seene of late? Grant Heauens, that which I
Feare, prove falle.

Qu. Sonne, I fay, fellow the King.

Clos. That man of hers, Pifiano, her old Seruant
I have not seene these two days.

Qu. Go, looke after: Pifiano, thou that fland't fo for Pofthamus,
He hath a Drugg of mine: I pray, his abfence
Proceed by fwalloving that. For he beleues
It is a thing moft precious. But for her,
Where is the gone? Hapy difpaire hath feiz'd her:
Or wing'd with feruour of her lour, she's flowne
To her defir'd Pofthamus: gone the is,
To death, or to fihonor, and my end
Can make good vie of either. Shee being downe,
I have the placing of the Britifh Crowne.

Enter Cloten.

How now, my Sonne?

Clos. 'Tis ceraine the she is fledd:
Go in and cheere the King, he rages, none
Dare come about him.

Qu. All the better: may
This night fore-flall him of the comming day. Exit Qu.

Clos. I love, and hate her: for she's Faire and Royall,
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquitile

Then
Then Lady, Ladies, Woman, from every one
The best the hath, and she of all compounded
Out-felles them all. I louse her therefore, but Disdainful me, and throwing favour on her.

The law Pofhimus, flanders o her judgement,
That what is clee rare, is chocel'd; and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay indeede,
To be requeld upon her. For, when Foolest shall—

Enter Pijanis.

Who is here? What? are you poking frath?
Come hither: Ab you precious Pandar, Villaine,
Where is thy Lady? In a word, or else
Thou art straightway with the Fiends.

Pij. Oh, good my Lord.

Cl. Where is thy Lady? Or, by Jupiter,
I will not ask again. Cloce Villaine,
I eave this Secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to finde it. Is she with Pofhimus?

From whole so many weights of bafeffe, cannot
A dram of worth be drawne.

Pij. Alas, my Lord,
How can she be with him? When was the mis'd?
He is in Rome.

Cl. Where is she Sir? Come nimmer:
No farther halting: fatifie me home,
What is become of her?

Pij. Oh, my all-worlhy Lord.

Cl. All-worlhy Villaine,
Difcover where thy Misfr is, as once,
At the next word: no more of worthy Lord:
 Speak, or thy silence on the infant, is
 Thy condemnation, and thy death.

Pij. Then Sir:
This Paper is the historie of my knowledge
Touching her flight.

Cl. Let's see't: I will pursue her euen to Augustus Throne.

Pij. Or this, or perih.
She's farre enough, and what he learns by this,
May proue his travell, not her danger.

Cl. Hump.

Pij. He write to my Lord she's dead: Oh Imogen,
Safe mayft thou wand'ry, safe returne aken.

Cl. Sira, is this Letter true?

Pij. Sir, as I thinke.

Cl. It is Pofhimus hand, I know't. Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a Villain, but do me true feruice: vnder-

go these Implements wherein I should have cause to vie thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy fore I bid thee to performe it, directly and truely, I would thinke thee an honest man: thou shouldest not want my meanes for thy releafe, nor my voyce for thy prefer-

Pij. Well, my good Lord.

Cl. Wilt thou ferue mee? For since patiently and confantly thou haft fuccke to the bare Fortune of that Begger Pofhimus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou ferue mee?

Pij. Sir, I will.

Cl. Gue mee thy hand, here's mee purs.
Haft any of thy late Maiters Garments in thy possession?

Pijan. I have (my Lord) at my Lodging, the same
Garme that he wore, when he tooke leave of my Ladie & Mi-

Cl. The first feruice thou dost mee, fetch that Suite hither, let it be thy ferst feruice, go.

Pij. I shall my Lord.

Cl. Meet thee at Milford-Hauen: (I forgot to ask him one thing, let me remember it anon:) even there, thou villaine Pofhimus will I kill thee. I would thee Garments were come. She faile upon a time (the bitterneffe of it, I now belch from my heart) that thee held the very Garment of Pofhimus, in more respect, then my Noble and natural person; together with the adornment of my Qualities. With that Sute upon my backe I will ra-uih her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she fee my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt.
He on the ground, my speche of infaliment ended on his deade bodie, and when my Luft hath dined (which, as I say, to vex her, I willexecute in the Cloathes that she praide't:) to the Court Ile knock her backe,foot her home again. She hath dephi'd mee rejoycingly, and ile bee merry in my Reuenge.

Enter Pijanis.

Be thoof the Garments

Pij. I, my Noble Lord.

Cl. How long is't since she went to Milford-Hauen?

Pij. She can scarce be there yet.

Cl. Bring this Apparell to my Chamber, that is the second thing that I have commanded thee. The third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary Mate to my defance. Be but dastarous, and true preferment shall tender it fels to thee. My Reuenge is now at Milford, would I had wings to follow it. Come, and be true.

Pij. Thou bid'd me to my losse: for true to thee,
Were to prove false, which I will never bee to him that is moft true. To Milford go,
And finde not her, whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow
You Heavenly blessings on her: This Foole speeche
Be croft with flownelle; Labour be his meede.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. I fee a mans life is a tedious one,
I haue tyr'd my selfe: and for two nights together
Hauie made the ground my bed. I should be fike,
But that my resolution helps me: Milford,
When from the Mountaine on, Pijanis they'd thee,
Thou wanst within a kenne. Oh Lous, I thinke
Foundations flye the wretched: such I meanes,
Where they should be releu'd. Two Beggers told me,
I could not misle my way. Will poore Folkes lye
That have Afflicitions on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment, or Triall? Yes! no wonder,
When Rich-ones scarle tell true. To lape in Fulneffe
Is forer, then to lye for Neede: and Falshood
Is worse in Kings, then Beggers. My deere Lord,
Thou art one o'th'false Ones; Now I thinke on thee,
My hunger's gone; but euen before, I was
At point to fincke, for Food. But what is this?
Here is a path too't: 'tis some fawege hold i
I were beft not call; I dare not call: yet Fatime
Ere cleane it o're-throw Nature, makes it valliant.
Plentie, and Peace broods Cowards: Hardineffe euer
Of Hardineffe is Mother. Hoa? who's heere?
If any thing that's eiuill, speake: if fawege,

Take,
Take, or lend. Ho! No answer? Then I'll enter.
Belt draw my Sword; and if mine Enemy
But fear the Snag-faced hee, he'll scarcely looke on't.
Such a Foe, good Heavens. \(\text{Exeunt}\).

\textbf{Scena Septima.}

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.
\textit{Bel.} You Pulchria have prou'd beft Woodman, and
Are Mother of the Feast : Court, and I,
Will play the Cooke, and Servant, 'tis our match :
The sweat of industrie would dry, and dye
But for the end it workes too. Come, our stomackes
Will make what's homely, lunuary : Wearineffe
Can flour yon the Flint, when reflit Sloth
Finding the Downe-pillow hard. Now peace be heere,
Poore house, that keep'th thy selfe.
\textit{Gui.} I am throughly weary.
\textit{Arui.} I am wake with toyle, yet strong in appetite.
\textit{Bel.} There is cold mist I' th'Cause, we'll browz on that
What' if what we have kill'd, be Cook'd.
\textit{Bel.} Stay, come not in :
But that it eates our vitualles, I should think
Heere were a Faery.
\textit{Gui.} What's the matter, Sir?
\textit{Bel.} By Jupiter an Angel or if not
An earthly Paragon. Behold Duwenesfe
No elder then a Boy.

Enter Imogen.

\textit{Imo.} Good masters harme me not :
Before I enter heere, I call'd, and thought
To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took good troth
I have flaine nought, nor would not, though I had found
Gold frowd i'th'Floore. Heere's money for my Meate,
I would have left it on the Boorde, fo fome
As I had made my Meate; and parted
With Pray'r's for the Proudier.
\textit{Gui.} Money? Youth.
\textit{Arui.} All Gold and Siluer rather turne to durt,
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of thofe
Who worship durtie Gods.
\textit{Imo.} I fee you're angry:
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have dyed, had I not made it.
\textit{Bel.} Whether bound?
\textit{Imo.} To Milford-Hauen.
\textit{Bel.} What's your name?
\textit{Imo.} Fulde Sir: I have a Kinfman, who Is bound for Italy; he embarked at Milford,
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am falne in this offence.
\textit{Bel.} Prythee (faire youth)
Thinke vs no Charles; nor measure our good mindes
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd,
'Tis almost night, you shall have better cheere
Ere you depart; and thanks to slay, and eate it:
Boyes, bid him welcome.
\textit{Gui.} Were you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard; but be your Groome in honesty:
I bid for you, as I do buy.
\textit{Arui.} Ile make't my Comfort
He is a man, Ile lowne him as my Brother:
And such a welcome as I'd give to him

(After long abidence) such is yours. Most welcome:
Be frighted, for you fall 'mongst Friends.
\textit{Imo.} 'Mongst Friends?
If Brothers: would it had bin fo, that they
Had bin my father Sonnes, then had my price
Bin leffe, and so muche ballafling
To thee Postuma.
\textit{Bel.} He wrings at fome diftreffe.
\textit{Gui.} Would I could free't.
\textit{Arui.} Or I, what ere it be,
What paine it cof, what danger: Gods !
\textit{Bel.} Hearke Boys.
\textit{Imo.} Great men
That had a Court no bigger then this Cause,
That did attend themfelves, and had the vertue
Which their owne Confcience seal'd them: laying by
That nothing-guift of differing Multitudes
Could not ou-peere these twaine. Pardon me Gods,
I'd change my fexe to be Companion with them,
Since Leontau falte.
\textit{Bel.} It fhall be fo:
Boyes we'll go: dreffe our Hunt. Faire youth come in;
Discourfe is heavy, falling: when we have fupp'd
We'll marnely demand thee of thy Story,
So farre as thou wilt fpackle it.
\textit{Gui.} Pray draw near.
\textit{Arui.} The Night to' th'Owle,
And Mone to th'Larke leffe welcome.
\textit{Imo.} Thankes Sir.
\textit{Arui.} I pray draw near.

\textbf{Scena Octava.}

Enter two Roman Senators, and Tribunes. 1.Sen. This is the tenor of the Emperors Writ;
That since the common men are now in Action
Gainst the Fanniotic's and Dalmatians,
And that the Legislions now in Gallia, are Full weak to undertake our Wars against
The faine-off Britains, that we do incite
The Gentry to this busineffe. He creates
Lucius Pro-Confull: and to you the Tribunes
For this immediate Leage, he commands
His absolute Commination. Long live Caesar.
\textit{Tri.} Is Lucius General of the Forces?
2.Sen. I.
\textit{Tri.} Remaining now in Gallia?
1.Sen. With those Legislions
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your lieue
Must be suppliant: the words of your Commission
Will tye you to the numbers, and the time
Of their dispatch.
\textit{Tri.} We will difcharge our duty.

\textbf{Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.}

Enter Cloten alone.

\textit{Clot} I am neere toth'place where they shoul meet,
If Pyranus have mapp'd it truly, How fit his Garments
Serve me? Why should his Miftris who was made by him that made the Taylor, not be fit too? The rather (faing reuerence of the Word) for 'tis faide a Womans fittyness comes by fifts: therein I muft play the Workman, I dare fpeak it to my felfe, for it is not Vainglorie for a man, and his Glaffe, to confer in his owne Chamber; I mean,

876
the Lines of my body are as well drawne as his; no leffe young, more strong, not behinf me in Fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, aboue him in Birth, alike conuerfant in general Seruices, and more remarkable in fingle oppofitions; yet this imperfefuent
Thing loues him in my deflight. What Mortallity is?
Poffeffion, thy head (which now is growing vpon thy shoulders) flall within this houre be off, thy Miftris inforced, thy Garments cut to peeces before thy face: and all this done, fparne her home to her Father, who my (happily) be a little angry for my fo rough praters but my Mother hauing power of his teftineffe, fhall turne all into my commendations. My Horfe is tyed vp fafe, out Sword, and to a foere purpole: Fortune put them into my hand: This is the very defcription of their meeting place and the Fellow dares not desceime me. "Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, Aruragus, and Imagen from the Caeu.

Bel. You are not well: Remaine heere in the Caeu,
We'll come to you after Hunting.
Arui. Brother, fay heere: Are we not Brothers?

Imo. So man and man fhould be,
But Clay and Clay, differs in dignities.
Whoef dull is both alike, I am very ficke.
Gui. Go you to Hunting, Ile abide with him.

Imo. So ficke I am not, yet I am not well:
But not to Citizen a wanton, as
To feme to dye, ere ficke: So pleafe you, leave me,
Sticke to your Journall course: the breach of Custome,
Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me
Cannot am end me. Society, is no comfort
To one not foable: I am not very ficke,
Since I can reaon of it: pray you truft me heere,
Ile rob none but my felfe, and let me dye
Steealing fo poorly.

Gui. I loue thee: I haue spake it,
How much the quantity, the weighth as much,
As I do loue my Father.

Bel. What? How? how?

Arui. If it be finne to fay fo (Sir) I yoke mee
In my good Brothers fault: I know not why
I loue this youth, and I haue heard you fay,
Loue's reafon's, without reafon. The Beere at doore,
And a demand who is't fhall dye, I'll fay
My Father, not this youth.

Bel. Oh noble filaine! O worthineffe of Nature, breed of Greatneffe!
"Cowards father Cowards, & Bafe things Syre Bace;
"Nature hath Meale, and Bran; Contempt, and Grace.
I'me not their Father, yet who this fhould bee,
Doth myrcle it felle, lon'd before mee.
'Tis the ninth houre o'th'Morne,

Arui. Brother, farewell,

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arui. You health.———So pleafe you Sir.

Imo. These are kinde Creatures.

Gods, what lyes I haue heard:
Our Courtiers fay, all's fake, but at Court;
Experience, oh thou difprooft it Report.
Th'emperious Seas breeds Monsters; for the Difi,
Poore Tributary Rivers, as sweet Fifth:
I am fickle fill, heart-fickle; Pifianus,
Ile now talle of thy Druge.

Gui. I could not firre him:
He faid he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Difhonesty afflicted, but yet honest.

Arui. Thus did he aufter me: yet faid heerafter,
I might know more.

Bel. To'th Field, to'th Field:
We'll leave you for this time, go in, and refl.

Arui. We'll not be long away.
Bel. Pray be not fickle,
For you muft be our Hufwife.

Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.

Bel. And shall't be cuer.
This youth, how ere difreft, appears he hath had Good Anceftors,

Arui. How Angel-like he fings?

Gui. But his neare Conierie?

Gui. He cut our Rootes in Charrafteis,
And fawc't our Brothes, as I fawd had bin ficke,
And he her Dieter.

Arui. Nobly he yokes
A fmling, with a figh; as if the figh
Was that it was, for not being fuch a Smile:
The Smile, mocking the Sigh, that it would flye
From fo divine a Temple, to commix
With windes, that Saylors raffe at.

Gui. I do note,
That greffe and patience rooted in them both,
Mingle their fparres together.

Arui. Grow patient.
And let the finking-Elder (Greffe) vntwine
Hift perfiling route, with the encreasing Vine.

Bel. It is great morning. Come away: Who's there?

Enter Cloten.

Clu. I cannot finde thefe Runnagates, that Villaine
Hath mock'd me. I am faint.

Bel. Thefe Runnagates?

Means he not vs? I partly know him, 'dis

Cloten, the Sonne o' th'Queenne. I fere some Ambush:
I faw him not thefe many yeares, and yet
I know 'tis he: We are held as Out-Lawes: Hence.

Gui. He is but one: you, and my Brother search
What Companies are neere: pray you away,
Let me alone with him.

Clot. Softs, what are you
That flye me thus? Some villain-Mountainers?
I have heard of fuch. What Slaue art thou?

Gui. A thing.

More ftaicfh did I ne're, then answere
A Slaue without a knocke.

Clot. Thou art a Robber,
A Law-breaker, a Villaine: yeeld thee Theeue.

Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Haue not I
An arme as bigne as thine? A heart, as bigne:
Thy words IGrant are bigner: for I weare not
My Dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art:

Why
Why should ye yield to thee?
Cly. Thou Villaine base,
Know'st thou not by my Cloathes?
Guil. No, nor thy Taylor, Raffall:
Who is thy Grandfather? He made those cloathes,
Which (as it seemes) make thee.
Cly. Thou precious Varlet,
My Taylor made them not.
Guil. Hence then, and thinke
The man that make them thee. Thou art some Foole,
I am loath to beate thee.
Cly. Thou inurious Thiefs,
Heare but my name, and tremble.
Guil. What's thy name?
Cly. Cloten, thou Villaine.
Guil. Cloten, thou double Villaine be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it, were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,
'Twould move me sooner.
Cly. To thy further feares,
Nay, to thy meere Confusion, thou shalt know
I am Sone to th'Queene.
Guil. I am sorry for't: not fearing
So worthy as thy Birth.
Cly. Art not afraid?
Guil. Tho' that I reuerence, tho'fe I feare: the Wife:
At Foole I laugh: I not feare them.
Cly. Dye the death:
When I haue slaine thee with my proper hand,
Ile follow those that even now fled hence:
And on the Gates of Luds-Toune let your heads:
Yeeld Right and Execut.
Enter Belarius and Aruileus.
Bel. No Companie's abroad?
Ari. None in the world: you did mistake him sure.
Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it since I saw him,
But Time hath nothing blur'd those lines of Favoure
Which then he wore: the fratches in his voice,
And burft of speaking were as his: I am abloate
'Twas very Cloten.
Ari. In this place we left them;
I will my Brother make good time with him,
You see he so fell.
Bel. Being Fears made vp,
I meanto man: he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors: For defect of judgement
Is oft the caufe of Fears.
Enter Guardierus.
But see thy Brother.
Guil. This Cloten was a Foole, an empty purfe,
There was no money in't: Not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his Brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the Foole had borne
My head, as I do his.
Bel. What haft thou done?
Guil. I am perfect what: cut off one Clotens head,
Sonne to the Queene (after his owne report)
Who call'd me traitor, Mountaineer, and swore
With his owne fingle hand he'ld take vs in,
Displace our heads, where (thanks to the Gods) they grow
And let them on Luds-Toune.
Bel. We are all undone.
Guil. Why, worthy Father, what haue we to loofe,
But that he swore to take, our Lives ? the Law
Protest not vs, then why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat vs?
Play Judge, and Executioner, all himselfe?
For we do feare the Law. What company
Difcouer you abroad?
Bel. No finge foule
Can we fer eye on: but in all safe reafon
He must haue some Attendats. Though his Honor
Was nothing but mutation, I, and that
From one bad thing to worfe t: Not Frenzie,
Not abolute madneffe could so farre haue rau'd
To bring him here: alone: although perhaps
It may be heard at Court, that such as wee
Cae here, hunte here, are Out-laws, and in time
May make some stronger head, the which he hearing,
(As it is like him) might break out, and fwear
Hic'ld fetch vs in, yet it's not probable
To come alone, either he fo undertakings,
Or they fo suffering: then on good ground we feare,
If we do feare this Body hath a tale
More perillous then the head.
Ari. Let Ord'nance
Come as the Gods fore-tay it: howfoere,
My Brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no minde
To hunt this day: The Boy Fidelos fickeneffe
Did make my way long forth,
Guil. With his owne Sword,
Which he did waue against my throat, I haue tane
His head from him: Ile throw't into the Creek
Behinde our Rockes, and let it to the Sea,
And tell the Fishes, hee's the Queenes Sonne, Cloten,
That's all I reake.
Exit.
Bel. If I fcare 'twill be reueng'd:
Would (Polidore) thou had'll not done't: though valour
Becomes thee well enough.
Ari. Would I had done't:
So the Reuenge alone part'd me: Polidore
I love thee brotherly, but enuy much
Thou haft robb'd me of this deed: I would Reuenges
That possible strength might meet, wold feek vs through
And put vs to our anfwer.
Bel. Well, 'tis done:
We'll hunt no more to day, nor feek for danger |
Where there's no profit. I pray thee to our Rockes,
You and Fidelos play the Cookes: Ile stay
Till hally Polidore returnes, and bring him
To dinner prefently.
Ari. Poore fickie Fidelo.
He willingly to him, to gain his colour,
It'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praffe my felfe for charity.
Exit.
Bel. Oh thou Goddeffe,
Thou diuine Nature; thou thy felfe thou blazon't
In these two Princely Boyes: they are as gente
As Zephyres blowine below the Violets,
Not waggis his sweet head: and yet, as rough
(Their Royall blood encaft't) as the rud'ft winde,
That by the top doth take the Mountain Pine,
And make him rooe to th'Valle. "Tis wonder
That an inseffible ininf'd should frame them
To Royalty vnlearn'd, Honor vntaught,
Cuiility not seen from other: valour
That widelie growes in them, but yeelds a crop
As if it had beene fow'd: yet till it's frange
What Clotens being here to vs portends,
Or what his death will bring vs.
Enter Guardierus.
Guil. Where's my Brother?
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

I have sent Cloten Clot-pole downe the streame,
In Embassie to his Mother, his Bodie's hostage
For his returne.

Solemn Majick.

Bel. My Ingenious Instrument,
(Hearke Plainly) 'tis founds but what occasion
Hath Cadwall now to give it motion? Hearke,
Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he meane?
Since death of my deare Mother
It did not speake before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn Accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting Toyes,
Is solitie for Apes, and griefe for Boyes.
Is Cadwall mad?

Enter Aruiragus, with Imogen dead, bearing her in his Armes.

Bel. Lookke, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his Armes,
Of what we blame him for.
Gui. The Bird is dead.
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skipt from sixe teene yeares of Age', to sixty :
To have turn'd my leaping time into a Crutch,
Then have beene this.
Gui. Oh sweetest, fairest Lilly:
My Brother wares thee not the one half so well,
As when thou gwest'ry thy selfe.
Bel. Oh Melancholy,
Who euer yet could found thy bottome? Finde
The Ooze, to shew what Coaft thy faggard care
Might'ft called harbour in. Thou bleffed thing,
Jose knowes what man thou might'ft have made : but I,
Thou dyed'st a moft rare Boy, of Melancholy.
How found you him?

Arui. Starke, as you see:
Thus fumbling, as some Fly had tickled fumerb,
Not as deathes dart being laugb'd at: this right Checke
Reposing on a Cushion.
Gui. Where?

Arui. O'th'floor:
His arme thus leag'd, I thought he slept, and put
My clowted Brogues from off my fecte, whose rudeneffe
Answer'd my steps too lowd.
Gui. Why, he but sleepe:
If he be gone, he'll make his Graue, a Bed :
With female Faryes will his Tombe be haunted,
And Wormes will not come to thee.

Arui. With flye'th Flowers.
Whil'st Sommer lafts, and I live here, Fidelle,
He sweeten thy fad graue; thou shalt not lacke
The Flower that's like thy face. Pale-Primrofe, nor
The azure'd Hare'bell, like thy Veines: no, nor
The leafes of Eglantine, whom not to fander,
Out-tweetned not thy breath: the Raddocke would
With charitable bill (Oh bill fore flaming
Those rich-left-heyres, that let their Fathers lye
Without a Monument) bring thee all this,
Yes, and more Clote. When Flowers are none
To winter-ground thy Caroll——

Gui. Prythee have done,
And do not play in Wenche-like words with that
Which is so ferious. Let vs bury him,
And not protest with admiration, what
Is now due debt. To'th'grave.

Arui. Say, where shall'st lay him?

Gui. By good Euriplhe, our Mother.

Arui. Bee't fo:
And let vs (Polidore) though now our voyces
Have got the mannish cracke, flex him to'th ground
As once to our Mother. Be like noce, and words,
Sawe that Euriplhe, must be Fidelle,

Gui. Cadwall,
I cannot sing: I le weep, and word it with thee;
For Notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worfe
Then Priests, and Phanes that lye.

Gui. We'll speake it then.

Bel. Great greeues I see med'cine the leffe: For Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a Queenes Sonne, Boyes,
And though he came our Enemy, remember
He was paid for that: though meane, and mighty rotting
Together have one duft, yet Reuerence
(That Angell of the world) doth make diffildion
Of place 'tweene high, and low. Our Foe was Prince,
And though you tooke his life, as being our Foe,
Yet bury him, as a Prince.

Gui. Pray you fetch him hither,
Thertiffes body is as good as Anns,
When neyer are alue.

Arui. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll lay our Song the whill'f: Brother begin.

Gui. Nay Cadwall, we must lay his head to th'East,
My Father hath a reason for't.

Arui. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on then, and remoue him.

SONG.

Guid. Feare not more the heate o'th'Sun,
Nor the furious Winters rages,
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and tarde thy wages,
Golden Lad's, and Girles all must,
As Chimney-Sweepers come to duft.

Arui. Feare no more the frowne o'th'Great,
Thou art paft the Tirants streake,
Cure no more to cloath and eate,
To thee the Reede is as the Oak.

The Scepter, Learning, Fidyllke muft,
All fellow this and come to duft.

Guid. Feare no more the Lightening flipp.

Arui. Nor th'ald-dreaded Thundershone.

Guid. Feare not Slander, Conjure rejoy.

Arui. Thou hast fin'd'd thy joy and mome.

Both. All Lovers young, all Lovers must,
Confuge to thee and come to duft.

Guid. No Exercise harme thee,

Arui. Nor no witch-craft charme thee.

Guid. Ghoft-unlaid forbeare thee.

Arui. Nothing ill come more thee.

Both. Quiet confumation have,
And remoued he thy grave.

Enter Belarius with the body of Cloten.

Guid. We have done our obsequies:
Come lay him downe.

Bel. Here's a fewe Flowers, but 'bout midnight more:
The heares that have on them cold dew o'th'night
Are freelins fir't for Graues: upon their Faces.
You were as Flowers, now with'dr: even so
These Herbelets shall, which we upon you shew.
Come on, away, apart upon our knees:
The ground that gave them life, ha's them againe:
Their pleasures here are past, fo are their paine.
Imogen awakes.

Yes Sir, to Milford-Haven, which is the way?
I thank you: by yond bush I pray how farre thether?
'Od's pittikins: can it be fixe mile yet?
I have gone all night: 'Faith, Ile lye downe, and sleepe.
But so? no Bedfellow? Oh Gods, and Goddeffes!
Theil Flowres are like the pleasures of the World;
This bloody man the care on't. I hope I dreame:
For so I thought I was a Cast-keeper,
And Cooke to honest Creatures. But 'tis not so:
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the Braine makes of Fumes. Our very eyes,
Are sometimes like our Judgements, blind.
Good faith I tremble still with feare: but if there be
Yet left in Heauen, as small a drop of pittle
As a Wrens eye: fear'd Gods, a part of it,
The Dreame's heere still: even when I wake it is Without me, as within me: not imagin'd, felt.
A headleffe man? The Garments of Pithammas?
I know the hope of Legge; this is his Hand:
His Foote Mercurlial; his martiall Thigg.
The brawnes of Hercules: but his Iouiall face—
Murther in heauen? How? 'tis gone. Pifania,
All Curles madded Hertha gave the Greekes,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee: thou
Confir'd with that Irregulous deadl Cleten,
Hath heere cut off my Lord. To write, and read,
Be henceforth treacherous. Damn'd Pifania,
Hath with his forged Letters (damn'd Pifania)
From this most braueft villiff of the world
Stroke the malne top! Oh Pithammas, alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Aye me! where's that?
Pifania might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on. How should this be, Pifania?
'Tis he, and Cleten! Malice, and Lucre in them
Have laid this Woe heere. Oh 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The Druge he gave me, which hee said was precious
And Cordiall to me, haue I not found it
Murd'rous toth'Senfes? That confirmes it home:
This is Pifania's deede, and Cleten! Oh:
Glie colour to my pale cheeke with thy blood,
That we the horridr may seeme to thefe
Which chance to finde vs. Oh, my Lord! my Lord!
Enter Lucius, Captaines, and a Storitiger.
Cap. To them, the Legions garrifon'd in Gallia
After your will, haue croft the Sea, attending
You heere at Milford-Haven, with your Shippes:
They are heere in readinesse.
Luc. But what from Rome?
Cap. The Senate hath firit'd vp the Confiners,
And Gentlemen of Italy, most willing Spirits,
That promife Noble Service and they come
Under the Command of bold Eacbinus,
Syenna's Brother.
Luc. When expect you them?
Cap. With the next benefi o'th'winde.
Luc. This forwardnese
Makes our hopes faire. Command our present numbers
Be muttre'd: bid the Captaines looke too.
Now Sir, What haue you dream'd of late of this warres purpofe.
Soth. Last night, the very Gods fhow'd me a viion
(I falt, and pray'd for their Intelligence) thus:
I saw Ioues Bird, the Roman Eagle wing'd
From the fpungy South, to this part of the Welt,
There vanifh'd in the Sun-beames, which portends
(Vnleffe my finnes abuse my Diuination)

Successe to th'Roman hoar.
Lucr. Dreame often so,
And never falt. Soft hoo, what truncke is heere?
Without his top? The rulne fpakes, that fometime
It was a worthy building. How? a Page?
Or dead, or fleeping on him? But dead rather:
For Nature doth abborre to make his bed
With the defcad, or fleepon vpon the dead.
Let's fee the Boyes face.
Cap. Hee's alue my Lord.
Luc. Hee! then inquir'd vs of this body: Young one,
Inverse of th thy Fortunes, for it feemes
They craue to be demanded: who is this Thou mak'ft thy bloody Pillow? Or who was he
That (whether then noble Nature did)
Hath alter'd that good Picture? What's thy inter?
In this sad wracke? How came'! Who's it?
What art thou?
Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be were better: This was my Master,
A very valiant Britaine, and a good,
That heere by Mountainiers eyes flaine: Alas,
There is no more fuch Masters: I may wander
From Exit to Occident, cry out for Service,
Try many, all good: ferue truly: neuer
Finde fuch another Master.
Luc. 'Lackes, good youth:
Thou moust not leffe with thy complaining, then
Thy Maifter in bleeding: fay his name,good Friend.
Imo. Richard du Champ: If I do lese, and do
No harme by it, though the Gods heare, I hope
They'll pardon it. Say you Sir?
Luc. Thy name?
Imo. Fidelis Sir.
Luc. Thou doth not approve thy felfe the very fame
Thy Name well fits thy Faith: thy Faith, thy Name:
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not fay
Thou fhal be so well master'd, but be fure
No leffe belo'nd. The Romane Emperor's Letters
Sent by a Conful to me, shou'd not looner
Then thine owne worth prefere thee: Go with me.
Imo. Ile follow Sir. But firft, and pleffe the Gods,
Ile hide my Mafter from the Flies,as deep
As thefe poore Pickaxes can digge: and when
With wild wood-leaues & weeds, I ha' frew'd his graue
And on it fald a Century of prayers
(Such as I can) twice o'er, Ile weepes, and fighes,
And leueng fio his feruice, follow you,
So pleffe you entertaince mee.
Luc. I good youth,
And rather Father thee, then Master thee: My Friends,
The Boy hath taught vs many duties, Let vs
Finde out the prettiest Dazied-Plot we can,
And make him with our Pikes and Partizans
A Graue: Come, Arme him: Boy hee's preferv'd
By thee, to vs, and he shall be inter'd
As Souldiers can. Be cheerfulfull; wipe thine eyes,
Some Falles are meenes the happier to arife.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pifania.

Cym. Again: and hire me word how 'tis with her,
A Favour with the abfence of her Sonne;
A madneffe, of which her life's in danger: Heauens, Why doo you at once to touch me. Image, The great part of my comfort gone: My Queene Upon a desperate bed, and in a time When hearefull Warres point at me: Her Sonne gone, So needfull for this preffent? It strikes me,paff The hope of comfort. But for thee, Fellow, Who needs must know of her departure, and Doth feeme fo ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee By a sharpe Torture.

Fij. Sir, my life is yours, I humbly fet at your will: But for my Miftirs, I nothing know where she remains: why gone, Nor when she purpofes returne. Bedoche your Highnes, Hold me your loyal Servant, Lord. Good my Liege, The day that she was miling, he was heere; I dare be bound hee's true, and shall performe All parts of his foule fhion loyally. For Clemen, There wants no diligence in feeing him, And will no doubt be found. Gym. The time is troublesome: We'll flip you for a feafon, but our iealousie Do's yet depend. Lord. So please your Maiesty, The Romaine Legions,all from Gallia drawne, Are landed on your Coaft, with a supply Of Romaine Gentlemen, by the Senate sent. Gym. Now for the Counfille of my Son and Queen, I am amaz'd with matter. Lord. Good my Liege, Your preparation can affront no leffe (ready: Then what you hear of. Come more, for more you're The want is, but to put thofe Powres in motion, That long to moue.

Gym. I thank you: let's withdraw And meete the Time, as it feckes vs. We feare not What can from Italy annoy vs, but We greeue at chances heere. Away. Exit.

Fij. I heard no Letter from my Mafter, since I wrote him Image was miling. 'Tis strange; Nor heare I from my Miftirs, who did promife To yeeld me often tydings. Neither know I What is betide to Clemen, but remaine Perplex in all. The Heauens still milke worke: Whereas I am afeare, I am honest i not true, to be true. These preffent warres shall finde I love my Country, Even to the note o' th'King, or Ile fall in them: All other doubts, by time let them be cleer'd, Fortune brings in some Borsts,that are not fler'd. Exit.

Enter Belarius; Gadarius, & Arviragus.

Gui. The noyfe is round about vs. Bel. Let vs from it.

Arar. What pleasure Sir, we finde in life, to locke it From Atlon, and Adventure. Gui. Nay, what hope Haue we in hiding vs? This way the Romaines Must, or for Britaines flay vs or receive vs For barbarous and vanitall Reuols During their vie, and flay vs after.

Bel. Sonnes, We'll higher to the Mountaines, there secure vs. To the Kings party there's no going i newes Of Clemen death (we being not knowne, not mutter'd Among the Bands) may drue vs to a render Where we have liu'd; and fo extort from's that Which we have done, whose anwer would be death Drawne on with Torture.

Gui. This is (Sir) a doubt In such a time, nothing becoming you, Nor satisfying vs.

Arar. It is not likely, That when they heare their Roman horfes neigh, Behold their quarter'd Fires; haue both their eyes And cares fo cloyd importantly as now, That they will waste their time upon our note, To know from whence we are.

Bel. Oh, I am knowne Of many in the Army: Many yeares (Though Clemen then but young) you fee, not wore him From my remembrance. And besides, the King Hath not deferu'd my Service, nor your Loues, Who finde in my Exile, the want of breeding; The certainty of this dead life, ye hopeleffe To haue the courtrefs your Cradle promis'd, But to be still hot Summers Tanlings, and The shrinking Slanes of Winter.

Gui. Then be fo, Better to cafe to be. Pray Sir, to' th'Army: I, and my Brother are not knowne; your felfe So out of thought, and thereto fo ore-grownwe, Cannot be question'd.

Arar. By this Sunne that shines Ilc thither! What thing is't, that I never Did fee man dye, scarce euery look'd on blood, But that of Coward Hares, hot Goats, and Venifon? Never beftrid a Horfe faue one, that had A Rider like my felfe, who ne're were Rowell, Nor Iron on his heele? I am alam'd To looke upon the holy Sunne, to haue The benefit of his bleft Beaure,remaining So long a pore vnknowne.

Gui. By heauens Ile go, If you will bleeffe me Sir, and give me leaue, Ile take the better care i but if you will not, The hazard therefore die fall on me, by The hands of Romanes.

Arar. So say I, Amen. Bel. No reafon I (fince of your liues you fet', So flight a valewatton) should refertes My crack'd one to more care. Haue with you Boyes If in your Country warres you chance to dye, That is my Bed too (Lads) and there Ile lye. Lead,lead; the time feems long, their blood thinks fcorn Till it fye out, and shew them Princes borne.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Pyllumus alone.

Paff. Yea bloody cloth, Ile keep thee: for I am whilt Thou should'lt be colour'd thus. You married ones, If each of you should take this course, how many Must mutter Wives much better then themselves
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

For wrying but a little? Oh Pijan!. Every good Servant do's not all Commands: No Bond, but to do but ones. Gods, if you Should haue 'tane vengeance on my faults, I never Had lid to put on this: so had you liued The noble Imogen, to repent, and drooze Me (wretch) more worth your Vengeance. But alacke, You flatch some hence for little faults; that's love To have them fall no more; you fome permit To fecond illes with illes, each elder worse, And make them dread it, to the dooms thrust. But Imogen is your owne, do your bell wille, And make me blest to obey. I am brought hither Among th'Italian Gentry, and to fight Against my Ladies Kingdome: 'Tis enough That (Britaine) I have kill'd thy Miftris: Peace, Ilc glue no wound to thee; therefore good Heauens, Heare patiently my purpose. Ile difgrope Me Of these Italian weedes, and suete my false As do's a Britaine Pezent: fo Ile fight Against the part I come with: fo Ile dye For the (O Imogen) even for whom my life Is every breath, a death: and thus, yknownne, Pittied, nor hated, to the face of peril. My false Ile dedicate. Let me make men know More valour in me, then my habits show. Gods, put the strenght o' th'Leomart in me: To shame the guile o'th'world, I will begin, The fashioned lefe without, and more within. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and the Romane Army at one doors: and the Britaine Army at another: Leonatus Pofthumus following like a pore Soldier. They march out, and goe out. Then enter againe inStripe Jachimo and Pofthumus: be warnequifeth and dijameth Jachimo, and then leases him.

Luc. The heauenf!e and guilt within my bofome, Taken off my manhood: I have belyed a Lady, The Princeffe of this Country; and the ayre on't Reuengingly enfeeme me, or could this Carle, A very drudge of Natures, have fubdu'd me In my profition: Knighthoods, and Honors borne And once mine) tuft or borne. If that thy Gentry (Britaine) go before This Low, as he exceeds our Lords, the odde Is, that we fearfe are men, and you are Goddes. Exit. The Battle continues, the Britaines fly, Cymbeline is taken: Then enter to Ilc refuge, Bellarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand, we haue the advantage of the ground, The Lane is guarded: Nothing rowts vs, but The villany of our feares.

Gul. Aroui. Stand, stand, and fight.

Enter Pofthumus, and secondes the Britaines. They Rufe Cymbeline, and Exeunt. Then enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away boy from the Troopes, and haue thy false: For friends kif friends, and the dilorderid hish

As warre were hood-wink'd. Luc. 'Tis their fresh supplies. Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely or betimes Let's re-inforce, or fly. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Pofthumus, and a Britaine Lord.

Lor. Cam't thou from where they made the fland? Pof. I did, Though you it eemes come from the Fliers? Lor. I did. Pof. No blame he to you Sir, for all was lost, But that the Heauens fought the King himselfe Of his wings deftitute, the Army broken, And but the backes of Britaines eeme; all flying Through a strait Lane, the Enemy full-hearted, Lolling the Tongue with fraughting: hauing worke More plentiful, then Tociles to doe: Ibrooke doone Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling Merely through faire, that th' strait paffe was damm'd With deadmen, hurt behinde, and Cowards living To dye with length'ted shame.

Lor. Where was this Lane? Pof. Clofe by the battell, ditch'd, & wall'd with turph, Which gaine advantage to an ancient Solidour (An honest one I warrant) who deferu'd So long a breeding, as his white beard came to, In doing this for's Country. Athwart the Lane, He, with two forefront) (Lads more like to run The Country base, then to commit such slaughter, With faces fit for Maskes, or rather fray'er Then thofe for prefervation cad's, or shame) Made good the paffage, cryed to thofe that fled. Our Britaines hearts dye flying, not our men, To darkneffe flete foules that flye backwards; fland, Or we are Romanes, and will gueze you that Like beafts, which you shun beaftly, and may faue But to looke backe in frowne: fland, fland. Thofe three, Three thousand confident, in adde as many: For three performers are the Flic, when all The roft do nothing. With this word fland, fland, Accomodated by the Place: more Charming With their owne Noblenesse, which could hau'e turn'd A Diffafe, to a Lance, guided pale looks; Part shame, part spirit renew'd, that fome turn'd coward But by example (Oh a finne in Warre, Dam'd in the first beginnent) gan to looke The way that they did, and to grin like Lyons Upon the Pikes o'th Hunters. Then beganne A Rop i'th Chafe; a Retyre: Anon A Roat, confufion thicke: forthwith they flye Chickens, the way which they foipt Eagles: Slaues The fride the Visitors made: and now our Cowards Like Fragments in hard Voyages became The life o' th'need: hauing found the backe doore open, Of the vocurred hearts: heauens, how they wound, Some flame before foam dying; some their Friends Oe-borne i'th'former waue, ten char'd by one, Are now each one the flaughter-man of twenty: Thofe that would dye, or ere reftift, are growne The mortail hugs o'th Field. Lor
Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow Lane, an old man, and two Boys.

Pofi. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
To wonder to the things you hear,
Then to work any. Will you Rime vpon't?
And vnt for it a Mock'trie? Heere one is:
"Two Boys, an Oldman (twice a Boy) a Lane,
Prefer'd the Britaine, was the Romanes bane.
Lord. Nay, be not angry Sir.
Pofi. Lack'd, to what end?
Who dare not stand his Foe, Ille be his Friend:
For if he'll do, as he is made to doo,
I know he'll quickly fife my friendship too.
You have put me into Rime.

Lord. Farewell, you're angry. Exit.
Pofi. Still going? This is a Lord: Oh Noble mifery
To be 'teth'Field, and take what newes of me:
To day, how many would have gien their Honours
To have fau'd their Carkasses? Tooke heele to doo't,
And yet dyed too. I, in mine owne wore charm'd
Could not finde death, where I did heare him groane,
Nor feele him where he frooke. Being an vgly Monster,
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh Cups, soft Beds,
Sweet words, or hath mee minellers then we
That draw his knifes Oth'War. Well I will finde him:
For being now a Favourer to the Britaine,
No more a Britaine, I have refum'd againe
The part I came in. Fight I will no more,
But yeeld me to the vriety Hinde, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the sauguer is Here make by'th'Romane; great the Anver be Britaines must take. For me, my Ranfome's death,
On eyther side I come to spend my breath;
Which neyther heere Ile keepe, nor beare agen,
But end it by some meanes for Imogen.

Enter two Capitaines, and Soldiers.

1. Great Jupiter be praid, Lucius is taken,
'Tis thought the old man, and his fonnes, were Angels.
2. There was a fourth man, in a filly habit,
That gau'th'Affront with them.

1. So 'tis reported:
But none of 'em can be found. Stand, who's there?
Pofi. A Roman,
Who had not now beene drooping herec, if Seconds
Had anwer'd him,
2. Lay hands on him: a Dogge,
A legge of Rome shall not returne to tell
What Crows have peckt them here: he brags his feruice
If he were of note: bring him to'th'King.
Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pijnio, and Roman Captaines. The Captaines present Pofthumus to Cymbeline, who deliuers him over to a Gauler.

Groane fo in perpetuity, then be cur'd
By'th'ure Phyitian, Death; who is the key
'Tvenbarre thefe Lockes. My Confidence, thou art better'd
More then my thanks; & with you good Gods give me
The penitent Instrument to picke that Bolt,
Then free for ever. 'tis enough I am forry?
So Children temporall Fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent,
I cannot do it better then in Guses,
Defir'd, more then constrain'd, to satisfie
If of my Freedome 'tis the maine part, take
No strifler render of me, then my All.
I know you are more clement then vile men,
Who of their broken Debtor take a third,
A first, a tenth, letting them thrive againe
On their abatement; that's not my defire.
For Imogens deere life, take mine, and though
'Tis not so deere, yet 'tis a life; you cou'd it,
Tweene man, and man, they weigh not every flame:
Though light, take Peres bee? the figures take,
(You rather) mine being your: and so great Powres,
If you will take this Audit, take this life,
And cancelle thefe cold Bonds. Oh Imogen,
Ile speake to thee in silence.

Solemne Musick. Enter (as in an Apparition) Sicilius Len-narus, Father to Pofthumus, an old man, attyred like a warrior, leading in his hand an ancient Matran (his wife, & Mother to Pofthumus) with Musick before them. Then, after other Musick, follows the two young Lunari (Brothers to Pofthumus) with wounds as they died in the wars.
They circle Pofthumus round as he lies sleeeping.

Sicil. No more thou Thunder-Mater
Slew thy spight, on Mortall Fies:
With Mars fall our with Luna chide, that thy Aduerteries
Rates, and Reuenges.
Hath my poor Boy done ought but well,
whole face I never faw:
I dy'de wifli'th'the Wombe he fliade, attending Natures Law.
Whole Father then (as men report, thou Orphanes Father art)
Thou should haue bin, and fheideed him,
from this earth-vering smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her ayde,
but tooke me in my Throwes,
That from me was Pofthumus ript, came crying 'mong'li his Foes.

A thing of pitty.
Sicil. Great Nature like his Ancefhrie, moulded the stiffe fo faire:
That he'd feru'd the praife o'th'World,
as great Siciliue heyre.

1. Bro. When once he was mature for man,
in Britaine where was hee
That could stand vp his parallell?
Or fruitfull obiect bee?
In eye of Imogen, that heft could deeme his dignite.

Me. With Marriage wherefore was he mockt
to be exil'd, and throwne
From Lenari beate, and call from her,
his deereft one:
Sweete Imogen?
Sir. Why did you suffer Iachimo, flight thing of Italy,
To taint his Noble hart & braine, with needleffe lously, And to become the gleeke & fomne o'th others vilany? a Bros. For this, from filater Seats we came, our Parents, and vs twaine, That dirking in our Countries caufe, fell brauely, and were flaine, Our Feales, & Tenantium right, with Honor to maintaine. a Bros. Like hardiment Poffiumus hath to Cymbeline perfom'd: Then Jupiter, y King of Gods, why haft y thadlourn'd The Graves for his Merits due, being all to dorders turn'd? Sicil. Thy Chriftall window ope ; looke, looke out, no longer exercise Upon a valiant Race, thy harfe, and potent injuries : Matb. Since(Jupiter) our Son is good, take off his miferies, Sicil. Peepe through thy Marble Mansion, helpe, and we poore Ghoftes will cry Toth'flaming Synod of the reft, against thy Dely, Brothers. Helpe (Jupiter) or we appeal, and from thy Tjulke rye, Jupiter defends in Thunder and Lightning, fting upon an Eagle: he throwes a Thunder-bolt. The Ghoftes fall on their knees, Jupiter. No more you petty Spirits of Region low Offend our hearing : hufh. How dare you Ghoftes Accufe the Thunderer, whole Bolt (you know) Sky-planted, batters all rebellings Coals. Poore shadowes of Elixirum, hence, and reft Upon your neuer-withering banke of Flowres. Be not with mortar accidents oppref. No care of yours it is, you know 'tis ours. Whom beft I love, I croffe ; to make my guilt The more delay'd, delighted. Be content, Your low-lade Sonne, our Godhead will vlift: His Comforts thrive, his Trials well are fpent: Our Louiall Starre reign'd at his Birth, and in Our Temple was he married: Rife, and fade, He shall be Lord of Lady Imag. And happier much by his Affidion made. This Tablet lay upon his Breaf, wherein Our pleafure, his full Fortune, doth confine, And fo away : no farther with your dinne Express Impatience, leaff you firre vp mine : Mount Eagle, to my Palace Chriftalline. Afcents Sicil. I. Verily in The Thunderer, his Cellebell breath Was sulphurous to smell: the holy Eagle Stoop'd, as to foote vs : his Ascension is More sweet then our blef Fields : his Royal Bird Prunes the immortall wing, and cloyes his Beake, As when his God is plea'd. All. Thanks Jupiter. Sic. The Marble Pavement closes, he is enter'd His radiant Rooffe: Away, and to be bleft Let vs with care perfome his great behoife. Vaniijh Poff. Sleepe, thou haft bin a Grandire, and begor A Father to me, and thou haft creat A Mother, and two Brothers. But (oh forrne) Gone, they went hence fo forne as they were borne: And fo I am awake. Poore Wretches, that depend On Greatneffe, Faour ; Dreame as I have done, Wakes, and finde nothing. But (as) I sworne: Many Dreame not to finde, neither deffe, And yet are fpelt in Faours ; fo am I That haue this Golden chance, and know not why : What Fayeries haunt this ground? A Book?Oh rare one, Be not, as is our fangled world, a Garment Nokeher then that it coures. Let thy effecl So follow, to be moft unlike our Courtiers, As good, as promife.

When as a Lyons whale, fhall to himself ven known, without finking foode, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender Ayre: And when from a flately Cedar fhall be tope branches, which being dead many yeaeres, fhall after rewiues, be ingreed to the old Stockes, and frufily grow, then fhall Poffiumus end his miferies, Britaine be fortunate, and forurift in Peace and Plen.

"Tis fill a Dreame: or else fuch fuffle as Madmen Tongue, and braine not : either both, or nothing, Or fentenciffe fpeaking, or a speaking fuch As fenne cannot vntne. Be what it is, The Aktion of my life is like this, which Ile keepe If but for fimpathy. Enter Gader. Gao. Come Sir, are you ready for death? Poff. Ouer-roasted rather : ready long ago. Gao. Hanging is the word, Sir, if you bee ready for that, you are well Cooke'd. Poff. So if I prove a good repaat to the Spectators, the dill payes the flot. Gao. A heavy reckoning for you Sir: But the comfort is you fhall be called to no more payements, fear no more Tauerne Bills, which are often the laufhee of parting, as the procuring of mirth : you come in fain for want of meate, depart reeling with too much drinke : forrie that you have payed too much, and forry that you are payed too much: Purfe and Braine, both empty : the Brain the heauier, for being too light; the Purfe too light, being drawnne of haufnine. Oh, of this contradiction you fhall now be quit: Oh the charity of a fenny Cord, it fhunnes vp thoufands in a price : you have no true Deltor, and Creditor but it: of what's paft, is, and to come, the difcharge ; your necke(Sir)is Pen, Booke, and Counters ; so the Acquaintance followes. Poff. I am merrier to dye, then thou art to live. Gao. Indeed Sir, he that fleeps feels not the Toothache: but a man that were to leepe his fleape, and a Hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his Officer for, look you Sir, you know not which way you fhall go. Poff. Yet I find you do I, fellow. Gao. Your death has eyes in he head then : I have not feene him fo pictur'd you must either bee directed by some that take upon them to know, or to take upon your felie that which I am fure you do not know : tor lump the after-enquiry on your owne prettie : and how you fhall speed in your iournies end, I think you'll never returne to tell one. Poff. I tell thee, Fellow, there are none want eyes, to direct them the way I am going, but fuch as winke, and will not vfe them. Gao. What an infinite mocke is this, that a man fholde haue the beft vfc of eyes, to fee the way of blindniffe : I am fare hangings the way of winkeing. Enter a Maffenger. Mefi. Knocke off his Manacles, bring your Prifoner to the King. Poff. Thou bring'st good newes, I am call'd to bee made free. Gao. Ile be hang'd then. Poff. Thou fhalt be then freer then a Gaper, no bollis for, 584

for the dead.

Gus. Ynlefe a man would marry a Gallowes, & get yong Gibbets, I never saw one so prone; yet on my Conscience, there are verier Knaues defire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too that dye against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one minde, and one minde good: O there were defamation of Gaolers and Galowfes: I speake against my present profit, but my with hath a preferment int.'

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbelins, Bellarius, Guidrius, Arsiragus, Pifian, and Lords.

Cym. Stand by my fide you, whom the Gods have made Preferuours of my Throne: woe is my heart, That the poore Souldier that fo richly fought, Whose rages, sham’d glied Armes, whose naked brest Stood before Targets of proofe; cannot be found: He shall be happy that can finde him, if
Our Grace can make him fo.

Bel. I never saw
Such Noble fury in so poore a Thing;
Such precious deeds, in one that promit nought
But beggary, and poore looke.

Cym. No tydings of him?

Pif. He hath bin search’d among the dead, & living;
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my greefe, I am
The heyre of his Reward, which I will addde
To you (the Lier, Heart, and Braine of Britaine)
By whom (I grant) the lieues. 'Tis now the time
To ake of whence you are. Report it,

Bel. Sir,
In Cambria are we borne, and Gentlemen:
Further to beaft, were neythre new, nor modest,
Ynlefe I adde, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees:
Aripe my Knights o’t Battell, I create you
Companions to our person, and will fit you
With Dignities becoming your estate.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There’s butineffe in these faces: why so fadly
Greet ye our Vict’ry? you looke like Romaines,
And not o’th Court of Britaine.

Cym. Haile great Kings,
To fowre your happiness, I must report
The Queene is dead.

Cym. Who worde then a Phyfian
Would this report become? But I confider,
By Med’cine life may be prolong’d, yet death
Will feize the Doclor too. How ended the

Cen. With horror, madly dying, like her life,
Which (being cruel to the world) concluded
Moft cruel to her felle. What she confed,
I will report, fo pleade you. Thefe her Women
Can trip me, if I erre, who with wet cheekes
Were prefent when the finifh’d.

Cym. Prythee fay.

Cen. First, she confed the neuer lou’d you: onely
Affect’d Greatneffe got by you: not you:
Married your Royalty, was wife to your place:

Abhorr’d your perfon.

Cym. She alone knew this:
And but the fpoke it dying, I would not
Beleene her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cen. Your daughter, whom the bome in hand to loue
With fuch integrity, she did confede
Was as a Scorpion to her fight, wholly life
(But that her flight prevented it) she had Tane off by poyfon.

Cym. O moft delicate Fiend!
Who is’t can reade a Woman? Is there more?

Cen. More Sir, and worse. She did confede she
For you a mortall Minerall, which being tooke,
Should by the minute feede on life, and ling’ring,
By Inches waife you. In which time, the purpofe’d
By watching, weeping, tendance, killing, to Occome you with her fhew; and in time
(When she had fitted you with her craft, to worke
Her Sonne into th’adoption of the Crowne:
But fayling of her end by his strange abence,
Grew flameleffe, desperate, open’d (in defpit
Of Heaven, and Men) her purpofe’s repeated
The eulls the hatching’d, were not effected: fo
Difpayring, dyed.

Cym. Heard you all this her Women?

La. We did, fo pleafe your Highneffe.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for the was beautifull:
Mine eares that hear her flattery, nor my heart,
That thought her like her feeming. It had beene vicious
To have miifttak’d her yet (Oh my Daughter)
That it was folly in me, thou mayst fay,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and other Roman prefouers,

Lenatus behind, and Imogen,

Thou comm’t not Calin now for Tribute, that
The Britaines haue rac’d out, though with the loffe
Of many a bold one: whole Kindefmen haue made fuite
That their good foules may be appea’d, with flaughter
Of you their Captuws, which our felle haue granted,
So thinke of your effate.

Luc. Condefir Sir, the chance of Warre, the day
Was yours by accident: had it gone with vs,
We should not when the blood was cool, have threaten’d
Our Priendons with the Sword. But since the Gods
Will haue it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call’d ranfome, let it come: Sufficieth,
A Roman, with a Romans heart can fuffer:
Augulfus liues to think on’t; and fo much
For my pecuar care. This one thing only
I will entrate, my Boy (a Britaine borne)
Let him be ranfom’d: Neuer Mafter had
A Page fo kinde, fo duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occations, true,
So farte, fo Nerfe-like: I let his vertue loyne
With my requete, which Ile make bold, your Highneffe
Cannot deny: he hath done no Britaine harme,
Though he haue fern’d a Roman. Save him (Sir)
And spare no blood befide.

Cym. I have furely fencen him:
His fauir is familiar to me: Boy,
Thou haft look’d thy felle into my grace,
And art mine owne. I know not why, wherefore,
To fay, liue boy; ne’re thanke thy Mafter, liue;
And aske of Cymbelins what Boone thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy flate, Ie glue it:

Ye,
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Yea, though thou do demand a Prifoner
The Noblest tane.

_Ins. _I humbly thank ye your Highnesse!
_Luc. _I do not bid thee begge my life, good Lad,
And yet I know thou wilt.

_Ins. _No, no, so like,
There's other worke In hand: I see a thing
Bitter to me, as death: your life, good Master,
Muff haste for it selfe.

_Luc. _The Boy dillaines me,
He leues me, scornes me; briefly dye their joyes,
That place them on the truth of Cyrles, and Boyes.

_What stands he so perplex't?
_Gym. _What would'st thou Boy?
_I love thee more, and more: thinke more and more
_What's best to aske. Know'st thou him thou look't on?
_Wilt have him live? Is he thy Kin? thy Friend?

_Ins. _He is a Roman, no more kin to me,
Then to your Highnesse, who being born your vafile
Am somthing nearer.

_Gym. _Wherefore ey'lt him so?
_Ins. _I tell you (Sir) in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

_Gym. _I, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

_Ins. _Fidele Sir.
_Gym. _Thou'rt my good youth: my Page
He be thy Master: walk with me: speake freely.

Bel. _Is not this Boy real'd from death?
_Awri. _One Sand another
Not more resembles that sweet Rosie Lad:
Who dyed, and was Fidele; what thinke you?

_Gui. _The fame dead thing alive.
Bel. _Peace, peace, peace, fee further: he eyes vs not, forbear.
Creatures may be alike: weren't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to vs.

_Gui. _But we fee him dead.

_Bel. _Be silent: let's see further.

_Pife. _It is my Miftis;
Since she is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.

_Gym. _Come, stand thou by our side,
Make thy demand alow'd. Sir, step you forth,
Give answer to this Boy, and do it freely,
Or by our Greatnesse, and the grace of it
(Which is our Honor) bittter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. One speake to him.

_Ins. _My boone is, that this Gentleman may render
Of whom he had this Ring.

_Bel. _What's that to you, in him?

_Gym. _That Diamond upon your Finger, say
How came it yours?

_Lucb. _Thou'rt bittter me to leaue vnspoken,
Which to be spoke, wou'd torture thee.

_Gym. _Hast thou in thee?
_Lucb. _I am glad to be confront'd to vitter that Which torments me to conceale. By Villany
I got this Ring: 'twas Lenzatus Jewell,
Whom thou didst barish: and which more may greeue
As it doth me: a Nobiler Sir, ne'er he'd (t'hee,
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou heare more my Lord?

_Gym. _All that belongs to this.

_Lucb. _That Paragon, thy daughter,
For whom my heart drops blood, and my faire spirits
Quaile to remember. Glue me lease, I faint.

_Gym. _My Daughter! what of him? I knew thy strength

I had rather thou shoul'dst live, while Nature will,
Then dye ere I heare more: I true man, and speake.

_Lucb. _Upon a time, vnhappy was the clocke
That strooke the houre: it was in Rome, accurt.
The Manfion where 'twas at a Feast, oh would
Our Vlands had bin payson'd or at least
_Those which I heord to head:) the good Poethamus, (What should I say? he was too good to be
Where ill men were, and was the best of all
Among'the rar'ties of good ones) fitting sadly,
Hearing vs praise our Loues of Italy.
For Beauty, that made barren the twel'd boaste
Of him that best could speake: for Feature, laming
The Shrine of Cerus, or straight-pight Minerus,
Putfures, beyond breefe Nature. For Condition,
A hop of all the qualities, that man
Loves woman for, besides that hooke of Wiuing,
Fairenesse, which arikes the eye.

_Gym. _I stand on fire. Come to the matter.

_Lucb. _All too soone I shall,
Vnleefe thou would'st greeue quickly. This Poethamus,
Most like a Noble Lord, in loue, and one
That had a Royal Louer, tooke his hint,
And (not dispraiuing whom we prais'd, therein
He was as calm as vertue) he began
His Miftis picture, which, by his tongue, being made,
And then a minde put in't, either our braggis
Were crake'd of Kitchen-Trullis, or his description
Prom'd vs vnspaking fottes.

_Gym. _Nay, nay, to th'purpose.

_Lucb. _Your daughters Chaffity, (there it beginnes)
He spake of her, as 'Dian' had hot dreames,
And he alone, were cold: Whereas, I wretch
Made freple of his prais[e, and wager'd with him
Peeces of Gold, 'gainst this, which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger) to attaine
In fulte the place of's bed, and winne this Ring
By hers, and mine Adultery: he (true Knight)
No lefser of her Honour confident.

Then I did truly finde her, flakes this Ring,
And would fo, had it beene a Carbacule
Of Phoebus Wheelie; and might fo safely, had it
Bin all the worth of's Carre. Away to Britaine
Poide I in this designe: Well may you(Sir)
Remember me at Court, where I was taught
Of your chaste Daughter, the wide difference
'Twixt Amorous, and Villanous. Being thus quenched
Of hope, not longeing; mine Italian braine,
Gan in your dulle Britaine operare
Mostvidely: for my vantage excellent.
And to be brefles, my praficie fo preyus'd
That I return'd with simular proofe enough,
To make the Noble Lenatus mad,
By wounding his beleue in her Renouve,
With Tokens thus, and thus: ansuring notes
Of Chamber-hanging, Pictures, this her Bracelet
(Oh cunning how I got) say some markes
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But thinke her bond of Chaffity quite crack'd,
I hauling 'tane the forfeit. Whereupon,
Me thinkes I see him now.

_Po. _I fo do

_Italiand. _Aye me, moft credulous Foole,
Egregious murtherer, Theefe, any thing
That's due to all the Villaines paid, in being
To come. Oh glue me Cord, or Knife, or payson,

Some
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

Some upright Julerer. Thou King, send out
For Torturers ingenuous: it is I
That all th’ubhorred things o’th’earth amend
By being worse then they. I am Posthumus,
That kill’d thy Daughter: Villain-like, I lye,
That caus’d a lefer villain then my selfe,
A sacrificill Thrice to dote o’t. The Temple
Of Virtue was the; yea, and the her selfe.
Slept, and throw flones, caft myre upon me, set
The dogges o’th’street to bay me; every villain
Be call’d Posthumus Leonatus, and
Be villany leffe then ’twas. Oh Imogen!
My Queens, my life, my wife: oh Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen.

Imo. Peace my Lord, hear me, hear me.
Pofl. Shall’st have a play of this?
Thou scornfull Page, there lye thy part.

Pif. Oh Gentlemen, helpe,

Mine my Lord: Oh my Lord Posthumus,
You are kill’d Imogen till now: help, helpe,
Mine honour’d Lady.

Cym. Does the world go round?

Pifb. How comes these flaggers on mee?
Pif. Wake my Miftris.

Cym. If this be so, the Gods do meane to strike me
To death, with mortail lye.
Pif. How fares my Miftris?

Imo. Oh get thee from my sight,
Thou gau’st me payson; danger Fellow hence,
Breath not where Princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen.
Pif. Lady, the Gods throw flones of sulphar on me, if
That box I gae you, was not thought by mee
A precious thing, I had it from the Queene.

Cym. New matter fill.

Imo. It payson’d me.

Crom. Oh Gods!

I left out one thing which the Queene confest,
Which must approwe thee honest. If Pasacio
Hauce (said she) given his Miftris that Conception
Which I gave him for Cordail, she is fera’d,
As I would face a Rat.

Cym. What’s this, Cornelia?

Crom. The Queene (Sir) very oft import’d me
To temper paysons for her, fill pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, onely
In killing Creatures wild, as Cats and Dogges
Of no efteme. I dreading, that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certaine fluffe, which being tane, would cease
The present powre of life, but in short time,
All Offices of Nature, should againe
Do their due Functions. Haue you tane of it?

Imo. Molt like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My Boyes, there was our error.

Gui. This is for Poldie.

Cym. How should you throw your wedded Lady fro you?
Thinkse that you are upon a Rocke, and now
Throw me again.

Pofl. Hang there like fruite, my foule,
Till the Tree dyes.

Cym. How now, my Fledhi, my Childere?
What, mak’st thou me a drollard in this Act?
Wilt thou not speake to me?

Imo. Your blessings, Sir.

Bel. Though you did loue this youth, I blame ye not,

You had a motie for’t.

Cym. My teares that fall
Prose holy-water on thee; Imogen,
Thy Mothers dead.

Imo. I am forry for’t, my Lord.

Cym. Oh, she was naught; and long of her it was
That we meet heere fo strangely: but her Sonne
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pif. My Lord,
Now fearse is from me, Ile speake troth. Lord Cloten
Vpon my Ladies missing, came to me
With his Sword drawn, foam’d at the mouth, and swore
If I did knowe’t not which way she was gone,
It was in my inffant death. By accident,
I had a signed Letter of my Masters
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To seekse he on the Mountains neere to Milford,
Where in a freaze, in my Masters Garments
(Which he inforced from me) away he rote
With vachate purpofes, and with oath to violate
My Ladies honor, what became of him,
I further know not.

Gui. Let me end the Story: I flew him there.

Cym. Marry, the Gods foretend.

I would not thy good deeds, shoulde from my lips
Plucke a hard sentençe: Fysteth valiant youth
Den’t again.

Gui. I haue spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a Prince.

Gui. A most incuill one. The wrong he did mee
Were nothing Prince-like; for he did prouek me
With Language that would make me spurne the Sea,
If it could so roare to me. I cut off’s head,
And am right glad he is not standing heere
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorrow for thee:
By thine owne tongue thou art condemnd’; and must Endure our Law: Thou’re dead.

Imo. That headleffe man I thought had bin my Lord
Cym. Binde the Offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, Sir King.

This man is better then the man he flew,
As well descended as thy selfe, and hath
More of thee merited, then a Band of Citizens
Had ever carre for. Let his Armes alone,
They were not borne for bondage.

Cym. Why old Soldier:
Wilt thou vnsee the worth thou art vnapayd for
By tasting of our wrath? How of defcent
As good as we?

Atui. In that he spake too farre.

Cym. And thou shalt dye for’t.

Bel. We will dye all three,
But I will proue that two one’s are as good
As I have guen out him. My Sonnes, I must
For mine owne part, vnfold a dangerous speech,
Though haply well for you.

Atui. Your danger’s ours.

Guid. And our good his.

Bel. Haue at it then, by lease
Thou hadst (great King) a Subiect, who Was call’d Belarius.

Cym. What of him? He is a banifh’d Traitor.

Bel. He it is, that hath
Afffum’d this age: indeed a banifh’d man,
I know not how, a Traitor.
Cym. Take him hence,
The whole world shall not save him.
Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the Nursing of thy Sonnes,
And let it be confiscate all, fo foone
As I have receyu’d it.
Cym. Nursing of my Sonnes?
Bel. I am too blind, and fawy, here’s my knee:
Ere I arise, I will preferre my Sonnes,
Then spare not the old Father. Mighty Sir,
These two young Gentlemen that call me Father,
And think they are my Sonnes, are none of mine,
They are the yllue of your Loynes, my Liege,
And blood of your begetting.
Cym. How? my Iffue,
Bel. So fure as you, your fathers: I (old Morgan)
Am that Belarius, whom you sometime banish’d:
Your pleafure was my neere offence, my punishment
It felte, and all my Treafton that I suffer’d,
Was all the harme I did. These gentle Princes
(For fuch, and fo they are) thefe twenty years
Have I train’d vp; thofe Arts they have, as I Could put into them. My breeding was (Sir)
As your Highneffe knowes: Their Nurse Earphile
(Whom for the Theft I wedded) bore them Children
Vpon my Banishment: I moud’d her too,
Having receyu’d the punishment before
For that which I did then. Beaten for Loyalie,
Excited me to Treafon. Their deere loffe,
The more of you twas felts, the more it thap’d
Vnto my end of steealing them. But gracious Sir,
Here are your Sonnes againe, and I mutf loose
Two of the sweett Companions in the World.
The benefiction of thofe covering Heaven’s
Fall on their heads like dew, for they are worthy
To in-lay Heaven with Starres.
Cym. Thou weep’t, and feak’t it:
The Service that you three have done, is more
Vnlke, then this thou tell’st it. I loft my Children,
If thofe be they, I know not how to with
A pare of wortlier Sonnes.
Bel. Be plea’d a while
This Gentleman, whom I call Polides,
Most worthy Prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
This Gentleman, my Cadwall, Arniragu,
Your younger Prince, he Sir, was left
In a most curious Mantle, wrought by th’ hand
Of his Queene Mother, which for more probabation
I can with safe produce.
Cym. Guiderius had
Vpon his necke a Mole, a fanguine Starre,
It was a marke of wonder.
Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him still that natural flame:
It was wife Natures end, in the donation
To be his eulogie now.
Cym. Oh, what am I
A Mother to the byrh of three? Nere Mother
Reloy’d delierance more: Bleft, pray you be,
That after this strange flaring from your Orbes,
You may reignue in them now: Oh Imogen,
Thou haft loft by this a Kinglome.
Imo. No, my Lord:
I haue got two Worlds by’t. Oh my gentle Brothers,
Haue we thus met? Oh never fay hereafter
But I am truest speaker. You call’d me Brother
When I was but your Sifer: I you Brothers,
When we were fo indeed.
Cym. Did you ere meete?
Arru. I my good Lord.
Gai. And at firft meeting lou’d,
Continew’d fo, until we thought he dy’d.
Cym. By the Queenes Dramme the Swallow’d.
Cym. O rare infinit?
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment,
Hath to it Circumfuantial branches, which Difinition should be rich in. Where? how tu’d you?
And when came you to ferue our Romane Captaine?
How parted with your Brother? How firft met them?
Why fled you from the Court? And whether thieves?
And your three motuvs to the Battallie? with
I know not how much more should be demanded,
And all the other by-dependences
From chance to chance? But nor the Time, nor Place
Will ferue our long Interrogatories. See,
Porphus Anchors upon Imogen;
And she (like harmleffe Lightning) threwes her eye
On him: her Brothers, Me: her Mafter hitting
Each obiect with a joy: the Counter-change
Is feuerally in all. Let’s quit this ground,
And fmoake the Temple with our Sacrifices.
Thou art my Brother, fo we’ll hold thee euer.
Imo. You are my Father too, and did releue me:
To fee this gracius feason.
Cym. All ore-joy’d
Sawe thefe in bonds, let them be joyful too,
For they shall taffe our Comfort.
Imo. My good Mafter, I will yet do you service.
Luc. Happy be you.
Cym. The forlorne Souldier, that no Nobly fought
He would have well becom’d this place, and grac’d
The thankings of a King.
Pofh. I am Sir
The Souldier that did company thefe three
In poore beferming: ’twas a fitment for
The purpofe I then follow’d. That I was he,
Speake Incommo, I had you downe, and might
Hawe made you finifh.
Iach. I am downe againe:
But now my beaute Conffience finkes my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, befeech you
Which I do often owe: but your Ring fir’d,
And here the Bracelet of the truf’t Princeffe
That euer fower her Faith.
Pofh. Kneele not to me:
The powre that I haue on you, is to spare you:
The malice towards you, to forgive you. Lye
And deal with others better.
Cym. Nobly doom’d:
W’e’ll learn our Freenesffe of a Sonne-in-Law:
Pardon’s the word to all.
Arru. You holpe vs Sir,
As you did meane indeed to be our Brother,
Joy’d we, that you are.
Pofh. Your Seruant Prince, Good my Lord of Rome
Call forth your Sooth-fayer: As I fept, me thought
Great Jupiter upon his Eagle back’d
Appear’d to me, with other spifritually fervus
Of mine owne Kindred. When I wak’d, I found
This Label on my bosome; whole containing Is fo from fenfe in hardneffe, that I can
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Make no Collection of it. Let him shew His skill in the construction.

Lac. Philharmonus.

Soth. Here's my good Lord.

Lac. Read, and declare the meaning.

Reades.

When as a Lyons Whelp, shall to himselfe unknown, with- out seeking finds, and bee embrac'd by a piece of tender Ayre: And when from a sately Cedar shall be left Branches, which being dead many yeares, foon after rise, bee injured to the old Stocke, and frefhly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain bee fortunate, and flourish in Peace and Plen- titie.

Thou Leonatus art the Lyons Whelp, The fit and apt Construction of thy name Being Leonatus, doth import so much: The piece of tender Ayre, thy vertuous Daughter, Which we call Mollis Aer, and *Mollis Aer We terme it Muler; which Muler I diuine Is this most constant Wife, who euen now Anfwering the Letter of the Oracle, Vnknowne to you vnfought, were clipt about With this most tender Aire.

Cym. This hath some feeming.

Soth. The lofty Cedar, Royall Cymbeline Perfonates thee: And thy loft Branches, point Thy two Sonnes forth: who by Belarius Rofone For many yeares thought dead, are now resu'd To the Maiesticke Cedar joyn'd, whose Iffue Promises Britaine, Peace and Plenty.

Cym. Well,

My Peace we will begin: And Caius Lucius, Although the Victor, we submit to Caesar, And to the Romaine Empire; promising To pay our wonted Tribute, from the which We were diffwaded by our wicked Queene, Whom heauens in Juftice both on her, and hers, Have laid molt heauy hand.

Soth. The fingers of the Powres aboue, do tune The harmony of this Peace: the Vifion

Which I made knowne to Lucius ere the froke Of yet this scarf-cold-Battaile, at this instant Is full accomplifi'd. For the Romaine Eagle From South to Weft, on wing soaring aloft Leffin'd her felfe, and in the Beames o'th Sun So vanifi'd; which fore-shew'd our Princely Eagle Th'Imperiall Caesar, should againe vnite His Favour, with the Radiant Cymbeline, Which shines here, in the Weel.

Cym. Laud we the Gods, And let our crooked Smoakes climbe to their Nostrils From our blef Alters. Publish we this Peace To all our Subjects. Set we forward: Let A Roman, and a Britifh Ensigne wave Friendely together: fo through Luds-Towne march, And in the Temple of great Jupiter Our Peace we'll ratifie: Seale it with Feasts. Set on there: Neuer was a Warre did ceafe (Ere bloodie hands were walk'd), with fuch a Peace.

Exeunt.

 This Collation will be completed in Part III.

As copies of the Original are known to vary, any such variations or peculiarities, not noticed above, being communicated will greatly oblige; also any information that may tend to render thoroughly complete the collation of the whole work.

It will be observed that this Reprint has a distinct pagination,—also a distinct set of signatures, in fours; both, to facilitate reference, will be continuous throughout the volume. It may be as well to remark—to prevent the chance of proofs of care being taken rather to indicate the lack of that essential—that, wherever type may be seen out of gear, in any way defective or irregular, all such “typographical phenomena,” as Mr. Lettrom has aptly termed those characteristics of the precious old book, have been reproduced in accordance with the prescribed plan “in setting

A REPRODUCTION, BY PHOTOGRAPHY, OF THE CELEBRATED
Shakespeare Gallery,
(Boydell's celebrated "Shakespeare Gallery," published in 1804-5 at Sixty Guineas), CONSISTING OF NINETY-EIGHT PHOTOGRAPHS, FROM
Pictures by the most eminent English Historical Painters,
AND TEXT DESCRIPTIVE OF EACH SCENE.

"In casting one's eye over the list of names of the painters, whose illustrations to Shakespeare form the contents of the volume, it will be found to embrace those of almost all the great artists of the English school of the date of its original production. So, too, the list of engravers. The sculptors employed were Mr. Thos. Banks, R.A., and the Hon. Ann Seymour Damer. The merit of the collection consists in the great variety of style in which these imperishable dramas are illustrated by pictorial art; for it has never yet been the good fortune of any one painter to furnish a series of illustrations for all the plays in any way satisfactory. The letterpress consists of a description of the scene, and an extract of the passage which forms the subject of each individual illustration; the names of the painters and engravers are added. The photographs are cleverly executed, and the volume is elegantly got up. Altogether 'The Shakespeare Gallery' is just the book for the drawing-room table, now the poet and his works are engaging everybody's attention—pleasant to turn over, and sure to furnish interesting subjects for conversation."—Reader, April 25, 1884.
